Stadium Fund Committee Tops $250,000 In Drive

East Carolina College's stadium fund topped the quarter-million dollar mark today as the committee reported a total of $256,742.88 so far pledged to the project.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, president of East Carolina College, said today, "We are not only very pleased and grateful for the financial support given to us by Greenville and the County; we are also grateful for the tremendous benefits accruing as a result of this demonstration of a strong partnership that exists between the people of this area and the college."

"We are also very happy about the favorable reaction to this project throughout the state. It has done a great deal of good for our community as well as the college."

It has been the subject of many editorials in leading newspapers of the state.

W. M. Scales Jr., chairman of the nine-man Stadium Committee, said, "Speaking for the entire committee, we would like to thank the merchants and people of Greenville and Pitt County for their tremendous generosity in supporting East Carolina College in this manner. It has been a most inspiring thing to see how the people rallied when the bond issue failed and came up with the other $50,000 needed for the stadium."

Included in the state-wide bond issue voted on Nov. 7 was $50,000 which would have been used by the college for preparation of the football field and other things in connection with the stadium.

"Speaking as chairman of the committee," Scales added, "I would like personally to thank the eight men on the committee who have worked untiringly on this project for the past six weeks. Never has there been a civic undertaking in which eight men have been more unselfish with their time and talents than these men who have worked so sincerely in raising these funds for East Carolina College. Even with the enthusiasm of the committee, we had no idea of the gratifying response we would receive from everyone in Greenville and Pitt County."

"I would like to point out to the people of Greenville that Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, president of the college, has worked with this committee on every call, and we feel there is not another president of a college or university in the country who would have given more of his time and untiring enthusiasm to a project than Dr. Jenkins has given this one. He has been the inspiration for this committee and he has been right there with us every minute."

In addition to Chairman Scales and Dr. Jenkins, other members of the Stadium Committee are S. Reynolds May, Howard L. Hodges, R. W. Howard, David J. Whichard, Dr. E. B. Aycock, J. T. Little Jr. and J. Con Lanier.

Initially, the committee set out to raise $200,000 for the stadium project with the anticipation that an additional $50,000 would be available from bond issue funds for items in connection with the new James S. Ficklen Memorial stadium on the East Carolina College campus. After its first week of solicitations the committee announced that local business firms had pledged more than $212,000 to the project.

Following defeat of the bond issue, the committee decided to seek through public subscription the additional $50,000 needed for the new stadium.

The new stadium, to be located on the college property between Eimhurst school and highway 43, will initially have a capacity of 16,000 seats. College officials said it will be planned so that future additions could bring its capacity up to 50,000 seats if necessary.

Drainage lines already have been installed on the new stadium site and plans for the facility are being designed.

President Jenkins said actual construction on the stadium is to begin early in 1962 and it is expected to be completed in time for East Carolina's opening football game next September.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy today told men called into military service they may get out of uniform within less than a year.

Urging them not to grumble in the meantime, he said they provide the strength to spare the United States a choice "between humiliation and a holocaust."

Somewhat heatedly, Kennedy took note at a news conference of newspaper stories reporting discomforts and possible shortcomings in equipment and training programs for reservists and National Guardsmen summoned to service as a result of the East-West crisis over Berlin.

The President said his administration—contrary to some speculation—never intended to hold men called up for more than a year.

The hope, he said, is to let them out before the end of the 12 month period for which they were originally ordered to service.

Kennedy also observed that Congress approved the callup which the administration initiated last summer.

Kennedy, in a clear attempt to bolster the morale of the reservists and guardsmen whose lives were disturbed by the muster of additional strength, said the soldier on duty in a "cold and windy camp" is rendering the same valuable service as an airplane on 15-minute alert with the Strategic Air Command.

Kennedy said his administration had felt the nation lacked adequate conventional military strength.

He said the armed forces were increased—"to prevent a war, not to fight a war."

"We want to have a choice between humiliation and holocaust," Kennedy said with reference to a middle ground between surrender and the devastation of nuclear war.

Kennedy declared once again that this country wants to negotiate a peaceful settlement of East-West issues "but does not intend to surrender."

He said a key point in any future negotiations with the Soviet Union will be the question of internationalization of the administration of the autobahn land route to Berlin.

The President covered a wide range of questions in the news conference.

In the midst of the half-hour session with 372 newsmen and on-lookers he announced that the space-riding chimpanzee had taken off at 10:07 a.m. from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

"He reports that everything is perfect and working well," Kennedy said as his audience roared with laughter.

Kennedy, in reply to questions about the show of U.S. force off the Dominican Republic last week, said the United States would be most concerned "if one country in this hemisphere moved against another with force."

The President had been asked if the United States was prepared to use force to thwart any attempt by the regime of Fidel Castro in Cuba, for instance, to overthrow another government.

He said the United States would be concerned about aggression "particularly if its source" were the Castro regime.

Kennedy departed from his usual news conference pattern by inviting questions at the outset without making official announcements with which he customarily has opened his meetings with newsmen.

Under questioning, he touched on these other subjects: FALLOUT SHELTERS—As the administration moves to clarify its shelter program, Kennedy said, the emphasis would be on community shelters to protect large numbers of people from the deadly threat of radioactive debris from shots in a nuclear attack.

He said the long awaited government publication on civil defense would be issued shortly and would contain advice for homeowners on protection and on what each individual can do.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Space chimp Enos, his intended three-orbit trip cut to two because of trouble with capsule systems, parachuted safely into the Atlantic 500 miles southeast of Bermuda today.

The space agency plans to reveal the name of the pilot selected for that journey on completion of today's flight, if it is successful.

The freckle-faced astrochimp, a 37½ pound native of Africa's French Cameroons, zipped away from Cape Canaveral at 10:07 a.m. (EST) atop a thundering Atlas rocket. The huge Atlas performed perfectly and blasted the two-ton, bell-shaped capsule into an orbit ranging from 99 to 146 miles high. The speed was about 17,500 miles an hour.

In swift succession, tracking stations at Bermuda, a mid-Atlantic ship, the Canary Islands, Nigeria, Zanzibar and an Indian Ocean ship reported that the flight was proceeding normally, all spacecraft systems were working, and the tiny passenger was doing his jobs correctly.

A report from the flight surgeon at the Mercury control center at Cape Canaveral said Enos, a 5½ year old male, had not missed a trick, indicating that his ability to function was not hindered in any way by the crushing force of blastoff or the initial entry into the weird world of weightlessness in which he would be for all but a few minutes of the intended 4½ hour ride.

The orbits were to take an average of 88½ minutes, which would mean on end of the flight at 2:37 p.m. (EST) if it would not become necessary to terminate it earlier. It was scheduled to land about 800 miles southeast of here on a tape-recorded voice message was being received clearly from the capsule.

A huge recovery force of ships and planes was in the impact zone.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced 15 minutes after launch that signals received from an Atlantic Ocean tracking ship indicated that the spacecraft was in a satisfactory orbit.

The launching was perfect from the beginning of liftoff. The Atlas dropped its booster stage as planned 2½ minutes after launch and two minutes later hurled the capsule loose on its intended trajectory.

The Canary Island tracking station off the west coast of Africa caught clear signals from the craft at 10:22.

Enos was reported performing his tasks as intended.

There was no indication that his ability was stemmed in any way by the crushing force of blastoff or by the initial entry into the weightless state which was to last for all but a few minutes of the 81,000-mile flight.

Bermuda tracking station announced it had made contact with the space craft at 10:12 a.m. and is receiving information.

The flight surgeon reported that the chimp, Enos, is performing his tasks perfectly and is pulling the levers in the space capsule as he has been schooled to do.

Engine cutoff occurred at exactly the right time—2½ minutes after launch—and the capsule separated from the booster and turned its blunt end forward in a perfect performance of its flight trajectory.

"All indications are that the space craft is in satisfactory orbit," the Mercury control center said, based on initial evaluations of data from the Bermuda station.

The Canary Island tracking station off Africa's west coast announced it had made contact with the space ship at 10:22 a.m. and was receiving good information.

The spacecraft was in a nearly perfect orbit ranging from 98 to 148 miles above the earth.

The tracking station at Kano, Nigeria, reported contact with the craft at 10:29 a.m.

The launching came after several delays while technicians corrected minor technical bugs in the capsule.

Enos was reported in excellent condition as he waited out the long hours for blastoff on his 17,400-mile-an-hour flight.

The 37½-pound chimp was confined in a space capsule atop the powerful Atlas missile. He was placed there at 4:14 a.m.

If today's flight is successful, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration expects to announce immediately the name of the astronaut who will make the first U.S. manned flight in orbit.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy held open today the possibility that he might someday visit the Soviet Union if he were invited.

The question of the possible visit came up at Kennedy's news conference after the President said he was delighted at the publication in the Soviet Union of an interview with him. But he noted he has not been invited to visit the Soviet Union.

Kennedy also said that at the moment there are important problems that must be solved before such a visit would be a matter of practical consideration—the problems of Berlin and Southeast Asia.

Sanford Reports Opinions Divided

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford said today that some people were for a proposed special legislative session to act on a state bond issue, "some were against it and some in the middle."

Sanford announced Monday night he had decided not to call a special session. He said he would abide by the decision of the voters who turned down a $61.6 million bond issue Nov. 7.

The governor told his news conference today there wasn't a great deal of enthusiasm among Tar Heel legislators for a special session.

Sanford said he sampled opinion of about one-third of the lawmakers and approximately 75 per cent indicated they would look with favor on a pared down bond issue to meet urgent needs at state institutions.

The governor told newsmen his first decision was that it would not be wise to call a special session before Christmas. Then he later ruled out any special session. "I came to the conclusion that this would be a haphazard way of doing it," he explained.

"There will be considerable pressure of demands" for needs that would have been met if the bond issue had passed, Sanford said.

As an example, he pointed out, more space is needed now at the correctional training institutions. "We're trying to find additional space" at a juvenile evaluation center at Swannanoa, Sanford stated.

Asked what the reaction had been to his "report to the people" Monday night, Sanford replied with a smile, "My friends liked it—or at least they were kind enough to say it."

Concerning urgent needs at state institutions, Sanford said these will have to be met "in a carefully orderly manner."

Senator Safe In Katanga Riots

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga (AP)—U.S. Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., crouched on the floor of the American consul's automobile Tuesday night as the driver sped through an angry mob of Katangan paratroopers. The paratroopers earlier had dragged two white U.N. officials from a dinner party and beat them with rifle butts.

Anti-U.N. violence mounted in the Katangan capital in the wake of the U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing U.N. troops to use force to arrest foreign mercenaries serving Katanga President Moïse Tshombe's secessionist regime.

Dodd, guest of honor at a dinner party given by an American, arrived with Consul Louis Hoffacker as the paratroopers were beating the two U.N. officials, a Briton and an Australian.

Hoffacker rescued the Australian, put him and Dodd on the floor of the car and drove them to the home of Tshombe, whom Dodd has praised in Senate speeches. Tshombe's personal guard finally secured the Briton's release.

Balaguer Talks With His Rivals

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—A dusk-to-dawn curfew quieted this strike-bound Caribbean capital Tuesday night as President Joaquin Balaguer negotiated with opposition groups demanding that he step down in favor of a provisional junta.

Informed sources said Balaguer had handed the three opposition groups a new proposal offering to hold elections within six weeks instead of next May provided he was allowed to continue in office as head of an interim coalition government.

The chief opposition group, the National Civic Union, on Sunday demanded that Balaguer give way to a provisional junta government headed by Viriato A. Piallo, leader of the Civic Union.

Santo Domingo's streets were empty after dusk of all but authorized persons and heavily armed units of the army, navy and air force enforcing curfew ordered after thousands backed the opposition stand with strikes that shut down almost every business and virtually paralyzed the island nation.

Balaguer warned public service workers that they would be fired unless they returned to their jobs today.

Tanks and armored cars rumbled through the streets after armed forces chief Gen. Pedro Rodriguez Echavarria—credited with crushing efforts by Trujillo diehards to stage a coup 10 days ago—declared the strikes an "assault against strike authority."

The association runs the famed outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony."

The drama's general manager, J. S. Dorton of Chapel Hill, said the play's 1961 attendance was up by nearly 4,000 over the previous year and it ended the season with a net income of better than $15,300.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Art takes the Culture Week spotlight today with the annual meeting of the State Art Society.

State Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville has announced he will vacate the society's presidency and the group will elect a successor during a business meeting.

The week-long round of meetings of statewide organizations devoted to the fine arts began Tuesday with the annual sessions of the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs and the Roanoke Island Historical Association.

Rockefeller On His Way Home

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller flew sadly homeward today convinced that only by a miracle would his son Michael be found alive in the savage jungle swamps of South New Guinea.

After a week at the search headquarters Rockefeller flew to Manila Tuesday, then left the Philippine capital aboard a Dutch airliner for Amsterdam.

He was to change planes at Amsterdam and arrive in New York at 8:30 p.m. EST tonight.

"We have to face realities," the governor told newsmen at Manila, adding that "only an outside chance a miracle" could produce his 23-year-old youngest son alive.

The Australian air force announced today it also had abandoned its part in the search operation, which at its peak enlisted thousands of persons in land, air and sea rescue units. Dutch officials and teams of Papuan natives will continue to comb the jungle for at least a month.

Briley-Phillips Marry In First Presbyterian Church

In a double ring ceremony of simplicity and dignity Sunday afternoon at four o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church, Miss Darlene Rebecca Phillips became the bride of Jamie Carlton Briley of Greenville.

