Russia Says 'No' To Moratorium On Bomb Testing

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Soviet Union today rejected any new U.N. moratorium on nuclear bomb testing as unfeasible in practice and fundamentally incorrect as an approach to ending such tests.

U.S. Delegate Arthur Dean said the United States could not accept an uncontrolled moratorium because there was no assurance that it would not be violated just as the Soviet Union resumed testing in violation of the 1958 moratorium.

Nobel Prizes For Two Americans

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—The Nobel Prize for physics was awarded jointly today to two atomic scientists, one an American and the other a West German. The prize for chemistry went to an American for his research in photosynthesis, a basic life process. All three men are working in California.

Calvin's prize is for research allied to that of Dr. Willard Frank Libby, who won the prize in chemistry last year, the awarding body noted. Libby used carbon as a method of measuring the age of rocks and ancient plant material. His process is known as the eternal clock of the universe.

Demo Party Chairman Calls For Increased Activity In Pitt County

Bert Bennett, State Democratic Party chairman, Wednesday night aimed a hypodermic at the flank of Pitt County's Democratic organization.

While praising Pitt Democrats for past accomplishments, Bennett called for increased vigor on the part of local party leaders to improve precinct organization, to assume more active roles on state and national party levels and to seek to convince youth of the validity of the party's program.

Speaking to about 100 county Democratic leaders, Bennett reviewed recent stars in the State Democratic crown, placing special emphasis on the early $50,000 payment to national party headquarters through the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner.

He listed specific objectives as current prime targets of the state organization. Development is underway, he said, of various programs to bolster the state-wide strength of the Democrats:

- periodical (every six weeks) of a state Democratic newspaper. Current circulation is about 12,000. Bennett said.
-a brochure explaining "the 1-2-3's of our party" to be issued soon.
-institution of the Vance-Aycock Dinner in the west as an annual affair. Bennett said the first $25-a-plate affair, held in Asheville last weekend, attracted about 1,000.
-development of a "Democratic Workshop" program "to sell our young people our party by its own merit. The program, Bennett said, would eventually reach all 100 counties.
-a registration chairman for the Eastern part of the state "to get more people registered down here."
-organization of county chapters of the Democratic Women of North Carolina. Forty counties, he said, have already organized chapters.
-continued employment of a full-time executive secretary. He good prospects" to consider in replacing the vacancy expected to be created by Wallace Hyde. "We need the job a full-time man like Wallace Hyde can do for us," he said.

In explaining the newly-inaugurated Vance-Aycock Dinner, Bennett said some western Democrats "had the opportunity to attend that dinner who have never had the chance to come to Raleigh for the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner."

He urged the Democrats to prepare themselves for "action and an answer whenever either is called for." What he described as the "key goals for our future" he listed as work, vision and faith.

Bennett paid his visit to Pitt County shortly after he had appeared at another informal gathering of Lenoir County Democrats in Kinston.

He was introduced by Pitt Democrats Chairman J. Henry Harrell who praised the Winston-Salem native for "an excellent job for the party."

Bennett met with the local Democrats in the County Courthouse. Following his 25-minute address, he chatted informally with Pitt party leaders.

'Torch Of Education' Goes Through City Early Today

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

They brought to life the old adage—"burn the midnight oil." It cost them thousands of steps, a sleepless night and an unestimated amount of wear and tear on their sneakers.

But any Greenville who watched the corps of East Carolina College students forwarding the "Torch of Education" through the city early today would have been convinced of at least this: They had a ball.

The segment of a state-wide marathon spectacle that embarked on an enthusiastic sojourn through Greenville, however, was witnessed by few.

Why? It was 3:33 a.m. when an East Carolina runner flashed past the intersection of US 264 and NC 11 holding the flaming torch aloft.

By 4:40 a.m., the series of runners, clad in sweat togs and sneakers, had completed a double loop through the college campus and had headed toward Bruce on NC 43 to relay the burning "Torch of Education" to runners from Elizabeth City State Teachers College.

About a dozen vehicles, including a Greenville Police escort, accompanied the steady gait of the students through the city and campus. Riding in one of the vehicles was ECC's energetic president, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins.

While the runner corps consisted mainly of men students, the torch was borne away from the campus by a woman student. Others followed in cars to take their turn in the 700-student effort to add fuel to fire of support for Tuesday's bond election.

Students from 11 state-supported institutions were staging the 700-mile trek from Wilmington to Raleigh and from Murphy to Raleigh as dramatic evidence of their efforts to kindle a fire hot enough to generate a favorable vote for the $61.5 million issue Tuesday. About half the bond money would go to the schools for capital improvements.

East Carolina's delegation, about 175 strong, picked up its cargo near Richlands at 7 p.m. Wednesday. Arriving in Greenville nearly an hour ahead of schedule, the runners pierced the dark with two circles on the local campus.

Accompanying them was a loud-speaker car that drew a large dark-window audience on the professional's second turn around a group of women's dormitories.

ed the torch by runners from Pembroke State College who initiated the Eastern half of the marathon in Wilmington. A pickup truck carrying the Pembroke runners stayed with the ECC delegation.

Simultaneously with the Eastern run, the state's Western institutions supplied students to carry the torch from Murphy to Raleigh. The dual marathons are scheduled to meet in Raleigh around noon Friday where a bond-support rally is planned.

The Greenville college's corps was scheduled to begin its second leg of the run to Raleigh at 10:30 a.m. today, receiving the torch from Elizabeth City runners in Rocky Mount. They were scheduled to deliver their flaming cargo to Fayetteville State Teachers College runners in Selma at 5:50 p.m. today.

Home Ec Seniors Give Wardrobe Tips

"Know your figure, your color, and what lines and shades you can or cannot wear when buying your ensemble," stated Mrs. Doris Beaman of Snow Hill, senior home economics major at East Carolina College.

Two students of the Adult Homemaking Class under the instruction of Miss Alice Strawn, speaking before an audience Tuesday night on the college campus, discussed "Tips for Looking Tops."

There are many questions to ask yourself about any new outfit you are considering buying, added Mrs. Beaman. Knowing and following good buying principles are smart "Tips for Looking Tops."

"Do the lines of the outfit suit your age, figure, and personality?" continued Mrs. Beaman. "Will the outfit fit a definite need in your wardrobe and is it worth the cost?"

"The price of an outfit is no indication of the quality of the garment," stated Rebecca Parker of Rt. 2, Benson. "In checking the quality of the garment, study the label of the ensemble for the composition of the material and colorfastness to light, perspiration, washing, and fumes. It is important to buy a washable dress one size larger if the label doesn't give the sanforized shrinkage trademark."

Smart women should check the workmanship of the dress, Miss Parker continued. For example, the cut of the dress should be cut on the straight of the grain and should be the same on both sides. Seams and stitching should be simple in width all the way down for the particular material to prevent tearing. For neat appearance, hems of the garment should be at least two inches and not seen on the outside. "Check to see if the placket of the garment is at least ten inches in length for easy comfort," concluded Miss Parker.

Miss Katie Crumpler, District Advisor, will conduct the course.

The monthly Neighborhood Meeting will be held Nov. 8 at 10:00 in the Community Room. The Leadership Course will follow this meeting.

Girl Scouting is among the organizations supported by the United Fund. With an annual increase in troop membership and a limited budget to function on, former leaders are asked to help curtail expenses by returning leaders manual to Mrs. John Behr or Mrs. Ercel Baker. These manuals are needed and will be of Mrs. Leo Jenkins lead the ready help to present leaders in carrying out a planned Girl Scout program.

Book Review Given At Club

The Pickwick Book Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Sam T. White II. Speaker for the afternoon was Dr. James Poindexter, faculty member of the East Carolina College English Department.

Dr. Poindexter gave review of John Hardin's book "The Devil's Tramping Ground", a collection of North Carolina's mysteries.

The volume is an outgrowth of a weekly radio program presented over Radio Station WPTF at Raleigh in 1946 and 1947. Through legends, historical incidents and folklore we can have a better understanding of our tradition, a greater pride in our past and a broadened consciousness of our heritage and culture. The greatest of all North Carolina mysteries is the incident of the Lost Colony. Dr. Poindexter pointed out other mysteries such as the Ghost Ship of Diamond Shoals and the Vanishing of Peter Dromogoolle were reiterated by Dr. Poindexter.

He concluded by stating that many mysteries have logical explanations, however, some of the romance and adventure is destroyed when logic is applied.

Following a business meeting, presided over by Mrs. Louis Boyd, president, a desert course was served by the hostess. Books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

Book Reviewed By Mrs. Rose

"The Tough Minded Optimist", a book by Norman Vincent Peale was reviewed when Mrs. D. J. Whichard, Jr., was hostess to the Athenaeum Book Club at a luncheon Tuesday.

Mrs. J. H. Rose, who reviewed Norman Vincent Peale's 11th book "The Tough Minded Optimist" gave a short background of Dr. Peale's life and highlights of his book quoting some of the outstanding passages.

In the absence of the President, Mrs. H. L. Ormond, Mrs. Whichard presided over a short business session after which books were distributed and the meeting adjourned.

