Governor Hints Still Considering Special Session

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Sanford has hinted he would call a special legislative session if he felt there was a chance of public approval of a trimmed-down statewide bond program.

"I will have to judge what the desires of the people are," Sanford said when the subject came up at his weekly news conference Wednesday.

The governor fielded several questions dealing with a special session and gave the overall impression that he still was considering the possibility.

Asked directly, he replied, "I haven't made up my mind what should be done."

A $61.6 million bond issue was soundly defeated Nov. 7 in a statewide referendum.

Since the voting there has been widespread speculation Sanford would call a special session.

The governor will attempt to gain public support for what he terms emergency needs when he goes on a statewide television and radio hook-up at 8:30 p.m. Monday.

He said a new list of urgent needs total to about $39.5 including $13.5 for expansions at the ports of Wilmington and Morehead City.

The rest of the money would go for state colleges, community colleges, mental hospitals, correctional schools, state aid for hospital construction and perhaps others.

Asked directly, he replied, "I haven't made up my mind what should be done."

Changing Jobs

COACH JACK BOONE to teaching post

East Carolina's Gridiron Coach Is Re-Assigned

Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, director of athletics at East Carolina College, announced today that Jack Boone would assume full time duties as a professor in the department of health and physical education at the college when the winter quarter begins next Tuesday.

For the past 14 years Boone has been on the football coaching staff at East Carolina. Since 1951 he has been the head grid coach. However, Boone has also been a part-time teacher in the department of health and physical education since coming to EC.

College President Leo W. Jenkins said that a successor to Boone as head football coach has not as yet been chosen.

In making this announcement, Jorgensen said:

"Jack has been a dedicated coach, always keeping the welfare of his players foremost. His many friends and admirers will regret, I am sure, to see him leaving the coaching field."

The athletic director added, "I am very happy that he will be associated with East Carolina College in carrying on the work in health and physical education." Jorgensen also noted, "The profession needs men of the calibre of Jack Boone."

Regarding the status of Coach Boone's assistants, Jorgensen said they would remain in their present positions.

President Jenkins said in commenting on the change that Boone has always had a strong interest in a sound sports program for the public schools. Jenkins added, "As a teacher of sports activities his influence will be widely felt."

The ECC head also said, "I should like to express my appreciation for the loyal, conscientious and dedicated work that Boone has done in his dual capacity as teacher and coach." He added, "We feel certain that Boone will make a still greater contribution to the youth of North Carolina in his new capacity as a full time teacher."

Boone himself said that he had no comment to make on the matter at this time. However, he noted that a statement would be forthcoming after the holidays.

Quick Lesson In Driver Education

BEDFORD, Ind. (AP)—Driver education students at Williams High School got a quick lesson in how not to drive.

Watching traffic at downtown intersections Tuesday, they counted 461 traffic violations in one hour by drivers and pedestrians. Three violations were by police cars and one by a driver training car, instructor Al Stealy said.

Bedford has a population of about 13,000.

U.S. Military Train Delayed By Russians; Stowaway Given Up

By EUGENE KRAMER

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet troops held up an American military train for 14 hours today and released it after a stowaway from East Germany was turned over to the Russians.

The U.S. command in Berlin announced the stowaway was turned over by Col. Ernst von Pawel, chief of the U.S. mission to the Soviet headquarters, who went to investigate the train's delay.

The Soviets had refused to let the train pass through their control point at Marienborn into West Germany because they said an East German stowaway was aboard. There was deadlock when the train commander, a lieutenant, carried out standing orders to refuse to let the Soviets search the train.

The Russians finally allowed the train to proceed on its journey into West Germany at 1:15 p.m.—7:15 a.m. EST.

Thirteen minutes later the train resumed its interrupted journey from West Berlin to Frankfurt. It had been stopped at Marienborn, the Soviet checkpoint at the border, since 10:45 Wednesday night.

The Army said 74 American and Allied troops and family members were aboard, including 11 children 2 to 15 years old. Also aboard were four West German attendants and a three-man East German train crew operating the locomotive that had pulled the train to the border.

U.S. officials speculated that the Russians were trying to establish a precedent for searching the U.S. military trains that regularly serve the U.S. garrison in West Berlin.

U.S. authorities in the past have always resisted Soviet attempts to search either Army trains or vehicle convoys on the 110-mile autobahn between West Germany and West Berlin. The Army said that in accordance with standing instructions the train commander refused to allow anyone to board or leave the train.

A U.S. officer was sent from West Berlin to investigate this morning.

While the Berlin-Frankfurt train was stalled at Marienborn, three other U.S. military trains passed through the checkpoint without interference.

The Army made no official comment on the Russians' stowaway claim.

Under normal procedure the U.S. Army makes out military travel orders for all passengers on its trains through East Germany. These are shown to the Soviets at Marienborn, along with passengers' identification cards. The Soviets check these papers, return them to the train commander and allow a West German locomotive to take over the train.

Last time the Soviets held up an American train on March 26, 1960, they said it was because a Nazi swastika was on one car. The U.S. Army said it was a child's funny-face drawn in the dust.

There is to be any prospect for success in negotiation.

Indeed some officials said there would be no negotiations unless the exploratory talks disclose a Soviet willingness to make substantial concessions. This relates particularly to Khrushchev's demand that West Berlin be converted into a "free city" with a change in the status of the garrison forces which now protect it against Communist threats and pressures.

The communiqué carefully obscured the issues which Kennedy and Adenauer considered negotiable with the Soviet Union. But it is understood they include the possibility of increasing working relationships between West Germany and Communist East Germany, questions of operation on the Berlin supply lines across East Germany and problems involved in the links between West Berlin and West Germany.

Kennedy and Adenauer, who opened their conference Monday, concluded the meeting Wednesday afternoon and Adenauer left for home Wednesday night. He had suffered while here with a slight cold and canceled some of his engagements but had not missed any of his scheduled meetings with the President.

The conference was a crucial one because on its success depended the ability of the Western powers to agree on the issues on which they were prepared to negotiate for an end to the Berlin crisis and those on which they would not negotiate.

In addition, during the prolonged period of the Bonn government's reorganization fears had grown up in West German quarters that the Kennedy administration was preparing to make extensive concessions to Moscow.

Associates of Adenauer said Wednesday night that these fears had been fully dispelled. At the same time U.S. officials said that Adenauer had displayed a readiness to adopt a flexible approach on many issues. The officials said that while some differences between the two governments remain, the essential agreements necessary to move toward negotiations with the Soviet Union have finally been achieved.

Further consultations among the Allies include a meeting between French President Charles de Gaulle and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and a meeting between Adenauer and De Gaulle, both before the end of the month. Next month the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France and West Germany will meet in Paris at a session of the North Atlantic Treaty Council and attempt to put the policy in final shape.

After that, if full agreement is reached as Kennedy and Adenauer hope, exploratory talks with the Soviet government will be resumed. The present expectation is that these will lead early next year to formal negotiations.

Earlier exploratory talks between Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko failed to lay a basis for negotiations.

MARIETTA, Ohio (AP) — Officials of Marietta College wondered Wednesday if the attic of the college's old library has yielded up a masterpiece.

A painting by 16th Century German Artist Lucas Cranach, "Image of the Blessed Virgin Mary," or a copy of it, was found in the old library attic during preparations to move into new quarters this month.

Now the school is making efforts to authenticate the painting, although Mariettans are not getting their hopes up over the find.

"Several factors indicate that it may only be a copy," explained librarian Richard K. Gardner. "However, because of its apparent age we feel it's worth checking."

Cranach's works have increased in value during the last 30 years. At the same New York art auction which brought $2.3 million for a Rembrandt recently, a Cranach painting sold for $105,000.

TURKEY GROWERS Unhappy, Too

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Turkey growers are going to be nearly as unhappy as the turkeys this Thanksgiving Day. The cause? Overproduction and lower prices.

As of Monday, Los Angeles had more than 26 million pounds of turkey in cold storage against only 15 million pounds last year.

The Department of Agriculture says farmers received 18 to 21 cents a pound for their birds—but paid up to 24 cents in production costs.

GOP Chairman Is Target Of Ire

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Sanford has charged state Republican Chairman William E. Cobb with "duplication of the worst sort and petty politics of the worst sort" for his role in the recent bond election campaign.

Sanford said Cobb publicly supported five of the 10 bond issues which were defeated in a referendum Nov. 7 but privately campaigned against all of them.

Sanford told his news conference Wednesday, "We have met the party of the ways." He said Cobb was "not worthy of trust."

And, in the future should he need recommendations on possible Republican appointments, Sanford said he would confer with "someone other than Sneaky Bill."

Cobb, reached at his Morganton home, got in some licks of his own.

He said, "We are shocked at the governor's outburst and personal vilification. The Republican party supported the governor on half of the bond issues and opposed him on the other half."

"That he blames Republican leadership for their defeat is his privilege. But we think it below the dignity of the office to indulge in personal attack we recognize the governor's disappointment and publicly pardon his indiscretions."

The governor showed newsmen a mimeographed leaflet which, he said, Cobb had given a Superior Court judge. It bore the signature of the Republican State Executive Committee and "that's Bill Cobb," Sanford said.

Sanford said the leaflet told voters their money would go for swimming pools at training school for mentally deficient children, for air conditioning at mental hospitals, for canopied sidewalks at the Caswell Training School and for an elevator at one of the institutions.

All these items, Sanford said, were necessary for therapeutic reasons, to prevent suffering and to protect patients from the weather.

The governor said all the items were included in bond issues Cobb said he was supporting.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge electronic ear to keep track of scientific satellites orbiting the earth is to be built in the Pisgah National Forest of western North Carolina.

Location of the dish-shaped antenna, 85 feet across and standing 120 feet high, was announced Wednesday by the Goodard Space Flight Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

It will be similar to an antenna recently built near Fairbanks, Alaska and will be part of NASA's satellite tracking network which now has 13 stations around the world.

Construction of the antenna is to start in late February or early March, 1962, on a 640-acre site in the Glassmine Mountain area near Rosman, about 40 miles southwest of Asheville. Only 40 acres will be used for initial construction. The site will be acquired from the National Forest Service.

The sensitive dish will gather information from scientific satellites and will not be used to track or receive data from military satellites, NASA said.

The site was chosen for its natural shielding from radio interference, complete absence of airway traffic, good transportation service and accessibility, the announcement added.

The antenna, which will be manned by about 40 scientists and engineers, is scheduled to be operational next fall.

"Telemetry requirements for future scientific space exploration have become vastly more complicated," as satellites have been placed in higher orbits, deeper into space, each with increasing intelligence — seeking instruments and corresponding necessity for wider sensitivity within the system," NASA said.

The announcement included no cost estimate.

Von Storch and Burkavage, architect-engineers of Philadelphia, were selected to prepare initial designs of construction requirements, the announcement said.

Finnish President Urho Kekkonen of Finland arrived in Moscow by train today and two hours later took off on a 1,750-mile flight to Siberia to meet Premier Khrushchev.

The two will meet in Novosibirsk, where Khrushchev will interrupt his tour of Siberian agricultural regions to discuss his government's demand that Finland join in discussions of joint defense against an alleged threat of aggression through the Baltic by West Germany and its NATO Allies.

U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson said Cuba's charges were without foundation and that there was evidence of a "sinister alliance" between Fidel Castro's forces and the Trujillo family which had held sway in the Dominican Republic for 31 years.

Stevenson denied Cuban charges that U.S. ships were in the territorial waters of the Dominican Republic and that U.S. planes had flown over Dominican territory.

He said the warships and planes were staying outside Dominican territorial limits and that they had been sent to the Caribbean area with the full knowledge of President Joaquin Balaguer's government.

Stevenson accused Cuba of distorting the situation to make anti-American propaganda and to conceal from the Cuban people efforts of a friendly government to aid the Dominicans "to take a great step forward" toward democracy.

Garcia-Inchausti accused the United States of sending warships into Dominican waters so that "later they can send these same warships against Cuba." The Cuban delegate called Balaguer a puppet of U.S. imperialism.

Dominican Delegate Carlos Sanchez retorted that Balaguer was receiving instructions from no one. He asserted the Cuban was engaging in "insulting diplomacy."

"I represent the Dominican people and I can prove it," Sanchez said.

At this point a Dominican in the gallery shouted in Spanish, "It's a lie!" He and a companion were hustled out.