The Rev. C. W. Kimbrough heard the vows before a background of white gladiolus mums, fern, and seven branch candelabra. Prior to the ceremony, a program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. R. H. Heath Jr., organist, and Miss Patsy Jones, soloist, who sang "I Love You Truly," "Whither Thou Goest," and "The Lord's Prayer," as the couple knelt for prayer. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a chapel length gown of Chantilly lace and bridal satin. The fitted bodice featured a scalloped neckline and long fitted sleeves ending in small points over the wrists.

The voluminous skirt was fashioned with lace panels in front and back. Appliques of lace and

Shower Given Peggy Dixon

A miscellaneous shower was given Saturday night by Mrs. Elbert Hudson, Mrs. William Mills, Mrs. Ralph McLawhorn, and Mrs. J. D. Hudson Jr. at the Chicod School Cafeteria honoring Miss Peggy Jean Dixon who will marry Thurman Ray Hardee on Dec. 24.

About 85 guests were greeted by Miss Marty Dixon who invited them to the register table at which Miss Geraldine Hudson presided.

White flowers and greenery, consisting of sprays of English ivy, were used in decorating the dining hall of the cafeteria, featuring a green and white color scheme.

After providing entertainment for the group, and the honoree had opened the gifts, Mrs. William Mills invited the guests to the refreshment table which was covered with a cutwork tablecloth of white over green and centered with an arrangement of white mums flanked by silver candelabras with white candle tapers. Mrs. Elbert Hudson poured punch assisted by Mrs. Ralph McLawhorn who served cake along with salted nuts and mints.

Goodbyes were said by the hostesses.

December Bride Elect Honored

Miss Anne Harris, bride-elect of December, was honored Friday evening at a miscellaneous shower at the Mount Pleasant Community Building. Upon arrival, the hostesses presented her with a white chrysanthemum corsage.

Mrs. Doug Parker greeted the guests and introduced them to the honoree, her mother, Mrs. Charlie Harris, and Mrs. F. E. Taylor, mother of the bridegroom-elect, Miss Becky Sue Harris presided at the guest register.

Guests were directed to the bride's table which was covered with white and centered with a bride and groom and wedding bells.

Several games were conducted by Mrs. J. O. Teel, after which refreshments were served.

The refreshment table was covered with a lace cloth over green and centered with an arrangement of white and yellow chrysanthemums with fern. Green candles were used. Mrs. F. E. Taylor served party squares which were decorated with yellow roses. Mrs. Charlie Harris poured lime ice. The guests helped themselves to nuts and mints.

A silver vegetable gift was presented to Miss Harris by the hostesses, who were Mrs. J. O. Teel, Mrs. Linwood Harris, Mrs. Willis Stancill, Mrs. Doug Parker, Mrs. Randolph Fleming, and Mrs. J. L. Stanley.

Mrs. Dunn Is Pilot Speaker

Mrs. Adelaide Dunn, Supervisor of Nurses, Pitt County Health Department, spoke to the Pilot Club Monday night. Mrs. Dunn explained the development of the Health Department's programs through the use of preventive and corrective medicines. She further explained another scope of the Department's services, the rehabilitation of patients, in conjunction with the local office of the North Carolina Vocational Rehabilitation Department. In concluding her program, the speaker impressed her audience with the various phases of work accomplished through the Health Department, leading to a better community.

Mrs. Dunn was introduced by the chairman of the Finance Committee, Mrs. W. V. Suggs, who had charge of the program.

Mrs. E. H. Joyner of Miami, Fla., a former resident of Greenville, and sister of Miss Elizabeth Quinley, was a guest.

Following the program, a brief business meeting was held, in which the club made arrangements through the local Salvation Army to provide for a family during the coming Christmas season.

'Most Copied' Designer Cardin Aims At Haute Couture For All

By YVETTE DE LA FONTAINE PARIS—(WNS)—Pierre Cardin, who with Coco Chanel is called the most copied of all French couturiers, is seeking a way to dress every man and woman in clothes with genuine haute couture labels.

"All women should be wearing dresses and suits with labels by Dior, Chanel, Cardin and the others," declared the slight, slim-brunette designer. "Copies, reasonable facsimiles and counterfeits are not enough."

He will not be content until the

Linda Evans Named Co-ed Correspondent

Miss Linda Evans, 17, of Route 2, Greenville, has been named Co-ed Correspondent for the 1961-62 school year, according to an announcement by Margaret Hauser, editor of "Co-ed Magazine."

Miss Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Evans, is in the 12th grade at Chicod High School. Her appointment was made by Mrs. Betty S. Turner, home economics teacher at Chicod.

Selected for her qualities of leadership and her enthusiasm for home economics, Miss Evans will serve as junior advisor to the editors of "Co-ed," national magazine for teen-age girls, and will keep them informed of activities at Chicod High School. There are more than 2500 Co-ed Correspondents throughout the United States and Canada.

Card of Thanks
My family joins me in saying "Thank You" for each expression of cheer—of prayers, visits, gifts and cards—during my recent illness. May God richly bless each of you.

concierge as well as the duchess, the salesgirl as well as the movie star are dressed in his clothes, and he hopes to see the change-over within 10 years so that he can retire to other problems.

"My problem now is how to produce dresses so that I can sell them at all prices for all women. With modern manufacturing methods this should be possible."

Cardin feels complimented but not satisfied to be copied everywhere.

"The more my styles are copied, the fewer I sell of the originals," he confided dryly. "I've never sold so little since I first became known."

The 39-year-old couturier designs for both the wealthy and for "Madame Everybody."

"It is too bad that in Paris the door of the couture house has become a gilded iron curtain, closed to all women except the privileged few. We must break down that curtain as fast as possible, and it will be done when we begin producing original models of popular prices."

As for the men, Pierre Cardin is leading a one-man revolution to provide them with wardrobes that are as exciting and handsome as the women's.

His men's boutique at the Cardin headquarters on the Faubourg St. Honore is as large and important as the women's boutique, and the clothes are just as original.

"People forget that I started my career by cutting uniforms for soldiers during the war. I decided then that men deserve a better break in clothes and design."

Cardin also worked with the famed Christian Berard on costumes for "Beauty and the Beast," "Ruy Blas" and "The Princess of Cleves."

"Leaning the history of costume formed a background for dramatic beauty that is very necessary in today's clothes," he said.

Cardin worked with the famous Christian Dior during his New Look period after the last war, and is now the complete creative boss of his own house. He works alone, without lieutenants, believing that this calls forth greater energy, liberty of expression and a fearless capacity to lead the field.

"What Cardin makes in 1961 becomes the new mode of 1962," reports the Paris press.

"Sometimes I'm a little too 'en avance,'" appended the designer himself.

For three years women laughed or smiled at his hats because they were extreme. This year they are big sellers and are being worn to all smart events.

"The hats are just as extreme, but women have finally caught up to them."

Last year Cardin made the little suits buttoned on the side—the moving skirts, the bias cuts and the spiral effects.

"What fashion settles on for this year is what Cardin shocked us with last year," explained fashion specialist Juliette Boisrivaud. "He is always one year ahead."

Now Pierre Cardin is one jump ahead in wanting to supervise the reproductions of dresses to be sold to Mme. Everybody at popular prices.

"The magic is all in the cut, and it takes the original magician to reproduce the trick. The mere imitation usually falls flat," he said.

BETHEL—On Thursday, Nov. 23, 1961 at 7 p.m., Miss Ann Florine Spruill of Edenton and Washington, D. C. and Basil Bennie Howard Jr. of Princeton, West Virginia and Washington were united in marriage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brantley C. Chesnon, brother-in-law and sister of the bride. Only members of the immediate families of the couple were present.
Mrs. Howard is the former Ann Florine Spruill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Spruill of Edenton, and Mr. Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Bennie Howard Sr. of Princeton, W. Va.
The Rev. Thomas N. Cooper, pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church, officiated at the impressive double ring ceremony.
Miss Faye Smith of Bethel was vocalist and Miss Brenda Briley of Bethel was pianist. The traditional wedding march "Because" and "Through the Years" were played during the ceremony. Miss Smith sang "The Wedding Prayer" at the conclusion of the wedding vows. Prior to the ceremony, the candles were lighted by James Howard, brother of the bridegroom.
Vows were spoken before an improvised altar banked with palms interspersed with burning tapers. A prie dieu centered the altar.
Michael and Cathy, Mrs. R. P. Michaels, Marty Gail and Gregory, her children, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Martin on Thanksgiving day. This being Michael Martin's birthday he was honored with a birthday cake which was displayed on one end of the dinner table. Absent from the family circle was Mr. Michaels who is to be home soon from a two weeks' stay in Egypt.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Herman, Jim, Nancy and Bill of Farmington, Mich. spent the Thanksgiving holidays with Mrs. Herman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George James.
Mrs. W. C. Manning is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ruth Whitehurst, in Norfolk, Va.
Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dawson of Belhaven and Rev. and Mrs. Bert McKenzie of Raleigh were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Manning during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson are parents of Mrs. Manning.
Mr. and Mrs. Luther B. Long spent Thanksgiving in Zebulon with his mother, Mrs. Luther Long Sr.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutchins and daughter, Mary Charles, of Raleigh are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Keel. Mr. Hutchins will return to his home at the end of the week and Mrs. Hutchins and Mary Charles will remain here through next week.

The bride descended the stairway and was met by her father who gave her in marriage. She was attired in a street-length dress of white satin which was designed with a scoop neckline, long pointed sleeves ornamented with self-buttons. The fitted bodice was accented with an imported lace cummerbund and the bouffant skirt featured twin panels of lace inserts. Her headpiece was designed of white-beaded satin with an attached veil of silk illusion. She carried a Bible covered with white lace and topped with a purple-throated orchid.
Miss Mary Chesson of Bethel, niece of the bride, was maid of honor and the only attendant. She wore a sheath dress of green velvet and her headpiece was a pillbox of self-material with an attached veil. Her bouquet was composed of bronze pop poms tied with bronze satin ribbon.
Calvin Harmon of Washington, D. C. served the bridegroom as best man.
Mrs. Spruill, mother of the bride, was attired in a blue lace dress, matching accessories, and her corsage was of pink carnations.
Mrs. Howard, mother of the bridegroom, wore a blue silk brocade dress, matching accessories, and a pink carnation corsage.
After a wedding trip to unannounced points, Mr. and Mrs. Howard will reside in Washington, D. C. where both are employed by the Federal Government.
Immediately after the ceremony, the parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Chesson entertained the bridal couple, their wedding party, and their families and close friends at an informal reception.

Joint Meeting To Be Friday
The Garden Club will sponsor the program at its joint meeting with the Woman's Club Friday at 3 p.m. at the Club House.
Mrs. J. B. Spilman will speak on "Flowers and Trees, Symbols of the Christmas Season."
Background music will accompany the talk, and there will be spiritual readings in keeping with the religious significance of the season.
The Garden Club will display a special exhibit of Christmas arrangements.
Bamboo sticks should be wet before being used as skewers on the outdoor grill.

Mrs. Roberson Hostess
The Homemakers' Club met Tuesday evening, Mr. Harvey Roberson opened the meeting. The secretary, Mrs. Hattie Hardy called the roll and read the minutes. Names were drawn for the Christmas party and plans for a dinner in Williamston were discussed. As it is time to elect new officers, a committee was appointed to nominate a president, secretary, and treasurer.
During the social period the hostess entertained with games and contests. The winners were: Mrs. J. C. Taylor, Mrs. William T. Hurst and Mrs. Walter Swindell. Each received a nice prize. Mrs. Edward Ashley Roberson, a special guest won the guessing box.
The hostess assisted by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. A. Roberson, served chicken salad on lettuce, pickles, crackers, cookies, salted nuts and bottled drinks to the 17 members.
The club adjourned at 11 o'clock to meet with Mrs. Carter Taylor on Thursday, December 7th.

Friday, John Tyler, Jr., accompanied his brother-in-law, J. L. Roberson to the Tyler Club House in Northampton County to join 28 relatives for a family deer hunt Saturday.

Decision Was In Interests Of State

Gov. Sanford's decision not to call a special legislative session to consider another bond election on the heels of the one defeated by voters on Nov. 7 is in the best interest of the state.

It is not that the improvements which would have been provided by the bonds are needed any less now than they were when the matter was put to the people earlier this month. As Gov. Sanford put it in his address to citizens of the state Monday night: "To call another election now would be to say when a Democratic election is lost, call another if you can. This would be a bad precedent. It is haphazard. This is not conducive to the orderly process of Democratic government."

Citizens of the state spoke forcefully on the matter of the bonds at the polls. For the governor to have called a special legislative session on the matter would have been viewed as an attempt by the chief executive to coerce the people of the state into carrying out a program they already had rejected. It would not have been, in our opinion, in the best interest of the state in the long run.

Between now and the time the legislature gives further consideration to capital improvement needs of state institutions in 1963, citizens of the state will

Ambulances Are Raising Queries

By LYNN NISBET
AMBULANCE — The next session of the Legislature, whether an earlier extra or the regular 1963 meeting, almost certainly will be asked to deal with the problem of providing ambulance service to the public.

Until a few months ago ambulance service as an adjunct of the funeral homes was regarded as routine in most communities. The funeral homes discovered they were losing money, and the ambulance operation was taking time and energy needed for the regular business. So they began to retire from the field. Formal notice was given in many instances to local government authorities that on a certain date, usually just a few weeks away, the service would be discontinued. Some places arrangements had been made for other private operators to take over, but generally the problem was dumped on the local government.

