20,000 Watch Greenville's 26th Annual Xmas Parade

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

An estimated 20,000 persons Tuesday watched the 26th annual Merchants Association Greenville Christmas parade under threatening skies that mercifully held their rain until today.

The 50-minute-long procession that wound through Greenville's downtown area beneath the city's Christmas decorations officially ushered in the 1961 commercial Christmas season for Greenville merchants.

A total of some 45 units comprised the colorful entourage, viewed by spectators lined five- and six-deep along at least six blocks of Greenville's business streets.

Seven marching bands led by prancing majorettes blared their versions of Christmas carols to add pomp to the festive annual event.

One band brought howls from the crowd as its major-cornet corps performed a street version of the latest dancing rage—the "Twist."

In 60-degree weather—quite a bit warmer than in some past parades—the girls riding the floats had little difficulty in finding broad and warm smiles as they rode by the spectators.

Greenville Moose Lodge 885 and Greenville Pepsi-Cola Co. were declared winners in the float competition. Judges S. F. Peterson, Ayden mayor; Marvin Speight, Farmville Chamber of Commerce president; and George S. Gardner, Washington city councilman, named the Moose Lodge entry the best-decorated float in the non-professionally-prepared division. Pepsi was awarded its blue ribbon in the professional division.

Second and third place recognition in the non-professional division went to the Greenville Exchange Club and the VFW Auxiliary. In the professional category, Jenkins Motor Co. and the Greenville Lions Club won second and third place honors.

The parade got underway at 4 p.m. from the Winn-Dixie supermarket parking lot on E. Tenth Street. From there it proceeded to Dickinson Avenue. On Dickinson it traveled deliberately to Washington Street.

From that point the long parade made a giant u-turn through the heart of the downtown area. It moved north along Washington to Third Street where it turned east and traveled to Evans Street. It turned southward on Evans and proceeded to Five Points where it bent eastward and traveled along Fifth Street to the East Carolina College parking lot where it disbanded. The last unit arrived at the parking lot shortly after 5 p.m. (Continued on page 20)

Fighting Steps Up In Katanga

Swedish Jets Strafe Rebel Air Force; UN Ground Units Reinforced

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, the Congo (AP)—The air forces of both the U.N. command and Katanga went into action today as fighting raged for the second day in and near this secessionist capital.

Mortar blasts shook the residential area near U.N. headquarters and an old airport northwest of the city where Katanga forces were deployed.

A lone aircraft, from Katanga's small air force, a bomber converted from a German-made transport, raided the main Elisabethville airport held by U.N. troops, and dropped three bombs. A U.N. spokesman said there were no serious casualties or damage.

Indian Brig. K. A. S. Raja, who took over the U.N. operation in Katanga from civilians, announced U.N. jets strafed the Katanga air force at Kolwezi, northwest of Elisabethville.

He said Swedish jet fighters carried out the attack, and prevented an air attack on U.N. forces at Elisabethville. One of Katanga's French-built Fouga jets at Kolwezi succeeded in getting off the ground but made a forced landing near Lulabourg in adjoining Kasai Province, he said.

U.N. troops opened antiaircraft fire on another Katanga plane which circled the main airport.

At Leopoldville, the U.N. command announced that its 15-jet air force had been ordered to attack other Katanga air forces at Jadotville, 65 miles northwest of Elisabethville.

Six U.S. Air Force Globemasters took off from Leopoldville loaded with armored cars and antiaircraft guns for Elisabethville.

The United Nations steadily reinforced its ground troops. About 300 Swedes arrived from Stockholm and another 350 Irish soldiers were en route from Dublin.

Information Minister Albert Ntembo told newsmen Katanga mortar fire had driven the United Nations from its headquarters in Elisabethville, but Abdul Latif Sugar, deputy U.N. civilian chief, denied this. He said Katanga mortar shells burst in the area occasionally and some had scored hits.

At the old airfield northwest of the city, a U.N. spokesman said, Katanga soldiers were being redeployed. "We are blasting them with mortars," he said.

The Katanga spokesman said the United Nations had withdrawn from the Lido Hotel, a rest area and one of the four U.N. points in the city.

Katanga broadcasts urged the people to fight.

"The United Nations has declared war on the little people of Katanga," one broadcast said. "The hour is grave, the moment has come. Arm yourself, sons and daughters of Katanga, arm yourselves wherever you are, in your homes, your fields, your villages. Take up your spears and arrows and fight."

Each side accused the other of treachery Tuesday in the outbreak of fighting. The conflict followed a U.N. Security Council order to the U.N. Command to employ force if necessary to oust mercenaries in Katanga. The council has adopted a policy against Katanga's secession from the Congo.

The United Nations charged that Katangans secretly prepared a sneak attack while agreeing to remove roadblocks erected against U.N. movements.

In Paris, Katanga President Moïse Tshombe said Foreign Minister Evariste Kimba had informed him U.N. troops had attacked Katanga forces in Manono, 275 miles north of Elisabethville, and the fighting in Katanga apparently had become general. Tshombe said he would leave for Katanga today.

Kennedy Calls For Tariff Cuts To Stimulate Trade

NEW YORK (AP)—President Kennedy called today for a lowering of tariffs in a "new and bold" program to frustrate Communist plans for economic encirclement of the West.

He urged U.S. cooperation with the European Common Market along with lower tariffs to stimulate trade among friendly nations.

If the nations of the West can agree "on a common program of action as extraordinary in economic history as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was unprecedented in military history," the President said, "the long-range Communist aim of dividing and encircling us all is doomed to failure."

"I am not proposing—nor is it either necessary or desirable—that we join the Common Market, alter our concepts of political sovereignty, establish a 'rich man's' trading community, abandon our traditional most-favored nation policy, create an Atlantic free trade area or impair in any way our close economic ties with Canada, Japan and the rest of the free world," he said.

Kennedy picked a conference of industrialists to preview in broad terms the authority he will seek from Congress to give him greater freedom in bargaining for tariff favors.

That authority would reduce levies on some U.S. imports and increase foreign competition with U.S. industry.

But, Kennedy said in a speech prepared for the National Association of Manufacturers congress of American industry: "Economic isolation and political leadership are wholly incompatible."

He said that reciprocal cuts in tariffs on both sides of the Atlantic would increase U.S. sales abroad and thus strengthen both the country and its allies.

He called for economic cooperation between the United States and the European Common Market, an association of six nations in which Great Britain has applied for membership. Some 90 per cent of free world industrial production may soon be concentrated in these two great markets, he said.

"I am proposing, in short, a new American trade initiative which will make it possible for the economic potential of these two great markets to be harnessed together into a team capable of pulling the full weight of our common military, economic and political aspirations," Kennedy said.

The President confirmed speculation that he would ask Congress for power to bargain with other nations for tariff reductions by such entire categories of goods as industrial equipment or textiles, for example, instead of item-by-item.

Tariff negotiations under the reciprocal trade agreements law now are limited to a tit-for-tat easing of barriers on single goods. That law expires next June.

"It must not simply be renewed," Kennedy said. "It must be replaced."

The President did not give any particulars on the authority he wants, but he left no doubt that he would launch at once his own campaign for a greater flow of international trade.

In direct reply to such critics as Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Kennedy emphasized that he was not advocating that the United States join the Common Market with France, Italy, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Neither, Kennedy said, does he propose "that in setting new policies on imports we do away altogether with our traditional safeguards and institutions." He said tariffs can be used to cushion the effect on competitive U.S. industries instead of solely to shut out competition from abroad.

Moreover, he said, the federal government can help affected companies, workers and communities. He told the industrialists he would have more to say on that subject when he addresses the AFL-CIO in Miami Beach, Fla., Thursday.

Reds Stepping Up Military Spending

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet government today announced a record-breaking 1962 budget, including a staggering hike in military spending of almost 50 per cent over that originally planned in 1961.

The new amount allotted to the Soviet armed forces is more than a billion rubles more than the total allotted on both a regular and emergency basis during 1961.

But this is no longer emergency financing, and it indicated the Soviet government expects world tension to stay at a high pitch during the coming year.

In the related field of science, which includes most programs of weapon development, the budget figure was set at 4.3 billion rubles. Last year it was 3.8 billion.

The 1962 budget is 3.6 billion rubles bigger than last year's, but Garbuzov said the government actually planned to spend only 80.3 billion rubles.

He reported a surplus of 1.6 billion rubles for 1961 also.

The Supreme Soviet is certain to approve the budget before conclusion of its session, which also will discuss the nation's 1962 economic plan and approve changes in the civil law code.

total 13.4 billion rubles, or 16.7 per cent of the total, as compared with 9.22 billion rubles originally budgeted for 1961.

The original 1961 figure was boosted tremendously last July because of U.S. military measures taken to meet the Berlin defense crisis, Soviet Premier Khrushchev said then.

The over-all budget for 1962 totals 81.9 billion rubles, Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov told the Supreme Soviet, the parliament of the Soviet Union, which began a session in the Grand Kremlin Palace today.

(There have been no firm estimates for the over-all U.S. budget for the next fiscal year but it is expected to top $90 billion. Of this, the defense outlays are expected to be from $50 billion to $51 billion.)

The current U.S. budget figure is $89 billion, with $46.8 billion for defense expenditures.

(Figure at the official rate of $21.11 for the ruble, the total Soviet budget would be $90 billion with $14.8 billion for defense. But comparison of Soviet and American budgets is almost impossible. Many Soviet military expenses are buried in allocations ostensibly for civilian production.)

Garbuzov told the delegates defense expenditures in 1962 would

Orbital Ride Set In Early January

WASHINGTON (AP)—The first U.S. attempt to send a man into orbit was scheduled today for early January.

The postponement until after the Christmas holidays was announced by the space agency which already has assigned astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. for the attempt to orbit a Mercury capsule.

Previously the hope had been to make the manned shot this year, perhaps as early as Dec. 20.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced that the next Mercury orbital launch definitely will be a manned flight, ruling out any more tests with animals.

Space officials had worked hard to try to get the U.S. orbital shot off during 1961 in order to achieve that goal in the same year as the Soviet Union.

The announcement said that, based upon all available data including a preliminary analysis of the recent orbital flight of the chimpanzee Enos, "it appears no further animal or unmanned flights are needed before attempting the specific Mercury mission—manned orbital flight."

Bureau Of Roads Offers Assurance

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Bureau of Roads assured a North Carolina delegation today it will give consideration to a request for cost estimates of two routes for proposed Interstate Highway 95 running roughly from Kenly north to the Virginia State line.

The group asked for a survey of a route immediately east of both Wilson, N.C., and Rocky Mount, N.C.—which are on U.S. 301.

The North Carolina Highway Department has proposed a route to by-pass those towns west of U.S. 301. The state agency maintained it would be a cheaper route by $6 million and a shorter route by eight miles.

Hal B. Dolley, motel owner at Enfield, N.C., was spokesman for the delegation which included Tom Williams Jr., president of the Enfield Junior Chamber of Commerce; David Raymond, another Enfield motel owner, and secretary of the U.S. 301 Highway Improvement Association which is headed by Dolley; L. W. Locke, Enfield; and Carl Thompson, motel owner of Roanoke Rapids.

Walt Osborne, chief of the bureau office of engineers, said the conference today was arranged by Rep. L. H. Fountain, D-N.C. The conference still was under way shortly before noon.

Dolley asked the question: "Are we orphans?" He remarked that the area this delegation would protect by the east route includes one-third of the state.

He said it would protect a $35 million business of tourists' facilities from Weldon, N.C. to Kenly. He also said that it would be a good idea to use Rt. 481 as the shortest way to U.S. 301 and with that connection, the shortest route from Raleigh, N.C., to Norfolk, Va., could be achieved.

Dolley asked that an impartial survey include the cost of a six-mile dual highway into Wesleyan College at Rocky Mount, with local interests sharing half the cost of the six-mile segment.

Dolley suggested that this offshoot be used with U.S. 301 and 481 for the next 10 years. "Forget all about Interstate 95 in the meantime," he said.

He insisted an expensive bridge over the Wilson Reservoir would be necessary for the west route proposed by the state and added, "It is not good engineering practice."

Dolley said the tourist business in North Carolina ranks third as an income producer, with only tobacco and textiles above it.

He told the conference the request made today for a cost study has been endorsed by the Edgecombe County Board of Commissioners, the Enfield Junior Chamber of Commerce, Halifax County Commissioners. He said Wilson Tobacco Board of Trade asked that the new highway go east of Wilson and Rocky Mount whether or not a cost estimate is made.

Officials Visit Underground Fallout Shelter At Pactolus

PACTOLUS—Open houses, ordinarily considered quite a social event, have gone underground.

At least that was the case with the one given by Mr. and Mrs. George Cherry in their fallout shelter last night, since the fallout shelter is eight feet below terra firma.

Though most aspects of the event followed the usual social customs, such as guests being greeted at the door and all, the purpose of the open house was to show members of the Pitt County Civil Defense Council what had been done. It was members of this council, their wives, and a few out-of-county guests who attended the open house and ate quail underground.

Honor guests included Congressman and Mrs. Herbert Bonner.

The topic of conversation was, naturally, fallout shelters and Civil Defense, according to the host and hostess.

Mrs. Cherry and her sister, Mrs. E. R. Burke, greeted the dinner guests at the door of the Cherry home here and directed them to the fallout shelter, where Cherry, his two daughters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Switzer and Mr. and Mrs. Guilford V. Lewis, received them.

Some 40 guests were present to eat quail, creamed potatoes, garden peas, tossed salad, sweet potatoes and hot cheese biscuits. Vegetable soup was the appetizer and the dessert was coconut cake.

Cherry's shelter, which was constructed this fall, will be the alternate command post for Civil Defense in the event the county headquarters in the Greenville courthouse is out of commission in a crisis.

Last night's guests had a chance to inspect the solid concrete and steel shelter, with its 12-inch thick walls and an entrance door weighing over 3,000 pounds. Actually, the shelter is eight feet below ground, extending two feet above ground, and is covered on top by three feet of dirt.

