Here's Test For Chic In France This Season

By IRENE FERRIS

PARIS—(WNS) — You're the chic among chic this season in France if:

1. Your hat is a "cache-cacheux" (hair-hider).
2. Your bag is a satchel.
3. Your stole is wool, not fur.
4. Your fur hat has a boa attached.
5. Your tweeds are ruffled.
6. Your gold lame suit is as tailored as a uniform.
7. Your evening coat is reversible (one side for big evenings, the other for little).
8. Your favorite leather is the new veined, reversed calf.
9. Your flats are bike-rider's style, your date shoes are dancing-school pumps, and the rest of your footwear is various Russian boots.
10. Your sweater is enormous, handmade, thick and iridescent.
11. Your belt is a long chain of immense metal links.
12. Your patent leather is colored (wine, gray, caramel, brown).
13. Your skirt has a flare.
14. Your goggles have black frames.
15. Your thick wool dress is sleeveless, with an attached scarf to warm your neck.
16. You have something plaid.
17. You have something lace.
18. You have something fox-bordered.

The biggest changes in the vast array of fashions and foibles offered by Paris boutiques and couture salons are found in handbags, cocktail clothes, afternoon dresses and footwear.

The huge flat handbag, so deep that it hung down to your ankles, has disappeared. "Le chic du chic" is now the satchel bag. Call it long and narrow or call it wide and shallow, but it should have the dimensions of a middle-aged dachshund in order to be correct. And it should be copied from something authentic, be it doctor's bag, conductor's pouch or bill collector's satchel.

The only visible of last year's deep square bag is one in sturdy cowhide with suitcase handles. Its interior is divided like a briefcase into two compartments which are the right size and shape to hold two portable typewriters, bottom to bottom.

Strict is the word for cocktail clothes if they are in fashion. They must be strict in cut but glamorous in fabric. The great favorite is the little lame cocktail suit with straight skirt and jacket, as simple as a Chanel tweed number.

A baby-blue lame evening suit has its own silk blouse of blue chiffon with French cufflink cuffs and a soft scarf collar. A similar strict suit is made of pink and gold lame woven in huge hound's-tooth check design. A pink sheer skirt, ascot tie and cufflinks simulating 54-karat diamonds complete its elegance.

A simple suit in all gold is worn over a blouse of milk-brown chiffon. Other varieties are lace over silver or gold for the entire suit, and silvery white with a fine border of black mink.

In Paris this season there are more types of Russian boots than there are shoes. They range from fur-lined to thin suede and spike-heeled, from genuine hunting boots to velvet with fur.

Soft kid, gathered at the ankle, is liked. So is white, and so is black suede.

But the best-sellers in boots have a dangling cord tassel or a swinging metal chataelaine. Then they are not merely chic. They are "le chic du chic."

Gable's Secretary 21 Years She Found Him 'Regular Guy'

NEW YORK—(WNS)—The immortalization of Clark Gable as America's symbol of male animal magnetism is now under way, with reams of memoirs by the women who knew him best.
But Gable was no magnetic symbol to Jean Garceau, his faithful secretary-business manager for 21 years.
"Just a wonderful human being a regular guy," said Mrs. Garceau, who collaborated with writer Inez Cooke to write "Dear Mr. G—" (Little, Brown), a biography of her late boss.
"Women were always offering to take my job without pay. Even Claudette Colbert, when she'd see me used to say, 'Imagine working with a guy like Gable every day and getting paid for it!'"
However, Mrs. Garceau, prim, proper and eminently well-controlled, was never swept off her feet. She kept her job through the many ups and downs of her employer's personal and professional life, not because she was hypnotized by his charm but because he gave her responsibility, long vacations, big bonuses and high pay.
"I never had to ask for a raise," she said, in happy remembrance of things past. "Clark gave me a raise every couple of years, and it was substantial!"

His sudden death did not leave her at loose ends, since she had retired two years earlier at the urging of her husband, a real estate broker. Mrs. Garceau is a trim little woman who shies at telling her age but whose graying hair deep laughter lines and chronology put her into the late middle-age group.
Though her boss enjoyed the unconventional and was happiest in activity and adventure, he was an extreme conservative in financial matters, she revealed.
"He liked to keep his assets liquid. The only wealth he trusted was money in the bank. He wouldn't put a dime in real estate, except for his own home."
This was a 22-acre estate at Encino in the San Fernando Valley, a house he and third wife (and fabled great love of his life) Carole Lombard, bought from Raoul Walsh, the director. She kept the house even after Miss Lombard died tragically in a plane crash while on a USO tour.
During the war years when he was overseas with the Air Force, Jean Garceau continued to commute between the Gable house and her own, five miles away.
She ran his home intermittently for a total of 13 years, whenever he was unmarried, managing servants, repairs, bills, even planning menus and dinner parties. But she never stayed after 6.
"It was one of my conditions of employment when Carole Lombard first asked me to work for her. And I stuck to it," said Mrs. Garceau. She thought "The King" had good taste in wives, she said, and was pleased to give up home management duties when he married party-loving Lady Sylvia Ashley in 1939.

Mrs. Garceau sorted the flood of correspondence, channeling fan mail to the studios, and carefully keeping a "Frenzied Female" file. Letters apparently penned by psychotic women were held aside. When these came repeatedly from the same persons, Mrs. Garceau turned them over to the police, post office or studio police, to protect her employer from embarrassment or possible danger.
"These letters were so salacious that it was actually frightening," she said. "A few of the authors turned out to be girls with responsible jobs, normal-looking women who seemed on the surface to be perfectly sane."
Mrs. Garceau never troubled her boss about this sort of thing. It would have annoyed and disturbed him. She never bothered him about business matters either.
"He hated details. He avoided complication. For instance, he would not incorporate, as other stars did, to get into capital gains and out of the high personal income brackets on a high-salary film. He said it was too much trouble."
"It took me years to get him to invest his money. When he finally did, he bought only tax-free bonds and blue chip stocks. He hated any kind of financial gamble. He could have been extremely rich. Still, it has all worked out well enough to provide a very comfortable estate for his wife and son."

Glass Menagerie Opens Tomorrow

Sue Taylor of Greenville will have the role of Laura in Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie".

Tennessee Williams' long-run drama "The Glass Menagerie" will open a three-performance engagement at East Carolina College Wednesday. The play will be a major attraction of the 1961-1962 program of drama offered by the East Carolina Playhouse. Curtain time will be 8 p. m. in the McGinnis auditorium.

Tickets for the public will be on sale at the box office on performance nights at $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. East Carolina students may obtain reserved-seat tickets in the College Union beginning Monday, October 30.

"The Glass Menagerie" tells the story of a fading Southern mother, living in an apartment facing a back alley in St. Louis, trying to do the best she can for her two children, but succeeding only in destroying every vestige of hope, beauty, and joy in their lives.

There is Tom, the dutiful Wingfield son who works in a warehouse, bears up under his mother's early morning shouts of "rise and shine," spends a good deal of time at the movies, and would rather be sailing to far-off countries.

And there is Laura, the crippled daughter, so sensitive and shy that she has only her collection of glass animals for solace.

Williams has put some laughs in "The Glass Menagerie," but they are not wise-cracks—they are laughs growing out of the play's essentially poignant situation. The characters are not trying to be funny; they are creatures caught in the most ordinary but the most terrible of tragedies, that of trying to live when they have no sensible reason for living.

Lucile Dew of Rt. 1, Rose Hill, will be seen in the leading role of the mother, Amanda. The part was described by the New York Post critic during the play's 563-performance run on Broadway as Welcoming the Air Traffic Control Association to its convention Monday the mayor said: "All the time I've been mayor, I've never found a door the key would open—not even the men's wash room."

"And the police courtesy cards—they just mean that while here you should be courteous to our police."

Republican Panel Now In N.C. Pushes Attack

MORGANTON (AP)—A four-man "Paul Revere" team of Republican congressmen was to continue its attacks on the Kennedy administration today in appearances here, at Statesville and Greensboro.

Concentrating on fiscal and foreign policies, members of the group spoke Monday at a $5-a-plate chicken luncheon in Charlotte and a $50 roast beef supper in Asheville.

The panel includes Reps. William C. Cramer of Florida, Samuel L. Devine of Ohio, James E. Brownell of Iowa and John M. Ashebrook of Ohio, all Republican conservatives.

Cramer told 250 guests at Charlotte that the congressional redistricting bill passed by the 1961 legislature was a "gerrymander scheme obviously aimed at getting rid of Charlie Jonas," North Carolina's only GOP congressman. He predicted overwhelming re-election for Jonas, who has not said whether he'll seek a sixth term.