Soviet Delegate Valerian A. Zorin, who as council president for November called the session to hear the charges, supported the claim that the United States was creating a precedent for a later invasion of Cuba. Zorin asserted that the United States had no right under the U.N. Charter "to send its Navy and Air Force against other countries."

Cuba also repeated the charges against the United States before the council of the Organization of American States in Washington. The United States again denied the charge, Dominican Ambassador Virgilio Diaz Ordaz called Cuban Ambassador Carlos M. Lechuga's speech a "naked interventionist act," and the OAS council took no action.

Moving has become a routine for many American families in this day and age of the fluid population.

No longer does a bright young man take a job in his home town and expect to remain there indefinitely. More often than not he joins a company of National scope which requires him to move quite often and for long distances.

Not only is this true of business executives but in Greenville it also includes College staff members, service men, and government employees.

What does all this mean to their wives and families. In talking to wives who have made numerous moves, it is learned that the families become adjusted to it.

One family has moved 21 times in their married life, once out of the country. Mrs. N. F. Merritt, Jr., said, "Moving for me in a way is easy because the government moves us. The only thing we have to pack is things going into the family car. My biggest chore comes when we have to find a place to live and getting settled again.

"Leaving friends is the hardest part about moving. I realize when I go someplace I will have to leave; but being an Air Force wife we sometimes run into people again we have known," Mrs. Merritt said.

Mrs. Merritt's husband is Lt. Colonel N. F. Merritt, Jr., head of the Air Force ROTC at East Carolina College. They reside at 305 Meade Street and are originally from Little Rock, Ark. They have been in service most of their married life except for a few years when Colonel Merritt was in College. Their two children have adjusted quite well to moving and are active in school activities.

Mrs. Merritt likes to become a part of the community in which she lives because "I believe when you move to a place, if you move there with a good attitude you will like it or it can work the other way", Mrs. Merritt said.

The Merritts hope to put their roots down upon retirement in Abilene, Texas, which is a college town in which they have lived. Mrs. Merritt said, "I thought Texans were prejudiced until I lived there and after living there I decided they had something to brag about."

Prepare Early

"Sit down and realize that it is coming and make preparations early" was Mrs. Fred Englehart's advice on moving. "I have moved so many times that things come automatically, such as getting personal family records you need to take with you and getting the children prepared for moving. We talk about things that would be interesting to the children in the new location we will live in. The children miss their friends but feel that moving is what the family wants and they have adjusted well to it," Mrs. Englehart said. "We have had happy experiences in moving around." She doesn't feel that the transfers hurt the children because they make friends easily. "I give their teachers a lot of the credit in helping to make the adjustments easier for them."

This is the fifth move for this family and their first time to live in the south. They could not find the kind of house they wanted when they moved to Greenville so they built their first home in Lakewood Pines to which they moved in July.

Mr. Englehart who is plant manager of National Carbon moved his family to Greenville in December from Bay Village, Ohio.

This mother of three children said "personally we think moving is fun. Greenville does an excellent job of not letting your get lonesome."

Another couple who returned here in October from Norfolk,

Va., have different ideas about moving. Mrs. George B. Fleming of 402 Student Street said "It's terrible, you have things you really enjoy and then you have to give it all up; I never get used to moving."

Mrs. Fleming said "I always get butterflies in my stomach around Christmas time because it seems that is usually when transfers in our company are announced." The Flemings, who lived in Greenville from 1955-59 said that "in the seven or eight times we have moved this last was the first time we have ever had things stolen." She also said "try not to move or come into a place under pressure. In our company, they pay for the moving which includes the packing."

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming said their reaction was "we never like a place we go, but when it comes time to leave we hate to go."

"We don't stay long enough in a community to know the town or the people," Mrs. Fleming said.

Mr. Fleming is house operating manager of General Electric Supply in Greenville and they have two grown children away from home.

All Of Us Have Reason For Thanks

This is the special day of the year Americans have set aside for giving thanks for the blessings of the past year, for quiet moments of meditation and for family gatherings.

It is the day that traditionally has represented the completion of another harvest; the day that provides a brief respite from the toils and troubles that have beset the people. From its informal beginning with the Pilgrim fathers, it has become a national holiday of both special and unique significance.

There may be some who look back on the past year of crises and troubles, at home and throughout the world and question what special blessings there are to be thankful for. By and large, however, those persons who consider the meaning of Thanksgiving Day will find that their blessings are beyond counting.

Compared with other peoples of the world, Americans have much for which to give thanks on this day. The nation has been blessed with prosperity, but blessings cannot be measured in material things alone. While much of the world lives under the heel of tyranny, Americans still live in freedom. While much of the world lives in fear, we live in security unknown

Now Observing Old Tradition

By LYNN NISBET
THANKSGIVING — Thanksgiving Day as a special or a particular season has lost much of its original significance. Although it always involved much more than gratitude for ample harvests, the date fixed almost a century ago was selected because it came just after the crops had been gathered into the storehouses to supply food and warmth for the coming winter.

Now so large a part of the income from farm crops comes in regular weekly or monthly periods, and a much larger part of the entire family income is derived from sources other than field crops, the date is not important.

It is appropriate, however, to set aside a particular time for special thanksgiving. And the traditional date in late November is as good as any.

So this is Thanksgiving time. Literally millions of words will be written about the occasion, the propriety of giving thanks and a listing of the things for which thanks are due. There will be widely divergent opinion on that last point. There will be those to contend that with threats of war and turmoil throughout the world, with newspapers, radio and politicians blaring out warnings of total destruction of the human race by reason of nuclear bombs and fallout, there is nothing to be thankful for. There are others who will remind that the sun rose as usual this morning and that there are more churches and colleges than there are bombs, and that "fall-out" from them has been very potent through the years.

COMMON—There are many creeds and religious faiths in the United States and in North Carolina. All except a few with insignificant adherents accept as a fact the existence of a God, a Supreme Being, one who has control over all events. And, on Thanksgiving the thanks of these millions are offered to the giver of all good things. Modern hymn writers and poets have sought ways to say it better, but none has improved upon the words of the Psalmist and the authors of the Book of Common Prayer.

Take the 100th Psalm in the Prayer Book text: "O be joyful in the Lord, all ye lands; serve the Lord with gladness, and come before his presence with a song. Be sure that the Lord he is God; it is he that hath made us and not we ourselves; we are his people and the sheep of his pasture."

FRUITFUL SEASONS — And

by people of other nations.

There have been trials and tribulations, hardship and tragedy during the year for the nation and for individuals. Yet there is no person who pauses today who cannot find much for which he is thankful. There is no person who will take a few moments for meditation on this Thanksgiving Day who does not find his heart overwhelmed with gratitude, and a new blessing in the joy of rendering thanks to the Almighty for that which he has received.

Governor Gives GOP Over-Share Of Credit

Gov. Sanford's assertion that the Republican party played a major role in defeat of the recent state-wide bond proposals gives the GOP credit for considerably more influence than they actually have in North Carolina politics.

Sanford, of course, pointed out that blame for defeat of the bond issues must be shared by many Tar Heels, including himself. Even so, his statement concerning the GOP gives that party more credit than it deserves.

It is our impression that voters in the recent referendum cast their ballots without regard to partisan feelings or affiliation. It is also our guess that most of the "no" votes on the bond issue were cast by those who consider themselves Democrats rather than Republicans. We seriously doubt that the Republican organization in the state has sufficient strength or influence to bring about the kind of lopsided margin by which the bond issues were defeated.

A county-by-county review of voting in the referendum shows that many counties which normally are heavily in the Democratic column were also heavily against the bond issues. Surely the Republican party cannot be given credit for bringing about such a switch. Counties in which the GOP has little influence showed in many instances much closer votes on the question of issuing the bonds than possibly could be accorded partisan affiliation of the voters.

Gov. Sanford, rather than hurting GOP prestige in North Carolina, has helped the Republicans by implying they were able to engineer defeat of the bond proposals. From a political standpoint, he has given the GOP credit for much more strength than it previously has shown in North Carolina affairs.

Resume One Of Longest Talks

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the most long-winded discussions in history—on how to ban nuclear weapons tests—is about to get longer. The talks are scheduled to begin in Geneva next Tuesday. Only an optimist could believe there will be any agreement.

These talks have been, and will be, like a slow waltz with part of the orchestra missing. The present nuclear powers—the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union—will be the ones doing the discussing. Missing will be France, which already has developed atomic power and tested it, and Red China, which may be in the nuclear weapon business before long.

On and off for 16 years—the United States in 1945 first proposed control over atomic weapons—this country and the Soviet Union, and later Britain, have talked, and bumbled, and stumbled about it. The last talks truly ended in an explosion.

They began Nov. 1, 1958 and hemmed and hawed for almost three years along with a voluntary halt to testing by the Big Three for the same period. On Oct. 30, Premier Khrushchev announced the Soviet Union would end the moratorium and resume testing.

So the talks broke up Sept. 9. In the meantime the Soviet Union has had at least 31 tests in the atmosphere. This country has resumed testing underground and hasn't said it won't try it in the atmosphere, too.

With much of the rest of the world shocked by this Fourth of July display by the two nuclear giants, this country and Britain on Nov. 13 proposed to the Soviet Union that the test-ban talks be resumed.

And now the Soviet Union, which has done about all the testing it needs for the present, agreed. This is more remarkable for what the Soviets said they thought of test-ban talks even before the last talks ended.

They argued just talking about banning nuclear weapon tests was not enough. They demanded these talks be made part of a discussion, under sponsorship of the United Nations, on "general and complete disarmament."

Now they've agreed to resume just talking about a test ban on nuclear weapons.

If the Big Three ever reached an agreement on this it's possible

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
A PRESSING QUESTION
Should children be required to attend church?
There are some who say no. Let a child grow up without prejudice and when years of discretion arrive the child can choose for himself, or herself. The trouble with this point of view is that the child is being trained by this policy—trained not to attend church, trained not to regard church attendance as a matter of much importance. Every church is a family unit. Children are very important persons in every family and especially in the church family. A child should be required to attend church with this requirement, of course, becoming less insistent as adolescence progresses. Then when the child reaches maturity he sible France might go along although it isn't taking part in the discussion. But there's absolutely no assurance Red China would.

The Chinese Communists could not be bound by some agreement in which they have no part. Nevertheless, this roughly is what the American-British proposals to the Soviet Union call for:

1. Agreement by the Big Three to set up control posts in their countries—manned by outsiders—to prevent any cheating on a test ban.

2. Then control posts would be set up in other important countries—particularly those bordering on the big nuclear powers—like Red China.

3. Then control posts would be extended to other countries around the world. The idea calls for setting up a total of 180 such control posts by the end of six years after the Big Three reach agreement.

Unless this was done—for instance, if Red China refused to let any outsiders establish control posts inside her borders—the agreement wouldn't be binding on the Big Three.

It may be only a few years before Red China has developed its own nuclear power. Since she is not completely happy with her Soviet neighbor, and not at all happy with the United States, she might refuse to observe the agreement which after all she took no part in.

What then? That's an unpleasant thought. Meanwhile the Big Three—with the rest of the non-nuclear world looking on—can at least say they've been talking, whether or not it does any good.

But there is another angle to this matter that ought to be discussed, and Mr. Holloman or some state official ought to do the job. The people of North Carolina ought to know who is "galavanting" around the country and who is staying on the job at home. Names ought to be called, and those engaging in the convention league ought to have their records looked at by the people of North Carolina. After all, it is taxpayers' money

In the Pioneer Tradition

Unsung Hero Of The Past

NEW YORK (AP) — America's most forgotten Thanksgiving holiday hero is Dr. Samuel Fuller.

You probably never heard of him. But when you hear his story you may agree it's time a grateful nation built a monument to him, perhaps in the shape of a gigantic aspirin tablet or tranquilizing pill — medical weapons he could well have used 340 years ago.

Dr. Fuller sailed as the only physician among the 102 passengers on the Mayflower. Sieges of cold, hunger and sickness had reduced the Pilgrim colony at Plymouth, Mass., to about 50 when Dr. Fuller's long holiday ordeal began.

That was on Dec. 13, 1621, when the Indian chief Massasoit arrived with 90 of his braves to help the Pilgrims celebrate their first bountiful harvest.

A present-day Thanksgiving reduces many a modern man to a groaning wreck from too much food and drink. But at least he has the solace of bicarbonate in his bathroom medical cabinet, and the choice of a hundred patented nostrums at his friendly neighborhood drugist.

Such was hardly the situation that faced Dr. Fuller on America's first Thanksgiving Day in 1621.