And local government could not do very much about it. Ambulance service is not a government function, in the strict sense—although extension of the idea which gives government support to street cars, parks and playgrounds might justify ambulance service as provided from non-tax sources. It is generally understood that no tax money could be spent for the purpose without a special election at which the levy was authorized by majority vote of the people. And there might be question about that.

BORDERLINE — There are so many borderline situations it is difficult to pick one and label it typical. Ambulances operated by funeral homes or other private agencies have been given privileges of immunity from speed and other traffic regulations, not accorded any other private business.

Certainly there has been imposition on this privilege, but majority opinion seems to be that the total result has been good. The dividing line between profit motive and public service has been hard to fix. And that borderline difficulty carries over into the whole field of private-public hospital operations. There can be no reasonable question of the legal right of a private hospital or a private ambulance operator to select the persons they want to serve. There is question whether a government owned hospital or a government operated ambulance service can choose clients. Majority opinion of courts and legal authorities tends to conclusion that government must serve all applicants alike, without discrimination because of race, creed, or financial responsibility.

And that's where the borderline influence becomes almost controlling. If a county or a city operates a hospital, where patients are accepted and cared for from the front door entrance to the back door exit upon discharge after cure, why should not that same hospital assume responsibility for getting the patient to and from the hospital in an ambulance?

Suppose some patient wants an ambulance to go to a non-tax hospital. Can the tax hospital provide that service, even at a compensating fee, without violating the law? Does that ambulance trip constitute a public service or is it infringement of government on private enterprise? Without too much regard to the factual matter of profit and loss, public and private service, can any ambulance operator refuse to pick up the victim of a wreck or a fire in desperate need of hospitalization, until he has been assured he will be paid for the trip? And if he isn't paid for it should he still be required to render the service?

These are just a few of the questions for which answers are being sought. DEALS — It is inevitable in a situation like this that "deals" would be negotiated whereby a business man would agree to operate an ambulance service at a loss in return for considerations in other areas where he might reasonably expect a profit.

In one community, for example, a garage owner agreed to take over the ambulance service from the funeral directors on condition that his garage would be given priority in calls for wrecker service in case of automobile accidents which did not involve personal injury requiring ambulance service.

It isn't quite clear on the record to date just who participated in the agreement, but the garage man has given notice that he is discontinuing ambulance service because his garage is being passed in most of the wrecker-service calls out of which he might have a chance to make a profit.

PROBLEM Very few people have really thought about the ambulance problem. The impression has been that if an ambulance call would get one. Not many folks thought about the background of capital investment and operating costs necessary to provide the service. This casual thinking has got to be changed. The provision of ambulance service is becoming a serious governmental and social service problem. So far as legal responsibility is concerned it is still more social welfare than government. How long that status can survive is doubtful.

The people having been accustomed to ambulance service at the telephone dial will not readily surrender that privilege because of legal technicalities. That's why some new law will be written on the subject at the very first opportunity.

have ample opportunity to evaluate these needs—and new needs which develop—very carefully. They will also have an opportunity to evaluate more carefully the fiscal condition of the state government and the impact the recently-adopted revenue measure have had upon the state's resources. They will then be in a better position to judge North Carolina's ability to meet the needs of its agencies and institutions so far as capital improvements are concerned.

The months ahead will likewise provide institutions of the state time to re-evaluate other methods of financing their needs for capital improvements, and perhaps some means can be found to fill some of the more pressing needs which were to be taken care of out of the bond issues. Particularly where educational institutions are concerned, however, officials should be careful not to undertake methods of financing needs which will push the cost of college education beyond the reach of many people of the state.

Rejection of the bond issue was a set-back for the advancement of the state in meeting the needs of its people in many areas of operation. It was not, however, a fatal blow to the advancement of the state and the progress of its institutions. The months ahead will bring from officials alternate proposals for meeting some of the most urgent of these needs, and these proposals should be given careful and serious consideration by the people of the state.

The job of meeting these needs rests not solely with the officials, but with the citizens of the state as well.

Public Hearing Will At Least Delay Move

By securing a hearing on the proposed bombing range in Hyde County, Congressman Herbert C. Bonner has succeeded in delaying at least until January any final decision by the Air Force on the controversial matter in Eastern North Carolina.

With the widespread opposition which has developed to the proposed bombing range, it is only logical that Air Force Secretary Zuckert afford citizens of this and other areas of the state an opportunity to present first-hand their reasons for opposing converting some 30,000 acres in Hyde County into a bombing range.

In spite of vigorous opposition which has been expressed months ago on the matter by members of the Tar Heel delegation in Congress, state officials, wildlife officials, and the legislature, the Air Force did not shelve its plans for the proposed bombing range. It is not unlikely that the public hearing on the matter, where officials and individuals will have the opportunity to personally express their views on the matter, will afford military officials a more realistic view of how the proposal is regarded in this area.

The public hearing, we feel, is important in the final decision which will have to be made with regard to this matter. It is gratifying to know that such a hearing has been arranged by Congressman Bonner.

Starting Policy Of Intervention?

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration's use of naval units off the Dominican Republic's coast helped discourage the Trujillo family from re-establishing a dictatorship. But it raised some unanswered questions.

It was a form of intervention in the internal affairs of another country, even though the purpose could be interpreted as good. Or is there a new policy to intervene in Latin America when this country chooses? Those questions, of concern to Latin Americans, ride side by side with one of concern to this country: Will the United States sit idly by if communism attempts to take over anywhere in Latin America?

Under the Monroe Doctrine of 123 years ago, the United States told Europe not to interfere in the Western Hemisphere. In time, this country did a lot of intervening and interfering in Latin America. The result: criticism and ill will.

President Franklin Roosevelt's administration sought to reverse this with its "Good Neighbor" policy. This country, with 20 other American republics, set up the Organization of American States which, in its 1948 charter, agreed: no state had the right to intervene in another's affairs.

Non-intervention, however, was a bit of a myth. When this country gave help economic or military, to its Latin neighbors, it meant some interference, direct or indirect. For instance, when it helped a dictator to stay in power.

But the dictatorship of Fidel Castro in Cuba became a pain when he defied the United States and tried to encourage revolutions in Latin America. The OAS agreement went out the window. The United States intervened. It did so in a way that made this country look ludicrous. It helped a band of anti-Castro rebels invade Cuba but didn't back them up with American military force. Castro crushed them. This country got all the blame and no benefit.

Since American forces did not take part, this country could argue it was not a direct intervention. It certainly was an indirect one. That occurred in April.

On May 30, Gen. Rafael Trujillo Molina, whose family had kept the Dominican Republic under his dictatorship 30 years, was assassinated. Left in charge was his handpicked president, Joaquin Balaguer, who apparently is trying to set up a democratic society but who is regarded by some Dominicans as a Trujillo stooge.

In mid-November rumors spread that Trujillo's brother, Hector and Josef, were going to set up a dictatorship again. On Nov. 28 Secretary of State Dean Rusk made an extraordinary statement.

He said the United States would not sit idly by and watch the Trujillo family reassert dictatorial control. The next day, to back up Balaguer, an American naval force appeared off the Dominican coast but outside its territorial waters.

Balaguer warned the Dominicans that if they allowed the Trujillo family to return, it could lead "in the course of the next few hours to foreign military intervention." Then he said the Trujillos were leaving the country. The crisis ended, if only temporarily.

The New York Times quoted Balaguer as saying afterward he had not asked for the American naval aid but was glad it came. Adlai E. Stevenson, American ambassador to the United Nations, said the force was used with full knowledge of Balaguer's government.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
ANYTIME

Can we expect new revelation to take place with the passing of time? Undoubtedly so. Certain chapters in God's revelation have been closed. One closed when Moses received the Ten Commandments from God and went up on a high mountain to die. Another closed when Christ died on the cross and rose again. Another closed when the Holy Spirit was given on the Day of Pentecost.

Today we are facing a new age—the most spectacular age humanity had confronted in its history. We should not be surprised if a revelation of overwhelming significance took place at any time. A greater than Moses might appear. An outpouring of the Holy Spirit might come upon us to make us equal to the requirements of these new days. Heaven and earth might pass away, and that new heaven and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness might supplant our present order of life. We are but a speck in the universe. "Eye hath not seen, or ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

God evidently expects us to live in a mood of expectancy. There has been tragedy in the past, but much glory also. We are in days of unprecedented tumult. Anything may happen. If it happens solely by the hand of man, it will be bad. If it happens as the result of God's will, it will be good. A new revelation? A further disclosure? Yes, anytime, and unprecedented.

Talk About Brinksmanship

By ALVIN TAYLOR

Bigger Things In Future

Hiring of Clarence Stasavich, veteran Lenoir Rhyne football coach, by East Carolina College only serves to emphasize what has been clearly evident — that ECC fully expects to move up in the athletic world.

It is merely one of several moves made recently which have shown that the fast growing institution is headed for bigger things.

East Carolina has applied for membership in the Southern Conference. It was not accepted, but the Conference set up certain rules for admission of a college. One of these was two year membership in the National Collegiate Athletic Association. So the school promptly joined the association.

Then there has been a steady build-up of the minor sports at ECC, as evidenced by the baseball team winning the NAIA national championship last summer.

Finally, there is the astounding drive for funds to construct a new 16,000 seat stadium on property south of 14th St. A committee raised what was thought to be sufficient funds in one week's time. When the statewide bond issue was defeated they went back to work to raise the $50,000 the bonds were to provide for athletic facilities.

It all adds up to create an unmistakable clear picture. East Carolina College—now classified as a big school with 5,200 enrollment—is to become a big athletic power. The picture is so clear that a Greensboro Daily News sports writer has said perhaps even the Southern Conference may not be able to hold ECC.

All this brings great joy to the sports fan of Eastern North Carolina. The thought of having major football and basketball teams playing here—within reasonable driving distance of most eastern towns—is pleasant, indeed.

Other Editors Saying... Room At The Top

(The Wall Street Journal)

Since it's often hard to tell the branch manager and the skilled worker apart these days, what with both of them wearing the same clothes, driving the same model car and shopping at the same supermarket, union publicists are hard-pressed to whip up class-war psychology. But the Bulletin of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department is giving it what could be called "the college try."

The Bulletin announces that "the Horatio Alger myth is more dead today than ever," citing a survey of 200 leading companies which shows that only one in 20 of those in the executive suites started as a clerk or production worker. An "elite" of college and professionally educated management is growing, says the Bulletin, drawn mainly from "those whose family resources were such that they could obtain advanced education." Opportunity for "the average white collar and manual worker," the union publication bleakly concludes, lies in "mutual progress through unions of their own choosing" — presumably, solidarity against the "college class."

But somehow we doubt that a man can no longer go from modest beginnings to a place at the top. Indeed, this newspaper not long ago presented a gallery of men who have made a million dollars or more since World War II, including the son of an oil field laborer, the son of a Greek immigrant barber and an electronics tycoon who has neither a high school diploma nor a college degree. There are plenty of other success stories.

To be sure, education plays an important part in shaping a man's fortunes, but when has this not been true in America? Even on the old frontier, the man who could read, write and cipher had a clear advantage, which is why a Lanky Illinois farmboy taught himself by fire light even though illiterate men could earn a good living.

And just who does the IUD think is now pursuing these rewards? The great majority of the college-trained "elite" are young men and women whose family resources are modest, and over-taxed, but who nevertheless manage to obtain the advanced education which the union propagandist makes out to be a class privilege.

Perhaps what the unions secretly deplore is precisely this—the rise of a huge middle-class that has made union slogging sound tired and reactionary. For all the obstacles put in their path, most Americans are not impressed by the claim that the way up is closed. To many of them are going that way.

By ELMER ROESSNER

Communism has caused one of the greatest advances in capitalism in 300 years. It has brought about broad, systematic lowering of trade barriers in the capitalist world. The process seems likely to continue.

For several centuries the idea of a United States of Europe has been a dream. Nationalist rivalries have always prevented its fulfillment. It is not now in prospect. But the next thing to it—broad tariff federations—are flourishing and growing.

Nikita Khrushchev and his predecessors did it. The Red Russian Empire is an economic as well as an ideological federation. The 15 Soviet Republics, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Mongolia and Cuba, and, to a lesser extent, China, North Korea, Tibet and North Vietnam constitute a tariff union.

There are few trade walls between these countries, although individuals are subject to customs regulations. Goods can move freely from one end of that vast empire to the other. The skills and produce of one area can supplement those of another.

This free trade has been an important factor in the economic growth of the Red Empire.

To offset this advantage, at least partially, the capitalist nations have had little choice but to organize customs unions. This began in World War II when Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands formed the Benelux union, which assisted in speeding their recovery. In 1952, they joined France, Italy and West Germany in a coal and steel market union. In 1957 this grew into the European Economic Community, generally known as the European Common Market, with a plan for gradual reduction of tariffs between members.

To offset this competition, Britain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Austria and Portugal formed the European Free Trade Association in 1960, with a similar program for progressive reduction of tariffs.

ENGLAND'S QUANDARY Now Britain is planning to join the European Common Market. There's a bit of dif-feet.

But what of the supporter of the school who don't particularly like the idea of such emphasis on intercollegiate athletics. Such voices are to be heard at any college where big time athletics hold sway. They point out that head coaches make far more than professors, more than department or school heads and even more than college presidents, in some cases. They also maintain that collegiate sports can become an uncontrollable monster, and occasionally this proves correct, as with the recent basketball scandals.