At Asheville, two days after a gathering of 1,000 Democrats, about 200 Republicans heard charges that the administration is guilty of excessive spending, "backdoor financing" of federal projects, indecisive foreign policy and lack of executive leadership.

Collegians Carry Big Torch Today

MURPHY, N.C. (AP)—From Murphy on the west and Wilmington on the east, 700 college students will carry a torch to Raleigh, beginning today, to gain support for a statewide bond referendum.

Student runners from Western Carolina College begin the "torch of education marathon" this morning at Murphy. The Wilmington group begins Tuesday.

They expect to meet in Raleigh at noon Friday in a promotional stunt they hope will induce citizens to vote in favor of 10 bond issues to be decided Nov. 7.

The State Student Citizens Committee for a Better North Carolina composed of students from state-supported institutions, is sponsoring the marathon.

Western Carolina College students, each walking a mile, will pass the torch along to Appalachian State Teachers College. Then it goes to Winston-Salem Teachers College, A and T College, and North Carolina College.

From the east, runners will come from Pembroke State College, Fayetteville State Teachers College and North Carolina State College.

Party-Line Hog Was A 'Factor'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—John Gentry ran to the telephone when fire broke out in his home Monday.

Someone was talking on the four-party line. "Please give me the line! My house is on fire!" Gentry said, "but a man said 'Oh, yeah, we know. My house is on fire, too.'"

Gentry's wife finally ran to a neighbor's house to call firemen. Battalion Chief Robert Howard said he couldn't tell how much of the $2,200 damage was due to the lost time, but the delay "certainly was a factor."

A 10th Congressional District Conference was scheduled here, to be followed by a Ninth District meeting at Statesville at 2 p. m., and at Greensboro, a 5 p. m. news conference and 7 p. m. fund-raising dinner at $10 a plate.

Wednesday's schedule includes a panel discussion at 10:30 a. m. in the Wake Forest College Law Building; a Fifth District conference and luncheon at Winston-Salem at 12:30; and discussions at the University of North Carolina at 3 p. m. and high school auditorium in Burlington at 7 p. m.

The group goes to West Virginia Thursday.

Rayburn Returns To Home Town

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn returns today to his home in Bonham to end his days among "those friends and neighbors who for so long have given me a love and loyalty unsurpassed in any annals."

The decision to move the 79-year-old Texas Democrat, incurably ill with cancer, was announced Monday by Baylor Hospital and Rayburn's administrative assistant, John Holton.

Both statements said there had been no apparent results yet from the drugs and irradiation therapy which doctors said would not cure Rayburn but might prolong his life.

Holton said he could not disclose, because of a standing request from Rayburn's family, whether the speaker knows the seriousness of his condition.

After his return home, Rayburn will be treated by his personal physician, Dr. Jose Risser of Bonham.

Holton's statement, issued in behalf of Rayburn's family, said that "in making this decision to return him to Bonham, the determining factor was the speaker's often expressed desire to end his days among, in his words, 'those friends and neighbors who for so long have given me a love and a loyalty unsurpassed in any annals.'"

Career Restores His Full Name

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Now that Jeff Herron, 11, has made his professional acting debut he can use his full name again. It is Jeffrey Herron Meade.

Jeff had dropped the Meade, under parental edict, in auditioning at Circle Arts Theater. The reason—his father, James, is theater writer for The San Diego Union, and any thought of special consideration on that account was to be avoided.

The junior high school 7th grader became plain Jeff Herron and, on his own, won the part of Cesar in the play "Fanny."

Alice Faye Is Back On A Familiar Lot

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Sixteen years ago, Alice Faye turned the key of her dressing room door at 20th Century-Fox and drove off the lot. She didn't return.

"I'd had it," she recalls. "I had gotten married to Phil (Harris) and I'd had my daughter Alice and then Phyllis. That seemed more important to me."

"Besides, I was mad about that last picture I had made, 'Fallen Angel.' I was doing it with Otto Preminger and I loved 'Laura,' which he had done. I was hoping something that would get me into dramatic parts."

"They cut my big scenes right out of the picture. The studio was building up Linda Darnell at the time, and they made her scenes more important. Now I love Linda, but I didn't think they should be doing that to me."

"So I gave them the key and told them to keep it. I didn't even take my things with me. I understand they've still got a couple of trunks full of stuff of mine. Might be fun to go through it some day."

Alice is back on the old home lot, looking much the same as she did in her heyday—round-faced, blonde and cheerful. She is playing Pat Boone's mother, of all things, in a third go at "State Fair." It doesn't seem to bother her, being recently a grandmother.

More Than $61.5 Million At Issue

North Carolinians have a great stake in the proposed bond issue which will be voted on next week, and that stake reaches far beyond the $61.5 million involved in the bond issue.

It is important to the people of North Carolina and to the state's future, that state-supported colleges have sufficient classrooms, dormitories and other facilities to provide for the rapidly increasing number of young people who desire a college education. It is important to Tar Heels that the state's mental institutions have adequate facilities to provide care and treatment for the mentally ill. It is important to the people of the state that state agencies and departments have adequate facilities in which to carry out their important functions, and the state operations which are directly tied to boosting the economic level in North Carolina be provided necessary tools for doing the job.

A voter who looks at the forthcoming referendum on the bond issue as merely a question of deciding whether or not the state should spend another $61.5 million dollars is shortsighted indeed. To be realistic, the voter must look not only at the price tag, but also what the state will get for its money, and how these new things will affect the future of North Carolina. The voter must also look at the items in terms of how North Carolina will be affected if they are not available for use by people of the state.

Thirty-one million dollars for expanding the physical plants of state-supported colleges and universities will enable these institutions to more nearly keep pace with the greater demands being made upon them. It will mean that North Carolina's state-supported colleges and universities will have to turn away fewer young Tar Heels by posting the "no vacancy" sign while many qualified students are seeking admission to college. Without these facilities the colleges and universities cannot hope to meet the demands upon them in the next few years. All the qualified youngsters who will desire college educations cannot expect to gain admittance to a college in their own state.

The same could be said for the $1.4 million earmarked in the bond issue for community colleges throughout the state which have proved in recent years to be an important part of higher education in North Carolina.

Can one measure the value of the $7.4 million designated in the bond issue for state mental institutions by merely calculating the interest and principal on that amount of money? Such a measurement must include the evaluation of human qualities when once mentally ill citizens who can be returned to society as valuable and productive citizens through quality treatment and care at these institutions.

It is true that the $13.5 million of self-liquidating bonds designated for the State Ports Authority will be represented in new facilities at the ports of Morehead City and Wilmington. But it is also true that these additional facilities will enable the ports of the state to generate a greater volume of commerce throughout North Carolina. They will serve as the fuse which will intensify the chain reaction of better business which is generated by good deepwater ports of a state.

In a similar manner the other items included in the proposed bond issue cannot be measured alone in terms of dollars and cents. They are necessary if North Carolina is to keep pace with its own needs. They will afford the state valuable new assets in terms of buildings and facilities, but they will also provide additional assets which cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

The Reflector urges the people of Pitt County to vote Nov. 7 in favor of the proposed bond issues.

School Building Record In N. C.

By LYNN NISBET

SCHOOL BUILDING — A grand total of $469,202,224.70 was spent for school plant construction and improvement during the period July 1, 1949 to April 30, 1961, a recent survey by the State Department of Public Instruction shows.

With these funds from all sources—State, Federal and local—the following facilities were provided: 15,745 classrooms, 786 libraries, 750 science rooms, 604 homemaking rooms, 422 business education rooms, 373 music rooms, 582 shops, 1,022 lunch rooms, 518 gymnasiums and 802 auditoriums and multipurpose rooms.

According to project types these facilities are classified as: 614 new plants on new sites, 1,323 new buildings at existing plants, 1,189 additions to existing buildings, 375 renovations of existing facilities, 196 additions of new and renovation of old facilities.

MOTOR TRUCKS — The Automobile Manufacturers Association has compiled a booklet of "motor truck facts" which gives an impressive picture of the importance of the motor truck in the national economy. The 60-page booklet is filled with tables and graphs and charts, impossible to reproduce in a newspaper column. Of course the project is promoted as a publicity stunt to promote the use of trucks and truck transportation. At the same time the factual information is worth passing along.

Here are some of the items reduced to round figures: Factory sales of motor trucks in 1960 totaled 1,190,000 units, more than half under 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight. Combined value was $2,261,000,000.

Factory sales of motor buses totaled 32,056 units with school buses accounting for 87 percent. Motor truck and bus exports in 1960 were valued at $378,000,000.

