Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
Nature plays with confusion; there is no attempt at any definite design. A landscape design is created when man by the utilization of plant variety, plant form and space, lays out a garden. Or as James Rose says in his book "Creative Gardens": "Space organized in terms of use becomes a garden."

Plant Form
Plant forms can be divided into six main classes, namely: Columnar, horizontal, oval, spreading, irregular, and weeping. However, some plants fall into more than one category. The dogwood may in some cases be classed as horizontal or irregular and in some instances weeping. Also in this category you find willows, mulberry, and some varieties of cherry. Other examples in smaller plants are abelia, forsythia, and weeping yew.
In the columnar types, we find cypripedium, red cedar and types of junipers, etc.
Pin oak, dogwood, the plane tree and phytolajuncus are a few with horizontal habit of growth.
The apple tree, catalpa, Judas tree and mountain laurel are broad or spreading in growth habit. American holly, Norway maple, star magnolia, and boxwood are of oval growth.
In the irregular or picturesque group, we find ginkgo, h-ney locust, photinia and evergreen barberry.
The lists are by no means complete. While the above mentioned growth habits are natural in scope, they may be changed by pruning and training.

Space
It is how we space the plants with various forms that determine the garden picture.

The plant as it stands alone is a specimen. But through spacing it becomes Tenetration, hedges, baffles, tracery, clumps and canopy.
When planted so there is a space or window between plants, they are fenestrated.
When planted in series so they lose their individuality, they become a hedge. Hedges when arranged become baffles.
When planted so the tops touch and there is an open area for walking beneath they form a canopy.
When planted in a group, they become a clump.
Plants of irregular habit planted so they form intricate patterns across sky line form tracery.

Conclusion
The choice of the right plants, with forms that fit well into the types of spacing that is utilized, make the garden picture.

His subject was "Forgiveness" which was taken from the seventh verse of the first chapter of Ephesians. He cited as a recent example of forgiveness the story of the five men who went to Ecuador and were killed by savage Indians. Forgiveness has been shown by women relatives of these men because they are now serving as missionaries to these same Indians. As a nation we should learn to forgive and love each other to work toward the goal of making Christians of the whole world.
Child welfare chairman Mrs. W. C. Eagles reported that money has been given toward the support of a young mother and her two children. Pan Americanism chairman Mrs. C. A. John Duncan Speaks To Greenville Woman's Club

Mr. John G. Duncan, Assistant Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at East Carolina College, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Greenville Garden Club Friday afternoon.

Speaking on "The Part That the Form and the Method of Spacing Plants Plays in Landscape Design," he pointed out that there are two classifications of shrub and tree lines, vertical and horizontal, and when these lines are used properly, they will add to the design of the locale.

Some of the methods of spacing plants, he related, were the lone plants, called specimens, the hedge and the canopy. "Space, in proper use, makes a garden."

In the design of home landscapes, he suggested that the grounds be divided into three basic areas: the public area, and in the back of the house, the private area and the service area.

Following the talk, the club members adjourned to the campus of East Carolina College and assembled at Wright Circle, where he explained the spacing methods and types of plants selected for this landscape.

Garden club members were greeted upon arrival by the hostess, Mrs. George Staples. Mrs. Staples served coconut cake and coffee in the club dining room.

During the social hour, an exhibit of Thanksgiving table arrangements, using dried materials, were shown by Mrs. R. V. Keel and Mrs. George Staples.

During a short business meeting held to receive committee reports, it was announced that the next regular meeting would be a joint

Great Pocahontas Of State Pays Visit Local Council

Great Pocahontas of North Carolina Kathleen Woolard's final official visit was with Coochee Council Thursday night. Following a banquet at the Cinderella Restaurant in her honor with guest speaker Great Chief of Records of N. C., W. E. Yopp, council members and visitors held their regular meeting at the hall.

Upon entering, guests autographed a white linen tablecloth to be embroidered later. The meeting adjourned and Mrs. Woolard was seated in an honorary chair signifying her Great Chieftancy. The special program was done similar to the "This Is Your Life" television series. Representatives from various councils in the Eastern District of the Degree of Pocahontas participated, thus returning memorable events along her Eastern Trail as reigning Great Pocahontas.

In her speech to her home council, Mrs. Woolard challenged the members with this food for thought in reference to enthusiasm: "It is easier to keep a fire burning than it is to start one with lifeless ashes."

A piece of luggage was presented her from the council and also numerous individual gifts were received.

The hall was decorated in an autumn motif. Across the front hung a huge banner bearing the words, "Welcome Home Great Pocahontas."

Refreshments were prepared consisting of sandwich quarters, miniature ham biscuits, spiced apples, butter crinkles, hors d'oeuvres, fruit cake squares and punch.

Approximately 50 guests and members attended the banquet and some 15 more were present for the special program.

Troupe May Quit Southern Tours

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—A dance troupe from India, which twice has encountered restaurant segregation practices in the South, may cancel other Southern stops on its intercontinental tour.

The leader of the group, a Mrs. Indrani, said the Indian Embassy in Washington will decide whether the troupe will make other appearances in the South.

The troupe, whose tour is sponsored by the Asia Society Performing Arts Program with backing from the U.S. State Department, canceled an appearance at Centenary College Sunday after Mrs. Indrani was refused admission to two restaurants in nearby Bossier City.

Mrs. Indrani added that it had been decided after a previous incident in Charlotte, N.C., that she would make all eating arrangements for the three other dancers and three musicians with her.

She attempted to enter one Bossier City restaurant and was refused admission. Later she phoned a nearby restaurant and was again turned down. The group apparently made no attempt to enter any of the major restaurants in Shreveport.

The group has appearances scheduled in North Carolina and Kentucky, with the next one at Duke University in Durham, N.C. The troupe appeared at Denton Tex., Saturday.

Members planned to leave by plane today for Raleigh, N.C.

He issued a statement of appreciation today to Mrs. J. H. B. Moore "for her untiring efforts

The dinner was the highlight of the bicentennial celebration of Pitt County. Wooten also expressed appreciation to Mrs. T. W. Rouse, Miss Venetia Cox and Miss Tabitha de Visconti, who worked with Mrs. Moore on the dinner arrangements and the display at the art center.

The work of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in assisting in sale of tickets and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners were also appreciated, Wooten stated. Special guests for the dinner included Mrs. J. A. Kellenburger of Greensboro, who with her mother, Mrs. Latham, provided funds for the restoration of Tryon Palace; Miss Gertrude Carraway of New Bern, chairman of the Tryon Palace Restoration Commission; W. S. Tarlton of Raleigh, representing the State Department of Archives and History; and Miss Mary Ward of New Bern.

Bus Riders Said On Honor System

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—Bus riders are on the honor system in Russia, according to a University of Rochester scientist who returned recently from a scientific convention in Moscow.

Dr. Elmer Stotz says Moscow bus riders pick up a ticket when they board the bus and deposit money in a toll box when they get off. And no one watches them to make sure they drop the money in.

State Protects Its Alligators

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Alligator hunting is no longer permitted in Florida, except by special permit from the state game commission. The permits are issued only for scientific, education or propagation purposes.

Finally Emerging As A 'Republic'

After years of Trujillo dictatorship, the Dominican Republic apparently is emerging as a genuine Republic to take its place among the other democratic nations of the Western Hemisphere.

The change has not come without internal conflicts within the country, and the establishment of a democracy in the true sense will not be achieved before other major problems are overcome. For the Dominican Republic, however, developments within the past few days make it appear that the country has thrown off at last the yoke of the Trujillo government and has launched out on a new course.

Obviously the new regime of President Joaquin Balaguer has the support of the government of the United States, and this country is prepared to send active military assistance to the new Dominican government if such is requested. The show of U.S. power which appeared off the coast of the Dominican Republic this weekend, plus Balaguer's assertion that internal strife "could result within the next hours in a foreign military intervention . . ." indicates clearly that the United States has committed itself to supporting the new democratic movement in the country.

Removal from power of carry-over officials from the Trujillo regime indicates that the new government in the Dominican Republic still fears the possibility that the organization built under the old dictatorship still threatens the country. It also reflects that the new government recognizes the danger communist attempts to take advantage of a situation of unrest which always accompanies a major government change in Latin America.

What has taken place in the Dominican Republic

Familiar Trend In Loan Agencies

By LYNN NISBET

SMALL LOANS — The trend in the small loan agency business is following the same pattern as in banking, grocery store operation and numerous other business activities. The trend is toward big chains absorbing the little independent operators.

While there has been much more activity in the small loan field since the beginning of the argument over tighter regulations early this year, the trend is not yet as marked in this field as in banking.

In many instances the transfer of ownership has little effect upon the customers or the community, because the loan agency continues to operate in the same quarters and more often than not with the same managers.

Another interesting development is that while the purchase and sales have resulted in a few more out of state operators taking over local business, by far the greater activity has been among foreign owners transferring title to North Carolina offices.

OWNERSHIP — The record of transfer of ownership of small loan office is kept in the banking commission in two sections. One period is from January 1, 1961, to August 19, 1961, the effective date of the new regulatory act. The other period is for the time since August 19, 1961, from January to August there were 14 transfers of ownership involving 81 small loan offices.

From August 19 to the present there have been 15 transactions involving 24 offices.

The amount of money involved in these deals is not on record in the banking commission. It is the responsibility of that agency only to determine if the purchaser and prospective operator can comply with the legal requirements for protecting the public.

Further breakdown in the transfer to title shows that between January 1 and August 19, 1961, 14 North Carolina firms brought 14 North Carolina owned offices; four foreign firms brought 20 North Carolina owned offices, and five foreign firms brought 47 offices previously operated by other out of state owners.

Since August 19 one North Carolina firm has bought one state office, and six out of state firms have bought 23 offices formerly operated by Tar Heels. Several of these had been affiliated with North Carolina chains.

These transfers in ownership result in the following status quo situation: There are (as of November 15) 599 local units or offices of small loan agencies. Of this number 266 are owned and operated by out of state firms; 233 are owned and operated by North Carolina chains (having two or more offices), and there are 100 entirely independent and individual North Carolina operations.

The total number of small loan units decreased by five during 1961. This decrease was due chiefly to consolidations effected when chains took over independents, or in one or two instances by local operators closing down offices which were unprofitable.

REGULATION — Almost everybody from Governor Sanford and Banking Commissioner Ben Roberts all down the list agrees that the small loan business needs stricter regulations than even the 1961 act imposes. Such control as is now provided by statute is divided between the Banking Commission and the Insurance Department, with some responsibility attached to other governmental agencies.

The 1961 act, which apparently nobody likes because it is a hybrid legislative offspring, did tend to stabilize the small loan business. Requirement for a $25,000 guarantee of lendable capital and a certificate of necessity and advantage from the banking commissioner protected the public against utterly irresponsible operators.

STUDY — Governor Sanford has indicated he thinks this subject needs further study as basis for additional legislation next session. The banking commission and the small loan operators join in the recommendation for further investigation.

Any such study should start from scratch, not from the premise that big out of state firms are gobbling up little North Carolina agencies. The trend in this field as in most business activity is toward consolidation and combination, and state lines have very little to do with developments.

in these last few days is important to all of the nations of the Western Hemisphere, because it represents removal of one of the thorns in the side of greater cooperation between the governments of this hemisphere. With the change, there is every reason to believe the Dominican Republic will be able to assume its rightful place among the other democratic governments of the inter-American group.

The Conviction Many May Have Overlooked

President Kennedy's assertion that war or surrender are not the only alternatives to the cold war struggle between East and West reflects a conviction that many Americans have come to overlook in recent years.

Unfortunately, it seems to us, there has been a growing feeling among Americans that this country is unable to compete effectively with the Soviets on a long-range basis unless there is open conflict. Reports on Soviet economic gains, the inroads they have made in countries adjacent to the iron curtain, and the unrest they have caused in many parts of the world have tended to leave the impression that they "out-do" us at every turn.

This is not the case, however. The economic strength of the United States places this country at a decided advantage when competing with the Soviets in the field of international trade. The universal appeal which democracy has for all people places the free world at a distinct advantage in its efforts to win new nations to the side of freedom and democracy.

The fear of tyranny and oppression, which have been the trade-marks of communism, are not small factors in the struggle to determine which ideology will eventually win major support throughout the world.

