

Speaker Sam Rayburn Dies In Home Town He Loved

BONHAM, Tex. (AP)—Sam Rayburn, who served longer as House speaker than any man, died today in the home town he loved. Cancer and its complications caused his death. He would have been 80 on Jan. 6.

The White House was notified immediately. So was Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, the Democratic leader of the House.

McCormack was the man Rayburn chose to serve temporarily as speaker when "Mr. Sam" had to leave Congress before it closed because of what he called lumbago.

But even then, his doctor believed, he knew he had cancer.

The physician, Dr. Joe A. Risser, and members of the speaker's family and staff stood by the bedside in Risser Hospital as Rayburn faded away.

"It was a very easy death for a very great man," Dr. Risser told reporters.

Asked about the immediate cause of death, Risser said simply that "He just quit breathing."

Then, in more formal language, he put it this way:

"At 6:20 this morning Mr. Sam passed away. He died quietly. He showed no evidence of pain lines in the face. He seemed to be as one in sleep."

Rayburn had been unconscious for about 36 hours before his death. The doctor and family had spent two near-sleepless nights at the hospital.

The office of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson said in Washington that funeral services for Rayburn will be held at 2:30 p.m., CST, Saturday, in Bonham.

The burial will be in the family plot perhaps three-quarters of a mile from the center of this northern Texas town of 7,000, where Rayburn was the outstanding citizen.

President Kennedy is expected generally to attend the services. He will have to shuffle arrangements for a four-day Western trip to do so.

The first telephone call from the little yellow brick hospital after Rayburn died went from Dr. Risser to Kennedy's physician in Washington, Dr. Janet Travell.

This was by long-standing arrangement. The President had asked that he be kept in touch with Rayburn's condition.

The sergeant-at-arms of the House, Zeake Johnson, was told promptly that the man who wielded the gavel there more than twice as long as any other was dead, and it was for him that the first word of Rayburn's death came out.

At Rayburn's bedside here when he yielded to cancer were members of his family, doctors on the hospital staff and several nurses. The members of the family left the hospital shortly after his death.

Rayburn achieved one wish concerning his death but failed in another.

"I want to die with my boots on and with my gavel in my hand," the venerable dean of 20th century politics told friends when he left Washington at the end of August for what was to be his final departure.

"They're going to have to carry me out of here, God willing. I love this house," he said.

Later, when illness ravaged his body, his associates quoted him as saying he wanted to return to this community, his hometown, to end his days among "those friends and neighbors who for so long have given me a love and loyalty unsurpassed in any annals."

He was brought to this town of 7,000 persons Oct. 31 from Baylor Hospital in Dallas, 75 miles southeast of here.

A diagnosis of cancer was made shortly after he entered Baylor Oct. 2 for a series of tests to determine what was causing a chronic back ailment.

The ailment, originally described by Rayburn as lumbago, forced him to abandon his post as boss of the House almost a month before the last session of Congress adjourned.

It was an unprecedented thing for "Mr. Sam" to do, and friends immediately suspected that Rayburn himself feared the worst.

The family would not permit doctors or associates to reveal whether Rayburn had been informed of the hopelessness of his illness.

At one point, when he had wasted away from 176 pounds to 130, he told a great-nephew, Robert Bartley Jr., 23, that "this is the damnedest thing that ever got a hold of me."

Four days after he entered the hospital, doctors announced that he had incurable cancer of the lymph system, which roughly parallels the blood system throughout the body.

His condition took a sudden turn for the worse Oct. 11 when he contracted pneumonia. Doctors said at first he was unconscious, then said he was in a coma, a technical medical difference. Persons in a coma do not react to stimuli.

He revived the following day after use of antibiotics and special breathing aids.

The day after doctors reported cancer, his longtime personal friend and political protege, Vice President Lyndon Johnson, flew to his bedside. After that, Johnson visited Rayburn as often as his national duties permitted.

President Kennedy flew 3,000 miles round trip for a 14-minute visit with Rayburn on Oct. 9. They talked about politics, said the President.

Then came Rayburn's old political crony, former President Harry S. Truman, on Oct. 13.

"He told me where to get off just like he did when I was in the White House. I was so happy at the way he treated me," said Truman.

"Sam Rayburn means everything to me that one man can mean to another," said the former president.

Three New U.S. Satellites Circle Globe Today; Successes Total 59

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Staff Writer

Three new United States satellites circled the globe today sending data for navigation and spy-in-the-sky space systems.

The trio soared aloft Wednesday in one of this nation's most productive days in the space age.

Two of the satellites rode skyward in the nose of a Thor-Able Star rocket fired from Cape Canaveral Wednesday night. One is the 190-pound Transit 4B, partially powered by a nuclear generator. The other is a 240-pound "Dumbbell" package which is intended to stretch out more than 100 feet in two weeks in a satellite stabilization experiment.

The satellite twins gave the U.S. a big boost toward a space navigation network to guide ships, planes, submarines and missiles.

Earlier, the 35th rocket in the Discoverer series flung a satellite into orbit from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., in another try at developing means of recovering capsules from space.

Within a few days, the Discoverer is scheduled to eject a capsule which Hawaii-based planes will attempt to snare as it parachutes to earth. Eight such capsules have been retrieved in previous tests. Perfecting the technique is essential for recovering data from the Midas missile detector and Samos reconnaissance satellites.

The successes raised the total of successful U.S. satellites to 59. The Soviet Union has orbited 13. In other missile-space developments Wednesday:

A Pershing artillery missile scored its 22nd success in 26 test firings on a short-range hop of less than 220 miles from Cape Canaveral.

The Nike-Zeus missile killer system registered a double triumph at White Sands, N.M. In one test, Zeus radar tracked a special missile test target. In the other, the launch technique and ground electronics equipment were given a trial.

The Air Force announced plans to send into orbit next month a 10-pound satellite named Oscar (for orbiting satellite carrying amateur radio) to beam signals to more than 200,000 amateur radio operators in this country. Intended to be kicked loose from a Discoverer, Oscar will enable the hams to practice the art of tracking and observing a moving space object.

In the only failure, an Argo D8 rocket broke apart shortly after it lifted off from Point Arguello, Calif. The shot was intended to probe briefly the Van Allen radiation belt with a parcel of instruments.

Transit 4B is the fifth and last test satellite in the series aimed at an operational network of four transits by the fall of 1962.

The Atomic Energy Commission reported the grapefruit-sized atomic generator in 4B is operating. The first unit of this type was aboard transit 4A last June and gave the United States a large lead over the Soviet Union in harnessing nuclear power for space exploration.

Scientists are eagerly awaiting results of the "Dumbbell" satellite which separated from 4B in space. It is officially called Traac—for transit research and attitude control.

In a day or two—if all goes right—a ground station will send a signal to activate electromagnets in Traac, causing the satellite to follow the earth's magnetic field. Six days later another signal will start a motor which will push a boom less than half an inch in diameter 60 feet out of the top of the satellite. In another eight days, a thin coil spring with a five-pound weight on top will eject from a 1½ pound platform on the tip of the boom and add another 40 to 60 feet to the length.

Scientists at Applied Physics Laboratory, Johns Hopkins University, believe this will stabilize the satellite so its base will always face the earth. The Navy wants to develop face-down capability for future transits in order to concentrate all antennae and power in one direction, thus extending the life of the satellite.

Ayden Plays Host To Pitt Development Group Meet

By HENRY EOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN—Pitt County Development Commissioners Wednesday toured Ayden, ate an Ayden dinner and conducted their regular monthly meeting here—its third straight session in various Pitt communities.

The commission, however, will take a break in its new rotating policy for the December session when the group is scheduled to convene again in Greenville, the site of all its meetings but three.

Ayden Mayor S. Frank Peterson extended an official welcome to the group and told the commissioners: "Ayden is not selfish in this industry business. We feel that any place a plant goes up in Pitt County, or in other counties around here for that matter, we'll get some benefits from it."

Peterson said Ayden "already has some good industry and we want some more. Our philosophy here though," he said, "is to upgrade our town so that a good industry will like it. We'd rather not have an industry unless it does something to improve our town."

Peterson addressed the group after a dinner at the Community Building. The commissioners, Pitt's County Commissioners and others gathered at 6:30 p.m. for the dinner after a tour of the Free Will Baptist Press, Lutz and Schramm Pickle Co., Niagara Chemical Co. and new residential areas of the town.

Peterson's welcome to the county's industry-hunting and economic development organization was bolstered by remarks from Ayden town manager Cleveland Paylor and Tom Wheelless, president of the Ayden Chamber of Commerce.

In his regular report to the commission, its executive director, Dr. C. Sylvester Green, said a total of 131 leads for industrial prospects have been developed through his office during the last year.

Sanford Is Compiling Urgent List

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford said today he had asked state institutions to inform him of their "urgent needs" for new facilities.

He told his news conference that after this list is compiled he will seek "some reasonable solution on how to meet these needs."

The questions to the governor and his answers on the subject resulted from the voters' defeat last week of $61.6 million in state bond issues for facilities at the institutions.

Sanford told the newsmen that when the General Assembly prepared the bond proposals the criteria was what facilities are needed.

"I have reduced the requests from what is necessary to what is urgent," he told the reporters.

Sanford said he still doesn't know "what the final approach will be" and that he doesn't know whether it will involve calling the General Assembly into special session. He said a decision on a special session will be made when all the facts are in.

The governor also told the reporters he had asked the State Ports Authority to explore the possibility of issuing revenue bonds to raise money for expansion of ports facilities at Wilmington and Morehead City. If such bonds were issued, income of the ports would be pledged to repay them and they would not be an obligation of the state.

In the bond vote last week, a proposed $13.5 million state bond issue for ports was among those defeated.

He told the newsmen he does not consider the vote against the port bonds meant the people were saying "don't expand the ports."

"If it means anything," he said, "it said don't expand the ports with our money."

Bombing Range In Hyde Planned

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force plans to acquire acreage in Hyde County for an East Coast practice bombing range, despite the bitter opposition of North Carolina officials.

The Defense Department said Wednesday night 30,000 acres will be used on a "leasehold basis."

Jet fighting units in North Carolina and South Carolina will conduct their bombing practice on the new site, located about five miles south of Engelhard. Presently the units use Nellis Air Force Base, Nev.

The opposition of North Carolina officials has been registered by civic groups and legislators.

The North Carolina General Assembly condemned the idea in a resolution passed in 1961. Copies of the resolution were sent to Washington.

U.S. Rep. Herbert Bonner, D-Mc., personally called on Pentagon officials to protest shortly after the inauguration of President Kennedy.

The State Wildlife Resources commission also passed a resolution saying the range would be harmful to the Mattamuskeet Wild Fowl Refuge in the area.

At one time, the Air Force had considered a 40,000-acre range near Marion, S. C. Strenuous objections also came from South Carolina officials.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Police stationed an emergency guard outside the French Embassy today as 4,000 Lebanese demonstrated for the release of Mohammed Ben Bella and other Algerians imprisoned by France. No violence was reported.

Remember When 'Mr. Sam' Came Here?

"MR. DEMOCRAT" PREDICTED A VICTORY as he stood with fellow Democrats: (from left) the late Sen. Kerr Scott, then Gov. Luther H. Hodges, Rayburn, Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. and Rep. Herbert C. Bonner; but he had more to say . . .

Kennedy Sets Out Gathering Won't Forget His Visit On Western Tour

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy, saddened by the death of House Speaker Sam Rayburn, set out today on a four-day Western trip.

The trip will be partly political but probably will open with a major foreign policy talk. The schedule includes Democratic party tributes and a display of naval striking power, but might be altered so that Kennedy could attend Rayburn's funeral.

Kennedy's big jet took off from Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland at 9:31 a.m. EST for Seattle, where he speaks at the University of Washington's 100th anniversary celebration this afternoon.

Before leaving, Kennedy met with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and other foreign policy advisors. The discussions presumably included the visit to Washington next week by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany.

President Kennedy reportedly planned to make his university speech the big one of his first tour of the West since election day last November. He was expected to give his view of the international scene and the broad area of East-West conflict.

Kennedy will remain overnight in Seattle to address a dinner honoring Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash. He has a similar engagement in Phoenix Friday night, where Democrats are paying their respects to 84-year-old Sen. Carl Hayden, D-Ariz.

Magnuson has completed his 25th year in Congress, while Hayden has served in Washington twice that long. Both started in the House.

Kennedy's schedule bore distinct political markings at both start and finish. Magnuson, with Gov. Albert Rosellini, Sen. Henry M. Jackson and other Democratic state and party officials were to greet him at Seattle's Boeing Field.

Then, after skipping from the Northwest to Phoenix and San Diego, Kennedy will mingle with California Democratic leaders at a party dinner in Hollywood on Saturday night. He'll make a speech there too.

Earlier Saturday, Kennedy will witness Navy and Marine exercises at San Diego. He is slated to fly from Phoenix Friday night and board the carrier Kitty Hawk at the Naval Air Station.

With the trip, Kennedy will be making more public appearances in a four-day period in this country—outside Washington—than he has since taking office. He spoke at party affairs in Chicago and Boston last spring, made a quick trip to Oklahoma at the end of October and appeared for Democratic candidates in New York and New Jersey this month.

Congolese Slay 13 UN Airmen

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—The United Nations today announced that insurgent Congolese troops had "brutally murdered" 13 Italian U.N. airmen at the Kivu Province town of Kindu.

A U.N. spokesman said the unarmed fliers were shot by unruly troops shortly after their arrest last Saturday afternoon.

Some of their bodies were dismembered and hurled into the Lualaba River, the spokesman added, by soldiers who apparently suspected them of being Belgian paratroopers.

The U.N. spokesman, George Ivan Smith, said the U.N. command was presenting "specific proposals" to the central Congo government for forceful action to investigate and punish those responsible for the murder and to prevent a repetition.

If the government response seems insufficient, Smith said, the U.N. is prepared to act immediately on its own. He added that Malayan troops prepared for any necessary action, already are being flown to reinforce the 200-man Malayan U.N. garrison in Kindu.

The U.N. already had threatened military action if the rebellious soldiers—part of a disorderly command of more than 2,000 claiming allegiance to leftist Vice Premier Antoine Gizenga—failed to give up the Italians.

Governor Thinks Small Loan Law Requires Study

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford said today he thinks the 1963 General Assembly should take a good look at the small loan law which the last General Assembly enacted after much heated debate.

The governor told reporters in answer to questions at his news conference that he had "never been satisfied with the small loan law as it was written."

"It was too pleasing to the big operators," Sanford said. He added that he hoped the General Assembly would look at the law "very carefully."

Sanford's comments came after a newsmen told the governor that a number of small loan agencies have been sold since the law went into effect and indications are that most of the sales were to large, out-of-state chains.

The governor said if it were having this effect the law ought to be changed, and it ought to be changed, "if they are taking too much from those who are not able to defend themselves."

Bicentennial Dinner To See About 250 Guests

Some 250 persons are expected to attend a Bicentennial Dinner to be held here Friday evening commemorating Pitt County's founding.

The dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the South Cafeteria of East Carolina College. The dinner guests will hear an address by Pitt Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville on the history of the county.

Immediately after the dinner, the Greenville Art Center will be opened so that guests may view the Bicentennial Exhibition now on display. The exhibition will be open daily, Tuesdays through Saturdays, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. until Dec. 28.

The dinner program will also feature a short musical presentation by the Men's Chorus of East Carolina College under the direction of Charles Stevens. They will render songs from the Colonial and Confederate days, of old favorites.

Even the decorations—taken from Pitt's gardens and fields—will carry out the theme of days gone by, suggesting Colonial and Confederate days. The Farmville Garden Club is in charge of the table decorations.

Guests from throughout Pitt County are expected to attend, with officials and mayors being especially recognized, and a number of out-of-town residents former Pitt citizens, also expected to attend.

The Bicentennial Exhibition features a view of the past, Colonial and Revolutionary War periods, ante bellum and Civil War periods and Pitt County's development in the New South.

Confirm Planes Given Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—The U.S. Embassy confirmed today that eight advanced F28 fighter-bomber trainers and four C47 transports have been assigned to South Viet Nam under the U.S. Air Force program to build up the aerial strength of this Communist-menaced nation.

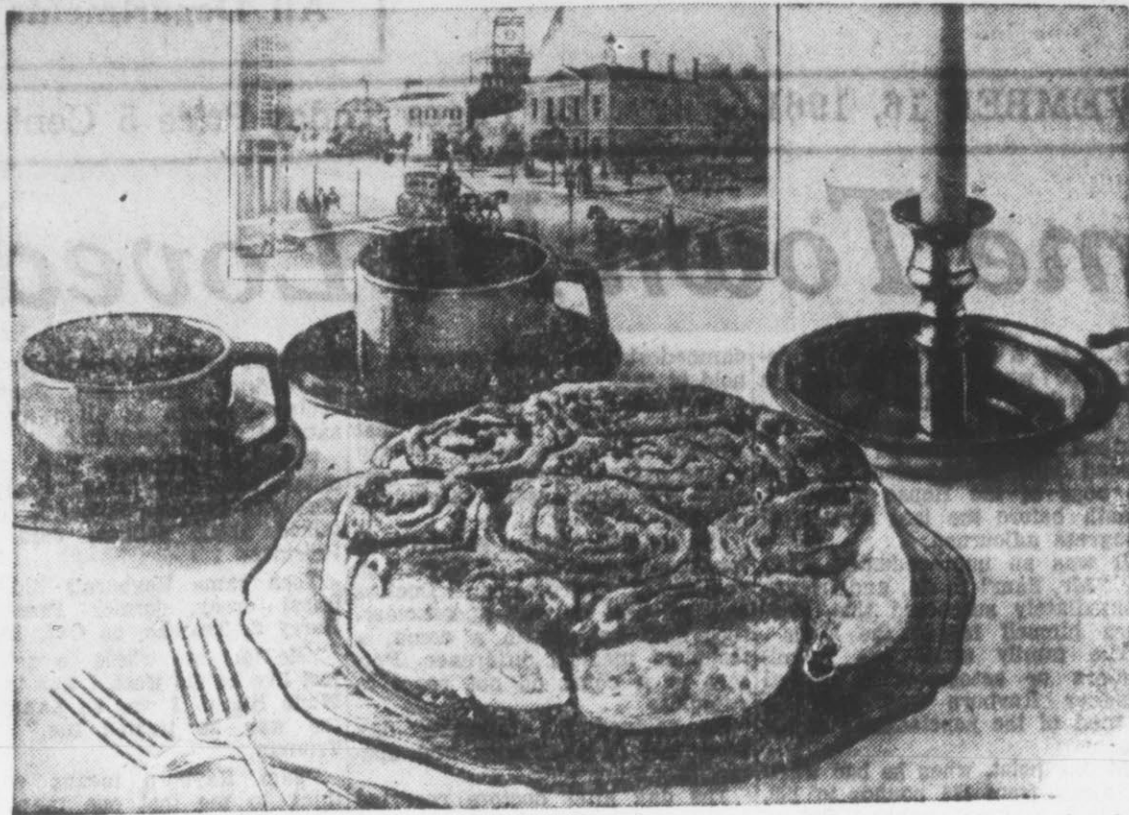

The spokesman said seven of the trainers and three transports have already arrived at Bien Hoa, a seldom-used airfield 28 miles northeast of Saigon where the Americans have been moving tons of supplies amid strict secrecy over the past two weeks. The rest of the plane shipment is expected by Friday.