But let's listen to Dr. V.R. Cromer, Lenoir Rhyne's president, pay tribute to his departing coach, Stasavich. "We are profoundly grateful for the contribution he has made to the total program of Lenoir Rhyne College, as professor and as representative of the institution in public circles.

"His record speaks for itself. He has in a large measure been responsible for the national recognition Lenoir Rhyne has received in recent years."

Thus intercollegiate athletic competition justifies itself. Schools with good athletic programs are known across the land. Those without such programs often are not. Such competition can create loyalty among students and alumni that would not come in any other way.

Intercollegiate athletics at East Carolina College should never become the tail that wags the dog. But as the college grows in student enrollment and in academic standing the athletic program should, indeed, be allowed to reach its full potential.

Opinions In Brief

"Rightly or wrongly, there is a feeling abroad in the State that no one is too much interested in really keeping down public expenditures. The legislature, for example, has helped foster such an impression by things it has done. It has authorized the spending of more than $6,000,000 on a Taj Mahal type state house for its own use, complete with a private dining room for the legislators and a private office for each legislator. And, the legislators voted to increase their own expense allowances, and even made those increases retroactive."—The Raleigh Times.

Two questions arise immediately. 1. Do we have time to establish a federal union of free nations of the world? We have been at that job in the United Nations since 1945 and are very close to the end of our effort there. In fact, every constructive task along these lines has to be done outside of the United Nations which is falling into the control of the so-called neutrals, who are not really neutrals but opportunists who shift their allegiance to their own advantage." Choice Of Three Tactics

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Reverend George E. Bender, a Methodist minister of Lorain, Ohio, has written an interesting and thoughtful letter to the Lorain "Journal" dealing with the subject of war and peace. In the course of this letter, Mr. Bender, who is not a pacifist and who would be willing to fight for his country says:

"None of us wants to be Red and none of us wants to be dead. What, then, is the best alternative? The best alternative is to put democracy to work where it is most needed. It is basic to our way of life that we believe in law and order, that we believe in representative government, in freedom of expression, in justice with due process of law and trial by jury. We also believe in free competition and in a police force to enforce the law."

These unfortunately have nothing to do with an alternative to war. The problem set before us is that Soviet Russia is engaged in building a world empire to conquer all nations including the United States. To the end that Marxism should displace the social system which is expressed by Judaism, Christianity and all other human expressions in acknowledgement of God and of the Natural Law. Also Marxism would alter our economic and political system so that those who control the economy that controls the state would control the life of every man.

What is the alternative to that?

Surely law and justice could be an alternative to Marxism if Soviet Russia did not choose to make war, cold or hot, upon us with the spoken objective of destroying our way of life. We face three alternatives:

1. We can prolong our discussion while the Russians conquer area after area, weakening us so that we are unable to withstand Russian power;

2. We can accept the Russian challenge and agree to become part of the Soviet Universal State;

3. We can fight for our lives and our civilization. Thus far it has been the American policy to try the first method—to talk things out, notwithstanding the undisputed fact of Russian gains. Soviet activities in Cuba, Panama, Brazil, British Guiana and other places bring them very close to us and lead to the conclusion that a shooting war can break out at any moment. Our President, Eisenhower and Kennedy, have sought to stave off a fighting war, but the frightful day comes closer because of the Russian conclusion that our wish for peace is a sign of weakness, incompetence and degeneracy.

But we are faced with another danger, namely, that the cost of preparation for war, to meet the threat of Soviet terrorism, is so frightfully great that it is destroying our economic system. How long can we afford to carry a budget that runs about $100,000,000,000 a year? Where is the money to come from? With all of the world organizing into economic blocs, which are aimed at lessening our capacity for distribution, how can we maintain a currency which will be strong and that will protect the earning power of our people?

Reverend Bender says: "These principles are good for us, and as free people we believe they are good for everyone. Let's begin, then, to put our beliefs into action among ourselves. A good place to start would be to lend all our efforts to work toward a federal union of the free nations of the world. Just as the 13 colonies gained strength against their common enemy by uniting, so now the free nations of the world can find added strength against Communism."

Two questions arise immediately. 1. Do we have time to establish a federal union of free nations of the world? We have been at that job in the United Nations since 1945 and are very close to the end of our effort there. U.S. Food Processors See Delicate Problem In Survival Kit Packages

By RIP WATSON
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Mounting public interest in fallout shelters and nuclear survival poses a delicate problem for the nation's food processors and packagers.

Should they take advantage of this interest by promotional campaigns extolling the merits of their products as foods for survival in the event of a nuclear war?

Or would this do them more harm than good in an era of uncertainty over whether Americans ever will be forced to live—and eat—underground?

As businessmen, they are interested, of course, in selling more canned, bottled, frozen, packaged and other processed food. But, almost to a man, they say the do not want to be put in the position of being accused of frightening people into filling their cellars with canned goods.

A survey of industry leaders showed these trends:

1. No one has yet come up with a truly new food designed solely for the shelter use, except for a small handful of composition-type foods providing all the necessary vitamins, calories, minerals, proteins, etc., in one neat package. Several firms have their research and lab people working on such products, but are reluctant to discuss them for competitive reasons.

2. They feel that the long shelf life and ease of preparation of existing canned meats, poultry, fish, vegetables, fruits, spaghetti, soups, juices and the like make them natural for shelter stocking.

3. Although the reasons why remain unclear, can production has risen this year. A Can Manufacturers Institute spokesman reported output through September was 5 per cent ahead of a year earlier, which compared with a normal increase in production, due to population growth, of 3 1/2 per cent. He also reported a big pickup in demand for canned water.

This trade spokesman and a representative of the National Canners Association reported what they called "an unverified feeling" in industry circles that many consumers are picking up a few more cans here and there and stowing them away for a day when fallout may rain down.

John A. McGlinn, vice president-marketing of Campbell Soup Co., commented that many of a "truly substantial increase" in inquiries come from people who want to fill their shelters with long-familiar foods.

"Our speculation is that in the environment of a fallout shelter, the individual apparently would prefer the security of foods which he knows and likes," he said.

Campbell, like other companies, could give no estimate of how much of his sales could be traced to anxiety over the possibility of a nuclear war. Swift & Co., for example, reported a pickup in canned goods sales recently, but added: "We do not know if it is related to fallout or if it is just the normal seasonal increase."

Again and again, survey replies stressed that the food firms do no advertising being their products in with shelter life and plan no such campaigns.

A Hormel Co. spokesman noted, however, that some retailers have been plugging things like beef stew as a good shelter item.

An Armour & Co. spokesman gave this reason for not advertising its products for shelter use: "We have always tried to break down the idea that canned goods are an emergency product."

Prominent among the one-package composition foods is a General Mills Inc. product called Multi-Purpose Food, which has been sold to companies preparing shelter kits and is in the shelves of many large firms and all of the Federal Reserve banks in the country.

A bland compound with a slightly nutty flavor, MPP is 90 per cent toasted soybean and can be eaten straight or mixed with water, milk, fruit juices, apple sauce, soup, jams or what have you. Two ounces costing about three cents would be equal in nutritional value to 1/4 pound of beef, a dish of peas, a small potato and a glass of milk, the company says. A 4 1/2-pound tin will last one person for two weeks.

The product was the World War branch of a Los Angeles restaurant operator, Clifford Clinton, who was trying to get ample food for his paying customers and those seeking handouts. Now General Mills is associated with Meals for Millions, a nonprofit organization in Los Angeles, in producing and retailing MPP.

A similar product is National Biscuits Co.'s survival ration crackers, which were developed at the request of the New York State Civil Defense Commission and offered to large firms, institutions and civil defense agencies with a minimum order of five tons. Recently, however, the firm said it would accept mail orders for a minimum of six 5 1/2-pound tins, enough to sustain two adults for two weeks if they have two quarts of water each day.

Alexander N. McFarlane, a senior vice president of sales for Corn Products Co., said his firm sees the market for "survival foods" as more potential than actual.

Wilson & Co. said that, in reply to numerous customer and dealer requests for a shelter package, it is putting one together from established company products and hopes to market it soon.

Also working on a survival kit is Stokely-Van Camp Inc., while a subsidiary, Kumer-Empson of Brighton, Colo., has been turning out canned water.

Hershey Chocolate Corp. is studying the possibility of packaging certain products such as powdered chocolate for mixing with water and chocolate bars in materials that would provide long life on shelter shelves.

Great Bear Spring Co., which has been selling five-gallon jars of water for industrial and office use in New York for 73 years, last July brought out a five-gallon portable steel container with a seamless plastic liner and a 15-year guarantee of purity.

Students Appear In Culture Week

East Carolina College students will participate in Culture Week in Raleigh when "Christmas in Carolina" by Edmund Harding of Washington, N. C., is presented November 30 before the Society for the Preservation of Antiquities. The performance will take place at 8 p.m. at the Sir Walter Hotel.

"Christmas in Carolina" in six scenes pictures through music and pantomime the Yule season in Bath, 1734; Albemarle, 1790; Old Salem, 1795; the Outer Banks, 1800; and the Confederacy. Mr. Harding, president of the society, in the role of Father Time, will act as narrator. The East Carolina Men's Glee Club will provide music, and student members of the East Carolina College Playhouse will appear in the pantomimes.

Dr. J. A. Withey, director of the Playhouse, is director of the production. Charles Stevens of the college music faculty is arranger and director of music. Costumes were designed by Lois Garren of Greenville, and lighting effects will be executed by Bob Imamura of Los Angeles, California.

Pitt County students appearing in the six scenes are: Edward Smith, Fountain; Lois Garren, Greenville; Charlotte Donat, Farmville; Sue Taylor, Greenville.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The silver certificate, a familiar item of currency since 1878, will disappear from circulation if Congress approves President Kennedy's new silver policy.

All $1 and $2 bills are silver certificates, as are some $5 and $10 bills. All of these would be discarded during the next 25 or 30 years, to be replaced by Federal Reserve notes which are backed by gold.

While Congress would have to approve this part of the Kennedy plan, the President ordered Tuesday an immediate end to Treasury sales of silver at artificially low prices.

This will lead at once to an increase in the market price of silver which perhaps will rise from the old pegged rate of 91.5 cents an ounce to $1 or more. As a side result, manufacturers are likely to increase prices on jewelry, silverware, photographic film and other items with a high silver content.

The Kennedy program would represent the most important national change in silver in many decades. In effect, the President wants to end silver's status as an important monetary metal and make it a freely traded commodity, like copper or soybeans.

The program drafted at the Treasury, would end the recurrent and often bitter political battles over silver. The metal would have no more political appeal, under the new plan, than any other mining product.

Kennedy's decision stemmed from a steady decline in the Treasury's supply of "free silver" not needed for currency backing. This supply dropped from 123.5 million ounces on Jan. 1 to 22 million ounces as of Monday night.

The stockpile of free silver has declined because of purchases by silver users at the Treasury's sales price of 91.5 cents an ounce and because of silver withdrawn for use in coins.

Kennedy directed the Treasury to stop using the stockpile as a source of supply for coinmaking. He said that henceforth silver needed by the mints should be withdrawn from monetary reserves, with an equivalent amount of silver certificates pulled out of circulation at the same time.

The Treasury will begin at once to withdraw $5 and $10 silver certificates in order to tap reserves needed for coinage. Before it can withdraw $1 and $2 certificates, Congress will have to authorize Federal Reserve notes in these denominations. Kennedy said he will ask Congress to do this early next session.

The President also announced he will ask for repeal of silver purchase laws enacted in 1934, 1939 and 1946.

These laws put a floor under the market price of silver by requiring the Treasury to buy any new U.S.-mined silver at 90.5 cents an ounce. The stockpile of free silver was built up during times when this purchase price was artificially high.

The 1946 law also gives the Treasury the power to put a ceiling on the price of silver by setting sales of free silver to users. The department fixed the sales price at 91.5 cents.

In recent years, the Treasury has bought virtually no silver because mine operators could get a better price elsewhere. The Treasury has sold silver steadily, however, because the 91.5 cent ceiling was abnormally low in view of market conditions.

Kennedy said silver should eventually be demonetized, except for use in coinage, and be traded in commodity markets. Trading would be possible only if Congress repealed a 50 per cent tax on trading profits in silver, as Kennedy will request.

The silver dollar, of which there are 134.6 million, will not be affected by the program. The silver certificates which would be withdrawn from circulation are backed by 1.7 billion ounces of silver—enough to take care of coinage needs for the next 25 to 30 years.

A number of Western senators had urged Kennedy to end Treasury silver sales and allow a higher market price.

On the basis of 1958 figures, Idaho was the largest silver-producing state with 17.7 million ounces. Utah ranked next with 6.9 million followed by Montana with 5 million and Arizona with 3.4 million.

Closet Held Dog And 58 Students

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Remember the college craze of crowding into a telephone booth?

Students at Allegheny College have come up with a new fad—jamming into a broom closet.

Some 58 of them jammed into a closet at Baldwin Hall the other day and added a St. Bernard dog for good measure.

Want to break that record? Just find a closet nine feet long, six feet wide and eight feet high, 58 people—and two St. Bernards.

Castro complained to the United Nations that this use of American force was intended to set a precedent for the United States later to intervene in Cuba or any Latin American country which displeased it.

What isn't clear is whether it is now American policy to intervene in any country threatened by dictatorship of left or right as Castro suggested, or by any other internal situation which this country disapproves.

The Soviets and Red Chinese have intervened where it suited them among their neighbors. The American action off the Dominican coast now gives them a new and handy excuse for doing more of the same.