In many cases, we think, the American people are selling themselves and their government short by thinking there is no alternative except to fight a hot war or surrender to communism. We can and we must compete. We must not allow ourselves to become placid or over-confident in thinking that we have nothing to do but sit and wait for the world to come to us. And on the other hand it is just as dangerous for us to underestimate our own abilities to compete effectively. We cannot assume the fatalistic attitude that we are licked unless we pull out our nuclear weapons and fight.

It is not an easy thing to compete effectively in the cold war, but the United States has the ability and the resources to compete and do so effectively if it will.

A Coming Test For Easy Credit

By RALPH ROBEY

One of the clearly stated goals of the Kennedy Administration was to keep interest rates low. The reason was to encourage expansion of business, and the rates were to remain low until we had reached full recovery. That would mean no tightening of rates for many months from now, because we still are far from maximum production.

This policy carried a strong implication of criticism of the Federal Reserve System in past recessions. As a matter of fact, some of the Administration spokesmen openly stated that the Federal Reserve had choked off the recovery after the 1958 recession by unwise and too early restrictive credit policies.

Whether this charge is true can never be definitely decided, even with the advantage of hindsight. All we know is that the Federal Reserve does not take its responsibilities lightly, and when it moved to make credit easy to obtain, the action was based upon the most careful analysis, and the Reserve banks were convinced that they were operating in the best interest of the nation.

When the Kennedy easy-money policy was made known, there was some speculation that it might result in a harsh controversy with the Federal Reserve authorities, and the question was raised as to whether Mr. Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, would resign if the Administration persisted in its point of view. But that is not the way it has worked out.

Rather, the Federal Reserve authorities have been most cooperative. Their influence upon interest rates and the volume of credit is primarily through the buying and selling of U. S. Treasury obligations, although they also can change the discount rate and, within limits, vary the legal reserve which commercial banks must maintain. Since the current recovery started last March there has been no change in the rediscount rate or in the reserve requirement. In other words, all the action of the Federal Reserve has been in the purchase or sale of government paper. Through this mechanism the free reserves of the commercial banks have been held at approximately $500 million.

The cooperation has gone even beyond this. For many years the only Treasury paper the Reserve banks would buy was short-term. This was the "bill only" or "billie preferably" policy. Within recent months the Reserve banks have been buying a limited amount of long-term government paper. The unstated purpose of such buying on long-term bonds was to get a reduction of the interest rate charged on mortgages.

Has the policy been successful in keeping credit plentiful and the interest charges low? Before answering this question one additional act must be mentioned. This is that the demand for credit, both short- and long-term, has been unusually low in this recovery. Because of this there has been no reason for interest rates to advance, and this probably has been just as important as Reserve Board policy in keeping these charges at a low level.

But it does not follow that this situation will persist. Before many months the demand for credit will grow and this will exert an upward pressure upon interest rates. In fact a recent survey shows that there already has been a slight increase in the rate on mortgages. The change is quite small but it was on the upside, and this may well mean that there is more to come.

It is widely believed, too, that other rates also will move up before many months. At that time we shall have the real test of whether the Federal Reserve is determined to keep credit easy.

We think the decision will be that, in the interest of the nation and the continued soundness of the dollar, it is necessary to permit a moderate rise of interest rates.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NATURE OF FAITH
Most people regard faith simply as the capacity and willingness to believe certain things. The Bible teaches certain truths. We believe those truths; therefore, we say, we have faith.

But this is not the Biblical idea of faith. Faith involves belief, but faith goes far beyond belief. We are told in the Epistle to the Hebrews (11:1) that faith is "the evidence of things not seen," or, "the giving of substance to things hoped for."

In other words, faith is a spiritual power. It is a capacity of heart and mind which enables us to create something—to give it substance. By having faith that we can do certain things, we help bring those things to pass. By praying to God and then having faith that He will answer our prayers and grant our petitions, we cooperate with Him in the fulfillment of these desires.

Faith is the capacity of the human heart and mind whereby we assist God in His process of creation and achievement. When we have faith, we become channels through which God's power flows. Let us not believe that just because we believe the Bible, and the creeds, and attend church, that we have faith. We have faith when we trust God and let His power flow through us. And when we do this, we and God Himself become partners in projects which lead to triumphant achievement.

Faith is the giving of substance to things hoped for.

An Approach To Problem

Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The Kennedy Administration is making itself clear that it is not anti-business. The first important statement to that effect was made in a speech by the Attorney General, Robert F. Kennedy, who, discussing anti-trust enforcement, stated that it was not the intention of the Administration to harass business.

The Eisenhower Administration, while it gave the impression of being dominated by businessmen, conducted a strong anti-trust policy, going after some of the largest enterprises. The anti-trust policy of the Administration is not only related to the economic but also to social conditions in the country.

Three distinct problems need to be considered in relation to this situation:

1. The capitalist system can only continue to exist if competition is active. The suppression of competition by the formation of trusts is damaging to the capitalist system. The economic peril of trusts is that prices are fixed and monopolies come into existence. Attorney General Kenedy takes the position: "I view the businessman who engages in such conspiracies in the same light as I regard the racketeer who siphons off money from the public in crooked gambling, or the union official who betrays his union member."

2. The moral factor in this situation is that we adopt a dual standard, forgiving the rich and punishing the poor and unimportant. After all, the businessman knows when he is organizing in restraint of competition. Certainly his lawyer knows all about it. While in certain instances, there may be differences of opinion, in most, the organization of a trust is deliberate; price-fixing is deliberate. Those who engage in such activities have held meetings and discussed various problems related to a combination in restraint of trade. Their lawyers have advised them of the tolerable and intolerable gimmicks. Their public relations council have cautioned them. Therefore, if the organization of trusts and if price-fixing is against the law, the moral imperative is to avoid such activities or to get the law changed.

Attorney General Kennedy says of this: "When possible, I believe we should take action not only against the corporations and companies involved, but against the individuals who have participated in these frauds."

"I am against granting immunity to the individuals with the result that their cases end with their companies paying a fine. I think those responsible should be held responsible."

The third factor in this situation is the other side of the coin: big production cannot be handled by small enterprises. When, for instance, a company does a business of between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 a year, the problems of capitalization and of managerial organization are different from those which involve a shop that does $10,000 a year. A company that employs 250,000 workers has labor problems that are different from a husband and wife store.

Mergers often are essential to build an adequate agency of production. For instance, many electronic companies have recently come into existence, each making some parts but not a sufficient variety of production to meet the growing needs in this field.

It becomes essential to form mergers to manufacture a unit that meets the demands of the present situation. For instance some of the mergers are essential for the national defense because it is impossible to produce economically and to meet defense requirements. Small production can be very uneconomical and can add to the cost of the national defense.

This conflict between the law and the urgent needs of specific production has to be adjusted, but the place to make the adjustments is in Congress. The Executive official needs to enforce the law; if the people do not pressure upon Congress to change it. Usually the people want the law to stand but oppose enforcement if it affects them.

It seems to me that Robert F. Kennedy has offered business a distinct leadership in this connection — a leadership which should be accepted with good will. This does not mean that there will not be differences of view on this subject or that certain businesses will not require special consideration.

But it seems at the moment that the Attorney General is approaching the problem rationally and that a combination of Attorney General Kennedy, Secretary of Labor Goldberg and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Ribicoff can form a team that can work for the preservation of the capitalist system under the prevailing dire conditions.

Other Editors Saying... Must Go Slowly

(The Raleigh Times)

Governor Sanford has very wisely refused to be drawn into direct comment on the possibility of a special session of the General assembly to consider urgent needs left unfulfilled by the recent defeat of the bond issues.

There are so many things which must be so carefully weighed before there could be any such special session without real danger of opening a Pandora's box. Any one who doesn't believe that there was real resentment on the part of thousands of people in the vote against these bond issues, just hasn't bothered to talk to the people themselves. Until that resentment can be resolved, until its causes can be determined, until the people can get across to the leaders of this State just why they feel as they do, there should be no thought of a special session.

There must be study, too, to find out just where there was such spectacular failure to get to the hearts of the people with the real needs involved in many of these bond issues. The officials of the institutions of higher learning did work day and night during the bond issue campaign. They talked countless hours before countless civic clubs, but it is apparent that what they were talking about never really reached the people. Where was that failure? And why was it there?

There are some now who feel that the Advisory Budget Commission should reassess the urgent needs which were not met when the bonds failed. Is the Budget Commission the agency to do that job? After all, it is made up chiefly of legislators, and the members of the 1961 Legislature labeled all those bond issues as urgent needs. Would it be fair—and politically practical — to ask those same men to judge again the very urgency on which they handed down a verdict less than a year ago? And if those very same men did hand down a new verdict of urgency, would the people believe them any more than they did on last November 7?

There are some who feel now that it is vital to have a cooling-off period, a period of time during which all the dust and at least some of the bitterness can settle down. There is much to recommend such a period.

The one thing which is sure now is this: The leaders of North Carolina cannot again casually risk the cause of higher education as they did on November 7. There was a really casual air about much that was done — or that wasn't done — in preparation for that election.

The real needs of higher education grow each day in our State, and they will continue to grow during the time they will be partially unmet because some of those bond issues weren't approved. But it is better than to run the risk of another defeat for education by rushing into something not carefully and prayerfully planned out.

"As the base material for Japanese Worcester Sauce, soup made from fresh onions, garlic, tomatoes, and celery together is used. The said soup is seasoned with salt, sugar, honey, pure amino acids, soybean sauce and vinegar, and then it is made hot with pepper and capicum."

"A further addition of spiced vinegar to the above mixture finishes the preparations of Japanese Worcester sauce."

"Among various kinds of spices the most popular are native cinnamon of Ceylon, clove growing in Indo-China, vanilla, sage, mace in Inanoesia, and allspice in Central America, all of which are got from root, bark, or seeds of rare plants grown in the tropical and subtropical zones.

"These spices, when mixed properly with the special vinegar (acid liquid from fruit) come to give a unique aroma."

"The history of Japanese Worcester sauce dates back as far as 1896 when Kojiro Kimura first made a sauce in Osaka. According to the history he learned the sauce making process from C. T. Davis, an Englishman, who was a chef for an English ship."

Before you start snickering at the Japanese, read the label of the most popular American-made Worcester sauce:

"Prepared from soy, anchovies, eschalois, onions, tamarinds, garlic, vinegar, water, sugar, spices and flavoring." Get that: after Lee puts in soy, anchovies, eschalois, tamarinds, garlic, vinegar, sugar and spices, Perrins flavors it!

Friend Across Border

By ROGER BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass. — In these perilous times, it is a joy for me to discuss our nearest neighbor, Canada. A line more than 3,000 miles long separates us, and there is not a gun or any other form of "wall" or defense on this very long line between us and Canada. This certainly shows that some form of nuclear disarmament should be possible for all the world.

CANADIAN BUSINESS FOLLOWS U. S. BUSINESS
Canada is now enjoying a gradual recovery from the mild recession of a year ago. Industrial activity has turned upward, although to a modest extent. Canadian business, however, is subject to intense competition caused by overcapacity and a corresponding pressure upon prices and profits.

For some time Canada has been a leading trading country, surpassed only by the United Kingdom, the United States, and West Germany. In the year 1962, export markets have accounted for about 15 per cent of Canada's national output. The United States currently exports only 4 per cent of its output. As a result, the Canadian dollar fluctuates, and right now is worth less than the American dollar.

CANADA AND THE EUROPEAN COMMON MARKET
Concern has arisen that Canada's trading position may be hampered by the European Common Market. The great postwar impulse for multilateral trade in the Geneva Agreement on Tariffs and Trade is changing in favor of the United Kingdom. The European Common Market may develop into a new nation that could rival the population, production, and power of even the United States.

I believe Canada should examine carefully the above possibilities, and consider some form of association with Western Europe. Perhaps it should join this European Common Market, a move which might eventually influence the United States to join. This could result in a North Atlantic Trading Area of great strength to the "free world."

CANADA AND PREVAILING WAGES
Many in Canada feel that joining the Common Market would result in lower wages for Canada, in view of the lower wages prevailing in Europe. However, efficient workers can demand and secure high wages. I further believe that such a united front would do much to prevent Communism from working further westward.

We cannot have everything we want in this world, and we must have a spirit of "give and take"—economically, as well as militarily and politically. Also, Europeans should realize that only by including Canada can Western Europe extend its trading horizons to the Pacific Coast. It seems as if this could be a great advantage to the Common Market. The very talk makes me very optimistic.

