Pogo-Jumping Reaches New Heights

SIDNEY MILLS

LINDA SPAIN

12-Year-Old In Class By Himself

By PATRICIA MOORE Reflector Staff Writer

Admirers of pogo are reaching ever onward to set new records. The best by far in this area was 12-year-old Sidney Mills' jump of 2,312 times yesterday afternoon on closed circuit television at East Carolina College.

This record—you read right, 11's 2,312 times—beat E. C. C.'s James Shuman's record jump of 934 times yesterday during a pogo jumping contest. An earlier challenger, Linda Spain, 12, had beat Shuman by jumping 1,130 times.

All this jumping took place in the college TV studio on the E. C. C. campus. There were counters, timers and witnesses to everything.

As a result of the contest, Shuman said today, "I'm going to let Sidney start his own competition and I'm going to challenge college students."

Heavy Gunfire At Elisabethville

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga (AP)—The heaviest gunfire of the Elisabethville battle between Katangan and U.N. forces shook buildings all over the city Friday night.

During the uproar a Swedish jet fighter knocked out the Katangan radio station with rockets and cannon fire. The station later went back on the air, presumably using an auxiliary transmitter.

The outbreak was followed today by the quietest spell Elisabethville has had since the fighting started five days ago. Torrential rains apparently slowed military activities on both sides.

But U.N. sources said their troops were consolidating positions against "indiscriminating attacks by the Katanga Gendarmerie."

Fighting apparently was heavy at dusk Friday night and the Katangans appeared to have pushed Swedish soldiers back from the highway pass under a railway controlling traffic to the suburbs.

The Swedes tried to take the tunnel two days ago, but attained only technical control. Katangans remained in the area.

In the violent flareup at dusk tracer shells and bullets buzzed at rooftop level over hotels, houses and stores.

Civilians ran for shelter; children screamed. Hospital authorities said six white civilians were killed and 10 wounded including two women.

A report to the U.N. command at Leopoldville said Indian troops fought off an attack through the bush around the Elisabethville airport Friday, supported by Indian Canberra jet aircraft. Two

Death Ray

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — A death ray weapon for use in outer space is being developed at the Martin Co. rocket plant here, a company scientist said Friday.

Dr. Carl L. Kober, advance systems director, said the weapon would be ready for testing in 1963 and would have these characteristics:

It would produce a beam hotter than 100,000 degrees Fahrenheit that would evaporate anything it was focused on.

It would use nuclear power and a principle similar to "a burning glass, through which sunlight is concentrated on an object."

It would be about the size of a large searchlight, weigh 30,000 pounds and be economical for use on earth.

Its range on earth would be less than a mile, but in outer space it would reach 50 to 200 miles.

Dr. Kober foresaw "use by the Air Force "to police and govern space near the earth." Air Force officials in Washington had no comment.

attacking companies of Katanga gendarmes were reported to have suffered heavy losses.

U.N. sources said the column of advancing gendarmes was led by a huge improvised tank, constructed by a private industrial firm in Katanga. Built upon the base of a bulldozer, the tank was covered with double armor plates filled with concrete.

The Indians claimed they attacked the tank with a recoilless rifle and demolished it with the first shot.

A U.N. armored car drove through the section of town around the U.N. headquarters here with a loudspeaker warning civilians not to shelter Katanga snipers in their homes or "action would be taken to destroy the snipers nests."

Khrushchev Brandishes Big Bombs

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Khrushchev said today the Soviet Union had built 50- and 100-megaton bombs so that they would hang over the heads of Western powers like the sword of Damocles.

He told delegates to the Communist-dominated congress of the World Federation of Trade Unions that the Soviet Union had no plans to use such bombs "but we shall certainly use this weapon against the enemy if they unleash a new war."

Declaring that the Western powers do not yet have a nuclear bomb in the 50 to 100-megaton range — the destructive force of from 50 to 100 million tons of TNT — Khrushchev asserted the Soviet Union had bombs even larger than 100 megatons.

Then appearing for the first time to brandish the Soviet super-bomb as a terror weapon, he declared:

"The 50- and 100-megaton bombs will always hang over their heads like the sword of Damocles," he said.

The Russian premier drew his allusion from ancient Greek history. Damocles was rebuked and forced to sit at a royal banquet with a sword suspended over his head by a hair.

Speaking excitedly from the platform in the Kremlin's red and gray Hall of Congresses, he said that there was not a point on the globe that could not be reached by Soviet rockets and he thought that was a strong deterrent against aggressive forces. Khrushchev expressed dismay that not everybody in the world appreciated the "correctness" of the Soviet Union's decision to resume nuclear testing in the air.

He said that many honest people had expressed concern about the health danger.

But, he claimed, "The socialist countries have to think first, not about fallout shelters but how to avoid having nuclear bombs fall on our heads."

"Do you want us to create conditions in which they would throw bombs at us and also clean the air for them?" he said. "We would not carry out the nuclear tests. This is the only correct line and the one we have chosen."

When Khrushchev concluded there was stormy applause and the delegates gathered from all over the world stood up and joined him in singing the Internationale.

Rhee Expected To Return Home

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Aged Syngman Rhee is expected to return home without facing arrest or criminal charges by the revolutionary government.

Gen. Chung Hee Park, chairman of the ruling military junta, said this week that he would not stop the 86-year-old ex-president if he wishes to spend the rest of his life in Korea. The one-time strongman of Korea was ousted after a 12-year rule by the student-led April revolution last year.

Other contracts awarded were the same as submitted last week: heating, Meyers Plumbing and Heating of Kingston, $3,298.87; plumbing, Quality Plumbing and Heating, $5,100; and electrical, Watson Electric Co. of Wilson, $3,873.

Work will begin immediately on the new lunchroom, which is the first construction work for city schools in the past year. When completed, it will provide eating facilities for students of the school, and, in addition, when combined with the present gymnasium will provide facilities for at least 1,000 people.

Hospital Flash Fire Kills Fifteen In Hartford, Conn.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Fire burst out of a ninth floor trash chute at Hartford Hospital Friday, flashed down a corridor with blowltorch fury and killed 15 persons.

More than 100 other persons were trapped in hospital rooms as the fire transformed once gleaming corridors into a mass of charred debris.

Six patients, five visitors and four hospital staff members were among the dead. Two of the visitors had been to see their ill husbands. There were 733 patients in the hospital at the time.

An almost immediate investigation and hearing put witness after witness — some of them still disheveled and soot-marked — before fire officials in an effort to pinpoint the cause.

The cause was not clear. Perhaps a lighted cigarette, said one hospital official. Perhaps some kind of escaped gas, said another. The formal interrogation session lasted for six hours and was recessed until today.

Of the fire victims, 12 were women and 3 men. The four hospital staff members who perished were a doctor, a private nurse, a dietary aide and a housekeeping supervisor.

One doctor said flames raced along the ceiling. Another said a billow of flame dropped down from the ceiling "like a blowltorch."

Thick smoke and a muffled explosion accompanied the blast of flame that spouted from the trash chute at the ninth floor.

Patients screamed for help from their windows. Rescuers fought through smoke and fire as they carried helpless patients to safety down stairs or by the few elevators still working.

Nurses remained with their patients to prevent panic despite choking smoke and approaching flames. They ran through corridors, slamming doors shut as a safety measure until they were forced to seek refuge in rooms.

Rescuers evacuated all patients from the eighth floor up in the 10-million, 13-story hospital that was built 13 years ago and was regarded as almost fireproof.

Firemen tried to reach trapped patients on the ninth floor with extension ladders. But most of the ladders went only as high as the eighth floor.

Some patients were carried to safety while plasma bottles still were attached to their arms.

One of the hospital staff members, 33-year-old Dr. Norman Hedenstad, perished in the flames as he tried to close a door at the end of a corridor to prevent the spread of the fire.

Andrew Agogliati, 53, of Framingham, Mass., one of four patients in a ninth floor room, heard a shout: "Get the patients out!"

He got out of bed—"Although I'm not supposed to"—and saw flames and smoke. Visitors in the room used blankets and sheets to seal cracks around the door to keep smoke out.

"We all opened the windows and the smoke went out," he said. "So we just stayed there and tried not to panic."

Lois Daly was one of the nurses who closed doors and windows in patients' rooms. She eventually was forced into a room with 10 others, including nurses, patients, visitors and employees.

"By the time we closed the door," she said, "the room was filled with smoke. We had to open windows in order to get some air because it was just black in there. We put wet towels over our nose and mouth so we could filter the smoke and breathe. For a brief moment I thought this was curtains."

The hospital's executive director, T. Stewart Hamilton, said that "only time will reveal the many deeds of courageous actions on the part of patients and personnel."

The fire brought personal tragedy to Deputy State Fire Marshal Carroll E. Shaw as he directed the removal of bodies during the fire. The first body to be identified was that of his niece, 14-year-old Diane Pape.

Source Of 'Form Letter' Complaint Being Sought By Army At Ft. Bragg

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP)—Army authorities are trying to learn the source of a form letter that appeared here urging troops to write complaining letters to their congressmen.

A public information officer at this big Army base said Friday copies of the form letter were found in one unit of reservists recently called to active duty. The unit was not identified. A copy of the letter had been posted on the barracks bulletin board.

The letter, suggesting complaint about training and living conditions, urged soldiers to "get 10 other people to sign this letter and send it to your congressman."

The Army spokesman said the letter apparently was not produced on the base because no facilities necessary to produce it are available within individual units.

Disclosure of the letter coincided with the arrival of Gov. Wesley Powell of New Hampshire, who flew here Friday to investigate complaints of troops from his state.

After visiting with the troops Friday, Powell told newsmen he had heard complaints, but "nothing to be deeply disturbed about."

Powell also was critical of the national administration for "holding out the prospects of an early release" of reservists. "I have seen no indication that the world crisis which caused them to be called to duty has been resolved," Powell said.

Powell planned further visits with New Hampshire troops today and then was to fly to New Orleans to preside at a meeting of the executive committee of the National Governors' Conference, of which he is chairman.

The governor, who said he had planned to come here early next year anyway, made the trip at this time because of a letter that appeared in a Manchester, N.H., newspaper recently. The letter, written by some of the 1,200 New Hampshire National Guardsmen here on active duty, said the men had received too little food, improper equipment, and were housed in inadequate quarters.

All About Town

With Anne Mattox

Mrs. James Burton James is pictured on today's Woman's page with her winning work, a traditional landscape. "It was the biggest boost, I really will have to work now," is the reaction of Mrs. J. B. James to the news her painting won the popularity poll at the Dixie Classic Fair held recently. She studied at the Arts and Crafts Association in Winston-Salem one year and went to Burnsville, Art School this summer where "Mountain Farm," her landscape was painted. Mrs. James is a former Greenville resident who now lives at 805 West Boulevard, Winston-Salem.