U. S. truck registration in 1960 reached 11,967,688, more than double the number registered in 1941. New truck registrations last year amounted to 934,485, with California's 104,224 registrations leading all other states. One-fourth of the nation's trucks are on farms and 57,000 U. S. truck fleets count ten or more units each. Truck trailers in use in the U. S. in 1960 numbered 1,110,000.

More than 12,000,000 school children—35 percent of the nation's total—are transported to and from school by bus. Special truck taxes paid in 1960 amounted to about $3,000,000,000. Although trucks number only one-sixth of all registered vehicles, they contribute one-third of all special motor vehicle taxes.

One out of every nine employed persons in the U.S.—7,200,000 persons—depend on trucks for their livelihood.

PACKAGE — The trend in nearly all kinds of business is toward "packaging." Farm products is no longer sold in mass bulk, but it is sorted and graded and packaged so the housewife can tell just what she is getting. Most cafe and restaurant customers look over the menu offered and select one of the "package" meals, rather than try to pick out single items.

One of the biggest boosts to the travel industry is the "package tour" idea, the arrangement of trips in which transportation, hotel bills, and other essential items are included in one price. European airlines are advertising 17-day tours through half a dozen countries at $499 or $599 or some other fixed price which covers everything from embarkation at point of departure in the United States to the return to that point.

North Carolina has not participated in this package tour idea to very great extent, although there have been some very successful trips. More attention is being given to the idea now. The State Department of Conservation and Development is working up a number of "packages" in cooperation with chambers of commerce and other promotional agencies. Two, three and five day packages are being set up around Asheville, the Sandhills, Winston-Salem, New Bern-Morehead City, the Hatteras Seashore area and other points.

The Travel Council of North Carolina is cooperating with the State and with the U. S. Travel Office in making up packages designed to appeal to foreign visitors.

Good Question Is Often Raised

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — A week ago former President Eisenhower, complaining about the Kennedy administration's spending, asked "What's going to happen to our country if we can't pay our debts in this time of prosperity?"

It's a good question, but an old one. It's a question Eisenhower must have asked himself at times when he was in the White House, and President Truman before him.

It was prompted by the realization that the Kennedy administration—for the 1962 fiscal year which began last July 1—will be in the red.

President Kennedy confirmed it Sunday by releasing a budget report which showed that for the 1962 fiscal year government expenses will be around $89 billion while income will be about $82.1 billion, making a deficit of $6.9 billion.

He boosted government spending this year and blamed it mainly on the need to shovel out more money for defense, foreign obligations and space development. But the country must be getting used to seeing government spending exceed its revenue.

In the past 31 years government income was greater than its expenses only seven times.

It happened in 1930, in President Hoover's administration; three times in the seven years of Truman's administration; and three times in Eisenhower's eight years.

The country stayed in the red to speak. When we get relieved of some of these tasks, maybe we will have something to offer the future teacher—who, we hope, will be the gifted students. The schools are still here, however it is up to us to improve them.

Looking back over the past era, we can truthfully say that the textbooks have something to offer the future teacher—who, we hope, will be the gifted students. The schools are still here, however it is up to us to improve them.

Let us disagree for a brief moment, what type of schools did we have in 1950's, do they still exist; what type of teachers do we have, are we still employing them now; our textbooks, were they in keeping with the modern trends? Our parents, did they have a genuine interest in the school, the pupils the teachers and the educational programs? My friends, I am afraid that if we answer these questions truthfully we will find that the last decade was somewhat lacking in its preparation for future leaders.

To reminiscence is very good, but the major question now is—What are we, the future 1960 participants going to do to help alleviate these weaknesses? Let us consider the first question—Do we still have teachers that are somewhat lacking in their teaching? I believe, personally, that the majority of our teachers are adequately qualified to perform the task assigned them, at the present. But I still feel that there should be a program set up, that will let the teachers attend workshops, or "educational tours" which will keep them informed on what is happening daily. Someone might say that the newspaper or radio, or television are excellent sources, but what teacher has the time to employ these devices with all the extra "book-keeping" that is demanded of the average teacher today? Who has time for anything when the professorial meetings, the staff meetings, the classroom activities consume all the time? And the question of leisure should not even be mentioned. These things, keep the average teacher "tied to the school," so

Another indication last night that crime, for all its trouble, doesn't really pay: Several of us were standing around by the classroom door awaiting the verdict from an examination a week ago.

This just happened to be the first such occasion for me since more than two years ago on the campus of another institution. Back in school once again was bringing back a host of memories, one by one.

Our conversation was strikingly familiar. Things hadn't changed one iota. One re-emphasized how doggone hard that test was. Another wondered aloud if he'd made even a "decent grade."

Then the conversation lagged slightly and one of the boys said a friend of his—in another class—had recently received the verdict from an exam. "That boy," he said, "sat there during that test with his doggone book wide open. And he kept it open during the whole test."

Even Kennedy's estimates—a deficit of no more than $6.9 billion in fiscal 1962—may turn out to be far too much on the sunny side of world conditions worsen and more defense spending is needed.

He has called on his Cabinet officers to economize. He says his administration has cut expenses in a number of ways through increased efficiency. But the government's obligations in a troubled world and a growing country still increase.

Another said: "Bet he came out with close to 100, too." "Nope," said the first, "he made 45."

And on the topic of campus life at East Carolina:

There was a first-class football game in College Stadium Saturday.

Dressed in full equipment, the football teams representing two of the school's fraternities engaged in a match. The contest was complete with a large student audience and a high school band for the halftime show.

After all, the fraternity men—from Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Nu—had gone all out in promoting the intra-campus affair.

A couple of days before the game, I could not help noticing the billing given each of the two fraternities on a poster displayed in a local merchant's window.

The poster declared that SIGMA NU (in bright, bold letters six inches high) would engage Pika (in small, insignificant letters) in a football game.

Wonder who handled circulation of the posters?

Not saying this couldn't happen anywhere, now, it's just the idea that this particular instance happened when it would be noticed.

The East Carolina campus police the other night were busy exhibiting their wares. Their action pointed out that the campus force gives students their money's worth.

About 9:30 p.m., when ECC's night classes were breaking up, the stream of cars was winding down the one-way strip in front of Garrett, Wilson, Austin, etc.

Somewhere between Austin and Cotton, there was an interruption in the even flow of traffic.

Gallantly, two of the campus policemen with flashlights beaming were industriously aiding two graduate-student ladies in distress.

While the ladies sat comfortably in the front seat, the two policemen were changing a flat tire.

DIM TAPERS

Newspapers some time ago carried the story, released by the scientists of one of our principal observatories, that a star had exploded, and that the event had occurred so far away that the light of the explosion, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, had taken 800 million years to reach our planet. How far away was it? To answer that in miles, one would certainly have to use up at least twenty of thirty ciphers.

"When I behold the heavens, the work of thy hands, the moon and stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him? Our planet is a speck in the vast universe. We are very small specks on the planet. Is one supposed to believe that God could possibly be interested in our dwelling place, or in insignificant, little creatures like us? Yes, we are supposed to believe precisely that. God is love. His God is everywhere, which means that His love is everywhere. We are not only of more value to Him than many sparrows, we are more valuable to Him than any inanimate thing He has created. The universe which appears overwhelmingly large to us is the creation of a Personal Power which brought it into being. What looks big to us does not necessarily look big to Him. "By Him were all things made." We are not insignificant. For we are in the loving hands of God. But our knowledge is insignificant. We know almost nothing at all. The tapers we carry are dim indeed.

Test Is To Be At Berlin

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The decision has been made by East and West that the test of strength is to come over the issue of Berlin. To many, this will appear to be an error. They would have preferred that the United States take its stand over Cuba or Laos or Taiwan. The die has been cast and we now face Soviet Russia at Berlin for a final decision. Both sides are moving into line.

The decision as to Germany was fixed by an international agreement signed in London on September 12, 1945. Representatives of the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain signed this agreement and it is still binding upon those nations. In due course, France joined them. In the Potsdam Conference the London Agreement was endorsed.

From the standpoint of international law, the position which we now take in Berlin is absolutely legitimate. The only proper way to vitiate this agreement is by a conference of the signatories to it for the purpose of amending or abolishing it. A unilateral change of this agreement by any one party to it has no legitimacy and can only lead to war. Actually World War I was fought over the issue of the unilateral violation of treaties and agreements.