CANADA AND NATURAL RESOURCES
Canada can supply Western Europe with oil, iron, copper, asbestos, sulphur, aluminum, nickel, pulp and paper products, and even fishery products. One of the first projects may be to build a pipeline for crude oil from Western Canada to Montreal. Relations with Venezuela are now being cultivated by the United States. How this will affect Canada's oil prospects is an open question.

The large sums of money have gone from the United States into Canada to help develop these natural resources. Very little of Canada's imported money has been for industrial goods, but mostly for investments or speculations in Canada's natural resources.

OUTLOOK FOR THE FUTURE
Factories may be built and go to decay; machinery may become obsolete; trade routes may change; but, at the worst, Canada's natural resources cannot be destroyed even though their exploitation may taper off for a few years. This means that Canada would profit from inflation, and investments there could be a good hedge for those who are fearful of inflation.

In closing, let me remind readers that Canada's economic growth has taken only about fifty years; and with her present political, social, and economic structure, this excellent growth should continue. Hence, businessmen and investors should be optimistic about the future of Canada, even with radically changing world conditions.

AFRICA HAS LOTS OF EARTH TO BE MOVED
There's a big market for earth-moving machinery in Africa, according to Hugh H. McGregor, director of Production Engineering Ltd., of London. However, he told a meeting at the Wall Street Club, American firms must teach Africans efficient ways to utilize the machinery. Costs are tripled if it is idle 75 per cent of the time, he observed.

Space Age Might See Better National Health As 'Dividend'

By ALTON BLAKESLEE, Associated Press Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Better national health could become one of the dividends from the space age. If, that is, American youngsters truly want to qualify for future space flights as pilots or scientific passengers.

A prime qualification is physical fitness, including normal weight, for space flight is a physical challenge.

And there's no magic formula, wonder vitamin or breakfast food to create a well-conditioned body. Fitness comes through exercise, sports, walking and use of the body.

Whether the dream of becoming astronauts will prompt more U.S. youngsters to greater physical activity remains to be seen. If it does, it could help allay recent concern that many Americans, including youngsters, are living too soft a life for their own good health.

That concern prompted two Presidents—Eisenhower and Kennedy—to summon White House conferences on physical fitness and how to encourage it. It has many doctors warning that flabbiness and over-stuffing with food are contributing to the high rate of heart attacks among American men and to degenerative diseases coming along too early.

They urge an early start and lifelong attention to keeping the human machine in good working order. Their advice includes more striding and less riding to school or office, more doing than watching of sports.

There's simply no question that astronauts must be healthy and fit. One major physical strain is the increased gravity exposure of take-off and re-entry of space capsules or spaceships. Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr. and fellow astronauts trained for that, explains Dr. Robert Voas, training officer for Project Mercury. Swinging around on a centrifuge and meeting increased gravity pull, they learned to tense their muscles, to make muscles squeeze down upon blood vessels and thus keep blood from rushing to extremities.

The astronauts learned to do this almost automatically, to take the gravity strain in stride, while performing other tasks. The first astronauts, U.S. and Soviet, are trained pilots. But this won't always be a requirement, says Dr. Voas. The space age presumably will call for scientists, observers, engineers, technicians and explorers to go riding along also for duties on space platforms, the moon or space re-fueling stations.

Songwriters In The Fight, Too

WASHINGTON (AP) — Songwriters as well as soldiers were joining battle 100 years ago when the nation was boiling in Civil War.

About 10,000 songs came into being as a result of the clash. One of them, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," marked its 100th birthday the past weekend.

With that number, Julia Ward Howe became one of the heroes in the battle of ballads. She devised the lyrics in a Washington hotel room after hearing federal troops use the tune to the words, "John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave."

The South fired the first telling salvo in the musical campaign with a tribute to South Carolina's secession from the union on Dec. 20, 1860. But with the surrender of Ft. Sumter the following April, George Frederick Root of Chicago leaped into the fray with a strident call to arms: "The First Gun Is Fired! May God Protect the Right!"

That outburst triggered a swarm of Root ballads, among them "The Battle Cry of Freedom," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," two of the best-known songs of the war.

Many of the songs were popular with both sides, which could easily substitute "Dixie" for "Union" and "Blue" for "Gray" in the lyrics. The tune of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was a favorite in South Carolina and Georgia camp meetings before the war—under the title, "Say Brothers Will You Meet Us on Cannan's Happy Shore?"

The Confederacy's unofficial national anthem, "Dixie," was written by a union supporter for a New York minstrel show in 1859. Abraham Lincoln took to the song and used it in his 1860 campaign before the South took it over.

Less Pilfering From Hostelries

MEMPHIS (AP)—Guests in hotels aren't pilfering towels and soap like they used to, Shelby Evans of Memphis told a regional convention of hotel room clerks here.

"Perhaps better economic conditions prevent them from taking these small items," was the theory advanced by U. G. Fayard of New Orleans. Evans said, "I think people are better educated and know more about how to conduct themselves away from home."

CHAPTER 20

Luis Perez slid out of his burning shoes and stretched out on his bed, trying to relax his body and calm his mind into some kind of order.

"The advantage lies with me," he reasoned. "I know where the jewel is. I can easily get out. I know I can easily get out." Idly he wondered why Carmelita had always insisted that he leave before Uncle Pedro rocked the gate.

"It's so simple to get out," he mused, returning to his main objective. "I know the little senora's room, the arrangement of the furniture, the closet that holds her clothes. It would be easy to hide there."

But Luis was uncertain. The senora would see him and she was sure to scream. Already his native caution was reasserting itself. What good would the jewel do him if he were taken by the police?

Restlessly he got off the bed and started to pace the room in noiseless stockings. His fear of exposure blotted out everything else. He was aware of his mind's inertia, his inability to push past the wall of conditioning. Besides, he was distracted by the needs of his body. He remembered that he had eaten nothing all day and realizing it, his hunger immediately became more important than anything else.

He shook the dry coffee pot, searched for a piece of bread, and found, instead, some small apples with tough, shriveled skins. He started to peel one with his pocket knife, then stopped, staring with fascination at the thin, shining blade. He pushed the blade back into its holder, snapped the release button and watched it pop out again.

Inadvertently he again pictured the senora's room, this time her bathroom, all shining tile, smelling faintly of lavender, and the window that looked out into the woods behind the Villa. The window! It had been open! He was sure of it!

How simple it all really was, he decided. He would cut the screen of the bathroom window and hide in the shelter of the trees. After the little senora was asleep, he would quietly, very quietly, crawl through the window, find her purse and get his jewel. He would move soundlessly and she would not awaken.

But what would he do if she did awaken? The dangerous question intruded above and below his planning.

"She won't even turn over," he assured himself. "But if she does..." He looked at the shining blade of the knife, ran his finger over the dull edge, put aside the half-peeled apple and searched through the drawer for a small, square whetstone.

From the sun-baked steps of the cathedral it appeared to Jessie Prewitt as if the sista had interrupted nothing. The endless procession was crossing and crisscrossing the Plaza.

"Not as hot as it was at noon," "It's as hot as it was at noon," Jessie commented, trying to adjust to the noise and confusion after the quiet intimacy of the church.

"Even though the shopkeeper had never handled a ring of this quality before, it was oddly familiar. There was no emerald in the mounting but, without it, the platinum band with the row of diamonds around the setting exactly matched a description that had been circulated by the police. Remembering the warning that a ring like this one was evidence in a murder case, the jeweler immediately called the authorities. According to the police blotter, at precisely four o'clock, on October tenth, the Indian was arrested.

Although this event was vital to his case, Inspector Menendes had not been notified. He was in his hot, airless office behind the police station filling out a complicated form from the Randall's insurance company and wishing that he were at home in the coolness of the courtyard.

The clock was ticking away the minutes of what had been a thoroughly annoying day. The phone rang, and the irritation which had been bubbling close to the surface all day overflowed. He picked up the receiver and snapped at the operator, "No more calls. No matter who it is, I'm not in."

And that was why, when the jeweler phoned, the message did not reach the inspector. Instead, the lieutenant in charge took the call and, knowing that there was a reward for the ring, it was he who went out to bring in the criminal.

"Brutality of any sort sickened the inspector. He considered it the final resort of stupidity, and when it was employed by the police he was ashamed to be numbered among them..." the story continues here tomorrow.

Pigeons Play An Off-Beat Symphony, With Whistles

By JANET FERRIS
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Pigeon whistling sounds like another college stunt, doesn't it?
 But Jim Howe, an extroverted octogenarian who lives in Walnut Creek, Calif., has found in pigeon whistling a new use for what many persons call a dirty bird.

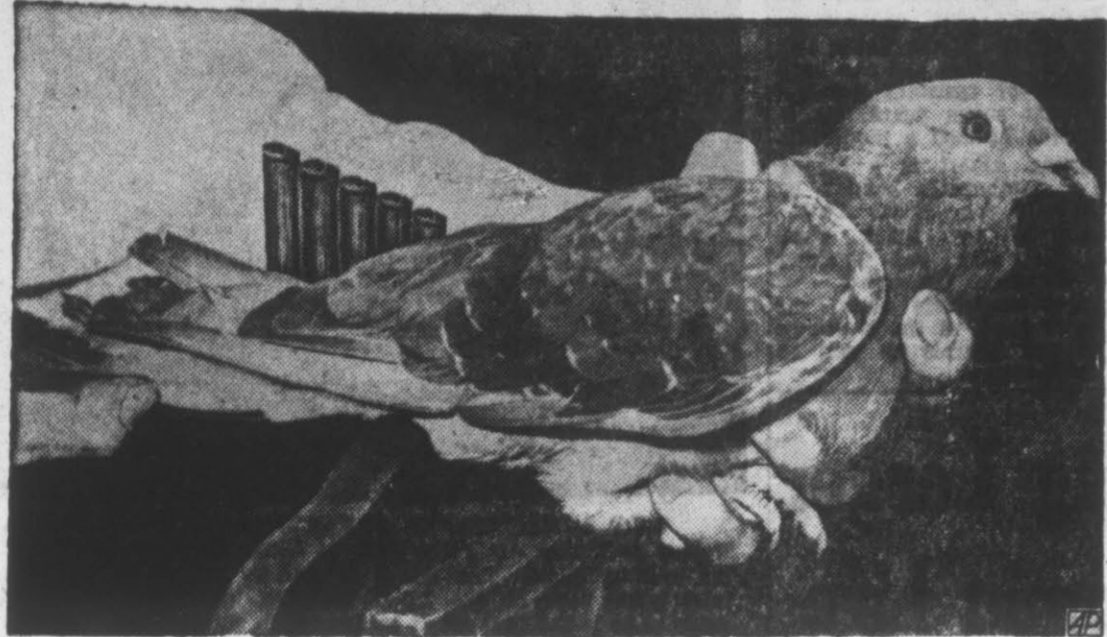

Pigeon whistling is the ancient Chinese sport in which flocks of the birds fly around with ornate, carved whistles attached to their feathers. Howe, who takes it seriously, puts on several pigeon whistling shows a year.
 Some whistles sound like an ensemble of flutes. Others are stronger and more resonant, emitting an off-beat symphony as the pigeons wish through the air. (So far concert master Howe hasn't been able to get his highflying musicians to play recognizable music.)

 Interested in China
 Howe, 82, is a former newspaperman who became interested in pigeon whistling when he reports from Peiping for the Associated Press for five years back in the 1930s. He organized his pigeon flock—about 250 birds—when he left the journalism field about 20 years ago.

 His birds are mostly homing pigeons, and he has 100 whistles. "It takes about half an hour to put whistles on one pigeon," Howe says. "You have to tie the middle two back feathers together to attach the whistle. So it takes about a month to put on a full show."
 Pigeon whistling goes back some 300 years in China, where Manchu warriors use the birds for carrying messages, Howe said. The whistles were supposed to scare away predatory birds like hawks.

Everybody Worked
 Making the whistles, the largest of which are about three square inches, was an all-family operation in China.
 "They had assembly lines. The children would whittle out bamboo pipes and the older children would put pipes together to make the whistles. The parents put on the finishing touches," said Howe.
 In addition to the bamboo whistles, which have orifices for as many as 19 separate pitches, some whistles were made from gourds grown in clay pots.
 Only three families made the whistles before the Chinese Communists took over in 1949, and Howe said he does not know what happened to the whistles. "I may have to go back and find out," he joked.