Mr. and Mrs. Berry Sumrell and Mrs. Stuart Savage left Thursday for Atlanta, Ga., where they will visit Mrs. Sumrell's mother and sister. They will return to Greenville Monday.

December 14th will mark a half century of marital bliss for the John Barkers of Greenville.

They plan to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Sunday, December 17th with an open house in the parlor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

In making preparations for the occasion, Mrs. Barker looks back over the years to their wedding day in 1911 in the Christian Church in Wichita, Kansas, Mrs. Barker's home town.

John Barker met Neta May when she came east to North Carolina to visit relatives. Native North Carolinians, her parents had moved west early in her childhood. Neta happened to be visiting relatives in Trenton when she met John in 1910. A 1906 law graduate of George Washington, he was practicing law in his home town.

Upon returning to her home in Kansas, Neta continued their courtship by corresponding and in December of 1911 John decided to visit Neta May during the Christmas holidays. It was decided later that they would get married at that time and on December 14, 1911 they were married.

Their wedding party consisted of six bridesmaids, a maid of honor and four or five ushers. Mrs. Barker recalled that ushers didn't participate in the wedding other than ushering in those days. The bride was attired in a gown of white satin and silk marquisette of which she still has the foundation. The gown was fashioned on princess lines, very similar to today's styles. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses tied with a bow of white silk ribbon of which she still has and plans to use on her bouquet at their 50th anniversary. Her shoes were of white velvet, long since discarded.

John bought his bride home to Trenton by train as there were few autos in those days. A wedding reception was given the newly weds on December 29th in Trenton by the bridegroom's parents, the date being chosen marking one year of their first meeting.

It was in 1925 that they moved to Greenville where John set up a law practice he still maintains today. Both are active, Mr. Barker in his 80th year and Mrs. Barker in her 70th.

In 1955 Mrs. Barker started oil painting. Prior to marriage she had done china painting, she said. "I was just looking around for something to do, and I went to the paint and putter classes. She now spends all her spare time painting and she has a studio set up in their home.

She attends the Adult Amateur Class conducted at the Greenville Art Center.

Mr. Barker who used to ride horseback has retired to less strenuous activities, enjoys reading.

Mrs. Barker still has the dress she wore on her first date with Mr. Barker, a few linens and the pocketbook carried with her going away outfit.

The Barkers have a daughter who lives in Wilmington and a son in California and two grandchildren. Thus are the first 50 years of their married life.

Renston-Nobles Home Demo Club Has Meet

The Renston-Nobles Home Demonstration Club met Wednesday in the home of Mrs. C. D. Langston. Mrs. Wiley Waters was co-nhostess.

The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. Wiley Waters. "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" was sung by the group. Mrs. D. T. McLawhorn led the devotion, reading the Christmas story from Luke, Chapter 22, making a few remarks about the meaning of Christmas. Mrs. Brantley Speight ended with prayer.

Mrs. Mavis Johnson, assistant Home Economics agent, gave the demonstration "Christmas Treats and Snacks." She showed how to make several easy party snacks, also attractive holiday place mats made from felt.

The club decided to save their Christmas cards and bring them to the January meeting. The cards will be sent to some foreign missionary to be used in their work. Each member was reminded to help a needy family during the holidays.

Mrs. T. H. Langston had charge of the recreation. She had a large tray filled with different colored hard candy wrapped in cellophane, ribbon, wire and Christmas paper Roylces. Each member selected material and made a corsage to give to a shut-in in the community.

After exchanging gifts, the guests were invited into the dining room. Mrs. Obed Castellor poured coffee and guests served themselves potted ham Christmas tree, cream cheese Christmas bell with party thins, and traditional snow balls.

The table was covered with a white linen cloth decorated with a cookie tree made by the hostess. Greenery and berries were used in the den and living room.

Science Fare For Amateurs

AP NEWSFEATURES

The way it's going, every child is going to be a science buff—if not a budding scientist—by the time he's ready for college.

Latest innovation is a combination library and laboratory under one cover. One half of the "read and do" unit holds a page giving step-by-step instructions for experiments; the other half has an unbreakable storage tray with all the materials needed for the experiments. The Book-Labs available now deal with magnetism, air, jet engines and seeds. Other fields will be handled later.

Then there are labs for youngsters on fossils, Geiger counters, beginners' microscope, earth science activities, statistic and probability, electronic, plus an electric brain construction kit.

And for the musically inclined, on special single science records, such as "The Ballad of Sir Isaac Newton," "We Know the Air is There" and "The Planet Minuet"—are belted out. Who knows? They might turn up on popular songs parades someday.

Latest contribution to household efficiency is a wheeled cart which can hold sudsy wash water and clean rinse water, as well as cleaning paraphernalia. The cart is equipped with a plastic basin and bucket, a tool-holder, and even a set of folding steps.

For the program, Mrs. Claxton Stangl showed a film on the United Nations, "The World's Workshop for Peace." The U. N., as a world organization, opened in New York in 1945, its primary objective being to prevent and to remove the causes of war. The book club members were given a guided tour through the U. N.'s buildings and were shown "work behind the scenes" via the film.

This organization hopes to bring better standards of life, a progress of peace and a larger freedom to all countries.

Rose High News

By SHERBY EVERETT

Charles Hardin of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies visited the school Monday, December 4, to give a program entitled "This Atomic World."

"The energy of the atom is used for the benefit of mankind," stated Mr. Hardin whose lecture was sponsored by the science club.

Mr. Hardin explained that the atom is made of and pointed out that atomic reactors are as safe as the chemical plants all over the country. He stated that the body could accept a certain amount of radiation without harm.

"By giving a patient radioactive isotopes, doctors can discover tumors with the help of a Geiger counter," he mentioned. "This is one way the atom is used."

In conclusion, Mr. Hardin said, "There is no doubt that atomic energy will increase its effects on life in future years. Now is the time to be a better prepared scientist or a better informed citizen."

Give Him Clothes?

By JOY MILLER

AP Women's Editor

Baffled about what to give the fellow often coyly referred to as the man-in-your-life? You can always fall back upon the utilitarian solution: clothes.

If he's already paying the bills, he'll congratulate himself upon having such a thrifty wife. If he's contemplating the step that would lead to paying the bills, it would be the deciding factor in favor of you—unless, of course, he had his heart set on a replica of a museum statue of the eighth avatar of Vishnu.

Since women are getting self-conscious about selecting ties—among minor league jokesters the Christmas tie is second only to mothers-in-law—they might be happier choosing larger, less artistic, items.

What about slippers? The shapeless house slipper of old has been replaced by elegant at-home shoes that reflect the tapered continental look without sacrificing the smallest degree of comfort. And these can be worn outdoors as well.

Then there's the raincoat, worn as a sort of uniform by the young married and college set. He's got one? He can always use another.

Cotton dressing gowns are fine for both traveling and staying at home. They're lightweight, washable, colorful. And the drip-dries endear themselves to bachelors.

Leisure shirts are a modern expression of masculine vanity. Even the most conservative corporation executive will go wild over the weekend. Once they wore cotton T shirts. Now the most modest investment is a multicolored mad-ras cotton. For more expensive pampering, there's single stitch raw silk.

For the fellows in the office, what about the silk handkerchief-scarf? You'll either start a vogue or cater to one.

If you're a girl who has everything herself, you might want to know a haberdashery store in New York is offering a set of handmade sports coat buttons for $330. But imagine sewing on all those buttons on office time.

Stain Problem?

The best way to tackle cranberry spills on your holiday tablecloth is with "instant first-aid"—right at the table.

Just rub the stain with an ice cube from a water glass. This prevents the spot from "setting" before you have a chance to launder it in hot suds.

While the school crowd loves the new cotton suede apparel for its look and feel, mothers rate it as A-plus for washability.

'Plowshare' Captures Imagination

One's imagination can hardly help but be captured by the underground nuclear blast to be set off by American scientists tomorrow . . . the first nuclear blast expressly for the purpose of finding peaceful uses for such explosions.

While possible peaceful uses of atomic energy have come as by-products of previous nuclear explosions, never before have scientists deliberately designed and set off a blast to explore peaceful purposes for which the released energy might be used. Previously tests of nuclear explosions have been to determine the destructive value of this recently found source of energy.

This test scheduled for tomorrow will be for the purpose of determining constructive uses to which the tremendous energy of such an explosion might be used.

While the experiment will in itself contribute considerable additional scientific knowledge, it is likewise significant that on the heels of Soviet nuclear tests, obviously to intimidate people throughout the world, American efforts are in part being directed to finding additional peaceful uses for nuclear energy.

The destructive power of conventional explosives over a long period of years played a major part not only in war, but in peaceful uses. There is no reason

Preparing New Democrat Plan

By LYNN NISBET

DEMOCRATIC PLAN—Judge J. B. Phipps of Chapel Hill is putting the final touches on language and arrangement of the proposed new text of the Plan of Organization for the Democratic Party in North Carolina. The committee, of which Secretary of State Thad Eure is chairman, and top level party officials visions in party procedure. When have approved the general terms, involving some major revisions in party procedure. When Judge Phipps completes his codification the text will come back to the committee for final approval, expected to be a purely perfunctory process. From then on the suggested routing of the document is somewhat confusing.

Heretofore changes proposed in the plan were considered by the State executive committee.

Action of the committee was deemed as controlling on the party, and such rules were adopted were applied to party caucuses, precinct meetings and conventions. The currently proposed revision is more drastic than any since 1918, and many party leaders have insisted that the new text be submitted and approved by the full state convention before becoming effective. The architects of the new plan and top officials agreed to that, and it was announced that the matter would be on the agenda of the convention when it meets next spring—almost certainly around the middle of May.

Last week announcement was made that the plan would be submitted to the executive committee at its meeting early in March, and if approved its provisions would govern the selection of delegates and voting allocations in the next state convention. That presents an unusual situation.

AUTHORITY—If the executive committee has authority, as it has been assumed through the years it does have to adopt the rules procedure, why the gesture of submitting them to the convention? If full convention approval is necessary before they become effective, the action of the committee would be of no moment. Suppose, for example, the convention declines to approve the plan as drafted by the committee. Then, if it is true that validating authority rests in the convention, the new plan is void and the old order maintains. That in turn would mean that the convention was illegal constituted, therefore not competent to pass upon the plan. And, since the right of the executive committee to make the rules has not been challenged before, in all probability approval of the committee would be accepted.