Troops Travel Berlin Lifeline

BERLIN (AP)—American combat soldiers rolled across Communist East Germany today in another shuttle of armed troops over West Berlin's highway lifeline.

About 150 men of the 6th Infantry Division's 3rd Battle Group headed across the 110-mile Soviet-controlled autobahn for two days of training near Hanover, West Germany.

Sticky Buns Are Good In Any City

PHILADELPHIA STORY—Sticky buns originated in the City of Brotherly Love and now folks all over the country enjoy this yeast-raised taste treat.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Thank Philadelphia for giving us sticky buns. While Pennsylvania cooks argue over just how they should be made, the rest of us can enjoy various versions.

Should the buns be fat or should they be thin? Should they use raisins or currants? Should they be very rich and very sweet?

Stay out of the alteration! A friend of ours makes the best medium fat, medium rich, and medium sweet sticky buns we've ever tasted; our advice to you is just to go along with her recipe. Follow directions and you'll have perfect yeast-raised texture, wonderful flavor.

STICKY BUNS

4 cup milk
1-3 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-3 cup very warm water
2 packages active dry yeast
1 egg
4 cups (about) sifted flour
Filling and Syrup
Scald milk; stir in sugar, salt and 4 tablespoons butter; cool to lukewarm. Measure very warm water into a large bowl; sprinkle in yeast; stir until dissolved. Stir in lukewarm milk mixture, egg and half the flour; beat until smooth. Stir in remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto a lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic—about 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease all sides. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 1 hour. Punch down; divide in half. Roll each half out on lightly floured board to make a 9-by-14-inch rectangle. Spread with 1 tablespoon of the remaining (soft) butter; sprinkle with half of filling. Roll up from 9-inch side. Seal edges firmly. Cut into 1-inch pieces; place cut side down in one of the pans holding the cool Syrup mixture. Repeat with the remaining dough, butter and filling. Cover; let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk—about 45 minutes. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven about 35 minutes. At once invert pans on plates; allow pans to remain on rolls a minute. Remove pans; cool rolls. Makes 1½ dozen.

FILLING AND SYRUP
½ cups dark brown sugar (firmly packed)
½ cup currants (washed in hot water and drained)

Shower Given Bride-Elect

AYDEN—Miss Louise Mosley and Mrs. B. T. Tripp were joint hostesses on Friday evening when they entertained for Miss Jeanette Worthington, bride-elect, at a kitchen shower. Miss Worthington and Dan Davis Jr. of Monroe will be married on November 25.

The bridal colors, white and green, were carried out in the arrangements and the refreshments. Lighted candles in silver holders and wedding bells were used.

The buffet was especially attractive with its miniature bride under an arch of tiny white mums and fern. Decorated party cakes, nuts, mints and lime ice were served from an appointed table covered with a white linen embroidered cloth and centered with an arrangement of mums in a silver bowl. Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, mother of the honoree, served the lime ice.

The hostesses gave Miss Worthington a white corsage which complemented her yellow wool sheath dress.

The guests had tucked their favorite recipes into their gifts for the bride-elect, Mrs. Joe Tripp and Mrs. Bonnie R. McCormick won prizes during the evening.

Shell Collection Program Topic

The Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. E. Rosevere in Lakewood Pines with Mrs. H. P. Milstead assisting.

The home was decorated with seasonal flowers. The hostesses served coffee, cakes, tarts, nuts and candy from an appointed table.

Mrs. T. W. Rouse, vice chairman, presided. She welcomed the guests, Mrs. J. A. Marr and Mrs. J. R. Jackson, and new members, Mrs. Delphia Corbett and Miss Venetia Cox.

Mrs. Dink James announced that the play "Money Sauter," sponsored by the Woman's Club, would be presented at McGinnis auditorium on Nov. 27th.

Mrs. Rouse presented Mrs. L. A. Stroud, who gave a talk on her hobby, "Sea Shells." She had a display of rare shells to illustrate her talk.

Mrs. McGinnis Gives Program

Mrs. H. H. Duncan was hostess to members of the Round Table Book Club Tuesday afternoon at her home on Rock Spring Road. Mrs. R. B. Lee, first vice president, presided during the business session and welcomed as guests Mrs. Edgar Fisher and Mrs. Amelia Daniels.

The program for the afternoon was given by Mrs. Howard McGinnis. She chose to further develop the year's program theme of "New Frontiers" by a discussion of Capitol Hill.

It is now nearly 150 years since George Washington laid the cornerstone of the first government building in our national capital and many frontiers have been explored and conquered but there remain always challenging "New Frontiers."

Four of these new frontiers awaiting assault were discussed briefly: (1) The civic and social front; (2) the international front; (3) the national front; (4) the educational front.

Conquering these present national frontiers is even more urgent than the early colonists' push through the wilderness to the west.

Following the program, a delicious salad course was served by the hostess.

and also said that while freight transportation is quite satisfactory, the facilities for transportation of personnel leaves much to be desired.

Mrs. Kenneth Phillips welcomed the guests, Mrs. Ralph Garrett Jr. and Mrs. Pete Alderman. During the business session, members voted to purchase a TB bond. Books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

The Russian city of Moscow was first mentioned in literature in cultural and educational facilities, the year 1147.

Local Women Attend Meeting

Rose High FHA Hears Dr. Stokes

"Alert Today—Alive Tomorrow" was the topic of a talk on Civil Defense that Dr. Kathleen Stokes from the social studies department at East Carolina College gave to the Junior and Senior Chapters of the J. H. Rose Future Homemakers of America yesterday.

Dr. Stokes said "We are returning to the days of the pioneers when everyone must be self-reliant and be able to protect himself." She suggested that each chapter member familiarize her family with the Civil Defense warning signals, community plan, and first aid.

Diamond For Christmas? Sam Weeks Is Here Is Shopping Guide Club Speaker

By MORTON YARMON

NEW YORK—(WNS)—Is there a diamond in your future, possibly to be delivered this coming Christmas?

Before setting out to find the diamond of our dreams, you'd be wise to learn how diamond prices are set, particularly how the four C's—carat weight, color, cut and clarity—affect them.

Carat is the unit of weight for measuring diamonds. There are exactly 100 points in a carat, like the cents in a dollar. So a 54-point diamond is four points over half a carat, an 80-point diamond is five points over three-quarters of a carat. A carat weighs a little more than 3 grains and there are 480 grains to an ounce.

Ask both about the total carat weight in the entire piece of jewelry and the weight of the chief single diamond in the piece. For instance, learn the weight of a center diamond in a ring, then inquire as to the total weight of all the diamonds in the ring.

Color has great bearing on price. A fine diamond is clear and colorless, with no trace of brown or yellow. Although colorless in itself, a white diamond picks up and reflects every color in the spectrum. More than 200 shades of white have been identified by experts, but the "whiter" whites are rarer and more expensive.

Do you want a blue-white diamond? Under the rules of fair practice set down by the Federal Trade Commission, a diamond may be called blue-white only if it shows no body color other than blue. The term "blue-white" has been abused to such a degree that many good jewelers never use it. If you want to discover the true color of a diamond, hold the stone against a white paper or cloth in a north light.

Cut has two meanings.

It refers first to the quality of workmanship in putting the 58 facets (planes) on a diamond. The more accurate the faceting, the greater the brilliancy. Diamond sparkle is the result of refraction (the bending of light rays), internal reflection, dispersion of light and surface luster. Days and even months may be involved in studying a diamond before it is cut.

The term "cut" refers also to the shape of the diamond. Pear-shape, marquise, emerald-cut and round are the four basic shapes.

Clarity refers to the absence of presence of tiny carbon spots, "bubbles" or "feathers" that gemologists call inclusions. Tiny flaws don't always affect the beauty of a diamond but they do lower the price tag. A diamond is rated as flawless only if it shows no inclusions or blemishes to a trained eye when it is studied under a glass that magnifies 10 times.

Here are a few other points worth keeping in mind:

1. It's your decision, as purchaser, whether you want a large diamond with a small flaw or a smaller diamond of better quality. Superior color or workmanship of a small diamond can make it more expensive than a larger stone of poorer quality and cut.

2. A solitaire diamond (a single stone) represents a good buy. That's because your dollar is invested in more diamond, with less going into the cutting of several stones.

3. A diamond has intrinsic value, and it doesn't deteriorate or show signs of wear through the years. However, don't entertain the idea of buying diamonds and selling them soon at a profit. First, consider the jeweler's mark-up after he buys a diamond piece from a wholesaler. The price the jeweler paid included a profit to the wholesaler. If you sell your diamond, the price you can get has to include a profit to the dealer who in turn will resell it to a wholesaler.

Even so, diamonds have more recoverable value than any other type of adornment. The stones can be broken out of old jewelry and reset in newly designed pieces.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Reading presided over the business meeting. Several announcements were made concerning various Christmas workshops to be held.

The Lakewood Pines Garden Club Yearbook won first place at the district meeting. Two new books have been added to the Garden Club Library, "Foliage Arrangements" and "Fruit Arrangements."

Following the business session, the meeting was adjourned.

Mrs. Rosevear, program chairman, introduced Mr. Sam Weeks, who gave a program on "Pest Control, Pruning and Planting Shrubs."

Approximately 12 guests attended.

Clue To Gradual Defense Build-Up

There's a tip-off to the gradual increase of Army manpower strength in the call for drafting 345 doctors.

To a great extent, the buildup of military manpower has been carried out in a non-sensational manner. A few large units have been "federalized" and a considerable number of small ones; but beyond the passing flurry of interest this generated, we would surmise there is little awareness of just how far the United States has gone (and is going) in improving its defense posture.

Aside from calling Reservist and National Guard units to the colors, all services may be expected to be seeing an above-normal number of enlistments for peacetime; and the processes of Selective Service, combined with delaying discharges of important personnel, all combine to an impressive rate of steady growth.

Tuesday's announcement brings to 1,025 doctors called into uniform by the Defense Department since the first of the year.

And if we are to assume the military bases its medical manpower needs on a ratio to its other manpower, then we must likewise assume that growth rate has been considerable.

Months ago it was made abundantly clear that the United States would undertake to increase its conventional forces; and best estimates at that time were that aside from an immediate small-scale mobilizing of certain units, the program would be "low-keyed". The argument for this approach was obvious: the immediate activation of some organizations made it clear that the United States took a serious view of world conditions; and at the same time, the relatively few numbers of men involved was not a war-scare move, triggering panic and general mobilization in other parts of the world.

Too, the gradual process permitted a more orderly absorption of manpower into the complex of our military establishment.

But the fact that this country's military buildup is progressing, that it is being accomplished without bombast and repercussions, and that while a "big stick" is being fashioned there is no undue flexing of muscles or threatening gestures . . . all indicate the seriousness with which mobilization is viewed, and the great feeling of responsibility in high places.

Not One Of Old-Time Stalwarts Was Heard

The docile acceptance of denunciation, in the 22nd Soviet communist party conference, continues to bemuse observers on the outside.

There was only one voice of dissent, and that by a spokesman for Red China—who didn't bother to stay around to argue his points.

Not one of the old-time party stalwarts under attack at the meeting made a public defense. This alone should be a tip-off as to the ruthless nature of Communism and of the men who hold the reins of power.

The best known, in Western eyes, of the Old Guard who came under attack at the Moscow party congress was V. M. Molotov.

During the years immediately following World War II, Molotov became widely known for his ability to say "nyet". There was even some speculation that because he was so great a thorn in the side of the Free World that he might even be Stalin's successor. In short, he was regarded as a mighty important cog in the Kremlin's machinations.

But with the rise of Nikita Khrushchev, Molotov was humiliated and assigned to relatively minor duties. In recent weeks he has been again verbally flayed, called home, seemingly fated to become a faceless member of Russia's multitudes.

If there has been any defense, against the denunciation of Khrushchev, it has not been revealed. Outwardly there has been no protest, no hint of struggle against the monolithic regime.

The resignation, the ready compliance . . . all suggest Khrushchev's power in the Kremlin is unchallenged.

Eisenhower And Truman Alike?

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower, although they might not like to think so, have looked like look-alikes facing in opposite directions in the first year after each left office.

Each, as he walked out of the White House, got a hunting license to pot-shot his successor. They fired merrily, or indignantly, or disparagingly, as the mood seized them, which was pretty often.

But there were other parallels that may tend to get the public accustomed to what to expect from ex-presidents in the future.

Neither, when he gave up the presidency, was happy about the last election results. In 1952 Truman backed Adlai E. Stevenson who lost to Eisenhower. In 1960 Eisenhower backed Richard M. Nixon who lost to John F. Kennedy.

While Truman and Eisenhower were tied at having more unbalanced budgets while they were in office, they never could get together on the budget subject.

In 1953, after getting adjusted to civilian life again, Truman banged away at Eisenhower's administration for what Truman called its dangerous philosophy that balancing the budget is the most sacred objective of government.

In 1961 Eisenhower, although his $12-billion deficit in 1959 was the biggest in peacetime history, said the failure of President Kennedy's administration to balance the budget would affect the nation's future strength against communism.

Truman in 1953 complained that the Republicans under Eisenhower were going down the middle of the road moving backward. Eisenhower in 1961 said, "The confusion I sense" in the Kennedy administration "is like a tornado on a spring day."

Both men, in their first year out of office, couldn't stay out of active politics. Truman had better luck than Eisenhower.

In 1953 Truman, after first letting it be known he wouldn't, jumped into the New York mayoralty race to back Robert F. Wagner Jr., who won and thereafter kept on winning.

In 1961 Eisenhower went to New York to back Republican Louis J. Lefkowitz against Wagner who was running again. Wagner won once more. Eisenhower asked to go into New Jersey's gubernatorial race to support Republican James P. Mitchell against Democrat Richard J. Hughes. Kennedy and Truman campaigned for Hughes, who won.

But while both men had plenty of fault to find with what their successors were doing at home, both stopped it at the water's edge.

Truman in 1953 called for firm support for Eisenhower during the Korean War negotiations. In 1961 Eisenhower said Republicans stand as Americans first, not partisans, behind Kennedy in foreign affairs.

In his first year out of office Truman gave interviews. So did Eisenhower.

Truman wrote a series of five articles on "What It Is Like to Become an Ordinary Citizen." Eisenhower has chinned about that with newsmen and has given a series of TV interviews on the problems of his presidency.

Both men were unlike President Hoover who remained silent on political issues for two years after leaving office. But what Hoover had to say in politics after that can hardly be said to have influenced events much.

It seems certain that if President Roosevelt had lived to retire he wouldn't have been any more quiet than Truman or Eisenhower.

But neither Truman nor Eisenhower, for all their talk, can be said to have influenced voters, minds much when they themselves weren't running.

This, however, is not likely to discourage either of them from trying.

Notes Found On A Cuff

Nephew John Taylor, seven, acquired a lone goldfish the other day.

He studied the creature gliding around in the fish bowl all by himself and finally decided on a name. The new pet would be known as Jack.

But what if the gold fish should turn out to be a girl? That's easy, according to John. Then she'll be Jackie.

That boy's going to be president someday.

Reflector Staffer Stuart Savage and Fireman Alton Vincent were studying the blinking light atop the micro-wave tower at the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph building recently.

You might have noticed that the red light isn't turned off during the day. It blinks 24-hours a day.

Well Stuart and Alton counted the thing and found it blinks 14 times each 30 seconds. This means it blinks 28 times a minute. That gives 1,680 blinks an hour, 60,320 each 24 hours and a grand total of 22,016,800 every year.

No, they didn't say how many kilowatt hours this represents.

Some minor changes are cropping up as traffic aids on Greenville's streets. At Five Points entering Evans, a sign has been erected in the traffic island reading "Keep Left". Let's hope drivers will heed it. Despite a yellow line motorists coming from Dickinson have been prone to cut across to the right lane.

This created problems for traffic headed through Five Points on Evans.

On Dickinson at the intersection of Hooker Road, just beyond the Norfolk and Southern underpass, the city has painted lines designating three lanes. Now there are two through traffic lanes and a left turn lane for traffic turning off Dickinson on to Hooker Road.

It's the little things that count, even when it comes to dealing with more and more automobiles.

Other Editors Saying... Figuring Bond Costs

(Greensboro Daily News)

Much has been said and written since North Carolina's ill-fated referendum on what approval of the 10 issues, or any appreciable segment, would have cost the taxpayers of the state. There is no doubt that spending was an issue. Other factors entered into the total defeat, but Tar Heel voters, on the heels of record legislative appropriations, said in no uncertain terms that they were in no mood for additional funds from the public till.

In all the post-mortems, however, some comment should be forthcoming on what the bonds' defeat—or at least some of the proposed issues—will actually cost North Carolina. While the figures cannot be cited and intangibles are largely involved, conclusions can be drawn in fact and in reason.

No one can say how many Tar Heel boys and girls will be denied the opportunity and the right of going to college through defeat of funds for community colleges and expanded facilities at all state-supported institutions of higher education, topped by the pressing needs of the Consolidated University of North Carolina. Jobs are becoming increasingly difficult to find for the uneducated. Higher education and research are also tied in closely with national defense and security in the age of atomic energy and missiles.