Owners Played Game
 "Pigeon whistling was a game played in the evenings," Howe explained.
 "The different owners would turn out their flocks. Sometimes a wanderer joined another flock, then the owner of the other flock got to keep both the pigeon and the whistles."
 "When the pigeons got lazy, the owner would shoot them off the roost with a long bamboo pole with a white flag on the end."
 "Then he'd tell the audiences: 'I'm guiding the pigeons—showing them how to fly.'" Howe's flock costs about $200 a year to feed, and a part-time hired man helps with the upkeep. No training is necessary; his pigeons adjust quickly to the whistles.
 "They like it," said Howe. "Before our pigeon shows, we keep them cooped up for a few days, so they fly around a lot when we let them out." He also guides the birds with a stick.
 As a grand finale to some of his pigeon shows, a dozen birds may land on the blades of a giant, slow-moving windmill just outside the aviary, and a dozen whistles blend in the night air.

NEW MEMBER OF THE CHORUS—Jim Howe holds a pigeon to whose back feathers he has just attached a Peter Pan whistle capable of emitting five tones.

300-YEAR-OLD WHISTLE—The most valuable pigeon whistle in Jim Howe's collection is this oddly shaped instrument made 300 years ago in China.

WIND SONG—with carved whistles attached to their feathers, Jim Howe's pigeons fly around the aviary, making music on the wing.

The Tuesday morning session will hear from Dr. Brooks James, dean of agriculture at North Carolina State College; and U.S. Sen. Sam J. Ervin, senior Tar Heel senator.

The speaker Tuesday afternoon will be Charles Marshall, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau. Delegates will meet in district caucuses Tuesday to nominate directors and members of the women's committee.
 Awards for distinguished service to agriculture will be made Tuesday night at a banquet session.

House Democrats Could See Floor Leader Battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — As an aftermath of Speaker Sam Rayburn's death, House Democrats may be caught up in contest over who will become floor leader.

The possibility of a fight was raised Sunday by the disclosure that Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri will seek the post left open when Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts steps up, as is expected, to the speakership.

While Bolling himself was not available for comment, it was learned on the best authority he will challenge Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma for the floor leadership.

Bolling had been the only name mentioned as a likely opponent of McCormack for the speakership. His decision to run for the No. 2 post in the House high command made it almost certain McCormack would succeed Rayburn.

McCormack became acting speaker when cancer forced Rayburn to leave the capitol last August.

Albert was designated acting floor leader by McCormack and his formal election had been taken for granted until Bolling decided to make it a contest. Albert made his own entrance official Sunday night, when he formally announced at his McAlester, Okla., home that he would seek the post.

A caucus of House Democrats will select the new speaker and floor leader shortly before the House reconvenes Jan. 10. Unless Bolling or Albert withdraws before then, the caucus could develop into a knock-down, party-splitting affair that could jeopardize President Kennedy's legislative program, already in trouble in the House.

Bolling, 45, has long been identified with the liberal group in the House, although he calls himself a moderate. He has served since 1949 and is a member of the powerful Rules Committee, where he was Rayburn's chief spokesman.

Albert arrived at the House two years before Bolling and has been party whip—or assistant leader—for the past seven years. He is 53 and calls himself a moderate.

Supporting Albert is a strong group of Southerners headed by Rep. Howard W. Smith, D-Va., chairman of the Rules Committee. He also has backing among Northern Democrats.

Bolling's supporters claim the backing of most of the Northern and Western liberals as well as some Southerners.

NOT A HALLOWEEN CREATURE—George W. Herren, welder at Tinker Air Force Base at Oklahoma City, peers over his welding blister. The blister is used by Herren in repairing inlet guide vane on the TF-33 turbofan jet engine. The inlet guide vane is the first set of blades which outside air encounters as it enters the engine. A highly toxic gas is created when the blades are heated and the welding blister is placed around the vane assembly. Argon gas is pumped inside. The welder uses the plastic arms to reach various parts of the assembly. (AP Wirephoto)

Declares South Doomed At Start

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—The South was doomed to failure even before the first shot was fired in the war between the states, a University of Florida educator said today.

In a paper prepared for the fifth annual Civil War Conference here, Rembert W. Patrick declared: "... Southern political leaders faced an impossible task in the attempt to win Southern independence."

"Ideologically the South attempted to stem the trends of history; in an age when western civilization emphasized human freedom, the South defended slavery; in a period of increasing industrialization, the South clung to an agrarianism based on a controlled labor supply; in an era of nationalism, the South supported division and localism."

Combined with "the superiority of the North over the South in men and material," Patrick said the war's outcome was inevitable.

He said the leadership of the Confederacy under Jefferson Davis, while wanting in some aspects, nonetheless "secured more for their people than other Americans have given their country in any war."

Camera Playing Larger Role In Economic Life

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—A camera taking 360 degree photos every 8 feet down a 500-foot hole in the ground helps the Hughes Tool Co. design new drilling bits for oil prospectors.

By measuring electronically the color of molten steel in a furnace on a color photograph Bethlehem Steel can make sure its product is at the required temperature.

Shell Oil geologists study aerial photographs to judge prospects of finding oil, and often save themselves a trip that way.

Monsanto chemical says photography has cut drafting time in its plant maintenance program by 30 per cent.

All of this is why more and more industrial and business firms are setting up their own photographic departments.

At least 9,600 companies employ one or more photographers, double the number 10 years ago, according to Fred Quellmaiz Jr., executive manager of the Professional Photographers of America, with headquarters in Milwaukee.

And a huge, if uncounted, number of outside photographers are used by these and other corporations on an ever growing variety of assignments.

Many of the research operations, Quellmaiz said in an interview, couldn't function without photography.

He explained: "Cameras can stretch or condense time, can be sent where men cannot go, can relieve the tedium and expense of recording data by human observation, can be teamed with other instruments such as microscope and spectroscope, can see forms of light and other radiation man's eyes cannot."

The public is most familiar with industrial photography as it shows up in ads or commercials.

But a big part of the job of corporate photography departments is for use within the companies themselves. This runs from controlling production to plant payoffs, product development, inventory control, engineering, inspection, handling, traffic, inspection, employ training, reproducing and duplicating.

Many companies use photographs for training personnel. For example, Bendix's Eclipse Pioneer Division at Teterboro, N.J. uses a slide viewer synchronized with a tape recorder. The novice worker presses a foot switch to see each operation he must perform, and at the same time hear spoken instructions.

Sears, Roebuck uses photos to speed ordering of the thousands of spare parts in its inventory. Customers use a microfilm projector-viewer to choose the replacement parts.

Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. says 90 per cent of all contracts call for progress pictures.

High-speed photography often is used so the action can be slowed down enough for human observation. Massachusetts Institute of Technology photographs bats in flight with high speed cameras and infrared film to help understand radar and sonar systems.

Microphotographs with magnification up to 50,000 diameters are used in industrial research. Exposures of one-billionth of a second have been achieved in missile research.

Ray Milland's Son Ready To Launch Acting Career

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Danny Milland is a handsome giant who might well climb the ladder to movie fame, as his dad did.

Danny, the full-grown sprout of Oscar-winning Ray, is on the first rung: He's got a contract.

He's also got the best of auspices. He's the first actor signed by Artists and Production Associates, Inc. The men behind the formidable title are Jack Lemmon, producer-directors Blake Edwards and Richard Quine and veteran talent executive Max Arnow.

I met young Danny in Arnow's office. Danny's quite a lad—21, 6-feet-5, 175 pounds, straight black hair, broad, smiling face. He is well-spoken and articulate.

The resemblance to Rock Hudson is likely to be seized upon.

"But Rock was just a farm boy

"He's resigned to it, I guess," said Danny. "He wanted me to seek a professional career—any thing but acting. He's a bit disappointed."

"But he's been a help to me," Danny went on. "Once I was having trouble learning lines, and I asked him how to do it. He told me I had to learn the other person's lines first. Then I would know how to react. Reaction is the important thing, I'm learning."

It was on a trip to Europe last summer that Danny made the decision to try for an acting career.

"Naturally I had thought about it," he explained. "I even took a course in acting at UCLA. But I had never made any decision one way or another."

Danny came home, contacted an agent friend who started taking him around to the talent buyers. Arnow bought.

"I had him read a scene for me," said Arnow. "He was bad; he was acting too much. I told him to forget acting and just be natural. He did the lines again, and he was fine."

How does his father feel about his budding career?

The pup was snatched from Tony's arms by two unknown teen-agers and returned to Tony's mother a day later at a parking lot rendezvous where a teen-age boy, who said he was acting as a go-between, delivered the dog and collected $25. He said the money was to go to the abductors. Tony's father has offered $50 reward for arrest of the dognapers. (AP Wirephoto)

Room-Stuffing Record Claimed

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Students at the University of Buffalo claim a record for intercollegiate room-stuffing.

They said 233 students were stacked from the floor to the ceiling of a 17 x 20-foot dormitory room Sunday after the furniture was removed and the windows boarded up.

The Buffalo students said that eclipsed a record of 225 set at the University of Kentucky.

"We could have gotten more in there," said one Buffalo student, "but it was pretty hot and one of the guys started to complain."

Thin Bones Of Play Needed The Old Cast

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—If ever the acting magic of Ingrid Bergman and the late Leslie Howard was demonstrated, it was Sunday night when NBC's "Theatre 62" adapted the screen play "Intermezzo" into an hour-long television play.

Without the stars of the original movie, the bare bones of this thin little plot were painfully visible. It was just another story of a self-indulgent man on an extramarital romp.

Jean Pierre Aumont played the man as overbearing and selfish. Neither beautiful Ingrid Thulin nor Teresa Wright, playing the mistress and the forsaken wife, had much to do except wring their hands.

The most interesting venture of the weekend was Friday night's "Vincent Van Gogh, a self portrait," on NBC. The photography was superb. Often the film camera lingered on a view which the painter had fixed on his canvas, and then we saw the painting.

The color was magnificent. But only a tiny fraction could see it—and in Van Gogh's paintings, color is the very essence of his work.

With so many TV shows in trouble because of low ratings, all sorts of efforts are being made to attract public attention to their weekly efforts. Historically, however, it has been demonstrated that the only way to build up a falling series is by producing better, more interesting shows. This, economically, is impossible for most of the filmed series because of Hollywood's production line methods and the system of shooting programs so far in advance.

Sometimes, however, a program is in a bad position because it is opposite very strong competition. Last year, a pretty good action-adventure show, "Hong Kong" was killed by strong competition from "Wagon Train." This year, NBC moved its "Bonanza" out of its Saturday night line-up where it ran second to "Perry Mason" and put it into the Sunday schedules. Now the show has shot up to a top spot in the Nielsen ratings—even ahead of its former rival.

Recommended tonight—"Thriller, NBC, 10-11 (EST)—Doro Merande and June Walker in "A Third for Pinocchio."

Tank Of Oxygen Might Spell Life In Big-City Attack

Oxygen tanks would help against one hazard in firestorms.

By PROF. WILLARD F. LIBBY

As one item for my poor poor man's shelter, I am seriously considering a tank of oxygen.

For one danger from nuclear bombing is firestorms, in which an entire city is set afire by the tremendous heat from the fireball.

Incendiary bombing sent great firestorms raging through Hamburg and Tokyo in World War II.

In Hiroshima, a firestorm broke out 20 minutes after the bombing and caused heavy loss of life. Many fires set by the bomb's heat, and by the coals from overturned stoves, became a general conflagration.

Rising hot air sucked in air from all sides to feed the fire, as in a forest fire, or the draft in your chimney. Winds of 30 to 40 miles per hour developed in Hiroshima's firestorm.

Firestorms could develop in cities, or in suburban areas too, where houses are fairly close together, if the climate or season were dry.

They are not a danger to farmhouses, or areas where houses are widely separated.

A Small Shelter Hazard
In small family shelters in suburban or city areas, though, a firestorm could be serious, not just from lack of oxygen drawn by the fire, but contamination of the shelter air by carbon monoxide.

A tank of oxygen, connected to face masks in a system like that in jet airplanes, could supply oxygen for people in shelters during the few hours when a firestorm might burn around them.

One tank of oxygen should suffice for a family of four or more.