So why all the ballyhoo about letting the full membership of the convention pass upon the new plan before its effectiveness?

COMPROMISE—Although some of the changes in the new plan are drastic and very important, the whole new text is essentially a compromise of widely divergent ideas. The extent to which party practices will be changed will depend more upon the degree to which committee members exert their influence than upon the way the text reads. The present plan requires far more equality of representation among men and women than has ever been practiced. The present plan also has some disciplinary provisions which have been rather generally ignored.

The next text spells out more clearly the recognition of women and affords some machinery for enforcing discipline against defecting party officials.

MAIN CHANGES—The main changes in the party rules suggested in the new plan are these: Mandatory equal representation of men and women on county executive committees; elimination of proxy voting in all party conventions; a "campaign committee" composed of one man and one woman from each congressional district, elected by state convention delegates from that district, in place of the presently authorized "advisory committee" appointed by the chairman; and definite procedure for removing from office any committee member or chairman, upon evidence duly presented and supported, that the committee member or official has not been loyal to the Democratic party.

There is no remote suggestion for "reading out of the party" any registered Democrat. There has been through the years growing belief that there ought to be some way to divest defecting partisans from their official positions. There have been instances when members of county or state committees of the Democratic party have openly campaigned for candidates for Governor or President nominated by the other party—and there was no redress. Until six or eight years ago it didn't make much difference. It was sort of ludicrous and laughable for a Democratic chairman to be wearing a Republican emblem. Lately the election margins have been reduced and it is no longer laughable. It is getting to be deadly serious business.

ROUTINE?—As of now it looks like the new revision of the Plan of Organization will go through the executive committee meeting without much controversy, and that it will be reported to the state convention as the new plan already adopted, rather than submitted for original approval.

to believe that the more powerful nuclear explosives cannot also be harnessed to produce constructively for mankind even though until now nuclear explosions have been thought of only in terms of destroying cities, wiping out countless thousands of people, and perhaps as instruments that could wreck civilization as we know it.

The underground nuclear explosion in New Mexico tomorrow could open many new doors for putting this powerful source of energy to work building rather than destroying.

Major Decision For Our Tobacco Growers

Tobacco growers of this and other counties will collectively decide at the polls on Tuesday whether marketing quotas and the government support program for flue-cured tobacco will be continued for another three years.

It is a decision in which every tobacco grower should participate by casting a ballot in the referendum. The decision rendered will vitally effect the economic future of tobacco growers as well as that of many other residents of the tobacco producing regions.

The Reflector has previously urged tobacco growers of this county to vote in favor of continuing the marketing quotas which have meant so much to the economy of this area, and to the economy so far as growers are concerned throughout the tobacco producing region. We also urge each farmer who is eligible to vote in the referendum to take time to cast a ballot in Tuesday's referendum. In order for the marketing quotas to be continued for another three-year period, two-thirds of those casting ballots in the referendum must approve the proposition.

Because of the importance of this decision to each individual tobacco farmer, he should not leave it to his friends and neighbors to render the decision without his participation. It is a question on which every eligible farmer should make his wishes known by seeing that his ballot is placed in the box Tuesday.

New Programs For Lawmakers

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — In about a month Congress returns, and President Kennedy already is laying down some programs he wants approved in the 1962 election year which will mean a lot to him.

He has passed the word to his legislative leaders that he will fight for—among others—medical care for the aged, federal aid to education, and a lowering of tariffs on foreign imports.

All three are in the angry area where opponents with strong feelings will do all they can to stop him.

He came into office with a conservative Congress, even though his own Democrats were in a majority. In the 1962 congressional elections next November all House seats and one-third of the Senate seats are at stake.

Victory for the Republicans, giving them control of Congress, could take some of the snap out of his leadership wish, on the whole, has been pretty conservative, too.

His own record in the presidency could be affected and, therefore, his chances for reelection in 1964.

So in 1962 he'll have extra reason to fight for what he proposes since the record he and his Democrats make next year will be a major point in the elections.

In the 1960 presidential race he promised quick action on civil rights if he defeated Vice President Richard M. Nixon. He offered no civil rights program at all.

VIGILANCE AND FIRMNESS
A scientist who defected from communism recently said that his decision to do so had arisen from the fact that the communists had ordered him to stop his cancer research. Although the newspaper article did not say so, the reason probably was that communist authorities wanted all scientific effort to go into the making of bombs. Under such a philosophy the thing to be destroyed is not cancer but capitalism. Let people die of cancer, reason the communists, but destroy the purveyor who have set up businesses, practice professions, and pursue employments which give them some economic stature. He can hardly fail to do something in this field next year if only because his own Civil Rights Commission this year, in five studied volumes, called for a number of steps to be taken.

In addition, some Democrats and Republicans will want action. But the test of his determination to get what he asks for will be this, as in his other programs, show up in the kind of fight he makes.

He's far from being an all-out fighter for everything he suggests to Congress, as he showed on medical care for the aged and federal aid to education.

In addition to wrestling with Congress next year he'll almost surely have to deal with Russia on Berlin.

It's a good guess that he will put up a truly strenuous battle for lowering tariffs on imports.

VIGILANCE AND FIRMNESS
A scientist who defected from communism recently said that his decision to do so had arisen from the fact that the communists had ordered him to stop his cancer research. Although the newspaper article did not say so, the reason probably was that communist authorities wanted all scientific effort to go into the making of bombs. ## Pitt Birthday Memorial

State Sen. Robert Lee Humber has urged Pitt's County Commissioners, Sen. Humber noted that Pitt is the only county among the 3,000 in the United States which adopted William Pitt's name.

He pointed out that Pitt is generally agreed to have been one of the most capable statesmen in England's long history. In addition, the senator said, Pitt and two more 18th century British officials were among the American colonists' closest Crown-connected friends when Pitt County was born in 1761.

The idea of erecting a statue (to be created by an "eminent artist," according to Humber's suggestion) seems indeed a much more practical one than the expensive staging of a bi-centennial pageant or some other elaborate birthday celebration that is materially gone forever when the final curtain falls.

Humber pointed out some neighboring counties have appropriated sizeable amounts for glittering celebrations of their milestone birthdays. Pitt has not seen fit to undertake such a project.

All of us are who assent to these inroads of power hungry bureaucrats. When ultimately Washington gets the noose around our necks, there will be little difference from what they have in Soviet Russia and elsewhere. Along with these restraints will come, too, the tyrannies of rule from above, not from the grass roots.

Only this week there was an example here of this encroachment upon local authority. The Vance Board of County Commissioners has decided to discontinue its operation of the county home, and has had plans drawn for remodeling the building on the eastern outskirts of town that has been used for that purpose for some thirty years or more. The property is to be leased for a private nursing home.

Before the county can turn a tap toward proceeding, the plans must have been approved by the State Department of Health, The State Insurance Department, the State Department of Public Welfare and the State Sanitation Engineering Division. The nursing section of the health department learned of what was going on and has informed the commissioners that approval must be given by that agency as well.

All this, too, mind you, despite the fact that not a dime of the original investment nor

Medical Care Problem

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

At every convention of the American Medical Association, the question of socialized medicine arises, the doctors protesting that Congress is trying to pass legislation which will enslave the medical profession. President Leonard W. Larson of the American Medical Association on November 27 said:

"We are for a free profession, not an enslaved one. We are for the preservation of our constitutional republic; we are opposed to a welfare state. We are for the right of our citizens to spend their own dollars in their own way for Washington authorities to spend their money for them. Our philosophy is wholly positive. The opposition is to the King-Anderson Bill which Dr. Larson describes as follows:

"The proponents of King-Anderson type legislation have cleverly promoted the false idea that earmarked payroll and employer taxes would be voluntary prepayments against the cost of health care benefits received subsequently in retirement. The fact is that the King bill levies a compulsory tax on young workers and their employers to pay for a federal program of health benefits for older people, millions of whom are self-reliant and solvent. The King-Anderson program does not provide insurance or prepayment of any type, but compels one segment of our population to underwrite a socialized program of health care for another, regardless of need."

Whereas socialized medicine, in any form, deprives the medical profession of a free wage for its services, it must be admitted that a sharp public opinion is expressing itself against disorderly and unethical conduct in this profession, whether such conduct is widespread or is limited to a few scoundrels.

The entire question of medical charges requires study by the medical profession, affiliated and unaffiliated doctors. It is very difficult to decide whether an operation is necessary or is a fraud to produce a large fee. The responsibility is with hospitals to a degree. That is, a decent, well-managed hospital will not tolerate improper practices.

This raises another question: the hospitals have limited beds and cannot accept all doctors who would care to serve. What is to become of the so-called unaffiliated doctor? The public does not quite understand this question but it is very important to a physician or a surgeon.

A young man gets out of a medical school and his immediate problem is to become an interne and in time a resident. This means that he cannot earn a living for a period but does have an apprentice's wage. The next step is to be admitted to the staff of an outstanding hospital. This has its numerical limitations and the young doctor who is unable to get on the staff of a hospital is "unaffiliated." If he gets a patient, he has to find an "affiliated" doctor, who may be a specialist, who will get his patient into a properly managed hospital or if he is in a large city he might make connections with a privately-owned hospital which may or may not be a properly managed institution. Some of the private hospitals are unfit for any purpose except perhaps as a nursing home. There ought to be some way of formally and legally designating the unsuitable hospitals.

The layman has no way of knowing. He wants to go into a hospital. He finds that every hospital is overcrowded and that he must accept a bed in a ward. He declines to accept a bed in a ward. His doctor sends him to a private hospital which may be owned by doctors or by real estate brokers. The private hospital may have a proper or an unsuitable discipline. The patient will not know it, but his doctor, physician or surgeon, has limited contacts with other physicians and surgeons and that the specialist will not come at the doctor's call. Some doctors will only work in their own hospital which will not accept the particular patient.

In a word, the subject grows increasingly complicated. The patient if fortunate who has an affiliated doctor who is able to get him into a disciplined hos-

Rising Number Of Changes Ahead

By ELMER ROESSNER

The tempo of business increases at this time of the year, revealing a rising number of changes to come. Here are some, based on analyses of developing trends:

Look for: Red China to unload more silver on the world market. Communist farming plans have failed and, as the country approaches winter, mass starvation is imminent. Now that the United States has stepped out of the silver market, allowing the price to rise to around $1 an ounce, Red China will export its hoards to buy grains for the comrades.

Look for: trouble among small companies needing financing. The government action in permitting commercial banks to pay higher interest rates will save savings into those portfolios, forcing smaller companies to pay higher rates—or bust.

