Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
 You hear a lot about fallout dangers and the effects they will have on the humans that live in the world. What about the plants that we depend upon for food? Will this continual messing up of the atmosphere by nuclear explosions change methods of gardening? What about the vegetables we now have growing in our gardens? Should we take any other precautions, in addition to those we now take, in normal cleaning of those vegetables before they are cooked and eaten? Here is what Mr. Sam Winchester, Pitt County agent, passes along to those who might have such thoughts on their minds:
From the County Agent
 Some radioactive material has already shown up in some food items in isolated areas in the United States. An example is the milk in the Gulf Coast and Chicago areas. In fact, small amounts of radiation have been present in most food items for years, so for the present we certainly have no cause for alarm. We need to assure ourselves that our radiation detection teams throughout the nation will keep us informed if and when radioactive materials begin to show up in food items, in gardens, and in other places where there would be a chance that damage could come from consuming these items.

 Garden vegetables during atomic fall-out would be rendered unsafe for human consumption should there be a considerable amount of fall-out. But here again, an individual would rely on the radiation detection personnel to keep him informed as to what vegetables, and other food items, would be safe to use. For the present, we must take the attitude of being concerned to the point that we keep ourselves informed, but level-headed, to the point that we do not become unduly alarmed.
The Local Gardener
 The local trowel wielder can as Mr. Winchester suggests: Keep informed and keep cool.
 It is high time that the American citizen stops jumping every time the Russian piglaric cracks one of his propaganda whips. The gardener can approach this problem with the same confidence, hope and faith that he does each spring when he plants his seeds. That in due season, they will bring him beauty, fragrance, and fruit.

The Vote Did Not Erase The Needs

Results of Tuesday's $61.5 million bond election in North Carolina probably came as a surprise if not a shock to practically all of the people of the state... those who favored the bond proposals and those who were opposed to them.

In the past, approval of bond elections on a statewide basis in North Carolina has been almost automatic, or so it has seemed. And yet on Tuesday the election represented an abrupt departure from the outcome of other state-wide bond elections in recent years. Not only were all ten bond proposals soundly rejected by the voters, but the large number of voters in the bond referendum went to the polls to express their opinion.

It leaves a huge question mark hanging over the needs of state institutions for capital improvements in the years immediately ahead. It likewise poses a question of what attitude might be found in the 1963 General Assembly toward both capital improvements and toward appropriations for state operations.

One might quickly assert that the people of the state are overwhelmingly against the insurance of any more bonds. Yet there were many instances in which local bonds, voted on in connection with the state-wide referendum, received approval by the voters.

One might assert that the citizens of the state are opposed to any program which holds the possibility of increasing the tax levy of the state. On the other hand, the legislature just this year gave approval to one of the most ambitious spending programs—together with taxes to finance it—that North Carolina has ever undertaken.

North Carolina must now face up to two facts. There are needs for capital improvements that cannot be filled now that the bond proposals have been rejected by an overwhelming vote of the people of the state. Secondly, the needs will not disappear just because the bond proposals have been rejected, but will continue and will be added to by other needs that come with time.

Until the needs are met, North Carolina must carry out its operations, in colleges, in mental institutions, in other government departments and operations, within the scope allowed by present facilities.

Working Together On Common Problems

Formation of a six-county area development group of which Pitt is a part affords another instrument which may be used for the economic enhancement of this immediate section of Eastern North Carolina.

Composed of Pitt, Wilson, Martin, Beaufort, Edgecombe, and Nash Counties, the organization brings together in a single group counties which have similar problems. The counties and communities which make them up also have, for the most part, active organizations which are working for the economic advancement of their respective communities.

Through the area organization, these six counties and their communities will be able to combine forces in finding a common solution to many of the problems which confront all of these counties. Each of the counties, for example, depends primarily on agriculture as the mainstay of its economy. Each could profitably use additional year-round manufacturing jobs to help compensate for loss of farm jobs in recent years. Each county has a surplus of labor at some seasons of the year that could be gainfully employed if some suitable business or industry were able to offer jobs during this "off-season."

The area organization, in our opinion, will not lessen the competitive spirit between the counties or communities in their individual quests for economic advancement; but by working together on common problems the counties will be able to come up with programs that will be of benefit to the area as a whole.

Collectively, these six counties are among the most progressive in the eastern section of the state. By working together on common problems, they have an opportunity to boost the area as a whole and at the same time help themselves individually to better economic conditions.

Struck By Ideal And The Real

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The difference between the ideal and the real has hit West German Chancellor Adenauer with "brutal force."

In April, when the 85-year-old Adenauer last came here to get acquainted with President Kennedy, he was the German strongman.

At their meeting's end he and Kennedy said the problem of a divided Germany can be handled only on the basis of self-determination by the German people.

The two leaders said they were speaking specifically of the problem of a divided Berlin, as well as the country as a whole.

This was an idea which the United States helped Adenauer keep alive for years. But it was unreal, and now more so than then.

Premier Khrushchev held Communist East Germany and East Berlin. And he wasn't going to yield or lose either or both to the West.

Now Adenauer is no longer the strongman. In West Germany's September elections Adenauer's Christian Democratic party lost its absolute majority in Parliament.

The September defeat meant the Christian Democrats had to make a deal with the minority Free Democrats to run the show and re-elect Adenauer.

They dickered seven weeks and Tuesday finally made it when Parliament once again chose Adenauer chancellor. But he barely squeaked through. He paid a price.

He granted the Free Democrats five ministers; jobs in his 18-member Cabinet. Worse for him: he agreed if elected to resign before his term's end in 1965.

So Goes Duncan's Buck

As business manager and vice president of East Carolina College, F. D. Duncan had more interest in a favorable vote in Tuesday's bond election than most.

He also had another personal interest. Duncan was in the position of having $1 tied up in the outcome.

No, it wasn't an election bet. It seems that the college has an option on 73 acres of land in the area of N. C. 43 and U. S. 264 intersection.

There was a $1 option to hold the property until Feb. 1. At the time it was assumed there would be plenty of time to exercise the option since $217,000 was set up in the bond issue for the land purchase.

Well, Duncan didn't have any official fund from which to draw the dollar, so he dug into his pocket and paid it himself.

Unless some way if found to purchase the property by Feb. 1, of course, the dollar is forfeited. So goes Duncan's buck.

Hundreds of students gathered by Jones Dorm last night after students had demonstrated down town and on other parts of the campus.

They lustily cheered Pres. Leo Jenkins. They chanted, "We shall rise again." In short it was exceedingly noisy. But, as will happen at such times, the crowd ran down momentarily and there was one of those fleeting moments of silence.

It was just at this time that a voice floated down from a third story window: "Hold it down fellows. I'm trying to study."

ECC students were noisy but everybody agreed they were well behaved as they demonstrated following Tuesday night's disappointing bond issue defeat.

Many of the students had put in some hard work plugging the bonds which would have meant so much to East Carolina College.

There was a special edition of the campus newspaper devoted entirely to the proposed bonds. Student runners, it will be remembered, participated in the Torch of Education marathon.

ECC students drew the wee morning hours for one leg of their run but they did it properly.

All day Tuesday students could be seen in downtown Greenville carrying signs which promoted the bond issue.

Their activities paid off well in Greenville which went overwhelmingly for the bonds. But over the state it was a different story. State-wide the bonds suffered what can only be termed a miserable defeat.

An uninformed public acting democratically could bring anarchy just as surely as an unwise despot." — Greenville Delta Democrat Times.

"If we are puny enough to be demoralized by threats from without and subversions from within, that could be the ball game. And we'd better carry the fight to the enemy, for Khrushchev's Mein Kampf warns us of the grim alternative." — The Saturday Evening Post.

"Women are smarter than baseball players. They quit after they've made a good catch." — Arizona Republic.

"In the political marketplace this role of leadership belongs to the political parties. And if mediocre goods are offered to the public, this is where the real blame should be put." — Wall Street Journal.

to working capital than in retailing and wholesaling.

Similar differences exist between manufacturers in different lines. As an example, the median inventory-working capital ratio (a guide to inventory balance) for brewers is about half that for manufacturers of men's shirts, underwear and pajamas. And the net sales-to-inventory ratio for meat packers is five times that of airline parts makers and electrical parts fabricators.

A very good guide for companies wishing to assess themselves has been published by Dun & Bradstreet. It's called "How Does Your Business Compare With Others In Your Line."

The booklet lists how companies in 72 lines of business averaged in 14 important ratios used to assess business. The grouping include 12 retail lines, 24 wholesale lines and 36 manufacturing lines. Ratios for each year from 1955 to 1959 and the five-year average are given.

I am old enough to remember when Americans were polite. The girl at the other end of the telephone was a polite person, with a soft and gentle voice; the messenger who delivered the Western Union telegram was a polite boy, who wore a uniform and was pleased to receive a tip. Men, when spoken to by ladies, took their hats off. And so it went.

This form of gentility has gone out of American life, although it continues to exist elsewhere. A Western Union messenger no longer wears a uniform and is not likely to be a fast moving boy but is probably someone from an old man to an old woman, who delivers the message at a snail's pace. Or the message might be telephoned in, which is not what the sender paid for. In fact, a cable from Italy received by American Cables was telephoned to me and then came in the mail two days later. If the sender had used air mail, it would not have been much slower and it would have cost less.

Try to complain about poor service to a public utility and you might get a fresh voice at the other end who does not understand that he is paid to perform a service and that it is good public relations to be polite. In fact, the more impudent the response, the more usual is the occasion.

What has done this to our people?

When I was a boy, I used to deliver flowers and in those days a dime tip was standard. A spot gave a quarter. But we acted very genteelly, dime or quarter, and if anyone got fresh, he was shown the door and was never admitted again. Later, when I went to high school, I got a job as a hat-check boy. I worked in two fashionable restaurants. We got a dime even from millionaires, but we were not permitted to keep the money. Our uniforms had no pockets and the concessionaire soon discovered who swiped dimes. As a matter of fact, we often found a way to keep a tip for ourselves, particularly if some fellow wanted to show off as a big spender.

We had to be polite or we were fired. It was a good after-school job, usually running from about 7 p.m. until midnight for the youngsters. I had to earn my way through high school and college, to get a little extra money. There was no union protection, impoliteness. There was no class-consciousness. A job was a job and one was thankful to have one. That is how people got well-off—by holding a job and saving money.

These days, the incompetent, the fresh, the impolite cannot be fired because tenure is protected by unions and money has lost its value and because other people's taxes pay for unemployment as well as for incompetence and inefficiency. Furthermore, unions protect the incompetent and inefficient in tenure so that the public suffers from the combination of labor leaders and politicians. The milk strike in New York City, one of the most horrible disturbances of public peace in our time, is an example of the abuse of the public's rights by this combination of labor leaders and politicians. This is a perfect symbol of the public being damned attitude, of babies and the sick being killed by an unwillingness of politicians to meet an embarrassing situation courageously. And the surprising fact is that the public takes impudence without protest.