Statistics are available to show how much more money a person with a college or even high school education earns during a normal life span than the individual who does not go to college or drops out of high school. The hundreds, probably running well into the thousands, of youths who cannot be admitted to college because of lack of dormitory space and other facilities would have earned millions of dollars, much of which would presumably have gone into higher living standards, purchasing power which assured a strengthened economy, and taxes to finance the new and additional public services which a growing state must have.

The same approach should be made to mental institutions. One may forget the humane aspect and consider only the financial aspect. How much does it mean in dollars and cents to treat and dismiss a mental patient and get him or her back into normal living and gainful employment? Rehabilitation is the key word for dealing with both the mentally ill and the mentally deficient. And large part of the bonds sought by the State Hospitals Board of Control would have gone into this saving work.

Similarly the state correctional institutions were victimized at the polls. These are the schools to which North Carolina's juvenile delinquents are sent. Here is the challenge to train them in some skill, to rehabilitate them and to convert them into law-abiding, taxpaying citizens. Otherwise a shockingly large number of these delinquents go on to greater crime, to fill our prisons and to become not merely a social problem but a social menace. Rehabilitation of even a small percentage of these boys and girls would pay for the investment made on the training schools over and over again.

North Carolinians are going to have to do some sound second-thoughting. And when they do they are going to realize that the cost of not passing the bond issue, especially as it affected the three categories commented upon in the preceding paragraphs, is likely to prove much greater than passage, with resultant sinking funds and interest payments, would have been.

Opinions In Brief

GIVE

THE UNITED WAY

Not One To Be Isolated

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Unlike a monarch, who holds office by birth, the President of the United States has to spend his first term politicking for the second. It is a wholesome effort because it keeps him close to the people. He cannot separate himself from those who choose him and will choose or not choose him again. He cannot hope to hear only praise. He cannot expect that his visitors will bow from the waist and amen him through a conversation.

In a word, no matter how hard his staff may try to screen him from those who always know what is right and wrong, the President must from time to time patiently listen to the ideas of others. As trying and time-wasting as this may seem, it is wholesome because the man in the White House dares not isolate himself from trends of public opinion.

As long as this attitude toward the office of the President continues, we are likely to remain a wholesome republic. Naturally, everybody wants to tell President Kennedy what to do and how to do it. Perhaps, it is an instinctive reaction to his lack of grey hair. Perhaps it is his smile that encourages frankness. But he is never likely to become an isolated personage, alone, friendless, as has been the fate of so many Presidents.

Some Presidents have become paralyzed by the Presidency. The White House can become the palace of a monarch and the office of the President can be a trap for a personality who walks on eggs. The Chinese use the word "Mandarin" to describe some Mandarins. "The Irish Mafia," in President Kennedy's office, does not look like Mandarins, nor does the President, sitting in his rocker, give the appearance of one who believes that he has a mandate from Heaven to rule over the weak and tremulous. The White House is more cheerful than it used to be although it has in no manner lost its gracious formality.

President Roosevelt gave the impression of knowing that he was superior to other men. President Hoover seemed to be shocked that he, a simple man, should have been chosen for so great a position. President Kennedy remains Jack Kennedy who has a job to do and expects to see that it is done. He grows less partisan because the task of the era requires a nationalistic President. This is risky in our country for a politician but it does make for a closer unity in the face of the enemy. The principal positions in the Cabinet are held by Republicans and non-Republicans because he obviously seeks an administration of talent, depending upon himself and his brother, Robert, to do the politicking.

How this will work out over the years, it is difficult to say because ambitious men usually like to project themselves in the hope that they may be the successor to the incumbent. Nevertheless, at this moment it can be said that this is not a political Cabinet.

The President is unusual in that he is a philosophic historian, literate, deeply grounded in the traditions of his office, profoundly nationalistic without objecting to nationalism, and others. It is possible to grasp his program but I should imagine that it is not easy to move him from a determined course. He accepts criticism politely but not without anger if he senses injustice.

Everybody wants to tell the President of the United States how to run his office and all citizens have a right to do it. As a matter of fact, only the President can know all the facts of a given situation; unfortunately he cannot tell what he knows and in our kind of society, the public is irritated when it is uninformed.

Roosevelt had the gift of leadership and with little talent built himself into a generally beloved personality. What this country requires most at this moment in its history is potent moral leadership. We need to restore a sense of patriotism. In a word, our President must lead the people, not read polls to discover where at a moment the public wants him to go. We need a man of the stature of Lincoln who, in the midst of war, could say "with malice to"

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

HANDICAPS

A few days ago in a public place I saw a man who had a great handicap. He appeared to be cheerful. The woman who accompanied him, presumably his wife, appeared to be cheerful also. They lived with a millstone about their necks, yet it appeared not to make them unhappy.

At the same time you and I know many fortunate people who weep, drive, rage, and beat their breast—over nothing at all. They have no handicaps. They have only the slightest little burdens to bear, yet you can hear them shrieking to the end of the block or the end of the town.

Battlefield heroes are magnificent. The government rightly pins medals on the breasts of such men. But the even greater heroes are men and women who drag themselves through life with a fearful handicap, yet who are able, apparently, to rise above it.

Living with a handicap is an art. That is a poor word to use in this connection. It is a triumph. Rising above handicaps constitutes one of the most majestic achievements humanity can make.

A girl I know under thirty years of age, chained to a wheelchair for life, keeps writing books one after another and having them published. A woman who has spent more than ten years in bed with tuberculosis writes fine poetry.

Let us speak out quietly and find a shrine where we can confess our sins and weaknesses before the Lord.

Fallout Shelter Business Boom

By ELMER ROESSNER

The fallout shelter industry is becoming bigger every day. While it is not yet up there with steel, construction, autos and weapons, it is expanding at an enormous rate.

There are two expanding forces at work:

1. The determination of the Kennedy Administration to make shelter consciousness part of the American way of life.

2. The recognition of business that its survival, too, depends on a survival program.

The Harvard Business Review, lighting its torch from that of its currently most distinguished alumnus, shouts in red headlines in its November-December issue: "Business can save 70,000,000 lives."

"KEY TO SURVIVAL"

The editors point out that "it may seem surprising to many businessmen that ordinary buildings already standing in every American town may hold the key to survival of such a sizable portion of the population."

It points out that the architectural styles of the past 80 years favored heavy walls, sturdy cellars and strong roofs. In using these styles industry inadvertently provided America with the basic structures for survival.

The editors then urge industry to convert this protected space into shelters that will keep their employees alive.

Meanwhile, more and more businesses are getting into the shelter field. Almost all of the home swimming pool companies have established subsidiaries to offer fallout shelters. One is offering shelter that can be converted into a pool or vice versa.

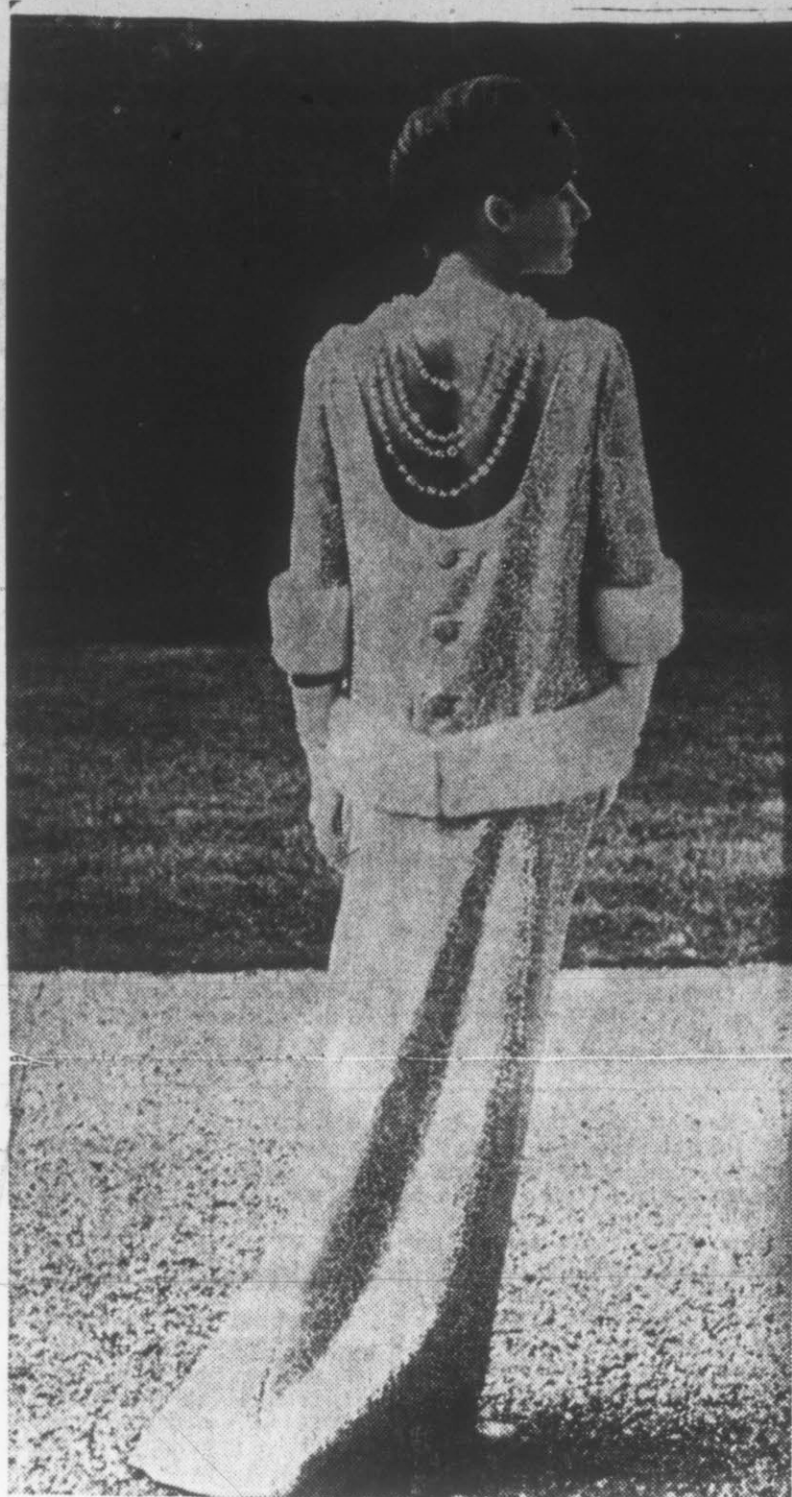

At the same time, Prentice-Hall reports that the government search for places where millions might survive a nuclear attack has been speeded. The use of electronic computers to automate part of the survey may save as much as two months time. "That means the government will be in the market sooner than expected for food and medicine, ventilating equipment and sanitary facilities," it states.

"Using the results of this electronic figuring, the government will know how much food and medicine it must buy to stock shelters, and what kind of equipment it needs to modify existing areas."

Prentice-Hall also points out that seven states have granted tax exemption on fallout shelters, namely: Alabama, Maryland, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island and Wisconsin. It is probable that companies offering shelters and equipment will concentrate in these states.

It appears then that business has a responsibility to utilize its own facilities to increase protection; to do as much as it can to increase the supply of protective items and, if possible, make profits while it survives.

With silver brocaded gown edged in white mink, Spanish couturier Pedro Rodriguez gives full rein to the Spanish flair for dramatic effect. The leading Spanish designer, aside from Balenciaga, he has never attained the latter's fame outside the country, but is prized in Madrid fashion circles and by devoted American customers. (WNS Photo)

Leading Spanish Designer Prized By Those Who Know

By GERALD S. SYNDER

BARCELONA, Spain—(WNS)—Forty-three years after the establishment of his first fashion salon, Pedro Rodriguez is securely and agreeably lodged as the major Spanish style influence next to Balenciaga.

Yet he is not the byword in American homes that Dior, Caseni and other European colleagues are. Spanish couture in general has never attained the fame, attention or cash volume of Paris, London and Rome. To American clients, he is more in the nature of a private treasure—discovered individually by each one of them.

Don Pedro's luxurious salon here rivals the finest in Paris and serves many Americans. The designer is acclaimed in Spanish as well as American fashion circles for the simplicity and comfort of his daytime suits and dresses and for the elegant drama, rich fabrics and unstinted hand embroidery and detail of his evening clothing.

It was with the intricately embroidered evening gown that Senor Rodriguez first made his name with the opening of his salon in Barcelona in 1918.

The preference of his American clientele for casual simplicity has influenced the style of his daytime fashions; but for evening, he gives full rein to his Spanish flair for dramatic effects.

Although many Spanish society women require evening gowns only for entertaining at home, they seem to want and need as many cocktail clothes as their party-going counterparts in the United States.

With gray hair, conservative glasses and sober business suit, Senor Rodriguez looks more like a manufacturer of nuts and bolts or paper supplies than of such excitements.

His reassuringly businesslike mien is one factor in creating the absolute confidence that his clients have in him.

With his clients, including the Americans, Don Pedro is as severe as are most couturiers with their mannequins.

"If a customer takes a liking to a costume which I don't think suits her personality," he said, "I insist that she not wear it."

"A lot of persuasion is sometimes necessary, but I generally end up convincing my customers that each woman has her own style and should use it."

"For me," he continued, "it is important not only to follow the fashion of the day, but to know how to wear clothes well, or how to be, on all occasions."

"The most important things is the technique or ability of women to adapt what is new to their own personalities."

The Rodriguez collections generally affirm his belief that women should dress for men and thus not sacrifice a feminine silhouette to fashion.

Conveying this point of view to the customer, he admitted, is one of the hardest parts of his job.

"But," he said, "a good couturier, besides experience and dedication, must know how to apply psychology."

Psychology or no psychology, it is no secret that any customer of Senor Rodriguez must wear a girdle, and a good one, before she has a fitting.

Although he is capable of designing extremely youthful-looking clothes (an observer of one collection said the girls who go to cocktail parties in Rodriguez dresses will look too young to be there), his designing preferences are the fashionably mature, clothes-experienced women of 40.

"The elegantly well-dressed woman does not reach her prime until she is 40," the Spanish dress-maker maintains.

"There is no 'stop plate' in the world of fashion as far as age is concerned. Women who have passed the age of 40 can—and should—consider themselves young."

Senor Rodriguez opened his second fashion house in San Sebastian in 1939. His Madrid house opened its doors in 1941, and a ready-to-wear boutique is operated in the Castellana Hilton Hotel in Madrid.

Through the years, the designer has become well aware of the classic desperation of American husbands when a completely new style comes into effect.

"I suppose husbands won't ever be really enthusiastic about a new line," he said.

"But, he added in good industry fashion, "they are fully compensated when they see how well dressed their wives look in the creations of the season."

'Plain Folks' Enjoy
Sunken Tub Baths

The 1960's may go down in history as the decade when the glamorous sunken bathtub became commonplace in middle-class American homes.

Now that a step-down sunken tub costs only about $75 more than a standard model, the rich and famous will have to find another "status symbol" to impress their public.

Meat Loaf Pleases Family

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

New Fangled main dishes may come and go, but pleasing beef loaf recipes stay in family recipe files.

So many variations of this meat loaf! As a rule, the meat is extended and the texture softened by the addition of a "filler." For this we often use soft bread crumbs because they may be mixed so thoroughly with the meat that they are unobtrusive.

Liquid, too, goes into the meat mixture, and this may be water, milk, or as suggested here, tomato juice. An egg is added for the sake of body and texture.

Some cooks have their own pet seasonings for meat loaves. The combination here gives excellent but not strong flavor.

An extra fillip for this loaf is a covering of mashed potatoes—these prepared the easy way, from a package.

Four of us, all grownups, managed to do away with this loaf at one meal. If you have any left over, you'll find it takes to reheating.

SNOWY MEAT LOAF

- 1 egg
- 1/2 cup tomato juice
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion or 2 tablespoons finely grated onion (pulp and juice)
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon parsley flakes or 1 tablespoon minced parsley
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 1 pound ground chuck beef
- 1 envelope (4 servings) instant mashed-potato granules
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Beat egg enough to combine yolk and white; mix in thoroughly the tomato juice, onion, Worcestershire, salt, parsley, and bread crumbs. Add meat; mix well. Turn into greased loaf pan (about 8 by 4 by 3 inches). Bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven 45 minutes; remove from oven; pour off juices; turn out meat loaf in a shallow pan and allow rest of juices to drain off and the loaf to cool somewhat. Place loaf on a heat-resistant over platter or in a shallow baking pan. Meanwhile prepare potato according to package direction, then beat in the butter. Cover top sides of cooled baked meat loaf with mashed potatoes; the drained cool loaf keeps potatoes from slipping off. Mark potatoes with fork tines. Bake in a very hot (450 degrees) oven 10 to 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

NEW TWIST ON OLD FAVORITE—Mashed potato frosts a delicious beef loaf.

Crying Baby Causes Father's Brainstorm

ST. PAUL, Minn.—(WNS)—Necessity became the father of invention when the infant daughter of a local physician kept the doctor and his wife up nights with her crying.

In desperation, Dr. Robert Horton designed a pocket-sized gadget which emits a low, steady hum that lulls his baby to sleep almost every time he places it in her crib.

The battery-operated buzzer, called "Slumber Tone," has been patented and is going into production after being tested on hundreds of Minnesota mites.

"Babies seem to be soothed," Dr. Horton explained, "because Slumber Tone gives the same sort of hum that they must hear for all the months they are waiting to be born. In the mother, the little buzzing sound comes from the circulation of her blood; in my invention, it comes from a battery and transistor."

Dr. Horton said his buzzer is most effective with cry-babies of six months and under, although there are exceptions who won't be quieted by it.

For the unfortunate parents of such infants, the distributor, Trundle Bundle of Duluth, offers to refund the $10.95 selling price on a 10-day guarantee.

Even if your automatic washer is located in your kitchen, the hot water source can still be installed just a short pipe run from it.

Beware Of [Wrong] Dog, French Fashion Decrees

By IRENE FERRIS

PARIS — (WNS) — The fashionable woman of France now chooses her dog as carefully and tastefully as she selects her Dior gown.

"Never be seen with a dog who is unbecomingly to you," advised pretty Christiane Borel, the canine fashion authority.

Even if the pooch is thoroughbred and is the breed that is the height of this year's fashion, you must learn to pass him up if he does not go with your particular brand of beauty and chic.