COCOALESS BUTTER

Look for: wide industrial interest in a new product: a fat similar to cocoa butter developed from cottonseed and olive oils. It may replace cocoa butter in candies and pharmaceuticals—and make the status of new African nations even more insecure.

Look for: a doorless refrigerator. One is being developed in California. A curtain of cold air and a way to chill shelves with a stream of cold air will make the frij frij possible.

Look for: an officially approved accounting system. Government tax collectors, constantly puzzled by new variations in accounting methods, are seeking a standard system, which may be urged on all companies. It may not be mandatory, but the word will go out that companies not using it will get extra scrutiny.

"I saw an ad saying, 'Save on income taxes like the millionaires do. Full instructions. Send $1 to Box zero-zero and so on.' I sent in my buck. And this is what I got back."

He handed me a three-by-five-inch card. On it was one word: "Cheat."

PREP SCORES

Chicod Defeats Grimesland 50-31

The Grimesland Panthers once again tasted the bitterness of defeat, losing last night to Chicod 50-31.

Coach Henry Meares and the Grimesland Panthers have had a rough time trying to muster enough force to contend with their bigger and more experienced opponents.

Chicod went ahead in the first quarter by a score of 12-8 and from this point on they continued to increase their lead. T. Adams was the big gun for the Chicod Hornets with 16 points. E. Smith and B. Elks both had 11.

High man for the Panthers was Carlton Hardee with 12 points. Billie Hardee, a freshman, had nine points for the losers. Grimesland girls almost came through with their first win of the season but they were left on the short end of the score. They lost by a score of 34-33.

The girls game was a nip and tuck battle right down to the horn that signaled the end of the game. Chicod never led by more than four points and were outscored in the last two quarters of play.

Carolyn Sumrell was high scorer for the losers with 12 points while J. Mills was high for the winners with 21. Also in double figures for Chicod was P. Jones who had 12.

Grimesland will travel to Stokes on Dec. 15 for their next game. Chicod will play a non-conference home game with Bath on Dec. 15.

Winterville Downs Bel-Falk 73-34

The Winterville Wolves, coached by Blaine Moye, routed Belvoir-Falkland last night by a score of 73-34. This was Winterville's third conference victory against no defeats.

Belvoir was simply outscored and outmaneuvered as the Wolves went out in front in the beginning of the game, never to be threatened by the Eagles. Belvoir had six men to foul out of the game which definitely dimmed their chances.

James Braxton was once again high man for Wolves with 21 points. Braxton is extremely accurate under the boards.

The girls game proved to be much more exciting with the Belvoir girls up-ending the Wolves 54-50 in an overtime period.

Belvoir was down 18-5 after the first quarter of play, but they came back in the fourth quarter to overtake their opponents and then go on to win the game.

Mary Pollard, a Belvoir-Falkland forward, scored an amazing 38 points to lead her team to victory. However, a freshman making her first appearance in a high school game, scored the two points that won the game. This girl was Lois Garrett who indeed deserves a great deal of credit.

Belvoir meets Farmville on Dec. 12 in their next game of the season. This game is at Belvoir-Falkland. Winterville will play Griffon on the same night.

Bethel Tops Farmville 88-63

The Bethel Indians once again proved their power last night by defeating the Farmville Red Devils 88-63. This was Bethel's third conference victory and their fifth win of the season. They are undefeated.

Herman Daniels, a 6 foot-1 inch guard, was high scorer for the Indians with a mass of 36 points. Most of Daniels points came as a result of the fast break. However, he was also deftly accurate with long jump shots.

Tex Everett was also impressive in his team's victory by scoring 24 points. Everett was outstanding in the rebounding department as well as in scoring.

The Indians got off to an early lead and did not encounter much difficulty in maintaining it.

Leading the Red Devils in their losing effort was Ben Monk and Win Donat with 16 and 12 points respectively. Regardless of their loss, Farmville placed four men in double figures. Beside Monk and Donat, William Reason had 11 and Danny Dilda had 10 points.

The Bethel girls were also victorious last night in downing Farmville by a score of 70-59.

All three of the Bethel forwards hit double figures last night with Mary Chessom being high scorer with 25 points. Carroll Manning had 23 and Janet Cobb was third with 19 points.

The girls game followed much the same pattern as the boys. Bethel was ahead early in the game and Farmville was unable to keep pace with the high scoring Indians.

Betsy Allen was high for the losers with 28 points.

Grifton Downs Stokes 55-30

The Griffon Bulldogs won their third conference victory last night by defeating Stokes 55-30.

Tommy Riley led the Bulldogs to a 28-16 halftime lead, and the Stokes Bluejays were unable to overcome this margin. Griffon outscored their opponents 27-14 during the second half.

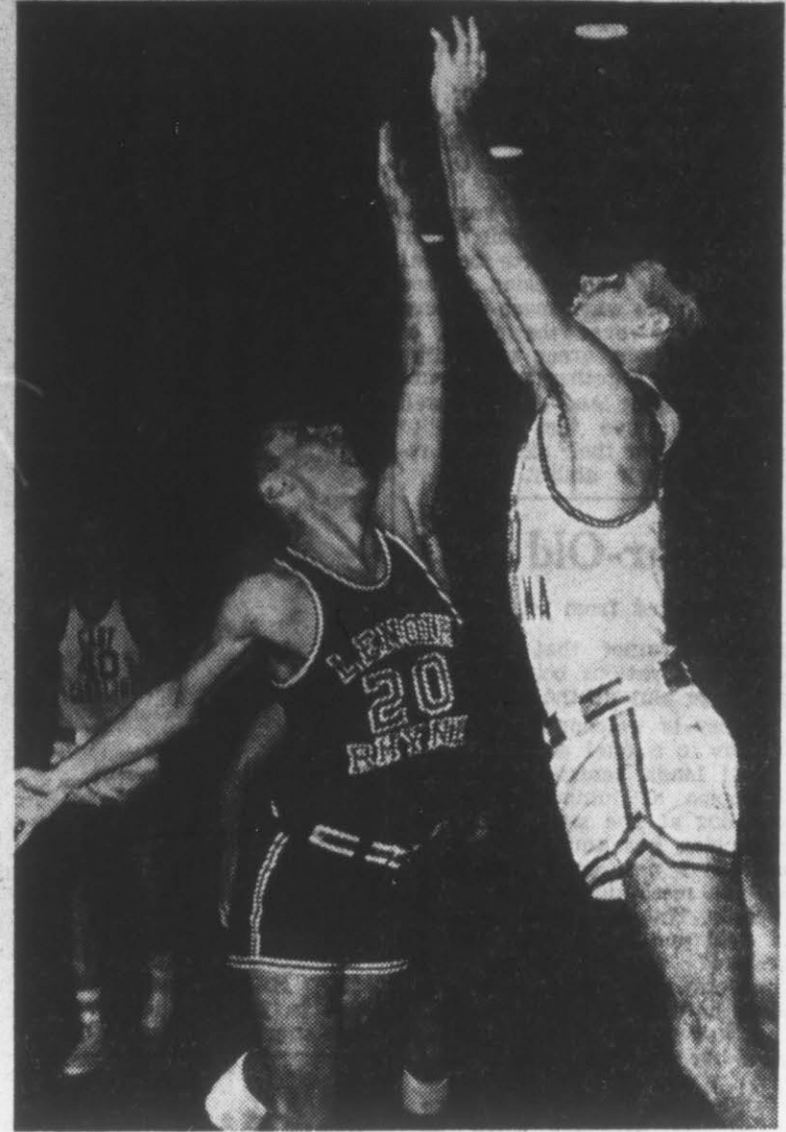

High scorer for the Bulldogs was Riley with 17 points. Ben McLawhorn had 13 points for the winners. Leading the Bluejays in their losing effort were Dickie Leggett and Carol Fleming with nine and eight points respectively.

The Stokes girl team, paced by Diane Whitehurst, took an early advantage in the first quarter, never to be overtaken by Griffon. D. Whitehurst was high for Stokes sinking 10 points for the victors.

Jane Newborn scored 15 points in her team's losing effort and she was high scorer for the night.

Tuesday, Dec. 12, Griffon travels to Winterville to meet the highly ranked Winterville Wolves. Stokes will meet Grimesland in a home contest Dec. 15.

Phants Lose To Cyclones 60-65

WILSON — The Rose High School Phantoms lost their second non-conference game of the season last night to the Wilson Cyclones 65-60.

Wilson took the lead in the early minutes of the first quarter and managed to stay ahead until the middle of the second when the Phantoms picked up and tied the game, but not for long. The Cyclones quickly pulled ahead again and were leading at the half 33-25.

As the second half got underway the game turned into a seesaw battle with both teams committing a lot of fouls. Until the last few minutes of the game the Phantoms trailed by one point and then Wilson took advantage of Greenville's mistakes and took a seven point lead with 17 seconds remaining. This put the game out of reach for the Phantoms.

Both teams committed 11 personal fouls in the fourth quarter of the ball game. The Phantoms were able to gain eight points from the free throw line in the final quarter compared to three for Wilson. During the entire contest Greenville committed 16 fouls and Wilson picked up 11 points. The Cyclones committed 18 personal fouls during the game and Greenville picked up 18 points in 27 attempts from the foul line.

The outstanding defensive players for the Phantoms were Alan McArthur, Kroghie Andresen and Billy James. On offense for the team, Rodney Knowles led the team with 17 points followed closely by Andresen with 15.

The defensive standouts for the Cyclones were Edwards and Elliott. The offensive leaders were Edwards with 15 points and Titcheener with 14 points.

McArthur and James both played an excellent game for the Greenville five. Both boys played almost the entire game. James has had only two days practice since returning from the Shrine Bowl and McArthur has had three days practice.

ACC Puts Sticky Items Away Until Spring Meet

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference has swept several potentially sticky items under the rug to be hauled out for closer examination next May at the spring meeting.

The fall session here Friday was run off at a brisk pace, requiring only an hour and a half, as matters calling for a minimum of discussion received final action.

Left for the spring meeting were issues concerning grants-in-aid eligibility, generally among the more complex questions.

Duke offered a plan to increase from 750 to 900 the cutoff score required of a grant-in-aid applicant taking a college board test. The eight ACC schools all require at least 850, with their average $59.9. The Duke plan will be studied and probably will appear on the May agenda.

Lack of a seconding vote defeated a Maryland proposal to have the conference recognize the American College Testing Program as an additional entrance examination. It too, may be offered for consideration later.

Another Maryland suggestion was withdrawn for additional study and likely will come up at a later date. Maryland has proposed that an athlete not be charged with a year's varsity eligibility in a sport if due to illness or injury, he takes part in only one contest. However, he must not engage in any other competition during that semester.