Just before Election Day, the municipal authorities in New York awoke to the peril to the public, but why did it take so long?

This is an essay which asks the question why the public permits itself to suffer. Why do we accept impudence? We are told that it is characteristic of the times; that times have changed. But it has only changed to the extent that the public accepts impudence and impertinence without striking back. Let me return to the matter of telegrams: they should be delivered and signed for. That is part of the transaction. When they are telephoned, there is no record of delivery and accept-

Roadside Signs Can Be Positive

By LYNN NISBET

ROADSIDE SIGNS — At the very best not much information can be given on a roadside sign. If there is too much to read the sign defeats its main purpose. That is the trouble with most of the historic markers erected by the cooperative effort of several State agencies. By the time the motorist can read that Robert E. Lee's daughter is buried a quarter mile to the east, or that George Washington slept here, or this is the edge of the Granville Grant, or any number of other more or less important historic facts — he has jammed up traffic on the highway and contributed more to the potential accident ratio than to the knowledge of history.

Same thing goes for some of the commercial signs advertising eating and sleeping accommodations further along the road. Many times if the motorist would stop to read all the detail information about rates and so forth he wouldn't live to get to that stopping point.

And then there are other signs which read while driving, but sometimes unintentionally conveying the wrong impression. Hugh Morton calls attention to one such signboard on US-19 in Maggie Valley, some 30 miles west of Asheville, advertising a popular motel and restaurant in Asheville. It proclaims in big letters "No More Mountains," and suggests level going for the rest of the way.

That might have an immediate appeal, because chances are the motorist has come out of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, crossed the Great Smoky range at Soco Gap, and negotiated the curves and grades of the highway. Maybe the prospect of a little easy driving is a relief. But that is temporary, and the sign is permanent.

POSITIVE — Morton suggests a positive rather than negative approach. Instead of "No More Mountains" he would have the sign read "Enjoy the Mountains," or maybe "More scenic Grandeur Ahead," or something like that. While it is true the highway from Maggie Valley to Asheville is fairly level and straight, there are beautiful scenes of the Balsam and Pisgah ranges, and from Asheville east and north the Blue Ridge, the Blacks, and other ranges afford from State Highways and the Blue Ridge Parkway some of the most magnificent scenery in America.

The positive approach is nearly always more effective. It has been many times mentioned here but is worth repeating, that when the National Park Service changed its signs for protecting flowers and shrubbery compliance increased almost overnight. The old signs reading "Penalty for Picking Flowers or Shrubs" and "Against the Law to Pick Flowers," were changed to read "Please Leave the Flowers for Others to Enjoy."

LIAISON—Efforts on part of Chairman Bert Bennett and National Committeeman Bill Staton to strengthen liaison with the national Democratic headquarters in Washington is understandable and desirable. But it is not new. During a good part of the Truman administration Joe Blythe of Charlotte was treasurer of the national committee and wielded considerable influence in its affairs.

And through most of the decade of the 40's Miss Mae Oliver of Sanborn, Democratic national headquarters with varying assignments of duty and titles, but always with capacity to get things done for North Carolinians. Delegations of Tar Heels from Governors and Senators down learned that if they wanted something they had to check in with Mae.

GA-P During the eight-year Republican regime the Democratic committee continued active, but obviously could not "deliver" as much service. The service program must be reorganized, and Bennett and Staton are working on it. One of the objectives is to establish contacts within the national committee comparable to those maintained by Joe Blythe, Mae Oliver and their associates ten to fifteen years ago. Who the personal contacts will be is not nearly so important as the fact of establishing workable conditions between the state and national organizations. The North Carolina folks think that in view of the very cordial relations now existing between the Sanford and Kennedy administrations, the Tar Heels should have at least as much recognition by national Democratic headquarters as they had in the Cherry-Scott and Truman regimes.

SPOTTED—This paragraph is being written before the returns by precincts and counties in the bond election have been received. Early reports indicate a heavy vote in some areas, very light in others, and a general trend more toward accepting the bond package on an all-or-nothing basis than had been predicted.

Quote ...

"Dad gets one break — he doesn't have to wear a wise-crack-embroidered apron while barbecuing leaves the way he did all summer while burning hamburgers." — Asheville Citizen.

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
NO NEED TO FEAR
There is no sin His love can not forgive;
His mercy endureth for ever!
No soul so stained His love will not receive;
His mercy endureth for ever!
No load of sorrow but His touch can move,
No hedge of thorns that can withstand His Love;
For the tenderness of God is from age to age the same,
And His mercy endureth for ever!

Strength For Today
Inflections, namely, the mercy of God.
God does not accord us mercy because we deserve it but because He is God. It is part of His nature. Why do we go through life plaguing ourselves with fear lest He pounce down upon us and destroy us? God is love. Let us always keep that in mind.
What hideous caricatures we think up to describe the God of mercy and love. We so often frighten ourselves with thoughts about Him. But why? The whole of the Bible assures us of His kindness and love. He made us for fulfillment, not for disaster. He is preparing us for eternal fellowship with Himself.
"His mercy endureth for ever!"

Don't Forget Measuring Stick

By ELMER ROESSNER
The company that prides with pride to steadily increasing profits and sales over the last decade could be fooling itself, just as the worker whose earnings go up steadily would be fooling himself if he thought he was getting ahead when his family was working longer hours and inflation was increasing at an even faster rate.

As a wage earner must consider other factors, so must a company consider current assets, current debt, sales, tangible net worth, net working capital, fixed assets, inventory, funded debt, total debt and their relationship to each other.

Increasing net profits accompanied by even faster rising net sales indicate a declining profit margin and a growing dependency on higher inventory and capital turnover — a situation that can't go on indefinitely.

If net profits, though increasing, aren't at least 10 per cent of the tangible net worth of the company, then there probably aren't enough earnings for both take-home profits and for funds for future growth.

turn in business—whether a drop in sales, strike, fire or what-have-you—could prove difficult or even disastrous.

INDUSTRY CHARACTERISTICS
What are considered acceptable ratios, of course, vary from industry to industry. A company attempting to measure itself should do so, to a certain extent, with consideration to the general practices and conditions in its field.

In retailing, for instance, food stores sales, profits and inventory are generally higher in relation to working capital than for other retailers. Conversely the ratio of net profits to sales is usually lower for food stores than for clothing, hardware, lumber and other retailers.

These variances also apply to companies in different ends of the same business. Usually manufacturers have a higher ratio of net profits to sales than either wholesalers or retailers in the same line. The inventories carried by manufacturers also tend to be lower in relation to working capital than in retailing and wholesaling.

Similar differences exist between manufacturers in different lines. As an example, the median inventory-working capital ratio (a guide to inventory balance) for brewers is about half that for manufacturers of men's shirts, underwear and pajamas. And the net sales-to-inventory ratio for meat packers is five times that of airline parts makers and electrical parts fabricators.

GUIDE OFFERED
A very good guide for companies wishing to assess themselves has been published by Dun & Bradstreet. It's called "How Does Your Business Compare With Others In Your Line."

The booklet lists how companies in 72 lines of business averaged in 14 important ratios used to assess business. The grouping include 12 retail lines, 24 wholesale lines and 36 manufacturing lines. Ratios for each year from 1955 to 1959 and the five-year average are given.

Eyes Over 40 Need Extra Beauty Care

By CATHARINE BREWSTER
NEW YORK—(WNS)—One of the most important features to a woman's good looks is her eyes. Yet it is in and around the eyes that aging most often shows first. So accustomed are we to using our eyes that we frequently fail to realize they need special health and beauty care after 40. This is a long problem such as nearsightedness.

Usually the eyes have "settled down" between 20 and 40. Many of us haven't had a lens change in years. Then, often rather suddenly, we start holding the telephone book farther away. Close up, we see small print blurs.

This common condition of the over-40 eye is known as "presbyopia." It is a diminished power of accommodation caused by the natural hardening of the aging eye lens. We are unable to refocus quickly when we shift our gaze from a large object to a small one.

It is in this condition which means reading glasses for those who have never needed any before, and bifocals for those who have always worn glasses.

Eye beauty over 40 may depend on getting such glasses promptly. Without them, a habitual squint will develop from the effort to focus. Squinting often also develops because the changing eye develops refractive errors or an imbalance of the eye muscles.

First rule, therefore, for eye health and beauty after 40, is to have examinations at least once a year, often if some change in vision becomes noticeable.

Every two years an eye pressure test should be given by an ophthalmologist (medical eye specialist). This is to detect the possible onset of glaucoma, a serious eye disease resulting from increased pressure inside the eye. Since glaucoma is found chiefly among those over 40, and is often

Mavis Mitchell Sappho Speaker

The Sappho Book Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. D. G. Nichols with Mrs. Malcolm Williams assisting hostess. Fall flowers were used throughout the home where a luncheon was served to the members and guests.

Miss Mavis Mitchell was guest speaker for the occasion. She is a staff member of the health and physical education department at East Carolina College. Her topic for the afternoon was "Education for the Whole Child."

In this "push-button age" or age of mechanization our youth have become extremely soft. Scores from tests given showed an alarming lack of physical fitness. President Kennedy stressed renewed interest in the physical fitness program that President Eisenhower introduced, but our schools still need additional equipment and trained personnel to have a good program.

The chief aim of the physical fitness program is to see that every child has an opportunity to develop his skills according to his abilities. Varsity athletics reaches the gifted few, whereas a good physical education program contributes to the health, mental, emotional, physical, and social skills of every individual.

A discussion period followed the talk. Miss Mitchell answered questions concerning the development of the whole child. She concluded by remarking that "The more experts have studied different methods of bringing up children, the more they have come to the conclusion that what good parents instinctively feel like doing is best for all."

The president, Mrs. L. E. Ward, presided during the business meeting. Books were distributed to the members.

Luncheon guests were Mrs. J. T. Snowden Jr., Mrs. W. E. Brinkley, and Miss Mavis Mitchell.

German Marriage Broker Converts Linkletter Gag

By MARGARET ANDERSON
FRANKFURT—(WNS)—A West German entrepreneur has turned an American marriage gag into a livelihood.

In the United States, emcee Art Linkletter used matched data cards as a basis for introducing couples on his "People Are Funny" TV show.

In West Germany, Arthur H. Flidner took up the idea and reduced marriage to a commercial, unromantic, punch-card routine.

"Why not?" he demanded. "A planned marriage is sounder than a random marriage. There is no substitute for science, even in courtship."