Here is a picture to make any physician in history turn pale:

1. A feast that ran for three full days—not one.

2. A menu that ranged from gooseberries to pumpkin pie, from cornbread to venison stew, clams, goose and turkey, all washed down probably with green wine and "strong waters."

3. A host group of 50 rundown Pilgrims — including only five surviving women and a number of children — all exhausted by hardship and a crowd of hungry wild Indians who were expecting an orgy instead of a Thanksgiving, and who were ready to drink anything that flowed and gorge on anything that had had its fur or feathers removed.

For three days the Pilgrims ate, drank and prayed, and for three days and three nights the Indians ate, drank and whooped it up all over the landscape.

You can't have a party like that without someone asking, "Is there a doctor in the house?" Dr. Fuller was the only one.

No one knows the trouble he faced. There must have been burnt fingers, cuts and bruises to treat during those three long days.

How do you treat a child sick from too many gooseberries? A Pilgrim father sick from too much food? A Pilgrim mother sick from exhaustion and anxiety?

Or what remedy do you offer 91 savage Indians suffering at the same time from stomach-aches and hangers?

Well, Dr. Fuller left no record. But he must have found helpful such common herbs as these:

"Feverfew—for headaches," "Foxglove—for the heart, and as a purge and emetic."

"Parsley—for children when troubled with wind in the stomach."

"Pennroyal—to revive those in swoons. Also good for gums and gouts."

"Wormwood—for diarrhea."

"Wild wood—to staunch bleeding."

Whatever remedies Dr. Fuller employed, the three-day Thanksgiving celebration ended with no listed major casualties.

Mr. Holloman might not realize the tremendous service he has given to the people of North Carolina in his attitude toward officials spending their time at conventions while at the same time asking for assistants to do the work.

All the money the state of North Carolina has to spend is money belonging to the taxpayers of this state. If money is to be spent unwisely, then it is the same as wasting it. And with the pinch of high taxes in our state, the taxpayers are not of a mind to stand by idly and see money thrown away.

Yes, we'd like to see some names called. If the people of North Carolina do not know the names of the convention trotters, how can the people make the proper complaints?

Mr. Holloman is already high on our list of state employees who have given distinguished service. Now he can render ever more distinguished service by simply calling the names of the convention set.

This thing has gone far enough apparently. Now is the time to air the entire story publicly. The people have a right to know.

We feel sure that some conventions cause a state official to do a better job. But how can a man do a good job when he is away from his work for 58 days out of a period of four months? It does not make much practical common sense.

Reason To Give Thanks

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Those who are too easily discouraged by the course of events forget that they need to be thankful for life itself. Were there no Thanksgiving Day, we should still be grateful that we live in this era of futile destruction.

Man, in his limited wisdom, has now been able to prove that he can destroy what God has made, but he has not yet proved that he can make what God has made. It is possible now to destroy everything but we cannot make anything. We can destroy the Earth, but we cannot make the Earth. We can make a 50 Megaton Bomb and we know how to use it to smash what it has taken millennia to make, but we cannot produce the Earth itself. We have great knowledge and even wisdom but we know little of what we are doing.

And so we need to be thankful that our learning has not taught us to be so destructive that nothing is left of life. We have gone far in our ability to destroy; yet we have not been able really to destroy anything. We have gone far in discovering the secrets of science, yet the total result of our activities is hardly perceptible.

We must be thankful that in this period of leadership men who quarrel with each other for matters which are hardly meaningful, the most that can be said is that men battle against each other futilely but that in all their battles, they have hardly really destroyed anything that cannot be rebuilt. No achievement of man and no monument of God's creation has been destroyed during this period of man's inhumanity to man.

We need to be thankful that while Khrushchev acts like a madman, shouting, shrieking, threatening, cajoling, he does not take the initiative in a fighting war. He shouts but he does not destroy. He stands before the walls of states blurring forth imprecations and threatening violence, but it all ends in noise and echoes. And when the threats have made him hoarse, others settle down to their daily tasks, wondering what he will do next but no longer fearing the consequences of his imprecations.

We are thankful that our own country has been able to go through this period of terror without losing our stability and without such misconduct as can only lead to self-destruction. In fact, we have come through the worst of it all, stronger than when we started, more able to meet crisis after crisis, more unified as a people.

We are thankful that we are achieving unity as a people. The elements of disunion are being eliminated from our society. The extremists of the Left and of the Right, those who live by hate and prejudice or treason, are being found and scourged and the nation grows stronger through use of ideals. It is wholesome that extremism should be extirpated.

We are thankful that we recognize the weakness of our institutions and that we seek means to correct our errors and to build a stronger society based on the ideals of our ancestors. We do not suffer from stiff-neckedness and false pride.

We are thankful that we have gone through a period of fear and distress and have come out of it courageous and more sure of ourselves, daring greatly to build a stronger society based upon historic memory and not upon the hearsay of the moment.

Political opportunism is giving way to noble ideals.

We are thankful that in this era of revolution and disturbance we have succeeded in achieving political change quietly and peacefully and that we have continued our orderly way of government.

We are grateful that we have overcome our own prejudices which make for weaknesses, that we have reached a moment in our history when religious distinction have not continued discriminations among citizens, so that all are equal in the eyes of their neighbors as they are in the eyes of their God.

And so, we are thankful to the God of our Fathers that while in other lands, meanness of spirit, confusion of ideals and judgement continues, in our country, we are achieving understanding and human affection, that to us is coming the evidence of the brotherhood of man in all its reality.

Opinions In Brief

"In noting the two most often given reasons for enjoying newspaper work, being in the midst of things and in a position to serve public needs, it is hard to think of anything that offers these in such abundance as a small town paper."

—The Publishers' Auxiliary.

"Recent events in the White House show that the President and Mrs. Kennedy have genuine interest in the cultural arts. But the pattern set in the White House must be followed in the city."

—Sanford (N.C.) Herald.

"Two prospectors are digging gold out of the hills in Stanly County. Let's see now, is there a sales tax on gold you dig out, or just on gold you pay out?"

The Raleigh Times.

While Youngman said that the feeling of ineffectiveness of remedies for confiscation is a factor discouraging investment in non-European lands, he said he was not pessimistic himself.

"I believe the forces of history are about to call on free enterprise for supreme efforts—a bolder, more imaginative role, a higher degree of effectiveness in serving man's needs, particularly in Asia."

GIFTS FOR BOYAGERS AVAILABLE ON ARRIVAL

As a substitute for bon voyage gifts, gifts to travelers when they reach foreign countries will be available through a new service next January.

Called "Be My Guest," the service will arrange for perfumes, champagne, dinner at famous restaurants, opera tickets, tours and other gifts. The service will later offer hinterland Americans similar gifts in New York.

MORE MEAT IMPORTED; GOVERNMENT BUYS MORE

The City of Brisbane, due today in Boston from Australia, carries 2,151,200 pounds of beef, 775,040 pounds of mutton and 215,040 pounds of lamb for Boston, New York and Philadelphia. The Lake Ontario brought in 660,800 pounds of beef last week and the Pioneer Glen will arrive in New York December 3 with 145,600 pounds.

Meanwhile, in the past week, the U. S. government bought 3,192,000 pounds of frozen ground beef at around 42 cents a pound, 2,850,000 pounds of young chickens at from 27 to 30 cents a pound, 1,367,925 pounds of canned chopped meat and 4,737,600 pounds of lard at slightly under 12 cents a pound. The food will be used for the school lunch program and needy families.

After A Nuclear War Comes Clean-Up Job

By PROF. WILLARD F. LIBBY

After a nuclear war, a first job would be to decontaminate homes, yards, streets, offices, and factories from lingering fallout radiation.

In cities and towns, that would call for the cleanliness of the fabled Dutch housewife.

Two weeks after fallout comes down, it is only one tenth of one per cent as intense. Most of the radiation has been emitted. But long-lasting atoms remain, particularly strontium-90 and cesium-137, with an average lifetime of 40 years.

Though relatively feeble, this radiation could amount to a damaging cumulative dose over the years if you lived closely with it in areas which had been heavily dusted with fallout. You must get rid of it, from rooftops, from window ledges, from tree leaves, from grass, pavements, buildings, wherever it has collected.

It can be washed off your house, or any building, or trees, with a hose. Even if your water supply has been contaminated with enough fallout to be unsuitable for drinking, it can still be used for this washing job.

Cutting grass closely and carefully, and removing the cuttings to a safe distance can help clear up lawns. But you may have to scrape away the top quarter-inch or so of lawns and soil and put that dirt carefully to one side.

Geiger Counter A Must

Areas within 200 yards of homes should be cleaned of lingering fallout. If the dust has entered your house, as through a broken window, it must be swept out, or vacuumed up, and the vacuum bag discarded along with its contents. Automobiles, tools, anything that has been dusted needs thorough cleaning, preferably by water which empties into sewers or drains.

In doing all this, you need a geiger counter to tell if your grounds or streets have residual amount of residual fallout. The geiger counter clicks as it measures the fallout.

Food is safe to eat if it's been canned, packaged, or wrapped. Radiation going through it doesn't harm it, or make it radioactive. Vegetables can be washed carefully, or outer exposed portions thrown away. Food stocks in grocery stores, and warehouses, or special storage areas, should be safe.

Water from contaminated reservoirs can be purified, by normal filtering, but probably will need repeated purifications, and careful testing to be certain that fallout particles are removed. In an emergency, you can evaporate or distill that water—pure water will be collected, with fallout particles remaining behind. Merely boiling water is useless—fallout particles are not germs that can be killed by heat.

Removing fallout strontium-90 from farmlands, the source of future food, is a much more serious and difficult problem.

Land poisoning exaggerated. But statements that all survivors would starve because the land would be poisoned are great exaggerations.

Anywhere from 10 to 50 per cent of farmland, in various areas, might be dusted. Some would have sufficient amounts of strontium 90 to be a considerable hazard. On some fields, fallout atoms could be removed by taking off the crops, mulches, and other types of ground cover, and burning them or depositing the ashes and sod at safe distances. In other areas, the residual fallout could be removed by scraping off the top inch of bare soil.

Some of the most heavily dusted areas might have to be abandoned, for a time, or used carefully in special ways.

Milk cows should not be permitted to graze on lands heavily contaminated with strontium, because strontium enters their milk, and strontium tends to concentrate, like calcium, in bone. At certain levels, still not clearly determined, strontium could cause bone cancers and leukemia presumably in many children if they received too much.

But the strontium-contaminated land could be used to grow corn, or hay, which then could be fed to cows and pigs to produce beef and pork or it could be used for grazing beef cattle. The strontium-contaminated grazing lands could be used in this indirect way to produce safe meat—but not milk, and not vegetables for human consumption.

(Tomorrow: Nuclear warfare will not doom world.)

Birdie Knew The Pup Not Ready

DERMOTT, Ark. (AP) — Mother knows best, Mrs. Fred Betts says, and in this case the mother was a dog named Birdie. Birdie had puppies a while back and her owner gave the Betts children their pick of the litter. When the pups were six weeks old the Betts children selected their favorite and brought it home.

Birdie didn't like it. Before the next dawn she came and loudly demanded her child. Mrs. Betts had to put the two of them in her car and drive them home. Two weeks passed and Birdie decided the time had come. Back she trotted to the Betts home, bearing the same pup, and left it.

Deer Found No Refuge In Park

WINONA, Miss. (AP) — Three days before the Minnesota deer season opened, a yearling buck leaped a nine-foot fence to gain the safety of a city park enclosure where tame deer are kept.

No soap, though. Game wardens dosed the buck with tranquilizers and turned him back to the wilds.

Rural South Is Going To Town

CHATTANOOGA (AP) — The South is going to town, a North Carolina sociologist declares. In a lecture, Dr. Rupert B. Vance, the university's Kenan professor of sociology, said the South is still the least urban of the nation's large regions, but it recently passed the half-way mark in rural-urban balance. Now 51.6 per cent of its residents live in towns and cities.

Caldwell County's Beloved Symbol

By NANCY ALXANDER

Lenoir News-Topic Staff Writer
Written for The Associated Press
LENOIR, N.C. (AP)—Hibriten, beloved mountain, is a symbol of Caldwell County.

There are many higher, more awe-inspiring and more majestic mountains that outline the blue, pinnacled rim about Lenoir, the county seat, but none inspires the sentiment and devotion given to Hibriten.