The difficulty in the present situation is that whereas there is an agreement among the victors as to what they would do to the vanquished, there has been no peace treaty between Germany and the victors. Although 16 years have passed. Furthermore, Germany has been divided into two parts, West and East Germany, and no peace treaty with a unified Germany is possible. Also, during these 16 years, the Allies have broken their various alliances so that Soviet Russia is actually an enemy of the United States and the Western World. Whereas East Germany has become a satellite of Soviet Russia, West Germany has become economically and militarily perhaps the strongest in Western Europe.

These changes involve adjustments in theory and operations and are cause for the present disturbances, the worst of which is the waning firing of bombs by Soviet Russia. Soviet Russia seeks the deal with current political problems by testing bombs.

What Khrushchev wants to accomplish by a campaign of terror is to force the United States and the other Western powers to recognize that the unification of Germany is impossible, that there inevitably must be two Germanys. That the United States and the other Western nations must recognize East Germany, and that they must withdraw their troops from German territory.

This program would establish the Russian conquest of Germany without further battle. It would eliminate Western influences from Western Europe. It would imperil the existence of the Scandinavian countries and the Netherlands and Belgium. By a stroke of a pen the United States would find itself economically and politically isolated and would either accept such isolation or would have to fight for its right to access to other

Red China Goblins Will Prowl

By ELMER ROESSNER

The Red Chinese goblin is the most dangerous one for business abroad today. Circumstances are pushing the Red Chinese to the point where they must become the most dangerous, slashing competitors in world trade.

The Red Chinese are at a point at which they must try to take over world markets—except in foodstuffs—regardless of the cost or losses.

The way I see it is this: Red China must gain cash or credits abroad, or the whole pipe dream of communism will vanish in the smoke.

Mainland China is disastrously short of food. There are three reasons for this: The weather has been bad. A large percentage of able workers have been diverted to the Army, to reinforce North Korea, North Viet Nam, the Tibetan Expeditionary Force and, perhaps, the Sino-Russian border. And internal resistance to communist rule has resulted in what amounts to sabotage.

in Canada and Australia and other in Burma and India and rice starches where they can fall to feed the people will have people left to rule.

Believing their own promises of greater production under communism, the Chinese are reported to have committed themselves to deliver rice to neutralist countries below Free World prices. To meet these obligations—and save face—the Red Chinese are reported to be buying rice abroad to fill these commitments.

To get the valuta to pay for this grain and rice, the Chinese are selling gold on the London and Hong Kong markets. Gold sales in Hong Kong have been so heavy that the price of the U. S. dollar has declined. "Why U. S. dollar has your silver if you can get gold?" speculators ask.

FACTOR IN SPLIT
The fact that the Red Chinese are selling gold to get foreign funds for the purchase of food may have been partly responsible for their clash with the Russian nations selling in Latin America, Southern Asia and the Far East. They will also extend their offerings to Canada, Australia and other Western nations that still see fit to deal with them.

American exporters face rising competition, both from the Red Chinese and the nations, such as Japan, that are competing with them. American importers may also expect to gain in goods dislocated from regular markets by cut price offerings from Peiping.

Ike Says U.S. Should Never Greet 'Outlaw'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower says the United States needs leadership "which would never belittle the United States" and "never extends a welcome to such an outlaw as Red China."

"I am sure that I voice the determination of all — regardless of party — in saying that we will support the President as he devotes his energies to defying the international bullies and protecting American rights and liberties," Eisenhower said in a speech Monday night.

The speech climaxed a series of appearances by Eisenhower in behalf of a Republican congressional candidate.

Among other things, the president (1) defended the sale of F86 jet fighters to Yugoslavia, saying the planes were obsolete; (2) said the United States has no choice except to test atomic weapons; (3) said the "century-old one-party (Democratic) system is a calamity for the South" and (4) criticized big government with its "discriminate federal handouts" and "spendthrift programs."

In his speech to a crowd of 9,000, Eisenhower drew on the loudest of frequent cheers when he called for "the kind of leadership which would never belittle the United States and thus dismay our friends and hearten our enemies, that stands steadfastly in all international councils for principle and right, and never extends a welcome to such an outlaw as Red China is today."

Eisenhower said reports that the earth's atmosphere is being "greatly exaggerated."

"I decided about three years ago that the United States would not resume testing in the atmosphere," he told a news conference "but I said that this would go until we found out about the Soviet readiness to reach an agreement."

He said the Soviet attitude leaves the United States "no choice but to test."

Republican leaders were jubilant over Eisenhower's appearance in behalf of John W. Goode, the lone Republican in Saturday's special congressional election.

Goode, 38, and four Democrats seek the seat from which Democrat Paul Kilday resigned last month to become a federal judge.

Goode's chief opponent is State Sen. Henry B. Gonzalez, 45, who has the backing of President Kennedy and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Benefits Seen In New Water System Loans

Rural communities as well as farmers who suffer from the lack of good water for household use, will benefit from legislation recently passed by Congress, a state credit leader said here today.

Nonprofit organizations such as incorporated mutual water companies, drainage and water supply districts, and cooperative water users' associations may now obtain low-interest rate, long term loans to develop the water resources they need according to Vance E. Swift, state real estate loan officer of the Farmers Home Administration.

Swift is in Rocky Mount to brief about 35 of his agency's credit officials in an area meeting on how to carry out the water development and other lending authorities which the agency administers.

The Farmers Home Administration's supervised credit program was revised, broadened, and expanded with the passage of the 1961 farm bill.

"Proper development of our water resources is of primary concern to our entire nation," Swift said. "Many local communities and individual farmers and rural residents face severe water shortages even when their areas receive normal rainfall. And this problem will become even more serious and widespread as our exploding population spreads into our rural areas and increases our water needs."

Water development and soil conservation loans can be used to finance water supply reservoirs, rural water supply distribution systems, pumps, pumping plants,

Some Cases Of Scarlet Fever Reported In Pitt

Pitt County Health Director Dr. John Futrell said this week that health officials have come in contact with scarlet fever cases recently at the health department.

He urged that symptoms of scarlet fever be given immediate treatment because of the possibility of heart complications from scarlet fever.

Symptoms primarily are sore throat, fever and a fine rash which is generalized. There are, of course, other symptoms which a physician can diagnose.

Dr. Futrell noted that his office had not checked with local clinicians, but on the basis of his observations at the health department, it is likely that other cases are occurring.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A settlement has been reached in the contest over actress Joan Davis' will.

Her ex-husband, Si Wills, 57, receives assets worth $32,000. The actress' daughter, Beverly Colbert 27, receives the rest of the more than $1-million estate in a compromise disclosed Monday.

Newest Crosby 'Photogenic'

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Nathaniel Patrick Crosby, age 2 days, is considered quite photogenic—at least by his mother.

"He has the cutest dimple on his chin," said Kathy Crosby about the newest son of singer Bing Crosby, born Sunday night.

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Barrings unexpected developments, the next scene in the melodrama known as the Denver area police scandal will be played in the courtroom at Brighton, 20 miles north of here, beginning Friday.

Robert M. Roberts, personable 39-year-old sheriff of Adams County and a former FBI agent, will go on trial on charges of burglary and conspiracy.

The sheriff has pleaded innocent, but state prosecutors say they are confident they can prove he was involved with several Denver policemen — safecrackers in burglaries of supermarkets in his county.

As October drew to a close, the score in the widening investigation that dates back to August, 1960, showed 39 Denver policemen arrested, suspended and charged as well as four ex-police officers and a Denver man who is a brother of a suspended officer.

Six of the 39 policemen have been convicted with two already serving their sentences in the Colorado penitentiary. Seventeen others have pleaded guilty to burglary charges and two pleaded no contest.

Following the original charges against Sheriff Roberts, six more indictments against the sheriff were made public, charging burglary, conspiracy and acceptance of a bribe. He has not yet pleaded to these.

Roberts, free on bond, is continuing his duties in the sheriff's office throughout the investigation.

The first policeman netted in the crime investigation of the department was Arthur Winstanley, 26, who was convicted a year ago of safe robbery in a downtown Denver restaurant. After other policemen were arrested early this year, Winstanley was brought from the state prison to testify as a prosecution witness.

Soon after Roberts was accused in July, the state plunged into the investigation with Gov. Steve McNichols naming A. S. (Tony) Reeder, also an ex-FBI man, as a special investigator.

A month later, on Sept. 30, McNichols announced at a televised news conference that 23 more had been named in police burglary rings. Nineteen of these were policemen.

All of the policemen who could be found were taken to the statehouse, there to hear the suspension orders read by Police Chief James E. Childers and to turn in their badges and guns.

Childers, 69, asked for immediate retirement four days later, saying the strain he had been under was "beyond human endurance."