A tank with a needle valve could be equipped with a hose and outlets for individual masks for each person. A firestorm would not be likely to poison the air for more than a few hours, and simple masks could supply enough oxygen.

The tank should not be used, as in a hospital, to release oxygen under a tent. And it could not be used to release oxygen generally into the shelter. Masks would be needed.

A brick or concrete building might well not burn down in a firestorm, but even so persons in its basement shelter could be suffocated. So could those in open hole-in-the-ground shelters outside, even though they were protected from fallout or blast by concrete or dirt. Oxygen tanks could save them.

Oxygen supplies would be wise in underground community shelters, to be used while fire burned outside, and the shelter was completely sealed.

Sealed shelters require pumps to circulate air. So, more than incidentally, a hand pump system is advisable in case of power failure, either from the utility line or from the gasoline-driven electric generator within the shelter.

Get Rid of Litter!
Subways with their miles of tunnels might well withstand firestorms without an oxygen problem. Large underground garages or other public shelters could require special protection, perhaps through fire doors, in case of big fires.

Fire departments in cities and towns can advise about fire protection and risks in various types of shelters from oxygen depletion or carbon dioxide build-up.

Heat or thermal effects from nuclear weapons reach out vastly farther than the direct radiation from the bomb, or even the blast effect.

The heat from a one-megaton bomb could cause second degree burns on bare skin over a radius of nine miles, and from a 10-megaton bomb over a radius of 25 miles. For a 100-megaton bomb, the heat effect could extend about 75 miles.

All you need to avoid the burn is something between you and the fireball, unless it's terribly close.

At many miles from a bomb, the heat could be strong enough to ignite curtains, paper, trash, kindling fuels and combustibles.

Good housekeeping to keep the area around your house free of easily-burnable material can help reduce the fire hazard. (Tomorrow: How to help your children.)

How A President Relaxes On Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How does a president of the United States relax on a sunny Sunday afternoon?

President Kennedy took second helpings of a big dinner, kicked off his shoes, slouched in his chair and talked of trivial things for three hours. It did him a world of good.

Occasion was a small luncheon given by his sister, Patricia, and her actor-husband, Peter Lawford.

In a climate vastly warmer than Washington, Berlin or Moscow, the young chief executive talked of movies and moviemaking with Hollywood chums of the Lawfords.

Occasionally, he kidded with young Chris Lawford, his nephew, and Barron Hilton Jr., grandson of the hotel tycoon. To them, he was "Uncle Jack."

As he relaxed in the Lawford backyard — the Santa Monica beachfront — sun bathers and beach strollers gawked but respected his lazy retreat.

Dressed in faded blue dungarees, sport shirt and gray sweat-shirt — and no shoes — the President sprawled in a beach chair. For three hours, he looked more like a Harvard sophomore than the chief of a world power.

"It did him good to forget things for a while," Lawford said. "It seemed to relax him immensely."

The President chatted and laughed with director and Mrs. Billy Wilder, actress Angie Dickinson and Alvin Cluster. Cluster was skipper of the ship which rescued him from an island in enemy-held South Pacific waters during World War II.

When luncheon was finished, a smiling president went into the kitchen and congratulated Della Bradley, the Lawfords' Negro cook.

The President, famed for a hearty appetite, started off with cold vichyssoise with chives, then a main course of squab cooked with currant jelly and brandy and stuffed with wild rice. Peas and onions were the vegetables. Dessert was home-baked chocolate tarts.

Everything was home-cooked except the imported Dutch beer the President used to wash down the big meal.

Miss Dickinson, one of the most tireless of Kennedy campaign workers, sat on his left and Mrs. Wilder on his right. Only 12 people were at the luncheon.

"He talked mostly about movies," said M. D. Dickinson. "He seemed to be interested in what we were doing. He didn't talk much about politics or the world situation."

After lunch the President changed back into his working clothes. A motorcade sped him back to the Beverly Hilton Hotel where a packet of papers, just flown in from Washington, needed studying.

Today, in Washington, the President meets with chancellor Konrad Adenauer. Subject: Berlin — East and West.

Has Art Exhibit At Rocky Mount

Prints and paintings by Donald R. Sexauer, faculty member of the department of art at East Carolina College, are now being shown at the Rocky Mount Art Center. The exhibition will be open to the public through November 30.

Included in the show by the East Carolina faculty artist are twelve casein paintings and eight woodcuts, lithographs, and etchings.

Among works now on exhibition at Rocky Mount Art Center is "Tobacco Planters," a woodcut based on a North Carolina theme. It attracted favorable attention at the recent annual Faculty Artists Exhibition in the Rawl building on the campus here.

"Doll House," a painting for which Mr. Sexauer's small daughter provided the model, is an imaginative study of the ingenuity of a child at play. Also included in the exhibition is a self-portrait by the artist.

A member of the faculty at East Carolina since September, 1960, Mr. Sexauer is in charge of the graphics art program in the Department of Art. An exhibiting painter and lithographer since joining the college faculty here, he gave a one-man show in the Hallway Gallery at the college here last March under the sponsorship of the Department of Art.

COLLEGE STADIUM—The Pirates of East Carolina College closed the 1961 football season Saturday night with a 20-20 tie against the Terriers of Wofford College after coming from behind with one minute left on the clock.

The tie ball game gave the East Carolina eleven a 5-4-1 record for the season compared to a 7-2 record last year. Wofford has one more game to play, but at the present time they have a 5-3-2 record.

First Pirate Touchdown
 The first score of the night came late in the first quarter after end Bobby Bumgardner recovered a Wofford fumble on the East Carolina 37 yard line. From here it took the Pirates seven plays to cover the 63 yards for paydirt.

The score came when quarterback Dan Rouse completed a pass from the 32 yard line to halfback Tommy Matthews who ran the remaining 10 yards for the touchdown. The surface catch by Matthews had the fans scared for a moment when the ball looked like it was going to bounce out of his hands. However, the senior halfback managed to pull it down and put the Pirates ahead. The extra point try by Bob Muldrow failed. Lead Held Until 3rd Stanza

 The Bucs' six-point lead held until the final minute of the third quarter when Wofford managed to gain their first score of the night and made the extra point taking the lead 7-6.

The scoring for the Terriers was done by Gary Whitlock, a 5-foot 11-inch 190-pound senior. For East Carolina Matthews made two of the touchdowns and freshman halfback Larry Rudisill scored the final touchdown that tied the ball game.

The Pirates outplayed the visitors as far as yardage was concerned. While their rushing yardage was a good bit less than Wofford's, they made up for it as Rouse completed nine out of 15 passes for a total of 159 yards. In all, East Carolina gained 338 yards to the 291 gained by Wofford.

Defensive Battle
 After the first Pirate touchdown the game turned into a defensive battle between the two clubs. The Bucs got to the Wofford 12 yard line one time and hoped for a field goal, but a delay of the game penalty put the ball on the 17 yard line and the kick by Muldrow fell short. Wofford took over on their own 20 yard line.

Two plays later East Carolina recovered a Terrier fumble and again had a chance to score. However, a six-yard loss and a 15-yard penalty dimmed the Bucs' scoring hopes when they failed to gain a first down and Wofford took possession.

Stopped By Clock
 The next time the Pirates got the ball there was less than a minute left on the clock in the first half. They were able to get to the Wofford 37 yard line before time caught up with them. As the second half got underway both teams had possession for a series of downs. The Wofford scoring drive began when they gained possession after a long 65-yard punt by freshman Gene Isenhour.

Quarterback Tom Ellis completed a pass to end Hoyt Burnett covering 33 yards on the play to the East Carolina 37 yard line. On the next play halfback Bob Roma ran the right end for 13 yards to the Pirate 20 yard line.

Pirates Club To Meet Tuesday
 The East Carolina Pirates Club will hold its last weekly Dutch dinner meeting in the South dining hall of the main cafeteria Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

Announcements concerning the annual football banquet to be held Dec. 12 will be made by Club President N. F. Merritt.

Roma then ran through his left tackle spot to the EC four yard line. Whitlock carried to the two yard line where he was stopped by a strong East Carolina defense.

Wofford Takes Lead
 The touchdown came when Whitlock carried over from two yards out. The extra point try by Jim Brannon was good and the Terriers took the lead 7-6.

The Wofford eleven scored again about midway through the fourth quarter to strengthen their lead after Roma returned an ECO punt to the Pirate 44 yard line. Halfback Bobby Hipp carried the ball to the Pirate four yard line for a 26 yard gain. Center Chuck Gordon stopped the Wofford junior from going all the way.

The touchdown came when Whitlock went over the center from two yards out. Again Brannon's kick was good and the Terriers were leading by eight points. The Pirates wasted no time in trying to tie up the game. They needed a touchdown and two extra points. With senior fullback Nick Hilgert and Rudisill carrying the ball the Bucs traveled to the Wofford 42 yard line.

Completed Pass
 A completed pass by Rouse to Matthews on the 10 yard line provided the final touch. The senior halfback stepped off the remaining 10 yards for the score. The Pirates were all set to tie the game at this point. Rouse attempted to run for two extra points, but he was stopped short of the goal line and the Terriers remained in the lead 14-12.

It took the Wofford boys just seven plays to score their third and final touchdown of the night with slightly more than three minutes on the clock. The scoring drive totaled 63 yards with the final punch coming when Whitlock ran through his own right tackle spot from 17 yards out for the score. This time Brannon's extra point try failed and gave the Pirates another chance to tie the game.

Pirates Tie Game
 With one minute left on the clock the Pirate offense pained what turned out to be its final touchdown of the '61 campaign. The score came after two completed passes by Rouse put the Bucs on the Wofford seven yard line. A low swing pass to the left was snatched up by Rudisill who did some fancy running down the sideline for the score.

In order to tie the game the Bucs needed the two-point conversion. A pitch-out by Rouse to Matthews provided these two points when the "scoter" ran his own left end for the conversion which tied the game. The Terriers did not give up hope. After they were forced to punt luck was with them. Whitlock recovered a Pirate fumble and they were in business again. Ellis attempted several long passes which were broken up on the goal line by Frank Galloway and Matthews.

Hickey Says Penalties Are What Killed N. Carolina

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 "Penalties killed us. Every time I turned around we had one."
 That was the comment of North Carolina football Coach Jim Hickey after Duke beat the Tar Heels 6-3 Saturday, clinching the Atlantic Coast Conference title.
 But it was one particular penalty—a 15-yarder coming on the heels of Duke halfback Dean Wright's spectacular run with an intercepted pass in the closing seconds—that killed the Tar Heels.
 Wright intercepted the pass on his own 29 and raced to the North Carolina 37 yard line where he was tackled by two Tar Heels. The winning field goal might possibly have been booted from that distance, but the penalty put the ball on the Tar Heel 22, making it easier for Duke's Billy Reynolds to score the 3-pointer. Two seconds remained on the clock at that time.
 The penalty that made things easier for Reynolds was called because the North Carolina player who tackled Wright grabbed Wright's face protector bar.
 "It was one of the hardest games I've ever lost," Hickey said.
 Duke Coach Bill Murray was happy with the victory but said the game was not Duke's best, "because we got too high for it and did not take advantage of our opportunities."

 The victory gave the Blue Devils a 5-1 conference record and their third ACC title. They also have shared two championships with Maryland.
 While Duke was clinching the title, Maryland's John Hannigan booted a fourth-quarter field goal to lift the Terps to a 10-7 victory over Wake Forest and into a tie for second place in the conference standings. Both the Terps and the Tar Heels have 3-2 conference records. The victory also kept Maryland's bowl hopes alive. Maryland's 7-2 over-all record is the best in the conference. Duke is 6-3 in all games.
 Wake Forest is in seventh place in the ACC with a 2-4 record.
 Meanwhile, Roman Gabriel had one of the biggest—if not the biggest—days of his career as he directed North Carolina State to a 38-14 victory over South Carolina. He hit on 17 of 22 passes for 215 yards and two touchdowns, scored two touchdowns himself and gained 40 yards on the ground.
 That gave N.C. State a 3-3 record in conference play, while

South Carolina is next at 3-4. Clemson, 2-5 in the conference, stamped Furman of the Southern Conference 35-6, perhaps throwing a damper on Furman's bowl hopes.
 Virginia, 1-3 in the conference, lost to Navy, 13-3. Bob Rowley's field goal was Virginia's only score.
 This Saturday, North Carolina plays at Wake Forest, Maryland at Virginia, North Carolina State at Clemson, and South Carolina at Vanderbilt.
 Duke has an open date Saturday. The Blue Devils close their season Dec. 2 by entertaining Notre Dame.

