India Claims Complete Victory In Goa Blitz Invasion

BOMBAY, India (AP)—India today claimed complete victory in its lightning invasion of Portugal's three tiny territories on the Indian west coast.

Just 36 hours after Indian forces blitzed into the last footholds of European territory on the subcontinent, a Defense Ministry spokesman announced all fighting had ceased in Goa, Damao and Diu, three little Portuguese pockets totaling 1,537 square miles and about 650,000 people.

Portugal's Information Ministry, however, announced in Lisbon the receipt of an amateur radio message from Goa declaring heavy fighting persisted at Nova Goa, the capital, and the nearby port of Mormugao. The ministry said this message was broadcast several hours after the Indians made their victory claim.

Goa's governor general, Manuel Antonio Vassala e Silva, in a balcony speech from his office Monday had said the Portuguese defenders "will resist to the end." Portuguese troops along the invasion route had boxes of dynamite to blow up all bridges.

The Indian Defense Ministry announced Indian forces lost only eight killed, and a ministry spokesman said he believed Portuguese casualties were also light. He said more than 1,000 Portuguese troops had surrendered.

A report from Belgaum, the Indian command center just outside Goa, said the Indian commander, Lt. Gen. J. N. Chaudhury, hoisted the Indian flag in Nova Goa, the Portuguese colonial capital, about 9 a.m.

The report said a large crowd of Goans cheered as the flag went up and the town of 15,000 was gaily celebrating the end of 4½ centuries of Portuguese rule.

Nova Goa was the last reported pocket of resistance. An Indian spokesman said the invaders met only initial resistance there and after midnight the Portuguese defenders seemed to melt away.

Damao and Diu, which together total only 53 square miles north of Bombay, fell Monday with little or no resistance.

In New York, a Soviet veto killed a Western resolution in the U.N. Security Council calling for the withdrawal of the Indian invaders and negotiations between India and Portugal.

Reflecting the widespread Western outrage at the military action by Prime Minister Nehru, heretofore a chief advocate of peace, chief U.S. Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson charged that India and her supporters were trying to rewrite the U.N. charter to sanction the use of force when it suited their purposes.

"This can only lead to chaos and disintegration of the United Nations," said Stevenson. "Tonight we are witnessing the first act of a drama which could end in its death."

Soviet Delegate Valerian Z. Zorin countered that "there was no beginning of the end of the United Nations, but a beginning of the will to the defense of peoples and their freedom."

Official sources in New Delhi said Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon would leave shortly for New York to participate in debates on India's action. But diplomats at the United Nations looked for no further action in the General Assembly. They said the strong Asian-African bloc would defeat any move to get Indian troops out of the enclaves.

Escape was cut off for the Portuguese in Goa. No more Portuguese planes were left on Goa's only major airfield, and an Indian cruiser and a destroyer, in a 45 minute exchange of fire, drove the one Portuguese warship in the area aground.

The last refugee plane to escape from Nova Goa arrived in Karachi early today with 76 women and children and a Portuguese crew of seven aboard and bullet holes in its wings and fuselage.

Soviet Veto Blocks UN Call For Indian Pullback; Adlai Warns Of Collapse

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—A Soviet veto early today killed a Western resolution calling for the withdrawal of invading Indian troops from Goa and the two other Portuguese territories on India's west coast.

Chief U.S. Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson, who led the Western fight, told the council it was witnessing the first act of a drama which could end in the death of the United Nations.

"The League of Nations died when it allowed the use of force. The failure of the Security Council to call for a simple cease-fire in these circumstances is a failure for the United Nations," Stevenson declared.

Stevenson said the Soviet veto was not surprising since it was "one in its long role of obstruction." But he said the attitude of some other members—obviously India and its Asian and African defenders on the Council—was profoundly disturbing because they were trying to rewrite the U.N. Charter to sanction the use of force when it suited their own purposes.

"This can only lead to chaos and disintegration of the United Nations," he declared.

Soviet Delegate Valerian A. Zorin not only blocked any U.N. intervention on behalf of Portugal but supported a resolution by Ceylon, Liberia and the United Arab Republic which rejected the charges of Indian aggression, and called on Portugal to cooperate with India in liquidating the Portuguese territories on the Indian subcontinent.

India's defenders contended that the invasion was justified because the three Portuguese enclaves—Goa, Diu and Damao—were remnants of colonialism.

The Asian-African plan was rejected when the other seven members of the council voted against it. The vote on the Western plan—sponsored by the United States, Britain, France and Turkey—was 7-4. The negative votes were cast by the Soviet Union, Ceylon, Liberia and the United Arab Republic. The veto was the 99th cast by the Russians.

Western diplomats expressed dismay at the Soviet action, but there was no indication that they would seek action in the 104-nation General Assembly. Some said privately the strong Asian-African bloc in the assembly also would defeat any move to get Indian troops out of the Portuguese territories.

It appeared no further U.N. action was in sight. A U.S. spokesman said consultations were in progress, however.

The mildly worded Western proposal had deplored India's use of force and urged an immediate end to the hostilities, withdrawal of Indian forces and a solution of Indian-Portuguese differences by peaceful means.

After the vote, Zorin said the Soviet Union was proud of having prevented "The pushing through of a resolution defending Portugal and colonialism—the most shameful event of the 20th century."

Referring to Stevenson's remarks about the end of the United Nations, Zorin said: "I think that this dramatic utterance is out of keeping with the decisions taken here. There was no beginning of the end of the United Nations, but a beginning of the will to the defense of peoples and their freedom."

The growing preoccupation of the United Nations with colonialism also came under fire from the No. 2 Western member of the organization — Britain. Lord Home, British foreign secretary, told the House of Lords the situation in the Congo coull reach a point where Britain might have to withdraw its support from the world organization.

Of Course, If You Prefer To Leave Gifts For Thief--Don't Lock The Car

A PICTURE OF A THIEF . . . or at least it could be. This scene was especially posed, using a volunteer who had been walking along the street and a car—the owner unknown—which had been parked with it's doors unlocked and Christmas packages lying on the back seat of the vehicle. As shown, the man could have easily walked away with the gifts.

How generous is the average Christmas shopper? Would the average person, who has spent his or her hard-earned money buying gifts for the children and the "better half" be willing to give the presents . . . all of them . . . . to a complete stranger?

Greenville Police officials wonder about these questions.

The reason they wonder . . . last December, over $4,800 worth of merchandise was taken from parked cars whose drivers, without thinking, left Christmas packages, clothes, pocketbooks and the like in their unlocked vehicles.

According to Police Chief Guy C. Langston, "An unlocked car is an open invitation to a thief."

Shoppers and others are urged to "lock their cars when the vehicles are parked, even if there are no packages or clothes left in the vehicles. "One of the best preventive measures a person can take against an auto thief is to lock the car", Langston emphasized.

The list of thefts last year, in addition to Christmas presents, included among other things, a tool box, cameras, clothes, a battery, a shotgun, a pistol, and radio.

Chief Langston also warned shoppers, "especially ladies", against leaving pocketbooks on store counters.

The Police head reported that many pocketbooks are lost each year by persons who place them on store counters.

One of two things may happen, he pointed out. First, a passer-by might grab the purse while the customer is looking at merchandise or talking with the clerk. Another possibility, one which possibly is the most frequent, the shopper will forget the hand-bag after the transaction is completed and walk out of the store, leaving the bag for a thief to pick up.

Chief Langston also explained that shoppers should not leave children unattended while shopping, because they might become lost in the rush of Christmas shoppers.

A suggestion made to parents, however, is to instruct the youngster if he does become separated, contact the nearest Policeman and tell the officer of his predicament.

The officer in turn may take the child to the police station where the parents, unable to locate the child, can come to pick him up.

Briefly, Warm As In Springtime

Winter disappeared for a day yesterday, as Greenville's temperature shot up to 74 degrees, recorded at the local Utilities Plant.

Tuesday was to be a warm day also, with early morning readings moderately fair—57 at 4 a.m. and 56 at 8 a.m. The weatherman was predicting a chance for scattered showers along the coastal region with clearing in this vicinity.

However, colder weather was supposed to be on the way, with cooling tonight and turning cooler tomorrow. Snow flurries have been forecast for the mountains of the state. It is possible the Pitt area will get some showers tomorrow.

Rainfall up to midnight last night was .02 of an inch. Winds, which seemed gusty at times yesterday morning, reached 15 to 22 miles per hour.

The Tar River level today was at 4.5 feet, according to John Buck of the Greenville Utilities Plant.

Report Switch In Atomic Strategy

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Defense Department spokesman has declined to comment on a published report that the Kennedy administration has switched to a strategy designed to spare Soviet cities in case of nuclear war.

The Washington Star in a copyright story Sunday said such a change has been made in U.S. planning. The decision to avoid killing millions of civilians, the story said, is an effort to deter an enemy from killing millions of Americans.

Tshombe, Adoula Go Into Huddle

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — President Moise Tshombe of Katanga and Premier Cyrille Adoula of the central Congo government flew to the U.N. base at Kitona today for new talks on ending the secession of Tshombe's rich province.

Tshombe left Ndola, Northern Rhodesia, with U.S. Ambassador Edmund A. Gullion. Adoula flew from Leopoldville, accompanied by a team of his ministers and U.N. Undersecretary Ralph Bunche.

U.S. officials did not have much confidence that a reconciliation would result.

U.N. officials said the talks would be secret and Bunche, other U.N. aides and Gullion would sit in only if the Congolese asked them to. A U.S. diplomatic source insisted Gullion is not trying to act as mediator but is only "facilitating" the talks.

U.N. troops were reported in control of Elisabethville, Tshombe's capital, and the defenders who had battled with U.N. troops there since Dec. 5 appeared to have melted away into the countryside. The Katangans and their white officers were reported planning guerrilla resistance in the bush.

A U.N. spokesman in New York announced that Acting Secretary-General U Thant had ordered a cease-fire throughout Katanga for the duration of the talks between Tshombe and Adoula but that U.N. troops would shoot back if attacked.

Most diplomats in Leopoldville had little hope of a lasting agreement between Tshombe and Adoula. They said the two hold unalterably opposed positions and speculated that Tshombe might decide to continue his resistance to the central Congo government from exile abroad.

The Katangan leader has demanded local autonomy for his province, the Congo's richest because of its foreign-operated mines. The Leopoldville government, running deep in the red, is in dire need of this financial support, and Adoula has shown no weakening in his stand to downgrade Tshombe to the relatively minor role of a provincial presinent within a uniten Congo.