It cost approximately $10,000 and was designed originally for the Cherry family, or about 60 people. It consists primarily of one room, with a recreation center as one enters the door, an eating center, kitchen and sleeping quarters. There is a shower, too.

Sleeping facilities now consist of two triple-decker beds, but material has been cut for more, which could be assembled if needed.

Pitt's Civil Defense Director J. H. Rose was called out of town and was absent from the event, but a "very nice letter was read" from him, Mrs. Cherry said.

Cosmos Meet For Luncheon

The Cosmos Book Club was entertained by Mrs. Jack Edwards Jr. Dec. 5th at the Greenville Country Club.

A three course luncheon was served the members and special guest, Mr. Jack Edwards Jr. The luncheon table was decorated with arrangements of fall flowers.

Mr. Edwards, who is the director of the Placement Service at ECC, gave a talk on teacher demand vs. supply. There is a great need of qualified teachers everywhere. Mr. Edwards' department makes available to the students a booklet which clearly indicates those majors which receive a high number of teaching requests.

At the business meeting, presided over by the president, Mrs. Don Calloway, the club decided to help three families at Christmas.

There being no further business, the books were distributed and the meeting adjourned.

Modern Eye Beauty Recalls Earlier Periods In History

By IRENE FERRIS

PARIS—(WNS)—If it's "choc" it's chic in France this season. "Choc" is pronounced "shock" by chic young Parisiennes and is their misspelled effort to borrow the English word "shocking."

In order to be properly "choc," a fashion must be nonconformist, original and unusual, or at least of unexpected fabric.

Lacy ski clothes, sued negligees and tailored dance wear are all part of the "choc" vogue.

Leather pleated skirts, snake-skin clinging pants, patent leather pullovers and ponyskin shirt-waists are also a help.

Gold bike-rider's shoes are no longer "choc" enough to be chic. The new shoe shocker is the high boxer's shoe by Carrel, laced with leather. The favorite is in black calf, flat-soled and laced in brown.

Last year's sleeveless dress of heavy wool tweed or suede has lost its shock value this season. Now it must leave one shoulder nude.

The "choc" pantie-girdle for fall and winter comes in convict stripes. Black and white, blue and white, or watermelon and white. Of course, the stripes go round and round.

High-button shoes that are reproductions of Victorian near-antiques have black patent bottoms and taupe suede uppers.

Dominique's big curved handbag has a frame that is shaped to curve around your hip. It hugs your own curve and does much less damage to oncomers who are habitual bag-bumpers.

A color contrast that is economical as well as "choc" is to wear your last year's chignon with your this year's hair shade.

The most "choc" leather dress is a cocktail sheat slightly Mexican in flavor. Fitted tightly down to mid-thigh, it flashes into a series of five 3-inch ruffles below.

But unless it be leather or perhaps tweed, the ruffle is neither shock nor chic for evening. The Chanel suit can still look pretty "choc" to dance in if the fabric is fabulously sumptuous, say white satin embroidered in gold and seed pearls.

Gray flannel becomes "choc" for cocktails or evening if it is bordered around the knees in a great ruff of anthracite cockfeathers.

You can even make your gray flannel sports clothes acceptable if you add leather trim in a sufficiently dissonant tone of beige. Really jarring shades are best, such as rust combined with wine.

Pink champagne and navy blue are new undie shades, but they are really more chic than shock.

Sheer gold arms and legs are the proper treatment to give a bit of "choc" to a soft, black, leather coat too beloved to throw away. So hose and long gloves of sheerest "spun gold" nylon are de rigueur.

The most beautiful of the new crop of "choc" accessories is the Guy Lerein patch-quilt handbag. It's "choc" because the leather patches are all one color.

Antimacassars 1961 Version

The 1961 version of the old-fashioned antimacassars (Victorian doilies which protected furniture from stains caused by macassar oil hair-dressing) is made of crystal clear plastic that's almost invisible.

These adjustable modern arm and head-rest protectors, which come in sets for chairs or sofas, are easily installed with trim pins to hold them in place. Best of all, they can be wiped off even daily with soap or detergent suds.

Use TOWELING Strip For Back Massage

Do you enjoy a brisk massage during your bath or shower? To make an excellent do-it-yourself massage "tool," cut a strip from an old terrycloth towel four inches wide and long enough to grasp at each end. Then latter this up with thick soapsuds and manipulate it across those hard-to-get-at areas of shoulders and back.

Launder this home-style massager in clean suds, along with your bath towels and washcloth.

Here's to a washer and dryer in every home—along with that plump chicken in every pot, and two cars in every garage!

Eight Pre-Christmas Music Programs Set For Campus

The famed Columbus Boychoir will appear on the college Entertainment Series Friday, December 8, at 8:15 in the Wright auditorium. A special feature of the program will be a performance of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

Vittorio Giannini's "A Canticle of Christmas" will be presented Sunday, December 10, at 3:30 in the Wright auditorium by the East Carolina Choral Union of 145 voices, under the direction of Gordon Johnson, and the East Carolina Orchestra with Donald Hayes as conductor. The program will

The group decided to go to the home of a sick member's family to sing hymns in granting the request made by a member of the sick family.

The hostess served refreshments consisting of ice cream, cookies and potato chips. She was assisted by her sister, Mrs. Paul Honeycutt.

Anxious Eyes Again On The Border

The seers warned, months ago, that India and Communist China were working toward border troubles of dangerous proportions.

Prime Minister Nehru's disclosure Tuesday, of threatened military action, highlights again an area of the world which has of late been out of the crisis picture.

According to Nehru, Peiping objects to India establishing military defenses against further encroachments . . . and if such activities are not stopped, the Reds talk of sending troops even deeper into India's claimed territory.

The Peiping attitude is in keeping with Communist tactics around the world: "If you seek to defend yourselves against us, you are threatening us"; and retaliatory measures run the gamut from shrieks of outraged innocence to ruthless military measures . . . depending on what the Commies feel they can get away with.

There's no question but that Red China is most likely to feel they can get away with just about anything in isolated north India. Nehru simply cannot field an army big enough or equipped well enough to repel a Red China invasion.

In answer to a question in the Indian Parliament he said that if his land was invaded "we shall resist and repel it". But those brave words sound hollow when matched against the will and tools at hand to resist any real effort by the Reds' military machine.

If Nehru were not a pacifist by nature, he would be one—and a neutralist, to boot—by the very nature of the difficult position his country is in.

India's needs, following World War II, were predominantly in the field of roads, housing, industries, hospitals, schools and consumer goods. There was reason to think the defense establishment could be virtually ignored or maintained at a minimal level. A foreign policy of neutralism and friendship-for-all would be an economical substitute for the most of armaments.

And thus far it has worked.

But there are anxious eyes cast to the north where dwells a regime that respects only power, and to whom weakness poses an open invitation.

Big Evidence Of Public's Concern

By LYNN NISBET

PRESBYTERIAN—In a previous article we listed a number of colleges affiliated with Baptist and Methodist churches in a partial showing of what the people are contributing to higher education outside the tax field. The most spectacular exhibits are the new colleges at Fayetteville and Rocky Mount, sponsored by the Methodist church.

Of almost equal significance is the new St. Andrews College just opening at Laurinburg under sponsorship of the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina. This represents a planned investment of more than $10 million. Expansion programs at Davidson and at Queens College in Charlotte amount to well above a million dollars. The Presbyterians also are moving along toward a real college at Montreat, where a junior grade institution was established about three years ago.

When the consolidation program tending toward a big central university for the Presbyterians threatened the existence of Peace Junior College at Raleigh local people moved in to save the school, even to the extent of taking the issue to court. The expansion program of a few years ago is being supplemented at Peace by additional facilities.

At Statesville, when Mitchell College also was threatened, the local people rallied to its support, acquired control and title to the property in the name of a local board of trustees, and money is coming in for needed maintenance, expansion and development. Enrollment is increasing and forecasts are that this old and reputable junior college is in for the best years of its life.

OTHERS—Elon College within the past three or four years has finished or has under construction a dining hall, three dormitories and other facilities amounting to more than a million dollars. The people at Salisbury responded to needs at Catawba College by raising in a three weeks campaign $620,000 for a new auditorium, in addition to more than a million in other construction in recent months.

Not so long ago people would have hoisted the suggestion of a college at Mount Olive. Now there is a thriving junior college there, supported almost entirely by contributions from one of the smaller denominations.

Not only the Lutherans but all the citizens of Hickory and Catawba county are interested in the proud of Lenoir-Rhyne and have plowed many hundreds of dollars into its facilities.

Guilford College has seen remarkable growth in its physical plant, representing many thousands of dollars. But the real story there is the "branch" college operated in downtown Greensboro. This does not re-

Anniversary Of A Very Personal Experience

Tomorrow, veterans of World War II will be reminded, in the 20th anniversary of an important date in their lives.

For some, this will always be the most important day; for others, merely "important".

December 7 is not only a date in world history but for millions of men it is also a personal date . . . like a birthday; or a wedding date.

December 7, 1941 was a crossroads in millions upon millions of lives. For awhile it was known as a day of infamy and the phrase "Remember Pearl Harbor" had a meaning and bitterness that has since changed.

Americans used to be looking backwards with the "Remember Pearl Harbor" slogan; now the same words are used in looking into the future. The grimness is still there.

The anniversary which changed the course of so many lives will not go unmarked.

True, few bands will play; and no parades, and few if any speeches for the occasion. But across the land memories will be briefly turned back to an unforgettable year; and capture anew old faces, names and places.

It was all a very personal experience; and it was shared by a nation. Small wonder the date rings loud and clear, twenty years after.

Castro Ideology Stumbles Along

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fidel Castro is an emotional Marxist, not an intellectual one. And, because he is, his road to communism in Cuba should continue to be unpredictable, erratic, opportunistic, and probably bloody and chaotic.

The difference between intellect and emotion in Castro was spelled out in his Saturday broadcast in which he explained how long it took him to become a Marxist-Leninist.

But then, admitting he is taking in Cuba into communism, he said his program will be "Marxist-Leninist but adapted to conditions existing in our country."

This makes him no less a problem for the United States but in time it should also make him a problem for both Moscow and Peiping.

The Russians and Red Chinese are having trouble enough with one another on what road to take without seeing Castro riding off in still another direction like Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito.

It is no wonder Premier Khrushchev, in his Vienna talk with President Kennedy last June, called Castro unstable and said he is not a Communist.

Castro listed the stages in his development which show he became a Marxist as a result of events and not of a cool intellectual determination.

When he was a student in Havana, son of a rich landowner, he was not a Marxist because he was influenced, he said, by capitalist propaganda. This would indicate he was then anti-Communist. He was 23 when he was graduated from Havana University in 1950 with a law degree and a doctorate.

At 26, he said, his thinking was pretty much as it is now. But, if he can be believed, this can hardly have been the case since he then said he didn't become a Marxist-Leninist until he took over Cuba three years ago at 32.

The Cuban Communists had doubts about him. When he was fighting in the hills against the dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista, which he toppled at the beginning of 1959, the Communists refused to take part in a general strike he called for.

Jumps To Conclusions

NEW YORK (AP)—Jumping to conclusions: Every ulcer victim ought to get a hike in pay. He probably got the ulcer from worrying about his job — or from listening to a nagging wife's demands as to why he doesn't make more money. In either case, he needs compensation.

Red-haired girls have the most faithful husbands. I never knew a man married to a red-haired girl who ever deserted her and ran off with a brunette.

The average wife can usually tell when her husband is lying to her; her big trouble is that she is never quite sure when he is telling her the truth.

Many girls buy their boy friends expensive and unusual gifts for Christmas. But the quickest way to win a working man's heart is to present him a new pair of shoes. Nothing pleases him more than to be given a free pair of shoes that fit.

The best companion is a man who laughs when it's raining and does all his griping on sunny days. You may think him mad.

If bigamy were legal, it wouldn't appeal to more than one man in five. Monogamy is so widespread because it fits the true nature of the average man. He is simply too lazy to try to defend himself to more than one woman at a time.

There has been much public tear-shedding over the plight of healthy, vigorous men forced by corporation policy to quit their jobs at 65. But we have met many more strong vigorous men who complain about soulless corporations that insist they keep on working after the age of 30.

A rugged individualist is a fellow who repeatedly interrupts his boss' jokes with, "I already heard it." And sometimes it's just a short step from being rugged to being ragged.

It isn't love that makes the modern world go round. It's salesmanship. Anyone who looks down his nose at the art of salesmanship is kidding himself. No other skill in life is more essential whether a man is dog catcher or lawyer, a businessman or minister.

Every married man, no matter how mouse-like, is secretly certain he knows at least one hatcheck girl he could make time with — if he really chose to.

We all envy each other for different reasons. The man you envy for his money may envy you for your ability to eat red cabbage without paying a penalty.

Other Editors Saying... Comments On Interview

(The Wilson Times)

The world wide reaction to the President's interview with Izvestia, the Russian editor, is altogether laudatory. It made the front pages of the newspapers the world over.

Now that there has been time for some careful scrutiny some of the comments are interesting. As would be expected, the Soviet news agency Tass said the President advanced no new ideas on Berlin.

If Mr. Kennedy had nothing new to say, he certainly made the western position crystal clear. Then he opened wide the door for negotiations on Berlin.

To go further, such newspapers as the one in West Germany, took no offense at the position of "Germany must not produce atomic weapons." The Bonn newspaper replied "the questions of equipment with such weapons and control over them are NATO's business." This was an excellent reply for it shows unity within the NATO nations.

The East German newspaper took the occasion to interpose its commentary in the interview. It is noteworthy that the President's views on East German control over the traffic routes to West Berlin or the lack of free elections in Eastern Europe, were not included.