The gently rising, symmetrical peak, which has an elevation of 2,265 feet, lies southeast of the city. Those who leave the area picture Hibriten in their mind's eye when they think of home. Servicemen overseas have been known to declare, "If I ever get back within view of Hibriten I'm never leaving again."

The peak, which may be seen from almost every locality in hilly Lenoir, is a mountain of many moods. Her face is gay and joyful these brought autumn days; but there are times when it becomes somber and serious, when she veils it with gray mist and deep purple shadows. Hibriten heralds spring with snowy garlands of dogwood, blowing white across her apple-green dress. She ushers in summer with clusters of white sourwood waving through rich green foliage. In winter her icy cone sparkles and glistens like a giant Christmas tree.

In recent years an easter cross and a Christmas star glow high on the mountain's crest against the night sky, a heart-warming and awe-inspiring gleam, seen for miles in all directions and a guiding flame to airplane pilots.

There, too, is a fire tower, where the forestry service may survey the countryside for great distances to protect the county's woodlands.

The mountain was originally named Turkey Cock by settlers. The two peaks nearby are Turkey Hen and Pea Hen, which still retain their names. Tradition has it that Emma J. Baker, an early Lenoir teacher from England, re-named the mountain Hibriten for her home in Broughton, England. There have been many who have lamented the change of homespun title.

The peak was named Turkey Cock because of great flocks of wild turkeys that fluttered through the trees and roosted in 100-foot high trees in the virgin forest. Indians and pioneers feasted on them as well as the deer and bear that roamed the slopes.

Hibriten was a favorite lookout for Indians, whose smoke signals could be seen for miles. Many legends about them and their battles linger today.

In the early years hawks lurked in the mountain's shaded depths. A settler is quoted as saying great packs of animals roamed its ridges and frequently crept downward, lurking about the early village of Lenoir to prey on livestock which foraged at large on acorns and wild peavines. He recalled, "The black rogues, stealthily skirted a pasture field on the edge of the woods and when close enough to the flock would mount a log for the purpose of surveying and picking out the largest, fattest buck in the herd." Hunters with dogs often scurried after the vicious beasts. In 1786 two shillings or a bushel of corn was offered for every wolf killed in the area.

Before the chestnut tree blight, children once gathered chestnuts on the mountain. Perhaps they will again some day, for the original chestnut which has been introduced into the county is responding well and reseeding itself. A variety of wild flowers, shrubs, and trees grow in profusion and beauty on Hibriten.

On the side of the mountain is a cave, said to have been excavated by searchers for gold in the late 1700's.

A company from Caldwell in the Confederate Army was named for the mountain—the Hibriten Guards, Company F of the 26th North Carolina Regiment.

During the days of the Civil War when Stoneman's Raiders swept through Lenoir capturing many men and ransacking the town, Hibriten was the hideout for a number of citizens.

After the war veterans sometimes held reunions on Hibriten, pitching their tents there, their campfires glowing on the mountain's summit like stars.

Before adequate roads were developed into Watauga County, Hibriten was the favorite outing place for the people of the area, especially for Davenport College students. Often families camped on the mountain for a week or so at the time during the summer, taking along the family cow, tied to the wagon or buggy.

About 50 years ago great interest was manifested in developing the mountain. A company was formed to build accommodations, planning eventually to erect a hotel there. The only building constructed was a pavilion where dancing and entertainment was enjoyed.

A number of organizations and industries, including the Masonic Hibriten Lodge, has included it in their name. Artists have painted it in all seasons and from all angles.

Though Hibriten has been the inspiration of many local poets, none has sung its praises more widely and exultantly than Will C. Erwin, an early editor of the Lenoir News-Topic, who frequently poured forth in rhyme emotions that today stir the breasts of those who know Hibriten:

"Sweet mount! To me more grand art thou, Than towering Alps or Appennines;
Dear to my heart thy granite brow, Thy shaggy oaks and whispering pines."

Variety Of Popular Sports In Early Rural Carolina

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

While Thanksgiving wasn't celebrated officially state wide until after 1849, rural sports and feasts were often a part of the rural life during the fall season. The Ante-Bellum citizen of North Carolina had to make his own amusements in company with his neighbors. So it was often, you'd find a group of people assembled at some large plantation or cross roads engaging in the sports popular at that time.

Fives
This game was a variety of table tennis that was played in open court or against a high wall. It was played with a small leather ball and a bat or with a larger ball played by hand entirely. It was a game that took a lot of stamina and was a real calorie burner. Players often passed out from playing and in one case a player died. He had played on to avoid the taunts of the spectators, even though he had fainted twice during the game.

Bandy

This preview of the game later known as golf was played with a bat or "bandy" and a little ball, exceedingly hard, made with leather and stuffed with feathers. The bandy had a straight handle of wood about four and a half feet long with a curvature fixed to the bottom. This curvature was often backed with lead. The object of the game was to drive the ball into holes made in the ground. The winner was the player who finished the last hole first or made the fewer strokes. This game also was played in Scotland and the holes there were often a quarter of a mile apart. In the villages and on the North Carolina plantations, the distance apart depended on the space that could be used.

This sport was a source of irritation to most town dwellers and they often complained about the boys when the town was used for this sport.

Football

The field for this sport was eighty to one hundred yards in length. It was almost like the modern field with goals at each end of the field. The ball was a blown up bladder in a leather case, but sometimes it was only a bladder blown up and filled with peas or shots. It didn't make any difference as to the number of players, except each side had to have the same number. Sometimes there were as many as fifty on each side. The object of the game was to kick the ball through the goal posts. Handling the ball and running with it wasn't allowed. The first team to kick a goal won the game. But it often meant many a bruised shin, a busted leg or other injuries before the first and only goal was kicked.

Long Bullets

This was played with a big iron ball. The layout was almost the same as football—two teams, each defending a goal. The ball was rolled with great force toward the goal, both hands and feet were allowed in this game. And much wrestling for the iron ball took place. This definitely wasn't a game for the faint hearted or tender footed.

Gander Pulling

This sport usually took place in the spring around Easter. But no matter what the season, at the news of a pending gander pulling, interest was aroused. This sport, while fatal for the gander, was often the cause of injury among the participants. It was a time for the young swains to show off before the ladies, and for some former champions to add to his laurels.

The announcement of the event was made two or three weeks in advance in order for the country folks to save some money for whisky, and to stand treat for a neighbor or two and to bet on the outcome.

Early on the day of the "pulling", the crowds would begin to gather at the appointed place. Among the first, if not the first, was the whisky vender. He started playing his trade with the first comers and the "white pizen" flowed freely.

As the gathering crowd waited for the main event, little side shows took place. Here and there a wrestling match broke out. Over near the woods, someone placed a target on a tree and the marksman had his day.

At last the main show was to take place. A tough old gander, the main unwilling actor in the play, was hung by its feet from a tree branch. The long wiry neck was covered with oil and soft soap.

The twisting oily object struggled to free itself as the contestants lined up a little way from the tree. A shot was fired and number one rode off at a gallop. As he neared the tree, a person stationed here as part of the event, struck the horse on the flank. This made the horse leap forward and the rider reached for the snake-like neck of the gander, only to miss and sometime find himself on the ground. It took some real grabbing and strength to snatch off the gander's head, but this was usually the end to this somewhat stupid and certainly a cruel event. And the rewards for the victor was a "glittering hat", envious glances of those that failed and the applause of the crowds.

Racing

A favorite but dangerous contest was the horse race. Usually the race course was on an ordinary road. In fact the race could take part in almost any suitable area. Some plantations had their own race tracks. The race, usually ridden on horses not trained for such things, often ended up in a tragic manner. The horse ran into a tree and killed its rider.

Once the course was chosen and positions assigned, the rider had to keep his horse on his side of the road or lose by default.

A lot of those races were gotten up on the spur of the moment. A quart or two of whisky was all the purse needed to get one started.

Slow Racing

But the event that furnished the most fun for the spectators was the slow race. Here the prodding nag was of prime importance. In fact the horse that was the hardest to move under any circumstances usually won the prize. All the shouting of the crowd and prodding of the rider made no difference to such a beast. He wasn't meant for speed and was determined to show it. One horse solved this problem for his owner by walking backwards.

Now
The day called "Thanksgiving" is celebrated in different forms today. Usually in the den or living room in front of a television set, watching some football game a hundred or maybe a thousand miles away. A day of heavy eating and almost no individual exertion. A day that means different things to almost everyone.

To the student, a break in the school year.
To the teacher, a time to relax a bit.

To the merchant, a breather before the rush towards Christmas.
To the laborer, a day off with pay.

To the farmer, a day to look ahead to next year's crop planning.

And to all in some sort of way to give thanks—for a harvest in some special blessing remembered, and a land that is free in this, the year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred and sixty-one.

Nuclear-Powered Space Craft Believed 'Key' To The Planets

By JOHN WHEELER

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — If scientists at work on nuclear-powered spaceship designs succeed in conquering their formidable engineering problems, the rockets of today will be known as the model T's of the space age.

Some scientists say application of nuclear power to rocket flight may carry the United States into the lead in the race for the planets. They claim there are signs the Soviet Union lags in this field.

Nuclear-powered space vehicle designs are scheduled for submission to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by the end of this month.

Aerojet General Corp. already is developing a nuclear fission and liquid hydrogen engine under a NASA contract. The Atomic Energy Commission has accelerated its program to perfect a lightweight reactor at its Nevada Camp Mercury testing grounds.

The advantage of nuclear rockets over conventional liquid and solid fuel models has been compared to the superiority of speedy, long-ranging U.S. atomic submarines over their diesel predecessors.

Dr. Harold Plank of Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. here says a nuclear-powered upper stage in a manned interplanetary space rocket system could provide twice the speed and double the payload of present rockets of the same weight. Kraft Ehrlicke, General Dynamics rocket scientist, has been quoted as saying, "space will be conquered only by manned nuclear-powered vehicles."

The maiden flight of a U.S. nuclear rocket may come in 1965 or 1966, the Atomic Energy Commission has predicted. The nuclear and conventional rockets are quite similar in that both use chemical fuels, turning them into rapidly expanding gases.

In nuclear rocket engines a jet of liquid hydrogen will be directed through holes in an atomic reactor where temperatures may reach about 3,600 degrees Fahrenheit. This is far higher than the burning temperatures in conventional rockets of the same size and would cause much greater exhaust gas expansion and a corresponding boost in thrust, according to Aerojet.

An even bigger factor in expected performance of nuclear rockets would come because vast quantities of liquid oxygen used in conventional liquid rockets would be replaced by a lightweight atomic reactor and its comparatively tiny amount of uranium fuel.

One major problem in harnessing the atom for space exploration is the vast quantities of radiation which would be given off by the reactor.

For this reason, says Dr. Plank, nuclear-powered engines probably would not be used in the atmosphere of the earth or other planets.

Plans call for a chemical booster to lift the nuclear rocket into space where it would be discarded as the nuclear power plant took over propulsion. A final stage conventional rocket could provide the power for landing on a distant body and later relaunching the manned capsule and returning it to earth.

The final stage would provide another useful function. It would give the crew some of the necessary shielding during nuclear operations.

D. M. COPELAND, resident on the Old Creek Road, has already completed much of his Soil and Water Conservation farm plan. Copeland has seeded 15 acres of fescue grass and wheat to be used in his tobacco rotation.

Ladino Clover for hog grazing has been seeded on five acres of land unsuitable for tobacco. Copeland has also constructed an open ditch outlet for his farm. The drains will be installed in the future according to Copeland's farm plan.

Soil Conservation Service personnel assisted him in developing his farm plan in cooperation with the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District.

J. D. ADAMS, of the Brown Store Community in Grindle Creek Watershed reported yields of soybeans from land prepared by disk-ing at 33 bushels per acre.

In another field, Adams turned the land with a turning plow and planted it to soybeans. The yields were 27 bushels per acre. Adams is a District Cooperator with the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District.

MARION NOBLES of the Stokes Community recently planted 16 acres of Fescue grass.

The land will be planted with tobacco in the spring of 1963 and Nobles will let the fescue grow next summer and fall before preparing the land for tobacco.

This is a part of his basic Soil and Water Conservation plan developed with the assistance of the Soil Conservation Service in cooperation with the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District.

Judgment Will Be Book-Sized

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP)—Israeli judges are preparing a book-sized judgment in the case of Adolf Eichmann, it is understood to run about 300 pages in Hebrew.

Now in the polishing and translation stage, the judgment will be slightly longer in the other languages in which it is to be delivered—German, English and French.