"There is too much fashion conformity among Paris dog owners," complained the tall, panther-eyed blonde. "If you 'chien' is merely high fashion this season, what are you going to do with him when he goes out of style next year?"

Many Frenchwomen have been faced with this question in recent seasons. By the time they had discarded their famous French poodles for the newer-fashioned, low-slung dachshunds, the sausage-shaped dogs had gone out of style and were replaced by the latest rage, the tiny toy pooch.

"The right dog with the wrong woman can be very unattractive, look ridiculous and lead to inferiority complexes," warned Mlle. Borel, who suggested these general rules:

1. A tall, thin woman looks best with a long, large dog.
2. A short, plump lady should beware of squatty dogs.
3. A Pekinese should never be carried by a woman who looks like a larger replica of the dog.
4. Rule No. 3 also applies to bulldogs, dachshunds, cocker spaniels, chows and chihuahuas.

5. A petite, properly-shaped girl goes well with dogs of any size, but she, too, must be careful that their colors do not clash. Once she has selected the dog that suits her type, the Parisienne gets to work to dress and collar her pet with the same chic she uses for herself.

"Gold for fall and winter 1961 is the new craze among the doggy sets," reported the fashion expert. "It is the definite successor to the lavenders and purples of last year."

The canine gold rush fits in with mistress's gold knit dresses, gold braid and gilt chain girdles.

"Even women who are too conservative to wear gold anywhere except in their teeth are putting the Midas touch on their fashionably tiny dogs."

Swank jewelry shops on the Rue de la Paix show identity tags in 14-karat gold for dogs who can afford it.

Department stores have rows of gilt accessories for pups who want to put on the dog without spending important money. Eighty per cent of the dog collars at Bon Marche are in gilt and can be had for as little as three dollars.

Most dazzling are wide collars of gold metal mesh, side buckled and plush lined. They range in size from Chihuahua to Great Dane, evidence that they are not for sissies only.

Elegant dogs like the new collars of real gold kid, lined in soft white calf. The same collar comes set with fake furs but begins to look a bit overdone.

Collars for tiny dogs are made of braided strips of gilt leather with a filigree bell dangling. Leashes are gilded, too.

The new dog coats of fet or wool are bound in gold braid. Dog sweaters are made of colored wool with a goldish lurex thread.

Since knitting-wool department stores are full of glittering mixtures combining lurex and wool, they are being swamped by ladies keen to knot matching sweaters for themselves and their dogs, a kind of "his-and-her" outfit.

Women who have no dogs are doing the next best thing by taking out the gold craze on their husbands.

Milord on the Avenue de l'Opera shows men's gold-bronze raincoats and pullover sweaters. Faivret has the odd vest in burnished gold and copper-gold lame.

And black silk or nylon pajamas at Alonzo have two stripes of gold braid down the leg plus a gilt crest and coat of arms hand-embroidered on the breast pocket.

So whether the pet is a dog or a man, he is up-to-date on the gold standard in France.

Recommendation For Drying Hair

To dry hair after shampooing, try covering your squeaky-clean locks with a close-fitting, reversible cap made of two layers of terry cloth.

The trick is to use one side to mop up your wet hair, reversing the cap so its dry side will cover your curls. This two-in-one cap—in white, rose, yellow, or blue—can be machine-laundered after each use.

Student Prexy Is Among Youths Honored By Club

Billy James, Rose High senior, is one of three outstanding students at the high school selected for special recognition during Youth Appreciation Week.

The 17-year-old president of the Rose High student body was selected by the Greenville Optimist Club after conferring with school officials.

James, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. James of 402 Library St., is one of Pitt County's two nominees for a John Motley Morehead scholarship for four years' study at the University of North Carolina.

Elected last spring by the student body as its president, James serves as president of the school's student government organization.

Scholastically, James ranks near the top of his class, having maintained a grade average of higher than 90. He is a member of the Haskett Chapter of the National Honor Society.

James is the field general of Coach Bud Phillips' Rose High Phantoms who clash with Roxboro tomorrow for Eastern football honors. He is also a stand-out performer for the school's basketball and baseball squads.

In addition to his candidacy for the Morehead Scholarship, other scholarship committees are considering James. His football and scholastic ability have attracted interests from scholarship committees from Duke University and from N. C. State College, according to school officials.

At the suggestion of school officials, the local Optimist Club selected for special recognition during this week the presidents of the Rose High student body, senior class and National Honor Society.

Official Says Up To Individual To Protect Self

DETROIT (AP)—It is up to the individual to provide fallout protection for his family in the event of a nuclear disaster, an administration official said Wednesday.

"With certain obvious exceptions it is the view of the federal government that people should provide fallout protection for their families," said John E. Cosgrove, Cosgrove, assistant director of the Office of Emergency Planning, addressed a session of a White House regional conference, which concluded Wednesday night.

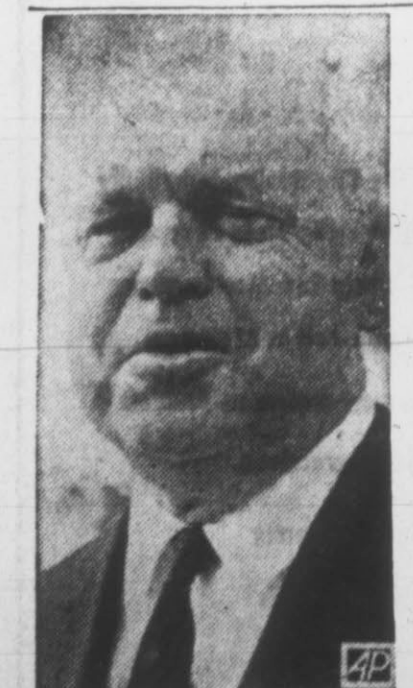

He added that the government's position did not rule out community, neighborhood or state action in providing fallout protection.

Asked if a person should arm himself to prevent a neighbor from getting into his shelter, Cosgrove said "the federal government does not favor shooting one's neighbor. Experience in war and disasters has shown that people are very cooperative."

AID FOR ETHIOPIA

MOSCOW (AP)—Tass, the Soviet news agency reported today that Soviet technicians soon will begin construction of an oil refinery for Ethiopia at the Red Sea port of Assab. The news agency said the refinery would have a capacity of 500,000 tons a year.

The popular song "On the Banks of the Wabash" was written by Paul Dresser, brother of the novelist Theodore Dreiser.

Five Books About Gable On Market

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Clark Gable, who died a year ago today, already is the subject of four printed biographies.

The authors are his widow, his ex-secretary and two professional biographers.

"Clark Gable — A Personal Portrait" (Prentice-Hall, $3.95) bears the by-line of Kathleen Gable, last of the star's five wives. It is indeed personal, perhaps too much so for some readers. Others will find it rewarding for a view of Gable's final years.

The tone is set on the first page: "I needed all of Clark's courage and strength that night I left his hospital room for the last time. They had told me he was gone. But, of course, I tried to hold onto him. Heartstricken, I wouldn't let go. For two hours I held him in my arms."

"Finally, I did what my husband would have expected me to do—I faced up to it. Pa was gone. I touched his cold face with my hand, in a last farewell, and I walked out of the room."

Another intimate view is offered in "Dear Mr. G—" (Little, Brown, $4.95) by Jean Garceau with Inez Cocke. Miss Garceau was employed by Gable for 21 years, and her book proves that a man can be a hero to his own secretary.

She had been Carole Lombard's secretary, and it is in the Lombard marriage to Gable that she is most illuminating:

"Clark's bedroom was done in beige and brown, with quilted beige wallpaper, a large green couch and attractive green chintz curtains."

Drs. Bing And Carter To Attend State Meetings

Dr. Kenneth Bing, Director of the Department of Industrial Arts, and Dr. Ed J. Carter, Director of Graduate Studies, at East Carolina College will attend meetings of committees, working on a state-level study of teacher-education programs.

Dr. Bing will be at State College, Raleigh, November 20, for discussion among members of the Committee on Industrial Arts. Guidelines in developing a state program of teacher education in this area will be formulated. Dr. Ivan Hostetter, Director of the Industrial Arts Department at State College, will act as chairman of the meeting.

Serving on the Committee on Secondary Education, Dr. Carter will meet with other members of the group at the University of North Carolina December 11. With Dr. Sam Holton of the School of Education at the University as chairman, those present will discuss programs in teacher education in the various subject matter areas in secondary schools of the state.

The study now in progress in North Carolina is expected to provide a new approach to teacher education and certification in the state.

Others from East Carolina who are serving on committees assisting in the study are Dean Robert L. Holt, general education; Dean Emer R. Browning of the School of Business, business; and Dr. John D. Ebbs of the English Department, English.

Lost Money In Going To Court

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—When the government offered a Hardinsburg couple $17,500 for about 90 acres of their land, they went to court. It cost them $500.

A federal district court jury Wednesday awarded Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Jarboe $17,000 for the land, needed by the federal government for use in construction of the Rough River reservoir flood control project.

Replacement For Molotov Named

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—The Soviet Union today appointed Alexander I. Alexandrov to replace former Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov temporarily at the East-West International Atomic Energy Agency.

This was regarded as a strong indication that Molotov would not return to Vienna. He was Soviet IAEA representative until his denunciation by Soviet Premier Khrushchev at the Moscow Communist party congress. He returned to Moscow Sunday.

The Soviets told the agency Alexandrov would head the Soviet mission for the time being. He had been Molotov's deputy since July 1960.

"We are fortunate to have a man of Mr. Eckard's experience and capability associated with us," Howard said. "He has had more than ten years of experience in loan administration and is well-qualified for his new post."

Eckard has been associated with Wachovia since 1948. He was elected to the official staff in 1954 and advanced to vice president in 1956. He comes here from Charlotte.

A native of Burke County, he is a graduate of Lenoir Rhyne College with a degree in business administration. During World War II he served in the Pacific as a Lieutenant in the Marine Air Corps.

Active in civic life, he was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Lion's Club and the American Institute of Banking in Charlotte. He is also a member of Robert Morris Associates, national organization of bank credit officers, and a member of Calvary Methodist Church.

Mrs. Eckard and their two children, a daughter 15 and a son 13, plan to join him here in the near future.

Attend Conference

RALEIGH—The North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association will hold its fifth annual working conference tomorrow at the Sir Walter Hotel here.

Nearly 300 dealers and finance company officials from throughout the state are expected for the all-day meeting which will feature discussions on business management and sales promotion. It will also feature a seminar on changes in laws affecting the automobile dealer made during the 1961 session of the N. C. General Assembly.

Attending the meeting from this area are: Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Wagner of Wagner-Waldrop Motors, Inc.; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jenkins of Jenkins Motor Co.; Julian White, Jr., and Callie R. Williams of White Chevrolet Co., Inc.; Corey Stokes and Mrs. Louis Chauncey of S and E Motor Service, Inc., Ayden.

Wagner is director of District 20 and Jenkins is area chairman of Pitt County.

WHITEWALL SILO—Farmer Lowell Fisher of the Fairmont area in southwestern Minnesota has found a novel use for old car tires. He's collected more than 300 of them to hold down a plastic tarp over his 150-foot long pile of corn silage. The tarp is used to prevent spoilage. (AP Wirephoto)

Seek Bibles To Combat Atheism

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Bible Society has been asked to set aside $400,000 to buy and distribute Bibles to overseas areas where communism, atheistic literature is being passed out.

The society's council, at the close of its annual meeting Wednesday, urged the expenditure, adding: "All over the world people are choosing either atheism, materialism, or the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Millions may choose Christianity if we can reach them with copies of manuscripts in their own languages." The society represents 55 denominations of the Protestant Church.

Fired For His Practical Lesson

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—

Substitute teacher Ernest Bury, 30, thought the most scientific way to demonstrate the evils of tobacco to eight graders would be to let them puff a cigarette.

Bury, who doesn't smoke, borrowed a cigarette from a student at Jonas Salk School and suggested each child take a puff.

About half the class of 30 tried it. One girl got queasy and complained to the principal, who called the superintendent, Fred J. Kiesel. He fired Bury.

"Allowing youngsters to smoke is certainly contrary to the teaching of morals to children and is deeply regretted," said Kiesel. "I was simply thinking as a scientist," Bury said.

CHAPTER 17

The day began much as Inspector Menendes predicted it would.

Even before he arrived two reporters from the States were waiting on the bench at the police station. They were both unshaven and had obviously slept in their clothes.

A number of telephone calls, all marked "urgent" or "extremely urgent," had accumulated at the switchboard. The phones kept ringing.

The commandant had conveniently taken the day off to attend a vaguely identified "civic conference." The lieutenant in charge didn't know what to do with the calls and kept referring them back to the switchboard. The atmosphere in the station was guarded.

Sergeant Roberto was extremely nervous. He was afraid that the reporters would corner him, and he didn't know what to say. Like the rest of the policemen on duty he studiously ignored them.

Perched on the edge of the police desk where he could see the door, he tried to appear unconcerned. Because the sergeant was there, the office at the desk could not take his typewriter out, and he looked mildly annoyed although he said nothing.

At his usual hour, as if today were no different from any other day, the inspector came through the large, barnlike front door. He had dressed with extra care. His stiff, black hair was brushed and shining with oil, his brown suit carefully pressed, his shoes highly shined. He was wearing a starched, white shirt and above the stiff collar his face looked more forbidding than ever.

Except for the efforts he had made with his appearance there was no indication that he was braced for a difficult day. He was, however, well prepared. In his pocket was a skillfully edited press release.

The idea of writing it had come to him the evening before as he sat at the kitchen table telling Theresa about the Randalls' murder. She had greeted him warmly. The storm he had expected had apparently blown over and she was insatiable for details.

After he had given her the barest outline he was hard pressed to avoid those questions which touched on the sensitive areas of his investigation. So he dwelt on the technical facts, the approximate speed at which the Randalls were traveling, the angle at which the car hit the rocks, the police routine that uncovered the missing ring, the detailed description that had been given to the pawnshops.

He told her everything and nothing. He filled his story with so many irrelevant details that Theresa it seemed complete, and it was from this story that he designed his misleading report.

On the surface it appeared to have been conscientiously compiled, but in reality most of the essentials were missing. It failed to pinpoint the exact location of the accident or the proximity of the Indian village. It omitted any mention of the recovered bullets.

Instead, it emphasized that pawnshops throughout Mexico had been alerted and implied that it was through one of these that the police shortly expected to make an arrest.

This expurgated version of the investigation the inspector intended to make public. It probably would not stand an informed scrutiny, but he hoped it would shield his real objectives.

With ponderous dignity he walked past the reporters to the police desk and handed the officer the handwritten report. "Have some copies made for the press." His manner was so authoritative, brusque, that the officer instinctively jumped to attention. He only nodded to Sergeant Roberto, who, not knowing what else to do, followed the inspector across the station toward the courtyard that led to the government offices.

"There's a call coming in for you, Inspector Menendes," the switchboard operator shouted after him. "It's from Mexico City."

But the inspector did not seem to hear him.

The reporters did, however. As soon as they were aware that this was the Inspector Menendes, for whom they had been waiting, they ran after him. They overtook him in the heat of the courtyard, displaying their press cards.

Without stopping, the inspector courteously acknowledged their presence.

It might have been rehearsed. The deliberate tread, the concentrated manner in which he cocked his head as if he were either slightly deaf or had only limited command of the English language.

When the reporters raised their voices the sergeant was secretly amused. He glanced at the inspector, noticed his air of bland attention as if he were trying to understand what the shouting was about.

The barrage of questions followed a pattern which was to become a familiar one in the succeeding hours.

"Exactly where did the murder take place?" "At what time?" "Why did the police think it was an accident?" "What sort of gun fired the shot?" "What steps are being taken to find the murderer?"

The inspector answered only those questions he wished to hear; the others he glossed over evasively. He was, however, patiently co-operative until one of the men asked, "What is the government doing to protect tourists?"

It was then that the characteristic flash of anger, which had so frequently overawed the sergeant, revealed itself. The inspector stopped abruptly. He seemed suddenly remote, imposing.

"Our government is concerned with the safety of everyone within our borders." His cold voice, his stilted use of the English language made the words sound like an official pronouncement. "We deeply regret the unfortunate death of the Randalls, but it is, after all, an isolated instance of violence."

It was incongruous to listen to him and watch him. As if he had assumed an extra dimension the inspector seemed awesome and unapproachable, drawn on a scale different from that of other men.

Even the reporters who were accustomed to rebuffs were reduced to speechlessness. When he started walking again they still followed, but they had no further questions to ask him.

With silent admiration Sergeant

Roberto watched the subtle way in which Inspector Menendes gained control of the situation. He was seeing the inspector with new eyes, wondering how much of the scene had been planned, how much had happened naturally.

Outside the office door the inspector hesitated briefly. He gave the men one of his rare, charming smiles. "I'm sorry, Senores, I have told you all I can. You will find a detailed report at the police desk. Now, if you will excuse me, my telephone is ringing."

He brushed past the newsmen into the office, and the sergeant, still not certain what was expected of him, went after him.

Inspector Menendes considers what he has learned about the Randall murders and delivers an ultimatum. Continue the story tomorrow.

Architecture Is Marking Change

HONOLULU (AP) — Architecture is playing a leading role in Japan's social passage "from feudalism to industrialization," an American architect believes.

Antonin Raymond, who first went to Japan in 1919 to assist the late Frank Lloyd Wright in designing Tokyo's Imperial Hotel, told a conference of architects in Honolulu:

"Structures in Japan are huge today. The architects who design these buildings seem to be carried away by a vision of permanence, solidity, power and enormity of scale as an end in itself."