BRODY'S

THE GREEN STONE

A suspense-thriller by
SUZANNE BLANC

CHAPTER 28

As Inspector Menendes and Sergeant Roberto drove past the gas station, the inspector asked, "This where you arrested the guide?"

"Yes—right there," the sergeant replied. "He was talking to a tourist in a white car and I picked him up as soon as she left. She gave him a tip—fifty pesos—and he was with her only a minute. I saw it myself."

"How did he act when you picked him up, anything in his behavior that was off-key—even a small thing?"

"No," he acted much as anyone would, objected but came along willingly enough." He hesitated, groping for an impression. "He was nervous."

Nervousness alone meant nothing. The inspector knew that it was rare to arrest a man armed with the calm of complete innocence, for who does not carry within himself the burden of buried guilt?

"Was he more nervous than they usually are?" he asked, recognizing, as soon as the words were spoken, the futility of asking.

The sergeant shrugged. "Who can tell? He was sweating in that heavy coat. He talked naturally enough. Anyway," he concluded logically, "he had nothing to be nervous about. He didn't have the jewel. He hadn't heard about the murder until you told him yourself, here was nothing on him except those cheap stones that are sold anywhere. I emptied every bag, unfolded every piece of tissue paper. You know there was no emerald there."

It was the stones, the inspector realized, that made him think of the guide at all. The emerald would be about the same size, flatter, of course, with sharper planes, but small enough so that, once hidden, it would be almost impossible to find. "I'll never find it," he thought pessimistically. "Theresa won't get her stove. . . And I won't get my murderer."

They circled the busy Plaza, turned left through the crowded alleys and were, at last, at the police station.

"Tell me, Inspector," the sergeant asked as he opened the car door. "Whatever made you think of Perez?"

"I don't know," the inspector answered vaguely. "The loose stones, the unmounted jewel. The fact that he was at the village the morning after the Randalls were murdered and the ring was . . . Just grasping at straws, I guess. Come on, let's see if Lieutenant Jimenez has checked in yet. Perhaps he's had better luck than we had."

But the lieutenant hadn't even left. He was still at the police desk waiting for the inspector's return, obviously safe-guarding his interest in the reward. "Well," he asked eagerly, "did you find it?"

"If you mean the emerald—no, we didn't," the inspector said flatly. "The old Indian never had the jewel, only the ring." And, before the lieutenant could ask anything else, he said sharply, "I thought you were supposed to cover the shops."

"I'm just about to leave. My schedule's on your desk—if you need me you can catch me anywhere on the route. My first stop will be Aguinaldo's."

Aguinaldo's was located not far from the cathedral on a small, completely naked, cobblestoned square.

In the plateglass window was a jumble of guitars, watches, brooches, beads of every size and color, clocks, carnets, all crowded together so that not an inch of display space was wasted.

Inside the shop, except for the workbench set aside for the silversmith, the room was aisled by cases crammed with serapes and shawls, tablecloths, silver tea services, tray after velvet tray of rings, etched cigarette boxes of all shapes and sizes.

An occasional stranger drifted in, as Rose and Emily had, to buy something or to have a piece of jewelry made, but mostly the shop was frequented by the people in the neighborhood.

Here Luis had bought Carmelita's comb, and once he had sold Señor Aguinaldo a camera that a tourist had left behind in the rented car. It was a fine camera, made in Germany, with a special telescopic lens, and although Señor Aguinaldo had not paid what it was worth, he had given Luis a fine price for it and he had asked no questions.

It was only natural that this morning Luis would think of Aguinaldo's. He had slept long beyond his usual hour and had been awakened at last by the ringing of the church bells, his mouth parched, his eyes sensitive to light, his head wincing with pain. "Never again," he told himself, recalling with distaste the rawness of tequila, the abandon of his voice singing with Pepe, the flower he had foolishly bought for Rosa. She had caressed him and called him "Querido," but at the end, when the cantina closed, she had left with that gross, overfed truck driver Gonzales.

Pressing, importuning thoughts would not let Luis slide back into the comfort of sleep. He could hear his own voice bragging about his wealth, ordering drinks, until what he said and what he drank ran together in a dark river of drunkenness.

With sudden foreboding he wondered whether he had spent the last of his pesos and jumped out of bed to search his clothes, finding in one pocket an empty, crumpled cigarette package, in another five centavos.

For a second his poverty appalled him, then he found his knife, remembered the emerald, the reason for his celebration, and the ominous, sleep-ridden mists cleared. The jewel was as good as in his pocket right now and the squandered pesos were of little importance when Luis remembered that after today he would be rich.

Rich or not, he realized belatedly, today he would have to eat, tomorrow, too, and perhaps for many days after that until the jewel could be safely sold. He wondered about returning to the gas station and knew, as certainly as he had known yesterday, that he would not be permitted to wait there for the tourists.

It was possible to pick up an occasional tour at the hotel, but after paying a mordida to the desk clerk, the remaining pesos would offer, at best, a marginal existence. No, in order to live he would have to sell one of his cherished possessions, his coat, perhaps, or his watch.

He took the handsome coat from his closet, stroked its fleecy softness, looked again with admiration at the Bond Street label sewed into the lining and decided that, after all, he could not bear to part with it. The coat could not be replaced. If anything were sold, it would have to be the watch.

It was an expensive watch, very slim, very elegant, with a narrow gold band that matched the case. The image of the elderly, lonely woman who had given it to him had become so blurred by Luis' description of her as a

Wilder Built A Comedy Around The Cold War

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Billy Wilder has accomplished what everyone thought impossible: He has made a comedy about the cold war.

Many have tried. But it took the screen's No. 1 wit to pull it off. Wilder's "One, Two, Three" is a worthy successor to his previous satires, "Some Like It Hot" and "The Apartment."

Wilder (with his gifted collaborator, I. A. L. Diamond, chose an impossible task. He placed his comedy in the world's grimmest city, Berlin. He set the pace to be that of a fox hunt—full cry from the very beginning.

beautiful blonde turista that now he almost believed he would be selling a romantic keepsake. However, he thought practically, the watch, unlike the coat, could be duplicated and, if something had to be sold, it would have to be the watch.

He had been told that the jewelers along the Calle Madero offered the highest prices for used jewelry, but there he might be expected to produce a bill of sale. He would have to shop, as usual, at Aguinaldo's; besides, soon he would want to sell the emerald and where else in San Luis could he dispose of an expensive item like that?

Luis is faced by the full, dangerous reality of his situation and the necessity of desperate action as the story continues here tomorrow.

Egypt Building Tourist Island

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—The Egyptian government is planning a new tourist island near Cairo combining the sights of ancient Egypt with the conveniences demanded by the 20th century tourist.

A 250-acre island in the Nile will suddenly vault into international fame.

Chariots like those used in the days of the Pharaoh Rameses, will tour the island with excited guests. Whip-swinging chariot drivers with bare shoulders will wear the multicolored costumes ancient Egyptians sported 4,000 years ago.

Ancient Egyptian sun boats like those the pharaohs used, manned by muscular dark-skinned Egyptian boatmen in ceremonial gowns, will ferry tourists to the island.

Geziret el Dahab (Island of Gold) will be one of Egypt's great tourist attractions. Countries over the world are being invited to set up pavilions where national dishes will be served and attractions displayed.

A 200-room modern hotel will go up. A large swimming pool will be dug and filled with filtered warm Nile water. Water skiing will be started round the island. A race track is included in the plan.

A high glass tower, to be named the "Tower of the People" will rise in the center of the island. Bridges from the eastern and western banks of the Nile are to be constructed and cable cars from both banks also will be used to carry visitors to the island.

The project is estimated to cost about $12 million and is expected to be completed within four years.

Restitution Of $2 Is Proffered

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP)—An 11-year-old grade school youth approached the football ticket booth at Meadville High School and handed the ticket seller $2.50.

"That's too much money," the ticket seller said. "You only have to pay 50 cents."

"No," the youth replied. "The 50 cents is for tonight's game. The $2 is for the other times I crawled under the fence."

NOBEL WINNER IN EXILE—Albert Lutuli, former Zulu chief awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, smells a flower in the garden of his home in Groutville, South Africa. Proposals To Stress West Berlin Security

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Western powers are considering making proposals to the Soviet Union early next year for a settlement of the Berlin crisis. They will be designed to strengthen the security of West Berlin against Communist pressures and to assure free access to the city from West Germany.

The proposals may embrace a plan for creation of an internationally controlled highway corridor between West Berlin and West Germany as suggested by President Kennedy in an interview published Tuesday in the Soviet Union.

The prospective Western plan for Berlin coupled with new exploratory talks with the Soviet government, is expected by authorities here to lead an East-West foreign ministers conference in a few months.

But U.S. officials say the negotiations thus foreseen will be prolonged and extremely difficult and no compromise solution of the Berlin dispute is in sight.

The Kennedy interview with Alexei Adzhubei, editor of the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia and son-in-law of Premier Khrushchev, dramatically illustrated the complete conflict of aims on Berlin issues with which the Soviet Union and the West are approaching negotiations.

The conflict of aims developed in what was really an exchange of views between Adzhubei and Kennedy. Adzhubei is believed here to have chosen this technique so that when the full record of the interview was published in Izvestia its readers were presented with the Soviet as well as the Western viewpoint.

Kennedy said that the desire of the Western powers is to maintain "a very limited number" of U.S. British and French troops in West Berlin and "to have, for example, an international administration on the Autobahn (German superhighway) so that goods and people can move freely in and out."

With those purposes secured, Kennedy said, "we can have peace in this area for years." At another point he said that there has been peace in Europe for 15 years and "the problem now is to see if we can reach a negotiation which can settle this matter for another 15 years."

Adzhubei said that the Soviet aim is to sign a German peace treaty with West Germany and Communist East Germany as separate governments—and then to guarantee "freedom for West Berlin by every means—by troops of the four powers, by United Nations troops."

As to the problem of access Adzhubei said it was a simple matter because all that is necessary for the transport of people and goods across East German territory is to "ask permission of the GDR (East German government)."

Kennedy told the Izvestia editor—and through him the Soviet people—that he understood the Soviet Union would give the East German authorities "the power to interfere" with Western traffic to East Berlin. He said the West could not rely upon assurances that the East Germans would not interfere with the traffic flow.

Kennedy made the Berlin problem the central concern of most of his discussion with Adzhubei, although he said the great long range "threat to peace" is the Kremlin's effort to push the Communist system outward, taking over one country after another.

U.S. officials predicted that sometime following a meeting of Western foreign ministers in Paris in mid-December, the Western powers will present to the Soviet Union their proposals for a Berlin settlement. These proposals are expected to be aimed in the first instance at strengthening the Western position in relation to Berlin and the declared long-range purposes of reuniting East and West Germany. In other words, they will be the starting point for bargaining.

They will thus counter Khrushchev's proposals for an East German peace treaty, converting

West Berlin into a "free city," and turning the access routes over to East German control.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said in a speech in New York Tuesday night that it is important to maintain "continuous communications" between the Western powers and the Communists because "we cannot afford to permit great powers to misjudge each other's intentions until it becomes too late to draw back."

But Rusk declared that negotiations between countries "with radical and irreconcilable differences" are full of "traps and pitfalls" and it is necessary to see clearly both the pitfalls and "our vital interests."

COLD STORAGE—This Air Force C47 transport plane, held aloft by a 30-foot high mound of ice, marks the site of former Ice Station Bravo in Alaska. The Air Force said the plane, stripped with only the shell remaining, has been lodged on the ice since it made a force landing five years ago. Since then wind fashioned the ice mound pedestal for the abandoned craft. Bravo, a weather and scientific research outpost, was deactivated recently. (U.S. Air Force photo via AP Wirephoto)

Building Trade Unions In Salvo At Industrial Rivals

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP)—Building trades unions fired a return salvo today at their longtime industrial union rivals in the AFL-CIO, but attached a hint of peace.

President C. J. (Neil) Haggerty of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department submitted a report for the opening session of his department's three-day convention, blaming the industrial unions for labor internal wars.

Only a few weeks ago the industrial unions, headed by Auto Workers chief Walter Reuther, blasted the building trades and demanded a peace plan to submit all inter-union disputes to final and binding arbitration, with the

Russians Demand Cease-Fire Data

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Soviet Union, in a letter published Tuesday, pressed acting Secretary-General U Thant to explain on what authority U.N. officials approved a cease-fire between Katanga and U.N. forces. U Thant replied that U.N. officials ratified the agreement last month as a military necessity under the general authority of past U.N. resolutions.

At the height of last week's Security Council debate on giving more strength to U Thant's directives in the Congo, Soviet delegate Valerian A. Zorin wrote the secretary general and asked him to demand U.N. officials involved in the cease-fire to publish the exchange of letters.

decision enforceable in the courts. Reuther's plan was rejected by the building trades, whose leaders let it be known today they are working on a plan of their own. They gave no details.

It appeared likely that at least two, or perhaps three, disputes settlement plans may be put before the AFL-CIO convention here next week.

Al Hayes, president of the Machinists Union and chairman of an AFL-CIO committee trying to map a solution, announced last weekend that his group "has developed a procedure for final and binding settlement of disputes."

Building trades spokesmen said their camp knew nothing of any agreement by the Hayes committee. In fact, Haggerty's report said the last meeting of the Hayes committee broke up in August with Reuther specifying that "nothing as yet had been agreed upon."

The feud concerns overlapping union work jurisdiction—a fight that has been going on for years but has been made more acute by heavy unemployment in many areas.

Just as Reuther sniped at the building trades at the industrial unions' recent convention, Haggerty fired potshots today at Reuther's union group. Haggerty said peace efforts during the past two years have been marked "by retrogression, rather than progress."