Justice ministry sources confirmed today that, providing there is no technical hitch, the court trying the ex-gestapo colonel accused of complicity in the wartime slaughter of millions of European Jews is expected to reconvene Monday, Dec. 11.

Bethel Indians Piloted By New Coach This Season

BETHEL — When the Bethel High School Indians officially opened their 1961 basketball season Oct. 15 the team found a new coach at the helm. Dan Wooten, who will be trying hard to defend the Pitt County Conference championship.

Wooten, faced with the task of filling former Coach Walter Latham's spot, may find his job made easier for him by the fine personnel he has to work with.

Native of Greenville
Coach Wooten, a native of Greenville, began his coaching and teaching career at Belvoir-Falkland high school after six-months active military duty. When former Bethel Coach Latham vacated the coaching job after the 1960-61 season to spend more time on his administrative job as principal, Wooten was chosen to take over as basketball mentor.

for the boys team and one win and one defeat for the girls. Last Friday night in their first game of the season the boys defeated Grifton 49-27, but the girls lost 43-40 as they started a season with hopes of defending their title as conference champs last year. Tuesday night, both the Bethel boys and girls won in a double-header with Oak City.

Depending On Veterans
This year the Indians are depending largely on returning lettermen, Tex Everett, along with Tri-Captains, Herman Danials, Don Dewar and Jimmy Lewis. Everett had an average in the double figures last season and he was closely followed by the sharp shooting of Dewar. Everett, who is only a sophomore, is also expected to be one of the team's leading rebounders.

Coach Wooten said the team lost some fine players when John Smith, Harvey Lewis and James Ayers graduated in June. But, he noted, that the squad appears to have the material to take up the slack.

Indian Starters
Bethel's starting five is composed of Everett at center. Dewar and Danials at forwards and Jimmy Lewis and Jesse Danials at guards. Glenn Worsely, a freshman, is also slated to see action at the guard position.

The Bethel girl's team, coached by Charles Matthews, is hoping to win the championship for the second year in a row. However, the loss to Grifton could indicate that someone else will be after this title. Of course it is too early to tell now.

Janet Cobb and Carolyn Manning are expected to be the mainstays for the girl's team with some strong assistance from Joan Garrington.

ACC Had Its Troubles With Southeastern Conference

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most Atlantic Coast Conference football teams had their troubles winning this season against any kind of opposition. But perhaps the worst record was compiled against Southeastern Conference teams.

Only two ACC teams, Duke and Maryland, are over the 500 mark this year. For the conference as a whole, it won 12 games while losing 14 to outside opponents. Two of those victories were over SEC teams, eight of the losses were at the hands of Southeastern Conference schools.

South Carolina, which plays at Vanderbilt Saturday, can do its bit to make that record look a little less bad. Gamecock Coach Marvin Bass, who coached at Georgia Tech last year, knows the caliber of the opposition.

"I think the Southeastern is one of the best football circuits in the country," says Bass. "Even the teams in that league with just so-so records can be good because of the competition they face in their own conference."

Vanderbilt is 2-6 for the season. South Carolina 3-6. Two of the Gamecock victories were upsets, over Clemson and Maryland, while one of the losses was a last-minute one to ACC champion Duke.

Bass says his "biggest thrill" has been the Gamecocks' play against strong odds. "If we can get another good effort in this final game," he says, "I believe we will have a chance against Vanderbilt. We certainly aren't taking them lightly."

Clemson Coach Frank Howard urged his Tigers to greater efforts in their practice Wednesday for the season finale against North Carolina State. He gave each of his four regular teams 20 minutes to look at State play patterns, and spent an hour on offense.

North Carolina held an hour and a half workout for the Wake Forest game. New running plays were tried out and quarterbacks Ray Farris and Junior Edge found the passing range to receivers.

Wake Forest held its final rough workout Wednesday, planning brief sessions today and Friday. Maryland, hoping for a Gator Bowl bid with a victory over Virginia, held a one-hour, full-speed scrimmage. A light, two-hour workout was planned today so the Terps could eat Thanksgiving dinner in the afternoon.

Duke, idle Saturday, closes its season with Notre Dame next week.

East And West 3-A Champions At Stake Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eastern and Western Class 3-A high school football champions will be determined this afternoon to launch a busy weekend of title play.

Sanford plays at Greenville in the East final, with Brevard and Canton meeting at Asheville for the West crown. This will complete the season in Triple-A ranks. No state champion will be determined in AAA, AA or A competition due to the shorter season of the sponsoring North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

Six games Friday night will wind up the campaign. Heading the list is the 4-A state final in which Charlotte Garinger plays at Raleigh. Both are unbeaten in 11 games, but Raleigh has one tie game on its record. The Caps were deadlocked by Greensboro 6-6 in their opener, but have swept 10 straight since then. They walloped Greensboro in a return match last week 29-0 for their sixth successive shutout in the opening round of the playoffs.

Garinger stormed past Rocky Mount 21-0 in its initial playoff test, holding the Blackbirds to three first downs.

Performance figures of the finalists are strikingly similar. Raleigh has scored 268 points and allowed 25. Garinger has scored 265 and yielded 48.

Here's the rest of the playoff picture for Friday night:

Class AA — Ahoskie and Morehead City at Kinston for the Eastern title. Sumner and Winston-Salem Hanes at Greensboro for one of the two Western regional crowns. Boone beat Murphy last week for the other.

Class A — Windsor and Warren at Rocky Mount in the East final. Glen Alpine and Clyde at Asheville in the West final.

Hickory plays Mooresville at Kannapolis for the top honors of the Western North Carolina High School Activities Association.

Curtain Closes On Southern Loop

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The curtain comes down on the Southern Conference football season today in a couple of Thanksgiving Day rivalries that are long on tradition but devoid — for a change — of any league championship implications.

Virginia Military Institute's Keydets and Virginia Tech's Gobblers tangle in Roanoke's Victory Stadium for the 57th time since 1894, while Richmond's Spiders and William and Mary's Indians meet at Richmond City Stadium for the 70th time since 1898.

The biggest stake, the Virginia Big Five championship, goes to the winner of the Tech-VMI fracas. But Richmond, by beating William and Mary, could nail down second place in the Southern Conference — the highest finish in the Spiders' history.

Conference Trophy Presented Phants

The co-captains of the Rose High football team received the Northeastern Conference championship trophy at an assembly of the entire student body and faculty members Wednesday morning.

J. T. Kornegay, principal of the Washington High School and secretary of the Northeastern Athletic Conference came over to make the presentation to the team and the school for winning the 1961 football title.

The trophy was presented to Co-Captains Wayne Sumrell and Russell Fields. During the presentation ceremony Kornegay commended the Phantom football

Notre Dame May Forfeit Victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a possibility Notre Dame will forfeit its controversial 17-13 football victory over Syracuse University.

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, said in a television interview (CBS) Wednesday night:

"Everyone knows Notre Dame doesn't want to win a game if it really didn't. If the rules committee determines that we didn't, we'll accept accordingly."

This was an apparent reference to the NCAA rules committee, which both schools have asked for a formal ruling. Bob Neyland, chairman of the NCAA committee, has said he believes both the Big 10 and Eastern College Athletic Conference have made proper rulings on the game officials' action.

Both conferences held in effect that game officials were wrong in awarding Notre Dame a play after the game ended. On that play Notre Dame's Joe Perkowski booted a 41-yard field goal to overcome Syracuse's 15-14 lead. But the two conferences also held that they had no authority to change the score.

Syracuse is a member of the ECAC and Notre Dame uses officials from the Big Ten, but is not a member of it.

The officials had called a penalty against Syracuse for roughing after the Irish tried a field goal as time ran out. The kick was wide. The officials ruled that Notre Dame was entitled to another play.

But after the game the point was raised that the Irish had to be in possession of the ball for the penalty to apply, and once the ball had been kicked, it was no longer in their possession.

Unless Notre Dame concedes to Syracuse, the game goes into the books as a 17-15 victory for the Irish.

Father Hesburgh was here to present President Kennedy with the Notre Dame Lactare Medal, honoring the outstanding Roman Catholic layman of the year.

Showdown On Secret Draft Possible

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League was reported in New York today for a possible showdown with President Harry Wismer of the Titans, who defied the commissioner's cancellation of the AFL owners' secret draft of college players.

The league office in Dallas said Foss was due here from Washington, where he made his decision Friday to nullify the much-censured draft the league owners conducted more than two weeks in advance of the scheduled Dec. 2 date.

"I don't know whether he plans to come to our game (The Titans played Buffalo at 11 a.m. EST at the Polo Grounds)," Wismer said. "If you find him, tell him I'd gladly pay his rent for a year here. I always wanted the league office to be in New York."

Duke-UNC Frosh Benefit Game

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke's passing attack and North Carolina's balanced offense were to clash today in the annual freshman game played for the benefit of cerebral palsy victims.

Duke has a 3-1 record. Quarterback Mark Caldwell has completed more than half his passes while end Chuck Drulis has caught six for touchdowns.

North Carolina's attack is directed by quarterbacks Ron Tullihill, Gary Black and Jim Gallagher. The Tar Babies are 2-2.

He acted after college officials had labeled the draft a "breach of faith" of the AFL's agreement with the NCAA. Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, termed it a "discredit to football."

Other AFL owners had no comment to Foss' action. But one player, Jim Cadie of San Jose State, said he already had signed with the San Diego Chargers of the AFL for a $1,000 bonus.

Three Football Contests Will Highlight T-Day Menu

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three games—one college and two pros—and the first playing of the Mercy Bowl highlight a sparse Thanksgiving football menu today.

Bowling Green or Ohio and Fresno State play in the Mercy Bowl at Los Angeles. Proceeds of the game go to the families and survivors of the victims of a plane crash a year ago in which 16 California Poly players lost their lives.

In the big ones, Green Bay is at Detroit—noon, Eastern Standard Time, CBS-TV—in an important National Football League game; Texas is at Texas A&M—2:15 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, ABC-TV—for their tradition-filled Southwest Conference rivalry and Buffalo is at New York (11 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, ABC-TV) in an American Football League affair.

The rest of the schedule includes Colgate at Brown, Memphis State at Chattanooga, William & Mary at Richmond and Virginia Tech at Virginia Military.

The possibility of rain shadowed each of the televised games, but at least two—the Green Bay-Detroit and Texas-Texas A&M games—expected sellout crowds.

State's Morris Moves To ACC Pass-Receiver Lead

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina State's John Morris, chief target for passing phenom Roman Gabriel, grabbed a half-dozen passes in the Wolfpack's 38-14 rout of South Carolina last weekend and jumped into the Atlantic Coast Conference pass-receiving lead in the process.

Morris' best day of the season brought his nine-game total to 24, one better than Maryland's Gary Collins has caught in the same number of outings. Each has one more game to play, the Wolfpack meeting Clemson and the Terps battling Virginia in regular-season finales this coming weekend.

Morris, according to ACC Service Bureau figures, has gained 325 yards on his 24 receptions, while Collins has gained 349 yards on his 23. Collins, who is within one catch of equaling the ACC's career reception record of 68, leads Morris in TD passes four to South Carolina's Billy Gambrell trails the two pace-setters with 21 catches, and Gary Barnes of Clemson is fourth with 16. Joe Scarpatti and Al Taylor of N.C. State trail with 15 each.

Jack Morris of South Carolina all but sewed up the kickoff returning title last weekend when he hauled back four for 118 yards against N.C. State. This raised his season total to 328 yards on 11, an average of 29.8 yards per return. Mark Leggett of Duke, with 230 yards in returns, and Gib Carson of North Carolina, with 215, trail. Each has returned 11, just like Morris.

Jay Wilkinson, Duke's sparkling sophomore, continues to lead punt returning by a wide margin, showing 292 yards on 20. If he returns three against Notre Dame Dec. 2, he will match another ACC season record.

In punting, Eddie Wernitz of Clemson is still No. 1, with a 41.6-yard average, and Lon Armstrong of Clemson (21 for 21), John Hanigan of Maryland (16 for 16) and Bob Rowley of Virginia (10 for 10) have yet to miss an extra point kick. Tom Brown of Maryland leads pass interceptions with seven, a new ACC single-season record which he can still better.

Carolinan Title At Stake Today

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Old rival Catawba stands in the way of a seventh successive conference football championship for Lenoir Rhyne's Bears here this afternoon.