Reports from Elisabethville tolr of heavy fighting around the headquarters of the Belgian-owned Union Miniere mining company Monday but Katangan troops later appeared to have withdrawn from all sections of the city.

However, a whiteo fficer in the Katangan army said, "We don't mind. We are replanning our campaign on the basis of the U.N. occupying Elisabethville. Believe me, the war has just begun."

From Brussels, Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak cabled a protest to Thant, calling the fighting around the Union Miniere headquarters "pure reprisal" with no military objective.

Returns To N.C. After 3 Arrests

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. David Andrews returned home Monday night after a hectic week in Washington, where he was arrested three times during "kneel in" demonstrations in front of the White House.

A charge of obstructing the sidewalk against the 37-year-old minister was to be called in court today, but Andrews planned to forfiet a $10 bond.

A similar charge was dismissed, and a charge resulting from his reading a Bible passage on the sidewalk netted him token punishment of two hours in jail. Andrews said the American Civil Liberties Union will appeal this case.

Andrews, who heads the Methodist Center at Appachian State Teachers College here, called in his demonstrations for executive clemency for Morton Sobell, scientist convicted in 1951 of conspiracy to commit treason.

Loan 'Applicant' Pulled A Pistol

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)— J. E. Walker, manager of Globe Finance, Inc., here was filling out a loan application for a customer Monday when he looked up to find himself face to face with a pistol.

Walker told police the customer then told him to hand over the contents of two money drawers. The manager said he was forced to lie on the floor while the man escaped, firing a warning shot as he left.

The loss was estimated at $958. Walker described the bandit as a "light-skinned, freckled Negro between 22 and 25 years old."

Growing Toll

NITEROI, Brazil (AP)—Niteroi's church bells tolled a pre-Christmas dirge today as scores of the victims of Sunday's circus fire were borne to graves.

Gov. Carlos Pechanha predicted the total death toll will reach 500.

"Many of the victims now in hospitals are so badly burned they cannot live," he said.

The governor's office reported some 60 of the victims died of burns Monday night.

Medicines have been flown here from the United States, Britain, Argentina and other parts of Brazil.

"We now have enough medicine," the governor said. "What we need now is money to help the widows and orphans. We urgently need funds so we can organize help for these survivors, some of whom are destitute."

The fire, breaking out suddenly at an afternoon show, collapsed the circus tent. Many persons were trampled.

Cash Donations For 'Christmas Basket' Lagging

Pitt County's welfare department reported today receipt of only $55 to spread "Operation Christmas Basket" among at least 200 needy families in the county.

Added to the $55 in cash, however, was about $200 in pledges that Welfare Director J. S. Grimes said the department "is assured of."

Basing his estimates on the $250 that appeared available to the department, Grimes said at least $400 more would be needed to provide modest Christmas food baskets for the needy families.

Response to the appeal for cash donations seemed to be slower than for any Christmas in the last several years. The cash donations phase of the department's program for providing Christmas food for families annually follows the initial phase which includes the department's supplying names to organizations and individuals who express a desire to help spread material Christmas among the needy.

Grimes said response to the first phase of the program was continuing today. Names of 30 families were given to organizations and individuals during this morning, he said.

Requests have been received, the director said, from organizations in Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Winterville and other Pitt communities in addition to Greenville. Individuals throughout the county have asked to help, he said.

Mrs. Johanna Roebuck, in charge of the program, said today: "Donations just haven't been coming in like we expected." She said there may be more than 125 families who would go without Christmas food this weekend unless the welfare department's program is more successful.

A report from the department Monday morning showed a cash-donations figure identical to today's total—$55.

Grimes said Monday the department had planned to establish noon Wednesday as a deadline for receiving donations. Such a deadline, Grimes said, would be necessary in order to allow welfare workers and assisting volunteer to begin their holiday schedule as soon as possible.

In past years, the department's staffers have stayed on the job as late as Christmas Eve because of late donations.

Cooperating with the Christmas food program are at least three local grocers who have agreed to prepare Christmas baskets to be bought at cost with funds donated through the welfare department.

Mrs. Roebuck and Mrs. Bonnie Ross are sharing the responsibility of receiving telephone donations at the welfare office on the third floor of the County Office Building on Johnston Street here. The phone number is PLaza 8-2168.

Sukarno Orders Preparing To Invade Dutch Territory

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—President Sukarno declared today that he has ordered the Indonesian armed forces to be prepared to invade Dutch-held West New Guinea at any time. He also ordered "total mobilization of the Indonesian people."

The spellbinding Indonesian president did not indicate when the invasion would come. Officials in the West fear he may be emboldened by Indian Prime Minister Nehru's easy success against Goa and the other two Portuguese enclaves Indian troops captured today after less than 36 hours of fighting.

Sukarno accused the Dutch of "cheating Indonesia on West Irian," the name by which Indonesia refers to the big island, and ordered his people to smash efforts by the Netherlands to lead West New Guinea down the road of self-determination.

"I order you to wreck the Dutch efforts to set up a Papua puppet state and to hoist the red and white (Indonesian) flag in West Irian," Sukarno told a wildly cheering crowd estimated at one million, in a speech that was broadcast nationally.

"I order total mobilization of the Indonesian people to liberate West Irian from the grip of the Dutch," he said.

The Dutch-administered western half of New Guinea, the world's second-biggest island, changed its name to West Papua Dec. 1. The name stemmed from the 700,000 Papua tribesmen who inhabit the area.

The change was suggested by the 28-member New Guinea Council, a joint Dutch-Papuan governing council which Indonesia has labeled a puppet government.

About 18,000 Dutch and Eurasians also reside in the western part of the island, a primitive area of hostile jungles and rugged mountains. Australia governs the eastern half of the island. So far the Indonesians have made no claim to it.

"The Dutch promised to recognize Indonesian sovereignty over the whole territory of the former Netherlands East Indies but they only cheated us," Sukarno asserted, referring to the 1949 grant of independence to Indonesia.

West New Guinea was the only part of the Dutch East Indies retained by the Netherlands. The Dutch claim that West New Guinea was a part of the Indies only for administrative purposes and that there are strong ethnic differences between the Papuans and the Indonesians.

Sukarno spoke in the south central Java city of Jogjakarta, the revolutionary capital of the Indonesian republic during its fight to gain independence from the Netherlands in the early post-World War II years. His address came at a rally which commemorated the Dutch capture of the city 13 years ago.

Indonesia's armed forces total several hundred thousand men and in recent years they have been equipped with large quantities of Soviet arms, including TU16 jet bombers. The army has reinforced its garrisons in Ambon, east Indonesia, the jumping off point for any invasion of New Guinea.

At the Hague, a Dutch army source said the Netherlands has about 1,200 navy personnel in West New Guinea on the destroyer Utrecht and that two frigates, some landing patrol craft and auxiliary harbor boats are also in the area.

The Dutch also are estimated to have 16 new Neptune patrol aircraft, a dozen Hawk-Hunter jet planes, a dozen navy fighters and three Dakotas there. Dutch land forces were said to include a 1,000-man infantry battalion and about 1,000 royal marines.

Death Penalty Is Legal Again

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Capital punishment is legal in Delaware today.

Rep. Charles F. Richards, absent from Monday afternoon's voting which failed by one vote to override a veto by Gov. Elbert N. Carvel, staged an eleventh hours return and cast the deciding affirmative in the lower chamber.

Fifteen Warrants Issued In Theft Of Flakeboard Sheets

FARMVILLE—Fifteen warrants on various counts of larceny have been issued in connection with the theft of 1,949 sheets of Flakeboard from the Formica plant here.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson reported that 911 sheets valued at $2,738 have been recovered by investigating officers. He said further arrests may be forthcoming.

Value of the 1,949 missing sheets was estimated at $5,800.

Sheriff Tyson said the larceny warrants were both felony and misdemeanor charges depending on the value of the items involved.

He identified the men as: Robert E. Leggett, 23, Bell Arthur, three felony and four misdemeanor charges; Thomas Ray Allen, 26, 407 N. Main St., Farmville, two felony and one misdemeanor; Roderick Moore, 23, Rt. 2, Box 572, Grifton, one felony; L. R. Everette, 28, Rt. 2, Walstonburg, two misdemeanor; Willis Beaman, 31, Box 51, Bell Arthur, two misdemeanor.

The warrants were being served on the men this morning.

Sheriff Tyson said the theft was reported to the Sheriff's Department Dec. 5 through the Farmville Police Department. Since that time, his department, Farmville police and SBI agents E. B. Pierce and Bill Hunt Jr. have been investigating.

The Flakeboard had apparently been taken from the Formica plant over a period of time. It was recovered from several different locations, the sheriff reported.

Warrants were issued through Farmville Court and the cases are set to be heard by Mayor O. G. Spell Dec. 30. The felony charges would require trial in Superior Court.

Shaw U. Plans New Buildings

RALEIGH (AP) — Shaw University will aim a $2 million drive for new buildings for completion in 1965, when the Negro Baptist institution will celebrate its centennial.

Dr. William R. Strassner, Shaw president, said Monday the immediate goals will be a $400,000 student union and cafeteria, a $268,000 men's dormitory for 175 students; and a $536,000 women's dorm for 200 students.

Discover Graves Of 15 Infants

GREENSBORO (AP) — Fifteen graves of infants were discovered south of here Monday.

Guilford County Medical Examiner Dr. Allan B. Coggeshall said one of the graves, containing the bodies of five babies, had been uncovered by animals.

Officers found the graves after two rabbit hunters reported discovering a half - buried foreign-make car in the wooded area.

Deputy Sheriff Alvis Bailey drove to the scene after receiving the report of the buried car. Shortly after he arrived, he said, Nathaniel Everett Hargett Jr., 34, a Negro mortician, drove up in a wrecker. Hargett was arrested.

Bailey quoted Hargett as saying the car was stolen from him several weeks ago. Hargett reported the theft to his insurance company.

Near the hole where the car was buried, deputies said, they found a piece of paper containing the car's measurements.

Officers said they also found a house nearby, containing a wide assortment of articles, ranging from furniture to bicycles. Under questioning, Hargett said he was keeping the articles for a friend who moved to New Jersey.

Hargett was charged with making a false report to police in connection with the auto theft. Both Hargett and his father operate funeral parlors in Greensboro.

Can Nehru Still Rely On Words?

India, the neutralist nation which has taken a dim view of military action by other nations of the world, has now moved its military forces against Portuguese enclaves that have been a thorn in the side of the Indian government since it won its independence.