Flidner has statistics on his side. At least 30 per cent of West German marriages are now arranged by the country's 250 marriage agencies, and the number of "planned" marriages is increasing.

Flidner has his clients fill out two forms. On one they tell about themselves—character attributes, religion, income, education and other pertinent data; on the other, the kind of person they dream of marrying, working from the efficient Herr Flidner's character and temperament check list.

Data on the two forms are transferred to punch cards and run through Flidner's computers. The client then winnows through the cards.

After the client decides on the most promising computer prospect, Flidner arranges an appointment. It is only then that he makes the first concession to the moonlight and roses type of romance.

The meeting is set up as a proper business appointment in Flidner's offices, but it is arranged for a Sunday, and his staff sprays the room with perfume and garlands it with roses.

If the meeting is unsuccessful—and Flidner makes it a point to caution clients against expecting too much from the initial appointment—the client simply proceeds to Punch Card 2.

German Marriage Broker Converts Linkletter Gag

"My average client can expect to receive about 20 cards from the computer run," the computer cupid explained. "There are lots of choices and, tactfully, we try to handle these appointments exactly as impartial friends of both parties, which, indeed, we are."

If a client exhausts all 20 punch-card prospects without meeting his heart's desire, Flidner's staff usually advises him to amend his wishes and try the computer again.

A jolly, portly 52, Flidner believes his automation of marriage is a tremendous social contribution. "Everybody—but everybody—has a picture, a dream, of the person he wants to marry. We only help make these dreams come true," he contends.

"We do by scientific procedures what the individual could never achieve by the hit-or-miss techniques of random romance. We help people choose their marital partners on the basis of reason instead of passion."

Flidner's punch-card data is selected according to careful formula, and even his critics concede it is thorough. If you are divorced, for example, you say so and state why frankly. You must supply a full financial accounting and be honest about your character.

But Flidner's range of choice gives his clients an excellent of finding their dream. He operates 42 marriage agencies scattered throughout West Germany, and he has 16,000 persons listed on his computer cards.

For his services Flidner charges a basic $50. If his matchmaking is successful, he receives a further 2 per cent of the bridegroom's or 75 per cent of the bridegroom's monthly income, whichever is larger.

And if you draw a blank on the first round Flidner carries you, free of further charge, on his books for two years, during which time he keeps an eye open for prospects.

THE GREEN STONE

A suspense thriller by SUZANNE BLANC

CHAPTER 11

From his post at the gate, Uncle Pedro watched the Villa. He could see someone moving in the lounge. That would be Juan, setting up the card tables and adding a log to the fire. Soon dinner would be over. After a while the tourists would go to bed and then Uncle Pedro could close the gate and lock it with the massive, old-fashioned bolts.

Although he was old, Uncle Pedro was very strong, besides, he kept a large club leaning against the gatepost where it would be handy. He had never used the club, but sometimes he would pick it up and swing its reassuring weight.

Once there had been trouble when he failed to recognize a late-returning guest, but that was long ago when he was still new at the Villa. Nowadays he knew the room and face of every guest. He took his duties very seriously and prided himself that, while he was there, no stranger would pass.

Luis Perez, however, was no stranger. Often the guide came to take tourists to the cathedral or into the hills to the villages. He brought guests for rooms, too, and that was very kind of him. Uncle Pedro knew that the Señora Alexander paid money for bringing the tourists, but wasn't that as it should be? Luis was not a rich man, and surely a man must be paid for his labor. Besides, Luis was courting his niece Carmelita, and in these days it took much money to marry.

Luis would make a fine husband. Not everyone could read and write or have a white card from the Department of Tourism. Carmelita was young and headstrong. Often she and Luis quarreled, but she seemed not to care.

She would only shrug her narrow shoulders and purse her saucy lips as if to say, "There are many, many fish in the ocean," too sure of herself, that one, too sure. And maybe she was right. Always Luis came back.

As if thought alone had materialized him, Luis came walking across the parking lot to the gate. Just as Uncle Pedro imagined him, he was wearing, even on this warm night, his belted camel's-hair coat.

"It's been a long time," Luis, the old man said, drawing out his pipe and preparing for a visit.

"Only a few nights, Uncle. I've been busy — besides, your niece has the temper of a hellcat. It does her good to cool off now and then."

Uncle Pedro nodded sagely. "Just like her mother, rest her soul."

Luis lighted a match for the old man's pipe.

"Don't throw it near the cars, it's dangerous."

"No, Uncle." Luis nodded toward the parking lot. "Did a woman come here today in a white car?"

"A small woman, North American? Not so young? With pale-brown hair?"

"That's the one."

"Yes, she's here. Not very rich — she had only one suitcase." He reconsidered. "But it was a big one."

"I sent her. I hope you gave her a good room."

"One of the best. Near the fish-pond."

"Oh, number twenty-three? That's a nice room."

"Number twenty-three is for two people; we put her in number twenty-four."

"Are they finished with dinner down there?"

"Pretty soon now. Carmelita will have to clear the tables." He added tolerantly. "It's hard to wait when you are young."

"I haven't seen her for many days, and though she had a bad temper, she had the face of an angel."

"It is always so." The old man sighed.

"Well, I will go down to the kitchen door and wait for her." And following his usual custom, Luis walked directly into the garden and started down the slope toward the lounge. However, as soon as he was safely away from the lighted gate, he turned off onto the stone walk that led to the fish-pond.

Here there was only the silver incandescence of the moonlight to guide him. The huge, dark bushes and the night itself cloaked him with invisibility. Sounds from the main building were muted by distance, as if they belonged in another world. Along the walkway that led to the lounge, lanterns glowed feebly, making the surroundings even darker, more protective.

Near the pond Luis hesitated. It was not too late to turn back, to go to the inspector and tell him about the jewel and the North American woman who had it. But could he trust the police to share the reward with him?

Would they not beat him and throw him in jail and keep the money for themselves? In his mind's eye the emerald shone with a thousand lights, but more brilliant than the stone was the green of dollars which even an illegal sale would bring.

An image of himself as a rich man skimmed across his mind. He could see himself driving a long car, married to a girl with a fine house in Mexico City or maybe even to one of the rich tourists with hair like honey.

He was glad, now, that he hadn't married Carmelita. Although she was beautiful, she was ignorant, bossy and a servant.

As the thought of Carmelita, he remembered that soon the maids would be coming to turn back the beds and light the fires. Without wasting another minute, he swiftly crossed the lighted walk and tried the door to number twenty-four.

It slid noiselessly open.

Inside, the room had a faint scent of violets and, when he used his pocket flash, it was as he had expected, extremely neat like the little woman herself. He examined the bathroom first: the medicine cabinet, a small carrying case of cosmetics. There was nothing there.

Then he opened the closets and felt in the pockets of her coat. Nothing. He examined the suitcase. Nothing.

Finally he tried the dresser, feeling in the corners, hurrying now because time was growing short, and in his haste he overturned a bottle of perfume and the spicy scent was unpleasantly sharp, almost overpowering.

He heard a door slam heavily and one of the maids in lose hair-raches scuff along the walk. Moving with desperate haste, he looked under the pillows, the throw rugs, behind the mirror. Now the maid was in the next room singing softly to herself. In a few minutes she would be here. Frantically he reached up to feel along the moldings above the windows, above the door. The stone was not to be found.

At the last possible second he dashed out of the room and across the lighted strip to hide in the bushes near the pond. The maid came out of number twenty-three and stood silhouetted against the lighted room, her head cocked as if she were listening. She approached the perimeter of the little pool, peering into the darkness while he stood rigid, not daring to breathe.

His heart sounded like a trip hammer in his ears. It was incredible that she couldn't hear it. But she turned back, snapped the light in twenty-three and singing once again, entered the room he had just left.

THE TWIST—Edie Adams, wearing the gold beaded costume she values at $7,500 and which she'll wear for her Las Vegas night club opening, goes through a gyration as she demonstrates "The Twist." The dance has had the New York society crowd gyrating, but it hit the movie colony only recently.

Fishermen See Soviet Trawlers

CHATHAM, Mass. (AP)—Five Chatham fishermen reported Wednesday they found a fleet of 32 Soviet trawlers and two mother ships only 21 miles from Pollock Rip Light, just off Chatham.

That's the closest the Soviet ships have been reported to shore.

Capt. Richard Chase, skipper of the Dragger Bun-Di and spokesman for the entire Chatham group, said there were so many of the Soviets "they are crowding us off the banks."

The Soviet fleet is less than 50 miles from Hyannis Port, where President Kennedy has his summer White House, and where he spent most of the weekends last summer.

In grocery stores with no cross aisle, about 25 per cent of shoppers cover virtually the entire store. If there is a cross aisle, only about 5 per cent shop every aisle, reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Bomber's Crash Into Ocean Kills Eleven Navy Men

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP)—Eleven Navy men were killed Wednesday when their Brunswick-based Neptune bomber plunged into the ocean 100 miles off the Virginia Capes.

The plane, designated PV2, a two-engine, long-range bomber, was taking part in an antisubmarine training mission with the carrier Lake Champlain.

Hours after contact was lost with the plane, two bodies and two life rafts and other bits of wreckage were recovered and were taken aboard the carrier. One of the rafts was inflated.

The Brunswick base reported the plane took off at 8 p.m. Tuesday for the mission, carrying fuel for 14 hours in the air.

A wide ocean search started with Navy and Coast Guard ships and planes when the Neptune failed to return.

The Brunswick Naval Air Station said Lt. Cmdr. Phillip S. Callahan, 36, of Memphis, Tenn., was the pilot and commander on the bomber.

Others aboard were:

Lt. (j.g.) Robert J. Miller, 23, New Hyde Park, N. Y.

Lt. (j.g.) William G. McLane, 22, Lake Placid, N. Y.

Lt. (j.g.) Edmund J. McGrath, 24, Chicago.

30,00 Fearful Tribesmen Tell Congo's Story

By LYNN HEINZERLING

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga. (AP)—Some 30,000 Baluba tribesmen, sitting in mud and filth on the northern outskirts of Elisabethville, tell the sad story of the Congo.

They include men, women and children. Fear sent them to this camp for U.N. protection—fear of ancient tribal enemies, fear of primitive brutality by the police, and maybe imagined terrors unknown to modern man.

The Baluba of Katanga are political followers of Jason Sendwe insofar as they have any political consciousness.

Sendwe is president of the Association of the Baluba of Katanga (Balubakat) and was formerly President Moise Tshombe's most powerful political opponent in Katanga.

Now vice premier in the central Congo government at Leopoldville, Sendwe is an exile from Katanga.

The Baluba began to leave their homes in the African townships of Katanga more than two months ago. They said police of Tshombe's interior minister, Godefroid Munongo, had circulated through the townships, threatening and maltreating them.