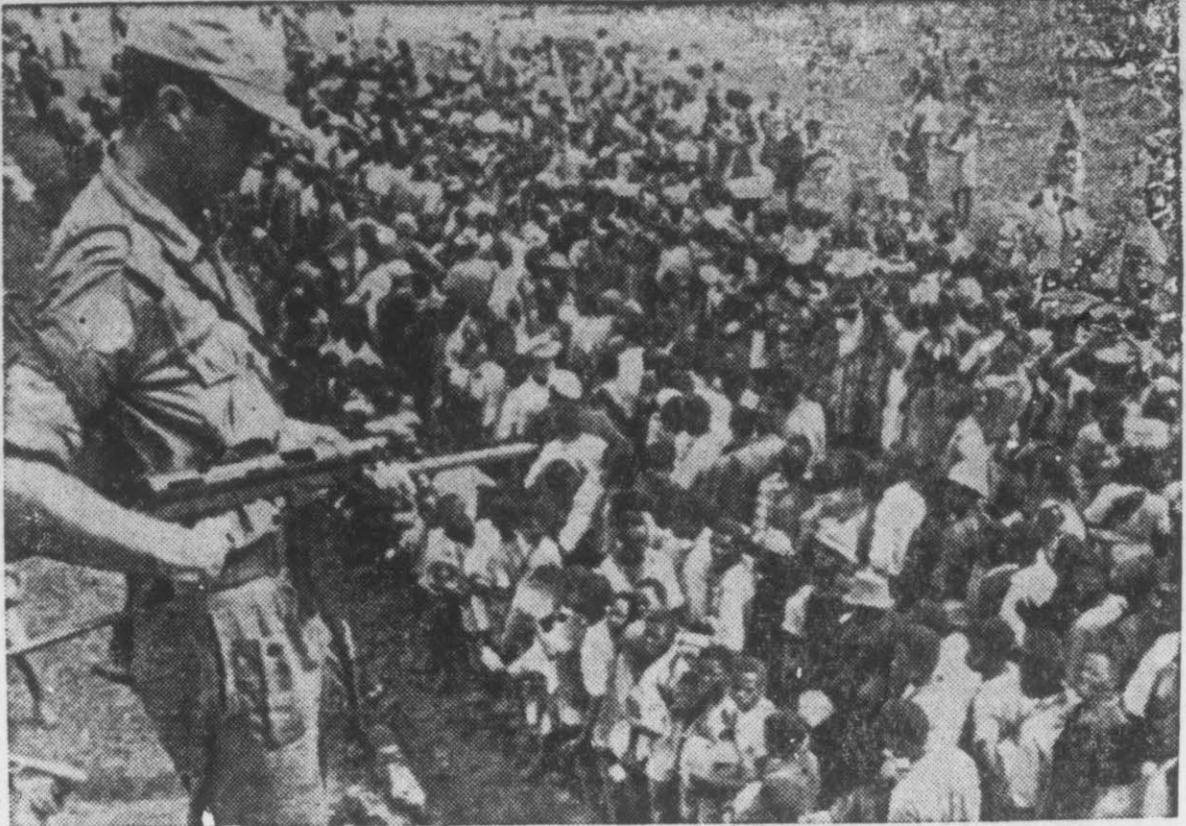

"They have opened the door for a number of social changes in Japan and have helped bring the country into the industrial age."

Raymond has designed a number of buildings in Tokyo, including the U. S. Embassy, St. Luke's Hospital, Women's Christian College, St. Anselm's Church and Gunman Music Hall.

Honeymooner Is All Decked Out

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A group of Navy wives pooled money to buy a leather case which held 15 decks of playing cards and scoreboards, to be used at their monthly card party at Admiral Kidd Officers Club.

At one meeting, they found a leather case full of men's clothes. Seems an officer had left for his honeymoon—with the wrong valise.

Pall Of Gloom Is Cast Over Little Town Of Bonham

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
BONHAM, Tex. (AP) — The principal product of Bonham is "Mr. Sam."

And Sam Rayburn is dead of cancer. A pall hangs over Bonham, and the people who knew him, loved him and honored him in his lifetime. That takes in just about everybody in Bonham except the babies who have been born in the small yellow-brick hospital where the life of the speaker of the House has been ebbing away.

This is a busy little city of 7,000 without anything to distinguish it from other little Western or Midwestern cities other than the fact that it is the home town of Rayburn. Where Bonham is known around the nation, that is what it is known for.

The most impressive buildings are the First Baptist Church and beautiful, white marble Rayburn Library. The library is tucked into a 4-acre park on a small rise at the west edge of town. It houses the papers and mementos Rayburn has gathered in half a century of public service. Friends and admirers paid for it. The cost was a half million dollars.

Bonham is a typical country seat town, built around the courthouse square. The homes are mostly frame, mostly white, mostly of turn-of-the-century vintage, give or take a few years. But there is a growing colony of modern ranchhouse type homes that echo the modern mode of the two banks and the imposing First Baptist Church. A standpipe—a huge silvery water tank on six spindly legs—looks down on the town. "Bonham" is painted big and black on the tank—and scrawled with "seniors '60," which last year's high school graduates left behind.

A cotton textile mill employing 200 is Bonham's biggest industry. So the town's economy is tied largely to agriculture and the cotton, beef, corn, peanuts and hay from the rich, black dirt of the rolling countryside.

The speaker himself has a 700-acre beef cattle ranch 15 miles to the northeast. His colonial style, white frame home, with the green shutters and the porch and four tall columns across the front, lies two miles west of the courthouse—on down the highway past the Rayburn Library.

This, then, is Bonham, the place which has been home to the Tennessee-born Rayburn for nearly all his 70 years; the place where he wanted to spend his final days among his friends.

Mr. Sam has done that. And inside the library, on plaques and testimonials, there are formal tributes that reveal something of what these friends think of Sam Rayburn. A 1960 plaque proclaims that it was "presented to Texas' most beloved citizen." One awarded this year by the Texas-Oklahoma Fair went to the "grand champion for the people all the time."

motors and boats place on East 4th street, there is another plaque. This is a personal one in hand printed letters, over the desk of a man who has known Rayburn for years and years.

It says: "Speaker Sam Rayburn has been speaker of the House twice as long as any other person in history. June 12, 1961."

Charlie Watson will miss Speaker Sam. So will almost everyone else in Bonham.

"We're all just grieving our heads off," said J. G. Magouirk, the mayor and hotel proprietor.

"I've been very close to him for 40 years. I couldn't make my estimate of him big enough. We're just sitting here waiting. We hate it that it had to come."

"I don't think I ever saw him so sad that he'd say anything unkind about anyone."

Perhaps even more revealing of how Bonham feels about its greatest citizen is the sort of hush that has fallen over ordinary people. Men on the way to work, women on the way to the supermarket, stopped one another on the corner or come up to reporters keeping watch outside the hospital. They had one soft-voiced question: "How is Mr. Sam now?" You'd have to hunt hard, and peripat with complete futility, for someone who doesn't like the speaker. And you'd have to hunt hard at all for those for whom he has done something. Many remark approvingly that Mr. Sam but out at Charlie Watson's has treated everyone as equals.

whether they are whites, Negroes or Mexicans. Farmer Ray Stroud put it this way: "Just a regular guy. He treated everybody the same. Every time you met him, he was the same guy. It's gonna be a blow to Bonham when he goes. They can't replace him."

WOULDN'T THIS GET YOUR GOAT—No wonder the bewhiskered goat seems to wear an apprehensive look. That man-eating tiger might turn out to be a goat-eating cat. The circus act in Rome has been without incident so far. (AP Wirephoto)

TB Chest Clinic And X-Ray Clinics Underway

The tuberculosis chest clinic and the expanded X-ray clinics got underway this week at the Pitt County Health Department.

The chest clinics are held each second Monday a month at the Health Department. The X-ray clinics have been held on Wednesdays by the Health Department, but efforts of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association have provided that the X-ray clinic also include Monday mornings.

Dr. John Futrell, Pitt health director, noted that the Tuberculosis Association had been concerned with the TB problem and had seen fit to provide the extra half day of the clinic. Dr. Futrell stated that the tuberculosis problem in Pitt County "has not been cured yet." Through the chest clinics it is possible to follow discharged patients, counsel in further rehabilitation and evaluate drug therapy of patients.

People above the age of 40 have been urged to have yearly chest X-rays, particularly those people who are in the high incidence group. Persons over 25 who are admitted to hospitals should also have the X-rays, plus the ones under 25 who are admitted except in certain select cases in which the physician feels it is not in any way necessary, Dr. Futrell advised.

In the school health program which affects children, Dr. Futrell noted that knowledge learned from tuberculin skin tests administered last year has led health officials to believe they would be highly beneficial if held again for first graders and are expanded to include ninth graders.

The health director also noted that prior to this month, the Pitt County Health Department did not have facilities to protect the reproductive system in giving chest X-rays, but the department has that protection now.

Many of the practicing physicians have X-ray units and can provide advantages to their patients. X-rays taken at the health department primarily are for tuberculosis, pre-marital examinations, food handlers and domestic help, Dr. Futrell stated.

Complete Plans For Weekend Of 'Gold-Digging'

Plans for this weekend's "gold-digging" expedition for Pitt District Boy Scouts were reported complete today by district officials. They indicated some 300 Scouts and adults would participate in Saturday's "Gold Rush," the most elaborate event on the District's schedule this year.

The "Gold Rush" program will get underway at 9 a.m. Saturday at "Dry Gulch and Dry Gulch Creek" (the campsite of Greenville Troop 340 east of Greenville).

The program includes more than five hours set aside for digging gold (painted rocks) before a barbecue supper at 4 p.m.

At 5 o'clock, the scouts will conduct their fall roundup ceremony. Scouts who have met recruitment quotas will be guests at the Saturday night football game in College Stadium between East Carolina and Wofford.

During the five-hour "Gold Rush," the scouts will have the opportunity to sustain themselves by visits to the Dry Gulch Saloon (stocked with candy, drinks and hot dogs). They can purchase refreshments with the gold they dig.

Hartford Mayor Is Perfect Host

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Mayor Dominick J. DeLuca has a system for fixing parking tickets for other people—he pays them himself.

He tells people at every state and national convention he addresses that he'll take care of any tickets they get in Hartford. He says he sympathizes with their parking problems.

He figures the policy has cost him more than $140 since he put it into effect last January.

Half Of College Students Work

WALESKA, Ga. (AP) — The president of Reinhardt College, James Rowland Burgess Jr., says he feels that "any good student who's willing to work for his education" should be able to attend the Methodist-supported institution in the north Georgia hills.

Almost half the 286 students are working their way through Reinhardt this year, cooking, waiting on table, acting as secretaries and welding dustpans and mops after classes.

The state of Texas has 254 counties ranging in size from Brewster (6,208 square miles) to Rockwall (147 square miles).

By MILES A. SMITH

Associated Press Arts Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Rembrandt's masterpiece "Aristotle Contemplating the Bust of Homer" shortly will go on exhibition at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, which Wednesday night bid it in for $2.3 million—the highest known price for a single painting.

The artist got 500 florins for it, the modern equivalent for that being $7,800.

And the National Gallery in Washington, which broke the record for auction prices for the second time in the evening, will display Fragonard's magnificently beautiful "La Lisieuse," a picture of a young woman reading. The price was $875,000.

It was a record-topping night at the Parke-Bernet Galleries as 24 old masters brought $4,679,250. They were from the collection of Alfred W. Erickson, New York advertising man who died in 1936, and his widow Anna, who died last February. The auction took just under an hour.

There is no way of proving or disproving how much one painting might have in a private transaction at some point in his history. But even guesses and rumors seldom have gone above $1 million to $1½ million. It never has been denied that when the late Andrew Mellon—whose pictures now are in the National Gallery—paid the Russian government $21 million for seven pictures in 1932, Raphael's Alba Madonna was rated at a little more than $1.1 million.

The record for a collection at auction was $2,186,000 for seven French moderns in London in 1958.

Leslie A. Hyam, Parke-Bernet president, said that so far as anyone in the art world could tell, the "Aristotle" price was by far the greatest figure ever achieved. He said the Fragonard brought two or three times more than any previous Fragonard.

The "Aristotle," 56½ by 53½ inches, shows the philosopher garbed in dark robes, a golden yellow mantle and a broad, black hat. He stands with his hand on the bust of the poet. It is signed and dated 1653.

A private collector living in New York, whose name was not announced, got the third most valuable painting in the sale. It was the early Venetian Carlo Crivelli's "Madonna and Child" of 1472, the central panel of a polyptych. Other panels are in the Cleveland Museum of Art, the Brooklyn Museum and the Metropolitan, which has two.

Not all the Erickson paintings will remain in America. A London dealer, Edward J. Speelman, paid $180,000 for another fine Rembrandt, "Portrait of an Old Man." A third Rembrandt, a portrait of Prince Frederick of Orange, went for $110,000 to the New York dealer, M. Knoedler & Co. The London dealers Thomas Agnew & Sons paid $105,000 for a portrait of Princess Sibylle of Cleves by Lucas Cranach the Elder and $60,000 for a Raeburn portrait of Quintin MacAdam as a boy.

The Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh got the important Perugino, painted by Raphael's teacher, "Saint Augustine with Members of the Confraternity of Perugia," paying $125,000, and carried off a Franz Hals, "Man with a Heron," for $145,000. A Pittsburgh private collector paid $35,000 for a Holbein portrait of Sir George Nevill.

It was announced that the New York dealers Rosenberg and Stiebel were the second highest bidders on both the "Aristotle" and the Fragonard.

There was speculation that they might have been serving as agents for a private collector, such as the Ford family of Detroit. But after the sale Hyam said he believed they were acting for "a great museum." Speculation on that point included such names as the Cleveland Museum of Art.

The opening bid was $1 million, and auctioneer Louis J. Maron said it came from a private collector "over on Park Avenue."

Woodpecker Had Self-Reliance

HEPHZIBAH, Ga. (AP) — A determined woodpecker has pecked his way to freedom, but it took him 36 hours.

The woodpecker fell inside a 30-foot wooden column on the front porch of Randolph Dunbar's home. Some time later the Dunbars heard a big racket going on inside the column.

Finally a small hole appeared, and it gradually grew larger until the bird squeezed through and flew off. He had tunneled through more than two inches of wood.

By PROF. WILLARD F. LIBBY

The cheapest, most sensible shelter is the community or neighborhood type accommodating 50 to 100 persons or more.

You and neighbors can build one for about $100 per family member. This could well be five to 10 times less than building an equally effective individual family shelter. The larger the community shelter, the cheaper it is.

Few people remember that just such a community shelter was actually tested in Nevada a few years, virtually under an A-bomb, with two dozen men inside.

The shelter "rocked like a ship," they said, but they and the shelter came through the blast and fallout in perfect shape.

And few Americans realize that the Soviets are far, far ahead of us in building shelters especially of the type for 100 persons or more.

Expert students of Russia's civil defense vouch for this, despite Madame Khrushchev's recent statement that the Soviet Union was not building shelters. To the contrary, the Soviet program even provides for compulsory training in defense and survival to make nuclear war less costly in human lives.

Actual Test Made

The group shelter tested in Nevada—the only shelter ever subjected in this country at least to actual bomb test—was a quonset hut type of structure, a multipiece corrugated steel arch set on a concrete slab, and placed in the ground.

Its top came about level with the edge of the hole; it was covered with several feet of dirt.

Atomic Energy Commission scientists and technicians stayed inside it while an A-bomb, about equal in power to the one that fell at Hiroshima, was set off atop a tower about one mile away. This community shelter was equipped with bunks (one bed for each two persons), dining and recreation room, toilets, an antenna and periscope, air intake and filter, air exhaust vent, water supply and food stocks, a gasoline-driven electric generator, oxygen supply, and an emergency sand-filled exit, among other items.

Built for the AEC at a cost of $2,500, it was designed to withstand blast pressure of 35 pounds per square inch, and to reduce the intensity of fallout radiation about 10,000-fold from the immediate area above the shelter.

It can sustain 100 persons for 14 days to a month. All 100 of them could get inside the shelter within five minutes by filing in quickly. It can be completely buttoned up or sealed for three hours—as it might be in a firestorm—or for a week when the outside air is used.

Price Tag $5,000

Built privately, this shelter might cost about $5,000 now if undertaken by a neighborhood group. The estimate of $5,000 includes equipping it with radiation meters and other essential equipment. Beyond that, the neighbors would still have to contribute food, blankets and other supplies.

Such a community shelter would be very effective, and far more comfortable than the economical poor man's shelter which is designed solely to keep you alive.

This type of shelter could also be used in ordinary times as a clubhouse, recreation hall or meeting place for social functions. It certainly need not be considered an emergency building in case of attack.

Building it involves selecting and buying a site, meeting zoning requirements, getting approval of the Civil Defense Office, perhaps a bank loan, and engaging a reliable contractor. Designs for community shelters are available from your local office of Civil Defense.

Butte Is Fine Fish Fossil Bed

FOSSIL, Wyo. (AP) — Efforts are under way to establish a national monument here commemorating what may be the best fish fossil bed in the world.

State geologist Horace D. Thomas said the 700-foot butte which contains the fossils once was at least 1,000 feet under water. Dead fish settled at the bottom and were left undisturbed because scavenger fish could not live in such deep water. The fish were then buried in countless layers of mud.

Some fish extracted from the butte are believed to have lived 50 million years ago at the beginning of the mammal age. One of the extracted fish was bought by Eisenhower last year as a gift for Japanese Emperor Hirohito.

Phants Meet Roxboro For Playoff Game Friday Night

TALKING IT OVER . . . Phantom Co-Captains Russell Fields (left) and Wayne Sumrell (center) discuss some of the plays to be used Friday night with Coach Bud Phillips. The winner of the Greenville-Roxboro game will meet the winner of the Sanford-Clinton game next week.

(Reflector Staff Photo)

Ayden To Meet Rohanen For Eastern Single A Title

AYDEN — Ayden's Coastal Conference champion football team will meet the winner of the first playoff game last Saturday night with Camp Lejeune take on Rohanen High School of Rockingham tomorrow night in the final playoff game of the season on the Mount Olive High School field at 8 o'clock.

Coach Stuart Tripp's Tornadoes go into the game Friday night with a 10-0 season record behind them and a victory in the first playoff game. This is the second year in a row that the Ayden eleven has won the conference championship. However, last year they were unable to win both playoff games.

Rohanen Had 8-2 Record

The Rohanen squad, coached by Al Locket, had an 8-2 record during the regular season. The two games they lost were non-conference contests with 3-A schools, Rockingham and Wadesboro. They won their first playoff game last week over Mount Olive 20-13.

Rohanen is also winner of its conference for the second year in a row as is Ayden. Last year they were defeated in the first round of the playoffs by James Kenan High School of Warsaw. James Kenan went on to win the single A title by defeating Ayden for the Eastern Championship last year.