The French newspapers all applauded the President's position on West Berlin. The British newspapers were the loudest in their approbation. The Guardian described the interview as a victory for the forces of common sense on both sides of the Iron Curtain. It further says "that both governments have recoiled from the abyss which opened be-

The passing of Styles Bridges weakens the leadership of the Republican Party in Congress. Bridges was chairman of the Republican Policy Committee which decided formally what the Republican Party believed and practiced. The leader of the Republicans in the Senate is Everett Dirksen of Illinois. It was Bridges, however, who gave a philosophical tone to the Republicans in the Senate. This was particularly valuable during the Eisenhower Administration when the party was uncertain.

Federal Eye On The Toy-Sellers

By ELMER ROESSNER

A year late and probably too tardy to protect parents much this year, the Federal Trade Commission has announced it is investigating misleading toy advertising directed at children.

It announced that several firms are "under active investigation" and that FTC monitors have been instructed to watch for "dubious advertising of toys" in printed advertising or on television.

Exaggerated demonstrations of toys on television has been going on for some time. They reached a climax before Christmas a year ago. And now that the promoters have taken some of the cream off the market created by juvenile credulity, the FTC is going to investigate.

A few of the more flagrant promoters may be cited this year, but the rest will make another killing and it may not be until 1962 that the FTC will really stop the deception of children and the exploitation of their parents.

YOUNGSTERS FOOLED

"My children see toys demonstrated on television and I try to explain that it's all a trick and they won't work, but the kids believe their eyes more than me and insist I get the toy," a father told me.

"I chase all over town, because the TV-exploited toys are quickly sold out. After I find the particular toy, the kids discover that it won't work the way it seems to on TV, and they cast it aside. They are already interested in some new toy and demanding I get them one."

Consumer Reports, published by Consumers Union, said a month ago:

"Pictured on TV, the model airplanes, the space missiles, the toy rockets, the robot spacemen, the walking-talking dolls and the host of battery-operated toys look larger than life. Airplanes that will not fly are shown diving and zooming across the TV screen. Boats that will not float are shown floating; toy weapons that will not shoot blinch fire and smoke to studio-produced sound effects and pictures of toy rockets are interspersed with shots of a real blast at Cape Canaveral."

"EXPLOIT CREDULITY OF CHILD"

At long last, Daniel J. Murphy, director of the FTC Bureau of Deceptive Practices, has announced the governmental investigation. He added, "any form of misrepresentation in advertising is indefensible but none is more so than exaggeration that would exploit the credulity of a child."

He offered four precautions that parents could take:

1. If toys consist of many pieces, make sure that what you are buying is not just a disjointed portion of what has been displayed in advertising or demonstrated on television;
2. If the toy to be purchased is a mechanical one, either ask to have it demonstrated, or at least assure yourself that it could perform as advertised;
3. In the purchase of a kit of tools or materials (construction, chemical, cooking, etc.) don't be misled by the "models" displayed or advertised, inasmuch as many of these displays may well have required the contents of more than one kit to assemble a single kit.

Don't hesitate to ask the seller for an explanation of any dubious claims for a toy. Although he may be rushed and annoyed, you still are entitled to know exactly what you're buying.

Another precaution: turn off the TV set when extravagant toy commercials come on.

Robersonville Fire Dept. Received Five Calls During The Past Weekend

ROBERSONVILLE—The Robersonville Fire Department received five calls over the weekend.

The busy weekend caused Robersonville Fire Chief Wiley Rogers to urge that everyone use extreme caution in burning grass in this dry weather. He added, "If you do not have adequate help in burning grass, you will not be able to prevent the fires from spreading."

The first fire called on Friday was at 12:30 p.m. Tenants on the H. T. Highsmith farm had started to burn grass and were unable to control the fire. One tobacco barn was completely burned down and another was saved by the firemen. The fire spread and burned over 100 acres of forest about two miles northwest of Robersonville.

The second call Friday was at 4 p.m. when firemen rushed to the home of Seth Williams and saved a house, pack house, and tobacco barn from being damaged by fire which had originated on the Highsmith farm.

The last call Friday was at 10:30 p.m. when Robersonville firemen were called to the farm of Irvin Smith, east of Robersonville, where a forest fire was endangering tobacco barns.

Robersonville firemen received a call at 11:30 a.m. Saturday to a farm in Pitt County where Ben Everett's tenant house caught fire. Chief Rogers reported very little damage was done to the house. The fire spread when a grass fire on the farm could no longer be contained.

About 5 p.m. Saturday, the forest ranger called the Robersonville Fire Department for assistance in fighting a forest fire northeast of Robersonville. The fire burned over about 50 acres of woodland.

Polaris Passes New Test Series

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A Polaris missile raced several hundred miles Tuesday night in the second successful test of a new thrust control system.

The Navy, announcing the success, termed the control mechanism an "advanced device being evaluated for possible use in the third generation A3 Polaris, scheduled to become operational in 1964, with a range of 2,875 miles.

Mack The Knife Draws To Close

NEW YORK (AP)—Mack the Knife and "The Threepenny Opera" end Off-Broadway's longest stage run Dec. 17.

The producers announced Tuesday the "absolutely positive" windup of the Kurt Weill-Bertolt Brecht musical. The show's tune about its fearsome hero was a long-run jukebox favorite.

"Threepenny" opened in 1954 and will have compiled 2,611 consecutive performances at the 299-seat Theater De Lys in Greenwich Village. During the run, 709 performers have appeared in the 22 roles, and 752,000 spectators have paid $3 million at the boxoffice.

Since the advent of the Kennedy Administration, the Republican Party has been split by factionalism ranging from the Conservatism of Barry Goldwater to the Liberalism of Nelson Rockefeller. Senator Bridges sought to establish unity of thought and a lessening of animosities. It is difficult to know who can take his place as the party peace-maker in these years of trial.

Different Type Of Assistance Ready

Farmers throughout the state have been working with the Soil and Water Conservation District program for nearly 25 years — working to conserve their soil. With the assistance of Soil Conservation Service technicians who are loaned to the Soil and Water Conservation Districts, farmers have done a creditable job.

Now a different type of assistance is available to the Soil and Water Conservation Districts — conservation through watershed development. A watershed, which is all of the land that drains into a given stream, is planned and developed to utilize all lands for their maximum use. This is accomplished through the development of a watershed protection and flood prevention project.

Leaf Acreage Allotments Are Being Mailed

Notices of individual farm tobacco acreage allotments are now being mailed to farm operators, chairman J. Lyman Edwards of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee has announced.

The notices are being sent in advance of the Dec. 12 marketing quota referendum so that farmers will know how the quotas they are voting on would affect their individual farming operations for 1962, Edwards explained.

For the 1962 crop of flue-cured tobacco, the Department of Agriculture has announced a total of 716,147 acres available for allotment. This compares with 715,817 acres available for allotment last year.

Growers voting in the referendum may approve or disapprove marketing quotas for the 1962, 1963 and 1964 crops of flue-cured tobacco.

All growers who were actually engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco in 1961 are eligible to vote on the quotas. Also, each person who was either the owner or operator of a farm for which a 1961 flue-cured tobacco allotment was established is eligible to vote even though no tobacco was actually produced on the farm, if any of the allotment was preserved for history purposes.

If at least two-thirds of the growers voting in the referendum approve quotas, the law provides that quotas and acreage allotments will be in effect for the 1962, 1963 and 1964 crops. Penalties for marketing "excess" tobacco will also be in effect, and price support will be available to growers who comply with their farm acreage allotments.

If marketing quotas are not approved in this referendum there will be no quotas, no acreage allotments, no marketing penalties and no price support on the 1962 crop of flue-cured tobacco. In that event, another vote would be held next year on quotas for the following three years.

TRADITION UPHELD
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—As a group of film notables and civic officials watched, Natalie Wood, 23, Tuesday became the 138th film star in 34 years to have her footprints enshrined in concrete in front of Gruman's Chinese theater.

The Soil Conservation Service party consisting of trained technicians who work with the local people in solving their watershed soil and water conservation problems.

The economist interviews the property owners to determine the nature and extent of their problems and to estimate the benefits they would receive if their problems were corrected.

Hydrologists and engineers determine the area and depth of flooding caused by storms which have occurred in the last twenty years. They also select and design floodwater retarding structure sites and design channel improvements to protect areas which have been flooding.

The geologist determines areas that are seriously eroding and the amount of sediment which they produce. Other technicians determine the land treatment measures needed to protect the land from erosion.

All of this information is then developed into a watershed work plan which the local people consider as necessary for the development of the watershed area.

When the watershed plan is completed, it is ready to be installed. The Soil Conservation Service provides the technical assistance and funds for these measures for flood prevention.

Local people install land treatment measures and provide the land for the structural measures. Cost of installing structural measures for drainage and other non-agricultural water uses are cost-shared by local people.

Roy R. Beck, Work Unit Conservationist of Pitt County, states that "75 per cent of the structural work in Grindie Creek has been done, and 50 per cent of the farmers in the watershed have a Basic Soil and Water Conservation plan, developed with the assistance of the Soil Conservation Service in cooperation with the Coastal Plain Soil and Water District."

Conetoe Creek Watershed was approved for planning Nov. 11, by Donald A. Williams, Administrator of the Soil Conservation Service.

The North Carolina State Soil and Water Conservation Committee has assigned a priority number to the Johnson Mill Tail for a watershed program.

It takes three to 10 years to complete a watershed development project; however, these communities who have developed these projects say that they are well worth the effort.

Healing Service Set Thursday

The monthly healing service held at St. Paul's Church will be conducted tomorrow, Thursday, at 7:30 p.m. This is a regular event for the first Thursday in each month. The service is held in the church and is open to persons of all faiths.

The Rector, The Rev. John W. Drake, Jr., will offer a meditation on St. John 5:10-16, as a portion of the service. In a very informal service prayers will be offered for healing and health; Hymns will be sung about the strengthening grace of Jesus Christ; intercessions for the sick will lift up their names before God; the ministrations of the laying on of hands will be proffered to those assembled. These persons can come for their own need or in behalf of others.

CHAPTER 34

The footsteps were as quick and light as those of a child, but before they reached the room Luis Perez knew that they belonged to the little señora. He pressed motionless against the wall and waited, holding his breath with an odd mixture of fear and anticipation.

He had gone over it so often in his mind that he knew exactly how it would be, what she would look like when the door opened, yet when she walked through the doorway it was different, somehow.

She was smaller than he had imagined. Instead of seeing her down at the shining cap of her head, the dim light from outside turned her hair to pale satin, fell in soft patches on her beige dress, caught on the brass clasp of the purse.

She came in quickly without noticing him, reached out to grope for the light switch, touched the fleecy surface of his coat and her fingers hovered there as if startled at the first warning of danger. It all seemed to happen in slow motion, but before she had time to identify what she was touching, before she could even raise her head to look at him, he had seized her, one hand over her mouth, the other grabbing her firmly around the waist.

With his foot he pushed the door closed behind them and they were alone in the room, shadows grotesque and black on the firelit wall.

After the first immobilizing surge of paralyzing fright, Jessie fought wildly to free herself from the nightmare that had sprung at her out of the darkness. She thought only of the need to escape, scratching at the hands that held her, trying to tear them away. Then, because that was impossible, she tried to twist around to face her attacker, and it was when she failed to succeed that the full impact of terror overwhelmed her.

The man beside her became monstrous and inhuman, the personification of evil, huge and dark with malignant eyes, hands that were possessed of super-human strength. In the desperation of her terror she almost broke loose, kicking at him viciously, raising her hands to grope for his hair, his eyes, anything she could seize, but he continued to hold her until her above of strength ebbed away and she lay frightened and trembling in the support of his arms.

She could feel the rapid rise and fall of his chest behind her and knew that he, too, was exhausted by the struggle.

Dimly, from the next room, came the sound of a radio, and voices filtered past the draperies that were drawn across the open window.

Out in the garden there were people who would help her if only, she thought frantically, she could break free long enough to call for help.

He seemed to read thoughts, for he said, "Don't scream, Señora, and I won't hurt you."

His voice surprised her. It was not as she had expected it would be, but soft, reassuring, and it filled her with hope.

"Promise me you won't scream, Señora," he insisted, tentatively loosening the hand that was over her mouth, waiting for her whispered promise, then releasing her completely.

She shrank back against the support of the wall to stare blindly at him without comprehension or recognition.

"She doesn't know me," Luis thought with amazement, forgetting that, although he had been watching her stealthily during the past few days, she had seen him only once, briefly, at the gas station.

"Your handbag, Señora," he said, smiling reassuringly at her.

The fear that clouded her vision slowly receded. She saw a tall young man in a full, tan coat with a narrow, handsome face that was vaguely familiar. She felt as though she should know him, but her mind and body were still stunned, unable to react normally.

"Your handbag, Señora!" His tone sharpened and she noticed for the first time that he was holding a knife, gesturing with it so that the firelight glinted on the blade, and the trembling inside her began again.

Numbly, "With great effort, willing every movement, she held her purse out toward him, but he shook his head impatiently. She started to whimper because her fear was washing over her and she couldn't understand what he wanted.

"Open it!" Her fingers tried to obey, fumbling with the catch awkwardly as though they were swollen. "I have nothing here," she said at last in a small hoarse whisper.

For an instant Luis believed her. "She's found it," he thought. "I'm too late." Then seeing the wide blankness of her expression he realized that her fear had blocked out understanding.

"The stones," he prompted urgently. "In the tobacco pouch. In your handbag. Make it fast."

She was groping in the bottom of the purse, past the papers, the wallet, searching for the cloth surface of the pouch, feeling the sweat break out all over her body as she hunted for it. Her staring eyes never left his except to race swiftly to the menacing blade of the knife, and back again.

His face, the coat, the hand holding the knife, her own sweating anxiety all coalesced into a single image. She remembered suddenly who he was, how he had leaned over her car to throw the bag of stones into her handbag, how he had smiled at her and waved when she pulled away from the gas station, and involuntarily, she gasped, "You're the guide!"