Haggerty said a 1958 peace plan had been abandoned by the industrial unions which tried "to nullify it unilaterally." Moreover, Haggerty claims Reuther broke a promise not to freeze the building trades out of major construction and repair work at the big auto companies.

The building trades convention has three pending resolutions demanding a walkout from the AFL-CIO because of the internal squabble. The resolutions were offered by building-construction councils in Massachusetts, Northern Colorado and Roanoke, Va. Reuther similarly has said the AFL-CIO cannot stick together long without a peace settlement.

Not Excited By Yellow Ingot

JESUP, Ga. (AP)—A farmer is taking a nonchalant attitude about that yellow metal ingot he dug up—he has plans whether it turns out to be gold worth perhaps $12,000 or mere brass worth relatively nothing.

"If that chunk of metal I found turns out to be real gold," said Guy Woods, 30, "I'll probably tear the house down and start digging where it is for more gold."

"And if it isn't gold?"

"We'll use it for a boat anchor and keep on a-livin' just like we been doin'."

An official of a Baltimore metal works said Tuesday a description of the metal bar sounds like the brass ingots turned out by his plant.

Snow And Winds Chill Northeast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Heavy snow and strong winds hit sections of the northeast today and the season's coldest weather chilled areas in the southeast.

Cold weather covered most of the central and eastern sections of the nation. Temperatures inched toward zero and lower in Northern Montana and the western Dakotas.

A frigid air mass centered over northwest Canada and the autumn's coldest weather appeared headed into the north central region. More colder air also was indicated tonight in Eastern and southern areas.

The snow cover in sections of New York State, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine averaged four to five inches. Brisk northerly winds swept the snow belt.

The cold air which dipped into the southeast dropped temperatures below freezing as far south as the Carolinas and Northern Alabama. Forty-degree readings were reported in the Gulf Coast and northern Florida.

Considerable cloudiness covered areas from Texas into western Oklahoma and Kansas, with light drizzle in west central Texas.

Boiler Blows Up At Restaurant

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A boiler explosion demolished a Howard Johnson restaurant south of Richmond Tuesday night and injured 16 persons, none seriously.

The basement blast heaved up the dining room floor, then dropped it back with a gaping hole torn in it.

Five of the injured were restaurant employees. The others were diners.

City's New Traffic Division Already Making Mark

POLICE TRAFFIC DIVISION . . . officers, Cpl. M. T. Vernon, Sgt. R. E. Joyner, Ptl. T. G. Darden and Lt. T. E. Gladson check high-accident areas on chart at police headquarters.

By MARTI MARTIN
Reflector Staff Writer

You have seen this crew all about the city — sometimes at night with reflectorized vests of orange and white stripes . . . at accident scenes . . . school crossings . . . football games.

This crew of eight are members of the newly organized Traffic Division team of the Greenville Police Department. Their duty is two-fold: to arrest violators of the present traffic system and to investigate the present system in order to decrease violations and accidents.

This they have done. Judge Charles Whedbee jokingly told Police Chief Guy Langston that the accident arrest cases have more than doubled in municipal court since the team has been organized. Yet, although arrests are higher, accidents have decreased greatly during this period.

The traffic division is responsible for the supervision of traffic control, signs and street markings. They are also responsible for making surveys of accident-prone spots and to conduct surveys of restricted speed zones.

Chief Langston, who organized the Traffic Division, said that there are plans for changing the speed limit in school zones from the unrealistic 15 m.p.h. to 20 m.p.h. and to change the type of blinking systems and street markings in those zones.

Make Safety Film Slides

There are four patrol women on the Traffic Division team. They work chiefly with coordinating activities at school crossings and in motivating the children toward using good safety habits. The division has made a series of slide films to show to school children, particularly of the elementary grade level.

These slides indicate the correct and incorrect methods for riding bicycles and walking across intersections and street crossings. Many of the children in the films are in the Greenville school system.

The Greenville Rescue Squad worked closely with the Traffic Division in showing through the use of slides, what could happen if safety and caution are not exercised.

This new division is also responsible for planning and supervising traffic checks in order to keep an up-to-date record regarding motor vehicle traffic on all city streets.

Within the next year the team plans to conduct a traffic survey for the purpose of establishing the normal traffic flow directions. A survey was last conducted early in the 1950's but the traffic flow often changes over a period of years and affects traffic conditions greatly.

Intersections Danger Spots

Among the highest accident-prone locations are intersections with traffic control points. "Naturally," said Chief Langston, "Five-Points is the focal point of traffic in the city. Next on the list are Dickinson, Fifth, Tenth and Greene Streets."

The traffic team is responsible for maintaining all traffic records in the department, which includes giving the date, time and location on a "situation map" of all city accidents.

This traffic team also directs traffic at all athletic events and serves an important part in the planning of traffic routes in all parades. In the equipment assigned to this division are two motorcycles and a traffic car. The motorcycles and traffic car are equipped with fire extinguishers and first aid kits. The traffic car has additional emergency equipment. These motorcycle "firemen" have actually put out several automobile fires.

Working on the Traffic Division team at Lt. Tommy Gladson, who is in charge of the division, Cpl. M. T. Vernon, Sgt. R. E. Joyner, Patrolman T. G. Darden and Patrolwomen D. M. Stubbs, L. L. Jackson, D.

R. Fornes and Alberta Corbett. The team is fulfilling a primary purpose, that being the safe movement and expedition of the movement of traffic in the city.

Since the organization of the Traffic Division in August, 1961, the number of serious accidents, the accident ratio, and the number of rescue calls involving traffic have all decreased.

Notes Contrast In Agricultures

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman said Tuesday banishing the fear of hunger and famine in the world was a greater power than guns or bullets.

Only the free and democratic people have achieved the abundance of food and fiber that uncertain nations seek, he said.

Freeman said the strongest deterrent to the spread of communism was the contrast between American agriculture and that of the Communists.

Near present-day 46th Street and the East River in New York City, royalist troops hanged Nathaniel Hale as a spy.

Nuclear Ship Is Getting Its Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nuclear-powered merchant ship Savannah is getting its first load of fuel.

An Atomic Energy Commission spokesman said the loading of the $35.6 million ship's reactors with 17,000 pounds of uranium oxide fuel is expected to be completed this week at the Camden, N. J., shipyard. The fuel is enough to provide service for 3½ years without refueling.

The Savannah, first ship of its kind, is being built by the AEC and the Maritime Administration as a demonstration vessel.

Teacher Exam Is Set February 10

Prospective teachers in the area near East Carolina College will have an opportunity to take the National Teacher Examinations on February 10, 1962, according to E. M. Nicholson, Director of Testing at the college, who will supervise the administration of the tests.

Applications blanks and bulletins of information describing registration procedures and containing representative test questions may be obtained from Mr. Nicholson or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey. Applications must be mailed to Princeton so as to be received there not later than January 12, 1962, Mr. Nicholson advised.

Scores on the National Teacher Examinations are used by a large number of school systems and teacher education institutions throughout the country as aid in evaluating such of the qualifications of prospective teachers as are measured by the tests, Mr. Nicholson said.

The scores may also be useful to examinees who are interested in discovering their own strengths and weaknesses with respect to such teacher qualifications as are measured by the tests, he added.

Kennedy's Views Reaching Important Soviet Segment

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

President Kennedy's interview with Izvestia will reach a small but highly important segment of the Soviet population, and it unquestionably will present to them an alluring prospect.

In committing Izvestia to print the text of the interview with Premier Khrushchev's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei, the Kremlin probably recognized the risks involved.

The longing for peace and prosperity is strong among the Soviet people. The risk is that the President's words will help generate even more pressure from the Soviet people to satisfy their growing urge for normal conditions.

The reward to be gained from this bold sally into journalistic competition may lie in the prospect of entrenching Khrushchev in his battle against the diehard Stalinists who insist that war is inevitable and that the Soviet Union should embark upon a much tougher course.

Izvestia as the organ of the Soviet government is distinct from more powerful Pravda, which is the official organ of the 9 million strong Soviet Communist party.

Izvestia is read by government officials, factory managers, top-ranking economic personnel, collective farm officials, professional people and others of that stamp throughout the Soviet Union. Its circulation of 4½ million probably means that it is read by 20 million or more people.

The words of President Kennedy likely are being read avidly. Soviet readers are hungry for such reading matter and—as Adzhubei himself said—accustomed to reading long newspaper stories.

The 8,000-word interview will not faze Soviet readers. They will savor it every word.

Kennedy put his finger on a point that worries Soviet officials. Russians—apart from high-ranking Communist leaders—obviously relate their hopes for increased living standards and prosperity to good relations with the United States.

When those relations are bad, Russian hopes sag. When relations have a prospect of improving, Russian hopes go up.

Official Soviet propaganda has been careful not to slam the door on those hopes. When it speaks of the threat of war, it concentrates much of its fire on Germany, the source of the last scourge. It tries to suggest that President Kennedy is being hoodwinked by West German generals and "warmongers in the Pentagon."

Now the Russians have it from the President of the United States himself: An American controls NATO and West German forces are integrated in NATO. West Germans have only nine divisions and these under NATO control. They have no nuclear arms and little prospect of getting them. They have practically no navy and only a small air force. They are no military threat to the Soviet Union.

The real threat, the Russians are told, comes from unwarranted pressures in such areas as Berlin, in violation of postwar agreements, that pits one powerful country, the United States, against another, the Soviet Union, with the resultant threat that both systems could be destroyed.

Many a Russian will ponder those words, and these days public opinion in the Soviet Union is coming to mean more and more with regard to the activities of the Kremlin. Today's conservative educated Russian, generations removed from Bolshevik revolution, is unlikely to want to risk all he has and all he hopes for just to push the idea of communism on the rest of the world.

Despite the relatively small audience in a country of 210 million, the Izvestia interview could prove to have historic impact.

Music Teachers Plan Meeting

Plans are now under way for the third annual convention of the North Carolina Music Teachers Association, to be held on the Woman's College Campus in Greensboro, on January 12-13.

This year the convention program will be divided into two sections. Seventeenth Century music will be discussed January 12. The main topic will be contemporary music on January 13.

Marie Johnson of Queens College, Charlotte, president of the association, will take charge of the general meeting. William Newman, University of North Carolina, speaking at the Theory-Musicology session, will introduce "Seventeenth Century Music."

Dean Clemens Sandresky of Salem College will discuss Seventeenth Century descriptive keyboard music; and Harold Anclaw, Greensboro, N. C., will present Organ Music of Buxtehude. The following session will be devoted to vocal and string music.

Among the activities planned is a recital, to be given at the School of Music at 8:00 p. m., January 12. Guest artists include: Richard Cox, Conductor of the Woman's College Choir; pianist Wolfgang Fetsch of East Carolina College, vice president of the NCMTA; and trumpeter Emerson Head of Wake Forest College.

Pitt Board Of Realtors Elect New Officers

The Pitt County Board of Realtors yesterday at its regular bi-weekly business meeting elected new officers for the year 1962.

Elected as president was Jack Wallace. He has served several terms in that office before, has been active in real estate in Greenville since 1950, and is a graduate of the Realtors Institute at UNC.

Elected as vice president was Lester Turnage who is also a former president of the Board and has been in real estate in Greenville for a number of years.

John Grier was re-elected as secretary-treasurer for the eighth straight year. He has been in the real estate rental business in Greenville for the past ten years.

Reappraisal Of Food Aid Suggested

By REESE HART
RALEIGH (AP) — With winter at hand, North Carolina counties not participating in the free food distribution program "should re-evaluate the situation very carefully," Gov. Sanford said today. "I would encourage these counties to take another look at the program which has to be measured on local needs," Sanford told the Associated Press. "This thing has to be administered locally." The free food program, being carried out now in 30 of the state's 100 counties, has shown a big drop in the number of recipients in recent months. J. P. Davis, director of the state's commodity distribution program, said 105,131 persons received free food during October as compared with 147,269 during June, the peak month since the program started. This is a decrease of 42,138. Davis attributed the decline chiefly to summer farming operations which provided jobs for many of the needy persons. Five counties—Roberson, Hart, Bertie, Person and Northampton—dropped the food program last June. Davis said these counties felt that many of the needy persons on the list could find farming jobs and therefore would not need the free food. These counties have not indicated whether they will resume the program, Davis said. Two counties, Pitt and Columbus, curtailed the free food distribution list during the tobacco harvesting season. A total of 117,975 persons were certified as eligible for the free food during October, but only 105,131 received it. Many of the persons who failed to share in the program, Davis explained, were unable to get transportation to the warehouse to get the food. Under the surplus food program, the federal government provides 11 commodities—corn meal, flour, rice, dried milk, lard, eggs, beans, butter, peanut butter, chopped meat and oatmeal. The state foots the bill for getting the food to the distribution warehouse in each of the 30 counties. The county provides the warehouse and personnel to distribute the packaged food. Approximately 75,000 pounds of food, valued at $28,000, can be distributed at a cost to the county of about $50. To receive free food, a person or family has to be certified as eligible by the local welfare department. Persons who receive welfare grants, such as old age assistance and aid to dependent children, are automatically eligible to receive the free food. Most counties stipulate that a man with no dependents cannot be certified if he makes as much as $75 per month. In some counties the figure is $85. Davis explained that the amount is left up to the discretion of the local county since some counties complained at the outset of the program that the $75 figure was too low. The free food program began in a few counties last April and spread to others in May. A total of 125,486 received the food in May. Broken down, here is a list of counties which took part in the program in October, with the number of eligible persons listed first and the total recipients second: Alafance 2,033 and 1,972; Beaufort 8,891 and 7,276; Burke 2,868 and 2,817; Cabarrus 3,562 and 3,459; Columbus 2,104 and 1,777; Cumberland 6,600 and 6,961; Davidson 2,229 and 2,100; Gaston 6,383 and 5,936; Guilford 13,266 and 9,926; Martin 2,161 and 1,996; Mecklenburg 21,800 and 20,478; Montgomery 1,031 and 855; New Hanover 5,105 and 4,769; Onslow 2,098 and 1,922; Orange 1,142 and 1,074; Pasquotank 1,192 and 1,131; Pitt 1,614 and 1,43; Rowan 3,41 and 8,82; Rutherford 447 and 966; Surry 3,004 and 2,356; Tyrrell 1,888 and 1,878; Vance 2,060 and 1,979; Wake 7,204 and 6,687; Washington 1,348 and 1,348; Watauga 2,297 and 2,096; Wayne 4,609 and 4,348; Wilkes 4,734 and 4,419; and Wilson 3,316 and 2,998.