Allowed Seven Touchdowns

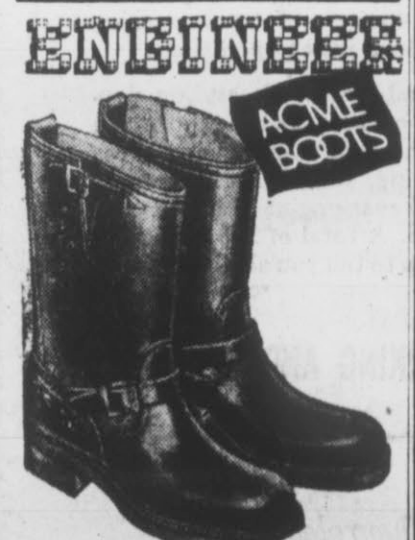

So far this season the powerful Ayden defense has allowed only seven touchdowns. Four of these came on passes and pass interceptions. Seven of the Ayden victories were shutouts.

Both Ayden and Rohanen have had five players picked for All-Conference honors. However, the Rohanen boys were selected for an All-County team which also included two 3-A schools.

Coach Tripp said today that his team is in good physical shape for the game tomorrow night with the possible exception of Bud McLawhorn, the defensive safety, who was injured in the Bath game two weeks ago.

A Small Team

The Rohanen coach said that he has a small team, but they have a lot of desire. "After scouting Ayden last week I think they have us outweighed considerably," Locket said. He also noted that the Tornadoes appeared to have a "real good" ball club.

"5 Ways To A Perfect Fit"
At 5 Points, Greenville, N. C.

The lineup for Ayden will be about the same as it has been all season. The backfield will consist of William Edwards at fullback, Tommy Dunn at quarterback with Joe Harrington and Rudolph Cannon taking care of the halfback positions. Edwards and Cannon were among the five All-Conference selections from the Tornado squad.

Five Seniors In Line

The Tornado line is made up of mostly seniors with the exception of two boys. Coach Tripp said that these five have been the backbone of the team all year. The starting line for tomorrow night will consist of Emmitt Gibson at left end, Jackie Collins at left tackle and Artie McGlohon at left guard. Heading up the line at center will be Joe Tripp. On the right side of the line will be Robert Cannon at guard, Carroll McLawhorn at tackle and Clem McLawhorn at right end.

The All-Conference picks from the Ayden line are Carroll McLawhorn, Artie McGlohon and Clem McLawhorn.

Rohanen In Good Shape

Coach Locket said that his team is about as ready physically as it has been all year. "We are at full strength," he said. The starting backfield for the Rohanen eleven consists of Charles Jenkins at quarterback, Daryl Davis at left half, George Smith at right half and Randy Davis at fullback. Jenkins and D. Davis are both on the All-County team.

The All-County picks from the line are Long, Oliver and Dutton.

Eric Guerin and Warren Mehrtens won successive runnings of the Colonial Handicap at Garden State, Camden, N. J. Guerin won both ends of the 1946 race which was held in two divisions.

Reflector Sports Writer

Friday night the Rose High Phantoms will represent the Northeastern Conference in a 3-A playoff game with Roxboro, champions of the North Central Conference, in the East Carolina Stadium at 8 o'clock.

The local club won the right to meet the Roxboro team after defeating Roanoke Rapids last Friday night 48-7 in the final conference game of the season. Coach Bud Phillips' boys finished the season with a 9-1 record. The only loss was a conference game to last year's champions, Tarboro.

Rockets Undeclared

Coach John Morris' Roxboro Rockets came to Greenville for the playoff game with an undefeated season behind them. They have also had a one week rest since their last regular season contest. The entire Rocket coaching staff scouted the Phantoms last week at Roanoke Rapids.

The Phantom head coach has been working his boys hard all week in preparation for the coming contest. The second unit has been running what is thought to be the Roxboro offense for the first string Phantom defense during practice sessions this week.

Record Speaks For Itself

In commenting on the Roxboro club Phillips said that their record sort of speaks for itself. Neither team has played the same two squads during the regular season so there is no way to compare the two, the coach said. However, Phillips added that the Rocket line is big and probably averages over 200 pounds.

The veteran Greenville skipper also noted that Roxboro is especially good on defense. "They have won most of their games with their outstanding defense," he said. By winning games with a defensive unit, Phillips meant that they can take advantage of another team's mistakes. They are excellent pass interceptors, fumble recoverers and can do a fair job of blocking punts.

Phants Have Offensive Edge

While it is believed that the Roxboro team has a better defensive unit, the Greenville eleven has an edge over them where offense is concerned. The Phantoms have scored a total of 34 touchdowns this year for 204 points and added about 30 extra points to that. They have allowed 15 touchdowns during the year. Roxboro has allowed seven touchdowns by their opponents and made 24 themselves.

When the two clubs meet this week the Rockets will be trying to break a jinx. They have never been able to go beyond the first playoff game in football. On the other hand, this is the first time a Greenville High School football team has had a chance to appear in the playoffs.

Good Physical Shape

Phillips said today that his boys really want to win this one and that spirit is no problem. Most of the Greenville players are in good physical shape with the exception of reserve quarterback Dale Gidley who suffered a dislocated shoulder and is out for the rest of the season. All of the other Greenville boys will be at full strength when they hit the gridiron this week.

Coach Morris told the Reflector in a phone conversation that after seeing Greenville play last Friday night he had a lot of problems to cope with this week. He especially commented on quarterback Billy James and halfback Alan Mc-

Arthur. "I hope we can keep up with them," he said. Morris also added, "They (Greenville) have one of the finest offenses I have seen in high school."

Tough Game For Both

The Roxboro head coach also noted, "We want to win this one and we know they do too, so it will be a hard game for all concerned." Out of the starting eleven for the Rockets nine are seniors. The last time the Rockets won the conference championship was in 1958.

Three of the boys in the Roxboro starting lineup for Friday have been selected as All-Conference players. Also Coach Morris was named Coach of the Year for District 3.

Roxboro Backfield

The Rocket backfield will consist of Sim Davis at quarterback, Marion Carver at left half, Arthur Winstead at right half and Fred Jackson at fullback.

The starting lineup for the Phantoms will be the same as it was last week with Ken Cox heading up the line at center, Russell Fields at left guard, William Allen at left tackle and Burney Morris at left end. On the right side of the line will be Elbert Felton at guard, Rommie Brock at tackle and Jack Foley will handle the right end position.

The Rose High backfield will consist of Billy James calling the signals at quarterback, Kroghle Andersen at right half, Alan McArthur at left half and Wayne Sumrell will handle the fullback spot.

Full House Expected

All indications are that college stadium will be full for tomorrow night's championship contest. All seats on the Greenville side of the field are for reserved seat ticket holders only.

Coach Morris said that his team would have a good following. He estimated that at least 500 Roxboro fans would attend and he said that there might be more than that. The team will leave Roxboro on a chartered bus for the 138 mile trip to Greenville. They plan to have a light supper at the college prior to the game.

Bead Is Drawn On U. S. Communist Bosses

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department has drawn a bead on Communist party leaders as deadlines for registering with the government near.

The party has until Sunday to register with the department as an arm of the Soviet Union. If the party doesn't register, its officers must by Nov. 30.

Both deadlines are apt to be ignored by Communist party leaders, who have fought the issue in the courts since passage of the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950, which prescribed the registrations. The Communists have vowed to go to jail rather than comply.

In the face of the defiance, Justice Department officials have begun mapping plans to prosecute. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy indicated in Dallas Wednesday the steps his department would take if the deadlines are ignored.

If the Communist leaders fail to register "as they have indicated," Kennedy told a meeting of the Associated Press Managing Editors convention, they will then be subject to a $10,000 fine and a five year imprisonment. We will also move in that area."

Both the party and its leaders are subject to a fine of up to $10,000 for each day of violation of the registration requirements. If the two deadlines are ignored there is a third: party members must file by Dec. 20. If they don't, they face the same fine.

Also, individuals may draw a five-year prison term for each day they have not registered.

The showdown between the government and the Communists has been in the works since the law was passed. The deadlines are based on the Supreme Court's refusal last Oct. 9 to reconsider its decision upholding provisions of the 1950 law.

The law requires foreign-controlled organizations to give the department full details of their structure and operations—names and aliases of officers and members, sources of income, recipients and purposes of money spent, location of printing presses.

As far as the Communists are concerned, the choice is between the frying pan and the fire: Prosecution under the 1950 act if they do not register, prosecution under the Smith Act of 1940 if they do. The 1940 law bans advocating violent overthrow of the government.

Tuesday, The Worker, Communist newspaper, said of the requirement to register as subversive agencies of a foreign power: "Of course, neither the Communist party nor any of its leaders will lend their signatures to such a life."

The government could deal the party a heavy financial blow by delaying prosecution while the potential penalty mounts.

J. Walter Yeagley, assistant attorney general in charge of the department's internal security division, said Wednesday: "We're going to wait a while. As you know, the penalty is cumulative, but we haven't decided when we're going to file."

Some Taylor Advice On S. Viet Nam Aid Adopted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Kennedy administration is reported to have decided to go ahead with some of Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor's recommendations for strengthening pro-Western South Viet Nam against a growing Communist onslaught.

"We're beginning to get off the ground," a high official told a reporter.

Secrecy still obscures details of what Taylor recommended to President Kennedy after returning two weeks ago from a fact-finding mission to Southeast Asia. Taylor is Kennedy's personal military adviser.

Reports from South Viet Nam indicated a number of actions already may have begun.

U.S. Air Force jets have been carrying out aerial photographic reconnaissance. The Air Force has been reported shuttling plane-loads of supplies from the Philippines to airfields near Saigon.

The supplies were said to include helicopters capable of carrying troops and mounting guns for low-level strafing.

There also have been reports that the Air Force is assigning several officers and men to give added instruction to the small Vietnamese air force.

Some members of the Taylor mission are known to have felt Vietnamese air power wasn't being used to its fullest advantage, even though it included only about a dozen single engine propeller-driven fighter planes and a handful of elderly transport aircraft.

To bolster this small force, it was understood a few World War II vintage b26 bombers were being assigned to the Vietnamese. Pentagon officials who have talked with members of the Taylor mission received an impression of something less than optimism about prospects for pulling Viet Nam out of the fire.

There was a feeling in some Pentagon quarters that the mission of the U.S. Military Advisory Group in Viet Nam should be changed, that fewer members of the group should stay in Saigon and more get out in the country to work alongside the troops and local officials at the lowest possible level.

Some officials, calling the Vietnamese communications and command and control apparatus primitive, suggested Americans might have to step in and more directly control these functions rather than standing to one side as advisers.

Wouldn't Serve Govm't Official

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Carl Rowan, deputy assistant secretary of state, was refused service at a Kansas City night club for an hour Wednesday night. Then the management learned his identity.

"It's not particularly embarrassing to me," Rowan said. "I've been in hundreds of incidents like this. I've been a Negro for a long time. It is disgusting, though, that these things happen."

Rowan was here to address the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities. Rowan and four companions, all white, went to the Eighty-Eight Keys after its Negro combo, led by pioneer jazzman Baby Lovett, had been recommended as one of the best shows in town. They sat at a table for an hour before the management decided to serve them.

Texas Is First To Insure Care

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Texas is the first state to insure health care for the aged through a private insurance company.

A contract between the State Welfare Department and Blue Cross of Texas was signed at a State Welfare Board meeting Wednesday. As a result, more than 220,000 persons on the old are assistance rolls will become eligible Jan. 1, 1962, for hospital care.

The program must be approved by the federal government, under the Kerr-Mills act providing medical care for the aged on a federal-state matching funds basis.

Pianist Presents Senior Recital

Carolyn Gray Petty of Aberdeen, pianist, presented her senior recital by the department of music at East Carolina College this afternoon, at 3 p.m. in the Austin auditorium.

For the afternoon program, Miss Petty's selections included Concerto Grosso: Etude (Un Sospiro); Prelude, Opus 32, No. 10; and Improvisations, No. 1 and 12. At East Carolina, Miss Petty is studying piano with Mrs. Eleanor Toll of the music faculty. She plans to teach public school music upon her graduation from East Carolina College.

An honor roll student at the college, Miss Petty's name has also appeared on the Dean's List.

In student activities, the senior is a member of the Sigma Alpha Iota, professional music fraternity for women. She is also a member of the college Chapel Choir and the Music Educators National Conference, national music club.

She is the daughter of Mrs. J. E. Glasgow of Rt. 1, Aberdeen.

Hobby Shop Is Set Up At Prison Camp

PRISON HOBBY SHOP . . . Prison Department Lt. Howard Warrick and Capt. L. F. Dail, superintendent of the Pitt County Unit are shown checking lockers in the camp's new facility.

A hobby shop for prisoners at the Pitt County Prison Camp located near Greenville has been completed and will go into operation in the near future, according to camp superintendent, Capt. L. F. Dail.

Captain Dail reported that the 2 by 24 foot hobby shop was constructed for $630, utilizing an old wash house at the camp. The facility will be used by "honored" and "A" grade prisoners to make wallets and handbags for sale, "mostly to friends and relatives." Materials for other hobbies will also be available, and 36 individual lockers have been installed in the room in which the men may store their personal work, the camp head added.

The hobby facility is one of the first such units constructed in North Carolina, prison officials noted, adding that similar units are now planned for all felon camps in the state.

The hobby shop, to be used on nights and weekends by the inmates is connected with the Prison Department's rehabilitation program.

WASN'T WORTH THE WORK

ANADARKO, Okla. (AP) — It took two members of the city council and a rusty knife to pry off the lid of a bucket containing votes on the issue of keeping or getting rid of parking meters. The council showed merchants voted 51-51. The council pigeon-holed the matter.

Anaheim, Calif. derives its name from the Santa Ana River and the German word for "home." It was settled by Germans in 1857.

Art Student Is Exhibiting Work

M. Ellyne Turnage of Newport News, Va., senior at East Carolina College, is exhibiting November-26-24 a collection of her work as a student artist in the Kate Lewis Gallery, Rawl building, on the campus. Sponsored by the college Department of Art, the exhibition is one of a series by talented seniors which are scheduled for the 1961-1962 school year.

The major part of Miss Turnage's show is made up of paintings in oil and tempera. Included also are several drawings. The artist's purpose is "to depict the abstract qualities of a visual experience." Her emphasis upon color, asymmetrical balance and line is directed toward giving a symbolic meaning to the paintings.

Miss Turnage is specializing in art and English at East Carolina. A candidate for the liberal arts degree, she is scheduled for graduation during the summer of 1962.

At East Carolina she has studied painting with John Gordon and Metz T. Gordley of the art faculty.

A native of Greenville, N. C.,

NOEL LEE JR. of the Clark's Neck community near Grimesland is starting to apply his basic conservation plan to his land.

Lee seeded eight acres of low-lying Class III land to permanent pasture last month. He first spread soil from ditches to level the ditch banks. He then had the dozer contractor grade shallow surface drains from the low pockets to the open ditches, so as to keep water from standing in the field.

Lee plans to seed 18 acres of fescue grass this fall to get his five-year conservation cropping system started. Then he plans to install 3,000 feet of field drain tile as soon as Soil Conservation Service personnel are available to design and stake the system. Lee will install the tile where he plans to grow tobacco next year.

DAVID MAYO is already making good use of his Soil and Water Conservation farm plan. SCS personnel assisted Mayo in completing his plan, in cooperation with the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District.

Mayo, in cooperation with a neighbor, has constructed an outlet ditch for his farm. He has also constructed another ditch across his farm in order to get an outlet for tile which is to be installed in the future.

Four acres of land unsuitable for tobacco have been seeded to ladino clover and fescue for livestock grazing. An additional nine acres will be seeded to the same mixture next fall, according to Mayo.

Within the next few days Mayo plans to seed fescue grass and oats on about 10 acres, to be put in his tobacco rotation. Tobacco will follow the fescue grass in 1963.

ARCH J. FLANAGAN, supervisor of the Coastal Plain S&WC District, believes in starting at home with conservation.

On land he has leased, he is preparing a basic soil and water conservation plan. Basic erosion control practices, to keep soil in place and improve it, are incorporated in the plan.

A grass-based rotation is already underway for tobacco. In 1963 these fields will be strip-cropped with alternate strips of tobacco and fescue grass.

JOHN G. SHEPHERD, forestry aid for Pitt County for the N.C. Division of Forestry, has recently replaced N. S. Tyson, who was County Ranger in Pitt County for a number of years.

During this extremely dry season, Shepherd stresses the importance of the correct use of fire and its control in all types of burnings. "We must be fully aware that a small flame can start a chain reaction of fire that can cover vast distances at great speed. With a strong wind behind it, a fire can overtake a running deer," he says.

"This is just one of the devastating powers a large fire has when aided by the climatic factors that we have now. Over 70 per cent of all forest fires are caused by people. Through the combined efforts of you and your fire suppression unit, fire can be reduced to a minimum," Shepherd adds.

SUPERVISORS OF the Coastal Plain District have approved two petitions for assistance in helping landowners solve and overcome a severe drainage problem which prevailed in their community.

A petition from Pitt County Drainage District No. 4, known as the Mt. Pleasant Canal Petition, was approved for Commissioners C. H. Hagan, J. L. Harris and C. A. Langley. Their attorney is Frank M. Wooten Jr. Another canal petition, submitted by W. L. Haddock, Dalton E. Haddock and Atlas Burroughs, was also approved.

Rescue Team Captain Trains Men To Handle Any Job

CAPT. CLAUDE CHRISTOPHER . . . team cooperation and skill is key to winning.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"Each man . . . being able to do any job and carry out any problem . . ." according to Fire Department Captain Claude Christopher, is the basis on which the department's rescue unit team worked to become the top scoring U.S. team . . . taking third place in world championship rescue competition less than two weeks ago.

Christopher, a fire department training instructor has served as captain of the six-man rescue team which took top state honors in October. He also headed a four-man first aid team which placed first in the state first aid contest held at the same time.

The captain is the "key" man on the team and he is the only person allowed to speak to the contest judges . . . to explain the team's actions, giving the reasons "why" something was done the way it was.

Even so, the officer emphasizes, the job would be impossible to accomplish without the other team members being able to handle any job. "The success of a team is due to each person knowing each other's duties . . . no one being a specialist . . . each individual has to think like the other man to coordinate the work."