Before it was fully formed, as if he were tuned into the same wave length, Luis saw recognition blink through her terror. He watched her with fascinated detachment, knowing that, if she recognized him, he was going to have to kill her and that the thought was neither a new nor an unpleasant one.

She stopped hunting for the stones, frozen by what she read in his eyes. He was coming toward her slowly and she automatically backed away, sliding along the wall until she was trapped by the dresser. She opened her mouth to scream, but, as in a dream, no sound came out. She kept telling herself that she would awaken and the terror would be gone.

For an instant she closed her eyes and willed herself awake, but, when she opened them, Luis was still there and she knew that she would not awaken. She was unable to make a move to protect herself. The pocketbook fell from her nerveless fingers scattering its contents on the floor, but neither of them noticed it.

Luis was drawn irresistibly toward her in a macabre dance of death, fascinated by her fear, exhilarated by a strange sense of power. They were so much part of each other that they might have been lovers walled off from the rest of the world by their mutual absorption.

Beyond the partition that separated them from the next room someone was restlessly twisting the dial of a radio. Outside there were people strolling in the garden and along the stone walk, but the sounds were remote, without reality.

Everything that lay beyond this room had ceased to exist for Jessie because she was, with silent terror, facing death, and for Luis because he was completely mesmerized by his power over her.

"Beyond the power of speech, beyond the ability to make a move that might save herself, Jessie could only look at him. . ."

The story reaches a climax here tomorrow.

Marines Offer Enlisting Delay

Men wishing to join the Marines, but remain at home for the coming holidays, may now apply for enlistment under the special 120-Day Delay Plan, according to Marine recruiter Staff Sergeant Leo Smith.

Those choosing to enlist now have up to 120 days before departing for recruit training at Parris Island, S. C. This special 120-day period enables the volunteers to better their opportunities for advancement and for additional pay, and at the same time serve a part of his military obligation right here at home.

"Such an enlistment does not hinder the many advantages of schools and on-the-job training," said the sergeant. "More than 400 specialists schools are available to those young men from 17 to 28 seeking an opportunity for advancement."

Sgt. Smith is at the Pitt County Court House every Monday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. for additional details on the Marine 120-Day Delay Plan.

Innoculation Has Future In Trees

AMHERST, Mass. (AP)—Tree inoculation may be the way to remedy—or prevent—tree disease.

So said Dr. Albert E. Dimond of the Connecticut Agricultural Station at a conference on Dutch elm disease control. He said one compound already has been found which, when painted on bark, will climb the water-carrying cells of elm trees. Researchers are now at work, he said, on a compound which would permeate the tree with a chemical agent poisonous to the elm fungus.

Pest Came From The Fish Bowls

NASHVILLE (AP)—It thrives in some people's goldfish bowls, and the Tennessee Valley Authority is out to get rid of it.

It is a pesky fern-like growth called water milfoil which has moved into TVA's vast network of dams and reservoirs. TVA officials say the plant is used in goldfish bowls, later poured down the drain and eventually winds up clogging the intake screens at hydro electric plants. The small weed is even blamed for increasing the mosquito population.

Former Member Of ECC Staff Is Dead

Information has just been received at East Carolina College of the death of Mrs. Estella Striplin, former member of the staff of the college Dean of Women. Mrs. Striplin retired last July after having served since 1953 as counselor of Wilson Hall, dormitory for women.

After an illness of several months, she died at the home of her nephew Arthur L. MacFarland, 2105 Mountain View Drive, Birmingham, Alabama. A memorial service was held in Birmingham, and burial took place in Saint Clairsville, Ohio.

Mrs. Striplin was a native of Ohio. She held the B. S. degree from Kent State University, the E. M. degree from the Chicago Musical College, and the M. A. degree from Teachers College, Columbia University. For a number of years she maintained a studio and taught music in Birmingham. Before joining the East Carolina staff, she acted for more than two years as head resident counselor at American University, Beirut, Lebanon.

She was a member of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church of Greenville and of the Greenville Branch of the American Association of University Women.

Neutrals Deny Applying 'Double Standard'

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)
—Do so-called neutralist nations apply a double standard of morality to acts of the Soviet Union and the United States? Do they criticize the United States more and the Soviet Union less?

Ask representatives of non-aligned countries, and the responses are shock, indignation and categorical denials.

Since Moscow exploded its series of nuclear tests, including an enormous blast with the force of 50 million tons of TNT, increasing complaints about the neutrals have been heard in the United States.

The Russians, after preparing secretly while test ban talks were in progress, resumed their shots Aug. 31, apparently disregarding a conference, then convening in Yugoslavia, of 25 nonaligned nations.

Some Americans expected a tremendous outcry. But the conference brought out a resolution appealing equally to Moscow and Washington to end testing. If the United States had broken the moratorium, it is likely there would have been violent reaction—embassies stoned, demonstrations, a U.N. vote of denunciation. In mid-November, Asian-African neutrals joined the Russians in pushing through two U.N. proposals. One resolution sought to explore possibilities of an international conference outlawing nuclear weapons, ignoring U.S. demands for inspection and control safeguards. The other called for an end to all tests in Africa, and for banning storage or transport of nuclear weapons on African territory.

Neutralist spokesmen point out that in the United Nations they pushed aside both Soviet and U.S. objections in approving a call for a voluntary halt by both sides to nuclear testing. They ignored Soviet bloc objections and approved a U.S.-British call for renewed negotiations toward banning of tests.

"At Belgrade," said Alex Quakron-Sackey, Ghana's permanent delegate, "we did express strong regret at the Soviet tests. President Kwame Nkrumah said he was shocked. But it is not the business of heads of state to condemn. It is to try to find ways of insuring peace. The appeal from Belgrade to the United States and the Soviet Union did not aim at condemning either side, but at seeking solutions."

Neutrals, he indicated, expect more of the United States. He said the United States "does not seem to realize its great power, its enormous potential for applying moral force in the world."

A neutral spokesman who declined to be identified by name or nation, responded this way: "What are Americans afraid of? They have enormous power, enormous wealth, huge possibilities for giving moral leadership. Perhaps we seem to speak more in retort to Americans because there is so much more to retort to—so many statements by politicians, congressmen, newspapers, everybody."

"It is not true that we did not condemn Soviet nuclear tests. We did. But we still oppose new tests by the United States. Two wrongs do not make a right. 'There are enough bombs, probably, in existence now to destroy the world three or four times over. It's beyond our comprehension why there should be more testing."

The head of Afghanistan's delegation, Abdul Rahman Paghwak, said his neutral nation is not concerned "whether bombs are big or little, exploded in the atmosphere, in the ground or under water."

"We voted for the appeal because we oppose all tests in any environment," he said. "We vote with the United States if it is right, with Russia if she is right. We vote against either if we think they are wrong."

"The Soviet proposal for complete disarmament got our support, but not without comprehensive controls. We (Afghans) think the U.S. proposals for controls are the comprehensive ones needed."

Africans among the neutralists—all deny there is a neutral bloc—in general violently oppose nuclear testing in the Sahara by France.

Some Africans profess to feel disillusion with the United States. As one put it, "It is the disillusionment with a friend from whom one expected more."

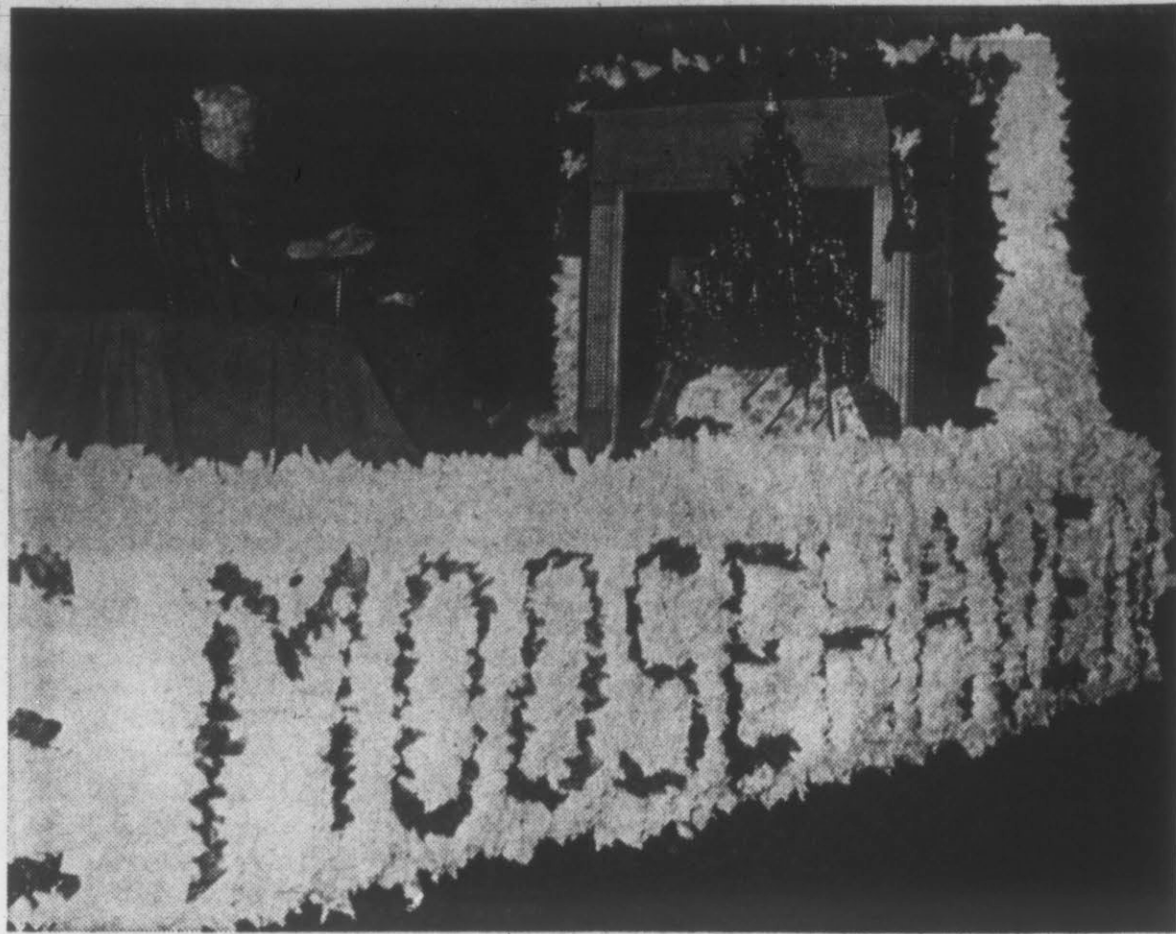

Some think they see changes developing in U.S. policy for the better. One Asian said the United States in the past openly tried to shape and control the policies of other countries, but that there now seemed to be a tendency away from such efforts.

Well-informed Americans on the diplomatic level express guarded optimism about the future. As they see it, the United States gradually is making progress in winning respect among nonaligned nations. They say it probably will take some years, but that eventually there is hope of convincing new nations that the United States stands for freedom of choice in a world society of free states.

First Army's mock battle, involving this capture of scout car by cavalry, marked North Carolina maneuvers in October.

These rugged youths at Civilian Conservation Corps camp in Wisconsin soon found their way into army posts after Pearl Harbor.

Twenty years ago America was still an oasis of peace in a world of war. Hitler's legions were cutting into Russia; France lay prostrate; besieged Britain was gasping with wounds from the air blitz; Japan's armies were spreading over the rice fields of China.

The year, 1941, was drawing to a close. Then on December 7 came the horrible shock that was to end the peace and plunge the nation into war. The Japanese without warning attacked Pearl Harbor.

What was the nation like until that fateful Sunday morning? For weeks there were portents of things to come. U.S. freighters were rushing lend-lease supplies to the Allies and the torpedoing of the destroyer Kearny in the Atlantic aroused a storm of anger. On Navy Day in October, President Roosevelt reported: "We stand ready in the defense of our nation."

The American people were not entirely at peace among themselves. There were camps of interventionists and isolationists. In Congress, a close battle—a victory by one vote—kept the draft alive. Young men started drifting from CCC camps into army posts.

Despite the rumblings, people were enjoying themselves. They flocked to the fall football games and went to see such films as "Sergeant York," "How Green Was My Valley," and "A Yank in the RAF." The housewife could buy leg of lamb for 27 cents, two pounds of coffee for 45 cents and 10 pounds of potatoes for 29 cents. A New York newspaper advertised five and six rooms houses for $5,000.

Pearl Harbor, and the days just before, are pictured here.

An isolationist bloc leader, Charles Lindbergh acknowledges applause at America First rally in Fort Wayne, Ind., in October.

War pictures like "Sergeant York" and "A Yank in the RAF" were popular. Late Gary Cooper, center, portrays York, with buddies, in scene from film about the World War I hero.

Staunch defender of U.S. aid to Britain, Wendell Willkie, who lost 1940 election as Republican candidate for President, addresses freedom rally in New York.

Some fashions adopted a martial look, like this white crepe dinner gown with military jacket.

Deacs Take 77-65 Win Over State

Phants Drop Opener To Blackbirds 69-46

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The season is very young, but so far Wake Forest and Duke of the Atlantic Coast Conference are looking like everything they were predicted to be for the 1961-62 basketball season.

Wake Forest, third-ranked nationally in the Associated Press poll, broke open a tight game in the second half to defeat North Carolina State 77-65 Tuesday night in an ACC game.

Duke, ranked seventh, broke its own school scoring record for a single game, walloping Davidson of the Southern Conference 117-72.

North Carolina edged Clemson 54-52 in the other ACC game to stay atop the conference with a 2-0 mark.

Len Chappell, 6-8 Wake Forest forward, scored 23 points and a 6-4 sophomore, Frank Christie, who played only about half the game, added 14. Billy Packer had 16 for the winners, who play top-ranked Ohio State Saturday.

The Wolfpack made a close game of it in the first half, but trailed 39-31 at intermission and fell farther behind as the second half opened. State's leading scorer was Russ Marvel with 17. Jon Speaks and John Pungner had 11 each.

