

Peiping Says Security Affected By U.S. Role In South Viet Nam

Russian Summit Call Declined

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—President Kennedy is reported to have formally turned down Soviet Premier Khrushchev's latest demand for a summit meeting to open next month's disarmament conference in Geneva.

The President's reply was expected to reach the U. S. Embassy in Moscow today for relay to the Kremlin. The U. S. government probably will make it public in a day or two.

In Washington, it was understood that Kennedy again had urged Khrushchev to agree to a meeting of U. S., British and Soviet foreign ministers a few days in advance of the Geneva meeting, probably March 10.

Khrushchev's summit proposal was rejected informally earlier this week by the State Department. Kennedy was reported Friday night to have given approval to a formal rejection.

He had some time earlier to study a translation of Khrushchev's proposal.

In his 2,500-word declaration, Khrushchev hewed to the Soviet line that disarmament was such an important subject only chiefs of state should tackle it. Accordingly, he called on Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to reconsider their decision against a summit meeting to open the 18-nation disarmament conference in Geneva March 14.

Kennedy and Macmillan have said they favor starting the conference at the foreign ministers level, with a summit session to be held later if real progress developed.

Kennedy and Macmillan were reported in Washington to have discussed by telephone their reply to Khrushchev. It was considered likely that Macmillan's reply also was going out this weekend.

Macmillan was understood to have urged Kennedy to maintain the same flexible attitude toward a possible summit meeting in the spring that the two had indicated in their previous messages to Khrushchev.

There was some indication in Washington that Macmillan feared Kennedy's reply would reflect U. S. toughening on the summit issue. Macmillan wished to avoid this.

Informants said the main concern of the two Western leaders now is to obtain from Khrushchev a definitive reply to their proposal for opening negotiations at the foreign ministers level.

Kennedy took time out Friday from the heavy matters of state to help hear the nation's honors on Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., the first American to fly in a space capsule around the globe.

Kennedy flew up to Cape Canaveral, Fla., to greet Glenn, look over the spacecraft from which the astronaut rode a roaring rocket aloft, and bestow a medal on him. Monday Kennedy, Glenn and the astronaut's family will fly to Washington and another massive welcome.

Kennedy and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson flew separately to Palm Beach after the President had seen Glenn. Kennedy and Johnson, who is head of the President's Advisory Council on Space, lunched together and discussed the U. S. space program.

The President also visited with his 73-year-old father, Joseph P. Kennedy, who suffered a stroke two months ago and is recuperating.

Mrs. Kennedy took her two children, Caroline, 4, and John Jr., 1, to see their grandfather.

Already Talking New School

Administration and faculty members of the faculty were High School had begun preliminary planning for a new junior high school building before the ceiling fell in the school's gymnasium Thursday night.

Superintendent J. H. Rose of city schools said yesterday that members of the faculty were already outlining their ideas and suggestions for a new building. He informed the Greenville Board of Education of this fact at their last meeting.

When faculty and officials complete their suggestions, plans will be submitted to an architect.

Members of the board of education have discussed the building on several occasions and expressed the opinion that something needed to be done about facilities for junior high school students.

The local administration had hoped that aid for school construction would come from the federal or state governments; however, both governments have failed to make such aid available.

A section of plaster ceiling fell at the junior high gym Thursday night while a basketball game was in progress. The area which fell was about 40 by 25 feet, of heavy plaster. However, no one was hurt.

Work has already begun on tearing out the old ceiling and planning for a new, lighter one, Rose said.

TOKYO (AP)—Peiping charged today that U. S. military support of South Viet Nam seriously affected the security of Red China and Communist North Viet Nam.

The United States "is already in an undeclared war in South Viet Nam," Peiping said in a statement broadcast by the New China news agency.

Peiping denounced what it called the armed U. S. intervention in South Viet Nam.

"This state of affairs cannot be allowed to continue," the Peiping statement said. "The Chinese (Communist) government holds that the co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva Conference and the countries concerned must promptly hold consultations and take appropriate measures to eliminate the serious danger of war in southern Viet Nam."

Peiping said, "Recently, the United States of America has become more and more bold and unscrupulous in its intervention and aggression in southern Viet Nam."

The statement called on the United States "to stop at once its armed intervention in South Viet Nam and immediately withdraw all its military men and equipment there."