The Baluba settled down in what once was a handsome suburban area, with a few handsome villas and many trees. Soon they were arriving by the thousand, bringing pots, pans, chairs, sewing machines.

They hacked limbs from trees, gathered grass and made thousands of huts. Trees, grass, shrubs and flowers have disappeared. The Baluba squat in their huts waiting in fear.

When it is dry, clouds of evil-smelling dust blow through the camp. When wet, the Baluba cook, eat, sleep and squat in the mud. Flies, rats and vermin make their life miserable. Naked children wade in dirty ditches. The camp has no sanitary arrangements.

Traders have set up shop on packing boxes, selling everything from hashish to human skin. A cemetery soon became necessary. Swedish U.N. troops make regular patrols through the camp in armored cars. Once they opened fire when youths seized a Swedish soldier. Eight Baluba died.

Ten days later it was discovered the bodies were being preserved with ice from a brewery. The Baluba said they were preserving the bodies as proof that the United Nations killed the tribesmen.

Recently the Baluba killed three policemen. Police recovered the mutilated bodies. President Tshombe called to pay his last respects and insisted that the French, British and American consuls see the bodies.

The 30,000 Baluba sitting in the mud illustrate the deep tribal suspicions and intense hatred which motivate the Congolese.

They show why it is so difficult to form a central government representative of all sections of the Congo. The colonial powers for years made no effort to integrate the tribes. Instead they used these primitive divisions to consolidate control.

Katangan leaders insist they have nothing in common with the politicians in Leopoldville, 1,200 miles away. Katanga, they say, was included in the new republic simply because the Belgian colonial authorities arbitrarily included it to suit their purposes.

The Congo now has three armies: those of Gen. Joseph Mobutu in Leopoldville, Victor Lundula in Stanleyville, and Norbert Muke in Elisabethville.

The U.N. task in reconciling these conflicting forces and maintaining order in the Congo's 900,000 square miles will take many years. Distances involved and the lack of roads and communications work against unity.

Leaders in Katanga have only the vaguest idea of what is happening in Leopoldville. From their public statements they appear to believe the central government is in the hands of Communists seeking a share in Katanga's wealth, derived from minerals.

Visitors are told by government officials and white supporters of the Tshombe government that Katanga has achieved a multiracial society unknown in the rest of the Congo.

There is little evidence of it.

Except for government leaders and Africans favored by government positions, the great mass of Africans have pretty much the same second-rate status as before.

This is perhaps inevitable until money can be diverted from the army to provide schools and buildings in an integrated social system.

Any hint of an integrated society was certainly foreign to one Elisabethville man, who told this correspondent: "Only good Kaffir (Negro) is dead Kaffir."

Clifton Everette Addresses Group At Dedication Of McWhorter Park

BETHEL — "Professor Zack Bethel, Tarboro, Greenville, Mt. Olive, Rocky Mt., Calypso, Wal-lace, and Wayne and Orange coun-ties."

"While at Vanderbilt, he played on the college football team. He always enjoyed teaching and his favorite subject was mathematics. McWhorter was also a licensed Methodist Minister. He and his wife, Anna Lee Nelson of Bethel, often worked together in the field of education."

In charge of the dedication ceremonies Sunday were Harold Staton and Clifton Everette, both of Bethel.

Present park facilities include a little league ball park diamond, playground equipment, three pic-nic areas for outdoor cooking, a picnic and a tennis court.

"Although he generally operated his own private and boarding schools during this time, he was a firm advocate of establishing public schools and was a strong supporter of McIver Alderman Sunday.

On December 19, 1953 a four-acre tract of land in the heart of Bethel was donated to the Bethel Recreational Association for the establishment of a park. The land was given by the children of Zack and Anna McWhorter.

Members of the McWhorter family present for the park dedication were Abbott and Dav's McWhorter of Bethel, Malcolm McWhorter of Euclaville, Mrs. R. L. Cox of Mt. Olive, and Mrs. A. G. Small of Elizabeth City.

Continuing with the biographical sketch of the McWhorter family, Everette said, "Zack McWhorter was born on March 9, 1882 and was a strong believer in education. As a young man, he was determined to become a teacher. Professor McWhorter attended the Vanderbilt University in Nash-ville, Tenn. and the Peabody In-stitute of Education."

While at Vanderbilt, a minist-erial student told him of the educa-tion awakening in North Caro-lina and secured him a position at Tarboro in the early 1880's."

Explorer Council Confer-Rec Set

The First East Carolina Council Explorer Confer-Rec has been scheduled for Nov. 17-19 at Camp Geiger, a part of the Camp Lejeune Marine Base.

Explorers from the Pitt Scout District have been urged to attend the three-day convention that will provide Explorers the opportunity to watch various demonstrations by the Marines.

Included on the program are a night-firing demonstration, flight demonstrations, orientation flight, and a 30 caliber rifle meet. The Explorers also will listen to and participate in discussion sessions.

For entertainment, the boys will be treated to a dance or movies Saturday night after an opening session for early arrivals Friday night that will include door prizes and a briefing on what will be included in the Confer-Rec.

Explorers planning to attend the three-day meet will be required to register with the East Carolina Council office by Nov. 13. Adult leaders must accompany all attending Explorers.

Opening registration is sched-uled between 4 and 8 p.m. Friday with the hours 8-10 a.m. Saturday set aside for registration of late arrivals. The Confer-Rec will ad-journ Sunday morning following morning worship service at 8:30 a.m. and the closing Confer-Rec session at 9 o'clock.

Vandalism Said All Due 'Dares'

HICKMAN MILLS, Mo. (AP)—Three 12-year-old boys have ad-mitted $500 to $600 worth of van-dalism Sunday at the Harry S. Truman Elementary School here.

Action has been taken against the boys, who were pupils at the school last year and now attend junior high.

School Supt. Tom V. Forkner said the boys wrecked mirrors, furniture, tile work and roof ventilators.

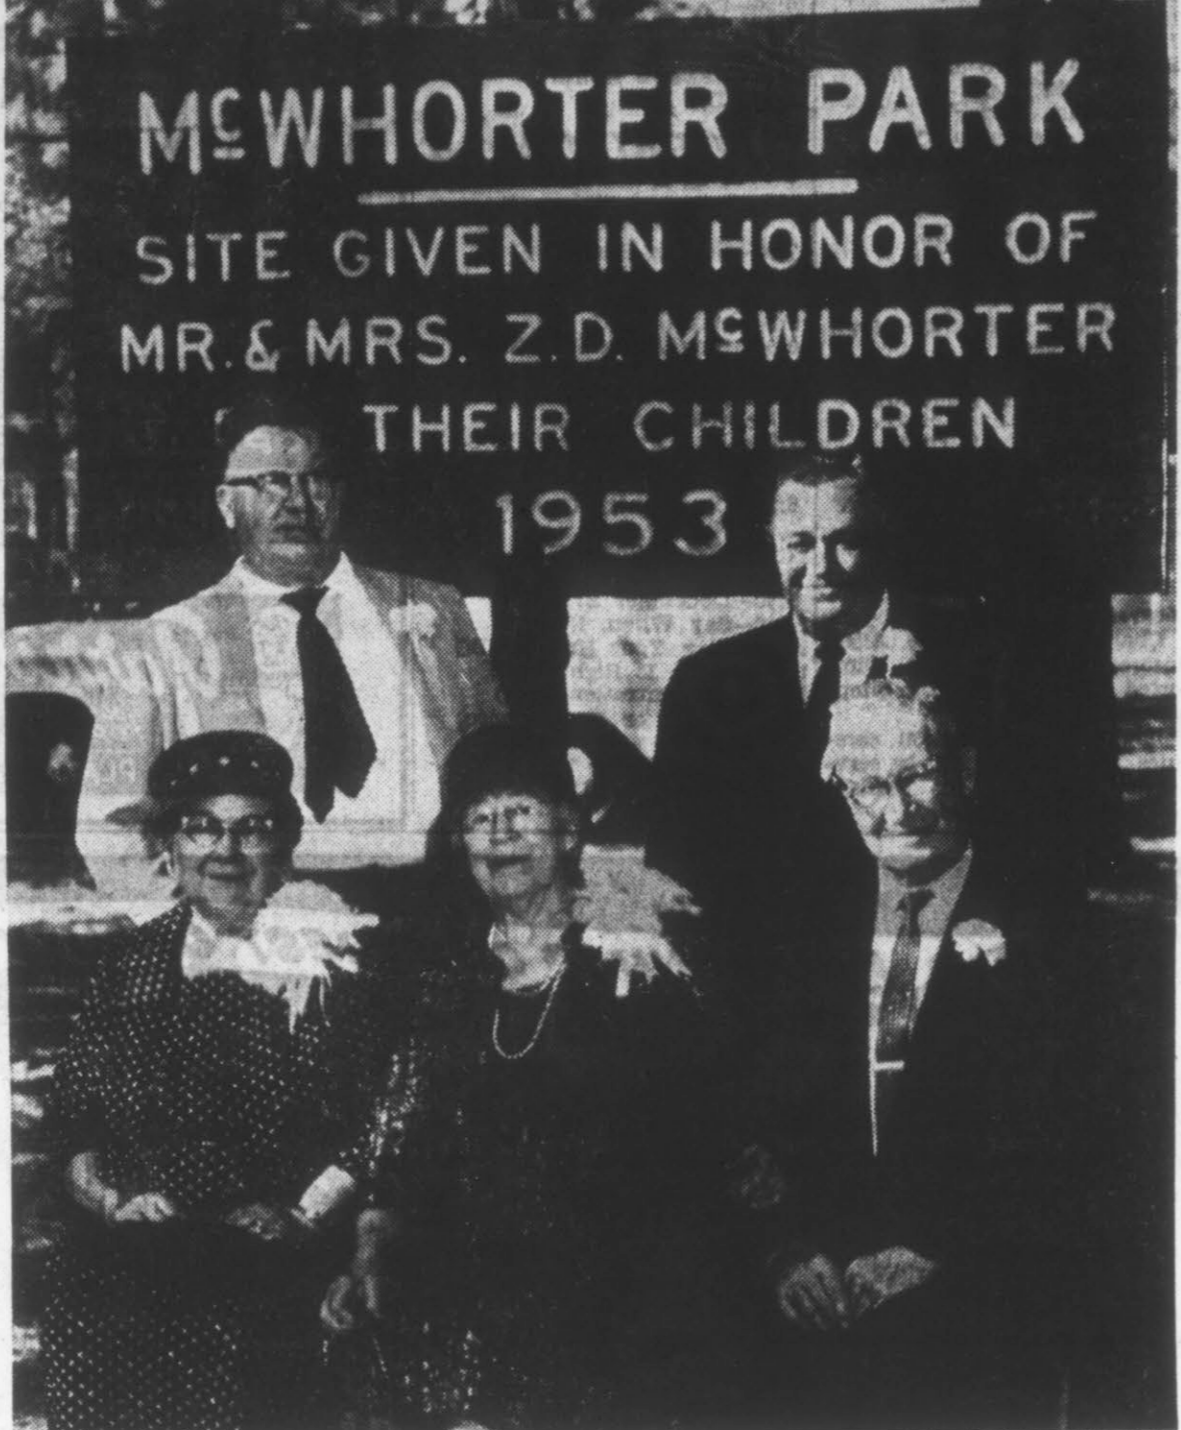

"They didn't have any reason," Forkner said. "They just got o-caring each other. Unless you're 12 years old, you don't understand what a dare is."