These problems may confront the ACC when new president Dr. James T. Penney, University of South Carolina faculty athletic chairman, calls the spring session to order. Penney was elected to succeed O. K. Cornwell of North Carolina, who has retired as his school's faculty chairman and leaves the conference official family.

Dr. J. W. Sawyer of Wake Forest is the new vice president and R. R. Ritchie of Clemson is secretary-treasurer. Dean G. F. Epfinger of Maryland was named to the executive committee.

Conference schools now are in competition for the William Donald Carmichael Cup, awarded annually for the best record in the total sports program of the ACC. It was accepted from the family of the late University of North Carolina official yesterday.

Rifle shooting was turned down as a championship sport, but swimming and track will receive greater recognition. A sixth place award will be given in the swimming championship meet and a 440-yard relay event was approved for both dual meets and the conference track championship.

Results of regular season dual meets and the season-ending championship will be tabulated in determining the team swimming title.

Football and basketball TV plan were not discussed until the national and regional picture are outlined by the NCAA.

The East Carolina College Pirates came back from a series of losses to defeat Lenoir Rhyne 80 to 72 last night.

Lenoir Rhyne, ranked number one in the Carolinas Conference, had previously shown their strength by downing conference foes Guilford, Pfeiffer and Newberry. However, Lenoir Rhyne must have failed to impress the Bucs, because the Bucs simply outplayed their opponents.

East Carolina, after losing its opener to Catawba, then lost a non-conference battle to the Citadel. Wednesday night the Bucs dropped another conference tilt to High Point College. Last night, the Pirates showed a lot of courage by grabbing the lead early in the game and then refusing to be overcome.

Played Terrific Game

It would not be fair to single out any one of the six players Coach Earl Smith used. Each one of the Bucs played a terrific game and came forth with tremendous effort when they were called upon to maintain the pace.

Charlie Lewis, co-captain of the Pirates, was high scorer for the night with 30 points. Lewis, probably playing his finest game of the season, was deftly accurate from any spot on the court. It should be noted that Lewis, a small man compared to his teammates, made many of his baskets under the goal.

Otte Gains 23 Points

Bill Otte, also very instrumental in the Bucs victory, scored 23 points. Otte was very effective on soft jump shots from around the foul circle, as well as tap-ins under the basket. Because of the fine rebounding assistance from his teammates, Otte was able to devote most of his time to scoring field goals.

Another large factor in the Bucs' first conference win was the fine rebounding and shooting of Benny Bowes. Bowes was able to score 11 points while grabbing a lion's share of the rebounds. His defensive play was also impressive.

West Hot On Defense

Lacy West, who was able to score only six points, turned in a brilliant performance on defense. On numerous occasions, West stole the ball from his opponents, the Lenoir Rhyne Bears. West also did an excellent job of rebounding for the Pirates.

East Carolina's outstanding freshman, Richie Williams, came through once again for the Bucs. Williams scored 10 points, and on many occasions set up his teammates with accurate passes. To him was given the role of playmaker, and he definitely played this role like a veteran.

Early Lead

East Carolina got off to an early lead in the first half of the game. At the end of seven minutes of play, all five members of the East Carolina team had scored, and the Pirates led 13-8. This was made possible by Lacy West who stole the ball three consecutive times from a tense Lenoir Rhyne team. However, Lenoir Rhyne refused to be overcome easily and came back to tie the game up three times in the first half.

Lenoir Rhyne Fired Up

The Bucs returned in the second half to find themselves facing a fired up Lenoir Rhyne team.

East Carolina, in the early minutes of the second stanza, had a little difficulty in hitting the basket. Before the Pirates could score, Lenoir Rhyne had closed the gap to two points. The score stood at 39-37 with 17 minutes left to play in the game.

Bears Press

Lenoir Rhyne was forced to go into a full court press with five minutes and thirty seconds remaining to be played. The Pirates refused to weaken under pressure and maintained their lead. In response to the press by the Bears, East Carolina started to freeze the ball.

By freezing the ball, the Pirates were able to draw fouls from their opponents. These fouls shots enabled the Bucs to keep control of the ball. When Lenoir Rhyne began to muster their forces, the game was already out of reach. East Carolina went on to produce a startling upset by defeating the Bears 80-72.

The Bucs travel to Richmond, Virginia tonight to play their second Southern Conference game of the season. This game should prove to be exciting as East Carolina meets a strong team, the University of Richmond.

W. Va. Takes Win Over The Citadel

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Southern Conference today was feeling the first symptoms of an old winter affliction, the basketball shudders, and as usual the cause of the ailment was easily diagnosed: Too much West Virginia.

Moving crisply toward early command of the conference race, the Mountaineers Friday night look some wind out of the sails of The Citadel, which may be their No. 1 challenger, by a 78-70 count.

The score was decisive enough to send tremors up and down the league, yet close enough to nourish upset ambitions among some other conference leading lights.

Chief among these is Furman, which like West Virginia hasn't lost in three starts — and which tonight, on its home court, gets the chance to halt the relentless march of the Mountaineers.

The game at Greenville marks Furman's debut in conference play. By contrast, all of West Virginia's triumphs have been inside the league.

Also on tonight's conference program are three other games, two of which count in the standings.

George Washington's conference champions, 1-4 for the season and 1-0 in conference warfare, visit William and Mary (0-3, 0-2) in the contest that shares top billing with the West Virginia-Furman clash.

Davidson (0-2, 0-0) gets its conference baptism at VMI (0-2, 0-1) Richmond (0-1, 0-0) is at home to non-conference East Carolina.

West Virginia used superior height and superb outside shooting by Rod Thorn (24 points) and Jim McCormick (14) to whip previously unbeaten The Citadel (2-1, 1-1) in Charleston, S.C.

Gary Daniels collected 24 points for the Cadets to tie Thorn for scoring honors, and Charlie Madrazo had 17 for the losers. Daniels and Thorn pulled down 12 rebounds apiece.

Conference finances were reported in the black for the first time since eight member schools withdrew to form the Atlantic Coast Conference in 1953. A budget of $36,000 was approved.

Conference assets were listed as $76,254.

It was agreed that rained out baseball games be rescheduled only if they bear on the conference title.

The group voted that a facsimile of the conference crest appear on all conference athletic awards and trophies.

In a speech to a final luncheon meeting, conference commissioner Lloyd Jordan declared college athletics is "trying to develop youth and we're doing a good job of it... we need a lot of thoughtful leaders today, and we're developing them" in sports.

He called playing football "an experience in violence" that can develop "tough-minded leaders. We can't afford academic malnutrition."

Awards were presented to The Citadel for winning the conference football title and to its coach, Eddie Teague, for being selected coach of the year in the conference sportswriters group.

The next conference meeting is in May.

Wake Forest Collides With Buckeyes Tonight

Wake Forest collides with Ohio State tonight in a basketball showdown that not only matches a pair of the nation's top teams but brings together two of the best big men in the college ranks.

The two are 6-8 All-American Jerry Lucas of the unbeaten, top-ranked Buckeyes, and 6-8 All-American candidate Len Chappell, the big gun of the third-ranked Deacons.

Lucas, who's been bothered by knee trouble, scored 27 points as Ohio State defeated Wichita 85-62 Friday night. It was the third straight victory for the Bucks. Wake Forest has won two games.

Chappell was the leading scorer in the Atlantic Coast Conference and No. 6 in the nation last year with a 26.6 average in 28 games. Lucas had a 24.9 scoring average last year.

The last time these two met, Lucas outscored Chappell 16-9. That was in the first game of the 1959-60 season when both made their collegiate debut. Ohio State won the game, 66-59. Billy Packer of the Deacons and Mel Nowell of the Buckeyes, who also will play tonight, scored 18 points each in that 1959 game.

Deacon Coach Bones McKinney said Friday, "I think our personnel compares favorably with theirs, man for man."

He said his greatest fear is that the Deacons will be affected psychologically by the fact that Ohio State was national champion on" (in the 1959-60 season). The Bucks lost to Cincinnati in the NCAA finals last year.

A sellout crowd of 8,200 is assured for the game, and it also will be televised regionally.

The game is the feature of tonight's ACC schedule that also has Virginia at Clemson and N.C. State taking on an alumni team.

Meanwhile, the seventh ranked Duke Blue Devils, paced by Art Heyman and Jeff Mullins, clubbed Louisville 86-56 Friday night while South Carolina defeated Virginia 71-63 in a conference game.

Heyman scored 33 points and Mullins 26 as the Blue Devils raced to a 46-27 lead at the half and never let up. The victory was Duke's third straight, while Louisville lost its first game in three starts.

Art Whisnant poured 25 points through he nets as South Carolina handed the Cavaliers their second conference loss of the season.

The teams played on even terms most of the game. South Carolina went ahead for keeps about midway of the second half.

Southern Loop May Favor Nat'l Recruiting Rules

By DEL BOOTH

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—National regulation of recruiting college athletes apparently will be favored by the Southern Conference when the matter comes before the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

An informal poll of conference representatives at their annual winter meeting that ended here Friday showed eight of the nine member colleges favoring such a proposal.

The NCAA is expected to vote next month at its annual meeting in Chicago on a letter of intent, to be signed by prospective athletes declaring their choice of a college. The letter would be honored by all NCAA-member colleges after June 1 each year.

The conference also agreed to limit all-star participation by athletes to seniors or those who have completed their athletic eligibility.

Los Angeles — Cisco Andrade, 137, San Jacinto, Calif., knocked out Batting Torres, 138½, Reynosa, Mexico, 6.

Omaha — Bill Nielsen, 188, Omaha, outpointed Wayne Womochil 192, Omaha, 10.

Worcester, Mass. — Kenny Tavares, 143, New Bedford, Mass., outpointed Paul Christie, 145½, Medford, 10.

Social Security Forum To Be Held Here Dec. 13

A social security forum will be conducted here on Wednesday, Dec. 13, it was announced today by S. C. Winchester, county agricultural agent.

The forum will be sponsored by interested businessmen and two sessions will be held at 2:30 p.m. and at 7:30 p.m. The Board of County Commissioners, in cooperation with the Rocky Mount Social Security District Office, has arranged the forum.

Winchester stated that "A farmer cannot wait until he is 65 years old—or disabled—or until he dies—to get his social security account in order. Like everyone else, he should do it now."

A panel of social security experts, businessmen, farm and civic leaders will discuss the recent changes in the social security law at the forum meeting. During a question and answer period, questions from the floor will be answered in terms the layman can understand. It has been suggested that those interested bring questions in writing and turn them in, so that they may be answered more fully during the discussion.