Peiping said, "The armed U. S. imperialist intervention and aggression in southern Viet Nam constitutes a direct threat to the security of North Viet Nam and it also seriously affects the security of (Communist) China and the peace of Asia."

The United States has about 4,000 troops in South Viet Nam to train and supply the pro-Western government of President Ngo Dinh Diem. The Americans are not regarded as combat forces but have orders to shoot back if fired upon. They go on some military missions with South Vietnamese units as advisers.

Peiping said the new U. S. "military assistance command marks the beginning of a new stage in the armed U. S. intervention in southern Viet Nam."

"This command," it said, "is by no means merely one for military assistance, but an operational command of the U. S. imperialists for direct participation."

"The United States has openly indicated that U. S. military men will shoot back if shot at. This shows in fact that the United States is already in an 'undeclared' war in southern Viet Nam."

The Peiping Foreign Ministry also accused the Kennedy administration of "preparing for waging three kinds of wars—nuclear war, conventional war and 'special warfare'—since its assumption of power acting on the will of the big U. S. monopoly groups."

Bobby Predicts United Germany

BONN, Germany (AP)—Robert F. Kennedy predicted today that divided Germany eventually will be reunited but conceded that the United States "has no magic formula" to bring this about.

The visiting attorney general indicated he thinks a change in the Soviet position might bring this about. Emerging from a conference with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer shortly after his arrival from Berlin, he told a news conference:

"The Soviets have consistently opposed reunification but things can change. There has been a tremendous upheaval in the Soviet Union in the last 10 years and many changes may take place in the years to come."

Asked if he had any special reports indicating that there would be changes in the Soviet Union, Kennedy replied: "Only what I read in the newspapers."

Kennedy also had voiced optimism at the airport on his arrival, predicting that liberty and freedom will prevail over communism.

After an airport welcome, Kennedy met with Adenauer for what was supposed to be a one-hour conference. It lasted nearly two hours.

"We are in full agreement on all matters," Kennedy said of the discussions.

At a luncheon earlier in the day, Adenauer said his talks with Kennedy were "extremely valuable." He said he is convinced that the United States is a good friend and that Americans can always count on West Germany.

Kennedy, in reply, also stressed U. S.-West German friendship and praised Adenauer as a great statesman.

In his brief talk at the airport, the visiting U. S. attorney general praised Adenauer, and said U. S.-West German relations are close.

"President Kennedy and all of the American people have the greatest admiration for the chancellor," Kennedy said. "We have had a difficult year, but we have been successful because of the efforts of the people of this country and the United States."

Kennedy's attractive wife, Ethel, wearing a bright green coat with a black fur collar and holding a bouquet of pink carnations, then stepped up to the microphones and said a few words in heavily accented German.

"My husband and I," she said slowly, "are very happy to be in Bonn."

The crowd of about 1,000 applauded.

Kennedy had taken one last look at the Communist wall before leaving Berlin and had his picture taken by East German police. In a farewell at Tempelhof Airport, he told West Berliners:

"I have been very much impressed by the courage and spirit of the Berliners. After this visit, there can be no doubt for me that West Berlin and all of the free world will prevail."

At Bonn, the welcoming West German party was headed by Justice Minister Wolfgang Stammberger. Kennedy's opposite number in this country.

Before making his short address, Kennedy told a reporter the city of Berlin had moved him more than anything else on his good will trip from the Orient through the Middle East to Europe.

"I was impressed by the courage shown by so many people who fled to freedom across the wall," he said. "And I was impressed by the determination of the people of Berlin to remain free."

Kennedy, his wife, and younger brother, Edward, rode into the capital from the airport past school children waving German and American flags and signs calling for German reunification. Overhead flew a plane trailing a streamer saying: "All Germany Free."

Before leaving Berlin the attorney general stopped atCheckpoint Charlie where he confronted armed East German policemen. The policemen grinned sheepishly and took his picture.

B-52 Commander Falls From His Plane In Flight

WESTOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Mass. (AP)—The commander of an Air Force B-52 Strato-Fortress fell from his plane Friday night while it was flying at an altitude of 31,000 feet over Thule, Greenland.

An Air Force spokesman said the commander was attempting to correct a minor electrical difficulty when the escape hatch was jettisoned accidentally and he fell out.