Lenoir Rhyne, winner of its last six games after a stumbling start, is 7-1 for all games and 5-1 in Carolinas Conference play.

Catawba has lost six out of nine and is 3-3 in the league.

A Lenoir Rhyne victory would make it nine titles in 11 years for the Bears, who presently share first place with Appalachian. Should Catawba upset Lenoir Rhyne the title would go to Appalachian, which has completed its season.

Palmer Defending Mobile Title

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Arnold Palmer returns today to the pro tournament trail in the $15,000 Mobile Open.

But it was a weary Palmer who is defending his championship in the 72-hole event.

"I'm tired," said the 31-year-old Palmer. "I've been playing too much for me."

The sturdy Pennsylvanian figures he has traveled just under 60,000 miles since Oct. 1, mainly in his head-and-head series with Gary Player. His last tournament in the United States was the Dallas Open, where he finished second.

Despite his apparent weariness and recent putting troubles, Palmer was placed on the co-favorites' seat with Doug Sanders, the Georgian who also has won five tournaments this year.

Bluth Leading Bowling Meet

CHICAGO (AP) — Ray Bluth, one of the five St. Louis finalists in the $48,000 World's Invitational Bowling Tournament, held the lead today as the nation's top shooters faced a busy Thanksgiving holiday schedule.

Four rounds of match play were on tap for the finalists in the 10-day tourney, with the windup on Sunday. The 16 women finalists have sets of three games scheduled.

Bluth, a veteran star kegler, took the lead in the final round of the opening head-to-head play Wednesday night, finishing up with 9 wins against 3 losses. His total pinfall was 2,666 and he was credited with 62-16 Petersen points.

Bluth, who averaged 237 in his first 12 games of match play, held a narrow lead over Joe Joseph of Lansing, Mich., who topped the original field of 128 in the preliminary rounds with a record 7,959 for 36 games. He was credited with 8½ wins, 3½ losses and a total pinfall of 2,626 and 61-01 points.

Shirley Garms of Chicago led the women shooters with 44-05 points. She won 7 to 9 games and had a total pinfall of 1,855.

Ohio State Nat'l Cage Powerhouse

By HAL PARIS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State, an awesome giant in basketball circles, looms as a national power again this year.

It's the end of a three-season cycle that has seen the brilliant Buckeyes draw raves as one of the finest basketball teams ever assembled.

Even Coach Fred Taylor sheds his usual air of conservatism when he modestly states: "I think we'll have a good club."

There's sufficient ammunition to support such positive thinking—especially with big Jerry Lucas still on the scene.

Lucas, the 6-foot-8 two-time All-America from Middletown, heads an impressive array of talent that could bring Ohio State a flock of honors.

For one thing, there's the Big Ten title, the most coveted possession in Taylor's book.

"We play them one at a time," the Buckeye boss insists, "but naturally have an eye out for the Western Conference championship. What comes after that is pure gravy."

Ohio is shooting for a third straight championship, one that could equal the feat accomplished by Wisconsin in 1911-12-13.

And while nobody within earshot of Taylor will admit it, the Buckeyes look strong enough to capture another national crown.

That honor proved elusive last March when Cincinnati upset the Buckeyes 70-65 in overtime in the NCAA finale to shatter dreams of a perfect, unbeaten season.

Taylor is quick to point out potential obstacles.

"The Big Ten is a lot more balanced and stronger this year. And our opposition outside the league is tough too."

He figures Purdue, Iowa and Minnesota will be rugged and the Michigan State and Northwestern teams are darkhorses.

Ohio's only serious losses are

Under Nkrumah's Guidance, Ghana Is Drifting To Authoritarian Rule

EDITOR'S NOTE—What is going on in Ghana, now that African nation is nearing its fifth birthday? Lynn Heinzerling, AP Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter of the African scene, has just taken a hard look at President Kwame Nkrumah's country and here reports his findings.

By LYNN HEINZERLING
ACCRA, Ghana (AP)—All the queen's charm and all the queen's prestige couldn't put President Kwame Nkrumah back on his pedestal.

The royal visitors, Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, have come and gone and Nkrumah now faces the future in a divided and unhappy country alone.

While it lasted, the 11-day royal tour of Ghana seemed to ease political strains which threaten to topple Nkrumah or force him into dictatorial rule.

Hundreds of thousands of Ghanians, smiling and colorful in their gay costumes, turned out to greet the British sovereign. Nkrumah was always at her side.

It was a rare demonstration of affection for the island kingdom which ruled this former colony for years and granted it independence less than five years ago.

Some of the sting of Nkrumah's constant diatribes against colonialism and imperialism disappeared among the warm smiles of friendly Ghanians.

No African colony was better prepared for independence by its colonial masters than Ghana. Economically and administratively, Ghana was prepared to take its place among the world's democratic nations and prosper.

Instead, decked out in neutrality and one-party democratic centralism and with hundreds of Nkrumah's political opponents in jail, the press, radio and labor unions stifled, Ghana is drifting toward authoritarian rule.

The queen, who granted independence, is gone now and Nkrumah, lonely in his magnificent castle, must decide which way Ghana will turn.

He must also decide what he is to do about the jailed hundreds, the estimated 6,000 refugees in neighboring Togoland and the thousands discontented with his austerity budget and wage-withholding program.

Due to close family ties in African countries the arrest of one man can have serious effects on dozens of persons. A man earning money often supports or provides education for brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces.

Despite his 10-week visit to the Soviet Union and the Soviet bloc states, it is by no means certain that Nkrumah is heading into the Communist camp. He is a political leader of unquestioned talents who sincerely believes that a combination of Marxist socialism and capitalist free enterprise is the answer to Ghana's economic problems. He has unbending confidence in his ability to thread his way through the ideologies of East and West and arrive at what is best for Ghana.

The great danger Western-oriented Ghanians see in Nkrumah's policies is that he will get himself so involved with Moscow that he will be unable to extricate himself.

Ghana has concluded trade agreements with almost every Communist government in the world. There already are more than 300 Communist technicians in the country and more will be coming.

There are 70 Ghana cadets taking officer training with the Red army. Several communist news services are distributed here. And Ghana Airways has eight Soviet planes bought for $5 million and for reasons unknown, a large quantity of Soviet arms are stored in the country.

Nkrumah's practical neutralization of the opposition has brought conflicts in his all-powerful Convention People's party and maneuvering for position there continues. The difference seems to be over the amount of socialism Ghana is to adopt. At the moment at the extreme left wing, represented by Interior Minister Kwaku Boateng and Information Minister Tawia Adamafio, seems to be dominant. They appear to want drastic socialization on an authoritarian pattern, with Nkrumah as leader and "Messiah." Adamafio controls the government newspapers and radio.

Nkrumah heads the party faction between this leftist group and the conservative wing, formerly headed by K. A. Gbedemah. Gbedemah left the country to avoid arrest after being dismissed with five other moderate Cabinet ministers by Nkrumah.

With socialism on the horizon, most capital investments in Ghana are still British and a large segment of Ghana's population knows and admires the British way of life and British institutions.

The United States at present has 23 technicians working in Ghana in addition to the Peace Corps, which is engaged in teaching projects.

The whole technical assistance program amounts to about a million dollars and the largest part of that is being devoted to the diversification of agriculture, to include rubber production. American agriculture experts have two million high-yielding rubber trees in the ground and hope to have flourishing rubber plantations in five or six years.

American technicians also have built about a hundred ponds in the Volta region and northern Ghana to provide water for livestock, human consumption and irrigation.

In addition, the United States has sent 58 senior officers of the Ghana Ministry of Agriculture to the United States for training in the past 2½ years. Some already are holding responsible positions in Ghana.

Nkrumah is still waiting for Washington's decision as to whether it will help financially with the huge Volta River hydroelectric project. That involves the building of the third largest dam in the world and an aluminum plant to use the power generated. It would broaden Ghana's economic base and relieve the economy of dependence on the world price of cocoa beans, the largest source of income at present.

It is difficult to estimate what an American refusal to participate would mean in the present atmosphere of political disaffection. But as one opponent of Nkrumah's methods said: "Good will begets good will."

Favor Master Watershed Plan

GRIFTON — Twenty-five landowners, in the Johnson's Mill Tail Watershed, in a meeting at Grifton Tuesday, decided to develop a master type watershed protection and flood prevention plan. The plan will include soil and water conservation treatment on every farm in the watershed and excavation of a new channel from Grindie Slough up through the Mill Tail.

Buckleberry Baxley Swamp, St. Johns and Shiloh Canals, as well as five laterals, will be cleaned out and enlarged as needed to give protection from two-to three-year frequency storms.

M. B. Hodges, secretary for Buckleberry Canal Company, served as chairman for the meeting. Other officials who attended were Howard Rasberry, president of St. Johns-Baxley Swamp Canal Co., and W. L. Johnson, president, and L. W. Taylor, secretary-treasurer, Shiloh Canal Co. Wiley A. Gaskins, mayor of Grifton, attended as landowner.

The Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District program was explained by Roy R. Beck, Work Unit Conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service. Lacy Coates, Planning Party Leader with the Soil Conservation Service Raleigh office, explained the cost sharing preliminary estimate for structural measures.

The structural work is estimated to cost $112,139 of which the federal government will pay $58,000 and the three canal companies will pay $21,869 cash and $32,264 in easements.

The group plans to complete the necessary land ownership and canal company boundary map and get two more needed easements during the next few days.

REV. STEPHEN SULLIVAN . . . Pastor of St. Raphael's Chapel

OFFICE WORK . . . is also part of the job of heading a church.

CONSTANT STUDY . . . and reading are essential to better serve the church.

INSTRUCTING PERSONS . . . in religion brings much happiness.

Veteran Chaplain Serving Local Parish

By START SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Silver Star and Purple Heart winner, former school teacher and university instructor, . . . A music and theater lover, the Rev. Stephen A. Sullivan finds much happiness and contentment and feels more like a pioneer now by serving his church in the South.

Pastor of St. Raphael's Chapel, Father Sullivan was born in New York City and attended grade school there before entering Manhattan College where he graduated, Cum Laude, in 1928, an English major.

After teaching science, Latin and English for four years in Albany, Providence and Detroit schools, he entered the Sulpician Seminary at Roland Park, Md., to begin his studies for the Priesthood. Ordained in May of 1937 a year ahead of his class, Rev. Sullivan entered the Graduate School of Catholic University in Washington, D. C. He received a master's degree, Cum Laude, from the University in 1938, then was assigned to St. Genevieve College for Women at Asheville.

Pastorates followed at Mt. Airy and Linville before entering the Army as a chaplain in 1942.

His duty stations in the "states" before serving at Port Moresby and Milne Bay, New Guinea included New York Port of Embarkation, Camp Shelby, Miss., Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and Fort Lewis, Washington.

Wounded
An Army Captain at the time, Rev. Sullivan was wounded by shrapnel at Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, then on recommendation of Naval Officers, was awarded the Nation's third highest award for service, the Silver Star, for his actions in a landing operation.

"It was a pretty hot operation", the minister commented, saying that of the "250 men in the landing, only 100 of us came back."

During his stay in New Guinea, Rev. Sullivan worked with civilian missions, obtaining food for them after their regular sources of food had been cut off. And, at one time through his assistance, Army doctors performed an operation on a missionary which restored the man's sight.

One of the pastor's most memorable experiences of the Second World War and one of the "real bad days" was when he helped bury "400 soldiers in one day. . . following the invasion of New Britain Island.

On one occasion, Rev. Sullivan van went to General Douglas MacArthur and Admiral William F. Halsey and succeeded in changing an order which would have caused the evacuation of missionaries from New Guinea. The area helped many downed flyers by giving medical treatment and food, until the men could be returned to their fighting units.

Contacts With Missionaries
Commenting on his contacts with missionaries in the islands as being one of the most "pleasant phases of the war", the local priest explained that through his contacts with these ministers he became familiar with the region in which New York Gov. Rockefeller's son is now missing.

"Ruggedly isolated" is the description Rev. Sullivan gives to the area. Other natives of New Guinea used to keep away from that region, he explained.

Following the close of the war, Sullivan served on the Allied Cemetery Commission, forming the National Cemetery in New Guinea before returning to the U. S. as Chaplain of the 3,000-bed Veterans Hospital at Battle Creek, Mich.

A Major prior to his discharge from government service, in the early 1950's Rev. Sullivan then attended the Graduate School of Psychology at New York University and taught in the University's Department of Religion.