To accomplish this end . . . where each man is working together and thinking as one . . . "many, many, many hours of practice are required for each man to know all the jobs."

Born In Ayden
Born in Ayden, Christopher moved to Greenville with his parents in 1930 when six-years old, attending the Greenville city schools.

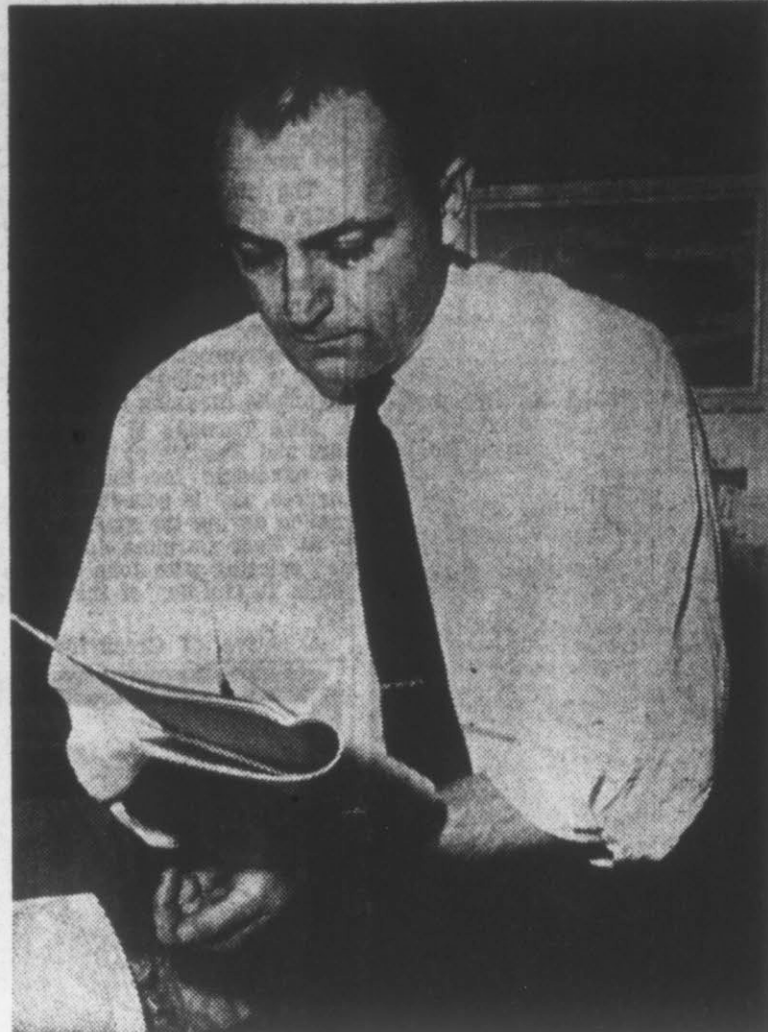

In 1942, Christopher entered the Army after working for a local department store and was assigned to a technical training school in Denver, Colo., where he was trained in armament, then assigned as a cadet to the Technical Officers Candidate School, after attending the TOCS at Yale University and Valley Forge Military Academy he was commissioned a second lieutenant in June of 1943.

Christopher was discharged a first lieutenant in July of 1945 after serving with the 82nd Airborne Squadron working with aircraft armament in England, France and Germany.

A short time after his return to civilian life, Christopher joined the Greenville Police Department then, in 1952, after becoming a sergeant in the department identification division, transferred to the Fire Department.

As a fire department captain and training officer, he is charged with familiarizing the men of the department with the new techniques and developments in the field of fire fighting and rescue work and is continually reviewing the other skills and methods . . . "for a smoothly operating department."

CONSTANT STUDY . . . required to keep informed on latest methods, equipment.

In Charge of Training
As rescue team captain, the fire officer is in charge of training and coordinating the actions of the members . . . "helping pre-plan, as much as possible, assigning men to varied tasks, planning for the unexpected."

"It takes a lot of showmanship along with a lot of good hard work and exacting knowledge of the skills required in rescue work to participate in the team. We strive for a team that goes about its work like robots . . . following the directions of the captain even though they may not be able to hear what I am saying."

Pick Greenville For Convention

According to Francis N. Richardson, presiding minister of the Greenville South Unit Congregation, Jehovah's Witnesses of Circuit 36 have chosen Greenville as the place for their midwinter circuit convention. The meeting will be held at the Eppes High School Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, December 15-17.

After announcing this three-day meeting to the local congregation, Mr. Richardson told his hearers that the rising tide of selfishness and materialism presents a challenge to Christian thinking and Christian works. "Great emphasis," he said, "is being placed on personal security through material possessions; but the crying need of the hour is greater knowledge of God and principles of the Bible."

He then pinpointed the importance of Bible knowledge at this time by quoting Ecclesiastes 7:12: "For money is a defense and wisdom is a defense, but the excellency of knowledge is that wisdom giveth life to them that have it."

"The purpose of this meeting here in Greenville," Richardson said, "is to give Jehovah's Witnesses and their friends three days of advanced Bible knowledge and special ministerial training to increase the unity of the organization."

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society is sponsoring the assembly for the 16 congregations which make up circuit 36. All sessions will be open to the public.

Two Men Coolly Stage $200,000 Jewelry Robbery

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP)—Two well-dressed men, one carrying an attache case and the other a briefcase, coolly staged a $200,000 jewelry store robbery Wednesday.

Ten days ago one of the men bought a jeweled cross at the store, H. L. Gross & Co. This time he strolled in with a companion and said he came to exchange the cross.

The other man informed Joseph Singer, the manager: "I am a Treasury agent. This store has been depositing phony money, and I'm here to check on it."

As Singer swung open the safe door, both men produced guns. The attache case and briefcase were filled with watches, rings and loose diamonds.

Before fleeing the men lined up Singer; Howard Gross, one of the owners; two clerks; a window washer; and a customer, and linked them with copper wire around wrists and ankles. Surgical tape was pressed over their mouths.

Says U.S. Must Resume Testing
NEW YORK (AP)—A scientist whose experiments helped lead to the development of the atomic bomb said today this country would soon have to resume atmospheric nuclear testing for its own protection.

Dr. John F. Dunning, dean of Columbia University's School of Engineering and Applied Science, urged such a move in a speech to a Columbia University Club luncheon.
Saying that Soviet knowledge of U.S. retaliatory might would be of utmost importance in preventing a Soviet attack, Dunning described as "foolish" any suggestion that this country had solved the problems of a retaliatory arsenal.

Goldwater Says Opportunity Lost
WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., says the United States should have pushed over the Berlin dividing wall "when it was only one brick high—and then backed off to see what would happen."

Military men have told him nothing would have happened, Goldwater said.
"Now it's too late," he said in a lecture at Holy Cross College Wednesday night.

Southwest Has Bitter Winds In Wake Of Storm

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Bitter winds blew across miles of snow-covered countryside today behind the second storm to buffet New Mexico and Texas in three days. The new storm also hit Colorado, Oklahoma and Kansas.

As much as three feet of snow blanketed storm areas, which counted eight deaths from the wintry weather since Monday.
Blizzard conditions lingered on the eastern Colorado plains, closing U.S. Highway 160 west of Springfield and U.S. 40 between Kit Carson and Cheyenne Wells. New snow thickened the icy coverlet in extreme northeast New Mexico and parts of the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles, and spread eastward into Kansas.
Skies cleared early today in the Texas and New Mexico areas. Snow continued in Oklahoma, where it blocked roads west of Boise City in the state's westernmost county.

Elsewhere in the storm sector, subfreezing temperatures left many highways glassy slick and hazardous.

Fresh snow measured a foot or more at some points, and considerable amounts remained from the preceding two days—up to 36 inches in the mountains of south central New Mexico, where there were 6-foot drifts.

More than 12 inches of new snow blanketed Trinidad in southern Colorado, and wind gusts hitting 50 miles per hour made auto travel risky along the eastern slope of the Rockies. An ice storm gripped Denver.

Ex-Chief Of Programming For TV Pinpoints Fault

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — David Levy, former NBC vice president in charge of television programming who locked into place the network's popular schedule for this season, took a critical look this week at the industry he's left behind.

In a speech before students of the University of Pennsylvania's school of communications, Levy particularly condemned TV's tendency to follow "trends" in program content.

Levy expressed hope that, just because NBC's new "Dr. Kildare" and ABC's new "Ben Casey" both series concerned with dedicated young doctors in large hospitals—have been proved hits, that the networks would refrain from following them up with a flood of series about young dentists, young psychiatrists or young ophthalmologists.

He could not have been more adroit in pinpointing one of TV's big troubles.

ABC demonstrated his theme when the network's new audience participation show, "Yours for a Song" had its evening premiere Tuesday.

The new show has so many obvious ancestors—"Stop the Music," "Name That Tune" among them—that it had a familiar look immediately. But the big, "new" item is that when the contestants have finished trying to supply missing lyrics for old, awfully well-known songs, the studio audience joins in and sings the last chorus. And so do, it is presumed, the folks at home, because the words are flashed on the screen.

Remind you of anything? It must have taken a lot of creative thought to come up with a "Sing Along" device that might pick up some of Mitch Miller's success and high audience ratings.

"Yours for a Song" is a shabby, dull show in spite of all the borrowing from successful ones—and because it is so imitative and contrived it deserves a short life.

Reports are widespread that many sponsors are unhappy and want out of new shows which are faltering. Undoubtedly some of the shakier new shows would quietly disappear in January—at the end of 13 weeks—except for the fact that the networks are committed to 26 or more shows.

There may be some disappearing sponsors, however, because in many shows where there are several different underwriters, the contracts are for short periods.

One show known to be in trouble is Frank McGee's "Here and Now," whose gasoline sponsor wants out. Sponsors and others are worried about "The Dick Van Dyke Show" and would like to have it moved to a better spot in the CBS schedule. It is preceded by re-runs of "Gunsmoke," re-titled "Marshal Dillon," but the reruns are losing their audiences to new shows on "Laramie."

Incidentally, the new Nielsen ratings—considered most authoritative by the industry and sponsors—put "Wagon Train," "Bonanza" and hour-long "Gunsmoke" in the top three spots. Westerns may be declining in numbers on TV, but somebody out there still loves them.

New shows which have found places among the Nielsen top 20 are "Hazel," "Ben Casey," "Car 54, Where Are You?" "The Defenders."

Give Go-Ahead On Finished Job

CHICAGO (AP)—A newly issued Illinois Commerce Commission order authorizes the Cook County Highway Department to start building a bridge on 31st st. over the tracks of four railroads.

But the new bridge was completed in 1959 at a cost of $1.6 million and has been in use ever since. The county applied for construction permission in 1957.

Mused the commission chairman, James W. Karber, Wednesday: "I don't know what happened. We're trying to straight out a mess."

Candidate Still Wins Close Ones

BARBOURVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Odell Girdner still wins the close ones.
He drew a higher number from a hat Wednesday and won election as a Knox County magistrate over Bill Sears. They tied with 500 votes each in last week's election.

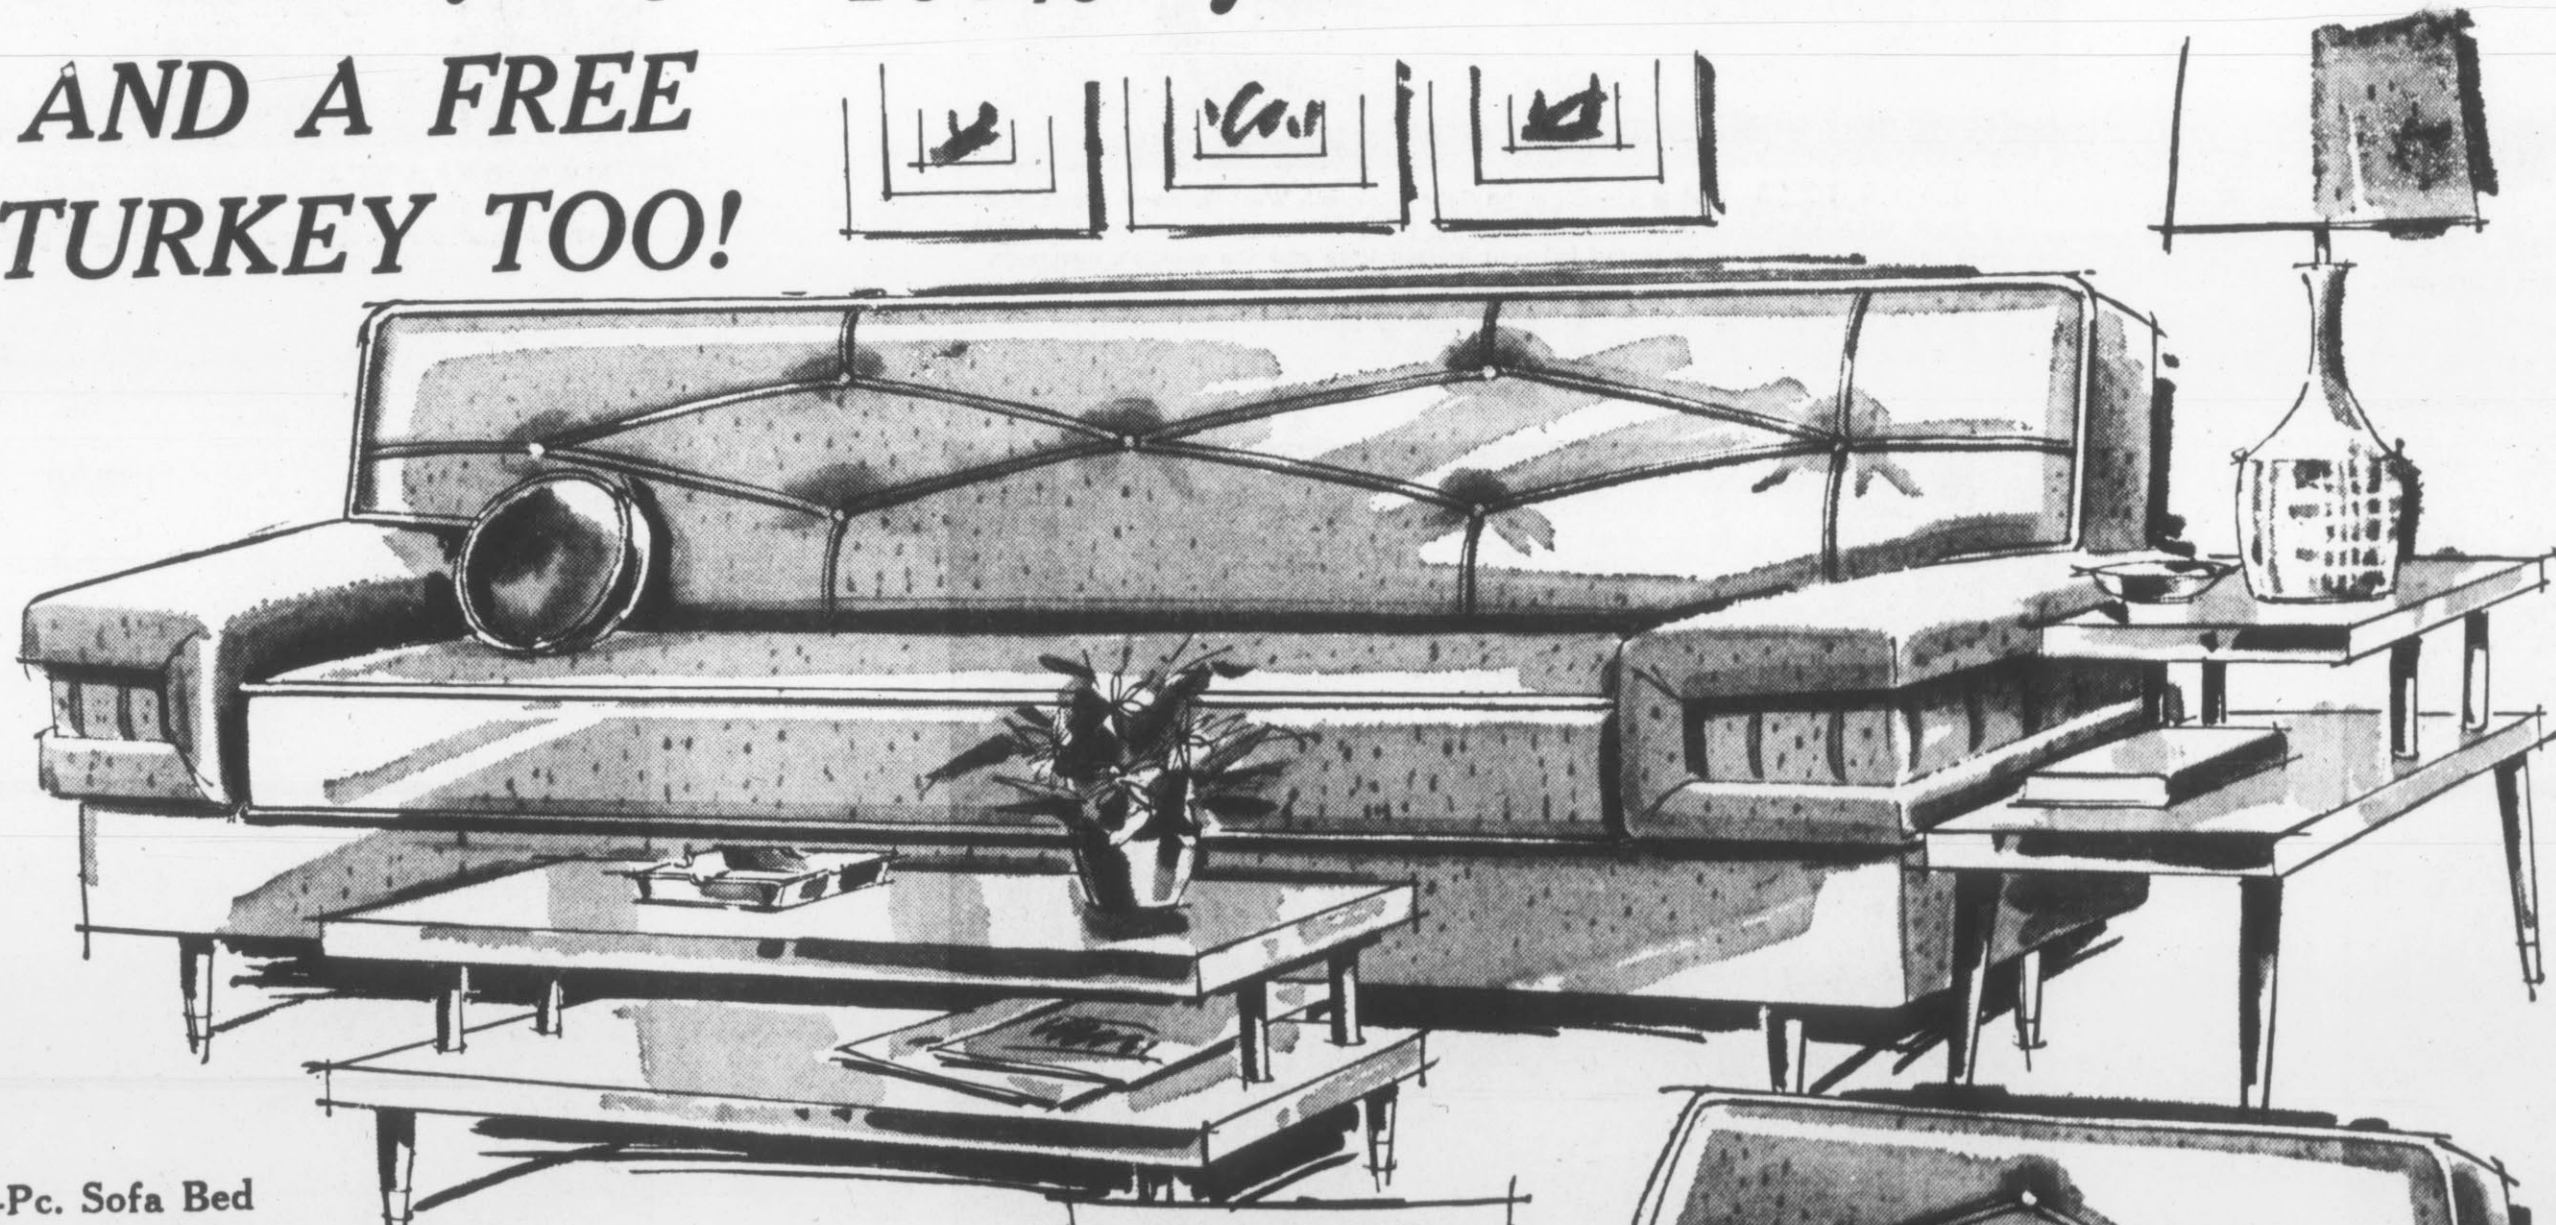

Girdner won the Democratic nomination for the post last May by casting lots after that race ended in a 61-61 tie.