His identity was withheld. The big plane had left Westover Air Force Base on a training mission to Greenland. It was assigned to the 99th Bombardment Wing.

The controls were taken over by Lt. William E. Gilchrist, copilot, of Buena Vista, Iowa. The plane landed safely at Thule.

Another Nuclear Test Reported

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. Atomic Energy Commission has exploded another nuclear device underground at its Nevada test site.

The AEC described Friday's blast as low yield, meaning its explosive force was less than the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT. The test was the 17th announced by the commission since the United States resumed nuclear testing.

The nuclear vessel was to be christened by Mrs. Robert S. McNamara, wife of the secretary of defense.

Glenn Takes Weekend Of Seclusion With Family; Honors Resume Monday

By JOHN BARBOUR

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr.—his name a household word and his face familiar to schoolchildren—sought seclusion today. Few Americans, including the President of the United States, would baffle him.

For nearly three months he has been in the public eye.

But in something more than four fantastic hours Tuesday, he faced his grim task, and by his skill and the help of men of skill on the ground below, he accomplished it.

Friday he returned full circle to the place where his struggle was born, to Cape Canaveral and to Pad 14 where his Atlas rocket was launched and to Mercury Control where his friends and compatriots had waited and hoped for his safe return.

Probably the squeals and cheers of Cocoa Beach schoolchildren still ring in his ears—and the questions of newsmen and the glaring lights of television cameras are still in the recent threshold of memory.

But there, too, is the first look on the face of his wife, Anna, as he stepped from the plane that brought him to Patrick Air Force Base. And still he must remember the look of expectancy in the eyes of his daughter, Lynn, 14, and his son, David, 16, as he disembarked.

He must remember, too, the pride and interest David had as he peered into the heart of the spaceship that had carried his father three times around the world in a frenzied orbit through space.

Glenn could probably remember something of his own words as he explained the equipment dangling, now almost uselessly, inside.

"Our boosters may not be as large as some others," President Kennedy had said, "but our men and women are."

The President had made the remark before presenting Glenn with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Distinguished Service Medal.

After the ceremony in front of Hangar 8, where Glenn had trained and donned his space suit for his adventure last Tuesday, Glenn and his family and a few guests retired into the hangar for lunch.

Later, after the President had departed for Palm Beach, Glenn sat before a row of senators and congressmen and a tent nearly full of newsmen and tried to impart something of his adventure to the American public.

"It was very spectacular, looking out into this orange glow and seeing those big flaming chunks go back along the flight path," Glenn said of the only incident that caused him "major concern" during the entire flight.

He already had conquered the problem of control of the spacecraft after the automatic control equipment had proved too costly in terms of precious fuel.

Then, after the decision to try a third orbit of the earth, a new problem had cropped up. Glenn's first warning came in a word from the ground below.

"Don't jettison your braking rockets after they have fired, he was told."

These are rockets that slow the spacecraft for its plunge to earth. They are at the bottom of the bell-shaped spaceship.

Immediately, below the rocket package is the shield that protects the spacecraft and the space pilot from burning up in the enormous heat of reentry into the earth's atmosphere.

The men below, alerted by a warning light, felt that this heat shield might have come loose. The rocket package, held in place by metal straps, also could hold the heat shield in place until the danger period was over.

Glenn, his concern countered by his confidence in his comrades below, set himself for the difficult stresses of reentry and the problem of manually helping control the spacecraft during this critical period.

"It became apparent something was tearing up on the heat-shield end of the capsule," Glenn said, "because there were large pieces—anywhere from pieces as big as the end of your finger to pieces probably seven or eight inches in diameter—breaking off the edge of the capsule and coming back up past the window."

"Well, that obviously was the retropackage (braking rockets) breaking up. I thought at the time, however, that the retropackage had already been jettisoned."

"So there were some moments of doubt whether the heat shield had been damaged and whether it might be tearing up itself and this—this could have been a bad day all the way around if this had been the case."

But Glenn mastered the moment.

Monday, after his weekend with his family somewhere, Glenn will return to Washington for a motorcade at 11:15 a.m. from the White House to the Capitol. There he will address a joint session of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Tuesday, he speaks to the House Space Committee at a critical time—when the space budget is submitted.

Wednesday he speaks to the Senate Space Committee.

Then on Thursday he will ride in a ticker-tape parade up Broadway in New York City.