Manager of Safety John McShoolley, 54, is acting as chief of police.

LONDON (AP)—A shock wave of alarm and dismay surged across Western Europe today in the wake of the Soviet nuclear superbomb explosion.

Government leaders spoke out in anger against the Soviet defiance of worldwide appeals not to test the bomb.

Newspapers denounced the blast as a brutal crime against humanity, a political terror weapon aimed at covering the non-Communist world, a threat to the very existence of the human race.

Indian Prime Minister Nehru expressed grave concern. Japanese political leaders were indignant. But in general the Asian and African governments were silent, as they have been since the Soviet Union resumed nuclear testing Sept. 1.

Fearful of the fallout expected from the blast, governments prepared to test milk, green vegetables and other foods for radioactivity. British officials made plans to issue emergency supplies of dried milk for babies should fresh milk become dangerously contaminated.

The British government denounced the latest Soviet test—the most powerful explosion ever let loose by man—as "wanton disregard for the welfare and safety of the human race."

Demonstrators staged a sit-down outside the Soviet Embassy in London, and some tried to invade the embassy grounds. Twenty-four were arrested.

In the British press there was an almost unanimous outcry against the Soviet bomb. Only the Communist Daily Worker defended it.

The conservative Daily Mail said the Russians' object was to frighten the peoples of the earth, especially the "neutral" nations, and also, perhaps to warn the Chinese what might happen to them if they do not behave themselves.

The left-wing Daily Mirror said Britain must not reply by resuming nuclear tests of its own and that President Kennedy should resume hydrogen bomb tests "only if he is convinced that they are essential to America's security—on which the safety of the West depends."

Rome's independent Il Giornale D'Italia called Khrushchev "a super-Cain who has committed genocide. Il Messaggero said: "Henceforth it will be very difficult for the heralds of Khrushchev to restore credibility to communism's program of universal brotherhood, now that all peoples have felt the gravity of a repulsive disdain and the brutality of a crude power."

Denmark's Belingske Tidende called it the "doomsday blast." The government newspaper Aktuelt spoke of Khrushchev's "madness" and said it is vital that the Western powers do not lose their temper in the face of the Soviet test.

In Paris, the right-wing Figaro said the Kremlin's purpose was "to assure itself of the supremacy of arms through fear, in brief, to obtain what no potentate, what no tyrant, even in the most extravagant delirium ever imagined."

"The bomb tests," said Stockholm's liberal Dagens Nyheter, "have developed into a means of terror in order to scare the many (small nations) to silence while the Soviet Union prepares to expand its positions."

The Dutch government charged the Soviets with "full responsibility for the poisoning of the atmosphere which results from these useless explosions."

Nationalist Chinese officials said the Soviet aim was to wring concessions on Berlin and other issues from the West and to terrorize the so-called uncommitted nations of Asia and Africa into following a policy of pro-Moscow "neutrality."

Homecoming To Mark Anniversary Of Church

Historic Reedy Branch Church, located on Route 1, Waterville, North Carolina, will observe its annual homecoming and 161st anniversary at services on Sunday, November 5.

A special feature of the morning worship service will be the honoring of all the members of Reedy Branch who have held membership with the church for 50 years or longer. In this service they will be given a golden certificate commemorating their fiftieth year of service and devotion to the Church.

The present sanctuary of Reedy Branch Church was built in 1900. It has been remodeled and redesigned since that time. Its white towering belfry pointing to the sky stands as a mighty witness to the influence of Christ in this community.

Reedy Branch boasts a year-round air-conditioning and heating plant, large educational building complete with furnishings and educational equipment.

The pitcher plant, an insect-eating plant, collects water in hollow, banana-shaped horns. Strong odors lure the insect into the horn and stiff bristles prevent its escape. They prey on only despondent and the deadly waer which contains protein-digesting enzymes and bacteria.

Tobacco Station's Future Is Linked To Improvement Bonds

Farmers in the Eastern Tobacco Belt have a direct stake in the State Bond Referendum on November 7. The stake is a $100,000 item for the replacement of the Lower Coastal Plain Tobacco Research Station at a permanent site. The Station has operated on 20 rented acres near Greenville since 1947.

If the referendum carries research authorities at N. C. State College and the State Department of Agriculture will be looking for a tract of land containing at least 50 acres suitable for tobacco and other facilities required in research work.

According to Dr. K. R. Keller, assistant research director at State College, the new station will make it possible for the research agencies to more adequately fulfill the needs of tobacco farmers in the area.

He says limited size of the present station does not permit suitable rotation and enough space to do research on major problems now facing tobacco farmers in the area. The establishment of a new station will provide for an expansion of much needed phases of tobacco research, including breeding, production, disease, insect and studies.

"A permanent site permits a more satisfactory operation in that the farm can be more fully developed and research can be planned over a long period of time," says Cecil Thomas, director of the research stations division in the N. C. Department of Agriculture.

Thomas says the Station was originally established to assist farmers of the area in controlling disease problems, particularly black shank.

Bobby Boseman, a native of Rocky Mount and a 1954 graduate of State College, has been superintendent of the Station for the past two years.

The Eastern North Carolina research station proposal is one of several included in Item 3 of the referendum concerning "$31,000,000 Capital Improvements for the State's educational institutions." The November 7 referendum will include 10 separate items for decisions by Tar Heel voters.

Other proposals of particular interest to farmers include an addition to the biological sciences building at State College, the acquisition of 800 acres near Raleigh for research purposes, and improvements at a number of research stations throughout the state.

Drummond Loses Ground But Leading Scoring Race

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
George Washington's Dick Drummond lost some ground to Earl Stoudt of Richmond in the Southern Conference football individual scoring race last weekend, but still holds a comfortable 10-point lead.

While Drummond failed to add to his 48-point total in GW's 20-6 loss to Boston University, Stoudt upped his own total to 38 with two touchdowns and two placements as Richmond routed Davidson, 20-0.

Furman's Tom Campbell collected a touchdown in the Paladins' 12-7 win over Wofford last weekend and moved into third place in the scoring derby with 30 points. Fred Colvard of West Virginia, blanked when the Mountainers upset Army 7-3, slipped to fourth place with 26.

Trailing the leaders are Al Martin of Furman, 22 points; Roger Hale of William and Mary, 20; and four players with 18—Early Eastburn and Charlie Brendle of The Citadel, Terry Strock of Virginia Tech, and Roger Holdinsky of West Virginia.

In the VMI practice camp Monday there was good news and bad. Doctors said the Keydets' top offensive weapon, halfback Stinson Jones, would be ready for Saturday's crucial game with The Citadel. But it appeared that tackle John Candler, out with a knee injury, would not be available.

Snead To Start At Quarterback Slot

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Redskins lost another game Sunday—their seventh this year and 15th in a row over two seasons—but they may have gained a quarterback.

"Norman Snead played a great game," said Washington Coach Bill McPeak today, "and it came at a crucial point in his career."

The 6-foot-4 rookie from Wake Forest completed 21 of 31 passes for 296 yards and two touchdowns although the Redskins lost 27-24 in the final minute to the Philadelphia Eagles, defending National Football League champions.

Snead will be the starting quarterback again next Sunday when the Redskins play the defensively strong New York Giants.

McPeak, also a rookie as head coach, has gambled as usual as his jaurierback. He swapped off Ralph Guglielmi, 1960 regular at the spot, just before the season began.

This meant Snead had to learn about life in the NFL the hard way—on the field with red-dogging linemen slamming into him. Most teams figure on taking several seasons to develop a quarter-

Florida To Meet Ga. Tech Sat.

ATLANTA (AP)—Chapter Two of the Bobby Dodd father and son story comes next Saturday when Florida and Georgia Tech meet here in a Southeastern Conference football game.

The younger Dodd went one up last year when he helped lead Florida to an 18-17 upset of his father's Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets. Bobby Dodd Jr., who shares the quarterback job with 138-pound Larry Libertore, completed a 32-yard pass in the closing minutes as Florida drove for the winning touchdown. Dodd drove the Gators to the Tech three, and Libertore took them in for the score.

The script is about the same for the second act of the father-son drama. Tech is favored as it was last year. But there is an important difference. Florida relished the underdog role in 1960 and knocked off both LSU and Tech en route to an 8-2 season and a Gator Bowl victory over Baylor.