This time it was India which found itself in the role of taking by force that which it wanted and had not been able to gain through negotiation. It was India, this time, which spurned pleas that it try further negotiations to settle the differences at hand rather than taking the course of military action.

While some may concern themselves with the question of whether or not India was justified in the course of action it has now taken, it appears to us that the effect of this military action on the Indian government will be of considerably greater importance than the tiny bit of world real estate at stake.

For more than a year now the Indian government has protested the taking of its territory by military units of Red China. They have denounced the communist government government of Red China for wiping out Indian outposts along the frontier. But beyond this battle of words, the government of Prime Minister Nehru has declined to take military action even in defense of Indian territory.

Thus it is that India finds itself not only with the shoe on the other foot so far as negotiating international differences is concerned, but it likewise has used its military power to take a territory controlled by another nation for centuries, whereas it has declined to use its military to defend some of its own territory.

There was no doubt that the Indian forces could successfully overcome whatever military opposition they found in the Portuguese enclaves they have decided to take. The Portuguese government is having its difficulties at home and at the same time finds itself deeply involved in trying to hold one of its African colonies which provides a large portion of Portugal's economic strength.

By contrast with its own territory and Red China, it is highly doubtful that India could successfully compete in a military struggle with the communist Chinese even on a limited basis. While India since independence has devoted most of its effort to economic development with only meager attention to building its military strength, the Chinese communists have built a well equipped military machine with an almost limitless supply of manpower.

Will Nehru be just as persistent in the future as in the past that other nations of the world negotiate their differences rather than rattle swords at each other? Will India be just as demanding when it comes to questions of world disarmament . . . even without controls to assure that disarmament is carried out? Will India continue to rely on words while Red China nibbles away at its territory through military operations?

Answers to these questions will influence future events throughout the world as well as those of Asia.

Our Council Of State Elected

By LYNN NISBET

CABINETS — The dictionary gives as one definition of the word cabinet as "A body of advisers, especially the advisory council of a sovereign or the chief executive." In that broad sense the meaning includes such widely different functional groups as the privy council of England and the Council of State of North Carolina. Most commonly recognized use of the word is in connection with the cabinet appointed by the President of the United States to aid in administering the government.

In a recent column George Sokolsky discussed the difference between functions and responsibilities of American cabinet members and ministers chosen to head departments in parliamentary governments. The chief distinction he made is that the parliamentary ministers usually are men of recognized political stature and achievement records, who have been chosen because of special ability in the area where they are expected to serve; and each has considerable authority in his own right; while the members of the American cabinet are appointed by the President solely as his agents or representatives, and are reportable and responsible only to him.

Similar comparison needs to be made between the President's cabinet and the North Carolina Council of State. Many people fall into the easy error of regarding the two bodies as comparable in functions and authority. In fact they have very little in common.

There is no provision in the Federal constitution for a cabinet and there is no congressional act requiring the President to be controlled by the advice or suggestions from any cabinet member.

COUNCIL — In North Carolina the eight officers who correspond most closely with the cabinet members are elected by the people—the same people and through the same election processes as choose the Governor. The Council of State is composed of the elected Secretary of State, State Auditor, State Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Labor and Commissioner of Insurance. The Attorney General, also elected, is not a member of the Council of State but by constitutional investment is legal adviser to the executive department.

The mushrooming of State government during the past few years has added many appointive officers, some of whom have statutory powers greater than those accorded the Council and with salaries considerably above the elected official limit.

For this reason government in North Carolina has been coming year by year more like the Federal administration, in that increased power has been vested in the Governor. In both Federal and State governments the trend has been to individualize the executive branch. There has not been much basic change in the legislative branch, except that encroachment of executive and judicial influence has been more marked. The trend in the judiciary has been toward moe initiative action by the Supreme Court instead of waiting for the normal process of appeal from lower courts.

In popular understanding and in day by day operations the powers conferred by the constitution upon the "executive department" have been taken over by "chief executive." Many North Carolinians today do not know the distinction between the "executive department" of their State government and Governor Terry Sanford.

CHECK AND BALANCE — The United States constitution recognizes only two officers in the executive branch, the President and the Vice President. The North Carolina constitution recognizes the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor and eight other specific officers. The State constitution, supported by numerous legislative acts, sets out instances in which these other officers serve as a check and balance on what might otherwise become arbitrary or dictatorial action by the chief executive.

The Governor cannot convene a special session of the General Assembly without advice of the Council of State. He cannot allocate money out of the contingency and emergency fund without approval of the Council of State. He cannot purchase land for the State, or sign a deed transferring title to land owned by the State, without approval of the Council.

Sure, in most instances Council approval is perfunctory. The Governor almost always gets what he wants—but not quite always. There is record of instances when Governor Kerr Scott and Governor Luther Hodges were balked in some of their pet desires because the Attorney General as legal adviser disapproved the deal, or the Council of State declined to go along.

Such instances have been rare. It might well be true that public interest would have been better served by the program then proposed by the Governor than by blocking action of the Council of State. But through the years this system of check and balance among the departments and the further check on individual authority has given North Carolinians a sense of security and stability. Every suggestion that our policy of an elected Council of State be surrendered in favor of an appointed cabinet or parliamentary ministry has met vigorous popular resentment.

Four Days Left For Spreading Happiness

With just four more shopping days before Christmas the late-starters, which includes most of us, are scurrying around trying to find that particular item we saw several weeks ago, made a mental note to go back and pick up, but somehow never got around to it.

With just four more shopping days left, the eager beavers have their packages wrapped, tagged and are sitting back enjoying the last few days before Christmas.

But with just four shopping days left, there are some families in Pitt County who are still waiting for an outpouring of Christmas spirit from their more fortunate neighbors to make Christmas more joyful this year. It has been all the parents can do to keep their little ones in food, clothing and fuel these last months and a doll for the little girl, a toy for the boy will have to come from a helping hand if they come at all to these children on Christmas day. The kitchen shelf which was made to hold a store of food will have to be filled by a kindly soul at this season of the year if it is to overcome its accustomed bareness.

The four shopping days between now and Christmas still leave ample time for Pitt Countians who feel inclined to do so to lend a hand to fellow citizens who are less fortunate than they at this season of the year. Already the needs of many families for this Christmas season have been taken care of. But there are others whose names still remain on lists, unchecked.

Moralizer Now An Opportunist

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — India's Prime Minister Nehru, who made himself the world's No. 1 holier-than-thou moralizer and man of peace, can no longer act as the conscience of mankind.

He ranged from critical to indignant when Britain, France and Israel invaded Egypt, when the Soviet Union crushed the Hungarian revolt, and when the United States backed the rebel invasion of Fidel Castro's Cuba.

Now, after Sunday's Indian invasion of tiny Portuguese Goa, he is in the same boat with those he condemned. Goa has 1,537 square miles and 650,000 people on the southwest coast of India, a nation that has 450 million people.

Nehru may have achieved greatness in a number of ways as an Indian leader. But he has preached peace and avoidance of force so much that he has created an unreal image of himself.

When he was Mohandas Gandhi's disciple he accepted the master's doctrine of nonviolence as a political weapon simply because it happened to be in the right policy at the time India was seeking freedom from Britain.

It was not something he believed in absolutely. He explained once: "The majority of us, I take it, judge the issues not on moral but on practical grounds, and if we reject the way of violence it is because it promises no substantial results."

This is the doctrine of opportunism. Taking Goa promised substantial results because it would be easy. Far-off Portugal could hardly make war on India to hold its possessions.

The results if India had attacked Red China would look very much less substantial since the Communists have 650 million people and a far greater military force.

Since 1959, when Red China occupied about 12,000 square miles of Indian territory — almost 9 times the size of Goa — Nehru simply has argued.

Nehru has been under great pressure in anticolonial India to seize Goa, which Portugal took in 1510 and still holds as a colony.

Next year is election year in India for Nehru and his Congress party.

The prime minister ignored President Kennedy's plea of last Thursday to avoid the use of force.

This was a switch for Nehru, who in the past could always be relied on to deplore the use of force anywhere. He has now adopted the philosophy that might makes right.

It wasn't Nehru's only switch. Portugal has no more right to Goa than Britain had to India or France to Indochina. All three took territory because they had the power to and held the native people under thumb.

This was imperialism. Nehru has been a life-long foe of it. But his action against Goa also is imperialism, although he may call it liberation.

If all this seems a contra-

Strength For Today

WE HAD BETTER MAKE GOOD

Can the common people be depended upon to rule themselves wisely?

Well if they can't, the jig is up and we might as well face that fact and confess it. If people cannot rule themselves, who then can rule them better? Can kings, or czars, or Soviet commissars? There are certain basic requirements in human life, and one is that every human being has the right to live under that form of government which he and a majority of his fellowmen choose. The most offensive insult offered to the world by communism is the fact that this murderous system employs the term Democracy. Communism is no more democratic than were the czar and his nobles — in fact, probably not as much so.

Every human being has a right to choose a life work, to choose a mate, and to choose that form of government under which he or she will live. Added to this is the right of worship as one's conscience dictates. On these four principles the whole of human happiness is based. Anyone who tries to interfere with any of the four is criminally inclined and a public enemy.

We make lots of mistakes — ridiculous and costly mistakes —in out attempt to govern ourselves. But better govern ourselves with empty pockets and empty stomachs than to submit with empty heads and empty hearts to the domination of others.

Remember, This Is a Good Cause—

By ALVIN TAYLOR

It's A Sign--He Claimed

He was 68 years old, as he told us later. His clothing was tattered and dirty. A two-day growth of beard covered his chin. He needed a haircut, which completed his disheveled appearance.

But he was excited. He obviously had a valuable item. In his hand he carried a blackened tree limb.

As he spoke it was apparent that this grizzled old man had been drinking—and heavily. His breath reeked of liquor.

"Look at this," he exclaimed. "Look at this piece of wood. I found this monkey brushing his teeth." He pointed a wobbly finger at the limb.

Those of us in the Daily Reflector news room sought to calm him. We asked him to point out this astounding thing.

"Right here," he cried. "Don't you see his eyes? Here's his arm and this is his toothbrush."

Don Schlienz squinted. Henry Howard stared. I peered.

Nope, we all reported. We couldn't see a thing.

"There are his eyes," the man fairly shouted, his own bloodshot eyes almost sparkling.

We all looked again. Sure enough, there were two slits, but that was as far as it went. There seemed to be no other resemblance to a monkey brushing his teeth.