Designer Monte-Sano's Line Has International Influence

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—When spring comes, remember not to ask a lady to take off her coat. For, if it bears a Monte-Sano label, she may not have a dress under it.

And, if designer Monte-Sano's line becomes the vogue by then, her neckline will never have been so low.

And it will be the fashion. Editors who witnessed a preview of his coat and suit collection today can vouch for that. The so-called fashion intellectuals applauded the line as the biggest news thus far in the spring fashion market.

While necklines on evening gowns, day costumes, and coats plunge to new depths, waistlines reach new heights. And very often they meet in a surprisingly ladylike way.

The couturier claims he was under the spell of Japanese plum blossoms, silk trees and flying cranes when he created what he calls the Obi silhouette.

Suede, kidskin of fabric belts nearly a foot wide span the back and curve upward under the bosom where they knot, belt, or tie. Also a part of the Obi idea are sleeves dropped to the elbow, and skirt panels. Front fitted jackets and coats are gathered on back yokes giving them kimono widths.

Occasionally on purpose the oriental influence stops there and begins to look like Paris. To add to this international complication, suits and coats are made of cobwebby wools from France, airy crocheted weaves from Italy and England and lacy textured wools from Scotland.

Some of mohair coats are shaggier than Rip Van Winkle. Others are hundreds of white puffs, like marshmallows, strung together.

These are called coat-dresses, indicating you can use them either way. Lapels are wide on necklines that scoop down in back and really take a dive in front. But they are belted so close to the body that you wouldn't dare wear anything underneath more bulky than a petticoat.

Monte-Sano's models walk like question marks. That is, their shoulders are rounded like the subservient ladies of the Orient, a posture which adds emphasis to the scooped low necks. They thrust their stomachs forward in a maternal way, the better to show off their high waistlines.

Swinging from these rounded shoulders are jackets with cape-like backs. Other jackets wrap around to the front at the hip line.

Unruffled by the current rage for them, the young designer has but a single ruffle in his collection. The frivolity of that one is diminished by the fact that it decorates black silk crepe.

Faculty Member Club Speaker

Dr. Ralph Rives, faculty member of East Carolina College, was guest speaker at the Chatham Book Club Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. J. Bryan Brown hostess served a sweet course, mints, salted nuts and coffee assisted by Mrs. A. C. Ruffin, Mrs. L. T. Snodwell and Mrs. R. H. Evans.

Dr. Ralph Rives shared with club members some of his experiences while attending Oxford University and his tour of Europe. He showed items he had collected in the various countries he has visited.

At the conclusion of the program a short business meeting was presided over by Mrs. A. C. Ruffin after which books were distributed and the club adjourned.

Social Notes

Mrs. Harold Hoke who is seriously ill in Pitt Memorial Hospital is not allowed to have visitors.

Mrs. Annie Latham of East Eighth Street is a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital. She suffered injuries in an auto accident Friday night in Williamston.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thomas of Greenville have been called to Mayesville, Ky., due to the critical illness of Mr. Thomas' mother, Mrs. Gus Thomas. Mrs. Thomas has visited in Greenville on numerous occasions.

'Glass Menagerie' Opens Three-Day Run

By MARY H. GREENE

Audiences show their appreciation of good work in various ways. Those attending last night's performance by the East Carolina Playhouse of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" paid the four student actors and actresses in the cast the compliments of an "aliveness" to character and situation throughout the play, of a long silence after the close of the moving and beautifully presented climactic scene, and then of a prolonged burst of applause.

Following the artistic and satisfying opening of the three-day run of the Williams play, performances Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m. in the McGinnis auditorium deserve to attract large audiences.

Excellent interpretations of their roles by the four members of the cast explain in large measure the success of the Playhouse production of Williams' award-winning drama.

Lucille Dew playing Amanda Wingfield, "the pitiful and terrible woman who is the central figure," gave a remarkable performance. A freshman at East Carolina, whose only previous experience on the stage was in a high school play at her home in Rose Hill, Miss Dew exhibited unusual talent and understanding in her portrayal of the faded Southern belle; the mother, anxious about her children's future; and the vulgar, nagging woman who clings to her dead past and is pathetic, even tragic, in her gallant fight against the odds of a dreary and hopeless existence.

A young girl, Miss Dew looked the part of the aging, frumpy Amanda. Her coy hair-do, the uneven hem of her figured dress, the bit of slip showing beneath her street dress, her dowdy house-earn belle; the mother, anxious about her children's future; and the vulgar, nagging woman who clings to her dead past and is pathetic, even tragic, in her gallant fight against the odds of a dreary and hopeless existence.

An ingenious multiple setting executed by Hull and a corps of assistants provided an artistic and appropriate background for the action. Lighting by Bob Imamura of Los Angeles, California, and Joe Brannon of Sanford contributed to the effectiveness of the production. Costumes were designed by Mrs. Lois Garren of Greenville, and make-up was handled by Alice Coriolano of Greenville.

Dr. J. A. Withey, director of the Playhouse, directed "The Glass Menagerie." Assisting him were Casandra Drake of Washington as assistant director; Dr. Ralph H. Rives as technical director; and William Rackley of Goldsboro as stage manager. Working with them backstage on various details of production was a staff of approximately twenty student members of the Play-

We Have Stake In State Bond Issue

All of North Carolina has a major stake in the forthcoming state bond issue for capital improvements, but this is particularly true of Pitt County where its largest industry—East Carolina College—will be directly affected by the outcome of the bond referendum.

Included in the bond issue for improvements to State Educational Institutions is $3.4 million dollars for East Carolina College. In addition to this amount in the bond issue, however, the college has another $1.2 million in potential capital improvements dependent upon the outcome of next Tuesday's referendum. This latter amount would be in the form of federal loans that will be forthcoming if the state bond issue is approved.

Thus East Carolina College has at stake in the bond referendum $4.6 million dollars which it needs for capital improvements to take care of increasing demands being made upon the institution. The improvements will include a new classroom building, an addition to Wright Building and the Library, a dormitory for 400 women and another dormitory for 520 men, the purchase of additional land and a small amount of outdoor athletic facilities.

Another item in the bond issue which will have a direct bearing upon one of the mainstays of the economy of Pitt County is the $100,000 designated for securing a permanent site for the Lower Coastal Plain Tobacco Research Station which at present is located on a rented 20-acre site near Greenville Agricultural research, particularly with respect to tobacco production, has been of tremendous importance to Pitt because this county grows more tobacco than any other county in North Carolina. It is important to Pitt that the tobacco research program be afforded better facilities, adequate land and other necessary resources with which to continue to enable farmers to better produce this primary crop.

Along with citizens throughout the state, Pitt Countians stand to benefit from better institutions of higher learning, better state hospitals for mentally ill, needed buildings and facilities which will stimulate economic activities, further development of the state's natural resources and agricultural research.

But Pitt is in a unique position in that it has in its midst East Carolina College which will benefit greatly from the bond issue, and further that agricultural research cannot help but benefit this county which still has agriculture as the mainstay of its economy.

We urge the people of this county to remember the state-wide bond referendum which will be held next Tuesday, and further we urge them to go to the polls on that day and vote in favor of the bond issues.

Trappings Of A Real Campaign

By LYNN NISBET

Y. D. C.—The race between "Dud" Graham of Charlotte and Ray Lackey of Stony Point for State YDC president has all the trappings of a real political campaign. It involves the aged conflict between the big county (Mecklenburg) and the little one (Alexander), the urban against rural influence. There is the rivalry between the legal profession and the lay citizenry. Graham is a lawyer, Lackey a business man, presently administrator of the Alexander County hospital. Neither can claim "crown prince" status with the State administration or charge the other with being subservient to it. Just about as many insiders are for one as for the other. Both candidates are working diligently to get county votes committed before convening of the State convention at Durham the last of next week. Lackey has assumed one title not often associated with young folks. Although he was only 30 years old when he came to the Legislature in 1955 he was so proud of his son with the same name that he listed himself in the North Carolina Manual as William Ray Lackey, Sr.

NAMES — Hector MacLean, senator from Robeson county, is a son of Angus Wilson MacLean, who was Governor of North Carolina from 1925 to 1929, after serving as assistant secretary of the treasury in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, and in other important business and political offices. Not a great many people notice the changed spelling of the name, since Mac and Mc are just alike. Young Hector has a reason satisfactory to himself for the change.

Somewhat more noticeable change was made in the name of a prominent attorney and present highway commissioner in Greensboro. J. G. W. MacClamrock delved into the history of his family and discovered some curious letters. The capital "C" did not belong there and the final "h" was confusing. So three or four years ago, without fanfare the name became James G. MacClamroc—which is the way it is listed on the State official roster.

An amateur genealogist who had been checking into some family histories where the same name was spelled differently several times came up with an interesting explanation. In the long ago times when these family names were being established very few people, even among the nobility, could write. When they learned to write they took great pride in the ability to write their names two or three different ways. In some of the ancient documents there will be diverse spellings of the same name. They thought it an evidence of intelligence.

(I wish my old-time kinfolks had stuck with the family name spelling of NISBET, instead of getting smart and writing it Nesbitt, Nesbitt, Nesbitt, Nisbitt, or something else just to prove they could do it.)