Reveal Reversal In Agency Policy

The Pitt County ASCS office today announced a reversal in the agency's policy regarding transfer of tobacco acreage allotments. Office manager Livingston Roberts said the Raleigh office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Monday handed down an interpretation of the new transfer regulations that would allow an operator of two or more tobacco farms to transfer allotments from one farm to the other. However, Robert pointed out, other announced limitations of the lease-transfer program have not been altered. The manager said his office had been informing Pitt farmers that operators of two or more farms were restricted under the program from transferring allotments from one farm to another. Roberts said the new interpretation came to the Pitt office from A. P. Hassell Jr., executive director of the State ASCS operation. Major among remaining unchanged stipulations of the lease-transfer program are the five-acre limitation and the provision that a farm's total allotment for tobacco cannot exceed 50 per cent of the total cropland on the farm. Roberts urged Pitt farmers have the further questions about the new interpretation to visit the county ASCS office in the County Office Building on Johnston Street.

Religious Drama Team To Offer Program

DRAMA TEAM is in its fifth year . . . will perform in Greenville Sunday evening.

The Religious Drama Team of Union Theological Seminary and the Presbyterian School of Christian Education of Richmond, Virginia, will perform in the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, North Carolina, on Sunday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. The Drama Team will present as a part of the evening worship service "Cry Dawn in Dark Babylon," a religious drama by Philip W. Turner.

Focus On Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Slurred speech, radioisotopes in medicine, overweight children and new views on shaving figure in the medical news:

MUMBO JUMBO
You may be no spellbinder when you sound off your views, but are you even being understood?

The American Medical Association says millions of people are more or less handicapped in their everyday affairs because of slurred speech, mumbling or of swallowing word endings. These people leave the impression they are careless or lack self-confidence.

The AMA gives this tip for testing your enunciation: Ask a few relatives or trusted friends if they understand your speech at all

Out Of Funds

KINSTON (AP) — Efforts to raise the Confederate ironclad Neuse, which for nearly a century has lay at the muddy bottom of the Neuse River here, have run aground financially.

These construction workers trying to rescue the Rebel battlewagon told city and Lenoir County officials Tuesday their expenses already total $14,000.

The three, Lemuel Houston, Tom Carlyle and H. C. Casey, declined an offer of $4,000 in non-tax funds, and no agreement was reached on whether the entire $4,000 in public funds can be raised.

The South built the Neuse near the end of the Civil War. But she was sunk, before ever going to battle, so she wouldn't fall into the hands of approaching Yankees.

The three men say most of the mud and silt has been removed from the vessel, but they lack equipment to move her. They say a rising trend in the river now could undo the work already done.

times. Or ask yourself: "How often does someone ask me to repeat a word, phrase or sentence?"

VERSATILE ATOM
The atom is fast approaching early maturity in the field of diagnostic medicine.

Hundreds of medical institutions are using radioisotopes in medicine and the demand is growing.

Nuclear Chicago Corp., a producer of atomic products and equipment, has started issuing informative bulletins that can be used in training programs for medical students and doctors.

The first bulletin deals with the evaluation of thyroid function. Others are planned detailing how radioisotopes can be used in kidney function studies, diagnosis of pernicious anemia and blood-volume determinations.

SLIM EXAMPLE
One of the best ways parents can induce an overweight child to lose weight is to set a proper example, a medical study in London indicates.

The study project, reported in World-Wide Abstracts of General Medicine, dealt with 100 overweight children between the ages of 7 and 14. Of the group, 74 had either one or both parents overweight.

SHAVING
When the average man takes his daily shave, he removes almost as much skin as hair, a dermatologist contends.

Dr. Herbert Mescon, professor and chairman of the department of dermatology, Boston School of Medicine, said this is true whether he uses a blade razor or electric razor.

Shaving removes living skin as well as the dead outer layers, Dr. Mescon said. "But this doesn't mean that shaving is harmful. It may stimulate the growth of new skin and in this way can be beneficial. To date, there's no proof that any one method (blade or electric razor) is best for all skins."

For the fifth consecutive year the Drama Team is touring throughout the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church proclaiming the message of the Christian faith through the use of drama.

Both the actors and the congregation are involved in the situation of the drama with the creative use of the imagination. Only a minimum of scenery and properties is used; costumes are merely suggested.

"Cry Dawn in Dark Babylon" is a play about death, about the Resurrection, and about the church. The play asks the questions of life and death in terms of a human story. Suddenly in the midst of life Mr. and Mrs. Jones find their child dead. In face of death what does all the talk about the Resurrection and faith mean? There is but one thing to which the Joneses can turn: the church, which still proclaims "God is Love." In the church the Jones do see that Christ is indeed risen and present; that there is a dawn in dark Babylon.

Members of the team, who are presently studying for the ministry or some church related vocation are: Robert Burns, director of the team; James Hornsby, technical director; Anna Kelti, Tom Johnson and Clement Sydnor.

Other members of the cast include: Marilyn Vanderburg, Richard Huggins, John Myers, and Kathy Fowler.

FLOOD IS COMING

DILLON, Colo. (AP) — Dillon, familiar to tourists driving on U. S. Highway 6 across Loveland Pass, is being forced to move. Waters of a new dam, part of the Blue River Water Diversion Project, eventually will cover the town site. Most of the buildings already have been hauled to the new location six miles away.

Draft Calls To Stay High If Army Adds 2 Divisions

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP)—Draft calls likely will stay at a relatively high level—and may go even higher—if the Army is increased by two regular divisions.

Pentagon sources said Tuesday the White House informally has agreed with Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's recommendation that the regular Army be swelled from 14 to 16 divisions. Congressional approval would be needed.

Money to man and equip the two new divisions—perhaps as much as $250 million—probably will be included in the budget President Kennedy sends to Congress in January for the bookkeeping year starting next July 1.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., said the Senate Armed Services Committee which he heads will make a careful investigation early in January of the defense buildup. The Army, under the impetus of the Berlin situation, already has strengthened to 16 divisions, but two are National Guard outfits that under present law cannot remain in federal service beyond next October.

A division consists of about 15,000 men, not counting support units which may total twice that figure.

Counting 156,000 Guardsmen and reservists summoned to active duty this fall, Army strength has now reached about 1,080,000.

If approved by Congress, creation of two more regular divisions would mean a million-man army for some time to come.

At the outset of the Berlin military buildup, Kennedy told Congress last July he was ordering draft calls doubled and tripled in the coming months.

From a total of 6,000 men drafted in July, the levy jumped to 13,000 in August, then to 25,000 in September, dropped to 20,000 in October and November and to 16,000 for December.

Since it would take time to organize the new regular divisions, it appeared likely the two Guard divisions—Wisconsin's 32nd Infantry and Texas' 49th Armored—would remain on active duty for most of the year permitted under a special congressional authorization. The Guard divisions were mustered on Oct. 15.

The Army's present 14 regular divisions include eight infantry, three armored, two airborne and one armored cavalry.

Six divisions—plus the two Guard units—are concentrated in the continental United States.

The apparent idea underlying the new plan is to array eight battle-ready regular Army divisions for possible quick movement to overseas trouble spots.

Adding two Marine divisions on the East and West coasts, this would give the United States a 10-division force poised inside the United States.

Rounding out the U.S. ground strength are five Army divisions facing the Iron Curtain in Germany, two confronting the Reds in Korea, a Marine division on Okinawa and with the 7th Fleet in the Far East and an Army infantry division based in Hawaii.

Lawmakers And Experts Visiting Latin America

By THOMAS J. STONE
LIMA, Peru (AP)—U.S. senators and representatives, a wide variety of government experts and advisors and top military brass are streaming to Latin America in record numbers.

Some of them want a detailed over-all picture of what is going on. Others concentrate on a single subject.

One U.S. Embassy officer said of the big influx: "It's a clear demonstration of Uncle Sam's growing interest in things down here, especially since President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress was launched."

In one three-week period 10 senators, some with their wives, their staffs, 11 representatives and their staffs, government specialists and a 180-man Air Force aerobatic team were scheduled to stop off in Lima.

Most of the VIP's make a serious and penetrating study, utilizing every minute and every opportunity. They report back to Washington what they have seen and heard and make carefully considered recommendations.

There are others, comparatively few, who obviously come for the government-paid trip. They dose through the embassy economic and political briefings but they never miss the cocktail parties and receptions, the sightseeing and the shopping.

Commented one diplomat: "A rule of thumb is this: if one or two come together, they mean business. If they come in a group, and bring their wives along, they are on a junket. But of course there are exceptions to both rules."

It is a strain on embassies to make the detailed preparations. Hotel reservations have to be made. When there are no embassy automobiles available, limousines are hired. Interpreters are made available. Briefings, interviews, dinners, receptions and cocktail parties are arranged. Sightseeing and shopping tours are laid on.

When a senator or representative arrives, he is handed a fat envelope almost as soon as he steps off the plane. The envelope contains expense money, in local currency. The amounts vary from embassy to embassy.

The embassy in Lima, for example, gives each congressional delegate the equivalent of $200 in Peruvian money. If more is requested, it is given without question. The visitors account for the advances, which come from counterpart funds, when they return to Washington.

TV Success Is Basically Resting On Regular Fare

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Television's critics fill the air with cries for better quality. Top network executives talk grandly about their news coverage and documentaries. But fundamentally, the success and failure of television lies in its regular entertainment shows, the weekly programs—action, variety, situation comedy, dramatic anthologies—which are the meat-and-potatoes fare of the medium.

Whether the critics like a show or not, whether it is violent or cliché-filled, the final decision whether a bread-and-butter show lives or dies is made by the mass audience, as reported by the various ratings services.

One may quarrel with ratings, deplore the system which permits a mere sampling of viewers to determine whether a program persists or survives, but it is the only way each bill-paying sponsor has found to let him know how many people are being exposed to his message. So believe them or not, the ratings will continue to have life-and-death influence on the medium.

But popularity is not always related closely to quality, freshness or even entertainment value. Sometimes it is a simple matter of position in a network schedule.

For instance, when ABC's "The New Breed," a routine police-action show, started this fall in a 9-10 p.m. spot in the network lineup, it was doing poorly. This was easily explained: it had two powerful rivals, CBS' Red Skelton and NBC's slick, professional "Dick Powell Show." In addition, its "lead-in" (the preceding show on the network) was an extremely weak entry: "Calvin and the Colonel."

A few weeks back, ABC removed the 30-minute cartoon show and shoved up "The New Breed" a half hour. This week, it reported triumphantly that the shift had resulted in almost doubling the audience. The shows were the same, the stars the same—nothing had changed except the time—and the competition.

The season's most dramatic illustration of the horse race aspects of TV programming is "Bonanza," a Western which had been quietly losing the rating contests each Saturday night to rival "Perry Mason" for a year. It was moved into a mid-evening Sunday night spot on the network—and immediately shot up to a high position among the top 10 shows.

"Perry Mason" also rose to a new peak in terms of numbers of viewers. Again, nothing had changed about the two shows except the time period—and "Perry Mason" this year is having more script troubles than in previous seasons.

Recommended tonight: "Hollywood: The Golden Years," NBC, 7:30-8:30—with Gene Kelly narrating; "We the People—1961," NBC, 8-10—updating an old program with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. host; "The World of Billy Graham," NBC, 10-11—biographical special.

Failed Holdups With Toy Pistol

NEW YORK (AP)—A broke and jobless bellhop, his pocket containing tickets on long-shot horses that didn't come through, tried to hold up two banks with a toy pistol Tuesday. He failed both times.

In each bank, tellers merely stared when the Negro man demanded money. Unnerved by the reception he left.

A traffic patrolman captured him outside the second bank. Officers identified him as Raleigh Joyce, 33, of Manhattan, and tellers of both banks identified him as the would-be robber.

He was charged with attempted robbery, assault and violation of the weapons law.

Indian calumets, or ceremonial pipes, were respected symbols used only on special occasions.

Evacuating As Safety Measure

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force has been evacuating its radar warning towers in the Atlantic Ocean whenever a forecast warns of winds of about 57 miles an hour or more.

The policy is believed to stem from the collapse of one of the towers last January, although Air Force sources did not say so.

Standing in open sea off New Jersey, the three-legged Texas Tower buckled during a violent storm and collapsed, dragging 28 men to their deaths.

The towers, part of the air raid warning system, are designed to withstand winds up to 125 m.p.h. and 35-foot waves.