Our visitor pointed to a twig shooting off the branch. A smaller twig with a leaf on the end pointed in the general direction of the two "eye" slits. This, he maintained, was the toothbrush.

"I picked it up on the river bank near the radio station," he went on. "I put it in my stove and tried to set it on fire. It wouldn't burn. I poured kerosene on it and it still wouldn't burn."

There were smiles around our newsroom by now but the man persisted.

"It's a sign from the Lord," he declared reverently. "It's a sign that everybody ought to brush their teeth every day."

The group which had formed to hear of this rare discovery began to drift away. But the visitor went on. "It's a sign," he repeated.

We let him know gently that the interview was over.

He tucked the limb under his arm and moved unsteadily toward the stairs.

But he had one last word. "If there's a prize, will I get it"

He was assured that he would.

Sombre Discovery

(Henderson Dispatch)

Senator Jordan has returned from a month's trip to Europe and England, where he went to study economic conditions as to both agriculture and industry. He is a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The senator said he found Western Europe in a state of virtual boom, with wage levels nearly double those of the immediate post-war period. There is no unemployment and labor is being imported. New factories with modern machinery and new apartments are everywhere. The stores are full and the people are buying, and exports are growing. Jobs have been found even for refugees who are all put to work.

Jordan attended sessions of NATO and learned much of the Common Market, a system that establishes virtually free trade between participating countries. Therein was the sombre discovery he made. It has to do with Western Europe as a buyer of United States flue-cured tobacco.

Britain is entering the Common Market. Commonwealth countries, like Canada and South Africa, are producing enormous quantities of flue-cured similar to our crop, and doing it at much less cost and selling it to European customers at a much lower price than preferred flue-cured grown in the five belts of our Southeast. No magician is needed to envision what that means to American exports.

Nearly one-third of the crop grown here goes abroad. But if the Common Market turns to Canada and Rhodesia and Nyasaland for its tobacco, the effect will be seriously felt in this country. It will mean the loss of markets supplied by growers and exporters here. That in turn means further restrictions on production here, and hence a severe blow to the economy of tobacco growers and those sections where they live.

If American exports are thus whittled down, and if tariffs on goods coming into this country are reduced, as President Kennedy is proposing, the tobacco industry will be caught in a squeeze from which it will extricate itself only with the greatest difficulty, if at all.

Senator Jordan's thought is that what this country neels is larger exports and less competition from cheap foreign labor. If there is less of the former and more of the latter, the industry in the United States will suffer heavy losses. It could call for further paternalistic steps by the Federal government, which would be accompanied by more inflation, possibly a further devaluation of the dollar, and, as one commentator put it, the departure of gold reserves would become a flood.

The developing situation poses a serious problem for this country. Nothing will be gained by favoring foreign nations at the expense of our own economy, a process which has been going on for years, and which to considerable degree accounts for much of the competition abroad which is threatening American producers and industry.

The European Common Market and the President's proposals are a combination that deserves the most careful consideration by Congress. Certainly Mr. Kennedy should not be given a blank check to raise and lower tariffs at will. That has always been the function of Congress alone and should continue to be.

No one man should have dictatorial power over production and marketing. Congress hitherto has been fully capable of meeting and solving the problem, in so far as it is soluble, and there is no reason why it cannot continue to do so without abdicating its functions to the executive branch of the government.

A Rare Man Of The Day

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This article by Robert C. Ruark, noted columnist and author, appeared in the New York World-Telegram & Sun and more than 100 other newspapers throughout the country on Monday, Dec. 11, 1961. We are glad to reprint it for our readers, by courtesy of United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

By ROBERT C. RUARK

When Dr. Wallace E. Caldwell died in his sleep the other week in Chapel Hill, N. C., his passing was not such an event as to dwarf the antics of the newest crop of strutting members of the United Nations, nor did it squeeze out any baleful prognostications of the dimensions and results of Khrushchev's next atomic shot. It did not, of course, make the kind of space that one might expect if Arthur Schlesinger Jr., got himself creamed by a Washington taxi.

Dr. Caldwell was one of those rare, and vanishing birds, a peerless historian who did not call attention to himself except through his teaching, his honors, and his published works — the sum of which fills a handspan of fine print in Who's Who. He had no sense of publicity, and his score of scholarly efforts never reached the popular approval of say, a Toynbee. But in the field of ancient history he had no superior, and for my money, no equal.

I won't bother to list his achievements — you can find them in the archives. He was seventy-ish when he died, and he had been a teacher since 1910. He was a pure teacher — he believed in imparting knowledge in such a fashion that it would stick, instead of sliding slickly off the solid oaken craniums of his students. If ever I should need a fictional prototype of the old-fashioned educator, I think I would choose Caldwell as nearly perfect.

He was a shaggy, craggy, tweedy, rangy man, and an untidy lock of hair fell over his forehead. His mustache as I recall it was scrubby, and he always looked rumpled. He had an almost demoniacally sardonic grin; whether his teeth were false I couldn't say, but they looked false. He radiated genial orneriness.

He taught ancient history at the University of North Carolna from 1922 on, and I caught him on a couple of electives in, I believe, 1934. I went in prepared to soak up what we used to call a "crip" — a "cripple" — a cinch passing course on which a vibrant young man might catch a little sleep, but I never stayed so widely awake in my life. He was possibly the least pedantic professor I ever met. His knowledge reached out and seized you by the brain, if any.

Caldwell had a couple of house rules. Sleepers, he said, should sit in the back rows, so that their snores might not arouse the odd victim who actually wanted to hear what he had to say. He had no objection to awarding an automatic "B" to a talented athlete, if the athlete would refrain from rustling newspapers in the classroom — "presupposing," he would add, "that the kind of athletes I get can read."

For some reason he had a set against coeds, and generally managed to conduct such gory lectures in the first few days of a course that he pretty well flushed the more squeamish from his presence. He had a fund of bloody, stomach-turning anecdotes about savagery in ancient times that would usually send a clutch of the young ladies speeding, their faces slightly green, to the ladies' room. They seldom came back.

When he got his classroom sorted out, Caldwell would settle down himself to revive the ancient Etruscans, or whomever he was dealing with, until all the dust was blown off history, and you were living with the re-fleshed bones. He made the Biblically classic bad girl of Babylon as real as one of the tarnished tarts who hustled the streets of nearby Durham. You could literally smell the blood on the sacrifices in ancient Ur, and hear the buzzing of the flies around a severed goat's head. You could hear the chariots clank, the chain-mail creak, and the trumpets blow.

He taught history as I suspect it has never been taught

Local Governments In Business

By ELMER ROESSNER

Local governments are increasing competition with local businesses.

In many instances, local businesses are being taxed to support tax-free competition by the municipalities that serve them.

A thirst for more revenues is the most common cause of this competition. Whether that is the prime cause or not, municipal competition often provides more jobs for the politically faithful.

The most common form of competition, existing in all parts of the country, is the competition with landlords. Cities, with the aid of Federal funds, finance housing projects, usually for low-income groups but sometimes for luxury brackets. Some of these projects are exempted from taxes, which tends to thrust more of the tax burden on other property owners. In New York City, for example, taxes on owners of small homes have been rising rapidly, while some of the privileged enjoy low—or partially-taxed apartments.

TOUGHER COMPETITION

Cities' competition with landlords of business properties is even worse. In scores of cities, municipal parking lots, paying no taxes, compete with private parking lots and garages which pay heavy rates.

Competition extends into other fields. Many cities rent stores, stands and other retail facilities, again competing with tax-paying landlords.

New York offers another amazing example of the spread of this practice.

While there are thousands of vacant stores in the city, the Transit Authority is renting hundreds of shops and stalls in subways and other areas under its jurisdiction. The city itself also rents considerable space for business purposes and, curiously, often rents space from landlords for its own facilities.

WIDE VARIETY OF COMPETITION

In the subway system of New York are bank branches, flower stands, variety stores, bakeries, candy stores, record shops, clothing stores, shoe shine stands, lunch counters and other establishments.

Milt Grey, head of a Beverly Hills, Calif., sales organization, has been looking into the matter and reports that nearly 400 cities in Minnesota operate liquor stores with legal monopolies within city limits; that Wheeling, W. Va., operates a hotel and restaurant; that Tarboro, N. C., owns a milk plant with 600 - home - delivery customers, and that San Francisco markets its own fertilizer and soil conditioner.

Curiously, the invasion of cities into private business is rarely opposed as socialistic or communistic.

Edwards-Morgan Vows Pledged Sunday

WASHINGTON—The Riverview Baptist Church was the setting Sunday for the marriage of Miss Sue Morgan and Lendy Edwards. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Hobart Morgan and the late Mr. Morgan, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood C. Edwards of Rt. 3, Greenville.

The Rev. James B. Annis performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with palms, greenery, large floral baskets which held white gladolis and mums and seven-branched candelabra holding white tapers.

Mrs. Willard Andrews, aunt of the bride, presented a program of wedding music prior to the ceremony and used the traditional wedding marches. Mrs. Robert L. Wilson, soloist, sang "Whither Thou Goest," "O Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer" as the benediction.

The bride, escorted and given in marriage by her mother, wore a formal wedding gown of bridal satin and alencon lace featuring a scalloped neckline and a satin panel which extended to the hem of her gown. With this she wore long formal gloves. Her fingertip veil was attached to a coronet of seed pearls and irridescent sequins. She carried a bouquet of white roses and centered with a white orchid.

Miss Patricia Freeman of Swansboro, the bride's roommate at East Carolina College, was maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a street-length dress of red velveteen and carried a white muff fashioned with a red poinsettia and red ribbon streamers. Her flirtation veil was attached to a shirred coronet of white taffeta to match her muff.

The bridegroom had his father as his best man and ushers were Jerry Cummings of Tarboro, Richard Renegar of Fayetteville, Don Burris of Mt. Pleasant and Hal Smith of Vanceboro, fraternity brothers at East Carolina College.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Morgan selected a royal blue jersey sheath type dress with matching accessories and a white carnation corsage. Mrs. Edwards wore a powder blue sheath type dress with matching accessories. She also wore a white carnation corsage.

The bridal couple and their parents received in the vestibule of the church and guests were introduced by the Rev. Annis.

For traveling, the new Mrs. Edwards changed into a blue wool dress with matching coat and hat and wore the orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of Grimesland High School and at the present time is a senior at East Carolina College.

The bridegroom is also a graduate of Grimesland High School and at the present time is a senior at East Carolina College. They will both continue their education.

After a southern wedding trip, the couple will reside at Greenville Rt. 3.