Players To Vote On Bowl Game

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—The Citadel football players were expected to vote today on whether they want to play in the Tangerine Bowl game at Orlando, Fla., next month.
 Coach Eddie Teague said a Tangerine Bowl spokesman called him last Wednesday and asked if his team would be interested if offered a bid. Teague said he replied that he would rather not say until the season ended. The Citadel defeated Arkansas State 28-6 Saturday to finish with a 7-3 record for the season.
 Teague said the spokesman told him he would call again Monday (today) for his answer. Teague said the players would vote on whether they wanted to go.
 The Citadel, winner of the Southern Conference title defeated Tennessee Tech 27-7 in the 1960 Tangerine Bowl.
 Teague said a bid to play in the new Aviation Bowl at Dayton, Ohio, had been rejected.

Scradato's Lead Increased To 10

GREENSBORO (AP)—Ron Scradato of Clemson has increased his lead to 10 points in the Atlantic Coast Conference's individual scoring race.
 Scradato scored one touchdown in Clemson's victory over Furman Saturday to give him seven for the season and a total of 42 points.
 Next, with 22 points each, according to ACC Service Bureau figures, are Billy Gambrell of South Carolina and Donnie Frederick of Wake Forest. Each scored one touchdown Saturday.
 End Gary Collins of Maryland, second last week, failed to score Saturday and has 28 points. Teammate John Hannigan also has 28.
 Hannigan and Bill Reynolds of Duke have tied Wake Forest's Mickey Walker for most field goals in a single season in the ACC. Each now has four. Reynolds kicked two to give Duke its 6-3 victory over North Carolina, and Hannigan kicked the winning field goal as the Terps beat Wake Forest 10-7. Reynolds has a total of 21 points.
 Other players with 20 or more points are Lon Armstrong of Clemson, 27; Roman Gabriel, N.C. State, 25; Bob Elliott, North Carolina, 25; Mark Leggett, Duke, 22; and Gib Carson, North Carolina, 20.

Greenville Will Host Sanford In 3-A Title Game

Sanford and Greenville will face each other in the East Carolina College Stadium Thursday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. for the Eastern 3-A football championship.
 The site and date were revealed late Sunday after the coaching staffs from the two schools met to work out the arrangements.
 Rose High Touchdown Club President Wiley Forbes has announced that there will be no reserved seats for the Thanksgiving day battle. However, an advance ticket sale is being conducted. Tickets are on sale at the high school and in various stores in the downtown section.

Tittle Has Passed Giants Into First Place In NFL

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Y. A. Tittle, New York's bald bomber, has passed the Giants into first place in the National Football League's Eastern Conference donnybrook, but he needed a record-breaking performance by Cleveland's Jimmy Brown to complete the job.

While Tittle was leading the Giants to a 42-21 thumping of Pittsburgh with a three-TD performance, Brown rushed for a one-game record of 242 yards and scored four touchdowns as the Browns blitzed Philadelphia 45-24 Sunday and knocked the Eagles out of a tie for the top spot.

Brown, league ground gaining champion all four years he's been in the NFL, eclipsed his own mark of 237 yards set in a game in 1957 by averaging over seven yards a carry and added 52 yards by catching three passes.

The loss was Philadelphia's second in succession—the Giants administered a 38-21 beating last week—and dropped the defending champions into a second-place tie with the Browns, one game back of the Giants, New York 18, 8-2, Cleveland and Philadelphia 7-3.

The Green Bay Packers, playing for the first time without scoring king Paul Hornung, maintained their 1½ game edge in the Western Conference race by whipping Los Angeles 35-17 for an 8-2 record with four games to play.

The Detroit Lions, runners-up in the West at 6-2-1, rolled to a 37-10 victory over Minnesota while San Francisco put a damper on Chicago's hopes with a 41-31 triumph over the Bears. Baltimore blanked St. Louis 16-0 and Washington ended its losing streak by tying Dallas 28-28.

71 and 46-yarders to rookie Aaron Thomas to beat the Bears (5-5). Billy Wade threw three TD passes for the Bears, who lost their third in a row.

Steve Myhra kicked three field goals for the Colts (5-5) after the Johnny Unitas to Lenny Moore combination had connected for a 17-yard scoring pass and the only touchdown against the Cards (4-6), who were unable to penetrate beyond the Baltimore 42.

For a happy guy who was supposed to be washed up a month ago, George Blanda is mighty active in professional football.

The 33-year-old quarterback, veteran of a dozen years in pro ranks, showed 'em Sunday that there's no substitute for experience—he threw seven touchdown passes in guiding Houston to its fifth straight victory in the American Football League.

The Oilers, with Blanda either passing for or kicking all the points — he booted seven extra points—bashed New York 49-13 to stay on top of the Eastern Division by a half-game.

The way the Oilers are moving, they look like a pretty good bet to administer the first defeat of the season to San Diego, already champion of the Western Division.

The two meet Dec. 3 in what could be a preview of the playoff. However, the Oilers are not thinking about San Diego right now—they play Denver at Houston next Sunday.

Greensboro Open Purse Increased

GREENSBORO (AP) — The purse for next spring's Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament has been increased to $35,000, a record amount for the event, one of the oldest on the PGA tour.

The winner will get $5,300. The sponsoring Greensboro Junior Chamber of Commerce made the announcement Saturday.

Ala. Has Choice Of Bowl Bids

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

While Alabama, the king of college football, debates which bowl offer to accept, a full-scale ruckus broke out today, triggered by speculation that the University of Colorado was about to be snubbed by the Orange Bowl.

Alabama, one of the two remaining major unbeaten powers since the stunning 6-0 defeat of Texas by Texas Christian Saturday, apparently has its choice of the Rose Bowl or Cotton Bowl.

Bama Coach Bear Bryant confirmed his club had been approached to play in the Rose Bowl, indicating the tradition of plucking a Big Ten team for the Pasadena classic is being scrapped.

The Crimson Tide (9-0) can't accept anything until after its final game against Auburn Dec. 2, because of Southeastern Conference regulations. Alabama, No. 2 in the current Associated Press poll, crushed Georgia Tech 10-0 last Saturday.

Meanwhile, angry rumblings came from the University of Colorado after reports that the Orange Bowl favored Kansas. The Big Eight sends the visiting team to the Orange Bowl, but it does not have to select the champion.

Colorado (8-1) already has clinched at least a tie for the league title, but the Buffalos, according to some members of the Orange Bowl committee, have been unimpressive in their last two starts. Kansas, beaten only by Colorado in the league, has won six straight with an explosive offense.

"The contract and the conference should be investigated if we are bypassed," thundered Colorado Coach Sonny Grandelius. "I don't care what anyone says, we're entitled to play in the Orange Bowl."

Kansas, besides losing to Colorado in the Big Eight, dropped a non-league game to Texas Christian and was tied by Wyoming early in the season.

"What's the sense of playing for a conference title if it doesn't have any meaning? We might as well forget about the conference and start playing exclusively for a bowl invitation."

With the downfall of Texas there was no team capable of arguing with Alabama for the top spot in the nation. Rutgers (8-0), which already has spurned bowl invitations, is the only other undefeated-untied major team. The Scarlet smothered Colgate 26-6 Saturday.

So with the regular season closing next Saturday, the bowl promoters still are in a mad scramble.

Here is the current rundown:
ROSE—Waiting for an answer from Alabama. Assuming the Crimson Tide whips Auburn, Bryant probably will jump at the California trip. This sidetracks the two Big Ten hopefuls, Minnesota (7-1) and Ohio State (7-4-1). The UCLA-Southern California game Saturday will decide the host school.

If Alabama accepts, it will rule the heavy favorite. Neither UCLA nor Southern Cal have been spectacular this season. Both lost last Saturday. Washington dropped UCLA 17-13, and Pitt edged Southern Cal 10-9.

ORANGE — The visiting team will be Colorado or Kansas. Louisiana State, 14-6 winner over Mississippi State, already has disassociated itself with the Sugar league crown. Texas will get the Cotton Bowl spot on the basis of a victory over Arkansas.

Mississippi (8-1) is the most likely choice to provide the opposition. The Rebels claim they would like a bid.

SUGAR—With Alabama looking westward and Louisiana State not interested, the Sugar Bowl is in a tough spot. Georgia Tech, although beaten the last two weeks, appears to be the best of the lot for the host spot.

Arkansas, pushed out of the Cotton Bowl, probably will go to New Orleans to provide the opposition.

GATOR — Miami probably will be the home team assuming the Hurricanes beat Northwestern and Florida in their final two games. Maryland and Duke of the Atlantic Coast Conference both would like a bid.

IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN . . . Duck Season opens tomorrow and the Pintails pictured above have already arrived in the Hyde County area. Reflector Business Manager Jack Whichard took this picture while goose hunting last week.

Carolinas Race Will Be Decided On Turkey Day

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The football championship race in the Carolinas Conference goes down to the wire Thursday, Thanksgiving Day.

Should the Lenoir Rhyne Bears defeat Catawba, the Bears will earn their seventh straight championship. Should Catawba win the game at Hickory, the title will go to Appalachian, which has finished its conference season with a 5-1 record, the same as Lenoir Rhyne's.

Newberry is host to Presbyterian of South Carolina in the only other game Thanksgiving Day as the season closes.

In season - ending games last week, Elon defeated Presbyterian 22-16. Western Carolina defeated winless Guilford 26-0, Appalachian lost to Tampa 14-0, and Newberry lost to East Tennessee State 27-21.

Here are the standings, conference games and all games: Lenoir Rhyne 5-1 and 7-1; Appalachian 5-1, 7-3; Newberry 4-2, 5-5; East Carolina 4-3, 5-4; Catawba 3-3, 3-6; Elon 3-4, 4-6; Western Carolina 2-5, 4-6; Guilford 0-7, 0-9.

MSU Looking For New Head Coach

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi State athletic director Wade Walker is looking for a man to succeed him as head football coach.

Dr. D.W. Colvard, MSU president, announced Sunday night that the 38-year-old Walker had requested that he be permitted to give up his coaching duties effective Dec. 2, and devote full time to his post as athletic director.

Mississippi has a 5-4 record, its best since 1957, when Walker was named Southeastern Conference coach of the year. It closes out the season Dec. 2 with sixth-ranked Mississippi.

Russian Orthodox Church Joining World Council

By GEORGE CORNELL
NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The Russian Orthodox Church was admitted today to the World Council of Churches amid misgivings and considerable acclaim.
The step came as believers of nearly every kind and culture began the most widely inclusive Christian convocation of the modern era.
Outside the meeting place at the Vigyan Bhawan Temple of Learning a picket carried a sign reading "Russian clergy are Communist agents, not servants of God."
But among church envoys here for the council's third general assembly, vigorous applause greeted the action seating the 16-man

Russian Church delegation.
Each member denomination—175 Protestant, Orthodox, Anglican and Old Catholic bodies—was entitled to one vote. Two U.S. churches abstained—the Russian Orthodox Church in America and the Hungarian Reformed Church in America.
The Rt. Rev. Zoltan Beky of Trenton, N.J., bishop of the Hungarian Church, voiced the fear Russian churchmen would use the council "as a platform for political purposes."
Other churchmen from East and West said the entry of the Russian Church broadened the scope of the Christian unity movement and gave ancient Eastern denominations full representation in it.
Twenty-two other church bodies were admitted, including the Bulgarian, Romanian and Polish Orthodox churches and two Chilean Pentecostal churches, the first Pentecostal groups to join the council.
The additions bring the council to 198 denominations with more than 300 million members in about 60 countries.
With the exception of the Roman Catholic Church, every major confession is now "strongly represented" said Dr. W. A. Visser T'Hooft, the council general secretary.
Never before, he said, has a "greater variety of expressions of the Christian faith been brought together in one movement."

The Russian Church has a membership estimated from 30 to 90 million in a population of 250 million people.
Admission of the Russian Church culminated more than 10 years of negotiation. Dr. Visser T'Hooft said council leaders became convinced that participation of the Russian Church would serve "the cause of Christ."