The new Minister of Education is married to the former Peggy Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Martin of Greenville. They reside at 411 Ash Street with their four children, Kathryn, Elizabeth Ann, Will and Barbara.

Political Role In Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Former President Dwight D. Eisen-hower will play an active but not dominant role in Pennsylvania's 1962 gubernatorial and senatorial campaigns, says Republican State Chairman George I. Bloom.

The GOP leader said Eisenhower assured him at a meeting in Gettysburg Wednesday that he will not attempt to dictate the choice of the party's candidates.

Large Teacher Delegation To Attend Elizabeth City Session

A large delegation from Green-ville and Pitt County Negro schools are expected to attend the 24th annual session of the North Carolina Teachers Association, Northeastern District, meeting to-morrow in Elizabeth City at State Teachers College.

Several Pitt teachers are offi-cers of groups and will be serving in official capacity, including J. W. May, principal of W. H. Rob-inson School in Winterville, who is chairman of the Principals and Supervisors; F. D. Sledge, super-visor of Pitt County Schools, con-sultant; and Robert L. Reaves of H. B. Sugg High School in Farm-ville, chairman of Mathematics and Science Section.

Gaston Monk is president of the Pitt County chapter of the N.C.T.A. "Teach for Tomorrow" is the convention theme. The First Gen-eral Session will convene at 9:30 a.m., ending at 11:15 with M. M. Daniels, vice president of the dis-trict, presiding.

will be guest speaker. He will be introduced by E. V. Wilkins, dis-trict president and principal of Washington County Union School in Roper.

Dr. Rudolph Jones, president of Fayetteville State Teachers College, will speak concerning the development of the Hammocks Beach project. The-baud Jeffers, principal of High-land High School in Gastonia, will discuss the N.C.T.A. Credit Union.

Following adjournment of the final session, a social gathering will be held in the college gym-nasium.

Negro school students in Green-ville and Pitt County are to have a holiday tomorrow while their teachers are gone, since their schools will be closed.

Many Invited Newcomers Have Not Yet Replied

A large number of newcomers have not responded to an invita-tion extended them to attend Greenville's 10th Annual New-comers Party to be held at the Moose Lodge Auditorium on No-vember 16, stated Chairman Jack Whitchard.

He expressed the hope that they would use the return card en-closed with their invitation, to promptly advise the Committee, so that party plans can be com-pleted to care for all who will attend.

At the Committee Final Plan-ning Session held on Wednesday night, stated Chairman Whitchard, reports showed that ladies civic clubs will prepare and serve tasty refreshments during the program and that Master of Ceremonies, El Bloom and his associates, are planning an entertaining program involving newcomer participation, in addition to drawing for gifts provided by Greenville merchants.

Veteran Of The 'Old West' Dies

MERCED, Calif. (AP)—George J. Trimble—who said he was ded-icated to whisky, women and in-dependence—died Wednesday at the age of 104.

He came West in his 20s and "rubbed elbows with some of the best and worst gunfighters." He was a deputy marshal in the Southwest and a gold miner.

At the age of 97 he was ar-rested in a Merced tavern for hit-ting an 83-year-old man with a cane. He said the man made of-fensive remarks to a 72-year-old woman.

He recently entered the Merced County Hospital, but frequently sneaked off.

"I go back there only when I don't feel the overwhelming need for liquid nourishment," he ex-plained.

Little Box For Giving, Taking

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—A little white box appeared this week on a downtown Austin street where the generous can give and the needy can take — both anonymously.

"If you are in need, take help from a friend unknown. Repay by helping someone else," says a note on one side.

No one seems sure who put up the box. Milam B. Evans, a barber who can see it from his shop, thinks he knows. He said a custommer recently mentioned the idea, and "then one morning there was the box."

A dollar bill, three quarters, two dimes, two nickels and three pennies were in the box Wednesday.

"One thing I've noticed," Evans said. "When someone takes money, they never take it all."

Phants End Regular Season Against Roanoke Rapids

By GEORGE BRYANT Reflector Sports Writer

The Rose High Phantoms will seek the Northeastern Conference 3-A championship Friday night when they travel to Roanoke Rapids for the last game of the regular season.

The local club goes into its last game with an 8-1 overall record and a 5-1 conference record. Their only defeat so far this season was a 20-7 loss to Tarboro, last year's conference champs.

Phants Must Win

In order to capture the conference championship the Greenville eleven must come home victorious Friday night. The only exception is if New Bern should lose their final game also. This would put the two clubs in a tie for the championship, but the rules state that Greenville would represent the conference because they downed the Bears during the regular season.

The Roanoke Rapids club has had a rough season so far and they will be ready to end the year with a win. Especially since this is their homecoming game. At the present time they have a 2-7 overall record and a 1-5 record in the conference. Last year the Phantoms downed the Roanoke Rapids eleven by a score of 42-0 here in Greenville.

Phants Preparing

Rose High Coach Bud Phillips has been working his boys hard this week in preparation for the game Friday. The veteran Phantom coach said that the spirits are high and that the team is really after this one.

Goose Season Opening Friday

Pitt County Wildlife Protector J. O. Teel, said today that geese seem to be plentiful this season in Hyde County, but noted that at the present time ducks are scarce.

The goose season opens tomorrow morning at sunrise and runs until sunset on Jan. 8. Teel noted that the shooting hours this year are slightly different than in the past. The starting time has been moved from half an hour before sunrise to sunrise. The daily bag limit this year is two with a total of four in possession.

Duck season opens Nov. 21 and runs until Dec. 30. The daily bag limit on them is three with six in possession. Teel said that while ducks are scarce now, it is really too early to tell just how many there will be when the season opens. He noted that there are more ducks on the river in the Greenville area than he has seen in a long time. Teel added that there is a closed season on Red-heads and Canvasbacks.

Quail and rabbit season opens on Thanksgiving day with the outlook for quail being very good according to Teel. The dove season will reopen on Dec. 13 and run until Jan. 15.

Most of the Greenville players are in good physical shape with the exception of reserve quarterback Dale Gidley who suffered a dislocated shoulder during Monday's practice session. Gidley will be out for the rest of the season. Sidney Knowles who has been troubled by some bruised ribs for the past several weeks should be back to full strength by Friday.

Coach Joe Rodri of Roanoke Rapids said today that his team is "banged up" some. He added, "We are not anywhere near full strength." However, Rodri said that his club is looking forward to the game Friday and he hopes they will do okay. "We would like to win this one as we feel like Greenville is the strongest team in the conference, and a win would mean a lot to us," he noted.

One Major Injury

The only major injury the Roanoke Rapids team has at the present time is left end Ricky Conkley. However, Coach Rodri said a good many of the boys have been down with the flu this week. He added that he hoped most of them could get in shape by Friday.

The starting lineup for the Phantoms will be the same as it was last week with Ken Cox heading up the line at center, Russell Fields at left guard, William Allen at left tackle and Burney Morris at left end. On the right side of the line will be Elbert Felton at guard, Rommie Brock at tackle and Jack Foley will handle the right end position.

Foley played his best game of the season last week against Wilson with Morris doing his usual outstanding job.

Phantom Backfield

The Rose High backfield will consist of Billy James calling the signals at quarterback. However, Coach Phillips has not yet decided on who will back him up since Gidley's injury. The halfbacks will be Kroehle Andresen on the right and Alan McArthur on the left. Senior Wayne Sumrell will again handle the fullback spot.

All of the Greenville backfield did outstanding jobs last week in the Wilson contest. McArthur made several long runs with the aid of his speed and drive.

Roanoke Rapids Starters

The backfield for the home team will consist of Marvin Wood at quarterback, Lett Carroll at right half, Sonny Pruette at left half and Tommy Story at fullback.

Coach Rodri said that he was expecting the largest crowd of the season to see tomorrow night's action. He attributed this to the fact that it is homecoming and also he figured Greenville would be out in full force for the contest.

Maryland's Terrapins Have Chance To Even Record As They Host NCS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The University of Maryland's Terrapins will have a chance to even up their football record in the Atlantic Coast Conference when they play host to North Carolina College Saturday.

A win would put the Terps in a 2-2 position, but they'd still occupy the next-to-the-bottom slot in the standings.

Unless they do hold down State's passing quarterback Rommie Gabriel Saturday, they'll have to win both remaining games this season to break even in the conference. That includes games with Wake Forest and Virginia.

The Wolfpack game is bound to prove rugged for the Terps. All-America Candidate Gabriel isn't showing any signs of letting up, and State has suffered a few injuries this season. They're third in the league, having lost only to top-place Duke in loop contests.

Last year, the Wolfpack edged the Terps, 13-10, but in 1959, Maryland won with an even more exciting score of 33-29. Maryland Coach Tom Nugent

Wednesday ordered a half-hour scrimmage on defense against Gabriel's passing. The defensive unit was led by a passing expert of its own, sophomore quarterback Dick Shiner, who started his first college game last weekend against Pen State and threw three touchdown passes. Maryland won the game, 21-17.

Coach Earle Edwards of State also put the Wolfpack through its last heavy workout before the meeting.

Hard work was the order of the day Wednesday at all other Atlantic Coast Conference schools except Virginia, idle this weekend and South Carolina.

USC Coach Marvin Bass says his players are "too bruised" for heavy work in their preparations for a big Clemson game Saturday.

At Clemson, Coach Frank Howard stressed defense. The Tigers also ran through their kicking game.

Duke University's freshmen ran Navy plays against Blue Devil defenses under the lights Wednesday night, in what turned out to be a long drill. Duke and Navy played in the Oyster Bowl at Norfolk, Va., Saturday.

The University of North Carolina's Tar Heels, fresh from a 22-21 upset over Tennessee, are in good spirits, according to Coach Jim Hickey, as they face fourth-ranked Louisiana State in Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill. Hickey sent them through a long session of blocking, tackling, offense and defense Wednesday.