Last year almost 5,000 people in Pitt County, including farmers, widows, children and the disabled, received more than $3 million in social security benefits. Recent changes in the law will provide even greater benefits, but many of the farm people must take action now to protect their rights to the benefits, Winchester stated.

Menotti Christmas Opera Is Enjoyed

By MARTIN MAILMAN

The joys of the Christmas Season are many. Not the least of the wonderful things we associate with this time of the year is the wealth of great art that we listen to, read, and look at. The Christmas Carol by Dickens has found a worthy companion in the charming one-act opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti, AMAHL AND THE NIGHT VISITORS. It is a little gem that will be presented as long as Christmas is celebrated.

Last night it was presented on the stage of Wright Auditorium by the Columbus Boychoir as the third program in the Fine Arts Series that is sponsored by the Student Government Association of East Carolina College. This appealing and talented group of boys is under the very fine direction of Donald Bryant.

AM AHL AND THE NIGHT VISITORS was written for television, indeed it is the first opera ever to be written for this medium. The boy, Chet Allen, who sang the role of Amahl in the first performance was a member of the Columbus Boychoir. Last night the role was sung and acted to perfection by Allen Tucker. His mother was played by Mary Evelyn Bruce and she, like every other member of the cast, did a splendid job. The Kings, who are former members of the choir, were Gerald Carpenter, Alan Olsen, and Franklin Erhardt. The Page was Lester Erich. The production was convincing and moving and at least one member of the audience had to clear a lump from his throat at the end.

Had this opera been the only offering of the evening it would have been worth the price of the admission alone; however, the choir presented numerous other works featuring various young men in solos. The first part of the program was devoted to sacred compositions ranging from the 16th Century Victoria to the contemporary British Composer Benjamin Britten. The MISSA BREVIS by Britten is representative of this talented composer's fine list of works. It was sung very well, and as did the other works on the program, it reflects the excellent training and high standards of the choir.

The sound that comes from these boys is unique. Most of us are not privileged to hear the pure quality of tone that comes from unchanged voices very often. It is removed from our everyday world and has a charm that transports us to a time when soprano parts were sung by boys. It is a sound that is essentially ecclesiastic and lent itself most successfully to the sacred compositions that the choir presented.

Donald Bryant, the director, also played a group of Chopin Etudes and proved himself to be an able pianist in addition to being a fine choir director.

The large audience was very obviously taken with the choir. Their enthusiasm brought forth several encores. It is encouraging to see that in a time when much concern is displayed over the plight of young people a group of healthy boys can get together for the purpose of singing and do it so well that they move their elders to enthusiasm for their effort and respect for their ability.

12-Year-Old ...

There is rumor that there are some preparations being made to challenge him at the college.

Sidney is welcoming any challengers to a duel on pogo sticks.

And Linda remains undisputed champion of jumping rope and pogo-ing at the same time.

Shuman has announced he has ordered a new pogo stick which will be more durable for setting records. The one presently in use is "old and worn out," the 20-year-old college student from Charlotte said today. It was obvious he was slightly disappointed the new stick didn't arrive in time for yesterday's contest.

Shuman started the pogo fad last Saturday when he asked for challengers to beat his record of jumping 501 times. Yesterday he beat his own record, by jumping the 934 times.

His competitors are both students at Greenville Junior High School. Sidney is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Mills Sr. of 215 Eastern St. Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton S. Spain of 1802 S. Elm St.

Sidney, in addition to having everlasting endurance on a pogo stick, can jump up and down stairs, in and out of doors. He has been a pogo artist for about a year now and says you don't get tired while jumping, but afterwards.

When he ended his battle to set a new record yesterday, he said he stopped not because he was tired, but "it was kind of hot."

Well, so goes pogo for today.

Occasional Civil War Skirmishes In Pitt County

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

Greenville and Pitt County were defended mostly by picket line cavalry. This liquid form of defense made it possible for raiding parties of Federals from Washington and New Bern to make forays into the territory. No big battles were fought here, but the clashes that did take place took their toll.

These happenings are part of county as well as state history. But there are no markers to tell the passerby of the events. It seems that these happenings should be taken from the pages of a local history book and faded old field reports, and put out where they can be seen.

It would make trips across the county more interesting and let newcomers to the area have a look at the history of the county.

Tranter's Creek (1) Somewhere near the spot where highway 33 crosses Tranter's Creek, a skirmish took place on Sunday, June 5, 1862. Lt. Col. F. A. Osborn, commanding about 420 Federal troops, consisting of infantrymen from the 24th Mass. Regiment, cavalrymen under Capt. Josnick, and artillerymen of the Marine Artillery, attacked the Confederates (44th N.C. Reg.) under Col. George B. Singletary.

The Confederates were barricaded on the Pitt County side of the creek. Heavy Federal gunfire failed to drive them from cover.

Col. Singletary was killed. The Confederates also lost one more killed and three wounded. Federal losses were seven killed and eight wounded.

That night the Union forces withdrew to Washington.

Black Jack (2) This sleepy little village, beneath the Black Jack oaks, was often visited by men from both sides. On one occasion, the Federals burned a church. They claimed it was used to shelter Confederate troops.

Greenville (3) On Oct. 9, 1862, the town on the banks of the Tar River was rudely awakened to the facts of war by a water invasion by the Yankees. The steamer, North Star with a 24 pound Howitzer and a crew of six men, a launch with a 12 pound Howitzer and 16 men in company with a flatboat and 17 men under Lt. McLean, pulled into Greenville.

The town was surrendered by the mayor. The Federals took a lot of mules, horses, and stores. They also took J. S. Dancy, Hodges Cobb, Hoell, Tyce, B. Albritton, R. Greene, Allen Tyce, James Forbes and William Stocks, all local citizens as hostages. These were taken to Washington but were released in a few days.

Potter's Raid

By far the largest military action that took place in Pitt was the march across it, during July, 1863.

Two weeks after the battle of Gettysburg, the Yankees at New Bern began to feel their oats. Brig. Gen. E. E. Potter started his troops in motion from New Bern on July 17, 1863 by sending Col. James Jordan with 3 Regiments (25th and 27th Mass. and 158th N.Y.) across the Neuse at Fort Anderson. These troops continued to march until they reached Swift Creek. This was accomplished by the afternoon of the 17th. They camped here and were joined on the next day (July 18) by Potter and his cavalry (3rd N. C. 12th Cav. and a Co of N. C. Union Volunteers).

On the 19th, Jordan turned back to Fort Anderson, carrying with him the spoils of war—5 heads of cattle, one loaded rifle, and about 25 slaves that he had persuaded to run off.

Potter continued on toward Greenville and within about 12 miles out, captured 15 men of Capt. C. A. White's Co. (67th N.C.).

He reached Greenville at 3 p. m. They found the place strongly entrenched but only a few sick and convalescent soldiers on hand.

The invaders strutted up and down the streets of the town. They invaded the local barrooms and aside from looting and later burning the bridge did no great damage. At 6 p. m. Potter rounded up his woody soldiers and started towards Tarboro.

Tyson's Creek (4) The Federals turned aside now and then to loot plantations along the way. They encouraged slaves to run off with them after plundering their master's houses. When they reached Tyson's Creek, they were fired on by unseen parties. But they met no real resistance and continued on their way. They reached Old Sparta at midnight and made camp.

On the 20th at 3 a. m. Potter sent Col. Jacobs off on a raid to Rocky Mount.

At 5 a. m. the rest of the troops marched on to Tarboro. In Rocky Mount and Tarboro, they did much damage, destroying mills, 1 ram and 2 steamers, cars, engines, machine shops and 800 bales of cotton. They burned the bridges in both places. All along the way, they robbed plantations, taking many horses, mules, and wagons.

Otter's Creek

On the return, they had smooth going until they reached Otter Sparta. Here they met heavy firing and continued the running fight for 4 or 5 miles. When they reached Otter's Creek Bridge, (near Falkland) they were met by a force of Confederates. This made the Federals turn and go into Greene County by the way of Fieldsboro (Waltonburg).

At daybreak on July 21 they reached the Snow Hill road. They turned southward 3 or 4 miles from Snow Hill, and dusk found them at Seufelton.

Burney's Crossroads (Coxville) (6)

On the 22nd, as the invaders came to Burney's Crossroads, the 50th N. C. Regt. from Kingston fired into the rear of the column. This was done with a small brass cannon mounted on the back of a mule. The mob that was following the soldiers broke and ran off into the woods. They threw away many valuable things taken from houses along the line of march. Fine horses had their throats cut to keep them from falling into Confederate hands. It was a picture of desolation—fine linen clothes, silverware, and other valuables lay everywhere. Crying, shrieking slaves were wandering around and hiding in the woods. The 50th N. C. fought against the Federal rear but to no avail. They reached Street Ferry at noon on the 23rd and later embarked for New Bern.

Haddock's Crossroads (7) Summer went by and soon fall came to the land. The scanty crops were harvested and the farmer looked anxiously up and down the road, hoping no looters would come again. On Thursday, Nov. 25, 1863, Federal troops consisting of First N. C. (Union troops), a company of the 12th N. Y. Cavalry under Capt. West and 40 men of the 23rd N. Y. Artillery surrounded 2 companies of Whitford's Battalion (75 men) near Haddock's Crossroads. Fifty-two were captured, one killed, four wounded. The other 18 soldiers escaped into the dense woods. The Federals took 100 stands of arms, many horses, mules and wagons. They also seized a large quantity of commissary stores.

The Yankees were successful due to the efforts of a local Buffalo (Southern Yankee), who knowing the country well guided them to the southern camp. This man by the name of Horn was rewarded by being made a captain in the Union forces.

Red Banks Church (8)

It was the night of December 30, 1863. The sun had gone down behind a bank of black clouds. There was a feel of snow in the air. The wind blew cold. But the night did not belong to the elements alone. Col. Chesney with 140 muffled Cavalrymen, made their way to the small church at Red Banks. They set the church on fire and when withdrawing ran into Co. I and K of the 41st N. C. Regiment. A sharp blinding fight took place. Soon the fight broke off, the Federals moved toward Washington and the Confederates toward Greenville. Morning found the Southern with an unsuspecting recruit—a Yankee had hidden off during the night with the wrong outfit.

Memory

Time, Asphalt roads, and the building of houses, have covered the lines of march of the yesterdays. The winds and rains of the years have blotted out the camp sites and fighting places in Pitt County. But the memory of them is still there among the trees and streams. A marker here and there would sound the long roll once more and bring back the sounds of marching feet, the gallop of cavalry and the sound of the gun.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

Anyone who has glanced at the book review journals knows what THEY are featuring as Christmas presents. And books do make nice gifts, since they come in so many sizes, weights, and colors, and are not fragile, and range in price from a quarter to the leather-bound specialties which Mark Cross of Fifth Avenue is featuring at eight-five dollars per volume.