EAST-WEST — Schedules recently inaugurated by Piedmont Airlines make it possible for people to get across North Carolina between east and west in one day. This approaches realization of an age-old dream. A passenger now can board a plane at Elizabeth City spend several hours in Asheville and get home before bedtime. The Asheville passenger has equal facilities for the other way trip, and mid-state folks can make either end of the journey by round trip between breakfast and dinner—with several hours working time.

One of the biggest handicaps to development of North Carolina has been lack of east-west transportation for freight and passengers, not only within the state but between our ports and the middle west. Railroads, then highways and later airlines afforded excellent north-south service, but none east-west. The much vaunted highway program, supposedly based on years of long-range planning, affords no decent cross-state route. The central points around Charlotte, Greensboro and Winston-Salem have good outlets into the Ohio and Mississippi valleys—but it's mighty hard to get from the coast to Greensboro.

Piedmont Airlines have pioneered in opening new service to heretofore isolated areas—witness the new airport at Pinehurst—and the example may be followed by highway builders for the handling of heavy freight shipments.

Norfolk, Charleston and Savannah ports have good rail and interstate highway connections to the west. Our ports at Morehead City and Wilmington up to now have been treated worse than redheaded stepchildren in that respect.

Highway Commissioner Jim MacClamroc of Greensboro has been working a long time for modern four-lane highways from the ports at Morehead City and Wilmington to mid-state where they would connect with already established highways into the Great Lakes, Ohio and Mississippi valley areas. Neither Federal nor State highway officials have responded to his efforts, but he is still trying and now he is on the inside where he has a voice in policy-making.

U. S. Should Decide Soon On Nuclear Tests

Pressure is mounting on the United States not to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere although officials already have indicated that the United States will reserve the right to decide for itself whether such tests are necessary to its defense.

In the very near future the United States may find itself in the awkward position of deciding whether to make additional nuclear tests in the face of stiff world opposition, or pass up test programs which scientists feel are essential to continued development in this field.

The Soviet Union, in all probability, is nearing the end of the series of tests which it began on September 1. It should not be surprising if the Soviets, at the conclusion of these tests, do not make a big fuss about joining those who are calling for a voluntary moratorium on further nuclear tests. Indeed, it will be surprising if the Soviet Union does not take this position.

After all, it will have completed its series of tests and will have no further testing to do, at least for the time being. If they can make propaganda hay out of such a move, they will surely try.

It may well be that these developments come just at the time that the United States decides it should make nuclear tests in the atmosphere. In that event it might be the United States which is denounced for nuclear testing, rather than the Soviet Union as has been the case in the past two months.

The United States should not wait until the last minute to decide what it would do if faced with such a situation. The decision should be made now, and the position of this country made plain to all the nations of the world.

Nikita Can Now Turn Attention

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—At this moment the West can't tell whether it gained or lost by what happened at the Russian Communist party's 22nd congress in Moscow. But Khrushchev, now that the congress is over, can devote himself more wholeheartedly to restoring mankind to its usual jumpy condition.

The world was relatively quiet these past two weeks — except for Russia's 50-megaton explosion, riots in Paris, a nerve-war in Berlin, trouble in the Congo — what Khrushchev busted himself at home with the congress. Now he's free again to concentrate on causing Allied disension, jitters the world over the possibility of nuclear war, giving propaganda interviews and disclosing how to cook an enemy with a missile.

To nobody's surprise, least of all his, the congress was a great success for him. He got himself re-elected party head, rid himself of a few people he no longer wanted in high places, won hearty approval for his 20-year economic plan, led a demolition squad that blew up the remnants of Stalin worship and attacked the absent Albanian Communists.

Unexpectedly — or maybe it was not unexpected at all—Premier Chou En-lai of Red China, which supports Albania and considers itself very Stalinist, walked out.

Khrushchev, of course, got full support from the Russian congress delegates, as he knew he would, for his denunciation of Albania. He may have done this deliberately. It served to show the Red Chinese, who have become a pain in the neck to him because of their disagreement with his policies and in time may become Russia's greatest rival and enemy. Whatever he did, he did with full Russian support. Still, those two weeks of Khrushchev's preoccupation with the congress gave the Western allies a little more time to try to reconcile their differences about making concessions to Khrushchev on Berlin, or not making them.

So far as is known they reconciled nothing. And they are not likely to have so much quietude against for a long time since now Khrushchev again can give them his full attention and throw some more logs on their fire.

In reality—and only time will show it—the West, like Khrushchev, may have gained a lot from the congress. Possibly it gained nothing, lost much. For the time being it can't tell which.

This much is clear: Khrushchev emerges from the congress stronger than ever. He got full endorsement for his policies. His Albanian critics were denounced. His own critics at home among the old Bolsheviks were shoved aside.

This—symbolized by the party's full break with Stalinism—leaves him freer than he has ever been to pursue what policies he thinks right, even when they appear the opposite of what the onetime infallible Stalin might have done.

One of those opposite policies is his effort to represent himself as much more reasonable than the hard-nosed Stalin, as a man who believes in "peaceful coexistence."

NATURE OF TRUE TOLERANCE

Before me as I write is a picture of a European village. Its streets are so different from ours. The people and the clothes they wear are like nothing we ever see on our familiar streets. And all this variation between two places only a few thousand miles away, and on the same planet!

Just as every finger-print is different from every other finger-print in the world, so every individual is different from every other individual in the world. These people in a far-away village are so different from us because they were born into and grew up among scenes and customs vastly different from ours.

something of a nasty ring to it. It conveys the idea of enduring. With reference to the millions of our fellow men living in distant parts of the world, we should maintain not an attitude of painful endurance, but a friendly, cordial spirit of neighborliness and good will. We would be precisely like them if we had been born over there, and they would have been precisely like us if they had been born over here. Geography has made the difference.

So let us be not tolerant to people of other nations, cultures, beliefs, and races, but neighborly. Let us not endure them; let us appreciate the really fine people they are and stretch out to them in brotherly welcome. We need to do a little more thinking on this matter of "toleration" and delve down deeper into its real meaning.

Family Fight

Notes On A Big Evening

Trick-or-Treat Night (why call it Halloween any more?) has come and gone. Nothing like it to look forward to for another year. Tuesday night made me realize what a flock of very young people live in our neighborhood. The street was crawling with kids. You could hear their chatter a block away... they were having a ball. Costumes and masks add to excitement of the occasion, but not so much as to cause celebrants to forget their manners. All the weird-looking visitors who knocked at our door remembered to say "thank you". Except one. She giggled. I don't think she was a day over three.

The most excited observer was the family pooch. He had a rosy greeting for everybody. But always his tail was wagging... and when that appendage really wags, he wags all the way up to his ears. (I'm always cautious around a barking dog that doesn't wag his tail. That dog takes his barking seriously.) But Cotton was just living it up. If he makes as much racket for an unwelcome intruder, I would be surprised. Greatest obvious concern of the evening was that a dark-clad youngster would be seen too late by a motorist. The cars in residential districts moved more slowly than usual; and my one necessary after-dark excursion was marked by efforts to see in four directions at once. It isn't a good night for driving in town. Wednesday's Reflector reported five false alarms during the night... and, surprisingly enough, one of those in our neighborhood. With our recent rash of serious fires, that kind of prank is neither timely nor funny. Co-incidentally, I was reading the other day an editorial in a Boston newspaper about the city's false alarm problem. They've got a real one. During the past year Boston has averaged one false alarm for every fire turned in. It runs into money.

Other Editors Saying Behind Creeping Boom

(Henderson Dispatch)

Reports are that official Washington and a segment of the national business community in general are concerned about the slow advance being shown by the boom that was predicted for the second half of 1961. A number of explanations are offered. Studies reportedly show that buyers have the money but are hesitant to spend it. An inclination to save against whatever the future may hold, the weight of individual debt, concern about the international situation and trends of the stock market are some of the reasons given for the lag in buying on the part of consumers.

We believe there is at least one other reason likewise, namely, the heavy burden of taxes and a little indication that there will be any relief at that point in the foreseeable future. The pattern of government meddling in the rights and freedom of the citizen, and a feeling that government is going entirely too far in coddling the non-productive element may also be a factor in the attitude of the public.

The coming Christmas season is awaited in the hope that it may stimulate heavier spending on the part of the public generally. Great store is placed in that possibility. Undoubtedly buying for the holiday season will be reflected generally in volume of sales.

How rising of government statistics on rising over-all increases in sales totals is based upon turnover in so-called big business is not indicated in available evaluation of the current situation but it is probably considerable. Small businesses, however, complain that they are yet to experience a sizable share of the pick-up about which so much is heard. There is something else too, that should not be overlooked. That is the squeeze on profits. Between the cost of operations and the painful tax dig there is less and less left for stockholders. That discourages investment in new enterprise and hence tends to stagnate growth. It will continue to do so if these exactions upon management continue. The situation is playing into the hands of the socialists and welfare-staters, a status which they hope will accelerate to conform to their own brand of idealism.