With this rigorous public schedule before him, and an even more arduous period of public interest behind him, Glenn spends this weekend with his family.

When newsmen asked him what his immediate plans are, and when he would go back to work, he had one word for them: "Wow."

2,000-MPH Bomber Is Quietly Being Assembled

By RALPH DIGHTON

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP)—The first 2,000-mile-an-hour B70 bomber, prototype of airliners that someday will span the continent in 90 minutes, is taking shape in a huge hangar on the Mojave Desert.

Newsman got their first look—without cameras—Friday at some of the giant sections being put together to form the 185-foot-long, 250-ton monster.

The first B70 should be completed by September and ready for flight testing before the year ends. Plans call for two others to be built—and that's all.

Despite its brute size and force—the B70's six jet engines kick out twice the thrust of the Redstone rocket that shot Alan B. Shepard Jr. into space—there's a big question about the worth of the giant bomber.

After the first three have been tested, the administration will decide whether to build more or put the money into missiles.

More than a billion dollars already have been spent. Three hundred million more will be added to the bill by the time flight testing is finished.

Meantime, more than 1,000 specialists are rushing the first B70 to completion at the North American Aviation, Inc., assembly plant here.

Newsman saw 6-foot-tall workmen standing upright inside the section of the tail that will house the B70's powerplant. Six J93 jet engines, each as large as an automobile, will be installed side by side under the bomber's huge triangular tail.

The tail, measuring almost 100 feet across, actually is the B70's wing. Up front, where wings are placed on conventional planes, are two stubby control surfaces to counteract the plane's tendency to tilt downward.

A spokesman explained that the wing was moved back to the tail to take advantage of the shock wave generated by the plane's speed, which is three times faster than sound. This pressure wave flowing back from the nose is supposed to give the B70 greater lift and speed.