Art Heyman scored 28 points and sophomore Jerry Mullins 24 in Duke's rout of Davidson. Heyman left the game with 12 minutes left, and reserves saw plenty of action. Buzz Mewhort had 12 points and Fred Kast 10 for the Blue Devils. But the high scorer was Davidson's 6-6 center, Bill Jarman, with 35 points.

The Blue Devils' old scoring record was 115 points to 54 for Clemson in 1953.

Clemson sophomore Nick Milasovich sank four foul shots to tie North Carolina 52-all, but with less than a half minute to go the Tar Heels worked the ball downcourt and Dieter Krause sank a layup for the winning points.

The game was loosely played. Milasovich was high scorer with 15 points. North Carolina's top men were sophomore Mike Cooke with 13, Bryan McSweeney 12 and Jim Hudock 11.

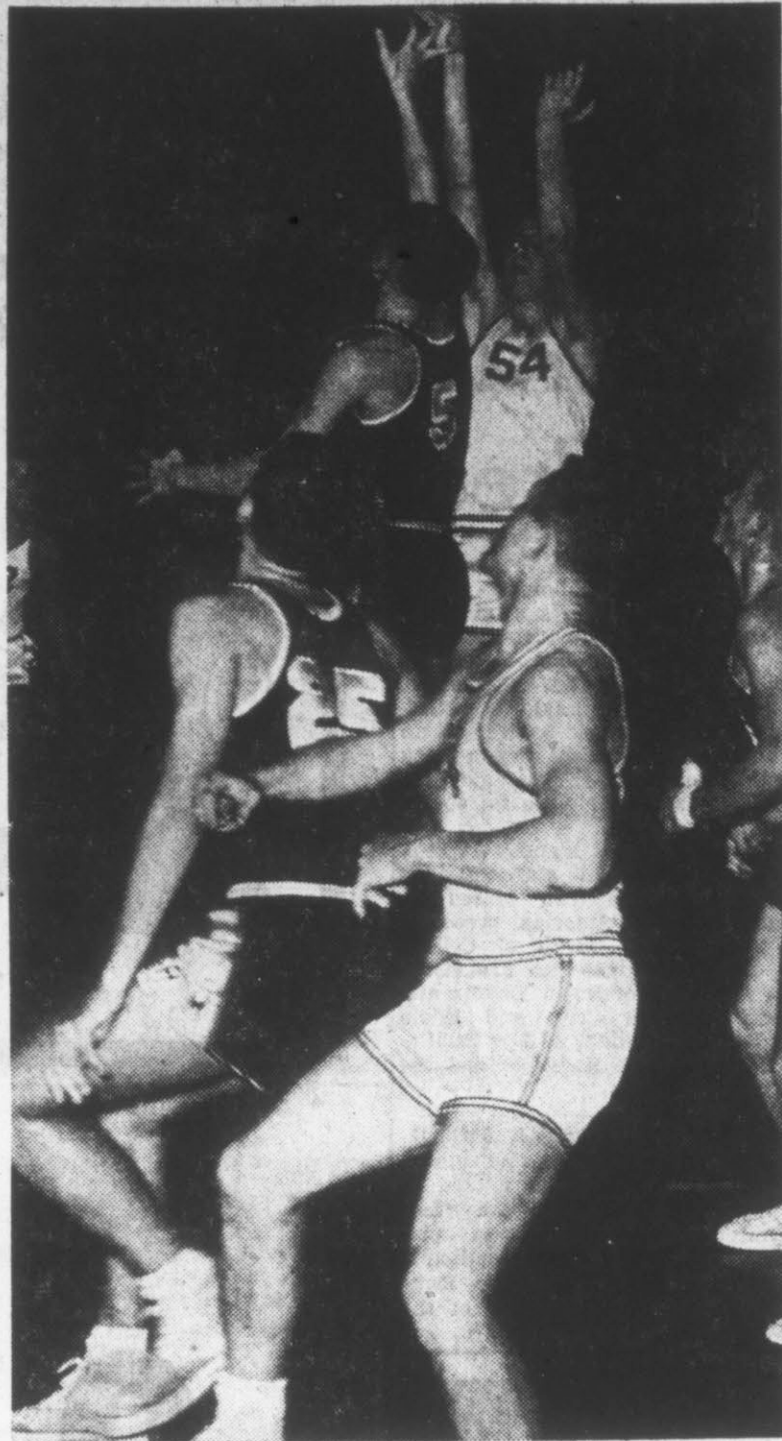

Maryland, loser to Penn State 71-65 in its only start, is host tonight to Georgetown in another non-conference game.

Browns Sign Up Greenville Man

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland Browns Tuesday signed Charley Hinton, tackle from North Carolina College, their third pick in Monday's National Football League draft.

Lou Groza, place-kicking specialist for the Browns, went to Greenville, N.C., to sign the 260-pound, 6-foot-5 Hinton.

Hinton also had been approached by the Dallas Texans of the American Football League, it was reported.

Ohio State Meets Panthers Tonight

By BOB GREEN
Associated-Press Sports Writer
Mighty Ohio State, led by 1960-61 player of the year Jerry Lucas, goes against Pitt tonight in an expected warm-up for Saturday's important clash with Wake Forest, the top game of college basketball's early season schedule.

The Buckeyes, ranked first in an Associated Press preseason poll, handled Florida State with ease in their only outing this season, but could have a tougher time with Pitt, which lost its opener to a good Purdue team, 86-70.

Wake Forest, No. 3 in the preseason poll, won its second straight game Tuesday night, a 77-65 triumph over North Carolina State.

The Deacons broke open a tight game early in the second half and raced out in front, leading at times by 16 points. Lynn Chappell, a burly 6-foot-8, tossed in 28 Cincinnati, displaying midseason form and using substitutes much of the way, humbled Miami of Ohio 63-30. The Bearcats, who include the overtime upset of Ohio State in last season's NCAA championship final in their 24 straight victories, put the accent on defense in the slow-moving game.

In other top games, seventh-ranked Duke set a school scoring record in a 117-72 conquest of Davidson, strong West Virginia raced past Virginia Military 90-56, Southern Methodist disappointed hopeful Oklahoma 61-52, and North Carolina edged Clemson 54-52.

Duke had everything its own way in the easy decision over Davidson—everything but Bill Jarman. Jarman, a 6-foot-6 center, struck for 35 points in the losing cause.

West Virginia, one of the chief threats to break into the national rankings, overcame first-half lethargy in forging its victory over VMI. The Mountaineers hit for 54 points in the last half.

Dieter Krause hit a layup with two seconds left for North Carolina's victory over Clemson, Oklahoma, which engineered an upset of Southern California in its opener, didn't have the knack against the SMU zone defense.

In other major games, Washington beat Montana 73-57, Loyola of Chicago breezed past South Dakota 104-63, The Citadel beat William & Mary 83-76, Butler rapped New Mexico State 77-56, Colgate outlasted Columbia 75-73, Oklahoma State—with Moe Iba, son of coach Hank Iba, contributing 17 points—won its second straight, 63-57 over Texas Western, Texas A&M used a second-half rally to beat Houston 64-49 and San Francisco beat West Texas 100-51 with Bob Gaillard hitting for 41 points.

Luis Arroyo of the Yankees saved 12 of Whitey Ford's first 23 victories this season. Arroyo won 5 games and lost 1 while pitching in relief in Ford's other starts.

The Yankees scored a total of 14 runs in the first four World Series games against the Reds. In the final game they scored 13 runs.

Coach Bo Farley and the Greenville High School Phantoms officially opened their '61-'62 basketball season last night, losing to Rocky Mount by a score of 69-46.

The Phantoms appeared to be suffering from the opening night jitters as they drew a few bad passes and made only 17 field goals.

Knowles Leads Phantoms

Rodney Knowles, a 6-foot 7-inch 15-year-old sophomore, showed a lot of promise as he led all scorers with 29 points. Knowles also found time to grab a lion's share of rebounds. Suffering from a finger injury, Knowles was forced to leave the game in the first quarter. However, he was back in the line-up at the start of the second quarter.

He scored 18 points in the first half and came through with 11 points in the final stanza. Knowles, the Phantoms' center, also displayed accuracy from the foul line hitting nine foul shots.

Seesaw Battle

The first quarter was a seesaw battle with Rocky Mount managing to stay in front by one or two points. Rocky Mount played a slow and deliberate ball game while Greenville was depending on the fast break. At the end of the first period, Rocky Mount led by a score of 13-8.

Greenville appeared to be gaining their confidence during the second quarter as Rocky Mount was only able to outscore the Phantoms 18 to 17. Rodney Knowles scored 15 of the 17 points. Joyner, a substitute guard for Rose High School, played fine defensive ball during this quarter as well as the entire game.

The Phantoms were able to come within two points of the Rocky Mount Blackbirds in the last 30 seconds of the first half. With the score 27 to 25 Rocky Mount added four more points to make the score 31-25 at the end of the half.

Blackbirds Fired Up

When Greenville returned to start the second half, they found themselves facing a fired-up Rocky Mount ball club. The Blackbirds began to set a fast pace by scoring 19 points in the third quarter while Greenville scored only 8 points. At the end of the third quarter, the score stood at 50-33.

The last period of the game found Greenville desperately trying to overcome the visitors. However, Danny Talbott began freezing the ball which once again slowed the pace of the game. With some fine assistance from center Ricky Creech, Rocky Mount increased their lead and went on to win the ball game 69-46.

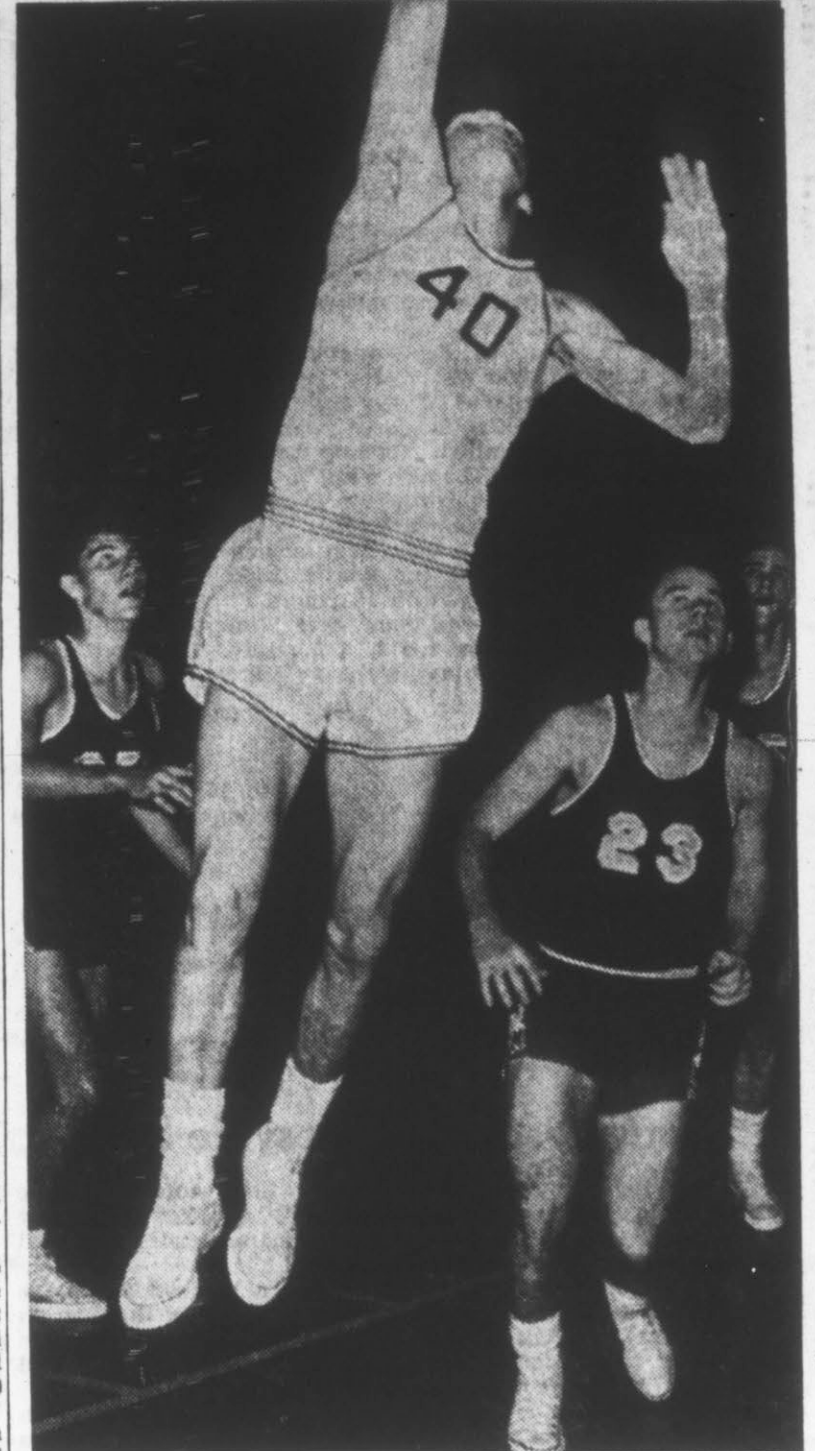

Only Double Figures Man

Rodney Knowles was the only man to hit in double figures for the Phantoms. Kenneth Allen along with Joyner turned in a fine defensive game for Greenville.

Rocky Mount had four men to place in double figures. Wayne Dunn led the quartet with 23 points. Ricky Creech followed with 17 points. Tom Parrish and Danny Talbott scored 15 and 10 points respectively.

Greenville travels to Wilson Friday night for their second non-conference game of the season.

Winterville Tops Ayden 64-49

The Winterville Wolves downed the Ayden Tornados last night for their fourth straight win of the season and their second conference victory by a score of 64-49 after both teams were tied at the half.