Billiard Parlors Enjoying Rebirth In U.S. Popularity

By CHARLES L. WEST
NEW YORK (AP)—Tough kid, leather jacket, sag drooping from lower lip, slouched against light pole, flips the butt into a gutter. Goes back into the dingy pool room, full of shady, shifty characters.
Familiar picture? Well, destroy it. The newly formed Billiard Room Proprietors Association of America (BRPAA) says it's all wrong.
One big job of the association, in the words of an announcement, is to secure "greater stature and public acceptance for the sport of billiards and to assist material-ly in the 'upgrading' and establishment of better billiard rooms throughout the country."
They even hope to attract more women to the game.
The proprietors, perhaps, don't dream of going so far as the 1835 cut in Francis Quarles' "Emblems" showing two angels shooting the 17th century equivalent of a fast game of snooker. But they do want to wipe out what they believe is a grossly erroneous image in the public's mind.
Mary, queen of Scots, is reported to have complained in captivity in 1576 that her billiard table had been taken away from her.
An illustration shows France's Louis XIV playing a game in 1694.
Shakespeare even has Cleopatra telling an attendant: "Let's go shoot a game of pool." (But Charman, the attendant, complained of a sore arm.)
Until the 1890s, says Association President Bob McGirr of New York, billiards was a "class game." Then the country was flooded with billiard parlors and the game went downhill—at least he says, in the public mind.

As Webster's dictionary explains it, there are two main types of billiards—a game of American-French origin which is played on a table having no holes, and a game of English origin played on a table having six holes.
McGirr, who has operated a billiards parlor for 27 years and now does a steady business at his 21-table, $125,000 establishment at 8th Avenue and 45th Street, says billiards is enjoying a rebirth of popularity. He says over 12 million Americans are playing billiards regular at the 40,000 rooms in the nation.

The game got a boost, he says, from a news picture photograph of Queen Mother Elizabeth of England wielding a cue in London and a similar shot of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York in action.

Kroll Returns To His Moscow Post

BONN, Germany (AP)—West German Ambassador Hans Kroll flew back to his post in Moscow today after getting Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's approval of his handling of a conversation with Premier Khrushchev on the Berlin conference.
Kroll was called home last Tuesday to report on the conversation after suspicions were voiced here that he overstepped his authority and made proposals contrary to West German policy.

Planning Protest Vote Returns In Philippine Race

MANILA (AP)—A liberal party leader said today that President Carlos P. Garcia plans to protest President-elect Diosdado Macapagal's election in an effort to delay the Liberal candidate's inauguration.

Sen. Ferdinand E. Marcos, the Liberal party president, said Garcia's Nacionalista party, which retained control of both houses of Congress in the election last week, may refuse to proclaim Macapagal president after canvassing the vote next month.

Such a proclamation is required by law, Marcos said, and legally any protest of the returns would have to be made to the Supreme Court after the proclamation by Congress. Normally the new president would be sworn in at the end of December.

No immediate comment was available from Garcia, who conferred with other Nacionalista leaders at the Malacanang presidential palace. Garcia refused Sunday to concede the election and said, "There are grounds for doubting the accuracy of the compilation of election returns."

Liberal party leaders conferred at Marcos' home to devise countermeasures should Garcia try to block Macapagal.

Macapagal was hiding out in Manila after reports of threats to his safety circulated in the city. He and his family left their suburban home for an undisclosed place.

Manila Mayor Arsenio Lacson criticized Garcia for casting doubt on the returns made public by the Commission on Elections.

Independent vice presidential candidate Sergio Osmeña Jr., running about 175,000 votes behind Macapagal's running mate, Emmanuel Pelaez, wired his congratulations to Macapagal Sunday night.

"The overwhelming victory of the Filipino people as indicated at the polls is for a change in the administration," said Osmeña.

Latest returns from the Election Commission—the vote in 39,320 of the 40,511 precincts—gave Macapagal 3,450,399 votes to 2,805,558 for Garcia.

Airliner Nearly Landed On Car

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP)—Warren Wills, 70, of Mountain City, Tenn., wanted to see the planes at Willow Run Airport Saturday night. He got a good look at one of them—it almost landed on his car.

Capt. Foster Sturdevant was easing his United Airlines DC-8—carrying 62 passengers—in for a landing when he saw two headlights coming toward him. He pulled the four-engine jet into a climb and then radioed the tower.

Wills was escorted off the runway by state police.

Space Capsule Is Lost In Ocean

POINT ARGUELLO, Calif. (AP)—A capsule of living matter apparently survived a rocket flight more than 1,000 miles—then got lost at sea.

A four-stage rocket carried the BIOS capsule aloft Saturday. Its living cargo—blood, nerve fiber, mold, bacteria, barley seed, sea urchin eggs—was to be recovered and tested by scientists to determine the effects of outer-space radiation and gravity changes.

The rocket apparently veered off course and the capsule parachuted far out of the planned impact area south of here.

After several hours of searching the Navy gave up.

Several Ways To Hunt The Actress Lucille Tiger; All Of Them Risky Ball Is Married

By HENRY BRADSHER

MEGAULI, Nepal (AP)—Several ways are used to hunt the big tigers that prowl through the jungles of the Indian subcontinent. The most daring way, for which the name of Jim Corbett will long be remembered, is simply to walk around in the underbrush looking for tigers. Corbett was quicker with an accurate shot than a tiger was with a flying attack. For others the method is hardly recommended.

Riding around on an elephant is another way. Tigers often will not hesitate to attack a single elephant, however, and they have been known to leap on an elephant's back to get the hunters. This method is widely used when a tiger, which will kill and eat about 100 animals a year and sometimes goes after humans, has to be eliminated from an area.

The most common method for sportsmen is shooting from a machan, a platform in a tree or on stilts, at a tiger that is driven across an open space in the jungle by dozens of villagers with noisy devices and little self-protection. There usually is only one chance and the tiger is gone.

But the most spectacular way is the way royalty hunts tigers here in the jungles of southern Nepal, where the Himalayas meet the Ganges River plains. When word comes that the king is on his way down through the mountains from Katmandu, elephants are collected from their usual jobs of hauling timber and other heavy loads. Buffaloes, which look more like oxen than the American bison, are tied up at a number of spots in the 8-foot-high elephant grass.

The baits are checked just before dawn and when one is found slaughtered by a tiger, the hunt on the tiger probably is still close. Mahouts drive their elephants into a circle a mile or so wide and begin converging on the bait.

Fifty or 75 years ago, some 600 elephants participated in the hunt, but the numbers are smaller now. The circle of elephants is about 200 yards wide and the huge animals are standing almost shoulder-to-shoulder, stakes are driven just in front of them and a strip of white sheeting about seven feet high is put on the inside of the circle.

Then shooting elephants with howdahs on their backs for the hunters take positions on one side of the circle. Eight or 10 tiger elephants are sent into the circle to trample down some grass and then try to flush the tiger that has been trapped and drive it across the open place.

When a tiger is stirred up, it will dash straight across the ring until, coming out of the grass, it sees the sheet and the elephants behind it. Virtually never will a tiger charge the sheet, although it could easily go through it. The white wall is such an unnatural phenomena that tigers prefer to face the relatively known danger of the beater elephants and the mystery of gunfire.

Sometimes the tiger may grow desperate and attack the beater elephants to avoid being driven back under the guns, tearing their ears and scarring their trunks and causing their mahouts to get wild, bucking rides.

With the game trapped, it is only a question of time before it is picked off. In the old days, when the human population was thinner and guns less plentiful, the bags were bigger.

King Edward VII came to this area in 1876, when he was Prince of Wales. His party got 23 tigers in 16 days. King George V personally shot 21 tigers, 8 rhinoceros and 1 bear in 12 days in 1911. "A leopard was run over and killed by the mail van," says the official report.

When King Mahendra staged a hunt for Queen Elizabeth recently, her party got only one tiger and one rhino on a one-day hunt. And only 327 elephants were used. It's not like old times.

But it's still a spectacular show.

Fingerprints Are Of Her Guests

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—By fingerprinting her guests, Mrs. Roger Tenney is entertaining them and designing an unusual back door.

She gives each guest a six-inch-square ceramic tile decorated only with a pastel underglaze. She also supplies several deep-colored liquid glazes.

Guests are asked to dip their fingers in a glaze and make fingerprints on the tiles. Then they make designs around the fingerprints and sign their names. Mrs. Tenney fires the tiles and glues them to a panel on her back door.

NEW YORK (AP)—Married in a simple church ceremony with a roaring crowd in the cold street outside, flame-tressed Lucille Ball is keeping up her television schedule here while comedian Gary Morton starts a night club engagement in Palm Springs, Calif.

There'll be a January honeymoon in Acapulco, Mex., for the couple whose romance started on a blind date in a pizza palace here.

Lucy, divorced wife of Desi Arnaz, and Morton, son of a Bronx truckman, were married Sunday at the Marble Collegiate church by the Rev. Dr. Norman Vincent Peale.

A crowd of 1,500 jammed the sidewalks near the 29th Street side entrance of the church. Ten policemen kept the crowd in check.

A roar went up as the bride—wearing a cocktail-length gown and tulle veiled cap of brilliant teal blue—emerged from the church.

Among the first out of the church and into waiting cars were the two children of Lucy's 20-year marriage to Arnaz—Lucie, 10, and Desi, 8. The youngsters waved in greeting to the crowd.

Among the 40 relatives and close friends of the couple invited to the wedding and to a reception later at the bride's apartment were Lucy's mother, Desiree Ball, were Lucy's mother, Desiree Ball, Rose Morton, Mrs. Ball had brought the children here from California.

Scouts To Have Missile-Tracker

MARIANNA, Fla. (AP)—A surplus missile tracking unit from Cape Canaveral will help inmates of the State Boys School learn electronics. Scottish Rite Masonic bodies of Miami bought the surplus missile tracking unit and gave it to the Boys School. It was dismantled and the complex electronic instruments put into use as models in the classroom.

The maid of honor was actress Paula Stewart, who had introduced the couple in the summer of 1960 while she and Lucy were appearing in "Wildcat."

The best man was Miss Stewart's husband, comedian Jack Carter.

Lucy gave her age as 50 when the marriage license was obtained. Morton, whose marriage to Jacqueline Inmoor was annulled in 1957, gave his age as 44.

ELEVEN FEET OF WELL-WISHERS—Coach John Morris of Roxboro and two of his star Rockets, co-captains Butch Winstead (left) and Fred Jackson, scan an 11-foot-long telegram signed by more than 800 Roxboro fans. The long telegram was delivered to the Rockets in their dressing room two hours before they crossed swords with Greenville's tough Rose High Panthers for Eastern Regional honors. Impetus of the telegram, however, fell short as the Panthers rolled by Roxboro, 13-0, and into next week's finals. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Sharks Shipped For Taste Tests

HONOLULU (AP)—A shipment of Hawaii's black tip and gray sharks have been sent to Australia for a taste test.

"We have our fingers crossed," said Michio Takata, head of the State Fish and Game Division. If the sharks pass their exams, Hawaii may have a new industry.

Meat of the school shark is popular in Victoria, Australia, where it is served as "white filets." Hawaii fishermen hope to become shark meat exporters, improving the island's lagging fishing industry and decreasing the local shark population.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The University of California Extension Service has cancelled a series of lectures on atomic survival because only 30 persons attended the first session.

Though waves move across the surface of a lake or sea, the water itself merely rises and falls. A given volume of water sinks back into almost the same place.

Co-Author Of 'Porgy And Bess' Stricken May Bring Fish To Hawaii Islands

NEW YORK (AP)—Dorothy Heyward, 71, co-author with her husband of "Porgy and Bess," the drama on which "Porgy and Bess" was based, died Sunday at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital.

She had undergone an appendectomy and apparently was recovering satisfactorily until a few minutes before her death. She died of what was tentatively diagnosed as a coronary thrombosis.

Mrs. Heyward was a playwright and novelist in her own name but her greatest success came in the collaboration with her husband, Du Bose Heyward.

Mrs. Heyward, the former Dorothy Hartzell Kuhns of Wooster, Ohio, met her husband in 1922 at the MacDowell Colony of Artists in Petersboro, N. H. They were married in 1923 and went to live in a cabin in the Great Smoky Mountains.

While there she sought to induce her husband to turn his novel, "Porgy," based on Negro life on the waterfront of Charleston, S. C., into a play.