Belvoir H.D. Club Has Meet

The Belvoir H. D. Club met Thursday night at the home of Mrs. J. T. Dupree for their annual Christmas party. Her home was decorated throughout with electric lighted candles and Christmas arrangements.

Mrs. Sue May, home economics agent, gave a talk on "The Meaning of Christmas." She told the group of several quick and easy dishes that could be prepared ahead of time or on the spur of the moment, to make entertaining friends a pleasure instead of a burden. She stressed the importance of our not being in too much rush, so that we could have more leisure time for our family, and more time to realize the true meaning of Christmas.

Games were played and gifts exchanged during the recreation period. Mrs. McAlvin Turner led with the games, and Mrs. Clarence Barnhill gave out the gifts which were under a beautifully decorated Christmas tree. Mrs. H. L. Lewis won the door prize.

The hostess, Mrs. Dupree, invited the group into the dining room where lime punch, peanuts and Christmas cookies were served from a table centered with a beautiful Christmas arrangement.

Mrs. Fowler Club Hostess

The Elmhurst Garden Club met with Mrs. Dave Fowler at her home in Sherwood Place. Arrangements significant of the Christmas season were placed throughout the house.

During a brief business session presided over by Mrs. Phil Goodson Jr., president, the club voted to enter pictures in the national and state engagement calendars. It was also voted by the club to push a city-wide litterbug campaign next year. To close the business session, Mrs. Goodson read "The Gardener's Night Before Christmas."

Mrs. Carl Kinlaw, program chairman, introduced Mrs. John Grier and Mrs. Howard Wilson who gave the program on "Making Christmas Wreaths." To emphasize the real meaning of Christmas, Mrs. Grier began the program by reading the nativity story. Mrs. Grier showed how to make a wreath while Mrs. Wilson showed several wreaths and explained the materials used.

During the social hour the hostess directed several Christmas games. Mrs. Fowler served coffee and individual cakes to the members and guest, Mrs. Pete Alderman, while handmade Christmas gifts were exchanged.

Third-grade pupils of an Evansville, Ind., school voted to substitute a small leafless birch tree for their traditional fir because a new girl classmate is allergic to evergreens.

CHAPTER 9

"It could be that you aren't really in love with Kermit, after all," John Purvis said to Lee Folsom.

Lee stared at him.

"D'you suppose it's that?" she asked.

"I have to admit it sounds like it," Uncle John told her. "Believe me, honey, getting married just because you're used to each other, because you've known each other, because you've known each other so long, could be a ticket to a lot of unhappiness, you know."

She was silent for so long that at last he spoke with a few words that shocked her back to awareness.

"What do you think of Martin Whitfield?"

She jerked her head up and stared at him and felt color warm her cheeks, even as she struggled for an answer.

"Think of him?" she stammered inanely.

"I was just wondering if his coming here had anything to do with all this soul-searching you are doing about Kermit," said Uncle John mildly. "You seemed perfectly contented with Kermit until now."

"Oh, but, goodness, Mr. Whitfield has nothing to do with anything," Lee protested. "It's just that it wasn't until last night that Kermit hinted he wanted me to give up my work. He said that he knew closing the Oakland deal would give me a big thrill, and he thought it should mark the end of my business career. That's why he mentioned it last night. I was surprised, because he'd never indicated that he minded my working after we were married."

Uncle John was watching her with a faintly quizzical look in his eyes, and her color burned brighter as she stood up.

"Well, thanks a lot, Uncle John."

"For what?"

She made a little gesture and smiled. "Oh, for listening to me, I suppose, even if you haven't given me any good advice."

"Oh, but I did, he insisted, the quizzical look deepening. "At least I advised you to think things over and believe me, that's very good advice!"

Lee managed a laugh and went back to her desk.

It was a fairly routine day, but she had difficulty keeping her mind on her work.

Kermit was waiting for her in the parking lot when Lee came out of the office.

"Mother is using my car," he explained as he tucked his hand through her arm. "I thought maybe you wouldn't mind giving me a lift, seeing as how I've been invited to your place for dinner."

Lee's step slowed and she looked up at him swiftly, surprised.

"Hi, now, wait a minute," Kermit protested. "You hadn't forgotten that we were going to broil a couple of steaks and I was going to mix a salad and we were going to have a cozy evening together?"

She had, of course, but she insisted guiltily that she hadn't.

"For a minute you had me worried," he admitted as he edged the car out of its parking space and waited for a break in the traffic so he could slide out into the street.

He grinned down at her. "Mother can't wait to let you in on all the family recipes that have been handed down from generation to generation; she's put special stars on my favorite dishes."

"Which I'll never be able to prepare as she does; she spoils you shamefully," Lee pointed out.

"And she hopes you'll continue to do so," Kermit told her as he slid the car to the curb in front of her apartment house and got out. Carefully he locked the doors; carefully he took out the switch key and gave it to her and waited while she tucked it in her purse.

His manner as they prepared the simple meal together was casual, almost too much so. But it was not until the meal had been finished and cleared away that he revealed what was in his mind.

As they sat side by side on the love seat beside the open window, he put his arm about her and leaned toward her.

"Well?" he asked gently yet urgently.

At that precise moment the telephone shrilled behind them, and Lee removed herself from his arm to answer it. As she lifted the receiver, heard the harried voice of Jane Endicott and knew this was going to be a long, drawn-out conversation, she glanced uneasily at Kermit.

"Jane, Jane," she said consolingly, "quiet down and listen to me. You haven't a thing in the world to worry about. Of course your title to the property is quite clear. Why, it's insured."

"But this man claims he's got a lien against it for some carpentry work that was never paid for," wailed Jane.

"Now, look, honey, I'll run out there in the morning and go over the whole thing with you," Lee told her. "Of you and Bill can come into the office and we'll consult Uncle John."

"But, Lee, Bill and I won't sleep a wink tonight," Jane wailed. "Every penny we've got in the world is tied up in this place, and if we have to satisfy a lien of almost five hundred dollars—Lee, we'll be sunk!"

It was some little time before Lee managed to soothe Jane, to convince her that there was nothing to be troubled about. As she put down the receiver, Kermit turned toward her as she came back to the love seat and smiled brightly up at him. "You were saying?"

"I was saying that this is the sort of thing that convinces me I don't want to marry an up-and-coming realtor," he told her flatly.

As though he had not meant to be so brutally frank, Kermit came back and sat down beside her. His lean, pleasantly homely face was stern and dark.

'I love you, Lee, and I want to marry you," he stated quietly. "But I want a wife who will be satisfied to be a wife; not one who's on constant call from harried clients, like a doctor or a lawyer. So you can see, Lee, the only thing for you to do is to give up this silly business of being a career girl."

Stung, Lee rose to her feet, her head held high, her face quite pale.

"So that's how it seems to you, Kermit?" she flashed hotly. "Remember I paid a bigger income tax last year than you did! I earned two thousand dollars more than you did." She broke off because he looked as though she had struck him in the face.

Before she could manage an appalled apology, before she could even be sure she wanted to apologize, she saw that she had dealt a severe blow to his male ego.

"I was wondering just when that would come up," he stated, his eyes cold. "A woman who earns more than her husband does is not a very good matrimonial risk in a place like Lewisville. So I think that answers my question. You'd much rather keep up your work than be my wife. Let's leave it at that, shall we?"

He turned and strode toward the door, where he paused to look back at her.

"It's been a lot of not much fun knowing you lately, Lee. But I wish you success in your chosen career!" he told her harshly.

The door banged shut behind him.

JFK May Have To Defend Congo Policy In Senate; Some Dissenters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration apparently is going to have to defend in the Senate its support of U.N. action in Katanga.

Although chairman J. W. Fulbright, D Ark., declined any comment, a growing division of opinion among Foreign Relations Committee members and other senators pointed today toward January questioning of Secretary of State Dean Rusk on the explosive Katanga situation.

Fulbright, a candidate for re-election next year, sold on a brief Washington visit he was engrossed in Arkansas problems and had not been briefed recently on Congo developments. Because of this he would not comment upon them.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., a committee member, has been plugging for weeks for an inquiry into the U.N. effort to bring Katanga President Moise Tshombe back into line with the Congo central government. Dodd called a news conference to air further views on the subject.

Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, another Foreign Relations Committee member, said in a separate interview he believes the U.N forces which have battered their way into Elisabethville, the Katanga capital, have been acting illegally by interfering in the internal affairs of the Congo.

Unlike Dodd, who has praised Tshombe as one of the leading anti-Communists in Africa, Lausche said he was not taking sides in the Katanga president's controversy with Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula. Dodd has said that Adoula's government is subject to strong Communist influences.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said Monday he is supporting the U.N. action in Katanga because the alternative — "confrontation between the Communist bloc and the free world in a tension spot in the Congo—woull represent a grave danger to world peace."

But Javits said critics of the U.N. position should not be ignored in any settlement. He said there must be "good faith" participation in the Adoula government by provinces "administered by the leftist Gizenga administration."

He added that Katanga and other provinces should be given "substantial autonomy," and that Adoula must see to it that the human rights provisions of the U.N. charter are enforced.

The success or failure of President Kennedy's efforts to bring about some kind of agreement between Tshombe and Adoula obviously will influence the trend of the Congo debate when the Senate resumes its sessions next month.

But even an agreement which would end the current fighting between U.N. and Katangan troops seems unlikely to quell criticism of the President and his aides for their support of the international organization's actions.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a spokesman for conservatives, has denounced the administration's policy as "suicidal" and one likely to pave the way "for a Communist takeover in the Congo."

Enlists Under 'Delay' Program

Leon Hooks Simpkins, 17, of 1512 North Pitt Street, Greenville has enlisted in the Marine Corps 120 Day Delay Program, and will go on active duty with the Marines after the holidays according to Marine Corps Recruiter Staff Sergeant Leo Smith.

Leon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Simpkins.

The way that Sgt. Smith explained it is: that the 120 Day Delay Program offers a young man the opportunity to become a Marine 120 days prior to actually going on active duty and ecruit training. During this period he has no drills, meeting or camps to attend, and he is draft exempt. The delay of 120 days, or what ever part of it that the young man wants, gives him the chance to get his affairs in order before going to recruit training.

Race Tensions In Albany, Ga. Ease

ALBANY, Ga. (AP)—A bi-racial agreement has led to an easing of racial tension in this south Georgia city, but a Negro leader says desegregation efforts will continue.