At the end of the first quarter Ayden held a one point lead. The entire first half was a hard fought battle on the part of both teams. However, during the third quarter the winners managed to hold Ayden to seven points compared to 23 scored by Winterville. This gave the Wolves a 16 point lead as the fourth quarter got underway. During the final stanza the Tornados were unable to narrow the margin gained by the Wolves in the third quarter.

The high scorer of the night for the winners was James Braxton with 29 points with Steve Worthington also hitting in the double figures with 20 points. For Ayden the high man was Clem McLawhorn with 16 points followed closely by William Edwards with 15 points.

Earlier in the night the Winterville girls also came out of top when they defeated the Ayden girls by a score of 54-26 after holding the Tornados to two points in the first quarter.

Both teams played a fast and rough game with a total of 51 fouls during the contest. Topping the scoring column for Winterville was Carolyn Barnes with 26 points. This was the third game she has been high scorer in so far this season. She also had 26 points in a non-conference game with Bear Grass. Jo Ann Worthington and Cora Worthington also hit in the double figures last night for the Wolves. High scorer for Ayden was a reserve, Sue Murphy, with 10 points.

The double victory last night gave Winterville a 2-0 conference record. Ayden now has a 1-1 record. The next game for Winterville will be Friday night at Belvoir-Falkland.

Rams Lose To Jamesville 58-42

The Robersonville Rams lost their first conference game of the season last night to Jamesville by a score of 58-42 after the winners took the lead in the first quarter and kept it all the way.

By halftime the Jamesville boys had a 15 point advantage over the Rams and the losers were unable to narrow this margin during the second half. Only one of Coach Bob Lee's Rams was able to hit in the double figures, while two of the visiting Red Devil players hit the doubles mark.

The high scorer for Robersonville was Butch Brown with 12 points. He was followed by Donald Mills with 9 and Charles Forbes with 8. Topping the scoring column for the winners was Eddie Brown with 27 points.

However, the outcome of the girls game earlier in the evening was somewhat reversed, but close. Robersonville came out on top 33-31, but not until the final minute of the game.

Judy Taylor hit a free throw for the Ramlets with about one minute and 36 seconds remaining on the clock to give Robersonville the lead 32-31. Dixie Stevenson gained the final point for the winners from the foul line with eight seconds left in the game.

Robersonville was behind until the end of the third quarter when they took a 23-21 lead and from there on it was a close battle till the finish.

The high scorer for the winners was Dixie Stevenson with 16 points. Topping the scoring column for the losers was Linda Gardner with 21 points. The next game for Robersonville will be a home contest with Ayden Friday night.

football player at the Tuesday night banquet.

Charles Ephland of Greensboro and Tommy Mitchell of Burlington were honored as the outstanding high school back and lineman, respectively, of the Central 4-A Conference.

Clayton Piland, East Carolina tackle, won the conference's Kirkland Blocking Trophy.

Spring sports tournament dates were set up for golf, May 14-15 at Boone; tennis, May 11-12 at Wilson; and track, May 12, tentatively at Greensboro with Salisbury an alternate site.

Little-All-America FB Team Picked

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Eleven of the country's smaller colleges have contributed their stars to the 1961 Associated Press Little All-America football team, a team that boasts two players chosen in the early rounds of the pro drafts.

The highly rated pair is Ray Jacobs, 270-pound tackle from Howard Payne College in Brownwood, Tex., and Leroy Jackson, sprinter and halfback of Western Illinois.

Jacobs was chosen in the first round of the American Football League draft by Houston. He also was named on the 17th round by Dallas of the National Football League, and there is a controversy over which club holds a prior claim because he immediately signed contracts with both.

Jackson, third in the NCAA 100-yard dash last spring, was chosen on the first round of the NFL draft by the Cleveland Browns and was the third choice of the Boston Patriots in the AFL. He recently was named the outstanding back in Illinois intercollegiate circles.

Others on the front line with the huge Jacobs are ends Drew Roberts of Humboldt State and Powell McClellan of Arkansas Tech; David Baxter of Tennessee Tech in the other tackle slot; guards Dan Lewis of Wofford and Wendell Williams of the State College of Iowa; and Curtis Miranda of Florida A & M at center. All are seniors with an average age of 21. Their average height is 6-2 and their average weight 218.

In the backfield with the speedy Jackson are Bobby Jancik of Lamar Tech, Gary Snadon of Pittsburg, Kan., State, the nation's top small college team, and Joe Iacone of West Chester, Pa., Teachers. Iacone is the only junior.

The backfield averages 186 pounds and 5-11 in height.

Two of this year's first team members moved up from the second team a year ago, McClellan at end and Miranda at center. The Arkansas is rated a better-than-average punter as well as an adept pass receiver. Coach Jack Gathier of Florida A & M says Miranda is extremely agile for one of his size.

Should Jacobs and Jackson reach professional stardom they will follow the trail blazed by such Little All-America predecessors as R. C. Owens of College of Idaho, now with San Francisco; Steve Myhra of North Dakota and the Baltimore Colts; and Eddie LeBaron of College of the Pacific, the Washington Redskins and the Dallas Cowboys.

UNITY PLANS MOVE AHEAD

NEW YORK (AP)—The United Church of Christ has agreed to join with the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., the Episcopal Church and the Methodist Church in exploratory talks looking toward eventual unity of the four denominations.

W. Va. Appears On Way To Loop Title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Unless an uprising occurs in South Carolina this weekend, West Virginia's powerful Mountaineers appear well on their way to another Southern Conference basketball championship—and the season isn't even a week old.

With a 90-56 rout of Virginia Military Institute's darkhorse Keydets Tuesday night, the Mountaineers ran their conference and over-all mark to 2-0 for the season and showed they mean business in the league race.

The biggest test will come Friday and Saturday when the Mountaineers invade The Citadel and Furman, respectively. Both the Bulldogs and Paladins also are 2-0, but only one of the four victories has been inside the league.

That conference triumph was posted Tuesday night by The Citadel, which turned back William and Mary 83-76. West Virginia beat the Indians in its opener last Saturday night by 69-55.

Furman made it two in a row against non-league opposition Tuesday night by trouncing Wofford 80-68, while Davidson went down to its second straight defeat outside the conference, bowing to Duke 117-72.

The Citadel, led by Gary Daniels and Keith Stowers, survived a half-court zone press in the final 4½ minutes to subdue William and Mary. Daniels hit for 24 points and Stowers 21.

Furman hit on 51.6 per cent of its shots in beating Wofford. Jerry Smith and David Selvy led the Paladins with 31 and 17 points, respectively.

William and Mary is at Georgia Tech tonight, while George Washington goes after its second victory in New York against St. John's.

Silk garters were once banned in Boston.

Winterville's James Braxton led the Wolves to victory over Ayden.

Herman Daniels of Bethel led the scoring against Stokes-Pactolus last night.

but in the third stanza the Indians pulled ahead and were leading by four points going into the fourth quarter. The winners managed to increase this lead before the end of the game.

The high scorer of the night for Bethel was Janet Cobb with 20 points. She was followed closely by Carolyn Manning and Mary Chesson with 18 points respectively. Topping the scoring column for the Bluejays was Lillian Crisp with 24 points.

The next game for the Indians will be a conference contest Friday night with Farmville. On the same night Stokes-Pactolus will meet Grifton in an away contest.

Brothers Fired At Each Other

By TOM HENSHAW

AP Staff Writer
The battle report from Percival Drayton, commander, United States Navy, was laconic and formal.

"In passing," he wrote, "I engaged the batteries on Bay Point and Hilton Head, but soon getting out of range of the former, I directed my fire on the latter until signal was made about 2:30 to cease firing."

Cmdr. Drayton's report omitted a personal note: The commander of the enemy forces at Hilton Head was his brother, Thomas F. Drayton, brigadier general, Confederate States Army.

It was one of several occasions during the American Civil War when brother actually fired on brother.

Both Drayton boys were born in South Carolina, sons of an old aristocratic Southern family with roots deep in Beaufort County, the scene of their wartime meeting in November, 1861.

Their paths diverged early. Thomas went to West Point, then left the Army to become a plantation owner and railroad president in South Carolina. Percival joined the Navy as a midshipman at 16.

When war came, Percival was an ordnance officer at the Philadelphia Navy Yard with such strong Union sympathies that he insisted his Navy Register be changed to read "citizen of Philadelphia."

For this, the legislature of South Carolina officially declared him "infamous," to which the Union's Drayton retorted:

"I am for crushing the rebellion if we come down to the original three million (people) of the first Revolution in doing so, and I am quite willing that I should not be one of the survivors."

Percival Drayton commanded the sloop Pocahontas in Flag Officer Samuel F. Du Pont's fleet that set out to capture Port Royal, S.C. in the fall of '61. He, and everyone else in the fleet, was well aware that his brother Thomas led the Confederate defenders.

Although it cannot be said for certain, it is entirely probable that sometime between noon and 12:30 p.m. on Nov. 7 Thomas Drayton was dodging shells fired from his brother's ship. Neither Drayton was injured.

Pocahontas, arriving late on the scene, went into action against the fort on Hilton Head at noon. A half hour later, Gen. Drayton left the fort to muster his reserves—and still later to direct the Confederate evacuation.

Percival Drayton, who died shortly after the war ended, never mentioned the affair for the record. Neither did Thomas Drayton, who took up farming in Georgia after the war and later became an insurance man in Charlotte, N.C.

But, the story goes, their aged mother, Ann, mortally ill not far from the Port Royal battleground, heard of the engagement on her deathbed.

"Percy fired at Tom," she murmured. "Tom fired at Percy."

And the words sounded incredulous.

Open House At Cherry Hospital

The North Carolina Mental Health Association has been invited to attend the Christmas Open House at Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro on Wednesday, Dec. 20. It was announced today by Mrs. J. B. Spilman, executive director of the Mental Health Association. The invitation was issued by Dr. M. M. Violets, superintendent of Cherry Hospital, on behalf of the patients. The Open House will be held from 9 a.m. until 12 noon. Each year patients decorate for the holiday season, using originality and showing enthusiasm in making the hospital into a real show place, Mrs. Spilman said. The public is invited to attend the Christmas Open House. It is hoped many individuals and clubs will avail themselves of the opportunity to be guests of patients and staff of the hospital.

Centenarian Has No Medical Need

BOWMANVILLE, Pa. (AP).—Henry G. Musser, a retired farmer celebrated his 100th birthday Tuesday and like all others in the state who turn 100, received a congratulatory plaque from the Pennsylvania Medical Society. It was presented by Dr. Robert R. Bender, a local physician, who said: "When I was asked by the society to make the presentation I thought it should be made by his own physician. But I found to my surprise that despite his advanced age he didn't have one." "I don't need a doctor," Musser commented. "I keep active. That does it."

Trying To Sell Igloos In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP).—Here's a switch from the old story about Americans trying to sell refrigerators to the Eskimos: Canadians are trying to sell igloos to Americans for fallout shelters. They're not the old-fashioned ice and snow igloo but are of a fibrous plastic material in an igloo shape and can accommodate eight persons. Canada's civil defense organization has approved them as fallout shelters.

Japanese POW Can Laugh Today About 'Short War'

By CONRAD FINK
 TOYOTA, Japan (AP)—Kazuo Sakamaki laughs today about being the first Japanese prisoner captured by the Americans in World War II.
 He was the skipper of a midget submarine assigned to sneak into Pearl Harbor on that Sunday morning two decades ago—Dec. 7, 1941—and torpedo the battleship Pennsylvania.
 Sakamaki's attack turned into a fiasco that ended with him being washed up nearly drowned at the feet of a U.S. Army sergeant on a sandy seashore in Hawaii at dawn the next day.
 Now the well-to-do chief of exports for Japan's largest automobile manufacturer, Toyota Motor Co. Ltd., Sakamaki looks back at his two-day war against the United States and says: "Pretty short war. The Pearl Harbor attack started World War II for me—and ended it."
 It wasn't until this year that he got a look at Pearl Harbor—aboard a cruise ship.

 The Japanese government declared him dead rather than admit that an imperial navy officer had submitted to the disgrace of capture.
 Sakamaki said he and his single crewman, Petty Officer Kiyoshi Inagaki, left Japan's Kure naval base on Oct. 16 aboard "mother sub" No. 24 bound for Pearl Harbor.
 Their midget sub, 48 feet long and packing two 18-inch torpedoes was strapped on No. 24's deck. They surfaced off the harbor the evening of Dec. 6. Four other two-man subs already had arrived aboard other mother subs.
 "We could see the stars twinkling. There were many lights visible for the shore," he said. "I listened to music from a Honolulu radio station."
 All hands were issued sake for a farewell party. About midnight Sakamaki and Inagaki climbed into the midget sub and set off for Pearl Harbor, seven miles away.

 The midget ran into trouble the moment it was launched. Its steering gear went out of order and the sub bucked through the sea "like a wild horse."
 "Every time I started the engines the nose popped up to the surface," Sakamaki said. "So for three hours Inagaki and I carried heavy lead ballast from the stern to the bow. This exhausted us."
 When the sub finally got on course Sakamaki put up the periscope and saw "two American patrol boats so close I could see the seamen running on the deck."
 The Americans dropped depth charges "and the sub was twisted violently this way and that." Both Japanese received minor wounds and the sub's torpedo launching mechanism was wrecked.
 "But I made up my mind to enter the harbor and dash into a battleship and explode the torpedoes that way," Sakamaki said. Then the sub hit a coral reef just outside the harbor and came to the surface. Sakamaki saw an American destroyer close by and U. S. guns on the shore.
 "An American officer told me later the destroyer was too close to shoot at me with its big guns," Sakamaki said. He quickly backed the sub into deeper water to wait until darkness for another attempt to enter the harbor.
 "By this time the bad air and gas in the sub and the tension had almost killed us," Sakamaki said.
 Repeated attempts to enter the harbor the night of Dec. 7 failed and Inagaki argued they should withdraw to take part in future attacks on San Francisco, Manila, Singapore and Sydney (Australia).
 Sakamaki agreed and headed the sub for Lanai Island, southeast of Pearl Harbor, where they were to be picked up by the mother sub.
 "At dawn on Dec. 8 we surfaced off what we thought was Lanai," Sakamaki said, "but it turned out we were near the northeast coast of Oahu Island—way off course."
 "We hit another reef and were unable to float off so we set the sub on fire and jumped overboard. I was so exhausted I was unable to swim, so I just floated on my back. Inagaki tried to swim to shore and I learned later he drowned.
 "I fell unconscious while floating and the next thing I remember I was being picked up on the beach by an American Army sergeant."