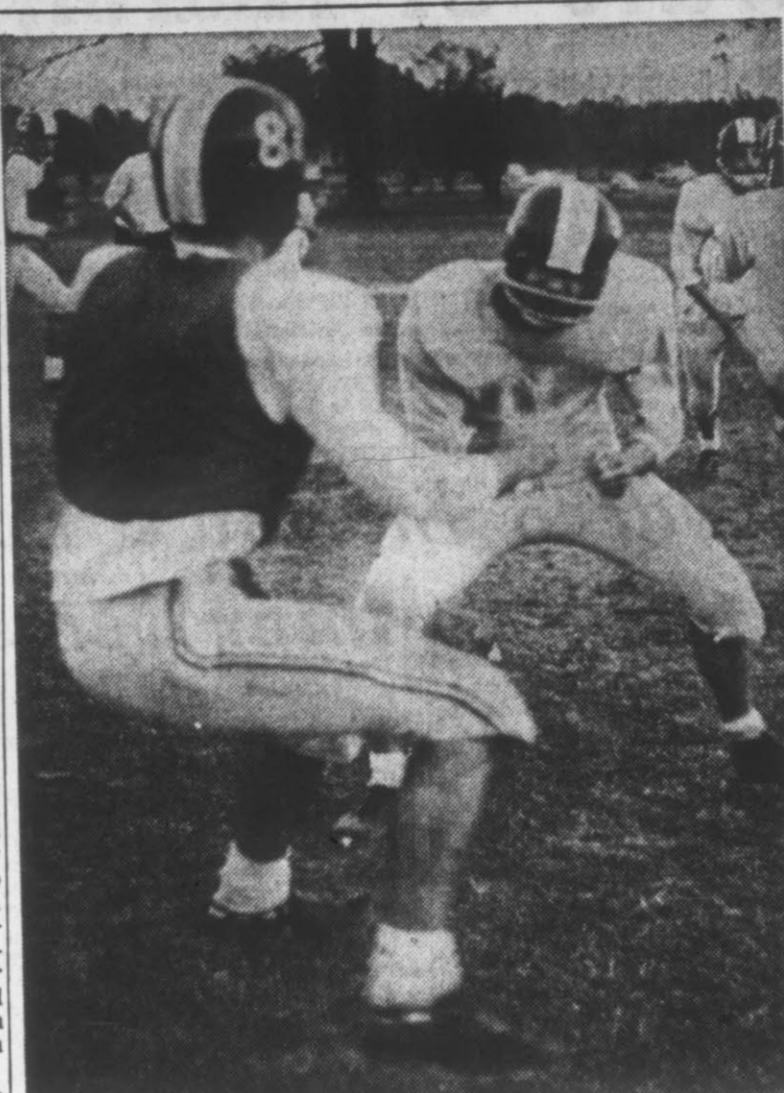

This year, weakened by injuries to key personnel, Florida seems to have lost the upset touch. The Gators played well but lost to Rice 19-10, and last Saturday LSU flattened them 23-0.

Coach Dodd concedes he has a better team now than he believed possible two months ago. Tech vaulted to the No. 3 spot in the Associated Press top 10 after routing Southern California and, then, tumbled after losing to LSU, and then fought its way back to its current No. 7 listing with successive triumphs over Duke, Auburn and Tulane.

"It won't be hard to get our boys keyed up for this Florida game," Dodd said today.

"Our team set only one goal this season, revenge on the five teams who beat us in 1960. So far we have gotten even with Duke and Auburn, and we hope Florida will be the next on that list."

Athletes Also Face Tough Requirements

Ernie Williamson of the University of North Carolina athletic department told the Rose High Touchdown Club last night that there are many fine athletes in North Carolina who can not play ball in college because they can not pass the stiff entrance requirements.

Williamson's talk followed much the same line as the men from the other big four schools who have talked to the club recently. The UNC official pointed out that prospective athletes must make at least 750 on the college board examinations before they can be accepted by the school. This ruling has been in effect at a few Atlantic Coast Conference schools for some time, but it is now a conference requirement which includes all schools in the ACC.

It was pointed out by Williamson, that any boy who could make the required score could stay in school with just a little effort on his part. He also noted that because of the entrance requirements the big four must recruit outside of North Carolina. He said that if all of the potential big four players from North Carolina who could pass the entrance

A full-fledged red alert, with flashing lights, howling sirens, and caution signs popping up from behind every tree, looms for Atlantic Coast Conference teams next Saturday.

It will be the toughest weekend of outside opposition the ACC will face this season—and conference teams already have dropped 10 of their 15 non-league games. Only two ACC teams—rugged Maryland and doormat Virginia—have won at all against outside opponents.

South Carolina is at Virginia in the only ACC game. The rest of the schedule, with many a palsy in the lot, has Duke (4-2 overall) at Michigan (3-2), Clemson (2-4) home to Tulane (1-5), North Carolina State (2-4) at Mississippi Southern (5-1), Maryland (4-2) home to Penn State (4-2), North Carolina (3-2) entertaining Tennessee (3-2), and Wake Forest (2-4) at Auburn (3-2).

Duke end coach Marty Pierson said Michigan has the biggest team Duke will play all season, and the best set of deep backs. He said the Wolverine line averages 224 pounds and the backfield almost 200.

Pierson noted that Bennie Moore and Dave Raimery are the most effective Michigan runners. Raimery had a field day when Michigan trounced Duke 31-6 last season.

"If we are to win," said Pierson, "and I think we are capable of winning, we will have to out-thrust them. We won't have the physical power to ram it down their throats all day."

N.C. State Coach Earle Edwards warned his Wolfpack that Mississippi Southern is a good passing team and a passing-running quarterback, Don Fuell, of the type that has bothered State all season. The Wolfpack beat Southern 20-13 last year, but Duke, 42-0, it has been by passing. They have a strong defense against rushing."

Virginia worked out lightly and heard scouting reports that described the Gamecocks as probably as good as any team the Cavaliers have met. Virginia suffered no crippling injuries in the 21-15 loss to Wake Forest.

ball well and have two good passers and several fine receivers," Fesperman said.

North Carolina worked in heavy gear, adapting its defenses to Tennessee's single wing. Reserves ran Volunteer plays against the Tar Heel regulars.

Maryland's Terps worked in sweat clothes on defenses against Penn State plays. Coach Tom Nugent said the team has no serious injuries, but that No. 3 halfback Ken Smith was hurt in the 20-10 upset loss to South Carolina.

Clemson had its top offensive man, sophomore quarterback Jim Parker, and halfback Wendell Black on the sidelines as practice began for Tulane. Parker was hurt against Auburn last week and Black against Duke the week before. It was uncertain whether either can play Saturday.

Michigan State Still On Top

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer
Michigan State and Mississippi, the nation's top two college football powers, tackle tough tests Saturday against upset-minded opponents.

The Spartans, ranked first Monday for the third week in succession, place their 5-0 record on the line in a Big Ten conference clash with resurgent Minnesota, last year's national champions who just missed climbing into the top ten in the latest rankings.

The Rebels, winners of six in a row in an undefeated campaign in which they've scored 204 points to 13 for their foes, tangle with sixth-ranked Louisiana State University in a Southeastern Conference matchup Saturday night.

Michigan State, also overpowering all opposition with 131 points while giving up only 10, retained the No. 1 spot in the latest ratings of The Associated Press' 47-man committee of sports writers and sports casters.

The Spartans, 35-0 conquerors of Indiana last Saturday, polled 31 first-place votes to eight for the Rebels, who walloped Vanderbilt 47-0 in their latest game. On a point basis, Michigan State received 437 to 407 for Mississippi.

The top teams, with first-place votes in parentheses, point figures on a 10, 9, 8, 7, etc. basis:

1. Michigan State (31) 437
2. Mississippi (8) 407
3. Texas (6) 383
4. Alabama (2) 325
5. Ohio State 267
6. Louisiana State 199
7. Georgia Tech 163
8. Colorado 142
9. Iowa 83
10. Missouri

Others receiving votes: Minnesota, Notre Dame, Purdue, Utah State, Northwestern, Kansas, Penn State, Auburn, Syracuse, Rutgers, Wyoming and Arkansas.

Longhorns Have Won Two Hardest Games Of Season

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer
It is pretty hard not to believe in this current Texas football team. It has proven itself.

The Longhorns have won their two toughest games of the season—and on successive Saturdays. First they battered Southwest Conference toughie Arkansas 33-7 and last week beat Rice 34-7.

The figures are more convincing: No. 3 ranking nationally, the nation's best over-all offense and top rushing offense; fifth best scoring team; and ninth in total defense.

The end result, to date: A 6-0 over-all record and first place in the SWC with 3-0.

Southern Methodist, this week's opponent, evidently is impressed. "A team that should be No. 1 in the nation" was the way scout Ralph Hawkins characterized the Longhorns after watching them manhandle Rice.