Talks between city officials and Negro leaders Monday resulted in an the indefinite postponement of trials for more than 700 Negroes arrested last week in a series of marching demonstrations.

Under the agreement, Negro leaders said they would stop the mass demonstrations. But M. S. Page, acting chairman of the Albany movement, said negotiations are to reopen next month on a broad desegregation program.

Page said his group conceded only on the demonstrations and that an economic boycott, already being felt by white merchants, wasn't discussed.

After the agreement was reached, many of the nearly 400 Negroes still in jail began posting cash bonds or, in the cases of property owners or taxpayers, gaining release on their own signatures.

One of the points of the agreement was police compliance with the Interstate Commerce Commission's order banning segregation in train and bus terminals. Last week's demonstrations started after a group of 11 Negroes andu white persons were arrested following their attempt to desegregate the railway terminal.

Bonds for the "freedom riders," originally ranging from $750 to $1,000, were cut to $200 for three Albany Negroes and $400 for the others.

City officials agreed to meet with Negro leaders on segregation issues after incoming city commissioners take office in January. Page said Police Chief Laurie Pritchett would recommend that the commission give consideration to the Negroes' proposals.

He could take one dry bone and a sliver of artifact and turn it into a wild party that was more exciting than anything Scott Fitzgerald was writing at the time. He was not frivolous about his fact or light about his subject— he just made you see them in Technicolor. After you got to be friends with Dr. Caldwell, you were invited to his house, which looked exactly like a historian's house. The yard was always full of flashing birds, because he religiously fed them. The house was full of books, because he religiously read them. Then you settled down to an informal, credit-free course in the humanities, and came away considerably enriched by the experience.

He was a great man, Wallace Caldwell, and in these days of mass-produced higher education, I doubt we will see his like in the land again.

Fraternity Holds Initiation And Christmas Party

In the spirit of Christmas Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity chapter at East Carolina College, has had an active week on campus. Beginning with an informal initiation of fall-quarter pledges and climaxing the week with a Christmas Party for a select group of children chosen by the local Salvation Army, the Delta Sig brotherhood spent each day in useful occupation.

At the informal initiation and the formal initiation, following the next day, William Hudson of Rocky Mount, William Thompson of Kinston, Frank Layne of Smithfield, and Robert Lovic of Savannah, Tennessee, were initiated into the Delta Zeta Chapter of the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi. After the formal initiation attended by only brothers and pledges a dinner and dance were held in their honor.

Jointly, with Chi Omega Sorority, the children's Christmas Party was given recently, with S. Gale Koonce, of Rocky Mount, appearing as Santa Claus. The party was planned by Chi Omega's Karen Kast of Jacksonville, Tim Ogburn of Garner, and Frank Layne, both members of Delta Sigma Pi.

diction in the man, perhaps it can be understood by this statement by Frank Moraes, an Indian journalist who knew Nehru a long time and five years ago wrote the story of his life: "It is interesting to see how his mind persuades his conscience of many things."

It explains how he can make a complete turnabout in six years.

In 1935, when some Indians suggested taking Goa wasn't much of a military problem, Nehru drew back from the thought of war.

"The fact that war is a little war doesn't make it less of a war," he said.

Then Sunday he made war, although it was a pretty safe kind of war.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued to decline on slackening volume early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 1.20 at 262.20 with industrials off 1.80, rails off .20 and utilities off .80.

Industrials sagged on a fairly broad front, losses running mostly from fractions to a point or so. A few of the recent big gainers dropped 2 or more.

Analysts said that the failure of the steel shares to respond more vigorously to the week-to-week news of increasing steel production was one factor in breeding caution. Seasonal influences, including the distraction of the holiday period, and the desire to take long-term profits on certain issues which are near their highs for the year, also were involved.

Steels, motors, chemicals, oils, tobaccos, drugs, utilities, and aircrafts were generally lower.

General Foods fell more than 2. Crown Cork was 3 lower.

Unilever Ltd. and Unilever N.V. kept minor plus signs. The rise and fall of these stocks in heavy trading last week was one reason cited for the current market uncertainty.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 3.08 at 724.63.

Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange in fairly active trading.

Corporate bonds were irregularly higher. U.S. government bonds were firm.

Merchant Board In Routine Meet

The Directors of the Greenville Merchants Association dealt with only a few items of business last night at their monthly meeting in favor of having a fellowship hour with five past presidents as guests of honor.

The business items taken up included official thanks from the board to W. C. "Bill" Taylor, chairman of the Association's Christmas parade and decorations committee, for his work on the street decorations and the Christmas parade, plus a recommendation to Greenville merchants that New Year's Day be observed as a holiday.

It was announced that ballots for the election of directors for the Association will be mailed to each member following Christmas, and the tallying committee will meet during the second week of January to count the votes.

Past presidents of the Merchants group present at the fellowship hour included H. L. Ormond, C. B. Bissette, J. B. Webb Jr., D. J. Whichard Jr., and F. Badger Johnson Jr. Director of Utilities L. P. Bloxam was also a guest.

Larry Averette, president of the Association, presided at the meeting.

H. H. Tripp Will Is Upheld By Jury Last Week

A jury trial upheld the will of H. H. Tripp in Pitt County Superior Court last week and presiding Judge Walter J. Bone awarded J. A. Tripp $25,000 from the estate.

The $25,000 awarded J. A. Tripp included $15,000 for settlement of a claim that H. H. Tripp had removed timber belonging to the former.

The 12-man panel decided four issues: (1) that the H. H. Tripp will, dated June 27, 1960, was executed property, (2) that H. H. Tripp was mentally competent to execute the will, (3) that the execution of the will was not procured by undue influence as alleged and (4) the paper presented was the true will of H. H. Tripp.

Judge Bone signed the judgement that included the $25,000 for J. A. Tripp and taxed costs of the action against the H. H. Tripp estate. Cost of the civil action, including fees for the caveators' attorneys, was set at $10,000.

Dinner Held By Local Optimists

Greenville's Optimist Club Monday treated its members' ladies to what President H. T. Money called a "special Christmas gift."

To the 40 persons attending the affair, Money explained last night's dinner meeting "is only a preliminary." A more elaborate Ladies Night observance, he said, is scheduled for early March at the completion of a current Optimist membership drive.

Members' wives and dates were guests of the club for a roast beef dinner. Following the meal, Optimists M. E. (Red) Cavendish and Carl Knott entertained by leading the group in singing Christmas carols.

Money announced the Optimists' weekly meetings would be cancelled until Jan. 8 when the regular schedule will again be resumed.

He and the club's secretary-treasurer Bill Ross reported the Optimist Christmas tree sale—an annual project—had been successful through activity at the Elm Street Park tree lot through Monday.

Condemned Building Is Being Demolished

A building located on Municipal Parking lot property on East Fifth St. has been condemned and is being demolished by Department of Public Works crews.

City Manager Louis Scheipers said Building Inspector J. W. Wilson had found the building unfit for use, bringing about the decision to tear it down.

The structure was originally a bath house for the city swimming pool. The pool was condemned in 1951. Later it was filled in, paved and converted to a parking lot.

The building has seen several uses since the pool was closed. It was a band room for Greenville High School until the new Rose High was built.

Recently it has been used as a band room for Junior High School which is located in the old high school building across Fifth St.

School Supt. J. H. Rose said this morning he did not know where the Junior High band will practice now.

"We haven't anywhere else to go," he declared. The Junior High building is now filled with seventh and eighth grade classes. Scheipers said the structure had sagged to the point where it was considered dangerous. He noted that a basement of the building, where water treatment facilities for the pool were located, will be filled in.

Clifton Earl Green, 20-year-old Negro of Route 5, Greenville, was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following an 11:50 a.m. mishap yesterday at the intersection of Mumford Road and North Pitt St.

Driver of the second vehicle involved in the collision, according to Traffic Division investigators, was Edith Clark Tice of Route 5, Greenville.

Damage was set by officers at $50 to the Green auto and $100 to the Tice car.

Three Of Top Five Cage Teams Defeated Monday

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

The ranks of collegiate basketball's unbeaten teams dwindled today as three of the nation's top five teams tasted defeat for the first time and several other powers had their untarnished records spoiled.

Cincinnati, ranked second in the weekly Associated Press poll, lost to Wichita 52-51 Monday night to set the tempo for a night of form reversals.

Providence, No. 3 nationally, fell to unbeaten DePaul 68-63 and fifth-ranked West Virginia was spilled by Duke 69-65.

Arizona State, tied for 10th in the ratings, dropped its first game in six starts, to Indiana 94-88. Temple suffered its first setback, to Kentucky 78-55, after winning five.

Two of the top ten teams stayed undefeated. First-ranked Ohio State whipped St. Louis 61-48 for its sixth straight and Kansas State, No. 4, breezed to its sixth in a row, 59-43, over Arizona.

New York University (6-0) beat Notre Dame 81-73, Utah State (7-0) rolled over San Francisco State and Illinois (5-0) upended Xavier of Ohio 81-69.

Lanny Van Eman's 15-foot jump shot with three seconds remaining gave Whicita its one-point squeaker over Cincinnati and snapped the defending NCAA champion Bearcats' 27-game winning streak—longest among major colleges. The victory was the Shockers' seventh in eight starts. The loss gave Cincinnati a 5-1 record.

Van Eman sank seven field goals in the last eight minutes. The 5-11 senior shared scoring honors with Cincinnati's big Paul Hogue, each with 19 points.

Providence, the National Invitation Tournament winner last March, lost for the first time in six outings as DePaul boosted its record to 6-0. Dick Cook and M. C. Thompson sparked the Demons to their 19th consecutive home court victory.

Duke, in extending its record to 7-1, handed West Virginia its first defeat after six triumphs. The Iron Dukes, with all of their starters playing the entire game, jolted West Virginia on the Mountaineers' floor. Jeff Mullins and Art Heyman led the Duke attack with 25 and 20 points.

Ohio State experienced little difficulty with St. Louis in enhancing its No. 1 rating. All-America Jerry Lucas paved the way with 20 points and John Havlicek contributed 17 as the Buckeyes bolted to a 32-19 halftime bulge.

Elsewhere on the basketball beat: Billy McGill clicked for 27 points as Utah downed California 64-58; Oklahoma State drubbed Tulsa 81-57; SMU spanked Alabama 71-66; Mississippi outlasted Louisiana Tech 68-64; Oregon State tripped Stanford 55-49; Iowa State beat Drake 59-30; Iowa ripped Los Angeles State 82-72; Michigan State downed South Carolina 99-91; Maryland romped over Virginia 91-70; Bradley bested Minnesota 80-47 and Air Force shaded Brigham Young 68-66.