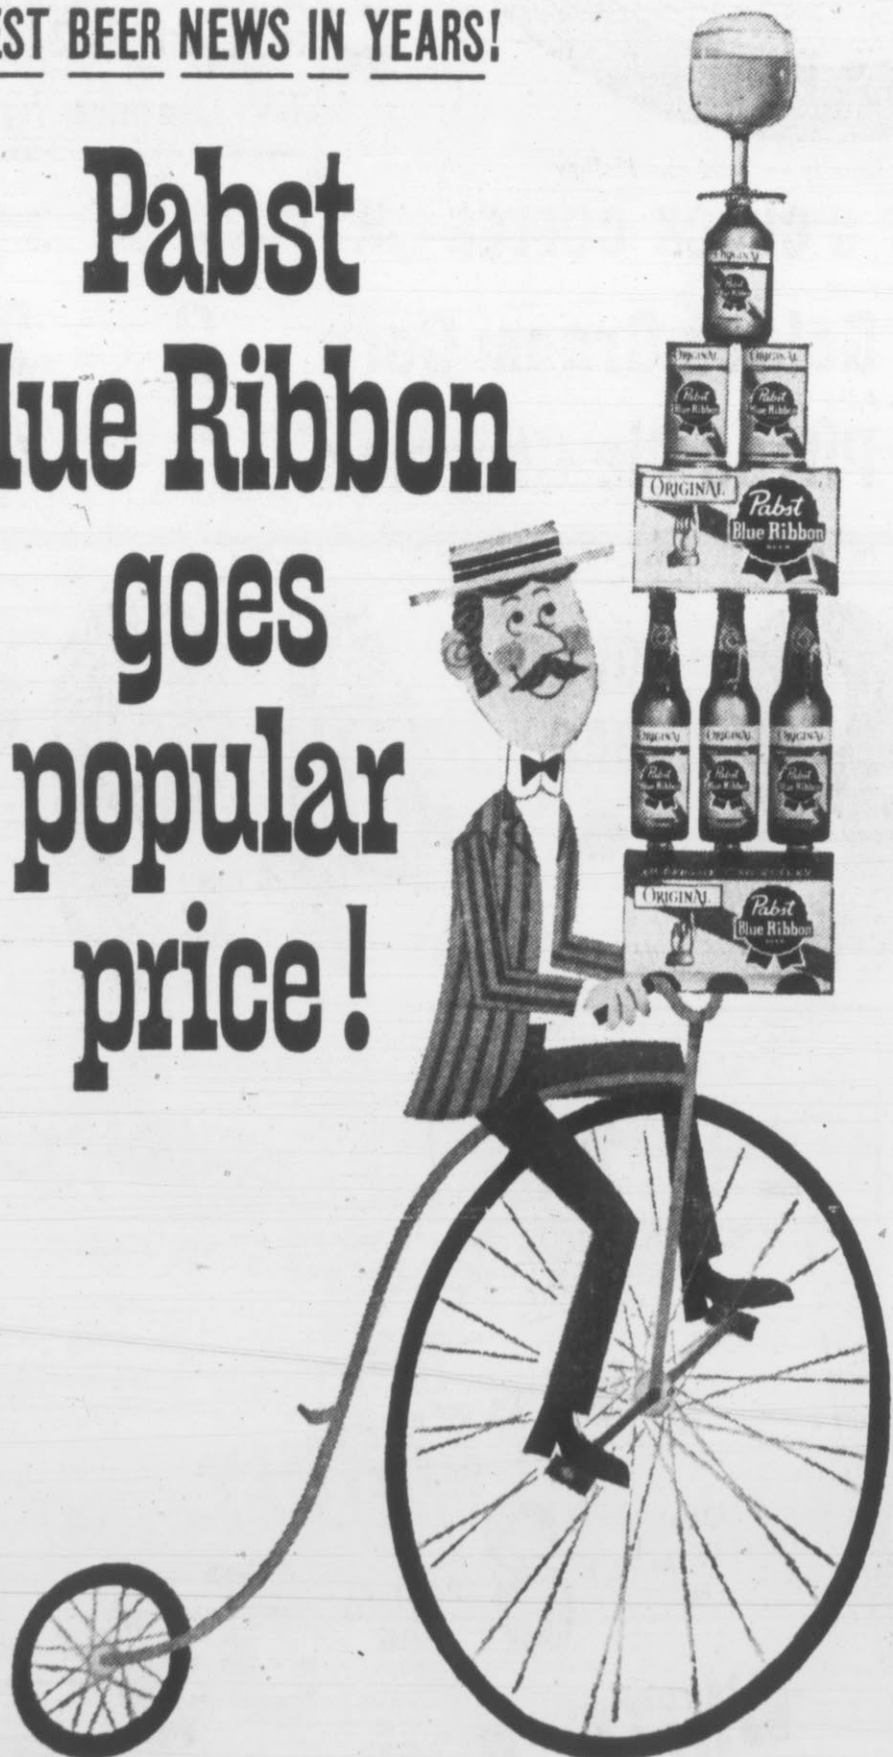

Leo Carrillo Tossed Bouquet To His Love

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—As a last gesture of a full life, Leo Carrillo tossed a bouquet to his longtime love, California.
 The result is on the bookstands now — "The California I Love" Prentice-Hall ($7.50). While it tells little of the man Carrillo, it is a splendid view of a California that is fast disappearing among the tracts and freeways.
 "The adobe is my birthstone," he writes, telling of his beginnings near the birthplace of Los Angeles itself—the Plaza. He carefully neglects reporting the year he was born. He was an actor who wanted to play the role of the dashing caballero even when he was pushing 80.
 Carrillo had good reason for his pride in California. His great, great grandfather had made the trek from Mexico with Father Serra and Capt. Gaspar de Portola in 1769. The Carrillos couldn't have gotten here sooner unless they were Indians.
 The first half of "The California I Love" is a fascinating remembrance of the sleepy pueblo of Los Angeles. The Angelenos had their fiestas and horse races to brighten the pleasant monotony of the weather.
 The book throws some light on the rather cloudy origin of the name Hollywood. Carrillo wrote that a real estate promoter named Wilcox was viewing some property he had marked for subdivision. He asked a Mexican boy the name of some hillside plants that were bright with red berries.

 "In Spanish it is toyon, but in English it is holly-wood," said the boy, copying the Spanish custom of following a plant name with "madera," meaning wood.
 Carrillo (he pronounced it cay-reel-you) treats his acting career rather briefly in the book. His introduction to show business seems casual, being an outgrowth of the dialect stories he heard in his youth.
 He became a vaudeville headliner with his Chinese, Mexican, Italian and Japanese stories. In those days a comedian could use dialect in a warm-hearted way without being accused of ridiculing a minority.
 Carrillo was best known to this generation as Pancho of "Clisco Kid" but he had little love for the TV series.
 Leo Carrillo left his testament and his mark. The Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's Day won't seem the same without him.

Christmas Business News Leaning To The Jolly Side

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—The Christmas spirit must be inspiring both the business statisticians and the business doomsayers. The news leans heavily today to the jolly side. The predictions, as you might guess, are even cheerier. Most official figures pouring out of government agencies and industry's haunts plot an upward trend in business activity. Many sight records in the making for December—such as in retail sales volume. Most of the rest chart the emergency from the early fall lull and resumption of the advance in industrial output and orders. The soothsayers go farther. One group of business economists reporting over the weekend to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce sees 1962 setting records in production, income and profits. Backing them up are such items as these: Steel orders finally have begun to mount — perhaps to build up stocks in the first half of 1962 as a hedge against a possible steel strike in the summer. Mills are beginning to plan increased output. This has been holding close to 70 per cent of capacity for some time, but some say it could soon rise to 80 per cent. Auto retail sales have perked up. And some think output this month could top last December by 20 per cent or more. One tip here is that consumer debt has begun to rise, with most of the increase in installment credit in auto paper. The latest reported gain is the biggest in almost a year. Spending on construction, both current and planned, has begun to rise. The Department of Commerce is particularly impressed by the outlook for home building. It estimates 1.3 million private housing units will have been started this year by New Year's Eve. And it thinks that next year another 1.4 million will be going up. Public housing is put at 50,000 units this year and 55,000 next. Business spending for new plant and equipment also is expected to rise next year. Higher costs will account for some of the increase. But if output and profits advance as some hope, the physical volume of construction will be up, too. At the consumer level, economists note with joy that sales volume is on the increase. The latest weekly figure on department store sales show them 6 per cent above the like week of 1960. Predictions of total Christmas sales this year run 4 to 6 per cent ahead of last year. Shoppers are reported buying carefully but not pinching pennies when they find what they want. Both merchants and manufacturers are taking comfort from the state of the money market. The money managers are seeing to it that the banks have plenty of reserves for financing Christmas trade and for making loans when and if industrialists want them for expanding activity. And the economists have their own source of comfort. Despite all the optimism that has bubbled up of late, there's no sign yet of a runaway boom psychology that could be dangerous. Purchasing agents report ordering is still being held within realistic bounds. Expansion plans are being tailored close to reasonable expectations of industrial demand.

Hijacked Train Raced To West Berlin Safety

BERLIN (AP)—A daring railroad engineer and 24 friends and relatives hijacked an East German train Tuesday night and roared at 50 miles an hour past startled border guards to safety in West Berlin. "We knew we would make it," said Harry Deterling, 28, the engineer. He said food shortages and political pressure had made life unbearable in East Germany. Seven passengers not in on the plot—including the angry conductor—chose to return to the Communist sector. An East German switching locomotive pulled the steam locomotive and eight cars of the escape train back over the little-used section of track to East Germany. The well-planned escape—hastened by reports the Communists were planning to block the section of track Dec. 10—came off without a hitch. Border police, taken by surprise, didn't fire a shot. Deterling said he began planning the escape last Thursday with Hartmut Lichy, his fireman, members of his family and friends. The escapees included the engineer's mother, wife and four children.

Deterling arranged to make an "acquaintance run" on the Oranienburg-Albrechtshof line. "Everybody was told to be at Oranienburg station for the departure of the regular late evening train to Albrechtshof. We were 21 in all. That included an 8-day-old baby born only a day before we planned the escape." The other four got on at Falkensee, the next to last stop. Albrechtshof, the last stop on the line, is about a quarter of a mile short of the border. Deterling said a transport policeman aboard and the conductor went wild when they realized the train wasn't stopping at Albrechtshof. "But what could they do but shout?" Deterling related smilingly. "We had disconnected the emergency braking system. They couldn't stop the train."

'Hurry Up And Wait' Tactics Charged To Military

By RALEIGH ALLSBROOK
NEW YORK (AP)—Complaints of poor morale and supply shortages are arising at some of the camps where National Guard and reserve units have been called back into service.

As during World War II and the Korean War, the military is being accused of using "hurry up and wait" tactics—hurrying men into uniform and then not being prepared for them.

A teacher writes that much of his time is spent picking up cigarette butts and leaves.

Rickety barracks stripped partially of equipment are reported being used in another camp. Still another is said to have issued obsolete and non-operation weapons.

Has the military actually let down the men it called back to the colors or are the complaints, as draft director Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey commented, simply the traditional griping of soldiers?

"If any Army unit ever did anything without griping they'd either be lying or mutes," Hershey said.

Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr Jr. told a news conference Monday that he feels the mobilization had gone "exceedingly well."

He said that, on the basis of inspections and reports from reserve-unit commanders, "the morale of the overwhelming majority of individuals called to duty is high."

"We have received only a few more than 1,000 letters of complaint throughout the Army," he said.

Pentagon sources say that out of 119,000 Army reservists and Guardsmen called back, less than 1 per cent have put in complaints.

This estimate, the sources said, was based on letters and other communications received at all Army levels.

Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison, president of the National Guard Association, said "the griping of a few individuals is casting a shadow upon the patriotism and spirited response" of the Guardsmen and reservists.

"These complaints, in some instances," he said, "are from men who have already served on extended active duty and resent a second callup when so many of their friends and neighbors have performed no military service."

He said there should be changes in the law and policy.

The matter reached a climax last week when President Kennedy devoted a part of his news conference to answering critics.

The President, whose own record includes heroic wartime service in the Navy, took particular note of complaints about Ft. Lewis, Wash.

He said the men there may be serving in a cold and windy camp, but they "are rendering the same kind of service to our country as an airplane standing at 15-minute alert at a SAC base in Omaha is rendering.

"We call them in to prevent a war, not to fight a war."

It is natural for the men to be unhappy, the President said. "It is a heavy sacrifice. They go to camps which have perhaps been newly opened or where the equipment may not be immediately available."

But he asked them to recognize that they are contributing to the security of their families and he held out hope they may be sent home short of their required 12 months of service.

The President said he called reserve units up this summer to strengthen the armed forces because we "want to have a choice between humiliation and holocaust."

Maj. Gen. Edward H. McDaniel, Army inspector general, is investigating conditions at Ft. Lewis, where Rep. Alvin O'Konski, R-Wis., has made accusations of "criminal negligence."

The Wisconsin representative started a controversy over whether the Army made adequate preparations there to take care of his state's 37th Infantry Division.

He called it a "lost division" with obsolete and poorly operating weapons and short supplies.