She was unable to do so. Thereupon she set about writing a draft herself, letting Heyward think she was working on a detective story. When he saw her finished work he became so enthusiastic he joined her in writing the final stage version.

The play opened on Broadway in 1927 and led to the musical drama of Catfish Row, "Porgy and Bess," which was to win world acclaim. The musical was the work of Heyward and George and Ira Gershwin.

The Heywards also collaborated on a second play with a Negro theme, "Mama's Daughters," also drawn from one of Heyward's novels. It was produced here in 1939, the year before Heyward's death.

The New York City Opera has announced plans to produce an opera based on the play, and Mrs. Heyward was to have an adviser on the libretto.

Mrs. Heyward's other Broadway productions included "Jonica," written with Moss Hart in 1930, and "Cinderella," written with Dorothy Jagers, also in 1930.

Her other works included a novel about the theater called "Three-A-Day," and a detective story titled "The Pulitzer Prize Murders."

She had recently finished her autobiography, but no title has been chosen for it.

She leaves a daughter, Jenifer.

Nearly everyone in town reads a daily newspaper: Among the heaviest readers, according to a survey by the Psychological Corporation, are upper social-economic urban families. Another study by the U. S. Department of Agriculture found middle and high income groups were heavier newspaper readers than low income groups. This survey showed 73% of the low income group said they had read the newspaper, while the score increased to 88% for middle income groups and 95% for high income groups. No matter what service or product you sell, no matter what income group you want to reach, you reach more people through the daily newspaper.

GRACE ROTHSTEIN is an unusual housewife. She runs a professional portrait studio while managing a household with four action-packed children ranging from 5 to 12 years of age. In her spare time she also attends to sizable flower and vegetable gardens and participates in community civic affairs.

These activities were in evidence when we visited her home in New Rochelle, N. Y., to discuss her photo career. While personally getting dinner ready—for six in her family plus three guests—she took time out to run down to her basement darkroom. There she removed a batch of prints from the hypo for washing in the water tray. She had enlarged and processed the portraits before we arrived.

Later, showing us the gardens, she picked some of her tomatoes and cucumbers to add to the menu and selected some flowers for the table. A little further on, we came to her studio.

It is a separate, two-room attachment to the garage which Grace painted, renovated and decorated herself. The combination waiting-dressing room has samples of her portraiture displayed on the walls and in albums. The studio room is large, light and cheerful although it looks very business like.

A roll of seamless paper, half a dozen light stands and a view camera on a tripod were in position ready for the next sitting.

For children and outdoor portraits, though, Grace has a 2 1/4 x 2 1/4 twin-lens reflex camera which she prefers. She often uses a sheltered garden nook as an outdoor studio. She finds the late afternoon sun makes a fine natural backlight or sidelight and is easy on her subjects' eyes.

It also was easy to see how Grace had taken to photography. Her husband is Arthur Rothstein, technical director of photography at a magazine and author of a book on photojournalism, whose inch photographs into display positions. They were easily changed as new pictures were made. These home exhibitions caused widespread comment and brought new clients.

The growing family and business proved too much for their city apartment. When they moved in to their New Rochelle home four years ago, Grace also graduated from baby pictures to portraits of teens and adults.

"But first I enrolled at a photo school," she said. "I had to learn the fundamentals before I could develop a personal technique, one I wouldn't be ashamed to show Arthur's professional colleagues."

Looking over her work, it was plain that she had bridged the gap which lifted her efforts from the snapshot league into the field of creative portraiture.

"I started a home decorating fad in our city housing development. By running parallel strips of metal picture moulding along a wall, we could slide 11 x 14

DOORWAY to another career as portrait photographer opens to Grace Rothstein, a busy housewife with four children. Encouragement comes from her husband, Arthur, noted photojournalist, shown here checking the lens setting on her camera.

The Farm Scene

By S. C. WINCHESTER

Do you have enough tobacco allotment? Many growers would answer this question with an emphatic "No." Why do you grow tobacco? For the net income it brings, or because you just enjoy growing tobacco? A few growers are finding they can expand their tobacco allotment, so to speak, by growing top quality, high yields of sweet potatoes. The average acre of tobacco in Pitt County this year produced 1,924 pounds and the Eastern Market averaged $69.94. These figures indicate a gross return per acre of $1,249.45. The cost of producing an acre of tobacco is approximately $600, leaving an average net return of $649.45.

Three sweet potato growers in Pitt County averaged producing 290 bushels of U. S. No. 1 potatoes and 111 bushels of canning potatoes per acre. At $3.00 per acre for the U. S. No. 1's and $1.00 for the canners this shows a gross return of $981.00 per acre. The cost of producing sweet potatoes is approximately $300 per acre at this yield level. This produces a net return of $681.00 per acre and compares favorably with the returns from tobacco.

I would not suggest that any grower who needs an extra two, three, four, or five acres of tobacco to plant that many acres of sweet potatoes. Why? All growers would not perform the many details that sweet potato production requires if a high yield of top quality, disease free potatoes are to be produced. But for the man who will pay attention to details and who will do the right thing at the right time and stick to it then here is a crop that offers wonderful opportunities for additional income, and the production of sweet potatoes does not interfere with the production of tobacco. It fills in the slack periods of tobacco production and would keep your labor busy.

There are sufficient markets close by to take the production from quite an expanded acreage. Sweet potato canning plants are located at Williamston and Lumberton. Auction markets and buyers for U. S. No. 1's are located at Bethel, New Bern, Benson, and Mount Olive. A flaking plant is making its maiden run this fall at Windsor. If and when sufficient potatoes are produced in this area to support another processing plant, business interests in Bethel have indicated that a flaking plant would be built there.

Given 16 Years For Strangling Of Three Children

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP)—The wife of a U.S. Air Force sergeant from China Grove, N.C., has been sentenced to 16 years in prison for strangling their three children.

A jury of seven men and three women convicted Mrs. Joann Baker, 28, Sunday. Her husband, M. Sgt. Joel Baker, 31, testified he had been seeing another woman, a Greek telephone operator, but only to take language lessons.

He said he had been out with her the night he returned home last May to find the children dead. They were Cathy, 2; Susan, 5; and Joe Jr., 3.

Mrs. Baker, formerly from Stockdale, Tex., reportedly admitted shortly after the slayings that she had killed the children in the Bakers' suburban Athens apartment after she found pictures of her husband with another woman, and lipstick smears on his shirt.

It was Mrs. Baker's second trial on the charges. She was acquitted in September, but a new trial was ordered after the prosecutor objected to the verdict. Double jeopardy is allowed in Greek law.

Then the committee had a meeting. Nineteen members showed up.

Tobacco Quota Vote On Dec. 12

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Orville F. Freeman announced today a grower referendum Dec. 12 on a proposal to continue federal marketing quotas on the next three flue-cured tobacco crops.

Quotas require approval by at least two-thirds of the growers voting.

Freeman also announced the 1962 crop planting allotment for flue-cured tobacco will be 716,147 acres compared with 715,817 this year.

This allotment will be apportioned among farms largely on the basis of past plantings. As in the past, a small acreage will be reserved for new farms. For most farms, the 1962 allotment will be the same as this year.

Flue-cured tobacco is grown in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

If quotas are approved, each farm's quota would be the amount produced on its allotted acres.

The 1962 crop — also if quotas are approved — would be supported at the 1959 support rate of 55.5 cents a pound adjusted upward or downward in direct proportion to any change in the cost of things farmers buy.

Tobacco produced in excess of a farm allotment would be subject to a marketing penalty of 75 per cent of the average market price for this year's crop.

Should quotas be rejected no price supports would be offered.

Bishops Point To Moral Decline

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's 225 Roman Catholic bishops have declared that moral principles are on the decline in the United States and that popular education "bears a measure of responsibility."

They urged rebuilding of a sound religious and moral foundation, saying the hour of greatest opportunity is striking now as the forces of freedom and tyranny grid for decision.

The prelates, in a 3,000-word statement issued Saturday at the close of their meeting, deplored what they called widespread evidence of moral decline.

In reference to education, the report said: "At first there was no intention of excluding either religion or morality from the common tax-supported school. But the diversity of our religious pattern and the rising pressure of secularism have produced the school without religion."

"The result is that our society is now faced with great numbers of young people almost completely devoid of religious belief and moral guidance — young people who are causing increasing concern at every level of the community and in all parts of the country."

Funeral Tuesday For Mrs. William Moye

Mrs. Pearl Hemby Moye, 83, widow of William Simon Moye, died at her home, 206 East Tenth Street, Monday morning at 8:50 after several months of critical illness. Funeral services will be conducted at the Wilkerson Chapel Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by her pastor, Elder A. P. Mewborn. Burial will be in Cherry Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Moye, daughter of the late Henry Clay and Marietta Baker Hemby, was a native of Pitt County and had spent all her married life in Greenville. She was a member of Damascus Primitive Baptist Church in Farmville. Mr. Moye died in 1954.

Surviving are a son, W. Simon Moye Jr., a daughter, Mrs. Harvey Ward Sr., both of Greenville; a grandson, James Harvey Ward Jr. of Greenville; three great grandchildren; and a sister, Mrs. Zilphia Rotroff of Wilson.

Spy's Mistress Feels Safe, Back In Warsaw

WARSAW (AP)—Miss Ursula Maria Discher, Polish mistress of convicted U.S. spy Irvin Scarbeck, turned up at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw today.

The shapely 22-year-old entertainer told an American reporter she had come back to Poland to stay and had no worries about her future in this Communist country.

Speaking freely about her connection with the Scarbeck espionage case, Miss Discher told an American reporter:

"I was not politically involved in that affair and I see no reason why they (Polish authorities) should be interested in me now."

The star witness at Scarbeck's trial in Washington had changed her platinum blonde hair color to shining black.

Scarbeck, a former second secretary at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw, was convicted in a U.S. court for espionage and sentenced to 30 years imprisonment.

Miss Discher testified at his trial that Polish secret police agents caught her and Scarbeck in bed together. Scarbeck, who is married, was charged with passing embassy secrets to Polish agents in order to get Miss Discher out of Poland to West Germany.

Series Of Accidents Over The Weekend

Almost $2,000 damage was reported by Greenville Police in a series of mishaps investigated over the weekend in the city—with heaviest damage reported resulting from a hit-and-run wreck on 14th Street Saturday night at 8:55.

Police said an estimated $1,000 damage was done to a car being driven by Dr. Harold Reid Hoke, 35, of 1605 Oaklawn Ave., when it was struck by a hit-and-run vehicle.

Investigators explained that the Hoke vehicle was traveling west on 14th St. when a car traveling on Pitt St., entered the intersection striking his vehicle. The hit-and-run auto then left the scene of the mishap.

Later, officers reported a vehicle answering the description of the hit-and-run auto was reported stolen less than two hours later from Route 3, Washington.

Investigation is continuing in the case, officers noted.

Robert Eugene Elks, 29, of 410 Contentnea St., was charged with failing to yield the right of way Sunday following a three-vehicle collision about 10:48 a.m. on Watauga Ave.

Officers investigating the mishap reported that the Elks vehicle, headed west on Spruce St., struck a vehicle driven by Leslie Randolph Hudson, 52-year-old Negro of 1618 Lincoln Drive, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Hudson car.

The force of the impact caused the Hudson auto, which was headed south on Watauga Ave., to strike a parked car, owned by Edward Glenn Cannon, 33, of 2610 Jackson Drive.

Damage to the Cannon auto was estimated to be about $150 while damage to the Elks vehicle was placed at $125.

No injuries were reported. Hinton David Barnhill, 71-year-old Negro of 514 McKinley Ave., was charged by police with improper turning following a collision at the intersection of 10th St. and Dickinson Ave. at 3:01 p.m. Sunday.

Investigators identified the driver of the second vehicle involved as Tommy Henry Braxton, 20, of Route 2, Greenville.

Damage to the Braxton car was set at $100 while an estimated $125 damage was done to the Barnhill vehicle, police said.

An estimated $150 damage was done to a car driven by Allen Tripp, 24, of Route 2, Ayden, in a collision at the intersection of Fifth and Harding Sts. Sunday at 2:30 p.m., it was reported.

The trip car, collared with a vehicle driven by John Thomas Taft, 17, of 600 Forest Circle.

Police said Taft was charged with failure to yield the right of way and set damage to the vehicle at $50.