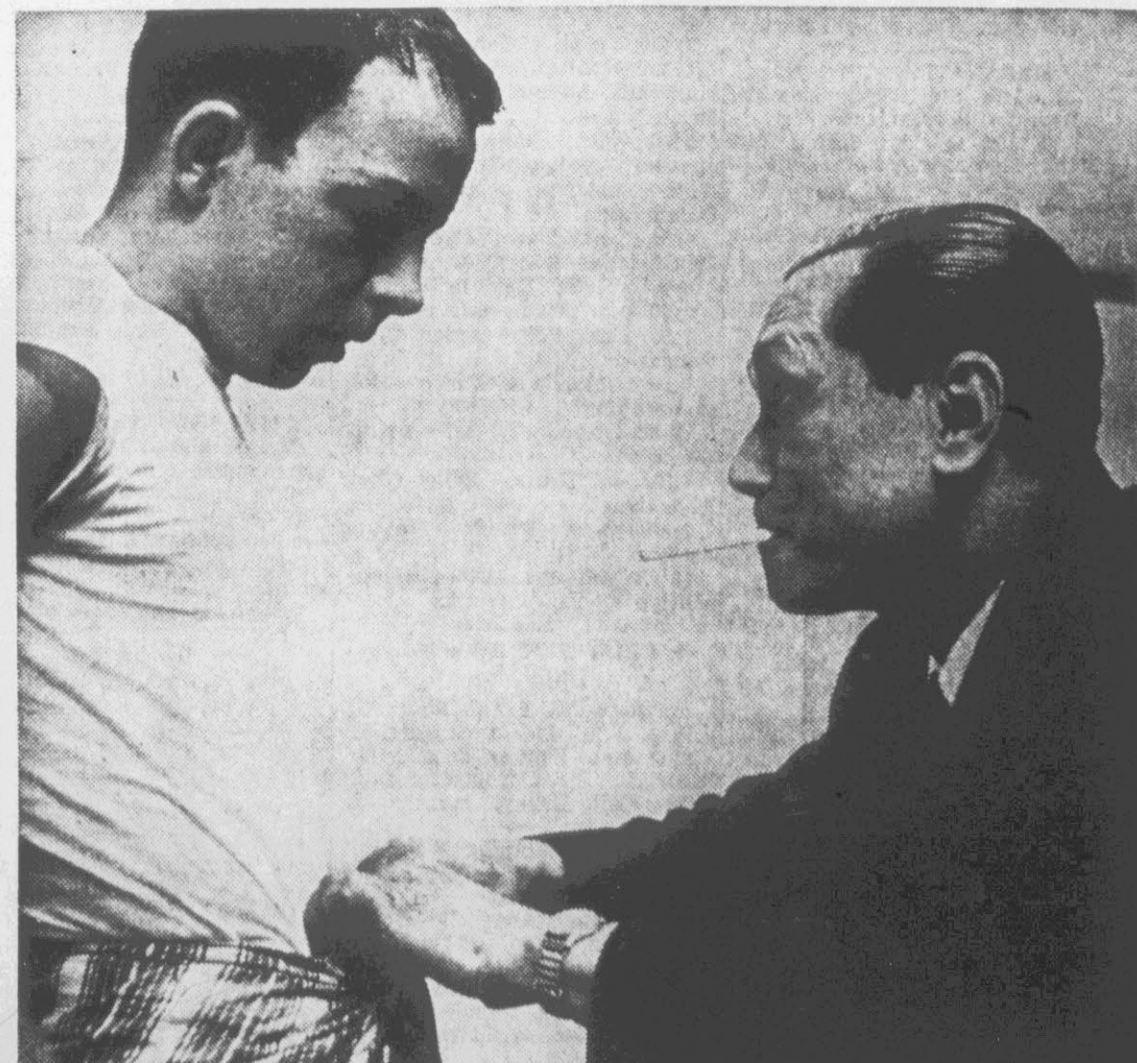

The B70 is designed to carry only four crewmen. The rest of its 10-foot-diameter fuselage is for radar instruments, fuel and nuclear weapons.

Future airliner versions should be able to carry 100 to 150 passengers.

Today's fastest bomber is the 1,400-mile-an-hour B58.

If it works as designed, the B70 will be able to cruise at 2,000 miles per hour for more than 6,000 miles with a full bomb load. The nearest thing to it in size, the 157-foot-long B52 bomber, cruises only one-third as fast.

Nation's Principals Are Told Education A 'State Of Mind'

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—American education needs new and higher goals, and a good start would be to "stop fooling students and the public about what an education is."

Warren G. Hill, state commissioner of education from Maine, had that blunt message for a national convention of high school principals today.

"Education isn't the three Rs, or homework, or unlimited facts, or a Phi Beta Kappa key, or a high school diploma, or a degree from an Ivy League college," Hill said in a keynote speech to the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

"Education is a state of mind, a sense of responsibility, a commitment, a never-ending progression toward the realization of a dream," he said.

Hill said the schools must be more realistic about what America was, and what it could be.

"Our students," he said, "will not understand their own country, its potential, its needs or its goals by just reading standard texts or tracing Grant South or drawing datelines."

"They need to know what is being proposed for us by politicians, by statesmen, by philosophers, and by crackpots—they need to be able to distinguish between the four they need to know how to evaluate, they need to be able to come up with their own objective conclusions."

commitment to quality, and improvement of standards, and a willingness to accept change.

"The new interstate highways are not being built with shovels," he said. "Astronauts are not riding in balloons. Cancer will not be cured with castor oil or aspirin. We need to utilize the best possible techniques, new or old. We need to base our actions on research, not opinions."

Hill said quality education depended on quality teachers. He urged stricter standards of admission to teacher education programs, and more rigorous and extensive teacher training.

About 7,500 high school and junior high school principals from coast to coast were expected for the five-day meeting, which

Chicod Adult Class Meets

Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 22, in the Chicod Home Economics Department, Miss Nancy Broda, home economist with VPMCO, gave a demonstration on "Use and Care of Small Appliances."

She said that small appliances add flexibility to the way of living today when people are on the go and eat outside or in other rooms than kitchen.

Miss Broda passed mimeographed copies of the recipes she demonstrated to those present. While the foods were cooking, Miss Broda discussed the different uses of the different appliances, the necessity of safety cautions and practices with electrical appliances, storage for appliances to keep them easily accessible and before using any appliance, the importance of reading the manual.

Mrs. Christine H. Smith won the door prize and the food prepared during the demonstration was served with a beverage.

The public is invited to the next adult class at Chicod school to be held Feb. 28 at 3:00 p.m. in the home economics department. Mr. Ed Ratcliffe, manager of the A & P Food Store in Greenville, will demonstrate and discuss "Food Sense Saves Cents."