Wake Forest's Deacons ran through some brisk offensive work. Coach Billy Hildebrand said he considers Virginia Tech a strong on defense. Wake enters Tech Saturday.

ROBERSONVILLE—Coach Bob Lee's Rams wind up their season Friday night in a home game with Bath, the Coastal Conference's newest member.

Robersonville has a 3-5 conference record going into the contest and is now fifth in the conference standings. Bath has a 4-2 record and is in fourth place in the standings.

The visitors this week will probably be up for this one as first place Ayden gave them a defeat last week. Robersonville won their contest last week with LaGrange.

The lineup for Robersonville tomorrow night will probably consist of Billy Cratt calling the signals at quarterback, Joe Bullock, a freshman, at fullback with Charlie Forbes at tailback and Jimmy Cherry at wingback. In the line for the Rams will be Butch Brown at left end, Haywood Andrews at left guard and Eddie Boone at center. The right end will be handled by Tony Warren with Jim Mobley at outside tackle and Keeter Ross at inside tackle. The right guard will be taken care of by Frankie Rogerson.

Coach Jack Wallace of Bath said that his team is in good shape as far as injuries are concerned. He added that the three boys who had to leave the team when grades came out had been replaced.

The probable starting lineup for Bath will consist of Bruce Biggs at left end, Donald Wollard at left tackle, Jimmy Jones at left guard and Joe Mowhorn at center. On the right will be Henry Harris at guard, Robbie Boyd at tackle and Floyd Little at end.

The backfield for the visitors will be David Everett at quarterback, Sam Matthews at wingback and Lenon Wingate at fullback. The flanking back will be Thad Barrington.

Robersonville Winds Up Season Friday With Bath

ROBERSONVILLE—Coach Bob Lee's Rams wind up their season Friday night in a home game with Bath, the Coastal Conference's newest member.

Robersonville has a 3-5 conference record going into the contest and is now fifth in the conference standings. Bath has a 4-2 record and is in fourth place in the standings.

The visitors this week will probably be up for this one as first place Ayden gave them a defeat last week. Robersonville won their contest last week with LaGrange.

Beaumont Golf Begins Today

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP)—Doug Sanders, Jay Hebert and Fred Hawkins were among the favorites today as a field of 124, 10 of them amateurs, moved out in the $20,000 Beaumont Invitational Golf Tournament.

In Beaumont's first tournament along the PGA trail in 20 years, the winner will bag $2,800 and if it's Sanders, he can start moving up on the top money-winners of golf.

Gary Player leads with $64,540.45 and Arnold Palmer is second with $57,732.92. They are not playing in the tournament here. Sanders is third with $53,513.23.

Hebert had a 6-under-par 65 Wednesday in leading the pros in a pro-amateur.

The tournament runs through Sunday.

W. Va. To Host Pa. State

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
On a weekend when Southern Conference football teams will be hard-pressed to maintain their almost break-even record against outside foes, a club not even eligible for the league championship has a chance to stake the circuit to its third prestige shot in the arm this season.

Better than that, the Mountaineers—who ended a two-year string of games without a victory by beating Virginia Tech 28-0 early in the season—get another opportunity to show that Southern Conference football isn't completely outclassed by outside opposition. Three times in four starts since they won against Virginia Tech, the Mountaineers have come out on the long end of the score. Two of them were in the nature of big league victories—by 20-6 over Pitt and 7-2 over Army.

At that, West Virginia doesn't have one of the best records in the league against non-conference foes. The Mountaineers are just 2-2—but there's no comparing the caliber of the opposition.

Aside from West Virginia's collision with Penn State, seven league teams take on 60-circuit opponents, including Richmond's joust with Alabama, ranked No. 2 in the nation, and William and Mary's invasion of Army.

Virginia Tech goes to Wake Forest. VMI at Buffalo and Davidson entertains Wofford in other Saturday afternoon engagements. Furman opens the weekend against East Carolina Friday night, and league champion the Citadel closes it Saturday night at tough Florida State. George Washington is idle.

Pro Golfers Wary Of This Newcomer

By DAVE HARRISON
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Amateur golfers have given a sigh of relief, but the professionals of the game are casting a wary eye at a newcomer to their ranks—Jack Nicklaus, the most talked about amateur since Bobby Jones.

Looking back about six years, Nicklaus said at that time he felt he could make more money in business. "There weren't too many really big money winners in golf and I thought business would be better."

He has 14 players returning from the squad which reached the finals of the county tournament last year, including all-county guard, Liz Harrison. Other girls who saw a lot of action last year and are being counted on this year include: Mary Sue Lilly, Jackie Leggett, Myra Fisher, Judy Clark, and Linda Bowen.

It is a different story for the boys. A major rebuilding job is the prospect here, with only one returnee from the squad which won last year's regular season county championship.

"I just decided I wanted to play golf," the stocky blond said. "And I owe it to my family to give them the best possible living I can."

Nicklaus, who became the father of Jack II six weeks ago, says he plans to return to Ohio State for the fall quarter each year until he gets his degree in business administration.

This year's team will have to be built around Vann Parker, an all-county selection last year, plus some pretty rugged boys who saw quite a bit of service previously.

Statistically, the Bulldogs are overwhelmingly air-minded. Their passing attack is by far the league's best. Their passing defense second only to Richmond.

Drafted Athletes Are Not Yelling Foul At Uncle Sam

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP)—The athletes Uncle Sam pulled into the Army because of the Berlin crisis aren't yelling "foul!"

None is overjoyed with the change in uniform—the interruption of career, the cut in wages. Each draws base pay of $85.80 per month. Most, if not all, are in the five-figure salary class as athletes.

Odd Statistical Data Supplied By The Citadel

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Citadel's football team, which already has clinched the Southern Conference championship, may represent one of the biggest statistical oddities in league history.

The southpaw star of the world champion New York Yankees appeared more excited than when he turned in 15 scoreless innings against Cincinnati in the World Series, breaking Babe Ruth's record of 29 2-3 consecutive scoreless innings in World Series competition.

"It's a big thrill," he said. "I remember when Bob Turley won the award several years ago and I wondered whether I'd ever be lucky enough to get it. It sure was worth waiting for. I can't think of another award I'd prefer over this one."

"I didn't make much more when I was down in the minors," grinned Kubek, revealing a chipped tooth—his first Army souvenir. He got it playing touch football with his new buddies in Company A, Third Battle Group, 127th Infantry.

President Frances Stepps called the meeting to order and conducted the voting for the club's representative in the Homecoming Court. Sophomore Donna Stancill was selected for this honor.

The club's advisor, Mrs. Bruce Cowart, reminded the members of their various duties, which include assisting their designated teacher, helping any other teachers in need, and keeping notes of the duties performed. After this discussion, the meeting adjourned.

Polly Failed To Stop Showing

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actress Polly Bergen failed Wednesday to stop the proposed showing of a television film in movie theaters.

Superior Court refused to grant a preliminary injunction against Screen Gems Productions, which plans to release the film, "The Insider."

Miss Bergen contended the picture was a pilot for a TV series and did not have the quality necessary for theater presentations. She also alleges her career might be damaged if it were shown in theaters.

Trial of her $1 million suit against Screen Gems is pending. The court ruled the company owns all rights to the picture.

Death Ended A Family Tradition

BROOKSVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Robert A. Poague, 61, Bracken County clerk, died Wednesday, ending a family political tradition more than a century old.

Poague died of a heart attack less than an hour after the vote count was completed and he had won his fifth term as clerk.

His grandfather, George B. Poague, was the first county and circuit court clerk and served 40 years. George's son, Jesse, then served 48 years as circuit clerk.

Robert Poague's cousin, Lutie Poague Martin, also served as a clerk and Robert had previously been deputy sheriff and sheriff.

Officials said no arrangements had been made to fill the post.

Poker Rests On A Pedestal Of Tradition In Warrenton

By HOWARD F. JONES
Henderson Dispatch Staff Writer
Written For The Associated Press
WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — "Poker" is a word that is used with discretion by most men, causes undue concern among some women, and is convincingly associated with sin from a few pupils in many a small Tar Heel town.

But not in Warrenton. Here the word's illicit and immoral overtones have become faded as succeeding generations have managed to keep poker high on a pedestal.

To most Warrenton citizens, poker is a part of the town's heritage. It is a game that goes back in legend and fact to the days shortly after the town was incorporated in the late 1700s.

One of the reasons for Warrenton's poker tradition dates back to 1782—the year in which a poker game convinced a senator that love is stronger than honor.

It was in that year that Nathaniel Macon, later speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives and president pro tempore of the United States Senate, began earnestly courting a young Warrenton woman, Hannah Plummer.

Hannah, recalled as a charming and lovely person with an ample number of suitors, slowly narrowed her choice to two—Macon and an equally stubborn rival.

Warrenton residents, backed by Macon's biographer, insist that the two young men met one night and decided to play a game of poker. The two quickly agreed that the loser would come courting no more.

As Hannah looked on, the cards were dealt. Moments later Macon had lost both the hand and his honor. "I know I have lost you fairly," Macon told Hanna, "but love is stronger than honor—I cannot give you up."

With these words, Nathaniel Macon won Hannah Plummer's undying love, the rival got discouraged, and Warrenton gained another pillar in its poker tradition.

Another part of the local poker tradition goes back to antebellum days, when a group of men began a game of poker here. Most people in Warrenton say the game is still going on.

They say—as part of their preparation in defense of card games—that the game has never stopped, that the oldest sons have been taking their fathers' places at the gaming table from generation to generation.

That the poker game is believed immortal is due in part to numerous newspaper accounts of it, coupled with the fact that a great many persons here simply want to believe it.

The story was given added credibility some years ago when a former Warrenton mayor and author, the late William T. Polk, produced an imaginary account of the game which received wide-spread coverage.

Polk, who like his Harvard roommate, novelist Thomas Wolfe, was gifted with an abundance of imagination, wrote that only once in the history of Warrenton's immortal poker game was there an interruption.

This was when Gen. Robert E. Lee visited it, causing the players to stand stiffly at attention and salute. However, Polk wrote, as soon as the general took a hand, the game was resumed.

Polk later recalled that a flood of letters soon were sent him by those who read the article without challenge.

"Most of the writers wanted to know whether the game was still strictly limited to lineal descendants by primogeniture," Polk recalled. "I wrote them that unfortunately it was."

And so it goes as legend becomes blended with fact, as truth merges with fallacy, and as this town's poker games gain recognition.

Occasionally the word "poker" causes raised eyebrows, alarm and indignation here—but only among new residents or among those who wish to flaunt tradition.

Stolen Items Furnished Their Hunting Camp

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The plush northern Michigan hunting camp was an outdoorsman's paradise—until police stripped it bare in confiscating what they said was stolen equipment.