The attitude of government toward private enterprise is one of the primary factors in stagnating development. Washington is very anxious to create the image of a favorable attitude toward business, but at the same time gives ear to those who would have government launch out into new areas of competition with the individual attempting to eke out a profit from his own operations.

In the face of these adverse factors, it is not surprising that we have a creeping boom. Nor need there be dismay if the pace continues to be slow so long as such policies are imposed upon the country.

Opinions In Brief

"The states and local governments are in far better shape than the federal government. Most are operating under balanced budgets, many have surpluses, and few are bumping against their legal debt limits. This, as we are all unhappily aware, is not the case with the federal government." — Nogales (Ariz.) Herald.

"Though we may have to enter into the valley of the shadows we would betray the human race were we to be frightened into giving away our liberties." — Providence (Ky.) Journal-Enterprise.

"I'm proud to pay taxes in the United States. Only thing is—I could be just as proud for half the money." — Arthur Godfrey

Boom Is Not Meeting Schedule

By ELMER ROESSNER

The business boom is not proceeding according to schedule. In the cycle of ups and downs since the end of World War II, the economy should be soaring—and perhaps it will be airborne in a few weeks. But so far the increase in output and employment have been so moderate that many observers are uttering cautious statements.

One of the reasons may be some of the more important strikes now and in the recent months. Economic studies in the past indicate that the economy quickly amortizes the effects of strikes. The loss of sales is usually made up quickly—more quickly than the loss of worker income, in fact.

But it may be that the effects of strikes have not been completely evaluated, or that strike losses are having a deeper effect on the economy.

THE RECENT AUTO STRIKES MAY OFFER A CLUE. The Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. estimates that the production of about 150,000 cars was lost during September as a consequence of strikes, and the loss for October will also be found substantial. Other observers have made similar estimates. The lack of 150,000 cars meant a loss of around $450 million in retail sales. But the losses did not stop there.

The men on strike lost pay, less of course, strike benefits. Their grocers, milkmen and tavern owners lost sales. Many installment creditors took rain checks.

But it didn't end there. Auto salesmen and their mechanics lost income. Advertising media lost revenue. Shippers, including railroad lines and truck lines, lost freight; their employees lost income. Steel companies lost orders; steel workers lost employment.

It still didn't end; suppliers of tires and parts lost orders; their employees lost work. Wholesale grocers who supply the grocers who sell to auto workers, steel workers, and auto salesmen and all the rest also lost, and so did their employees.

statistics. But it seems evident that the wages lost by striking auto workers was only a fraction of the total labor loss, and that the sales lost by the auto companies was but a small part of the total sales lost in the economy.

The strike may have cost the industry almost half a billion dollars in lost sales, but it cost the economy a billion or more in sales, and as much again in lost wages, salaries and commissions.

That may be the reason for the slowdown in our expected recovery. The recovery, you know, is from what some Democrat-minded economists call the "Eisenhower recession." In the spring of 1960, business began to slow down, and the decline continued for about a year, during which time President Kennedy was elected by a narrow margin of popular votes.

This so-called Eisenhower recession was preceded by the long 1959 steel strike. The recession was never satisfactorily explained; government spending was being kept up; there were no public fears; it was generally assumed that the ef-

Change In The Dept.

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Circular No. 27 of the State Department indicates that a reorganization of that Department is taking place and that unnecessary positions are being abolished, which is all to the good if it is done properly and in the interest of efficiency and competence. If jobs are shifted from State to the CIA without removing personnel, there is no actual economy. As a matter of fact, the CIA requires simultaneous reorganization with a view to eliminating from its doctrinaire personalities who use government positions to pursue private causes. Whether they are Left or Right Wing, clerks should not be making policy which the top men accept as their own.

The State Department has outgrown its usefulness and has become a very confused organization in which policy is manipulated by Deskmen without regard to national responsibility. Then the top echelons cover up the errors of the lower staff men so that public criticism will not become too noisy and excited. As some put it, the men on the Fifth Floor do not know what those on the Fourth Floor are doing.

No country can afford such confusion and the Cuban fiasco brought State Department and the Cuban fiasco and is not CIA inefficiency to a crisis. The public has not forgotten likely to. It will continue to plague the Kennedy Administration. Covering up to protect those sponsored by Deskmen for the Cuban fiasco is an administrative and political error. Apparently the current reorganization of the State Department has something to do with the errors made by Deskmen, although opponents of the Administration insist that the reason for the changes is political. They maintain that the purpose is to make room for new political appointees, which would not be unusual in our government.

If that is correct, it is faulty administration, but a reorganization of the State Department can be very useful at the present time. Another criticism of the Department is that its budgetary difficulties arise from the costly trips to Africa by Soapy Williams and the various trips by Governor Harriman, Adlai Stevenson, Vice President Johnson and others who traipse about the Earth.

Some of these trips, such as Vice President Johnson's, have been of value to this country. Those of Soapy Williams have not been productive of any particular value in Africa. The regional conferences of Chester Bowles have thus far been fruitless. There is a lot of motion in the State Department, but motion of itself is no evidence of performance. On the other hand, precisely how would the spirit of the Department reorganize it so that it can be a more effective agency of government.

The job of the State Department is not to make war. Its task is to get along as well as it can with other nations, friends and foes. Its personnel must be able to seek peace and agreements, not to stir up trouble and disagreement. Other departments of government may be engaged in espionage as in propaganda, but State must move in a mannerly and friendly fashion. Its men must maintain friendly personal relations with men of other countries, even enemies, and there must always be a readiness to get down and talk.

It is the President's function to decide on policy and, to instruct States as to what it should do. The President, not Adlai Stevenson, must be responsible for national policy and national conduct. If, however, the President chooses to accept Adlai Stevenson's advice, as Woodrow Wilson accepted Colonel House's advice, that is the President's responsibility and it is up to people to determine whether his judgement is correct or false. In a world, the President may seek and accept advice where he chooses, but the responsibility for what happens is his, not his advisers. For instance, if Adlai Stevenson was wrong about Cuba, as he undoubtedly was, it is the President who is responsible for accepting his advice, just as he

Two Chapel Hill Poison Deaths May Never Be Solved; Await Lab Test

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Mystery still surrounds the poison deaths nearly a month ago of two University of North Carolina students. There's a strong possibility the mystery will never be completely dispelled.

Chief of Police W. D. Blake said he is waiting on results from a series of laboratory tests, and he is hoping these will provide the answers he and his men have been looking for.

Bodies of the two students, James Michael Barham, 20, and William H. Johnson Jr., 24, were found in their room at Cobb Dormitory on Oct. 6 by a janitor. He was asked to investigate when the two failed to show up for their self-help jobs at a college dining hall.

A couple of days later a coroner's jury ruled that the two boys died of cyanide poisoning. And officially, that's where the case still stands. A few days after the deaths, Chief Blake said "there are strong indications it was murder-suicide."

Blake said it may be a couple of weeks before tests being conducted in the laboratory of the State Bureau of Investigation are complete.

"We've completed our investigation," he said. "We're just waiting on the lab reports."

"We're hoping that everything will fit together when we get the results so that we can make a statement," he added.

But, Blake said, there's a possibility no positive finding will ever be made and that what actually happened in Cobb Dormitory the night of Oct. 5 will always be a matter of conjecture.

"That's what I'm afraid it's going to be unless we turn up something we don't know now," the chief declared.

The SBI lab is making tests on contents of the stomachs of the two boys, tests of their clothing, and tests of sheets on Barham's bed.

Blake said there's a possibility tests of the stomach contents may give a clue as to the time of death — thus establishing which student died first. Clothing of the students is being tested for traces of cyanide "on the theory that if it is found in the clothing it will tell us who brought it in and who had it before it was administered."

Blake said that on the basis of what the officers have learned so far, he has an opinion as to what happened, but he declined to say what it is.

"I'm hoping that the (lab) report will either further that opinion or change it for another," he added.

Johnson, from Statesville, was a graduate student in industrial relations. He was described as quiet and reserved. Barham, a junior from Burlington, was more outgoing and had been more active in campus affairs. He had expressed an interest in medical training. The two had roomed together since the start of the current semester.

Fellow residents of Cobb Dormitory told officers that on the night before the bodies were found Barham was violently ill in the bathroom. They said they helped him back to his room and suggested a doctor be called. However, they said Johnson did not appear to be greatly concerned and said he would call a doctor if Barham did not improve.

Several days later, Blake said another student had told him Johnson had inquired of him where he could obtain a quick-acting poison.

But officers have never been able to track down the source of the cyanide that killed the two boys. Blake said there were at least five places—laboratories or shops—on the university campus where cyanide could be obtained without detection. He noted that cyanide can be obtained at numerous stores, but merchants are required to keep a record of their sales.

"Pray for world peace," she asked her neighbors when they answered her knock.

But what the West can't be sure of is whether the reasonableness is real or a grand device to soften it into concessions.

It is this very uncertainty that makes it tougher to deal with Khrushchev than with Stalin. He wants concessions that from his viewpoint, are not unreasonable at all.

Yet the West knows clearly that if it makes concessions too far reaching, communism under Khrushchev may gain far more without fighting than Stalin could have achieved with our right war.