What's Cooking With Young Married Set?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

An easy and pleasant way for young marrieds to entertain is to invite a few friends—if you're sure that they eat a big dinner in the middle of the day—to Sunday night supper!

So many attractive light menus to serve for this end-of-the-week meal, and we like to collect those favored by young hosts. The latest to come to our attention features spoon bread served with asparagus and cheese sauce and a fingerfood salad. For dessert, a big pitcher of milk with cookies for munching. Of course it doesn't hurt to have a pot of coffee brewing for those folk who prefer it to milk.

Besides making the menu simple, it's well to keep the service easy. Whether you serve buffet-style or set the table, Sunday night is a good time to use paper plates and cups. Nowadays these come in such durable textures and attractive patterns that they are extremely serviceable and even festive.

We tested the following recipe for spoon bread two ways: with old-fashioned waterground white cornmeal, available in some food shops and by mail order, and the modern enriched yellow cornmeal widely available in supermarkets. Because this is a soufflé-like spoon bread—not one of the classic Southern varieties—we found it held up best when made with the regular yellow meal.

GOOD SPOON BREAD

3 cups milk
1 cup enriched yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
3 eggs (separated)

Scald 2 cups of the milk in a 2-quart saucepan. Mix cornmeal with remaining 1 cup milk, salt and sugar; slowly stir into hot milk; cook and stir over moderate heat until boiling; mix in butter. Cool to lukewarm, stirring occasionally. Beat egg yolks until they begin to get thick and pale colored; beat into lukewarm cornmeal mixture. With clean beater, beat egg whites until they hold stiff peaks; fold into cornmeal mixture. Turn into buttered 1½-quart soufflé dish or similar deep casserole. Bake in a moderate oven (350° degrees) over until puffed and brown—about 1 hour. Serve at once with large spoon from soufflé dish; pass butter. Makes 4 very-large or 6 good servings.

Mrs. Phil Goodson Jr., president, presided over the business session. The club decided to hire a person to care for the planters at the Elmhurst entrance beginning in April. Mrs. John Grier was elected as representative to meet with Mr. C. K. Beatty in regard to planting dogwoods and crepe myrtles in the planters along all of Elm Street.

John Grier, club's representative to the Greenville Council of Garden Clubs, discussed the Greenville Standard Flower Show which will be held on March 14. The State Convention will be held on April 25-26 in Morehead.

Mrs. Pete Alderman and Mrs. D. G. Whitford were welcomed as new members.

Mrs. Phil Goodson Jr. presented a program on the South-eastern Flower Show. Along with the talk, she showed several slides of the flower show.

Refreshments were served by the hostess during a social hour.

Mrs. Frank W. Sheple and daughters Paula and Valerie were hostesses at a Burmese luncheon this week honoring Daw Mya Sein.

Daw Mya Sein has been in Greenville acting as advisor for the play "The Wages of Sin."

Mrs. Sheple became acquainted with Daw Mya Sein when she gave lectures to the American Women's Association in Burma, where the Sheples lived for three years. Major Sheple was assistant military attaché at the American Embassy.

They have many mutual Burmese and American friends living in Washington, D. C.

The American Legion Auxiliary was organized in 1919 for the purpose of aiding the American Legion in carrying out the great program of peacetime service to America to which the American Legion is dedicated.

It is the largest patriotic organization of women in the world and the goal for 1962 is one million members.

One of the major activities of the Auxiliary is the caring for disabled veterans of World War I and II and the Korean Conflict who are hospitalized. The Child Welfare program is built upon the pledge to maintain the integrity of the American family home. Assistance is given widows of veterans and wives of disabled men in keeping their families together; nurseries for children of disabled veterans are sponsored at government hospitals; material relief for ready children, educational assistance, and spiritual guidance are offered; adequate housing, the curbing of delinquency, cooperation with local child welfare agencies and organizations are stressed in fulfilling the slogan of the Auxiliary, "A Square Deal for Every Child."

Ten $1,000 scholarships are awarded annually to daughters of deceased veterans—known as the National President's Scholarships. Under the Rehabilitation program some 200 American Legion Auxiliary gift shops were operated this past Christmas. Auxiliary volunteer workers gift-wrap and mail the selected articles, with no charge being made for the gifts and mailing.