Pitt County Highway Patrolmen are again this weekend planning to "Wolfpack" special areas in Pitt County in an effort to seek out and arrest all law violators within their assigned area.

Cpl. J. G. Thomas are designed to present to the public and especially to law violators, "a show of strength" by converging on a pre-determined area in a "wolfpack" . . . seeking out all violators on the highway.

the minds of violators the fact that if they fail to obey the laws they will be charged.

Prime targets for the "Pack" are hazardous moving violations such as failure to stop for a stop sign, speeding, operating on the wrong side of the road, and falling to dim head lights.

Last weekend in Pitt, 35 motorists were arrested by the five patrolmen. Areas patrolled during the seven-hour period a week ago included Greenville, Black Jack, Grimesland and Paoletts.

The name "Wolfpack" was given to the special saturation patrols because the officers converge on the one area, then after making the "kill" move to another area.

Baptists Order Fraternity Ban

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The South Carolina Baptist Convention has ordered Furman University trustees to take legal steps to settle a 34-year-old controversy and ban fraternities from the campus.

The 1,900 messengers, representing a half-million South Carolina Baptists, resolved Wednesday to require trustees to amend their official state charter to outlaw fraternities and sororities on or off the campus.

The ban applies to North Greenville and Anderson junior colleges and to a proposed new college in the Charleston area. There are no fraternities at the junior colleges.

The convention also quickly voted down a resolution that would admit to Baptist institutions of higher learning all qualified students regardless of "race, color or creed."

The product—a system of reducing room-to-room transmission of sound through the use of so-called sound control blankets which are installed, back to back, between studs before dry wall or lath-and-plaster is applied. The blankets are stapled only at the top and bottom and hang limp within stud cavities.

The manufacturer's claim—that, when properly installed, including the use of vertical saw cuts in the studding, these blankets will reduce the sound level approximately 83 per cent compared with a conventional wall.

The product—a heavy-bodied pigmented material for patching plaster cracks. A thin coat of the product is spread over the crack and smoothed down with a special applicator. A length of glass fabric is applied over the coated area, followed by another coat of the pigmented substance.

The manufacturer's claim—that this material is flexible and will expand and contract with the opening and closing of the plaster crack and thus will last indefinitely.

Mel Blanc Says His Survival A Miracle

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I know it is a miracle that I am still alive. That's why I thank God every day for His help."

A serious Mel Blanc—"man of a thousand voices"—was talking about the car crash that by all rights should have taken his life. His car was struck head-on by another car on Sunset Boulevard last January.

One of the firemen who cut Mel out of the wreckage said later: "We should have just put him in a sack."

Nearing recovery at his Pacific Palisades home, Mel said, "When I asked my doctor what bones I had broken, he told me: 'If someone tells you he broke a bone, you can say you broke the same one—unless it's a left arm.'"

Blanc pointed to his right leg, still in a plaster cast: "This is the one that's slow to heal—21 breaks from the knee to the foot. One of them was compound, and that's what slowed me down."

"The knee cap was torn off my left leg, but somehow it was sewn back on. The other breaks included most of my ribs, six vertebrae, both sides of the pelvis and three skull fractures."

Mel remembers nothing from the time he saw the oncoming car until he regained consciousness 21 days later. What did he

REMEMBER, FOREWARNED IS FOREARMED.
I suppose an octopus is twice as well off? Hee hee?
WHAT'S THAT?
It's a joke—it's funny—right-armed is twice as good as fore-armed.
I DON'T GET IT... THERE'S NOTHING FUNNY ABOUT THIS BUSINESS.
I won't laugh at anything again even if you say it.
LET'S NOT CARRY THINGS TOO FAR...
I'M SORRY—I'M SORRY.

THE PHANTOM
WHO AM I? ARE YOU AN OLD CON? IS THIS--REVENGE?
YOU JUMPED ME--KNOWING NO, YOU NEVER SAW ME BEFORE
WHOEVER YOU ARE, I'M GOING TO SHOOT YOU DOWN LIKE A DOG--UH--
YOUR GUN ISN'T THERE. I REMOVED IT--
I WANT A FEW ANSWERS FROM YOU--CHIEF GUARD OF BOOMSBY--

It isn't just plain luck that Carolina Model Home Salesmen are highly successful. We are a pioneer company and today's leader. We are rated with the public AAA-1. We have a reputation of constructing the finest homes built, and one of the most reliable companies to do business with. Our territories are definite and protected. Commissions are very high and paid immediately upon acceptance of approval. We have a sales training program with a guaranteed draw each week. Due to expansion in our sales force, we need two men in this local area interested in being a success in selling. So, men, act promptly; step out and up front—sell the best. This is all it takes on your part: experience in some type of direct sales, integrity, neat and aggressive, knowhow to supervise yourself, have a car and a craving desire for prosperity. Our salesmen promote themselves.

If you are this man, see the sales manager at Carolina Model Homes, 600 Memorial Drive, across from the hospital. No phone calls please.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA)—North Carolina egg markets steady. Supplies large about adequate, mediums and smalls barely adequate to short, demand good. Prices paid producers for clean, unsized eggs, delivered nearby grading stations on a grade-yield basis, cases exchanged: Grade A large, whites 43-44, mediums, whites 29-30, small, whites 23-25.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA)—Hog prices steady to 25 lower. Tops of 16.50-17.50 Kinston, New Bern, Beaufort, Mount Olive, Newton Grove, Nahant; 16.75-17.25 Rocky Mount, Wilson; 16.75-17 Murfreesboro, Robertsonville, 16.50-17 Spring Hope, Smithfield; 16.50-17 Pembroke; 17 Tarboro, Enfield, Scotland Neck; 16.75 Goldsboro, Albemarle, Siler City, Clinton, Fayetteville, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Greensboro, Rich Square; 16.50 Lillington, Dunn, Castle Hayne, Burgaw.

Wilson cash cattle prices steady: Steers and heifers, choice 22.50-24.50, good 21-23, standards 16-19; beef cows 13.50-16, heavy cutters 12.50-14.50; light bulls 12-15, heavy bulls 15-18.

NEW YORK (AP)—Profit taking trimmed stock market prices early this afternoon as the trading pace fell off to the week's slowest.

The Associated Press average 60 stocks at noon was off 1.10 at 267.70, with industrials off 2.00, rails unchanged and utilities off .60.

Key stocks took losses of fractions to a point or more along a broad front. The market was settling down from the record highs reached in a prolonged autumn rally.

Analysts saw the process as a normal one following a rise of such proportions and expressions of confidence predominated on Wall Street.

The decline was not tied directly to any particular news item. Chrysler was adversely affected by news of lower sales and reacted sharply. Most autos, steels, chemicals, coppers, electrical equipments and oils were lower. Tobacco and drugs were narrowly higher on balance.

Chrysler fell 1 1/2 to 49 on an opening block of 8,000 shares and was sold heavily as its loss stretched to more than 3 points before some support was met and the decline was trimmed slightly.

Ford dropped more than a point. U.S. Steel took a loss exceeding a point while Republic Steel was off close to a point.

Texas Instruments, up more than a point, stood out in a moderately lower electronics group. Radio Corp. lost about a point. The Dow Jones industrial average at noon slipped 4.53 to 729.81. Prices moved irregularly on the American Stock Exchange in moderate trading.

Corporate bonds were off irregularly. U.S. government bonds continued the week's decline.

Runway Crash For 2 Airliners

BOSTON (AP)—Two airliners collided Wednesday night at a runway crossing on Logan International Airport.

Fifteen persons were injured, none seriously.

The collision wrecked one of the planes, a Northeast Airlines jet-prop Viscount. The entire aft end of the plane was torn off, including the lounge and part of the passenger cabin.

The other plane, a four-engine DC6, owned by National Airlines, came to a halt after the crash with its nose on the ground, the landing gear was broken, and the bottom of the nose chewed, and the fuselage cracked open just back of the pilots' compartment.

The Northeast jet-prop had just landed after a flight from Washington and New York. The National plane was preparing to take off for New York.

A Federal Aviation Agency statement early today gave this version of the crash:

"Northeast Flight 120 was on final approach to land on runway 4R when the Boston tower local controller instructed the National Airlines flight, National 429, Boston Tower, taxi into position and hold runway 9."

"The tower controller observed National 429 move on the taxiway and entering runway 9, then directed his attention to the aircraft on final approach."

"Northeast Flight 120 was observed to touch down on runway 4R approximately 1,000 feet before the intersection. Simultaneously, National 429 was observed to start his takeoff roll on runway 9 from a position approximately 1,000 feet short of the same intersection."

"The tower controller immediately transmitted a warning to National 429 but the aircraft collided at the intersection of the two runways."

The Northeast plane had a crew of 4 and 40 passengers, and the National liner carried 25 passengers and a crew of 5.

Large Turnout For PTA Meet

Some 120 parents attended the Fleming St. School P.T.A. meeting last night at the school. During the business session, the state P.T.A. meeting to be held in Kinston Friday and Saturday was discussed.

Mrs. Willie M. Cherry will represent the school at the state meeting.

The meeting was concluded with a short social period and visits of parents to classrooms. Each parent visited his child's classroom and discussed activities.

Mrs. Cherry presided at the meeting in the absence of the president, the Rev. Tony Dawson. New members were welcomed by Mrs. M. B. Godette.

Baptists Order Study Of Capital Punishment

GREENSBORO (AP)—The Baptist State Convention today turned over to one of its committees for study a proposal that the convention go on record in favor of the abolishment of capital punishment.

The convention followed the recommendation of its Resolution Committee that the capital punishment proposal be studied by the Christian Life Committee for a report at the 1962 convention.

The action came as the convention prepared to adjourn. The Rev. Nane Starnes of Asheville was elected to head the convention Wednesday, succeeding former Congressman C. B. Deane of Rockingham.

Dr. Millard Brown of Jacksonville, chairman of the Resolutions Committee, said the group was impressed with arguments by the delegation of Wake Forest College students favoring the ban on capital punishment. However, he added "We felt there were implications which require more study."

J. Glenn Blackburn Jr., a representative of the student group, said, "We are very pleased with the decision of the committee, since this means that serious study on the issue of capital punishment will be undertaken."

Ayden Host . . .

30 days. He said that figure represents the "largest number in any similar period" since he assumed his post last January. Total leads developed during his tenure, he said, now stand at 806.

In his report, Dr. Green urged support for the Area Development Council for six counties, including Pitt. "There are tremendous potentials inherent in this organization," he said. He also reported the commission is participating in the work to obtain the Roanoke River Community Bridge.

He said the last 11 months have provided a half dozen industrial prospects for Ayden. "At least two of these are still active," he said.

Dr. Green reported that a recent labor survey of Pitt County, aided by W. B. Dillingham of the Employment Security Commission, has been "most successfully completed." It indicated, the director said, that 1,593 persons are available in the county for employment.

He opened his report by expressing appreciation on behalf of the commission to "Corey Stokes and the people of Ayden for the courtesies of this meeting."

Commission member Frank K. Allen of Farmville repeated Dr. Green's expression.

Stokes, vice chairman of the commission, was in charge of preparations for the meeting. His wife engineered planning and preparation of the chicken dinner.

County commissioners attending the meeting were Chairman Robert G. Little, J. Vance Perkins, Bruce Strickland and Robert I. Martin. The General Assembly delegation, Sen. Robert L. Hunter and Reps. Frank M. Wooten and Clifton W. Everett, sent expressions of regret that they regret that they could not attend.

Commission Chairman Leonard P. Bloxam was attending an Asheville meeting of a national organization of which he is president.

Henry Oglesby, secretary to Rep. Herbert H. Boone, attended the session and complimented the efforts and accomplishments of the Development Commission.

He urged the organization to continue its efforts. "We certainly need something to keep our untrained labor at home," Oglesby said in referring to a speech by T. W. Willis of Farmville to the commission in October. "We need that badly," he said.

Another "very important" need for the Pitt County area, Oglesby cited, is an air facility—"a central airport that would be one of the very greatest assets we could have."

Another resolution brought out by the committee and approved by the convention would authorize Wake Forest College to borrow not more than $700,000 for capital improvements. A similar resolution would authorize Campbell College to borrow a similar amount.

In another item of business, the convention chose Wilmington as the site for its 1963 meeting. Raleigh will be the site for the 1962 session.

Dr. Paul Geren, deputy director of the U.S. Peace Corps, told the convention the Christian faith "gives us the imagination to put ourselves in the other nation's place."

Geren, a Baptist layman, said in a prepared address it is not possible to find in the Bible "the automatic and easy solution to the problem of Berlin, Communist subversion in Viet Nam, or cheap textile imports in the United States."

The convention reversed its Resolutions Committee to call for a study on the issue of local church autonomy.

The Rev. W. W. Philator of Raleigh asked for appointment of a committee to study local autonomy "in the light of historic principle and recent experience." C. B. Dean, the outgoing convention president, said the committee on Committees would survey to see if an existing committee would be appropriate for the study. If not, he added, a committee will be set up to handle it.

The Resolutions Committee had turned down the suggestion of Dr. James M. Bulman, pastor of Providence Baptist Church near East Spencer, for a local autonomy study.

Two Drivers In Mishap Charged

Both drivers, involved in a two-car collision at the intersection of 14th and Charles Sts. yesterday which caused damage estimated at over $1,000, were charged by traffic officers who investigated the mishap.

Police reported today that one of the men, Charles Fletcher Bayes, 32, of Route 1, Pelham, was charged with making an improper turn, while the second man, Archie Battle Whitely, 37, of 309 Boyd Ave., was charged with speeding too fast for existing conditions.

Officers said the Bayes auto was traveling South on Charles St. and allegedly made a left-hand turn in front of the north-bound Whitely auto.

Estimates of damage by investigators listed $75 damage to the Bayes vehicle while reporting $1,000 damage to the Whitely vehicle.

No injuries were reported in the 7:56 p.m. mishap.

TB Ass'n Told County Has Had 47 Cases During Year

Pitt County health director Dr. John M. Futrell Wednesday told the mid-year meeting of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association.

He said the health department after Christmas will begin tuberculosis testing in the first and ninth grades of the county's schools.

He also told the group a request has been filed with the State Board of Health for a mobile x-ray unit to visit Pitt County as a "major case-finding tool."

The health director said interviews with various authorities have substantiated his opinion that the "greatest tool we have in fighting tuberculosis is education."

He continued: "I did not realize when I moved to Pitt County what a tremendous problem of tuberculosis there is here. It is one of our very major health concerns."

Dr. Futrell stressed the importance of annual x-rays. "I cannot overemphasize the importance of an x-ray every year," he said. "Not only can we detect cases of tuberculosis that way, but we can find other conditions that might exist" such as enlarged heart, cancer and other respiratory diseases.

Pay Boy Ransom For Pet Poodle

LA PUENTE, Calif. (AP)—Peaches, a 10-month-old boy poodle, is back with its tearfully happy, 8-year-old master Tony Hewitt.

But there's no hero to thank: Tony's mother had to pay $25 ransom to a teen-ager.

The Pasadena Independent today reported this story of Peaches' abduction and return:

Tony was walking to the candy store with Peaches and a chum when a car pulled up Sunday afternoon. Two teen-agers jumped out, grabbed the dog, told Tony, "We're taking him for a ride" and left the child in tears.

Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Hewitt, Tony's parents, summoned police. But no clues turned up. Hewitt, a cement contractor, says the dog is worth $350. Youths have been stealing dogs from neighbors, Hewitt says, and selling them.

On Monday, Mrs. Hewitt went to the scene of the crime, a nearby bowling alley parking lot. She asked several teen-agers about the dog. They shook their heads.

Then she offered $25 reward, and one youth said: "I may be able to help—but I don't want to get mixed up with the law."