Perhaps the best hope the West can nurse is that the party congress created a split with Red China, which can't be healed and which, for the sake of future self-protection, will shove Russian toward the Western camp.

White House Party Given For Trumans; Harry Plays, Too

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP)—President and Mrs. Kennedy treated Harry S. Truman to a very nostalgic evening at the White House.

And the 77-year-old former president had such a good time he even sat down at the piano himself and entertained some 40 dinner guests Wednesday night with a rendition of Paderewski's Minuet in G.

The visiting Trumans — Bess, Harry and Daughter Margaret — got an unusual treat for an ex-presidential family a night at their old home, the White House.

And the dinner party the Kennedys staged in their honor brought together many old friends and former officials of the Truman administration and stirred many memories.

Among the guests was former Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Harry Vaughan, who was Truman's military aide.

The Trumans broke the usual rigidity of the receiving line in the blue room by kissing and hugging old friends.

When Truman and his wife drove up in late afternoon to begin their visit they were met by the Kennedys and applauded by some 50 employees who had worked under Truman and still hold White House administrative posts.

Truman seemed so much at home that he took Kennedy's arm and guided him inside.

In the warm atmosphere, nobody seemed to notice that the Trumans were 15 minutes late.

Afterward, as the Kennedys and the Trumans walked to the Blue Room to greet the dinner guests, the U.S. Marine Band played "Hail to the Chief for Kennedy and the Missouri Waltz for Truman.

In the exchange of toasts, Kennedy noted that many of his appointees began their careers in the Truman administration. Truman warmly promised his cooperation to the Kennedy administration.

The Kennedys had gone to some special effort to make the visit historic and nostalgic for the Trumans. They assigned the famous Lincoln room to Truman and gave Mrs. Truman the Rose room, now called the Queen's room because several visiting queens have slept there.

Truman's black piano was moved from the ground floor to the blue room by kissing and hugging old friends.

When Truman and his wife drove up in late afternoon to begin their visit they were met by the Kennedys and applauded by some 50 employees who had worked under Truman and still hold White House administrative posts.

Truman seemed so much at home that he took Kennedy's arm and guided him inside.

In the warm atmosphere, nobody seemed to notice that the Trumans were 15 minutes late.

Focus On Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The concentration camp syndrome, a new technique that may aid brain surgeons, and drugs that do double duty are subjects for focus on health:

CONCENTRATION CAMP SYNDROME

So many former prisoners of World War II concentration camps complained of aches and pains, fatigue and lethargy many years after they were released that doctors began to call it the concentration camp syndrome.

The cause has been a puzzle. But now a group of Norwegian researchers in a detailed study of former camp inmates feel the problems may be physical—caused by real damage to the brain.

Researchers point out that prisoners were often struck on the head during work periods or interrogation (50 of the first 100 studied had been knocked unconscious during imprisonment).

All endured long periods of starvation and exhaustion, and many suffered infections that could have affected the brain.

temperature before damage sets in. This is a serious problem for surgeons in delicate brain operations.

But now Stanford University surgeons have been able to deprive the brain of blood for up to 10 minutes in operations without harm.

They first circulate cold blood through the brain, dropping the brain temperature to 68 degrees, 30 below normal. This apparently slows the brain's metabolism and eventually may enable bloodless brain operations up to an hour in length.

The new oral drugs that help diabetics control the sugar in their blood may also be helpful in controlling hardening of the arteries in the same people.

Since the drugs effectively lower blood sugar, they cannot be used for controlling atherosclerosis or hardening arteries in non-diabetics. But biochemists hope that a new chemical agent might be designed that retains the atherosclerosis control but leaves blood sugar alone.

In 1873 New York made Memorial Day a legal holiday. Soon nearly all states followed suit.

Happiness In Language Study

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP)—Foreign language study "is the key to many doors of happiness," Mrs. John F. Kennedy says in a message to the Smith College alumnae quarterly.

Mrs. Kennedy spent her junior year as a Vassar student studying in Paris under the Smith College junior year abroad program. This was "one of the most rewarding experiences of my life," she First Lady said.

Her message added that foreign languages lead to "an appreciation of art and culture, and understanding of the dynamics of history, but above all, the ability to meet, know and live in peace with the peoples of other lands."

$20,000 In Gold Has Disappeared

LONDON (AP)—British and Swiss police are investigating the disappearance of more than $20,000 worth of gold from a Swiss airliner last Friday.

Police said gold worth nearly $700,000 was loaded aboard the plane at London Airport. The aircraft landed first at Basle, and when it arrived at Zurich, one of the crates was missing.

Rose High Phantoms Host Wilson In Final Home Game Of Season

Red Devils At Havelock, Tornados Travel To Bath

By GEORGE BRYANT Reflector Sports Writer

The Rose High Phantoms will host the Wilson Cyclones Friday night at 8 o'clock on the East Carolina field in the last home game of the season for the Greenville eleven and the next to last game of the year. The Phantoms go into their final non-conference game with a 7-1 overall record and a 5-1 conference record. The visitors this week have had an off season, possessing only a 1-7 overall record. However, they will probably be up for this contest as Greenville handed them their first defeat last year during what looked like an undefeated season. But Wilson did manage to go on and win the Eastern 4-A conference.

Phants Working Hard Rose High Coach Bud Phillips has been working his boys hard all week in preparation for the game Friday night and he is expecting a hard contest. The second string has been running what will most likely be the Wilson defense against the first team during the practice sessions.

Most of the Greenville boys are in good physical shape for the game with the possible exception of Rodney Knowles and Benny Murray. Knowles saw limited action against Hertford last week because of some bruised ribs and Murray has been recovering from an injury received in the Elizabeth City game.

Wilson Is Green

Coach Paul Marklin of Wilson said that he started this season with a "green team." He added that he had only three boys returning from last year's championship squad and that they were not starters. In addition to the inexperienced players Marklin said, "We have suffered a great deal from injuries this year." He noted, "Our team has not started two games with game starting lineup because of the injury situation."

In all the Cyclones have lost 25 boys from the varsity and junior varsity both and they had to cancel the JV schedule about two weeks ago. "It has just been a bad season all around for us," Marklin said. The only game the Cyclones have won this year was with Goldsboro.

Rose High Starters

Lenoir Rhyne Is In Top Twenty

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Lenoir Rhyne is the only team from North Carolina or South Carolina represented in the top 20 this week as rated by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Lenoir Rhyne is rated 18th by the NAIA. Pittsburg State (Kan.) is ranked No. 1.

Both Pitt County Coastal Conference teams play their final football games of the season tomorrow night with Ayden taking on Bath and Farmville meeting Havelock. Both games are away for the local clubs.

Coach Elbert Moyer of Farmville said today that he hoped his team would do a good job. However, he added, "We just don't play well when we go east of Vanceboro for a game, and we will have to play our best to win."

Farmville In Good Shape Moyer said that the team is in good shape physically and that the spirits are high. He commented that the team's defense has been lacking strength for the past couple of weeks and he is hoping for an improvement. "I will really be satisfied with a tie," he added.

Going into this final game, Farmville is in second place in the conference standings and its opponent is in third place. Should the Red Devils lose the game it would put Havelock in second place and drop Farmville to third.

Chapman Makes Debut Friday

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (AP)—A former holder of the British, French and Italian championships, Dick Chapman of Palm Beach, Fla., will make his debut in seniors golf Friday.

Chapman will be seeking the Southern Seniors Golf Association title to be defended by W. S. Terrell of Charlotte, N.C. A capacity field of 168 has signed up for the tourney. For the first time the tournament will be held over the 27-hole seaside course here with the golfers alternating nines during 54 holes of play.

Former NCS Star Signs With Pros

SUNBURY, Pa. (AP)—John Richter, a former standout at North Carolina State, signed with Sunbury of the Eastern Professional Basketball League Thursday. He played with the Boston Celtics of the NBA last season.

Three golfers—Arnold Palmer, Doug Sanders and Gary Player—won almost one-third of the PGA golf tournaments this year. They accounted for 13 victories.

Tornado Line

The Tornados have already won the conference championship because the game with Bath will not count in the final statistics. This makes it the second year in a row that Ayden has come out on top.

Bath Expects Tough One

Coach Jack Wallace of Bath said today that he knew Ayden had a real good ball club and that he just hopes his boys can stand on the field with them. However, Wallace said, "We are in good spirits and they would be higher than they are if the game counted." He admitted that Bath did have a chance to mar the undefeated season for the Tornados even though they would still lose the championship.

The Bath team is in good shape as far as injuries are concerned. However, three boys were forced to leave the team when the grades came out. Wallace said all three of them have been re-placed now.

Bath Starters

The backfield for the home team will be made up of Billy Burchette at quarterback, Billy Turcotte at left half, Tommy Melton at fullback and Jimmy Bishoffe at right half. Bishoffe is starting in place of Fred Eilers who received a broken leg this week.

Tripp Expects Hard Game

Coach Stuart Tripp of Ayden said that he is expecting a hard game from Bath even though it is the first time the two clubs have met. This is the first season that Bath has been a member of the Coastal Conference.

The Tornado mentor added that Bath had been scouting his team most of the season and he has not seen them play. "We have all to win and they have nothing to lose," Tripp said. This statement is attributed to the fact that Ayden is undefeated and Bath is not qualified to win the conference championship this season.