Greenville Unit 39, the local unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, held its first meeting on Saturday afternoon, March 18, 1922, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The first year officers were: Mrs. Charles O'Hagan Laughinghouse, president; Mrs. H. E. Austin, vice president; Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, secretary; Mrs. E. G. Joyner, treasurer; Mrs. Wiley Brown, Chaplain; Mrs. Sam Bridges—later Mrs. K. E. Pace, historian; Mrs. W. R. Jones, sgt.-at-arms. At this first meeting the speakers were: Con Lanier of Greenville and Sam Worthington of Ayden. The charter was issued Aug. 18, 1922, and there were 14 charter members, according to records. In January, 1923 there were 59 members.

Currently there are 99 members and the officers are: Mrs. Ann De La Mater, president; Mrs. Eric Whichard, first vice president; Mrs. James Worsley, second vice president; Mrs. Ann Phillips, secretary; Mrs. W. C. Martin, treasurer; Mrs. W. C. Harris, Chaplain; Mrs. Olivera Rouse, reporter; Mrs. C. L. Dupree, sgt.-at-arms; Mrs. W. C. Eagles, child welfare chairman. Mrs. Alfred Kennedy is district president and Poppy Chairman.

The Unit's Rehabilitation and Child Welfare funds are derived from the sale of American Legion-American Legion Auxiliary poppies. The Saturday preceding Memorial Day is designated as Poppy Day and on that day from early dawn until night members of the Auxiliary may be seen on the streets and in public places with baskets of poppies and the familiar expression, "Wear a Poppy." These Memorial Poppies are made of red crepe paper, by hand, by disabled veterans in hospitals who receive pay for this work, materials being furnished by the Department of the Auxiliary in the State in which the hospitals are located. The money derived from the sale of the poppies is used only for aid to veterans and families of veterans.

Gift shops are maintained and operated by the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of North Carolina, at four veterans hospitals in the State. The local unit contributes gifts and money amounting to more than $2.00 per member, the gifts donated by members and friends. Also an assigned number of hospitalized veterans receive gifts of $1.00 each for Christmas. Candy is sent to the hospitals for Easter and cigarettes for Thanksgiving.

The local Unit sends two girls to Girl State each summer, contributes to local charity drives, honors Gold Star Mothers at a program each year, and assists the American Legion with the Memorial Service held on Memorial Day. Meetings are held on the fourth Thursday of each month excepting July and August. A program chairman is appointed and listed in the Yearbook for each month and the program followed is that set by the national organization. Each year a Latin American country is studied in connection with the Pan-American Program. This year Colombia is the chosen country and stress is being given to providing basic self-help tools to villages engaged in community development. Contributions are made through CARE for help in under-developed areas of the country. A program on Colombia is planned for April. Annual contributions are made to the North Carolina Department of the Auxiliary for a Central Fund (aid to veterans), Educational Loan Fund, Day Nurseries, Hospital Library Fund, Martha Claverie Loan Fund, and Department headquarters furnishing fund.

The Child Welfare Program is carried on throughout the year. Agencies contacted as to aid for veterans' children are Welfare Department, Salvation Army, Doctors, Health Department—nurses, Parent-Teachers Association, Veterans Administration, and school supervisors. When a request comes in for aid the family is visited immediately and any urgent need in the way of food, clothing or fuel is taken care of insofar as the Unit's means will permit.

So far this year four families have been helped, and aid given to 40 children. Financial aid was given to the Summer Kindergarten Program and the School for Trainable Children. Clothing and shoes valued at $50.00 was sent to an American Legion Post in the Philippines for underprivileged school children. The present project is to collect good used, warm, clothing for "Save the Children Federation". National Security and Legislation and Civil Defense also play a large part in the program of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Reds Could Make It Another Korea

Fully aware of it or not, the United States appears to be moving into a situation in South Vietnam where it could find itself involved in a military action similar to that in Korea a decade ago.

In the support of the government of South Vietnam against communist aggression, the United States has committed a considerable amount of equipment and arms to that Asian country. It is now sending advisory teams into action with South Vietnamese troops along with pilots and other technicians. In short, the United States is affording support not only in military equipment and training personnel, but in men who are in the zones of conflict if not actually taking part in the shooting.

The situation was similar in Korea in the last decade when the South Korean government was battling communist elements from the North. Suddenly with the appearance of Chinese Communist troops in the battlelines, the United States found itself committed to the point it felt it must throw its troops into action against the aggressors.