The really personalized gift is an autographed copy of one's own latest work. A bit less imaginative would be to follow the custom of a certain lady, who for many years presented a bookish nephew only volumes bound in red, since she was convinced that that color would best harmonize with the color scheme of his apartment.

Christmas List Aside from the fiction on the bestseller list (always risky because it has a way of fading so fast) here are some works which are going well and which seem to have some chance of lasting. "Picasso's Picasso," "The Horizon Book of the Renaissance," "Great Homes of Europe," "The Wanderers of France," "Sports, USA," "La-rousse Gastronomique."

The Civil War bit of the season seems to be Bruce Catton's "The Coming Fury," and in biography it's "Citizen Hearst" and Sinclair Lewis. For confirmed Tar Heels there are always the products of the presses at Chapel Hill and Duke which deal with local subjects. Chapel Hill, for example, is advertising Josephus Daniel's multi-volume autobiography as a Christmas feature, though it came out a good many years ago.

Duke still has the five-volume "Collection of North Carolina Folklore," as fascinating gatherings of homespun from earlier days. Riddles We were looking through the first volume of this work the other night and got interested in the section on riddles. Here are a couple: It can run and can't walk. It has a tongue and can't talk. That should be easy to guess, but the second one is more whimsical and poetic: From house o' house he goes, A messenger small and slight, And whether 't rains or snows, He sleeps outside at night. Diving Into Cold Creek Can Raise The Gold Fever

By BILL BOYARSKI

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—A 13-year-old boy spent a day watching a pair of skin divers prospecting for gold in a Sierra stream.

After asking the divers innumerable questions, he talked his dad into buying him a face mask and other gear. Within a few weeks, the youthful novice had found almost $700 in gold.

Stories like this have inspired a mild revival of gold fever in California's Mother Lode, where John Marshall's discovery of the precious metal back in 1848 started a rush that rocked the nation.

Gold-hunting skin divers have also turned up in British Columbia and Alaska, the Snake River in Wyoming and Idaho, Utah's Salt Juan River and the Colorado and Rio Grande rivers.

It's hard to say how many there are. It's even harder to discover how much they find. In an excellent book on the subject—"Diving for Gold"—Keith Fuller of Sacramento tells why.

The most successful are willing to do a lot of enthusiastic talking—but not about gold. "One thing is certain: If you know how to look and where to look, you can and will find gold."

You may also find other things. Once underwater prospector came across what may well be a souvenir of the first gold rush—a human skull with a bullet hole between the eye sockets.

Searching underwater for gold isn't a new idea. In 1904, the Huron Submarine Mining and Construction Co. began working on the upper Sacramento River in northern California. Divers went to the river bottom inside caissons and held hoses that sucked in gravel which was sifted for gold. The Huron operation failed. Thirteen years later, divers in cumbersome suits tried to recover gold from California's Feather and American rivers. Again they were unsuccessful. The post-World War II skin diving craze, coming after development of the Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus, has given the most recent impetus to underwater prospecting. For the first time, divers could abandon the heavy lead shoes and unwieldy suits and move about with efficiency. Early SCUBA prospectors didn't make much money. But recently, professional miners have learned to dive and some of these men are said to have recovered a substantial amount of gold. The gold most divers find is

75-Year-Old Packhouse

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

A 75-year-old tobacco packhouse, still in amazingly sound condition, stands in its fresh coat of white paint just east of Greenville as a reminder that Greenville was not always a major tobacco center.

The two-story frame structure reminds too that Pitt County was not always one of the most prolific tobacco-producing counties in the world.

The tin-roofed packhouse is reputedly the first farm building erected primarily for storage of tobacco in the county. F. E. Brooks, 77-year-old Greenville man, says the old packhouse was built by his father's neighbor about 1887 to house a "one- or two-acre tobacco crop."

Brooks says John R. Williams, a former pastor of Red Bank Church, built the packhouse to house the first "large-scale" tobacco crop raised in Pitt County. He remembers his father, John W. Brooks, tried an acre of the golden weed himself the following year. The Brooks farm, that later grew into a grand-scale tobacco-producing operation, was about a mile east of the present site of the oldest packhouse. The structure is situated just north of U. S. Highway 264 a few hundred yards east of that highway's intersection with its bypass around Greenville.

Long Process Brooks remembers the long process of conveying the earliest tobacco crops to market. There were no markets in Greenville until the 1890s (the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade was incorporated in 1893) and the nearest market was in Richmond, Va.

In those pre-Greenville market days, the tobacco was harvested, cured and graded (using somewhat different methods than those used today) and packed into hogheads for shipment. In order to get the crop to market, Williams and Brooks were obliged to haul their hogheads to the railroad depot in

75-YEAR-OLD LANDMARK . . . Tobacco packhouse east of Greenville, claimed to be the county's oldest, stands as reminder of late 19th-century beginning of Pitt's current economic backbone—its multi-million dollar tobacco industry. (Reflector Staff Photo)

N.C. Newspaper Panel Reviews Problems In 'Sensitive News'

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—A member of a panel of newspapermen discussing the handling of "sensitive news" warned today that, "We have a responsibility not to shout 'fire' in a crowded theater."

The prepared replies of four panelists were presented at the semi-annual meeting of the North Carolina Associated Press News Council at the opening session of the two-day gathering.

Panel members were asked if their newspapers have carefully worked out principles for handling sensitive news, whether they feel their papers are sometimes used by militant groups, if their reporters were restricted in the way of free rides, meals or other accommodations, and their opinions on what newspapers should do with advance news stories about activities of non-profit groups.

Participants were Editor Brodie Griffith of the Charlotte News, Editor Herbert O'Keef Jr., of the Raleigh Times; Managing Editor Howard White of the Burlington Times - News, and Editor Dave Whitchard of the Greenville Reflector. Steed Rollins, executive editor of the Durham Morning Herald and Sun, was moderator.

Panel members agreed no hard-and-fast rules can govern handling of racial and other "sensitive" news, because each incident calls for the exercise of judgment in the public interest.

Griffith: "I can't say we have a carefully worked out plan. We do handle racial and other sensitive news... conservatively. We have a responsibility not to shout 'fire' in a crowded theater."

O'Keef: "If it's news, of course, you have to print it... A newspaper must be responsible and not inflammatory and that involves not only writing of news but how it is displayed."

White: "We have no set of rules... (We judge) each story on its own merits and what we can learn about it. When there is an area of judgment needed on our part in which we need broadened viewpoints we have a number of people in both races with whom we talk."

Whitchard: "We do not have carefully worked out principles... We try to avoid inflammatory articles and sensationalism in our stories..."

Asked if newspapers are "used" by militant groups, panel members agreed they are but said all opinions must be allowed expression—including those with whom the newspaper disagrees.

Griffith: "I'm sure that newspapers, even the most closely edited are 'used' by special groups. I know of no solution to that problem except to examine material carefully and to handle it in keeping with a sense of responsibility to the whole community."

O'Keef: "Newspapers are 'used' by groups, and that includes politicians and corporations, as well as the militants. The John Birchers, for instance, are instructed to get their propaganda across in any way possible, and they make great use of letters-to-the-editor columns."

White: "We are convinced that" attempts have been made to 'use' us both in earlier Ku Klux Klan uprisings and in sit-in demonstrations... If we are not sure of the people with whom we are dealing, we should not print it..."

Whitchard: "Newspapers are used at times by militant groups and others seeking publicity for their own ends... A newsworthy matter must be treated as news, regardless of how distasteful it is to the editor. It is our job to give the people a complete picture even if we don't like what we see."

The next question was: "Has your newspaper restricted what reporters may accept in the way of free rides, meals or other accommodations from organizations and other news sources?"

Griffith: "We try to apply a rule of reason. We don't want commercial or other organizations to attempt to buy favorable stories by favors to our people. We don't object to State College transporting a sports writer to Wyoming to cover a game."

O'Keef: "Yes, our reporters are restricted in what they may receive in covering news. Common sense, however, must be the rule; and the integrity of the reporter must be respected..."

White: "We have no firm policy... but all members of the staff are cautioned. There are those people in the wine-and-dine category who would try to place a newsman under obligation. Those who edit the copy, however, still have the authority to pitch out a story or call for a re-write."

Whitchard: "We have no hard-and-fast, written rules for reporters, but we make it clear that they are not to place themselves in a position where their objective view may be dimmed by special favors..."

The editors then were asked what newspapers should do with news stories announcing public spectacles, sponsored by non-profit groups of money-making purposes. Should a newspaper feel an obligation to support such projects?

Griffith: "A newspaper has a responsibility to support public events and certainly a responsibility in helping causes that are known to be on the up and up..."

O'Keef: "Advance stories of non-profit drives such as the United Fund of the Mass. North Carolina pageant are, in fact, news. I think a good editor can distinguish between pure promotion and news. Still, the fact that a meeting is going to be held is far less news than what took place at the meeting."

White: "We do what we can to help our regular civic and non-profit organizations in succeeding with their projects. Certainly we should feel an obligation to help on such projects..."

Whitchard: "Community undertakings are of news value and we try to treat them as such. We try to make sure that our articles on these are written from the reporter's viewpoint and not from the viewpoint of the organization's publicity chairman..."

THE CASE OF THAT WOMAN MARY STEELE AND THOSE TWO CHILDREN IS WELL KNOWN OUT HERE, TRACY.

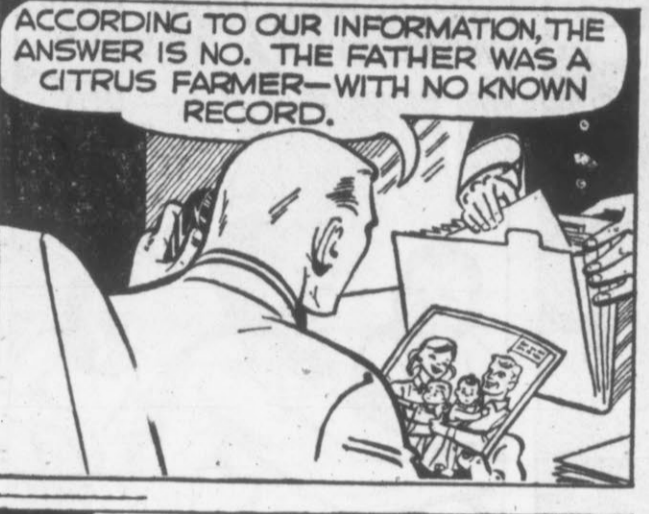

WE SAW THEIR PICTURES—AND WE REMEMBER THEM WELL.