Officers said the stolen items included a $5,000 house trailer, a $2,000 motor boat with trailer, cooking gas tanks and an automobile.

Three Drayton Plains, Mich., men are to be arraigned in Circuit Court Monday on grand jury charges. They are Gary Skrobeck, 19, Daryl O'Neil, 27, and Thomas L. Duford Jr., 27.

The trio was arrested by State Police and Oakland County sheriff's deputies Friday after returning from the camp near Houghton Lake.

Ayden Widening Street Section

AYDEN—A short section of Vernon Avenue, between Third and Fourth Streets, is being widened by the Ayden Street Department, Town Manager Cleveland Paylor reported this week.

J. W. Barfield is in charge of the work for the department.

Mexico City's population has reached 5,300,000.

Mercury Lights Being Installed

AYDEN—Mercury street lights are being installed on West Fourth Street here, between Montague and Snow Hill Streets, it was announced yesterday.

A heavy growth of trees have interfered with the circuit of regular lights, it was noted by Town Manager Cleveland Paylor, which is the reason for the installation of mercury lights, which operate differently.

Directing the work for the town is D. C. Moore of the utilities department.

Ayden Once An Educational Center; Had 2 Colleges

By PATRICIA MOORE
Daily Reflector Staff Writer
Written for The Associated Press
AYDEN, N.C. (AP) — Two denominational colleges in the small town of Ayden never made it to the age of booming college enrollment.

One of them has been superseded by Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. The other was destroyed by fire.

Back in the 1890s, the two schools thrived. One was Carolina Christian College, founded by the Disciples of Christ. The other was the Free Will Baptist Theological Seminary, later relocated in another part of Ayden and renamed Eureka College.

By 1900, when the schools were really prospering, Ayden boasted a population of 557, nestled in rich farmland, with a railroad and a steam mill.

All that remains as tangible evidence of those two early colleges today is a Eureka College boys' dormitory which Kenneth Branch of Ayden converted into a stately colonial home. Nearby, workmen laying a water line in the eastern section of Ayden last August came upon a series of thick foundations which were parts of other Eureka College buildings destroyed by fire in 1931. The solid brick boys' dormitory was all that the fire spared.

Carolina Christian College met a different fate. The year that Atlantic Christian College opened for the first session in 1902 was the last year of Carolina Christian College's operation. The entire plot of 10 acres, buildings and all, were sold for $500. Of this, $140 went to Atlantic Christian College and the remaining $360 was presented to the Ayden Christian Church. Later, the buildings were dismantled. Today a housing development stands on the location, about one fourth of a mile from the railroad depot.

Carolina Christian College was the first of the two to locate in Ayden. Convention trustees of the Disciples of Christ, meeting in Ayden on April 19, 1893, had wanted to establish a Christian college in this area, which was relatively well entrenched with nine Christian churches.

They accepted an offer from the Ayden community of $100 in cash for the establishment of a college, as well as five acres of land given by W. H. Harris and J. S. Hines. This was the beginning of Carolina Christian College. Later, five adjoining acres of land were bought for $250, to complete the campus area of 10 acres.

The first session of school registered 17 students. But by the end of the same year, Carolina Christian College had an enrollment of 75. The 1894-95 records showed an enrollment of 80, 76 of whom were from Pitt County. The enrollment grew in 1897-98 to 129.

The last year of operation, 1902-03, saw the greatest year of attendance, 160 students.

Even though the school seemed to prosper, its fate was foreshadowed several years before its closing. At a convention in 1896 in

DORMITORIES HAVE CHANGED . . . since this boys' dormitory of Eureka College in Ayden was constructed in the 1920's. All that was left when the college property was destroyed by fire in 1931, the building today has been transformed into a stately colonial home. It had 18 rooms and 18-inch solid brick walls.

Washington, N.C., it was suggested that Carolina Christian College be consolidated with the Kinsey School of LaGrange. Joseph Kinsey later moved his seminary to Wilson, then, due to ill health, he could no longer operate it. But it was not to go to waste.

The North Carolina Christian Missionary Convention, meeting in Kinston in the fall of 1901, voted to buy Kinsey's Seminary in Wilson as the beginning of an institution of higher learning in North Carolina. The Wilson Educational Association made the possibility of locating a school there even more attractive, so the decision was made. Dr. C. C. Ware of Wilson, author of a history of Atlantic Christian College, has stated that the Ayden people were very "fine" about the school situation.

It had been through the Carolina Christian College that their own Christian Church was established. As has been stated before, their church received most of the proceeds from sale of the school property.

The Free Will Baptist Theological Seminary met a more tragic ending. Its destruction by fire left the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina without a school of their own until Mount Allen Junior College was established in 1951, to be succeeded by Mount Olive College in 1953.

The seminary had been founded in Ayden in 1896, an area thriving with Free Will Baptists, and where many of the earliest churches were established. The seminary was regarded as "widely influential in the east and south." It was noted especially for its Theological Department, for which the school had been especially constructed. Originally it was located on land where a public school now stands.

In 1920 the Board of Directors decided to suspend the school work in the old seminary and to concentrate on construction of a college on a new site, which is now the College Street-Boulevard Street section of Ayden, where the Branch home is located.

The seminary remained closed for two years. Then the directors reopened it in the old seminary building.

The year 1924 brought changes for the school. The president, R. B. Spenser, was authorized to incorporate the first year of college work leading to a bachelor of arts degree. By 1925 other courses were added. During late summer of that year, the move from the old to the new site began, and Eureka College opened on Sept. 8, 1925.

The depression had telling effects on enrollment, but college officials first thought they could operate in spite of it. By Christmas of 1928, the directors closed all but the Bible Department. At their next meeting, they were forced to close the school for good.

No one dreamed students would never enter the doors again. But in the cold November of 1931, the fire alarm sounded throughout Ayden at 2 o'clock in the morning.

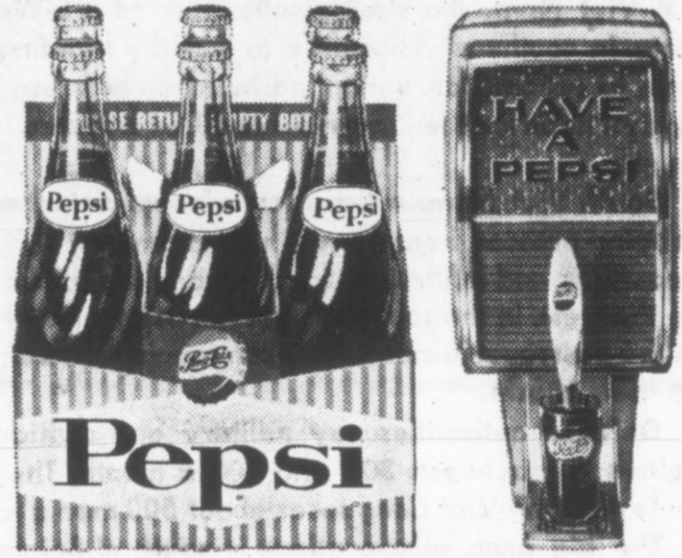

The fire trucks responded, but lack of water in that section of town prevented anything being done to save the buildings. All but the boys' dormitory burned.

Newspaper accounts of the fire

A MORE STATELY MANSION . . . today is the transfiguration of the former boys' dormitory. Kenneth Branch, owner of the home, reduced the number of rooms from 18 to nine, and added an annex as well as the front porch and columns.

By the time Kenneth Branch and Corey Stokes of Ayden bought the old college grounds from J. C. Moye of Snow Hill, the old boys' dormitory was in a state of disrepair, though it had been used as an apartment building at one time. Branch found the building had made nine spacious rooms, adding an annex for a garage and storage facility.

Couple Charged With Trying To Trade Off Child

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — A policewoman arrested a Salt Lake City couple Wednesday and said they tried to trade their youngest daughter for a late-model used car.

Auto dealer J. S. Baker told police the man and woman had approached him with the proposition.

Baker and Policewoman Fran Kari, posing as Baker's wife, were waiting when the couple returned with their children—a boy 3, a girl, 2, and a 6-month-old daughter—to complete the deal.

Mrs. Kari said the man told them he needed a car to find a job.

"I told the people it was worth it to me if it was worth it to them," said Mrs. Kari. "They both replied, smilingly, that it was."

Jailed for investigation of attempting to sell a child, a felony, were Clark Lynn Evans, 30, and his wife Betty Lou, 19.

Their children were placed in foster homes.

CRISIS FOLLOWS RED ATTACKS

STALKING THE ENEMY. South Viet Nam Marines in action against communist guerrillas. Marines use U. S. methods and their training is based upon methods used by U. S. Marines.

CHIEF OF STATE. President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Viet Nam is splattered with mud as he sits in jeep during inspection trip to Da Lat, north of Saigon, the capital.

Communist terrorists taken prisoner by South Viet Nam civil guards near Cay Lay.

A crucial race against time is running today in South Viet Nam, the strategically situated pro-Western state in southeast Asia: time to win the shooting war, time to revamp an army and build an economy, time to give hope for the future to 13 million freedom-loving people.

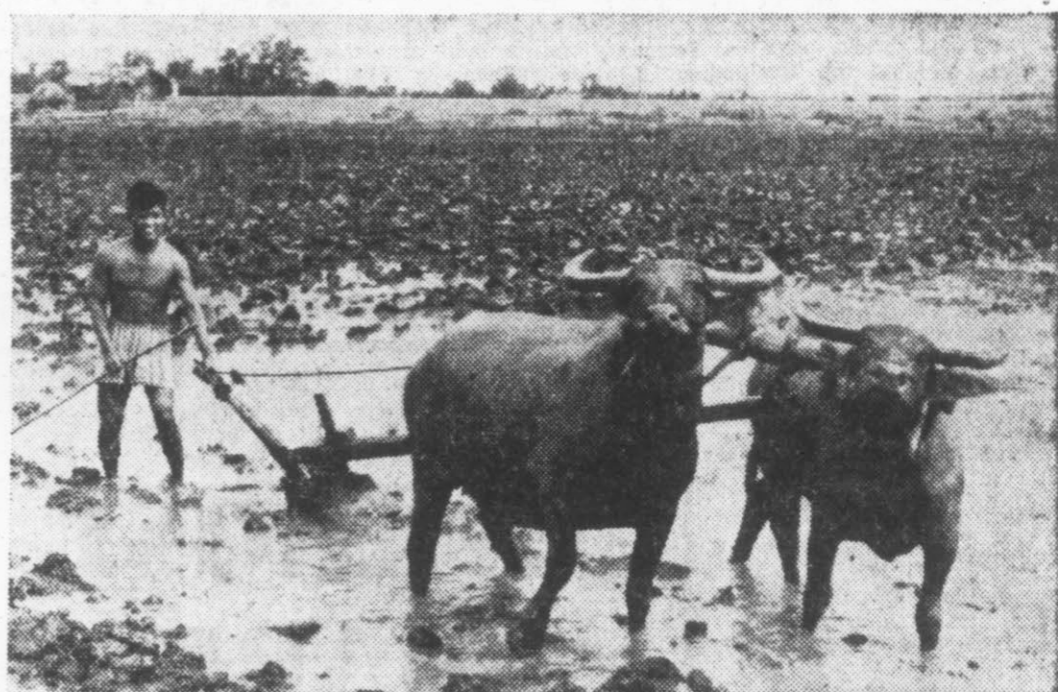

South Viet Nam, which means "south distant south," is being pressed from the north by communist Viet Cong guerrillas and infiltrators from beyond the Laos border on the west. In the south, too, red harassment is at work. In the past several months, the communists have stepped up their attacks.