Duke Proving To Be ACC Kingpin

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke University is proving to be the basketball kingpin of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Blue Devils, who have a 6-1 record (2-0 in the conference), upset fifth-ranked West Virginia, 69-65, Monday night in a game that kept 6,800 fans in Morgantown on the edge of their seats.

Duke was ranked seventh in the Associated Press preseason poll. It got a few votes, but didn't make the top 10, in another AP poll Monday. That was the poll that ranked West Virginia of the Southern Conference fifth.

The Blue Devils' only loss this season has been to Duquesne.

Monday night's win pretty well crops for Duke the conference prestige that belonged to Wake Forest when the season opened. The Demons were ranked third then. But since they've earned only a 3-3 record.

Elsewhere in the ACC Monday night, the University of Maryland evened up its record at 3-3 with a 91-70 varnishing of the University of Virginia. In a non-loop game, South Carolina fell to Michigan State, 99-91.

Jeff Mullins, for the second time, was Duke's high scorer, with 25 points. Art Heyman, who in the last three games has hit only 13 of 36 free shots, had 20. He was 4-12 at the foul line Monday night.

Blue Devil Coach Vic Bubas kept his starting lineup in throughout the game. The lead changed six times, and Duke never had more than an eight-point spread. It was tied 48-all with 12½ minutes to play.

At Charlottesville, it was a different type of game. Maryland's Terrapins got the lead to start with, and held it. Virginia stayed at least nine points behind throughout the game.

The Cavaliers, however, produced the high scorer in Chip Conner, who had 23 points.

The victory left the Terps with a 2-1 mark in the conference. Virginia is 0-5 in conference games, and 2-6 overall.

South Carolina's defeat under Michigan State made it three in a row for the Gamecocks. They won three in a row at the outset of the season, and stand 1-1 in conference play.

The 91 points was the most South Carolina has scored in a single game this year. They made 40 in the first half, but were behind 43 40.

USC's Budd Cronin led all scoring with 26 points. Bill Schwartz and Arch Schwarm both had 18 for Michigan State.

South Carolina visits the University of Michigan tonight, in the final Atlantic Coast Conference game until after the Christmas holidays.

Phant Cagers Meet Alumni In Contest Tonight

There will be a basketball game tonight at 7 o'clock between the Rose High varsity squad and Alumni in the high school gym sponsored by the Monogram Club.

This will be the first such game and it is hoped that it can be an annual holiday season event in future years.

Some of the old stars that will be playing for the alumni are Howard Garner, Joe Moye, Billy Cox, Erskine Duff, Dick Evans, Peter Hunt, Mac Roebuck, Charles Taff and Robert Taff.

Most of the alumni squad are still in college, but none of them are playing college basketball.

Ohio State Ranked Top In Weekly Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mighty Ohio State was a near unanimous choice as the nation's No. 1 college basketball power in the first Associated Press poll of the regular season.

Eight district boards around the country made the Buckeyes their overwhelming selection, giving them 39 of 4 first-place votes on the basis of games through last Saturday.

Cincinnati, one of several rated teams toppled in Monday night's wave of upsets, received the other first-place vote. The Buckeyes totaled 399 points to 301 for the Bearcats, with 10 points for a first, 9 for a second and so on.

Ohio State was ranked first throughout last season when the Buckeyes won 32 in a row before Cincinnati beat them in a stunning triumph for the national collegiate title. The Buckeyes were No. 1 in the AP's preseason poll.

Cincinnati's 27-game winning streak was snapped Monday night by Wichita, 52-51.

Injuries, Army Hamper Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—The Green Bay Packers had to help starring full-back Jim Taylor off the plane when they returned home Monday night to begin preparations for the National Football League championship game New Year's Eve.

Also hobbling down the ramp before a hushed welcoming crowd of 1,500 was veteran safetyman Johnny Symank. He and Taylor were taken from the plane to a hospital for examination.

Their names were only two of the seven on the list of Packer starters injured or missing because of military service. It was not certain today whether any of the seven would be able to play against the New York Giants for the league crown.

Taylor, the league's second best ground gainer in the regular season with 1,307 yards, suffered a back injury in Sunday's 24-17 victory over the Rams in Los Angeles in the last scheduled game of the season.

Symank, also hurt in the game with the Rams, said he believed he may have a torn cartilage or fractured rib in the area of the breast bone.

Others on the injury list are end Max McGee and offensive guard Jerrh Kramer.

Halfback Paul Hornung, the league's top scorer, was called to active Army duty about six weeks ago. Hornung hasn't practiced and has seen only limited duty since missing Sunday's game completely.

Called to Army duty about the same time were linebacker Ray Nitschke and Flanker Boyd Dowler. They too have missed some games entirely and played only on a limited scale in others.

Donovan 1st Pitcher In Years To Win ER Title

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran Dick Donovan became the first Washington pitcher in 33 years to win the American League earned run title in 1961 when he finished with a 2.40 average.

It will likely be the last time Donovan wins anything for the Senators. Four days after the close of the campaign, he moved to Cleveland in a five-player trade.

Donovan's championship received the official stamp of approval today with the release of the final pitching statistics by the American League Service Bureau. The 34-year-old right-hander allowed only 45 earned runs in 169 innings while compiling a 10-10 record. He is the first Senator to take the ERA crown since Garland Braxton in 1928.

Bill Stafford of New York was the runner-up in the earned run competition with a 2.68 average. He was followed by Don Mossi, Detroit, 2.96, Milt Pappas, Baltimore 3.03, Juan Pizarro, Chicago 3.05 and Ralph Terry, New York 3.16.

Although the Yankees' Whitey Ford finished 10th in ERA with 3.21, the cagy southpaw, who won the Cy Young award as the majors' outstanding pitcher, had the most victories, 25 and the highest winning percentage. He also pitched the most innings, 283, started the most games, 39.

The Cincinnati Reds, champions of the National League, will open the 1962 baseball season at home against Philadelphia on April 9.

Bowl Coach Says Rivals Superior

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — UCLA football coach Bill Barnes today viewed the Bruins' Rose Bowl rival, Minnesota, as a faster, better all-around team and All-American quarterback Sandy Stephens as a much improved field leader from the 1960 Gopher team which lost to Washington.

Barnes based his observations on the game he saw in the big bowl last New Year's Day and Minnesota films in 1961 in contests with Iowa, Purdue and Wisconsin.

Coach Murray Warmath, pleased with the warmer weather but apparently anxious about the lack of drills in the cold, wet weather back home before the team's arrival Monday, booked his squad for two workouts today.

Sherman Named NFL Coach Of Year

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Allie Sherman was named Coach of the Year in the National Football League today by an Associated Press poll of a committee of sports writers and sportscasters in the 14 league cities.

The rookie coach of the New York Giants led his club to the Eastern Conference championship and qualified for the league title game with the Green Bay Packers at Green Bay Dec. 31.

Sherman, picked by the Giants as their second choice when Vinnie Lombardi was unable to get a release from his contract with the Packers, outdistanced Lombardi in the voting. Lombardi's Packers, beaten in the league title game last year by Philadelphia, repeated as Western Conference winners.

Sherman had 17 votes. Lombardi and Norm Van Brocklin of the Minnesota Vikings each had four.

Sherman came from Brooklyn College, an unlikely background for pro football. When Greasy Neale installed the T formation at Philadelphia in 1943, he picked up Sherman. In five years with the Eagles, Sherman, a 170-pounder, always played second fiddle to Tommy Thompson and Roy Zimmerman.

Sherman worked under Steve Owen with the Giants from 1949 to 1953 and then went off to Canada to take a head coaching job with Winnipeg. He returned in 1957 as personnel director and took over as backfield coach under Jim Lee Howell in 1959 when Lombardi left for Green Bay.

Although the Giants had a so-so record in their exhibition games and absorbed a bad beating by Baltimore in their final pre-season game, Sherman did not panic.

The Giants lost their first regular season game to St. Louis and then won five straight, four on the road. They lost to Dallas at home in another upset and then rolled over the next four teams, including Philadelphia, before losing to the Packers 20-17 at Milwaukee.

They beat Philadelphia again and closed their regular season Sunday, clinching the conference title by a half game when they played a 7-7 tie with Cleveland.

Rudolph Is Woman Athlete Of Year

LINDEN, N. J., (AP) — Wilma Rudolph has, in track parlance, scored a double.

The tall, attractive will o' the wisp from Tennessee State received an early Christmas present by winning the Associated Press award as the female athceived an early Christmas present by winning the Associated Press award as the female athlete of the year for 1961, the second straight year she has been so honored.

In the voting by 250 sports writers and broadcasters, Wilma, as is her custom, finished far in front of the field by being named first on 178 ballots. Mickey Wright, the queen of women's professional golf, was second and Darlene Hard, the U. S. tennis champion, was third.

Wilma has not competed since she visited Russia last summer with the U. S. track team. She said she plans to return to Tennessee State, where she is a senior, around Jan. 2 to start practicing for the indoor season.

Others among the first 10 in the balloting were Betsy Rawls, golf; swimming stars Bonna De Varona and Carolyn House; Angela Mortimer, tennis; Anne Quast Decker, golf; Willye White, track, and Louise Suggs, golf.

Grady Wallace holds the South Carolina one-game scoring record —54 points against Georgia in 1956.

Hound Lost 25 Lbs. In Long Entrapment

GILBERT, W.Va. (AP)—Brownie, a 3-year-old rabbit hound with a master who cares, settled down today to replacing the 25 pounds he lost during 50 days entrapment in a caved-in mine shaft.

A bulldozer late Monday uncovered a hole leading into the shaft into which the dog disappeared almost two months ago.

Brownie, with protruding ribs and eyes bleary in the daylight he hadn't seen for so long, clambered into the arms of equally bleary-eyed Richard Hatfield, 21, his master.

Until a week ago, Richard's struggle to free his trapped pet had been a lonely and seemingly hopeless one. But as word spread, his neighbors made it a community project.

Richard had tried lassoing Brownie through a narrow crevice; he had tried luring him into a sack; but nothing worked.

For 18 days after Brownie disappeared while on a hunting trip with Richard he was thought dead. But whatever the dog chased into that narrow slit—probably a rabbit—seemed to have provided him with enough food to keep him going for a while.

Brownie's whimpering and barking was heard by one of Richard's numerous cousins in the small community of Hampden. Tommy Kennedy told Richard he had heard Brownie bark. That was 32 days ago.