His Final Talks With Red China

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam held his last meeting Tuesday with Red Chinese envoy Wang Ping-nam. The meetings began in 1958 in the midst of the explosive Formosa Strait crisis.

Beam will leave for a new post in Washington Thursday after more than four years as U.S. ambassador to Poland.

The talks, which have thus far produced no major agreements, are the only diplomatic contact between the two powers.

Religion, Not Oil, Said Ape In Orbit Has Middle East Problem No Simple Role

"Religion, not oil, is the big problem in the Middle East," insists Catherine McKinney Butler, historian, student of world affairs.

Mrs. Butler will address the Pitt County Executive Club Friday night at 7 o'clock in the South Dining Hall at East Carolina College.

According to Mrs. Butler, it is the Bible Lands, centuries old, that are the key to peace in the Middle East and Near East. Here Moslem, Jew and Christian have been biting chunks out of each other for years. The Russians, without a religion and recognizing no God, have been keeping the religious people of this are fighting against each other, and hatred in places is at the boiling point.

"The oil problem is merely a physical one," explains Mrs. Butler. "Russia doesn't need the oil and merely wants to keep the Western Democracies, who do need it to keep their industries moving, from getting it. The situation is touch and go because atheistic Russia ironically is influencing countries with deep rooted religions against the Western Democracies."

A student of Bible Land history, Mrs. Butler is a long time resident of Oklahoma. She was graduated by the University of her state and then took graduate work at Northwestern University and the Columbia College of Expression. She is active in civic work in her home city and in her state.

Sees Problems In Russian Entry

NEW YORK (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham says "very serious problems" will result from the admission of the Russian Orthodox Church to the World Council of Churches.

Graham, returning on Tuesday from New Delhi, India, where he attended the third assembly of the council, declined to discuss the problems he had in mind.

But he declared that Russian delegates "never hesitated to inject very subtly the Soviet point of view."

MRS. CATHERINE BUTLER

By JOHN BARBOUR
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A boy chimp went out on a man's job today.

Enos, a 37½-pound chimpanzee, blasted off on a 125-ton Atlas rocket for a trip three times over his native Africa and around the world. But just as important: His reaction to nearly 4½ hours of demanding schoolwork during the trip, clouded by the mysteries of space flight, will help determine whether a man can endure the same stresses.

Perhaps shortly after Christmas or New Year's a man will ride another Atlas rocket to find the same strange challenges awaiting him on another world-girdling flight.

Like the astronaut, Enos has been well-schooled for the tests to see how well he can perform during the unearthly state of weightlessness.

Even two minutes before he shot into space, Enos began pulling levers to avoid a slight electric shock in his foot. Then as the giant rocket shoved him skyward, and the mighty forces of acceleration pressed his small body back into his cradle-like chamber, he had to continue the test.

Red light in right test window on the dashboard. Pull the red lever once very 20 seconds or more often. Again. Again.

The forces of acceleration lessen and finally diminish altogether. A strange world of no force encompassed Enos. Suddenly his entire environment had no weight—he felt no gravity.

If he had not been zippered into his space chamber, he might have floated about.

Whatever he felt, Enos then began another test. This time another light spelled out another lever-pulling task. Then a 6-minute rest period.

Now a green light flashes in the right window. At the proper time hit the lever. Then watch for the green light to the right. And the thirsty chimp, who hasn't had a taste of water since the night before, plants his lips over a nipple and sucks out the first sips of some 1½ pints of water.

And so the test demanded something more of Enos every time it changed. At one point, Enos gets banana-flavored pills as a reward for performing correctly.

At the end, he selects the unlike figure from three pictures that appear in the three small dashboard windows. He may pull the lever in front of the triangle, leaving untouched the levers in front of the two windows which show circles. Then he may trip the lever in front of the window showing a square, ignoring the two windows showing triangles.

Then he may make a mistake, and a slight shock pricks his foot. Or he may tire of the exercise, and another shock pricks him into action. He as right perhaps 60 to 65 per cent of the time during his schoolings on earth.

The entire exercise takes perhaps 60 minutes, including rest periods, and it is repeated four times.

All the while a thermometer measures Enos' body temperature, another device reads his pulse, another his blood pressure and still another his breathing rate.

A special device taps his urine—and this may provide the final barometer of stress that the chimp endures. Later scientists will check the urine for signs of used adrenal hormones—those remarkable chemicals that the body uses to prepare itself to meet stress. It is adrenal hormone that makes the heart beat fast and prepares the body for action.

From Enos and his special battle with space, scientists hope to learn if there is a real danger to man, a real danger to U.S. astronauts who follow.

sen and finally diminish altogether. A strange world of no force encompassed Enos. Suddenly his entire environment had no weight—he felt no gravity.

Final Homage To Senator Bridges

CONCORD, N.H. (AP)—The great in government and the humble from the farms of New Hampshire join today in final homage to U.S. Sen. Styles Bridges, who died in his sleep last Sunday.

Bridges will be buried in Pine Grove Cemetery after noon services in the state capitol.

President Kennedy designated his younger brother, Edward F. Kennedy, and Lawrence P. O'Brien of the White House staff to represent him.

The public service followed private services Tuesday for the 63-year-old Republican who served almost a quarter-century in the U.S. Senate.

PRAYS FOR DAUGHTER'S RESCUE—Mrs. Evelyn Reeder prays at the foot of a ladder as firemen and police work to rescue her 2-year-old daughter, Regina, trapped by flames and smoke in a second story bedroom of their home in Upper Arlington, a suburb of Columbus, Ohio. Firemen broke a window to reach the child. Her lungs seared by smoke, Regina is recovering in a hospital. Damage to the house was estimated at $10,000. (AP Wirephoto)

SALES TAX
CHICAGO (AP)—Sales tax collections furnished the greatest single source of revenue in 30 states during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961.

Commerce Clearing House says a total of $4½ billion was collected from this source.

State income taxes were a major source in 14 states during the year.

Gasoline taxes are levied in all 50 states but only five depend upon them for a major source of revenue.

Louisiana continues to rely on its severance tax as a major source of revenue.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA)—North Carolina egg markets weaker. Supplies barely adequate to short, demand good. Prices paid producers for clean, unsorted eggs, delivered nearby grading stations on a grade-by-grade basis; cases exchanged: Grade A large, whites 35-36; m e d i u m, whites 25 1/2-27; small, whites 22-24.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA)—Hog prices steady to mostly 25 higher. Tops of 17-17.75 Rocky Mount; 16.75-17.75 Wilson, Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Mount Olive, Newton Grove; 17-17.50 Spring Hope; 16.75-17 Murrfreesboro, Robersonville; 16.50-17 Pembroke, Smithfield, Dunn; 17.25 Clinton, Fayetteville, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Tarboro, Enfield, Scotland Neck, Elch Square; 17 Greensboro, Albemarle, Goldsboro, Castle Hayne, Burgaw; 16.75 Siler City, Lillington.

NEW YORK (AP) — Silver—Mining shares were sharply higher in an otherwise mixed and active stock market early this afternoon. The Associated Press 60-stock average at noon was up 0.80 at 266.90 with industrials up 1.10; rails ahead 0.10 and utilities up 0.60. Silver producers, a long-dormant group, spurred in response to Tuesday's late announcement that the government no longer will sell silver in the open market. This is expected to bring about at least a temporary boost in the metal's price, with consequent gains in output and earnings for the mining firms. Sunshine Mining, largest U.S. producer, opened on a block of 70,000 shares, up 2 1/2 at 15 1/4 for a gain of roughly 23 per cent. Callahan Mining jumped 1 1/2 to 8 1/4 on a late opening of 35,000 shares. These gains generally were trimmed back in later trading.

North American Aviation was another feature, opening up 5 at 56 1/2 due to its winning a $400-million Apollo spacecraft contract. Other aircraft-missile issues generally were higher, apparently in sympathy. While individual issues, and sometimes groups, were responding to news developments and/or year-end tax transactions, the over-all market remained trendless.

Steeles, rubber firms, utilities, oils, drugs and most tobacco were firm. Chemicals eased for the most part. Electronic firms were weak with Zenith and Radio Corp. down around 1. Philco was higher after Tuesday's stockholder approval of acquisition by Ford. Ford rose nearly 1. Nonferrous metal firms who turn out some silver as a by-product to copper, lead and zinc mining were up only fractionally. But International Nickel rose more than 1. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 0.36 at 728.43. The American Stock Exchange was mostly higher and trading active.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were steady and quiet.

Armstrong - Jones Scores With Picture Of His Son

LONDON (AP) — Former society photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones today scored his biggest photographic feat—the first pictures of his and Princess Margaret's baby son. Housewives and young girls cooed sentimentally over breakfast coffee at the pictures of three-week-old Viscount Linley and his mother splashed over the front pages of Britain's newspapers.

The favorite was one in which the photographer father, now the Earl of Snowdon, had caught his royal wife with her eyes half-closed in delight, nestling her grinning baby against her cheek.

The pictures dominated the front pages. But not that of the Communist Daily Worker, which doesn't approve of such publicity for the royal family.

"Superb," explained royal photographer Cecil Beaton, who took the first official photographs of Queen Elizabeth's three children. "The great charm of these pictures is that he has captured the simplicity of the great love between mother and child," said David Albert Charles and called David, the name of his mother's favorite uncle the Duke of Windsor.

Davis is also an honored name in Wales. St. David being the patron saint, and Armstrong-Jones prides himself on his Welsh blood. The pictures were distributed at the customary rate of 4 pounds — $11.20—a print by a photographic agency that handled Lord Snowdon's work when he was a society photographer. It was estimated the agency would collect about 10,000 pounds — $28,000—at home and abroad on the series.

Neither officials for the agency nor spokesmen for the royal family would say whether any of the money would go to Lord Snowdon.

Officers said the car operated by Mrs. Heller collided with a vehicle driven by Bonnie Ray Hardee, 20, of 1502-B Mills St.

Damage to the Hardee auto was set at $120 while damage was placed at $25 to the Heller car. The collision occurred at the intersection of Eighth and Cotanche Sts. about 3:30 p.m.

Bonner Is Confident U.S. Will Win Out Over Reds

BETHEL — Congressman Herbert C. Bonner, guest speaker at the Bethel Rotary Club's meeting last night, expressed the feeling that Americans are living in troubled times. But he stated he felt Christianity and the Constitutional way of life will win the battle against Communism.

With the United States' having only six per cent of the world's population, "we will not find an easy way out," Bonner said. People should highly respect the churches and the courts that have been established to save them, he stated.

Speaking of the world situation, Bonner said there are three groups: the east, the west and the neutrals, who have accepted "our" favor, but who remain neutral. In the long run, Bonner said, atheism will not stand up with Christianity.

He commented that the Russians, having seen what the U.S. has, knowing they cannot destroy the country from without, their weapon against the U.S. is their program of attacking from the economic standpoint. With their program of Communism they might try to destroy the country from within.

Bonner concluded that the Christianity and Constitutional way of life will win out. The veteran Congressman of 21 years was introduced by C. W. Everett. He was the guest of Swan C. Ives.

Presiding over the meeting was Club President Linwood Briley. Rev. Carl Barbee gave the invocation.

Guests for the evening included Roy Martin and R. W. Howard of Greenville, Howard Gaylord of Jamesville, Ned Everett of Robersonville, and W. C. Whitehurst, F. C. Martin and Curtis Martin, all of Bethel.

Firemen Again In Toy Business
Greenville Fire Chief George W. Gardner announced today that again this Christmas season local firemen will be repairing toys for distribution to needy children by the Salvation Army.

Both Chief Gardner and Capt. Earl Reagan of the Salvation Army said the repairing of the toys will begin Monday, and requested that citizens having used toys take them to the fire department or call the Salvation Army. The Fire Department head explained that all toys repaired by firemen would be distributed by the Salvation Army and not by the department.

Convict Man In Accident Of Drunken Driving
AYDEN — Thirty-four-year-old William Artis, Negro of Rt. 1, Grifton, was convicted of drunk driving in Recorder's Court Sunday morning.

A passenger in the Artis vehicle, Mark Turnage of Rt. 1, Ayden, was charged with being drunk. He is to be tried next Monday in Recorder's Court. Artis was given a 90-day suspended sentence upon payment of a fine of $100 and court costs, and his driver's license was revoked for one year on the charge of drunken driving. Police Chief W. D. Brooks said.

The automobile accident occurred about 10:15 a.m. Sunday in front of the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church, when the automobile driven by Artis collided with a parked automobile owned by Violet Crayton of Rt. 1, Ayden. Brooks said Damages were estimated to be $250 to the Artis vehicle and $400 to the Crayton automobile.

Chased, Caught Suspected Thief
A 40-year-old Negro was run down and caught by store employees on Evans Street as he tried to get away from Roses' store where he allegedly took a number of articles and clothing. Police reported that Tyson was charged with shop lifting when three sweaters and nine pairs of ladies undergarments were found in a shopping bag in his possession after he left the store. Value of the merchandise was placed at $13.45. Tyson was also charged with possession of lottery tickets for the purpose of sale. The arrest took place about noon yesterday, officers noted.

Local Student In Moot Court Team At UNC
J. Edgar Moore of Greenville is a member of the three-man moot court team at the University of North Carolina, which advanced to the semi-finals in regional competition held recently in Richmond, Va.

Moore majored in accounting while an undergraduate at the university. He is now specializing in tax law. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Moore of 208 Meade St., Greenville. Membership on the UNC team is determined by competition in the spring of the second year of law school from which eight finalists are chosen. Further competition determines the membership on the three-man team.