Defense authorities say military and civilian casualties run between 300 and 500 a month. They estimate that the Viet Cong loses about 500 men a month.

The big area of operations is south of Saigon, the capital. This is a delta, more water than land, where rice is mainly grown, criss-crossing waterways, thick jungle, few roads—the ideal terrain for guerrillas. They operate in the mountains in the north.

Originally, the 150,000-man army was designed to meet an all-out attack from the north. Now the emphasis will be on counter-guerrilla training, with intensified psychological warfare in the villages. Until recently, the communists had almost a copyright on this weapon.

The situation is being watched closely by the United States and other members of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. Visits to South Viet Nam by Vice President Lyndon Johnson and President Kennedy's military adviser, Gen. Maxwell Taylor, are underscoring this nation's deep interest in the rising red threat—in one more corner of the crisis-ridden world.

Young South Vietnamese rice farmer plows his land with pair of buffaloes in communist-guerrilla threatened Mekong River delta region of South Viet Nam.

During intensive training exercises, South Viet Nam Rangers climb up rope ladder then walk to far end to drop off and continue charge to objective.

Elaborate Shelter Increases Your Survival Chances

An interior view of an underground shelter, elaborately equipped, that probably could be duplicated now for $8,000. Shelters such as this can increase your chances 10,000 fold.

By PROF. WILLARD F. LIBBY

The more comfortable and elaborate you can make your shelter the better, in order that you may remain inside for two weeks if need be.

After the first two or three days, the X-radiation from the fallout would not kill you. In very heavily dusted areas it might be strong enough to cause illness, or shorten life if you got too much exposure. Genetic effects on later generations might follow also.

Acting on Civil Defense radioed instructions, you might be able to move away from a small, cramped shelter to areas which had not been so contaminated and were safer.

With no harm, you could make quick trips in and out to hunt necessities. Particularly so if you had a small, compact basement shelter. For the rest of the basement likely would be receiving less radiation than the remainder of the house, or outdoor ground. For $300 to $1,500, and up, you can have larger shelters, in basements or outside, providing cots, better facilities, larger stores of food and water.

A 1,000-to-One Advantage
Prices rise as you install electric generators, chimneys and air pumps and air filters, and additional comforts and room. A very definite offset, however, is that sometimes the larger shelter can double as a playroom den, storage room, or other useable space in the basement, or underground.

The better, the sturdier and better supplied the shelter is, the more protection there is against fallout, and even blast effects.

My own simple shelter, in which I could use sleeping bags, increases fallout protection 100 fold. But a $5,000 shelter could give 10,000-fold protection.

Underground shelters, using concrete or metal, cost more than basement types. The Office of Civil Defense Mobilization and private contractors and architects offer many suitable designs.

In some areas, as along the Gulf Coast, the ground is too marshy or the water table too high to permit digging underground shelters. There the only solution is above-ground outdoor shelters, small or large depending on budget, but following the rule the materials used must be dense enough to keep out the fallout radiation.

Apartment dwellers face varying problems.

Apartment Lag
Some apartment buildings have basements or areas which can and should be prepared and stocked with supplies to last two weeks for all tenants.

In many areas, though, three to four story apartment buildings have no basements, and thus no ready-made place to hide. One solution is community shelters, preferably underground, large enough for 100 persons for 14 days.

Trying to run away, in your car, from the rain of approaching or continuing fallout could be foolish, unless in particular areas you had official advice to do so.

The pattern of fallout can be unpredictable. Fallout coming to rest on your car could bathe you with dangerous or even lethal radiation. The thin metal top of an automobile would not stop the rays.

After a few days, or the two weeks you may well need your car to move somewhere else, or to resume normal activities in your own city or neighborhood. So keep it gassed up. In an impending attack, roll up the windows and, preferably, keep it in a closed garage. If the car has been out in the open, hose off the fallout from it before driving it.

And you might well keep some emergency supplies in it, including a shovel to dig foxholes if a renewed attack caught you out in open areas with a new cloud of fallout approaching.

(Tomorrow: How to tell when to leave your shelter.)

Advises 3 Or 4 Days On Wagon

CHICAGO (AP) — Drinkers should go on the wagon three or four days a month to keep from becoming alcoholics, says a non-abstaining expert on alcoholism. The expert, Archer Tongue, executive director of the International Bureau Against Alcoholism, Lausanne, Switzerland, says he drinks beer or wine with meals and sometimes has a drink on other occasions.

But he told newsmen Tuesday: "A person should abstain completely for three or four days each month, just to make sure he doesn't become dependent upon alcohol. I do this."

Mansfield Says Kennedy Program Helped By Wins

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana predicted today that Democratic election victories in New Jersey, New York and Texas have enhanced prospects for pushing President Kennedy's legislative program through Congress.

Mansfield said in an interview that the results reflect "a vote of confidence in the President and will strengthen his hand" with congressmen "who are adept at understanding the handwriting on the wall."

Tacking much the same tack, Democratic National Chairman John Bailey said the vote "demonstrates that the people strongly approve of the President's actions and legislative programs to get America on the move again."

Bailey added in a statement: "I hope that it will persuade the obstructionist Republican leadership of the Congress to adopt different tactics in the next session."

Kennedy said Wednesday at a news conference that the elections were "a source of satisfaction to us."

He said the results indicate Americans believed the winning Democratic candidates and the Democratic party in the election areas "as well as nationally, are committed to progress."

The President drew laughs from newsmen when he added: "So I am happy and I suppose some day we will lose and I will have to eat those words."

If the Democrats had lost this time, Kennedy said, "it would have been interpreted as a stunning setback for this administration."

Later, Mansfield said Kennedy had spoken with "becoming modesty."

Mansfield said the victories were not due only to the efforts of the candidates, but to the "final push" given by Kennedy in New Jersey and New York City and by Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, who campaigned for Henry B. Gonzalez in Texas.

Gonzalez won a House seat. Kennedy appeared for Richard J. Hughes who won an upset victory in the race for governor of New Jersey and for Mayor Robert F. Wagner in his successful bid for re-election to a third term in New York City.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower also had comments Wednesday on the three races. In a statement issued at Gettysburg, Pa., he described the losses as disappointments and said they proved that manpower, money, party unity and grass roots organization are essential to victory.

Eisenhower had campaigned in Texas for Republican John Goode, Gonzalez' opponent, in New Jersey for Republican gubernatorial candidate James P. Mitchell and in New York City for State Atty. Gen. Louis J. Lefkowitz, a Republican who tried to unseat Wagner.

At the same time, Eisenhower pointed to what he called important victories in New York State, Arizona, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Mansfield said it has been "a great autumn" for the Democratic party under Kennedy and Johnson and the election returns "clearly foreshadow the support which the American people are prepared to give the President in this decade of danger."

Among other things, Mansfield contended, the Democratic victories strengthen Kennedy's chances of passing a medical care bill for the elderly as well as an extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

"And they could possibly be of assistance in getting a e e e to educa Leady passed by the Senate, off dead-center in the House," he observed.

"And they could possibly be of assistance in getting a federal aid to education bill, already passed by the Senate, off dead-center in the House," he observed.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed early this afternoon after four straight sessions of advance. Trading was active.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .20 at 264.60 with industrials off .10 rails up .50 and utilities up .30.

With a few exceptions, gains and losses of key stocks went from fractions to about a point.

The market was higher in early trading which was heavy. Profits were being taken from the start, however, and this process became more prevalent.

Analysis saw the performance as a logical breathing spell after Wednesday's impressive rally, the broadest in history and on the greatest volume since last April.

General Motors, which sparked Wednesday's upsurge, was ex-dividend and off a fraction while other motors took similar losses. Steels, aircrafts, tobacco, building materials, chemicals, nonferrous metals and oilseeds mixed and utilities moved higher on balance. Some electronics made gains.

International Business Machines, up more than 7, continued to climb. Universal Oil Products picked up about 2.

Among the steels, Youngstown Sheet rose more than a point. Losses of around a point were taken by Texaco, Liggett & Myers, Chrysler and Eastman Kodak.

Hershey Chocolate fell about 10 points as hopes of a stock split were disappointed.

Gov't Drops 350 Employees

'Gold Rush' Planned For Boy Scout District, November 18

Nope. It's not 1849 all over again. It's still 1961 but the word is out that gold will be discovered around these parts within two weeks.

And the "discovery" will be accompanied by an appropriate "Gold Rush" for boy scouts in the Pitt Scout District.

The district committee has planned the "Gold Rush" for Saturday, Nov. 18 at the campsite of Greenville Troop 340, to be known that day as "Dry Gulch."

"Dry Gulch Creek," thanks to the district committee, will be filled with "gold" created by the committee using a host of rocks and some paint.

The program is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Nov. 18 and will include a barbecue supper. Pigs for the supper will be cooking while the scout "miners" search for their gold.

For scouts who have performed their respective quotas in recruiting new scouts, attendance at the East Carolina College-Wofford College football game will cap the day-long program.

Dry Gulch will have law and order before the miners arrive. M. E. Cavendish, Pitt District chairman, will be mayor of the miner settlement. Dr. Harry Billica, district commissioner, will be the sheriff and his commissioner staff will be his deputies.

Harold Bowers will be the territorial U. S. Marshal and he will be responsible for all arrangements in the Dry Gulch Territory. Carl Knott will be Territorial Judge and will handle all cases of "claim jumping and robberies."

Robert Halstead will be chief assayer and responsible for the land office.

The Gold Rush program has been planned by the District Camping and Activities Committee. Rev. H. Thomas Money is chairman.

The Gold Rush will end at 3:30 p. m. in time for the barbecue supper at 4 o'clock. At 5 p. m., scouts will stage their roundup ceremony, including new recruits into scouting. Scouts who will attend the football game at 8 p. m. will gather at College Stadium at 7 o'clock.