A top offensive star, quarterback James Earl Wright of Memphis State is finished for the season because of a torn knee cartilage. He led the nation in individual total offense before being injured two weeks ago and last week was reinjured against Mississippi State.

Coach Dan Devine of Missouri has ruled that all of his practice sessions from now on will be secret to prevent information leaks to both opponents and to gamblers.

Duke Coach Bill Murray hoped for a repeat performance this week from his defense that must face Michigan. Last Saturday the Blue Devils in winning 17-6, forced North Carolina State to punt nine times. The Wolverines may not have tackle John Schopf and fullback Ken Tureaud.

Longhorns Have Won Two Hardest Games Of Season

Top-ranked Michigan State may be without soph halfback Herman Johnson because of injuries for its crucial Big Ten game against Minnesota while the Gophers' Bill Murrey, a halfback, returned and another halfback, Tommy King, also was pronounced ready to go.

Center Tom Hecovich, fullback Mike Lind, end Jim Kelly and guard Nick Buoniconti of Notre Dame are all doubtful for the Navy game while Sophs Cloyd Webb, an end, and halfback Paul Krause took over first-string spots at Iowa at it prepared for a Big Ten game against Ohio State.

Army-Notre Dame May Resume Annual Series

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NEW YORK (AP)—In 1913, Notre Dame came out of the Midwest with a Gus Dorais-Knutie Rockne passing combination that whipped Army, boosted the Irish into national football prominence and began a classic series that continued as an annual fixture after the 1947 clash.

Now the two schools, which have met only twice since the West Point powers felt the contest was getting out of hand and called a halt, seem to be moving toward a resumption of football on an annual basis.

This became apparent Monday when Notre Dame Coach Joe Kuharich said: "I would like to see us play every year in New York. The Army-Notre Dame game surpassed all bowl games. I am speaking only for myself but I think Moose Krause (Notre Dame athletic director) feels the same way."

Asked how he thought resumption of the series could be accomplished, Kuharich said: "I think all it would take would be discussions between authorities of both institutions."

Col. Emory S. Adams Jr., director of athletics at the Point and present at the football writers meeting when Kuharich brought up the subject, said he personally favored the game and "I like the way we are moving closer together."

Notre Dame and Army are scheduled to meet in 1965 and 1966 and in 1969 and 1970 on a home-and-home basis. Kuharich said he saw no reason why at least the games at South Bend, Ind., shouldn't be shifted to New York. Adams said as far as he knew Army wouldn't object to a change of playing sites.

The long and heated rivalry between Army and Notre Dame was terminated after the 1947 contest because West Point officials claimed the game was being over-emphasized. The schools, however, played a home-and-home series in 1957 and 1958. The Army home game was played at Philadelphia Stadium, where the 1966 game is scheduled.

Notre Dame leads the series with 24 won, 8 lost and 4 tied.

Looks For Name

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A baseball league for grammar school age boys might play as well under any other name, but the registration of the name "Little Boys Baseball, Inc." is out.

As a result of a legal decision by the Federal Trademark and Appeals Board, the southern version of Little League Baseball is looking for a new name.

Danny Jones, founder of the split-off that came in 1955 over an attempt to integrate Little League baseball, said a new name will be sought.

THE GREEN STONE

A suspense thriller by SUZANNE BLANC

WHAT HAS HAPPENED
On a lonely stretch of the Monterey — Mexico City highway, death struck like lightning. Mr. and Mrs. Randall, tourists from the United States, were motoring southward when, at a curve, an expertly placed bullet struck Randall, the driver, through the eye into the brain. The car careened into a crash that killed Mrs. Randall too. Then three native Indians scurried from behind the rocks and while the eldest searched for and took the pesos from the corpse of the man, his son Manuel discovered by taking an emerald ring from the woman's finger. Rings could be traced, the father had warned, but pesos could not be.

That night, fearful of discovery by his father and police, the youth hid the emerald from its setting, keeping the stone, he flung the setting from a hill, and as morning sunshine glistened upon the metal, a crow swooped down and carried it away.

The crash looked like an ordinary highway accident to Inspector Menendez and Sergeant Roberto of the police until the fact that no pesos were found on the bodies caused them to suspect that the wreck had been looted, and they went to work on the case.

CHAPTER 3
On the same afternoon the Randalls were killed, Jessie Prewitz came through the customs as Nuevo Laredo. She was a well-dressed woman in her middle thirties, but because of her small size she appeared at first glance to be very young.

Tiny lines etched at the corners of her eyes and mouth betrayed her. The lines and the distracted air with which she signed the thick sheaf of papers and answered what seemed to be a succession of idle questions. Where was she going? How long did she plan to stay? How much money was she bringing in? Did she have a camera, gun, jewelry, extra tires?

There was advice, too, gratuitous advice about the highways, hotels, gasoline, all of which she heard faintly and recorded in the same remote way in which she was hearing and recording everything these days.

Only after all the advice had been given did the customs official finally stamp Jessie's papers, seal her luggage and help her back into the car.

When she finally left the outskirts of town behind her and was actually on the highway, the annoying faded and Jessie slipped back into the torpor that had followed her on the long drive from California, across Arizona, through Texas. The bleak, hot, colorless landscape rolled past, each endless mile like the last.

There was little traffic and Jessie had time to relive again the pain of the last week.

"It was so sudden," she thought for the hundredth time. "I wasn't prepared for it." And yet, underneath, she knew that she was prepared, that the disintegration of her marriage had started long before last Sunday.

Dan had been drifting away for many months, separated from her by some sort of self-absorption that she couldn't penetrate. There were the long silences, the sudden rages, the fishing and hunting trips she couldn't share. There were the long, awkward evenings filled with trivial chatter like that of two strangers meeting on a plane of casual indifference. There were her own rebellions and resentments that flared into articulate anger only to be followed by days of stiff, awkward civility.

"I shouldn't have been surprised. I should have known." Yet how could she really know that fourteen years of marriage had become a cage to Dan? Wasn't that what he had said on Sunday afternoon? It was so casual, as if he were commenting on the weather.

"You're still young, Jessie, attractive. There's no reason why each of us shouldn't build another life with someone else with whom we can find some happiness."

It was as if he had struck her. She was unable to think.

"Look, Jess," he went on. "It can't have been pleasant for you, either. I haven't been nice to you. What do you want me for?"

For a moment she wondered why, and then she answered as honestly as possible. "Habit, I guess. You've given me four years of my life. That's enough!"

From somewhere inside of her a small core of pride stiffened her to answer. "All right, if that's what you want."

"That's what I want," Dan had said with a finality, that allowed no discussion.

At first she couldn't believe it, but later that night the tears came and a terrible feeling of isolation, an urge to run, anywhere, away from herself, from Dan, from the memory of the happy years they had spent together before Dan had changed.

Still she hoped he hadn't meant it. In the morning when she came down for breakfast, her face puffed from weeping, conscious of her age, her ugliness, she still hoped that they were idle words she hadn't recognized.

But she could tell at once she was wrong.

"What are you going to do?" Dan asked.

Again the impulse to run seized her. "I'll go away."

"We're still friends," he said. "Where will you go?"

"I don't know, I'll go away." Even then she didn't believe it was really happening, that he would leave the house without trying, somehow to change things. But as if it had been a day just like any other day, he finished a second cup of coffee, put on his tweed jacket and left the house and Jessie behind him.

Looking back Jessie could only vaguely remember what she had done that day. At first, frantically, she had started her usual household chores until the futility of them struck her. In the midst of them she had stopped and started to pack.

She had thought only of going to a hotel, but when she stopped at the bank for money, she passed a poster advertising Mexico and with an impulse born partly of the need to run and partly of an unrealized desire to be somewhere very different, she decided that she would go to Mexico.

All that night she drove, and most of the next day, until exhaustion forced her to stop her headlong flight and to sleep. When she awakened she didn't know, at first, where she was, only that something terrible had happened.

At the first quickening of memory, she felt again the impulse to run.

Now, four days later, she reached Monterrey in the early afternoon, coming suddenly on a wide boulevard planted with trees.

At the hotel Jessie was very much aware of her aloneness. After dinner she stopped at the desk, unconsciously seeking the warmth of a human contact. The desk clerk was a friendly man in a gray pin-striped suit who spoke English with a soft, liquid accent.

Like the customs official he was eager to give her information, talking constantly as he unfolded a large road map.

"The old road to the capital is picturesque, Senora. You go through the jungle." He pointed to a jagged line running along the gulf. "There's a new road, much shorter, very fast."