This brought a denial by the Army and a charge from the division commander, Maj. Gen. H. A. Smith, that O'Konski had damaged the unit's morale and made the troops appear a "bunch of crybabies."

Most of O'Konski's charges also were contradicted indirectly by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who followed him on an inspection of the camp.

Proxmire reported he found many things wrong, but that the Army was making a sincere effort to straighten them out.

The major trouble, he said, was that the Army hadn't told the men exactly why they were called up, how long they must serve and why they were sent to Ft. Lewis, instead of Camp McCoy in Wisconsin.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., also was a party to the dispute. He accused O'Konski of doing a "great disservice" to the division by his "extravagant charges."

Other complaints have developed at Ft. Polk, La., where National Guardsmen from a number of Southern and Western states have been training.

A group of nearly 100 enlisted men from the 49th Armored Division there wrote a letter to Rep. Joe Kilgore, D-Tex., complaining about conditions.

They also protested that while they had prior service "back at home there are those who have never been called to duty."

Earlier, reporter Ben House of the Columbus (Ga.) Ledger visited the camp and found conditions

"deplorable."

Guardsmen were living in dusty, rickety barracks, long abandoned and partially stripped of such necessary equipment as toilets, laboratories and light switches, he wrote.

Another reporter, Buddy Threatt of the Lake Charles (La.) American-Press, found conditions somewhat different, however.

He said they "seem no better—nor worse—than the regular Army barracks used by GIs in other times."

An information officer at the camp declared that since a part of it had been closed since 1954, some of the buildings naturally "were going to deteriorate."

But he said that conditions were improving rapidly and that many of the shortages complained of already have been filled.

Congressional complaints also arose over Air National Guard units called up and sent overseas.

Rep. George Huddleston, D-Ala., said he had received reports that some members of the 117th Reconnaissance Wing, now based in Paris, were just sitting around with nothing to do.

Pentagon officials blamed it on air traffic control problems and said discussions were under way with French authorities to clear up the situation.

Rep. R. Walter Riehlman, R-N.Y., also complained about conditions in Phalsbourg, France, where two National Guard air units were sent.

On a visit, he said, he found they had legitimate complaints about food, living conditions and mail service.

Reporter Jack Folsie of the San Francisco Chronicle visited Ft. Ord in California and said troops were spending their time waiting for equipment, listening to old lectures, seeing old training films and "manicuring" their barracks areas.

One soldier said that all he had done was paint numbers on walls and posts.

Despite the criticism of some camps, reports from other military installations indicated few complaints.

In Kansas, for example, Sen. Frank Carlson, R-Kan., said facilities were excellent.

At Ft. Stewart in Georgia, about 1,400 members of National Guard an "reserve units have been processed and are being trained. Conditions were reported adequate.

Question Helps In Emergencies

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Inadvertently giving the wrong address in the confusion of reporting an emergency is being remedied by a single question from dispatchers here:

"What is your nearest cross street?"

Fire Division officials say the question not only makes the caller stop to consider exactly where he is, but also pinpoints the location in cases where several streets have similar names.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA)

North Carolina egg markets steady to slightly stronger. Supplies barely adequate to short, demand good. Prices paid producers for clean, ungraded eggs, delivered nearby grading stations on a grade-yield basis, cases exchanged: Grade A large, whites 35-36, medium, whites 28-29, small, whites 22-24.

NEW YORK (AP)—A recovery by the savings and loan shares and a firm tone among aircraft-missiles highlighted a mixed stock market early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 30 at 265.70 with industrials down 50, rails up 10 and utilities down 40.

Most key stocks showed gains or losses of fractions to about a point. The badly battered savings and loans rebounded from fractions to about 4 points as traders picked them up at depressed prices.

The aircraft-missiles were bolstered by a news report that the Pentagon is underestimating the $51 billion in appropriations for the next fiscal year compared with an estimated $47 billion in defense spending in the current fiscal year. The fighting in Katanga underlined the importance of preparedness.

A moderate recovery by the electrical equipment stocks and an advance by Big Three motors as reports came of higher auto sales were other features. Steels, tobacco, drugs and chemicals were mostly lower.

Financial Federation gained more than 4 points while San Diego Imperial came back fractionally. Recoveries exceeding 2 were made by United Financial and First Charter Financial. Great Western Financial recouped more than 1.

Douglas Aircraft, up more than 1, showed the best response to the Pentagon news.

Chrysler, up more than 1, was the star among the big automakers. General Motors gained about 1.

General Electric won back about 1 of recent losses on news of damage suits. Westinghouse Electric was steady.

The Dow Jones Industrial average at noon was off 33 at 730.98.

Prices worked irregularly higher on the American Stock Exchange in heavy trading.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds declined.

Other sections of the exhibit present the latest information on the role of nuclear energy in the nation's defense and the improving of its citizens daily lives.

To complete the image of atomic energy, sections of the exhibit present the latest information on the use of nuclear energy for marine propulsion, production of electricity and its uses in agriculture, industry, and medicine.

Other sections give a forecast of future uses in aircraft and rocket propulsion.

Three noticeable interruptions in the processional extended the length of the event slightly. At one point, spectators on the eastern end of the parade route began to disperse. The streets were crowded with the milling spectators when the final segment of the parade rounded the corner at Fifth Street and Five Points.

W. C. Taylor Jr., chief marshal for the parade, said today Tuesday's crowd seemed to be the largest ever to view a Greenville Christmas parade. The colorful and noisy processional was described generally as at least equal in size to any in the city's history.

A traditional early-December event for Greenville since the Merchants Association undertook the project in 1935, the parade has gathered momentum each year for the last 15 or more years, according to the Merchants Association spokesmen.

Greenvillites participating on parade committees, in addition to Taylor, included: J. A. Collins Jr., E. S. Webb, Mrs. Sam White II, Mrs. Clay Furnette, Charles Horne, C. W. Harvey Jr., Jack Wallace, Charles Hudson, Herbert Wilkerson, Jim Mallory, F. B. Johnson Jr., E. B. Drum and Reagan Jones.

Dog Wardens Of 25 Counties Gathering Here

Dog wardens from some 25 Eastern North Carolina counties gathered here today for their regular semi-annual meeting.

With a business meeting of the dog wardens completed by about 10:30 a.m. today, the dogcatchers heard addresses from two Pitt County officials.

Pitt auditor H. Reginald Gray discussed the organization and function of the dog and rabies control program in Pitt County.

E. L. Kilpatrick, chief sanitarian for the Pitt Health Department, described the duties of a dog warden and the recommended emergency procedures to be followed after a dog bite.

Today's meeting, at Respass Brothers Barbecue Restaurant, was another in the series of semi-annual held voluntarily by the county dog wardens in Eastern North Carolina in an effort to keep local dog programs on an up-to-date basis.

Routine Session For Farmville Bd.

FARMVILLE—Farmville's Commissioners—with only three of five attending—conducted a routine session here Tuesday and made tentative plans for a full-board session early next week.

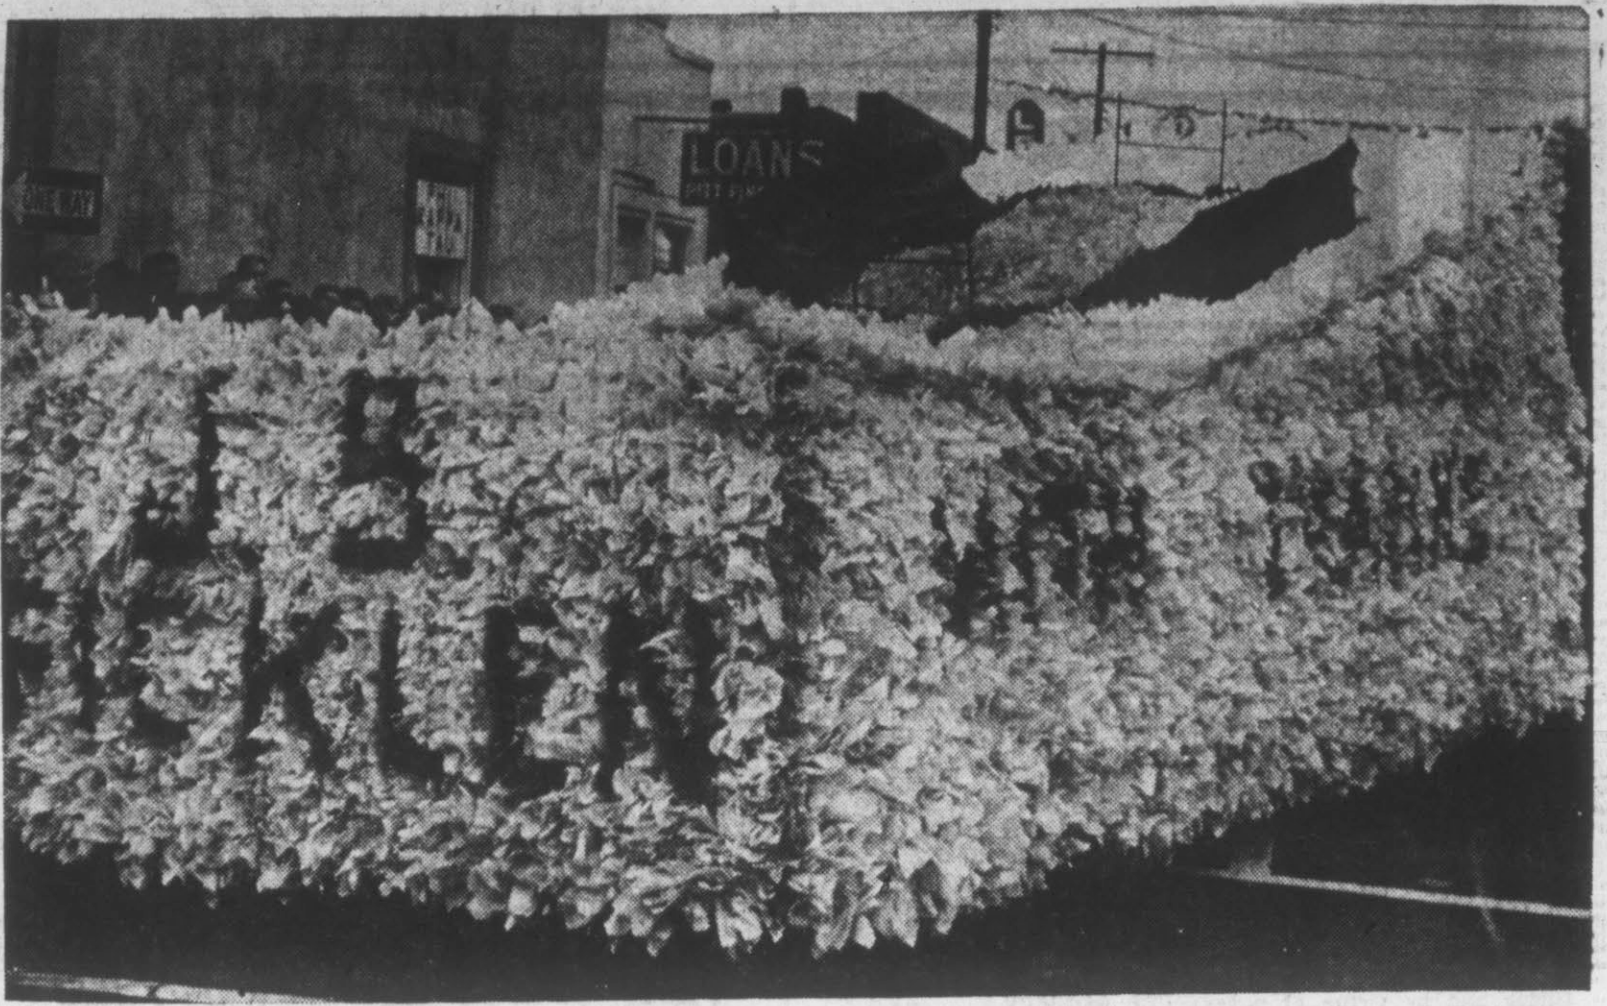

Town Clerk H. M. Allred said today commissioners Joseph D. Joyner and Sam Wainwright were absent from last night's regular monthly meeting because of a funeral.

He said the commissioners would probably gather early next week for a special meeting to complement Tuesday's regular session.

Attending commissioners Tommy Lang, Dr. S. H. Aycock and Oliver Murphrey and Mayor O. G. Spell discussed several matters, Allred said, but major action was postponed until the next full-board session.

The speakers will relate these tests to their uses by the high school and college and discuss their value to the students.

All parents have been urged by the P.T.A. President, the Rev. T. H. Davis, to attend the program.

Geo. Garrett Reads Selections To Audience In 'Poetry Circuit'

George Garrett, young American writer, read selections from his poems last night to an attentive and appreciative audience in the Austin building at East Carolina College. Approximately 300 students, faculty members, and guests on the campus were present.

He was the first poet to appear at the college on the newly organized Poetry Circuit of eight colleges and universities in this state and Virginia. The circuit, sponsored by the University of North Carolina Press, has the purpose of introducing distinguished young poets and their works to audiences in the two-state area. For his reading last night, Mr. Garrett chose poems from "Abraham's Bosom," recent publication in the Contemporary Poetry Series of the University of North Carolina Press. He also read a number of unpublished works, including the title poem "For a Bitter Season," which are to appear in his next collection of poems.

"I do not work," Mr. Garrett told his audience last night, "in terms of critical theory." Everything, he said, can be a suitable subject for poetry, for the poet can "make a poem out of anything."

Selections read, many of them in illustration of this idea, ranged from light, satirical works to poems showing strong emotional and intellectual responses to the complexities of life. An informal presentation of the selections proved attractive to the audience.

Dr. Meredith N. Posey, director of the department of English, introduced Mr. Garrett at last night's meeting.

In addition to his recently published "Abraham's Knife," Mr. Garrett is the author of "The Reverend Ghost" and "The Sleeping Gypsy," collections of poems; "King of the Mountain" and "In the Briar Patch," books of short