IT'S TRUE THE PARENTS WERE KILLED IN A BOAT ACCIDENT, AND SINCE NO RELATIVES OR FRIENDS STEPPED FORWARD TO CLAIM THE KIDS, THE COURT AWARDED THEM TO THE HOUSEKEEPER, MARY STEELE.

WAS THE FATHER EVER INVOLVED IN THE UNDERWORLD? WOULD ANYONE WANT TO MURDER THE WOMAN AND SEIZE THE KIDS?

ACCORDING TO OUR INFORMATION, THE ANSWER IS NO. THE FATHER WAS A CITRUS FARMER—WITH NO KNOWN RECORD.

WHY WOULD MARY STEELE CHANGE HER NAME TO "MARY SMITH"? SMITH WAS THE PARENTS' NAME. SHE MAY HAVE DONE IT FOR THE KIDS' SAKE.

WELL, THANKS, CHIEF. OUR BIG QUESTION STILL IS—WHERE ARE THOSE KIDS?

MEANWHILE—
H'M??

HEARTHES FOR SALE

BY PEGGY GADDIS

CHAPTER 1

The sign across the ground-glass panel of the office door said "John Marshall Purvis, Atty-At-Law." In the lower left-hand panel, a small black and gold sign said modestly, "Lee Folsom; Licensed Real Estate Broker."

Lee never approached that door without a small, secret glow in her heart. And when she opened the door, her fingers managed to brush across the words with a caressing restlessness.

Sinful of her, she often told herself, to feel such delight in the fact that she had passed the Real Estate Board's examinations and now had her license. But it hadn't been easy, and she loved her work, so why shouldn't she take pride in this proof that she'd made the grade?

Finding homes for people, fitting the homes to the people, dicker over vacant lots with shrewd investors, and letting them think her a simple-minded child who did not realize the inherent value of the property—it was a profession that Lee felt surely must be one of the very best any woman of twenty-four could achieve. She came into the office this morning, glowing happily with the feeling of accomplishment that always accompanied the closing of a successful deal. The Lacey property was so right for Bill and Jane Endicott, much better for them than one of the smaller development houses with a tiny lot that wouldn't even have provided space for a sandbox for the baby Jane and Bill were so eagerly anticipating before Christmas.

The Lacey house was solidly built, sturdy, and set in the midst of a full acre of tree-shaded lot. Oh, the house was neither new nor as smartly up-to-date as the split-levels in the housing development; but it would still be standing, serene, solid and gracious, long after the housing development had become a slum.

Polly Wickett, John's briskly capable young secretary, looked up from her typewriter when Lee came in and smiled. "Congratulations on the deal, Lee," she said happily. "Mr. Purvis wants to see you."

"Thanks, Polly, I'm happy for Jane and Bill. I know they're going to love the Lacey place when they get settled," said Lee happily, and went on to the door of John's private office. "Morning Uncle John," she beamed at him. The middle-aged man behind the massive old-fashioned desk lifted his prematurely white head and beamed at her, his full-fleshed face pink and carefully barbered, his blue eyes twinkling warmly.

"Morning, Miss Folsom!" He grinned at her, and waved to the client's chair beside his desk, on which Lee perched as she returned his warm smile. "Now that we've got the Lacey property so pleasantly settled, it's time we started considering what's to be done with the Eastman place, don't you think?"

Lee groaned. "Oh, Uncle John! As if we hadn't both been struggling to find a buyer for that place ever since Mimi and Holly came to town to live with Miss Cora—very much against Miss Cora's wishes. I'm afraid—or am I being catty?"

"I don't think so," Uncle John said cautiously, a twinkle in his blue eyes. "After all, she just did it because of her deep sense of family obligation. Her brother had run through his share of the estate, while she had lived carefully and invested hers. And then she was burdened with two charming flibbertigibbets! I admit they are charming, but I insist they are flibbertigibbets!"

And catty though it may be, I agree with you!" Lee said firmly. "But where, in all of Lewisville and the surrounding area, are we going to find a buyer for three hundred acres of worn out land and a big old house that will cost at least ten thousand dollars before it can be made habitable? I ask you, Uncle John!"

"And I'm telling you, Lee honey, we've found him! Or rather, your boy friend Kermit Dalton at the bank has," Uncle John was obviously very pleased. "He'll be here at eleven, for you to take him out and show him the property."

Lee's brown-gold eyes were shining, and there was a tinge of color in her cheeks.

"But Uncle John, who is he? Not a native, I'm sure. Nobody who actually knows what the Eastman place is like would waste time going out even to look at it, she protested.

"He's from New York," Uncle John answered. "He's looking for a place to raise cattle, do a bit of farming and, I gathered from Kermit, get away from the hustle and bustle of so-called civilization!"

"Well, on the basis of that, Oakland sounds perfect for him," Lee conceded unasily. "But will he have the money for repairs? Cattle will mean cross-fencing and pasture planting and rebuilding the barns and outbuildings as well as the house."

"According to Kermit this Whitefield could buy up all of Lewisville, if he felt so inclined, and turn it into another Williamsburg and scarcely feel the pinch. In short, Lee, my girl, the man is several times a millionaire!"

"Well, for Pete's sake, what's he doing in Lewisville?" Lee gasped.

Uncle John laughed. "My dear child, a remark like that, in the wrong quarters, could get you protested. 'Why shouldn't he come to Lewisville, with all his millions? Our Chamber of Commerce—'

"Oh, fiddle-faddle, Uncle John!" Lee cut in. "I love the town as much as you do, and I'm as sinfully proud of it as you are; but after all, what do we have to offer to a man who has several times a millionaire?"

"That, my girl, is for you to find out when you show him the Eastman property," said Uncle John firmly. "He'll be here at eleven o'clock."

Lee stood up and nodded.

"And he'll leave thirty minutes after I begin showing him around Oakland," she answered.

"Well, that will be something we can't help, if it happens," he said. "Kermit and I agreed that Oakland was the only place in the whole county that sounded as if it might interest him. I'll leave to you, honey, I know you can handle it."

Lee moved slowly back to the outer office and the open window as Uncle John dismissed her. Outside, the soft early spring breeze brought the fragrance of the fields and meadows beyond the small town, which was tainted with the smells and sounds of a city. For Lewisville was really a city of some twenty-five thousand souls.

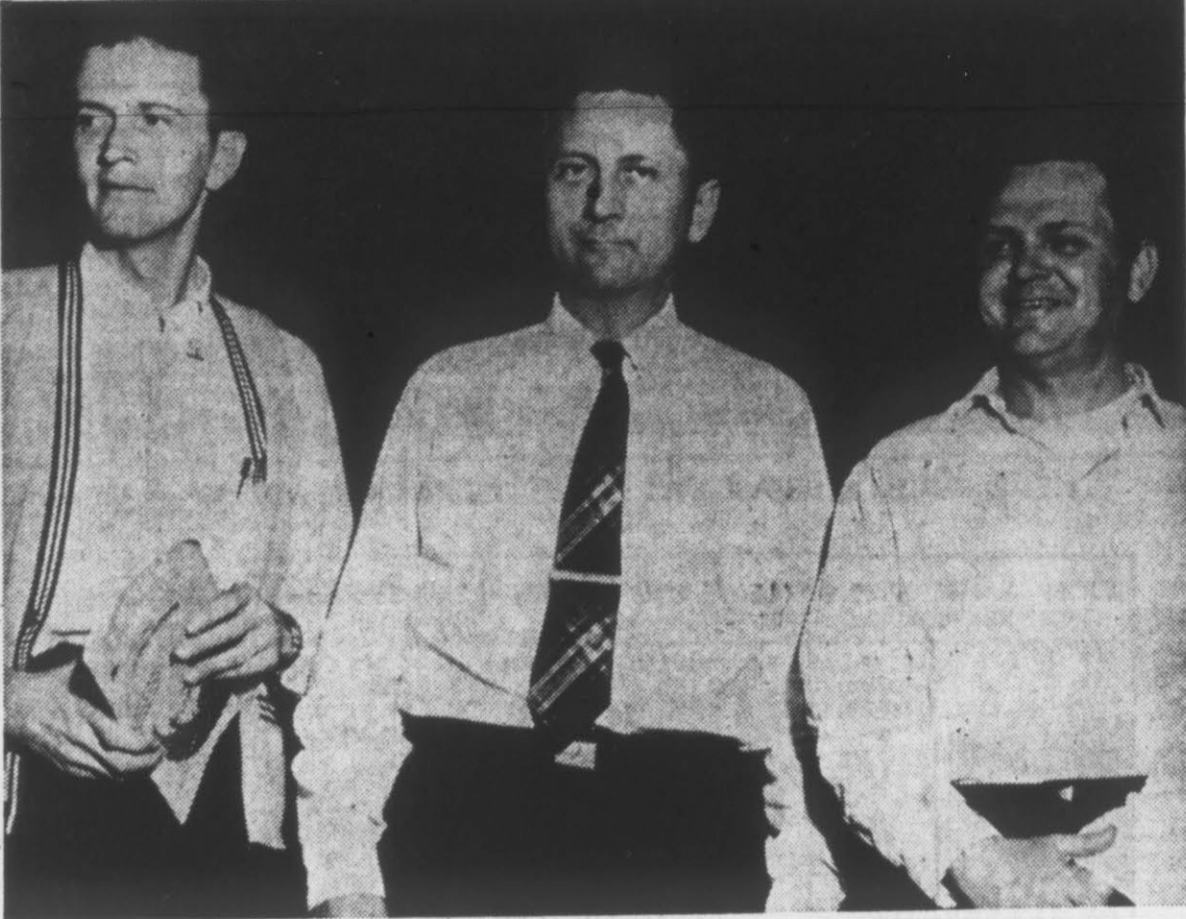

Polly, busily hammering away at her typewriter, glanced curiously at Lee, and her fingers slowed.

"You got problems?" she asked, interested.

"Hasn't everybody?" Lee answered her question with another. "Polly studied her curiously.

"It's that darned Eastman place, isn't it Lee?" she asked. "You no sooner place the Lacey property than the Eastman place demand that something be done about their ancestral home! Or was it poor Miss Cora, who must be fit to be tied at being saddled with those two?"

Lee shook her head. "It was neither," she answered. "Kermit phoned to say there's a New-Yorker in the vicinity hunting for a property where he can raise cattle, and Uncle John thinks he