He stopped abruptly and looked at her with large, brown eyes. "If the Senora is driving alone, the new road would probably be better. But you must not drive too fast. Sometimes there are rocks or cattle on the highway. There have been some bad accidents. On the radio tonight, I heard that two tourists were killed on that highway. Senor and Senora Randall. Very tragic. They were right here at this hotel last night. Did you know them?"

Jessie shook her head.

"Very nice people. Very rich," he said sadly. "You see you must drive slowly, you can't see Mexico if you go too fast."

The clerk, thinking the little Senora was pleased by his advice, smiled. "It's easy to find the highway just two blocks from the hotel. You'll see the big trucks. Follow them west. After a while the road turns off to the south. It's an easy day's drive from here to San Luis."

Early the next morning before any of the other guests were up, Jessie left Monterrey. Her white convertible followed mile for mile the same road the Randalls had taken toward San Luis.

Shell's experts have developed many ways to make their own cars run better and last longer. Numbers indicate some of the areas deserving attention, as described below.

Shell recommends 21 ways to make your car last longer

Shell Research scientists dedicate their working lives to the care and feeding of automobiles.
They can offer dozens of tips on prolonging the life of your second biggest investment. Here are some samples which you will find useful.

1. Break in a new car properly. Don't accelerate at full throttle or change gears abruptly. Sudden shocks to gears in the rear axle and transmission can cause lasting damage. Vary your speeds—and especially avoid sustained high speed. Try not to stop too suddenly—it can harm brake surfaces.
2. Warm up slowly. Racing an engine to warm it up ages it fast. A short warm-up at moderate speed is good for your car even in summer, and even more necessary during colder months. But racing your cold engine to warm up may damage critical working parts before lubrication can be fully established.
3. Use your engine to save your brake linings. When you see you'll have to slow down, take your foot off the accelerator early and let the engine's compression do some of the job. Always keep the master brake cylinder full of heavy-duty brake fluid. Shell's Super Heavy Duty brake fluid is designed to help brakes deliver top performance.
4. Have your engine's spark timing set to proper specifications. The spark timing determines whether your plugs fire at exactly the right instant. With incorrect timing you lose power and cut mileage. Also your car may knock. Chronic knocking can damage your engine.
5. Use a gasoline that controls knock. If knocking persists, you may need a gasoline with more anti-knock components, for a higher octane rating. Today's Super Shell contains all of the anti-knock ingredients required to help your car deliver knock-free performance.
6. Learn to read tail pipe smoke signals. Blue smoke means too much oil is getting into the combustion chambers. Excessive blue smoke is a warning that piston rings may be worn—and need replacing. Black smoke is an indication of too much gasoline in the air-fuel mixture. Your carburetor may need an adjustment. White smoke is mostly water vapor. Don't worry about it.
7. Have your oil checked whenever you get gasoline. An oil check is a simple safety check for your engine. It is free—takes less than a minute. By the way, oil does not wear out. But it can be lost through leaks or burning. And it does get dirty. Worse yet, oil can become contaminated by combustion by-products—including acid. To be really safe, use new Shell X-100® Premium Motor Oil. It only costs about $3.60 more per year than regular oils—no more than most premiums.

8. Avoid high speeds and save your tires. Every extra mile your tires last is money in your pocket. High speeds increase wear drastically—by as much as 80% over normal wear.
9. Rotate tires every 5,000 miles. Your tires will last longer because they will all wear evenly, and at the same rate. Note: See your Shell dealer for a set of valve caps; they will prevent air from getting out and dirt from getting in around the tire valve.
10. Check wheel alignment and balance. The shock of hitting curbs or dropping into deep holes can cause misalignment. This drags the wheel at an angle to the line of travel. Nothing wears tires out more quickly. An out-of-line wheel can increase tire wear as much as 50 per cent. An unbalanced wheel pounds the tire against the road, wearing the tread unevenly. Have wheel alignment and balance checked twice a year.
11. Save your battery with 11¢ worth of baking soda. Dirt and corrosion can shorten your battery's life by many months. Wash the battery off with a solution of baking soda and water. Use a wire brush if necessary. Then rinse thoroughly with warm water. Ask your Shell dealer to check the terminals.
12. Change your oil filter element every other oil change. Abrasive specks as small as 1/1000th of an inch in diameter can shorten engine life. The oil filter element in your car helps keep specks of metal and other abrasives out of the engine,

- while allowing oil to flow freely. The filter catches and holds these until it can hold no more. Then it can't work effectively. Replacing the filter element every other oil change helps your engine to last longer.
13. Get a lubrication job regularly. Dirt and moisture can work into chassis joints and bushings. Grease can also pound out, leaving the parts unprotected. See your Shell dealer for a Shell lubrication. He has the charts, equipment, Shell lubricants, and the skill for a really thorough job.
14. Have your car's cooling system checked twice a year. In time, the inhibitors in your antifreeze lose some of their ability to prevent rust, corrosion and sediment. Let your Shell dealer check the cooling system—including hoses and hose connections—no less than twice a year. When he drains and refills he will add a special Cooling System Protector.
15. Keep door and body panel drain holes clear to foil rust. The little drain holes at the bottom of body panels and doors can get clogged so that the panels actually hold water. Rust can then eat right through the metal. Make sure drain holes are clear.
16. Keep road salt washed off. The chemicals used to clear icy, snowy roads can eat not only the finish, but the body structure itself. Make sure you get it all off the paint and bright metal.
17. Use these tips to help your car stay new looking longer. A good coat of polish provides a film that protects your car's finish. But before you polish your car, always wash it—and always in the shade. Some new car finishes need only a good washing, but others require waxing. It's a good idea to check your owner's manual.
18. Protect chrome against rust invasion. Chrome has millions of tiny holes which can let the moisture right through to the metal beneath. Dirt invites this invasion, so clean the chrome thoroughly and frequently, and wax it for further protection.
19. "Bandage" any minor scratches in your car's finish. Until you can have scratches refinished, keep rust from forming with a coat of touch-up paint or even a strip of cellulose tape on the scratches. Use clear nail polish on scratches in the chrome.
20. Pamper carpets and upholstery. Ground-in dirt wears out carpets before their time. Whisk or vacuum weekly and shampoo once in a while.
21. Let your Shell dealer help your car last. Your car may have cost thousands of dollars. After your home, this is probably your biggest single investment. Treat it carefully. Feed it well. Let your Shell dealer help you. You will save money—and increase your driving pleasure, too.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Selective demand produced a spotty stock market advance in moderate trading early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .40 at 258.40 with industrials up .60, rails up .40 and utilities off .20.

Grains of fractions to a point or so outnumbered losses in the same range.

The market was higher from the start and held its gains fairly well.

Steels, encouraged by the halting of a three-week decline in steel production, made limited gains. Tobaccos, drugs and most chemicals advanced.

Nonferrous metals drifted off. Oils were mixed. Aircraft-missiles moved up on balance. Electronics presented an uneven pattern.

Third quarter earnings reports showed favorable comparisons with a year ago, for the most part, and predictions were that the upturn in profits would continue.

Chrysler, up more than a point, seemed buoyed by hopes of a labor settlement.

Proposing a 2-for-1 stock split, Republic Aviation also reported sharply higher earnings and was up about 2. Texas Instruments slid back about 3 points while International Business Machines recoupled more than 3 points of recent profit-taking losses.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.78 at 702.87. Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were unchanged in quiet dealings.

Stay-In-School Campaign Is Given 'Favorable Nod'

Greenville Optimist Monday heard the good news that their adopted "Stay-In-School" program has received a favorable nod and can continue toward its continued goal.

Optimist E. N. (Pete) Carraway, co-chairman of the club's Stay-In-School Committee, reported to the membership that local school officials have agreed to cooperate with the civic club's endeavor.

Carraway, who shares the duties of heading the committee with Optimist Walter R. Whitehurst, said Greenville Schools Supt. J. H. Rose and Julius H. Rose High School Principal O. E. Dowd have extended the city system's cooperation.

The program, designed to lend a helping hand to high school drop-outs in efforts to facilitate their return to classes, can continue on an active basis, Carraway told Optimists, "as soon as we obtain some names of students having difficulty staying in school or who have been forced to quit school."

Greenville's Optimists adopted the program on a local basis after District 18 (North Carolina) and Optimist International pledged support for the plan, developed by a Tar Heel Optimist, Earl Yarborough of Charlotte. President Kennedy and Gov. Sanford have endorsed the Optimists program for improving school attendance.

Monday's program was presented by Optimist Jim Sutton, who endorsed the weekend "Security Caravan" trip to the Nation's Capital.