In 1954 the Priest returned to the Diocese, serving pastorates at Kannapolis and Lumberton. His parish at Kannapolis received the Cardinal Stritch Award for Catholic Action for lay activity in the parish. . . one of two given in the state that year.

The minister came to Greenville as Pastor of St. Raphael's Chapel here November 18, 1960.

"I felt there was a great deal of work to be done. . . and a great need for priests", Father Sullivan said about his decision to enter the ministry. Work in the South, as opposed to that in the North, gives a feeling of being "more of a pioneer . . . being in on a building stage," he commented.

"In the North, the church has been built up by others already . . . here we are building it."

With holding services, working a great deal with marriage problems and individual instructional work on religion his main tasks, Rev. Sullivan busies himself with activities as Director of the Newman Club at East Carolina College and is a member of the Interfaith Council at ECC.

"Instructional work in the teaching field . . . instructing persons in religion", after over 24 years as a minister is still enjoyed "very much" by Rev. Sullivan.

A member of the Marital Board of the Diocese, and connected with the Civil Defense program of the Diocese, Rev. Sullivan is a member of the Lumberton Elk's Lodge.

His main hobbies include music (organ and piano); the Skovican Maine Summer Theatre at Lakewood, Maine, where he spends his summer vacations and a cottage and boat and fishing in the Lakewood area.

Rev. Sullivan has one brother, the commissioner of Motor Vehicles for the State of New York, a sister who teaches in the New York City public school system and a nephew, a priest on the faculty of Villanova University.

Too Much Thigh At Freedom High

FREEDOM, Wis. (AP) — There is too much thigh at Freedom High, in the view of faculty members, so girls at the school were told today to lower the hemlines or go home.

The edict followed a faculty discussion on the current fashion of skirts worn knee high or slightly above. One observer remarked that if girls don't sit properly, there are usually four inches of thigh visible in the class room and as a result the looks aren't for the books.

A male teacher said the fashion was "turning a classroom of learning into one of distraction."

Mothers of the girls were given notes reading: "If you allow your daughter to leave for school with her knee showing, you can be almost positive more than knees will be showing when she sits down."

There was no immediate comment from the parents.

Girls who refuse to lower the hemline suitably will be sent home or dispatched to the home economics room to lower the hemline before returning to class.

Freedom is a community of some 250 residents in the northeastern section of the state.

AYDEN—Miss Evon Holmes, baby daughter of Mrs. Mary Dawson, was crowned the winner of South Ayden School's baby contest that ended Monday.

A total of $110 was raised in the project by the school's Parent-Teacher Association chapter. Second place winner was Ann Garris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Garris, and Phyllis Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dixon.

Other contestants included Deniece Adams, Terence Blount, Oden Braxton, Gwen Burney, Mark Cannon, Patricia Cannon, Lucricia Hammond, Rodger Nobles, James Payton Jr. and Monica Sparkman.

Stokes-Pactolus FFA Plans Event

STOKES—The Stokes-Pactolus High School chapter of the Future Farmers of America at a regular meeting here Tuesday laid plans for its annual Father-Son Banquet. To be held later this school year, the banquet will entertain approximately 100 persons, according to FFA plans.

The local chapter is composed of some 70 Stokes-Pactolus High School boys who have the motto: "Learning to do; doing to learn; learning to live; and living to serve."

THE GREEN STONE

A suspense thriller by SUZANNE BLANC

CHAPTER 23

Luis Perez arrived at the Villa Serena while the tourists were at dinner. It was a dangerous night and cloudless night, but at this hour there was little chance of meeting anyone in either the parking lot or the garden.

Long ago Uncle Pedro had warned him against attracting attention to his evening visits. "I know it's all right," the gatekeeper had said, "but the Senora Alexander? Who knows how North Americans think?"

Carmelita too had insisted on secrecy. She would meet him outside the kitchen door after dinner was over; together they would walk to the ancient tree on which the merchant had hanged himself, and there they would sit, shielded from curious eyes by the festooned moss and superstition that clung to it. When Luis, nervous under the evil tree, had jokingly accused her of hiding from another lover among the servants, Carmelita had flashed with instant anger.

"A lover, yes indeed I have a lover—Uncle Pedro. At his age where would he find another job? One that is so easy and pays so well? If you don't like it, don't come at all!"

Luis had sulked for several days before he had returned on her terms, humiliated by his defeat. Now, through a queer twist of destiny, his very defeat worked out to his advantage. The secret visits made both Carmelita and the gatekeeper his unwitting allies. If anything went wrong, they would be forced to protect him. Certainly they could not admit that without permission, he had been given unquestioned access to the Villa.

Boldly he crossed the dark, walled pit of the parking lot. His intentions, honed to the razor sharpness of his knife, were sheathed behind a pleasant smile.

To the gatekeeper Luis looked as he always did—handsome and prosperous in his expensive tan coat. Again he thought what a fine husband the guide would make for Carmelita. If the girl would only come to her senses!

She flashed those big eyes of hers at every handsome man. One of these days she would end up in real trouble. The brief smile that had animated his face when he first saw Luis died, and he sighed dejectedly.

"What's the matter, Uncle Pedro?" Luis asked cheerfully. "You're not yourself tonight."

"They've all gone," the gatekeeper said.

"Who's gone?"

"Carmelita and the others. They've gone to see the fireworks. You know, at Ramon Morales' house. Only Uncle Pedro has to stay. Someone must watch the gate," he said. His voice mimicked Ruth Alexander's flat Midwestern accent.

"Don't feel bad, Uncle Pedro. You've seen fireworks before, and you will again." He offered the gatekeeper a cigarette and patted him lightly on the shoulder. "Anyway, I didn't come only to see Carmelita. The Senora Alexander still owes me a mordida for sending the little turista."

"She's gone too," the gatekeeper said, shaking his head.

Could it be that the woman had already left San Luis, that the Jew was already beyond his reach? He heard the alarm in his own voice. "Who's gone? The little Senora?"

"Both of them. Only today's turistas are here. All the others have gone with Senora Alexander to the party!"

So the woman had not escaped him! Luis' relief was so complete and immediate that he did not realize, at first, that he had used up his only reasonable excuse for entering the Villa grounds.

"How long have they been gone?"

"You just missed them!"

After waiting through the leaden setting of the sun, the lingering golden afterglow, fearful of being too early, he had arrived too late. Realization was a bitter anticlimax. His mingled caution and his determination drove him to persist.

"Perhaps I'll wait for Carmelita."

"It's useless, amigo. They will come back late and all together. No, it's better to go yourself and watch the fireworks."

There was no course open to Luis but to admit defeat and leave. "If I had only come earlier," he thought, "I would be in there now, hiding safely behind the Villa."

Tormented by "ifs," Luis started back to town. He could almost imagine that the bad luck which had plagued him for the past few days was padding after him

"I was. I got about five miles north and blew the left rear."

"Couldn't you buy another tire?"

"In San Luis? Who're you kidding? They show you pictures of tires and order them from the capital. They sent it in on the four o'clock bus. It was too late then to leave." He finished his beer and put the glass down on the bar with a gesture of disgust.

Leaning over to pick it up, the barmaid winked across at Luis. "Don't you believe him, Pepe. He didn't blow a tire at all. He drove a nail into it."

Pepe laughed. "Who could blame him, Rosa? Here, bring us another drink."

During their conversation Luis had grown increasingly excited. It was as though fate itself had intervened to help him.

"Excuse me, Senores," he interrupted. "I couldn't help overhearing. Is it really so tough to get tires in San Luis?"

Gonzales answered. "If you take an odd size or need more than one," he shrugged. "San Luis is not different from other places. It's the same all over. I usually carry an extra spare—just for insurance. Did you need a tire?"

"No," Luis said. "A friend of mine does."

He finished his drink quickly and got up. The barmaid, just bringing the beer for the men beside him, smiled at him, smiling at him enticingly, and at any other time Luis would have noticed how white and even her teeth story tomorrow.

Science At Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tree rings, beautiful male butterflies, and lamps in the sea figure in science news:

SUNSPOTS AND TREES

Two scientists find evidence against the theory that sunspot cycles show up in the annual growth rings of trees.

Sunspots follow an 11-year cycle. Some experts think the sunspot effects on climate are strong enough to be reflected in rings of old trees in the southwestern United States.

It is generally accepted that climatic changes do show up in the width of growth rings of ancient trees.

But John Dutton and Prof. Reid

A. Bryson of the University of Wisconsin meteorology department said they cannot find a real correlation between sunspot cycles and tree growth. They analyzed tree ring data with a statistical method to detect cycles.

MALE BEAUTY

The beautiful colors and designs sported by male butterflies seem to be completely superfluous, serving no useful purpose, reports Dr. R. E. Snodgrass, research associate of the Smithsonian Institution.

Among some birds, for example, male beauty attracts females. But among butterflies and moths, it is the females who attract males, and primarily through scent, he writes. The pretty colors of male butterflies may be useful in protective imitation, but "we need a theory to explain their colors on a scientific basis of usefulness to the insects themselves."

HEAT BARRIER

The heat problem for space vehicles, and passengers, plunging into the earth's atmosphere after space voyages may be 2½ times more severe than previously estimated, a new study finds.

The heating comes from friction of atoms and molecules of gases in the atmosphere. But at high speeds there's an additional and very serious heating from ionization, the negative electrons and positive ions into which gases can be separated, says Dr. Sinclair M. Scala of General Electric's Space Sciences Laboratory. Ionization from an object travelling at a speed of 25,000 miles an hour could bring a dramatic rise in the heating effect, he finds in theoretical studies based upon experiments in a shock tube tunnel.

LIGHTS IN THE SEA

Life in the oceans has evolved three distinct methods of lighting its way with luminescence.

The first and most significant is through special cells or organs which are provided with reflectors, lenses, and sometimes, shutters. Shrimps, squids and some fishes are examples, says Dr. J.A.C. Nicol of the Marine Biological Laboratory, Plymouth, England.

A second form is discharging a cloud of luminous matter into sea water. This is used by some clams, shrimps, squids again, and bristletails and some fishes.

Third is a cooperative method with luminous bacteria. An animal can harbor these bacteria within several glandlike organs, and supports them there. In return, the bacteria produce light for their host. The luminous bacteria take up abode in certain squids and fishes, Dr. Nicol says.

Revere Teapot Is Museum Piece

BOSTON (AP) — Nobody knows what happened to Paul Revere's teapot — the one he was holding when artist John Singleton Copley painted his portrait.

But the Boston Museum of Fine Arts now has acquired a teapot closely resembling it made by the silversmith-patriot long ago. It was bequeathed to the museum by a Massachusetts woman whose family owned the teapot nearly two centuries.

Museum director Perry Rathbone said this teapot "is not the teapot in the portrait," because its cover ornamentation is slightly different, but "it is closer to it than has ever come to light to date." The museum possesses the largest existing collection of Revere silver.

The "1962 Photography Annual" (Ziff-Davis, $1.25) is a visual smorgasbord, a potpourri of great pictures served up to suit every photographic taste at a popular price.

The volume contains many photos of great beauty and simplicity. Others are reflections of life's realities from pleasant memories to grim reminders. And there are some that are carefully contrived either with artistic ability or from a knowledge of photographic techniques.

Following a formula of previous years, the annual presents capsule portfolios of outstanding photographers' work (eight this year), a selection of top advertising and illustrative photography, an enlarged international cross-section and some of the prize-winning photos and photographic books of the year.

In addition, there is the helpful "Notes on the Pictures" section which describes how each picture was made or gives some pertinent information about it. This feature is of such universal interest that it has been translated into appropriate foreign languages for insertion in 100,000 copies earmarked for Europe, Japan and Latin America.

This year's feature spotlights are focused on: W. Eugene Smith, with 2 previously unpublished photos accompanied by unusual personal notes; Edward Steichen, with a backward glance at his 60-year photo career; Ezra Stoller, and his architectural achievements; David Attie, with his persistence - of - vision phenomena; Toni Frissell, and her womanly point of view of a number of things; Len Steckler, with his painter's approach; David Vestal, with his poetic realism; and, somewhat sadly, on Ed Feingersh with a memorial tribute. He is a photo-journalist who died too soon, at 36, this past June. Digging into the mine of informative material about the pictures at the rear of the book, I was impressed with the ingenuity used to create some of the startling effects.

For instance the two-page persistence - of - vision photo by Attie was made by shooting 11 separate images which were then combined on one print through careful planning and masking. But this was topped, at least in the number of exposures, by sports photographer John Zimmerman.