The lineup for the Tornados this week will be about the same as in the past. The backfield will consist of either Bud McGlawhorn or William Edwards at fullback, Tommy Dunn at quarterback with Joe Harrington and Rudolph Cannon taking care of the halfback positions. Cannon is doing a fine job for the club this Coach Wallace said he was expecting the largest crowd of the season for the game which gets underway at 8 p.m.

Clemson To Take On Tulane In "Death Valley" Stadium

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS While South Carolina swelters in an autumn heat wave, the warmth may be oozing out of Clemson's "Death Valley." This Saturday should tell.

"Death Valley" is Coach Frank Howard's fond name for the Tigers' home field, where Clemson has won more than 75 per cent of its games since the stadium was built in 1942.

But Clemson now has lost two in a row at home. A three-game losing streak in "Death Valley" is a mirage that has haunted Clemson fans three times in the past, but always faded. This time Clemson, beaten by Maryland 24-21 and by Wake Forest 17-13 in home games this season, faces Tulane of the Southeastern Conference in a homecoming game. Tulane has an unimpressive 1-5 record. Clemson's is little better at 2-4. Although Howard insists this year's team could be the best he's had in 22 seasons at Clemson.

The Tigers are handicapped by a hand injury to sophomore quarterback Jim Parker, total offense leader in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Parker may not play against the Green Wave.

Howard frowned Wednesday as the fifth and freshmen teams completed several passes against the first three teams, using Tulane plays. He called the first three squads' reactions too slow. At Duke, whose Blue Devils play at Michigan, goal line work was stressed in a rough drill. Defenses against the fast Wolverines also got attention. Defense also was emphasized at Wake Forest. Coach Billy Hildebrand said the Deacons must be prepared to halt both a good running game and tough passing by Auburn, which has averaged 240 yards a game in total offense.

South Carolina held a spirited workout, and Coach Marvin Bass praised the work of two members of the third team: back Peter Warren and end Sam Humphries. The Gamecocks will be at Virginia in the only conference game.

North Carolina State held its last heavy practice, working on punt coverage, pass defense and line play. The Wolfpack faces Mississippi Southern Saturday night at Jackson, Miss.

North Carolina put most of its time on practicing defenses against the single wing of Tennessee. Saturday's opponent. A brief offensive drill also was part of the 1 1/2-hour workout.

Maryland Coach Tom Nugent put second string tackle Wall Rock, a 6-5, 225-pound junior, at first string right guard. Rock replaces 200-pound senior Tom San-kovich in the starting lineup for the Penn State game. Nugent said he hopes the change will help the defense, which allowed South Carolina 242 yards rushing. He added that sophomores Bob Burton or Harry Butsko may start at fullback.

At Virginia, backs Bobby Freeman, Carl Kuhn, Tony Ulehia and Doug Thomson rushed for good yardage behind the blocking of Ron Gassert and Bob Rowley.

DAYLIGHT HURT REDS CINCINNATI (AP)—Daylight baseball really hurt the Cincinnati Reds during 1961. They won 18 and lost 14 daytime games at home. In the World Series they lost all three home games. At night at home they were 29-16.

Rams Take To Road For LaGrange Game

ROBERSONVILLE—Coach Bob Lee's Rams play a Coastal Conference game Friday night away with LaGrange in hopes of coming home with another win which would increase their record to 3-5.

In the event that the Robersonville eleven can win the contest the Rams would then be tied with LaGrange for fifth place in the conference standings.

Coach Lee said that he was very pleased with the way his team played last week in a game with Havelock even though they lost by one point. This week he has continued to drill the team on fundamentals with some scrimmage sessions worked in. At the present time the Rams have a 2-5 conference record and LaGrange has a 3-4 record.

The lineup for Robersonville tomorrow night will probably consist of Billy Cratt calling the signals at quarterback, Joe Bullock, a freshman, at fullback with Charlie Forbes at tailback and Jimmy Cherry at wingback.

Coach Beck Corbin of LaGrange has made a few changes in his lineup this week. "We hope these changes will give a little more offensive punch," he said. He added that the boys want to win this one bad as they have had a "rather dismal season."

In the backfield for LaGrange will be David Pridgen at quarterback, Donald Howe at fullback, Donald Carter at right half and Joe Kinsey at left half.

Va. Tech To Meet Spiders Saturday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Virginia Tech's Gobblers and Richmond's Spiders tangle in an important Southern Conference football game but you can bet both teams will be listening for any scores from Lexington, Va.

It is at Lexington that Virginia Military Institute's defending conference champions entertain The Citadel's title-hungry Bulldogs — and the outcome of that game will affect the hopes of the Gobblers and Spiders.

The Citadel wins, for no other conference team could then match the Bulldogs' 5-1 record. If VMI wins, however, the race is far from settled.

VMI then would be 4-1 with the traditional Thanksgiving Day clash left against Virginia Tech. Tech if it beats Richmond, could go into that game 3-1 — by also beating George Washington later in the season.

The most relaxed clash of the week should be at Williamsburg, Va., where William and Mary's Wildcats in a conference encounter matching two teams completely out of the running.

Furman's Paladins will be outside the league, taking on a rugged foe in Memphis State.

VMI's Keydets held a sharp offensive scrimmage with the Gold and Blue units scoring on the freshman Halfback Kenny Reeder, who'll start in place of the injured Stinson Jones at halfback broke away several times.

Offense and defense were polished up at The Citadel, which expects to be in top shape except for halfback Early Eastburn. A neck injury may keep Eastburn, the Bulldogs' top ground gainer, out of the VMI clash.

Gabriel Could Be No. 1 Player

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer
Whatever happen to Roman Gabriel, the North Carolina State quarterback touted by many as the nation's best college football player this year?

The answer: Nothing and he still may well be the No. 1 college player. He certainly will make it tough for any contenders at his position. The only trouble is that his isn't a winning team so far, getting only two victories in six starts.

Gabriel ranks fifth nationally in forward passing, completing 65 of 123 attempts for 608 yards and six touchdowns. His 60.8 completion percentage is among the top ten.

Offensively, he has scored twice in addition to his six TD tosses, one of which got the Wolfpack a 7-0 victory over Wake Forest. He passed for two others in a 21-14 victory over Virginia, and has scored or accounted for touchdowns in the other four games.

This week Gabriel tries his wares against Mississippi Southern.

Michigan State, the nation's No. 1 team, probably will have halfback Gary Ballman for its crucial Big Ten game against once-beaten Minnesota. Coach Duffy Daugherty, who said "we needed the workout to sharpen our squad," made it through a midweek scrimmage yesterday without any damage.

Notre Dame Coach Joe Kuharich tried to solve his multiple injury problems by putting Gerry Gray at fullback for Mike Lind; Ed Hoerster at center for Tom Hecomovich; Bob Lehman at guard for Nick Buonoconti, and also inserted Dennis Murphy and Clay Stephens at ends.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder said his Syracuse team will have to score four touchdowns this week to beat Pitt in the East's top game.

Dawson Nethercutt of Greenville caught the Large Mouth Bass he is holding, this week in Jarvis Tripp's pond on the Farmville Highway. The fish weighed 7½ pounds, was 23½ inches long and 15½ inches around the middle. Nethercutt was fishing from the bank using silver minnows and pork rine for bait. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

Hornung Is Free To Play For At Least Next 2 Weeks

CHICAGO (AP) — National Football League scoring champion Paul Hornung of the Green Bay Packers is free to play football the next two weeks pending results of a special examination to determine if he is physically fit for the Army.

Hornung is expected to leave the U.S. Navy Hospital at Great Lakes, Ill., today. Fifth Army headquarters announced Wednesday that he would not be called to military service until Nov. 14. He has orders from the 14th U.S. Army Corps headquarters at Minneapolis to report to Ft. Riley, Kan., for duty assignment to the 86th Engineer Company, "providing he is found physically qualified."

Hornung, who is suffering a pinched neck nerve which has sidelined him on occasions, will be available for duty with the defending Western Division champion Packers for games with the Baltimore Colts and the Chicago Bears the next two Sundays.

At Green Bay, Coach Vince Lombardi said: "I haven't the slightest idea if Hornung will play against the Colts Sunday. He has not been at practice and I don't know about that pinched nerve. We have accepted the fact that we are going to lose men to the military service. Our morale is excellent. We are in this business for one thing—to win."

Hornung entered the hospital for a special examination after a preliminary test Oct. 24 canceled an original date to report to Ft. Riley for active Army duty last Monday. Results of the test will be made known between now and his scheduled reporting date Nov. 14, it was announced.

Green Bay's middle linebacker, Ray Nitschke, heads for another tour of Army duty this week. Another Packer star, flanker Boyd Dowler, will be on hand for two more games before joining Nitschke in the 32nd Division at Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Hornung is 26 and a bachelor.

Furman's Campbell Is A Terrific Rusher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Furman's Tom Campbell is such a terrific rusher that he's likely to gain more yardage on the ground this season than any passer in the Southern Conference gains by air.