When Charles Dillon, one of Richard's neighbors, crawled into a narrow break in the stony mountainside, Brownie was at first immobile and seemingly blind. After he adjusted to the fading daylight outside, he trotted out to his master.

Richard had visited the break every day since the dog had been located, dropping food down the slit to his pet. Water was plentiful inside the shaft.

Even so, Brownie's ribs were in plain view when he came out. His weight dropped from 45 to 20 pounds. But his tail wagged.

These gloved hands are placing sensitized film on a radioactive piston. This produces a "radio autograph," from which Shell can study the effect of deposits on top performance.

BULLETIN:

Super Shell with 9 ingredients now contains 1 quick-start component; 1 fast warm-up ingredient; 1 mileage booster; 1 anti-knock mix; 2 octane boosters; 1 gum preventive; 1 anti-icer and new improved TCP—to give your car top performance

Read the facts about today's Super Shell. You'll learn why each of its nine ingredients is essential if you want top performance from today's engines.

ENGINES TODAY are much more finicky than they were even a decade ago. That's why your car needs all of the ingredients in today's Super Shell.

Test drivers, noted for conservative statements, call many recent engines "critical." In fact, some say that you may not know how good your car's engine really is, simply because it is running below peak efficiency. Today's Super Shell is designed to help correct this state of affairs.

Read on to learn exactly how Super Shell helps every car deliver its top performance.

1. The quick-start component in Super Shell is so volatile it's kept underground.

The Butane in Super Shell is like the priming charge in a shotgun shell. Its quick-firing volatility is what gets you started fast on cold days. Butane, in fact, vaporizes so easily that it is kept under pressure—22 million gallons of it—400 feet underground! Because of Butane, your car can start in a hurry. You save your battery. You don't waste gasoline by pumping raw fuel through your engine before it catches.

2. The fast warm-up ingredient in Super Shell acts like kindling for a fire.

The fast warm-up you get with Super Shell comes from its Pentane mix. Pentanes are "kindling" molecules—split from heavier hydrocarbons.

They release their energy quickly, giving you top cold-weather performance in a hurry.

3. The mileage booster in Super Shell owes its energy to carloads of platinum catalyst.

Shell uses eight million dollars' worth of platinum catalyst to produce Platformate, the extra-energy, extra-mileage ingredient in today's Super Shell.

The platinum catalyst, which gives the Platformate its name, helps re-form petroleum into super-energy components—such as benzene, xylene, toluene.

These three alone release 11 per cent more energy per gallon than the best 100-octane aviation gasoline.

The super-energy of Platformate is teamed with the eight other ingredients in Super Shell, where it gives you that welcome extra mileage.

4. The anti-knock mix in Super Shell is so effective that one teaspoonful treats a gallon.

To detect the slightest trace of knock, Shell scientists depend on an astonishing set of instruments. This registers the faintest knocks on a delicate picture tube, and then photographs it with a high-speed camera.

Such data help Shell research men to prescribe an anti-knock mix so effective that one teaspoonful per gallon of gasoline can boost the octane rating 5 full points.

5. & 6. Both octane boosters in Super Shell have a story. One is linked with Jimmy Doolittle. The other comes from heating petroleum to 900 degrees.

Jimmy Doolittle helped pioneer the first of these high-octane ingredients for Shell aviation fuel. It is called Alkylate.

Alkylate—which took the dream of 100-octane gasoline out of the lab and put it into the sky—is now in Super Shell. It controls knocking in hot engines at high speeds far better than anything else yet available.

The second octane-boosting ingredient is "cat-cracked" gasoline for power with a purr. This is petroleum that has actually been cracked under 900-degree heat and catalytic action.

The result is a super-octane ingredient that asserts its authority the moment you put your foot down.

7. The anti-gum ingredient in Super Shell uses a chemical "policeman" to guard against gum-fouled carburetors.

Even the purest gasoline can form gum when stored. This gum clogs carburetors and fouls automatic chokes. But, with Super Shell, you needn't worry. A special gum preventive does the trick.

It acts like a policeman controlling a mob. Regulates unstable elements to help keep them from clotting. Hence no gum problem.

8. The anti-icer in Super Shell takes care of the most mysterious stalls of all.

Super Shell's formula is adjusted as often as eight times a year to beat the weather. For example, whenever the temperature is likely to drop below forty-five degrees, an anti-icer is added.

Why add anti-icer at forty-five degrees? Because, even at that temperature, frost can form in your carburetor just as it does in your refrigerator. It can choke your engine dead.

Super Shell's anti-icer tackles the problem by discouraging ice from sticking to metal parts. Result: you can forget about carburetor icing problems.

9. TCP in Super Shell increases power, mileage and plug life.

In 1953, Shell first introduced TCP*—a revolutionary additive that neutralized certain harmful effects of combustion deposits.

Today, Shell has developed a new improved TCP, cresyl-diphenyl-phosphate.

TCP can give your car as much as 15 per cent more power and up to 17 extra miles per tankful. It can also make spark plugs last up to twice as long.

Ponder these statistics. They can have a refreshing effect on your car bills.

Test Super Shell for yourself

Try today's Super Shell. You'll soon feel and hear a difference in the way your engine runs. That difference is top performance.

Shell's Butane Storage Cavern at Wood River, Illinois. Some 230,000 tons of rock were removed through a pipe only 42 inches wide. This tiny entrance posed quite a problem when getting a bulldozer down. Shell's solution? Cut the 'dozer up and weld it together again down below.

Mrs. Mary Brown had charge of the program. She read a scripture lesson from Matthew's gospel, Chapter 12 verses one through 13 which includes the Christmas Story. Safety Seminar Series Slated RALEIGH (AP) — The public talks highway safety, but doesn't give the support it should to efforts in the field, Gov. Sanford says.

"The very man who espouses law enforcement is often the one who tries to have a ticket fixed, a charge dropped, and so on," Sanford said Monday at the first annual meeting of the North Carolina Traffic Safety Council.

However, the governor said he is confident the public will respond to necessary programs to save lives. "All they need is to be informed, to be asked, and to be shown what they can do," he asserted.

To this end, he said he will participate early next year in a number of regional seminars for newspapers, radio and television, sponsored by the council.

J. M. Wasson of Charlotte, vice president and general manager of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., was elected president to succeed A. H. Galloway of Winston-Salem.

Louis E. Woodbury Jr. of Wilmington was named vice president. Robert P. Holding Jr. of Smithfield was reelected secretary, and John F. Watlington Jr. of Winston-Salem was retained as treasurer. Gov. Sanford is honorary president.

Rice U. Students For Integration

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Rice University students have voted almost 2-to-1 in favor of integrating the privately endowed, all-white school.

In an election sponsored by the Student Assembly Monday, the vote was 894 for and 476 against a resolution stating that "no restrictions based solely on race should be exercised in admission policy or in use of facilities."

Rice's charter limits the student body to whites. The school has about 2,000 students.

Court Overrules Tobacco Tag Law

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court ruled Monday that a Georgia law requiring the marking of tobacco on warehouse floors conflicts with a federal law and ruled the state law invalid.

The 1960 Georgia act required that white tags be placed on Type 14 tobacco and blue tags on other types.

The Supreme Court upheld a ruling by a special federal court, which held that blue-tagged tobacco from the Carolinas brought lower bids than white - tagged Georgia tobacco.

Growers in the Carolinas often transport their leaf to the earlier Georgia market because it can be sold in Georgia without first being tied.

The Eider Canal — opened through the Danish-ruled duchies of Schleswig and Holstein in 1784 — was the first of the world's great canals.

Time-And-Temperature Sign Now In Operation

TIME-TEMPERATURE SIGN ERECTED . . . on front of First Federal building.

A "time-temperature' display has been erected by First Federal Savings and Loan Association on the outside of their building on Evans Street and is now in operation, it was announced today by Clarence Tugwell.

The sign is one of the few in the state and will give the temperature and time in large alternating electric figures day and night. Erection of the display has been going on for several days and was completed yesterday.

The numerals change every five seconds, alternating with the time and temperature 17,280 times a day every day of the year. A copper shield throws the indicating screen into shadow, so that the lighted numerals are visible in daylight as well as at night.

The signs contains 184 twenty-five watt lamps, 112 silver contacts, four motors, almost two miles of copper wire and a complicated electronic thermometer and relay arrangement are required to keep the electronic device operating perfectly.

The illuminated figures on the time-temperature display can be seen for a distance of about 600 feet. It is reportedly the first sign of its kind in this region.

CHIVALROUS BULLS

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Tom McHugh killed a cow with his car in open range country. Then the action really started. Two irate bulls, horns lowered, charged his car and demolished it.

Doctor Saved 2 Frozen Hunters

RENOVA, Pa. (AP)—"Picture a frozen turkey; that's the way both boys looked."

That's now Dr. Frank P. Dwyer, a country doctor for 55 years, described two hunters who were literally frozen stiff.

Richard Lansberry, 26, Elyria, Ohio, and Robert G. Wise, 21, Grafton, Ohio, were found Dec. 9 by Carl Schmoke of Moshannon, and Charles Ramage of Williamsport.

Lansberry and Wise had a two-bunk hut on the floor of a truck. After readying their rifles and packing lunches for the next day in the woods, they lit an oil stove. As they slept the stove went out. Temperatures were near zero. They were sleeping in a cold storage box.

When they awoke they couldn't move. They yelled for help, Wise finally losing consciousness. Schmoke and Ramage finally heard Lansberry.

Lansberry and Wise were taken to Renovo Hospital where clergymen gave them the last rites. But Dwyer went to work and saved the two.

"Some of the tips of the toes will be removed," said the doctor, "but this will not interfere in any way with their walking."

Dwyer said he didn't want to be singled out, that all of the hospital personnel did a wonderful job.

Relays of nurses applied compresses, first cold then warmer ones, finally hot ones as the victims thawed out.

It was hours before the arms and legs of either could be stretched out. Then each had to survive fevers as high as 106 degrees. Each remained unconscious, Lansberry for 72 hours, Wise for nearly 108 hours.

Dwyer expects Lansberry and Wise will be back to work by next month.

Eisenhowers Go To West Coast

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, his wife Mamie and their perky 6-year-old granddaughter, Mary Jean, headed for the West Coast early today for an extended vacation.

The happy trio departed by train from Harrisburg shortly after 2 a.m., bound for Palm Springs Calif.

An aide said: "He'll stay until he decides to come home. Last year he stayed until March."