He set up a sequence camera in a fixed position and recorded a skier coming down a mountain slope in 13 different positions on one run. One large over-all print was selected and the 12 other figures were cut out and added to it, resulting in one composite picture which told the whole exciting story.

A much easier stunt made a three-picture series by Robert Freson. To get only pure forms of people at the beach, he deliberately threw his lens out of focus and created "experimental silhouettes." When amateurs achieve something along the same effect by pure carelessness, they throw away the results, give themselves a lecture and vow to be more careful in the future.

The lesson is plain: amateurs must plan their mistakes more carefully or come up with a plausible explanation like "creative photography" or "impressionistic mood," before submitting the results.

I, too, have a photograph published in this new annual. It's entitled "The Magician" and confidentially, the picture editor for the annual is a bit of a magic bug himself.

Hundred Fellowships Offered Teachers

One hundred fellowships for study at Cornell and Stanford Universities during the summer of 1962 are being offered to high school science and mathematics teachers and supervisors by Shell Companies Foundation, Inc.

The fellowship program, now in its seventh year, has provided special study for more than 550 teachers and supervisors, eight of whom are from North Carolina.

They are available to high school teachers and supervisors of science and mathematics who have had five years' experience and have shown qualities of leadership. The program is designed to help improve instruction in high school chemistry, physics and mathematics and at the same time to recognize meritorious teachers in these fields.

Requests for fellowship applications should be sent directly to the two universities. Teachers here should write to Dr. Philip Johnson, School of Education, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York. Applications should be filed as soon as possible. Completed forms must be mailed by Jan. 4, 1962. Selections will be made by the two universities and teachers will be notified early in February.

Teachers receiving fellowships will attend graduate level seminars, taking special courses in their own fields and learn of modern theory and practices. They will meet with outstanding scientists, mathematicians and engineers and take field trips to nearby industrial and research laboratories.

Each fellowship provides for full tuition, fees, board and lodging in university facilities, a transportation allowance and a stipend of $500 to compensate partially for salary that might have been earned during the summer. The Cornell seminar will last from June 28 to Aug. 10 and the Stanford seminar from June 25 to Aug. 19.

EARLY START—St. Nicholas leaves Madrid, Spain, city hall in traditional ceremony for his annual visit to Dutch children to whom he represents Santa Claus.

Balaguer Expected Seek A Provisional Government

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic (AP) — President Joaquin Balaguer is expected to propose today the creation of a provisional civilian-military junta headed by himself to bring stability to the Dominican Republic while the work of erasing the legacy of the Trujillo dictatorship goes forward.

The junta proposal—first put forward by the leading political opposition group—was expected in a broadcast in which the president said he would announce new plans to accelerate the democratization of the nation ruled for 31 years by the late Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo.

With the left-of-center sector of the political opposition demanding that he resign, Balaguer moved to strengthen his regime Wednesday night by handing the government's second highest post to the air force general who helped quell efforts of the Trujillo dynasty last weekend to return to power.

The president named Gen. Pedro Ramon Rodriguez Echavarría, 37, secretary of state of the armed forces and picked the general's brother, Col. Pedro Santiago Rodriguez Echavarría, to command the air force, the nation's strongest armed service.

The Rodriguez brothers engineered the air force movement last Sunday that overrode pro-Trujillo officers and stamped out scattered outbreaks of army resistance. In their new positions, they could move even more swiftly against any major threat against the regime.

Terry Jo Has Not Cried Since Rescue

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — This was a mixed-up Thanksgiving Day for Terry Jo Duperrault, the sole survivor of the Bluebellie tragedy.

The pretty blonde 11-year-old could be thankful for her escape and rescue, via life raft, from the sinking ketch.

She could be thankful, too, in her hospital room for a recovery that enabled her to order up a traditional turkey-and-fixings dinner.

But for Terry Jo, it was a Thanksgiving Day bereft of her entire family—parents, brother and sister—who went down Nov. 12 with the yacht the Duperraults had chartered for a Bahamas pleasure cruise.

Only an uncle, Fred Duperrault, and an aunt, Mrs. Ralph Scheer, were here as "family" for Terry Jo on the holiday.

A week ago today, the sunburned and unconscious girl was flown here from a rescue craft and was put on glucose injections in a desperate fight to save her life.

Interrogators say Terry Jo has not cried or indicated she knows her family's fate—except to point silently downward when asked about them by the crew of the merchant ship which rescued her.

Physically, the Green Bay, Wis., girl snapped back with amazing vitality from her 3½ days of foodless tossing on a raft under a tropical sun and rainless nights. She has read comic books and written chatty letters to schoolmates back home.

Here is what Terry Jo ordered from her Thanksgiving dinner at Mercy Hospital: Fresh fruit cup, roast turkey, mashed potatoes, giblet gravy, baked squash, mold-crabberry salad, roll and butter, pumpkin pie and milk.

Her appetite has been good. She stood up for the first time Tuesday.

A pre-Thanksgiving present was a $94 doll, some toys and clothing from the crew of the freighter Captain Theo, which plucked her from the Atlantic Ocean.

Terry Jo's hospital room is still refuge against a furor which still boils concerning the fate of the Bluebellie, the Duperrault family, the Bluebellie skipper's wife, Mary, and the suicide of rescued skipper Julian Harvey.

Harvey cut his veins less than 24 hours after he had heard the little girl had been picked up alive.

Mrs. Harvey's brothers, Dr. Jordan and Charles Jordan, both of Milwaukee, have expressed dissatisfaction with the Coast Guard's inquiry into the Bluebellie tragedy. Harry Jordan said the two will remain in Miami and will try to get permission to talk with Terry Jo.

The Coast Guard has said no findings will be announced until the Bluebellie investigation has closed.

Suzy Wants Make Good

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Suzy Parker is in town to make her fifth movie and her fourth comeback.

At least that's the way she sees it. But then, Suzy Parker sees everything in an upbeat, oddball kind of way, and who is to say that she is wrong and the rest of the world is right?

"I make pictures so seldom that they always say it's comeback when I start a new one," she said over a champagne cocktail at Romanoff's.

"I can't help it if Fox wouldn't let me work. Do you realize that all I did for a year and two months was sit back in New York, doing my needlepoint and collecting a check every week? The money was getting to be rather ridiculous—$1,795 a week for doing needlepoint."

She bootlegged a copy of "The Interns" script and found the role of a fashion model who falls pregnant. "It would be ridiculous for any other actress to play the part," she informed her agents.

But her loanout price was too high. So she convinced Fox to save it weekly stipend to her. As a freelance she peddled herself to Columbia at a price it could afford.

"I wanted this part and I got it," she said. "It makes me boiling mad when people say I don't want to work. Of course I want to work."

"I was lousy in my first picture, 'Kiss Them for Me.' Everybody was bad in it, even Jayne Mansfield. If you can imagine that, I was so bad that Stanley Donen, the director who discovered me, refused to recognize me thereafter."

"Anyway, my next picture was '10 North Frederick.' I worked damned hard on that role. I don't care what you thought of the picture; I was good in it."

About her acting career, she continued: "I'm really serious. I want to really make a go of it, so I won't have to go back to fashion modeling, which I hate."

Pledges Devised 'Apple Turkeys'

Apple turkeys, complete with paper tails and heads and toothpick legs, were prepared for the children of the Trainable School by the pledge class of Alpha Delta Pi.

The 27 turkeys, for 23 children and four teachers, were delivered to the school by three pledges yesterday. In return the children sang and danced for the three.

Frances Moseley, project chairman, said the pledge class hopes to make the Trainable School a permanent project. She pointed out that helping children is a national project of Alpha Delta Pi sorority. The group hopes to make Christmas stockings for the school children.

Members of the pledge class are: Ann Aikens, Rocky Mount, president; Ann Powell, Aulander, secretary; Marsha Myers, Arlington, Va., treasurer; Frances Moseley, Greenville, project chairman; Patsy Kennedy, Elkin, scholarship chairman; Dottie Farmer, Greenville; Betsy Dikeman, New Bern.

The patent system was established by Congress on July 4, 1836.

Spectacular Fire Is Under Control

NEW YORK (AP)—An inferno several stories underground killed three persons Wednesday night and turned the Times Tower into a huge chimney belching smoke and searing heat high above the "Crossroads of the World."

Two firemen perished while fighting the blaze. This morning a body was discovered in the burned out basement levels.

A crowd rivaling those of New Year's Eve swarmed into the Times Square area around the 24-story triangular building—a landmark known throughout the world.

After a fight of almost five hours, 130 firemen got the spectacular blaze under control at 1:25 a.m. today.

Sixty pieces of fire department apparatus jammed the streets, and traffic was halted for a radius of two blocks. Police headquarters mobilized 150 extra men to patrol the area.

A cleaning woman and a porter were trapped by smoke on the 23rd floor for more than three hours. Through dense smoke and heat firemen finally made their way aloft and led the pair to the street.

Twenty-four firemen suffered smoke poisoning or injuries. Six civilians in the building were overcome by smoke.

The fire was deep in the seven-level underground storage vaults beneath the building which used to be the headquarters of the New York Times.

The fire apparently started in the fourth level down, and it burned through several levels. The storage vaults are mostly those of a foreign magazine and back-number newspaper firm which has a store in the basement.

The five-alarm blaze generated dense smoke and intense heat that poured up through the building.

The heat burst hundreds of windows, showering shattered glass to the street.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately determined.

Tiros II Keeps On Transmitting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Wednesday that the Tiros II weather satellite, launched a year ago today, still is transmitting good cloud pictures nine months after it was expected to quit operating.

Recent pictures from the 285-pound hatbox-shaped satellite were of useable quality—about the same as when it was placed in orbit," NASA said in a statement.

NASA said its remarkable performance includes transmission of more than 36,000 photographs and almost 4 million feet of magnetic tape containing weather information.

The policy review, signed by the deputy secretary of defense, Roswell L. Gilpatric, also reiterated that extreme personal or community hardship is a valid basis for delay or exemption from active duty.

It also set forth a "firm and uniform policy" on medical deferments for medical and dental students.

Unless they are receiving drill pay, they will be offered a chance to enter a program permitting them to finish their professional studies, "after which they will be given a chance to enter a program leading to their early commissioning."

The directive added: "If they elect not to accept this program, they will be transferred to the standby reserve and after completion of their studies and training may be drafted."

Halifax Native Held For Theft

A 33-year-old Halifax Negro was in Pitt County jail today awaiting trial Tuesday on charges of breaking into a local service station Sunday.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson today identified the man as Samuel Parker of Halifax. Sheriff Tyson said officers recovered about $150 worth of merchandise alleged to have been stolen by Parker from Hines Service Station just off US Highway 264 early Sunday.

The sheriff said the investigation of the break-in was conducted by his deputies Gerald Davis and Bill Forrest. Parker was arrested last night, Sheriff Tyson said, by Greenville police officers.

X-15 Will Try Blast 46 Miles Into Space

By RALPH DIGHTON EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—Early next week the X-15 rocket plane will try to blast more than 46 miles into space—but there are plans for it to go even higher.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said today that new equipment expected to be installed by next March will enable the X-15 to try for an altitude of more than 75 miles—400,000 feet.

The upcoming flight, set for Tuesday if the usually dry lake bed on which the X-15 lands has dried out from recent rains, is aimed at 250,000 feet.

This is the maximum altitude for which the plane was designed. Engineers believe it can go higher, but the key question is: Can it withstand the heat of plunging back into the atmosphere from greater altitudes?

Paul Bickler, director of the NASA Flight Research Center here, told a secret conference of engineers this week what the X-15 will try to do once it has reached its designed maximum altitude.

A report of his talk released today disclosed that in 30 flights over the next 18 to 24 months the X-15 will:

1. First of all, test a new kind of stability system designed to give the pilot better control in space and enable it to re-enter the atmosphere at a safe angle.

2. Test a new display map for the cockpit which will help the pilot select a landing site he can reach. The X-15 exhausts its fuel within 1½ minutes after drop, and must be able to glide in for a landing without power.

3. Photograph stars, above the earth's dirty atmosphere, with a camera carried in an instrument bay.

4. Go higher and higher, each time pioneering techniques future spacecraft will use in penetrating the atmosphere at high speeds.

The X-15 has already gone as fast as it can go—a little more than 4,000 miles an hour. It has already reached 217,000 feet altitude. In the months ahead its pilots will determine the greatest height from which it can return to earth safely.