Campbell, the squatly 198-pounder from Plymouth Meeting, Pa., rushed for 118 yards last week and pushed his league-leading total to 675 yards. The best passer, Furman's Billy Canty, has pitched for only 678 yards.

The last time a rusher out-distanced a passer in the conference was in 1954 when Virginia Tech's Dickie Beard ran for 647 yards while William and Mary's Al Grieco, the top-ranked passer, gained only 568 through the air.

Canty, who also runs when he can't pass, is the leader in total offense for the fourth consecutive week. The Paladin quarterback has accounted for a total of 779 yards. Third in total offense is Bill Whaley of The Citadel with 657 yards.

The two other statistical leaders, Furman's Tony Carmignani in pass receiving and The Citadel's Clyde Marsh in punting, strengthened their first-place grips last week.

Carmignani grabbed three passes last week to increase his lead to four over Earl Stoudt of Richmond. Marsh lifted his punting average to 40.6 yards per kick, moving far ahead of W&M's Dan Driscoll with 37.6.

Whaley also trails Canty in passing. The Citadel quarterback has completed 48 tosses for 635 yards and two touchdowns. He has hit 48 of 95 tries. Earl Cole, the Davidson sophomore, has completed 37 passes for fourth place in the conference. Cole has thrown 97 times and accounted for 587 yards and five scores.

Charlie Brendle of The Citadel is in a three-way tie for third in pass receptions, having caught 14 for 229 yards.

Two Furman punters, Rodge Senter and Jim Sumner, are tied for fifth place with a 35.5 yard per kick average.

Duke's Wilkinson Leads ACC In Punt Return Race

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — While Duke's Jay Wilkinson is making a record-breaking run away of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Harry Pavlack of Clemson rates the No. 1 position, with places awarded on total yardage, but the fifth-place man, Jack Morris of South Carolina, is only 14 yards behind.

In between are Mike Clark of N.C. State with 155 yards, Mark Leggett of Duke with 154 and Jim Davidson of Maryland with 149.

Of the five, Clark boasts the only scoring return, and Morris owns the best average return, 36.3 yards. Clark is averaging 31.0 yard per runback, Davidson 29.8, Pavlack 22.7 and Leggett 22.0.

Wilkinson, who tied one ACC record and broke another with six punt returns for 160 yards against N.C. State last weekend, now has a record-breaking 252 yards on a dozen runbacks for the six games he has played. He has hauled back two for TDs. The closest man to the Blue Devil sophomore is Tony Kozarsky of N.C. State with 137 yards on nine returns.

Latest ACC Service Bureau figures also show a nip-and-tuck punting race still going on. Eddie Wernitz of Clemson leads with an average of 40.4 yards per kick, trailed by Bill Ruby of Wake Forest 39.4, Dave Houtz of N.C. State 39.4, Ray Farris of North Carolina 39.3 and Randy Clark of Duke 38.3.

In pass receiving, Gary Collins of Maryland and Johnny Morris of North Carolina State are tied with 14 catches each. Collins owns a new ACC career record for most TD passes caught (10) and is within eight yards of the career record for most receiving yardage (879 yards to 987).

Tom Brown of Maryland tops pass interceptions with five and Lon Armstrong of Clemson leads extra point kicking with 13 for 13 and 27 in a row.

Monster H-Bomb's Toll May Be Among The Unborn

Bomber Topped Radio Tower

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—A low-flying Air Force bomber struck and toppled a 500-foot radio tower on the Yucca Flats nuclear test site after Sunday's underground test shot, the Atomic Energy Commission said Wednesday.

A press release said a B57 taking air samplings hit the tower with a wing. The $100,000 tower was demolished but the damaged plane returned safely to Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas.

SURVEY INITIATED

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—At its annual assembly here this summer, the Church of the Brethren launched a three-year survey to find out what the average member feels and thinks about the purposes of the church.

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The greatest toll from the Soviet Union's monster 50-megaton H-bomb may be among tomorrow's children. Its radioactive fallout might doom hundreds of future generations—to early death or physical or mental defects from hereditary damage.

Almost all geneticists assume that any increase in radiation could cause genetic damage to some people.

Most think the effect from present fallout—and that added now by the Soviets—will be a very slight fraction of one per cent increase over the number of children presently born with genetic defects. The increase could be so slight as not to be detectable.

But with 100 million children born in this world each year, even a slight increase in the rate of defective births could mean sizable numbers of damaged or still-born humans in 50 to 100 years or more.

Dr. Linus Pauling, famous California Institute of Technology chemist and a crusader against bomb testing, does estimate a number:

From a 50-megaton bomb alone, 40,000 infants born with physical or mental defects in the next few generations throughout the world, he says. And 400,000 more genetically injured during the next 6,000 years through radioactive carbon-14 created by such a bomb.

Other scientists disagree with his estimate, particularly that dealing with carbon-14.

The difficulty in any estimate is that some crucial facts are not known about human genes, produced in the sex glands, which determine the inherited characteristics that babies will have.

It is known that radiation can alter or mutate genes, and that most mutations are harmful.

It is not known if genes can resist tiny amounts of radiation, such as represented by fallout atoms which enter sex glands or genes.

All the evidence from experiments with animals, fruit flies, and single cells indicate there is no threshold or tolerable level. Thus, geneticists assume any increase in radiation is potentially harmful.

One encouraging note, from mouse experiments, is that chronic exposure to a low dose of radiation (10 roentgens a day) given over a number of days produces fewer mutations than an equal total dose given all at once. Exposure of sex glands to fallout atoms can be chronic or long-lasting, and at an almost infinitesimally small dose.

Many experts assume that natural background radiation has always been causing some of the genetic mutations to which the human race is subject. Heat and chemicals are more powerful causes of genetic changes.

A National Academy of Sciences committee has estimated two billion children will be born in the world during the next 30 years, and that some four million of them would possess tangible genetic effects from natural or spontaneous causes. Different authorities estimate 2 to 10 per cent of such genetic defects might be due to natural background radiation.

So, even a slight increase in radioactivity produced by bomb tests could increase this rate of genetic mutations. The experts all agree the increase would not be enough to cause any worry about the future of the human race by any means.

Various estimates can be made, as Dr. Pauling does, of the absolute numbers of persons who might be affected by the addition of radiation from fallout. All such guesses start from the unknown as to what natural radiation actually is doing.

Dr. Pauling sees a sizable total number of future infants affected—out of many many billions who would be born in the next 6,000 years—from carbon-14 created by H-bombs.

The H-bomb reaction releases neutrons which can change nitrogen atoms in the air into carbon-14. Cosmic rays from space do the same thing, and create the natural carbon-14 which enters all living things on earth. Dr. Pauling estimates a 50-megaton H-bomb would create enough carbon-14 to cause 40,000 deaths or defects from genetic changes in the next 6,000 years. Reason: carbon-14 can become part of the chemical material of genes, and damage genes by the rays it emits, or because it then changes back to nitrogen.

And some say that through modern medicine and humanitarian treatment, we are keeping alive people ill or weak because of defective genes, and the fact they can have children may result in passing along more defective genes than would ever result from fallout radiation.

A consensus of the experts: bomb testing represents a definite but small hazard to human posterity.

Friday: Fallout's bad actors.

which would be available to assist in passing along more defective genes than would ever result from fallout radiation.

THE GREEN STONE

A suspense-thriller by
SUZANNE BLANC

From the novel published by Harper & Row, Copyright © 1961

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

On a lonely stretch of the Monterrey — Mexico City highway, death struck like lightning. Mr. and Mrs. Randall, tourists from the United States, were motoring southward when, at a curve, an expertly placed bullet struck Randall, the driver, through the eye into the brain. The car careened into a crash that killed Mrs. Randall, too. Then three native Mexicans scurried from behind the rocks, and while the eldest searched for and took the pesos from the corpse of the man, his son Manuel disobeyed by taking an emerald ring from the woman's finger. Rings could be traced, the father had warned, but pesos could not be.

That night, fearful of discovery by his father and police, the youth hid the emerald in the setting. Keeping the stone he fled the setting from a hill, and as morning sunshine glistened upon the metal, a crow swooped down and carried it away.

The crash looked like an ordinary highway accident to Inspector Menendez and Sergeant Roberto of the police until the fact that no pesos were found on the bodies caused them to suspect that the wreck had been looted and they went to work on the case.

Through a check of the Randall's customs declaration at the border, Menendez learned that an emerald ring worn by Mrs. Randall was missing, and he sent Sergeant Roberto to the Indian village near the wreck to search for the ring. Meanwhile, the coroner's report divulged something the police had not seen: a bullet hole in Randall's eye.

CHAPTER 5

Luis Perez was a familiar figure in the Indian village. At least once each week he brought a group of tourists from San Luis to watch the pottery making.

To Luis, the tours had long ago become monotonously boring. The crude huts, the piles of refuse, the heat of the kilns, the oppressive odors had ceased to be picturesque. He saw only the dirt, the poverty, the ignorance and the greed of the Indians.

Now as he thought of the trip ahead, of the tourists waiting for him at the Plaza Hotel, it was with distaste. He was late. He would have to hurry. Automatically he brushed his camel-hair coat and stuffed the pockets with tobacco pouches filled with semiprecious stones wrapped in tissue paper. Often he could sell a few of these to the lady tourists.

At least he admitted to himself, the morning was cool; but even the inviting freshness of the day did not mitigate the unpleasant prospect of catering to the foreigners. Each succeeding hour was one in an endless chain of waiting for the startling changes that had been predicted in his future.

The waiting had begun several months earlier when he consulted a fortuneteller. She was an old woman, almost blind, who, it was said, retained the knowledge of the ancient ones and was consulted by the most prominent officials.

First she had traced his past. "Far to the north you were born," she said. "And you lived in a strange land where a harsh language is spoken. Until recently you were very poor."

It was all true. Luis had been born close to the Texas border. His father had crossed the Rio Grande to work in the California vineyards when Luis was still very small. There they had lived in a one-room shack. With the children of other migrant workers Luis went to school. He learned English, history, the names of movie stars, a colorful and profane vocabulary and all about the American way of life. At fourteen he stole a car and as a result, his family was deported along with hundreds of other illegal immigrants. His father then opened a small leather shop with his meager savings. The family continued to be as poor as ever.

Only after Luis became a guide did he enjoy the creature comforts that others take for granted. He had created his own job, paid heavily for his license and relied on his ingenuity to earn a living from the tourists. Besides conducting tours to the Indian village and around San Luis, there were commissions to be collected from the shops and hotels. There were sometimes lavish tips from the richer tourists.

He was popular with the ladies. Handsome in a sleek, dark fashion, with regular features and a sharp, white smile, he cultivated ingratiating manners that the women found continental and charming. One fatuous elderly woman had given him a gold wristwatch. His expensive coat had been thrown to him in disgust by a businessman whose wife complained that it looked too warm for the Mexican climate.

The coat was Luis's proudest possession: lightweight, belted and with broad, padded shoulders. In it he felt very prosperous, very handsome.

Luis had not done badly from the tourists. He lived in a huge, airy room leading onto a courtyard. He ate well, dressed well and almost always had a few pesos extra. At first just having a room of his own seemed like opulence; then he had discovered the joys of fine clothes, the admiration of women.

In contrast with everything he had known in the past, Luis was very rich indeed, and he had been well pleased with himself and his lot until he had consulted the fortuneteller. But once the seeds of discontent were planted, Luis forgot the past and thought only of the future.

Perhaps it is not prophecy at all but the belief in prophecy that fulfills it, for the words of the Indian woman stirred strange chords of impatience in the guide. "There will come a day of great portent," she had intoned. "Unexpected riches and a woman, both from a great distance, mark the beginning of a new path. More I cannot see, for there are many paths for each man, and women and riches can lead him down any one of them."

great distance, what could it mean except that Luis would marry one of the long, silken women from the States to whom a peso was of as little value as a blade of grass? Now he waited impatiently for the day to come. Each time he had an unexpected call from the hotel or the Villa to guide a group of tourists, he studied the faces of the women, wondering, "Is this the one?"

Today he knew she would not be there. He had talked the evening before to the middle-aged women who were waiting for him. They were all inexpensively dressed and equally unprepossessing. They had been discouraged by the price of the full-day tour and had compromised on the shorter one just to the Indian village.

It turned out to be an uncomfortable morning. At the village, the Indians were sullen. Here was no rich group of tourists who would buy their pottery. As if the guide and his group were not even there, the Indian women continued to knead the clay, like huge clumps of unleavened bread, roll it and shape it into the pots and dishes that were used everywhere in the area.

To Luis in his handsome coat, the temperature was unbearable. He dropped away from the group to pause in the cool shade between two huts and to light a cigarette. It was then that the Indian boy approached him.

The lad was tall, with the well-knit, muscular body of his race. "Senior," he said timidly, "I have something to show you." He reached under his shirt for a leather pouch and brought out a square-cut stone. Green, almost the color of a lime, its lights shone like those imprisoned in an ice cube. "Very pretty," the boy said. "Very valuable."

At once Luis realized that this was not a worthless gem like those he sold to the tourists, but of its actual value he had no idea. "Where did you get it?" he asked sharply.

More People Reluctant To Be On TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—It seems like yesterday when the only people who didn't want to be seen on television were Frank Costello and Virginia Hill—and their reluctance added much of the spice and excitement in the Kefauver hearings.

During TV's brief infancy, it was the dream medium for all the show-offs, the authors with books to plug, politicians with speeches to spout, press agents with clients to exploit. For a long time, just about all doors were wide open to the boys with the electronic equipment and the bland, friendly question: "How does it feel to be a senator (or write a novel or invent a toy)?"

During the past couple of years, however, television has been growing a full set of sharp teeth. Some people are beginning to realize that the baby has learned to bite, and has been leaving tooth marks on sensitive hides.

Recently, David Brinkley had some cameras focus on a little boom town near Cape Canaveral. The town fathers were obviously delighted at the prospect of all the free publicity—until they saw the results. Their screams of dismay could be read in most of the nation's newspapers the day after the broadcast.

A short time later, presence of the Brinkley cameras not only upset some publicity-shy residents of Grosse Point, Mich., but seemed to reflect on the local police force. The police stopped an assault by the family of a prohibition era crime lord on the camera crew. Then, in Brinkley's words, they "took no statements, made no arrests and that was the end of it." And the whole nation heard about it.

This week, ABC's "Close Up" presented a documentary program about automation and its effects both on industrial output and workers thrown into technological unemployment.

It wasn't an easy show to put together, admitted executive producer John Secondari, because many, many doors—particularly to automated plants—were closed to TV cameras.

"A lot of people are frightened of television," he said. "And television depends upon the maximum cooperation on the part of its subjects for its effectiveness." Because of an increasing number of closed doors, producers of documentaries are finding there are many controversial subjects they are unable to treat fairly or fully.

And these closed doors, incidentally, are also one of the reasons so many of the season's crop of public affairs shows are concerned with the subjects far away from home: conditions in Red China, troubles in Latin America and Berlin. Even David Brinkley is being wry about the situation in Cambodia now.

Conservation Notes

A JOINT inspection study of construction and land treatment of Grind Creek Watershed is scheduled for Monday at 1 p. m., according to an announcement today by Mrs. C. H. Wilson, secretary of the Pitt County Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District.

Among stops on the tour will be the farm of Eric Whitchard in the State Mill Community.

THOSE ATTENDING will be Arch J. Flanagan, J. B. Speight and W. C. House of the District and X. E. Manning, S. C. Ives, J. P. Davenport and Attorney Sam Underwood of the Pitt County Drainage District No. 2.

Work Unit Conservationist Roy R. Beck and C. E. Mills, Government Representative of the Soil Conservation Service along with other agricultural agency heads, will attend the inspection study.

J. D. ADAMS has requested assistance from the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District in developing a Soil and Water Conservation farm plan for his farm a few months ago.

Beck assisted Adams in developing a plan for his farm. As a result of his plan, Soil Conservation Service technicians have already assisted Adams to apply 10,347 linear feet of open ditch drainage, and five acres of permanent pasture seeding.

Within the next few days, Adams plans to seed 15 acres of small grain and fescue to be used in his tobacco rotation.

ELMER BLAND, SCS technician, is working with J. L. Dozier of the Fountain Community to develop a basic soil and water conservation plan for his farm.

At the present time he is constructing a shaped bucket ditch on his farm to get a better rotation of row crops and fescue grass. Dozier says he likes fescue grass because it prevents top soil from blowing away.

SHREDDING CORN STALKS and leaves onto the soil surface as a mulch sounds like a good soil conservation practice, according to R. D. Jefferson of Fountain.

The idea was proposed as an alternative to seeding cover crops after corn. Beck helped Jefferson prepare a basic conservation farm plan two weeks ago. Jefferson says: "You can put me down on your list of those who will try mulching corn stalks for soil protection during the winter."

The original crop of Jefferson's farm plan, including a soils and capability map and a land use map, was delivered to him Monday.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Motors and some electronics advanced as the stock market rose on trading early this afternoon. Trading was fairly active.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .60 at 259.10 with industrials up 1.00, rails up .10 and utilities up .20.

Gains of fractions to a point or so among pivotal issues outmanned losers.

Some of the electronics showed gains running to 3 points or so. Others took wide losses.

Big Three motors all showed plus signs. November auto assemblies were scheduled at the highest figure in 21 months, barring a Chrysler strike.

Selected chemicals, utilities and tobaccos helped boost the average higher but the over-all list was only irregularly higher. Coppers were irregularly lower. Building materials were off. Oils tended to ease.

Ford was outstanding in the auto group, advancing more than a point following news that third quarter earnings rose 55.3 per cent over a year ago on a gain of only 12.3 per cent in sales. Chrysler was up a sizable fraction as progress was reported in labor negotiations.

Among the electronics gains of about 3 points were scored by Beckman Instruments, Litton Industries and Texas Instruments. Zenith, however, sank about 5 points. An investment advisory service recommended profit taking.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.66 at 705.50. Prices advanced in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds advanced slightly.

Occupying villages and mission stations as they march, Mobutu said his troops have been joyously received by the north Katanga population.