At any moment, the Chinese communists could throw divisions of their own troops into the battle between the communist forces of North Vietnam and the government forces in the South being aided by the United States. Already the communists have afforded the arms and other equipment which has made possible the aggression of the Northern Vietnamese troops against South Vietnam. It is not out of the realm of possibility that the communists in China or in Russia might decide to act in Vietnam just as they did in Korea.

We understand the position of President Kennedy in not wanting to make public the entire U.S. position on South Vietnam for fear of giving the communists valuable information on which to base future moves. At the same time we believe it is important that the American people recognize the possibilities of another conflict similar to that in Korea growing out of the present situation in Vietnam.

A One-Day Trip To Wilmington

By LYNN NISBET

ONE DAY — Your reporter and Mrs. Nisbet "took off" Wednesday for a visit to the Wilmington area. Immediate occasion was the annual banquet of the South Eastern North Carolina Beach Association. But several other important items were crowded into the day's experience.

One was a quickie visit to Moore's Creek Battleground Park, scene of a minor but significant battle between two groups of North Carolinians at outbreak of the War of the Revolution. For lack of better designation the groups are called "loyalists" and "patriots." Good names both. The loyalists maintained allegiance to the British crown and its representatives delegated to administer government in the colony. The patriots were those who felt the time had come to resist what they regarded as unjust impositions by a foreign ruler. The patriots won that little battle in February of 1776 and the victory is credited with considerable influence on the Halifax convention in April instructing North Carolina delegates to the Continental Congress to vote for independence.

The park has been administered by the National Park Service since 1926 when the land was deeded by the State to the Federal government. It contains 50 beautifully landscaped acres around a visitors center and museum and spotted with monuments and historic markers. It is located on N. C. 210 three miles off US421 about 20 miles northwest of Wilmington. Hundreds of times I've passed by and promised myself to stop and visit the park on the next trip. Wednesday was the first visit. It was time well spent.

DIVERSITY—Next stop was lunch on Fergus Ark., the floating restaurant in the Cape Fear near the U. S. Customs house—and the only restaurant in the world known to have been rammed by a submarine and a battleship. Old stuff for me, but an interesting new experience for the lady. From the restaurant window we looked directly across the river at the majestic USS North Carolina tied up in her permanent berth. To get to the ship it was necessary to go back through town, drive a couple miles up the river, cross two bridges—the North East and Cape Fear. But we found it well worth the effort.

The story is well known of how the great battleship, known to the navy as "showboat", won the war in the Pacific, was put in storage at Bayonne, then consigned to an ignoble fate in an Atlantic ocean graveyard, from which it was saved by voluntary contributions of North Carolinians, and brought to Wilmington for a permanent memorial. The idea for the memorial originated with James Craig, a Wilmington

Underscores Need For Careful Inspections

The near-tragedy which occurred when a portion of the ceiling in Greenville's junior high school fell Thursday night is the sort of accident which causes grave concern among both school officials and citizens.

It is the kind of accident which re-emphasizes the need for careful and consistent inspection of school buildings, and particularly those buildings which have been in use for considerable time.

The fact that the plastering on the ceiling of the junior high gym was about to fall perhaps could not have been detected in a normal inspection of the building. Even so, it is reasonable to suppose that the defect had been present for some time and that the plaster could have fallen most any time. It was just by chance that the plaster fell while the gym was being used for an industrial league basketball game, at the precise moment when all the players were at the opposite end of the court from that where the ceiling fell.

A difference of a few seconds, a few hours or a few days in the time the plaster fell could have made the difference between no injuries—which fortunately was the case—and many injuries and perhaps some fatalities.

Like most other communities, Greenville has in use several school buildings which were constructed many years ago. It has renovated these buildings from time to time and it carries out an inspection program in an effort to make sure these buildings are safe for use at all times.

Even so, when an accident such as the one at the junior high school occurs, it raises the question of whether the current inspection program provides sufficient safeguards against possible tragedies in school buildings.

His Own Party Balks Kennedy

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — His own Democrats wrecked a chance for President Kennedy to make a political issue out of the ruin of his plan for a new department of urban affairs and housing.

The far-outnumbered Republicans in the House were against it but helpless to stop it without Democratic help. They got it in abundance, particularly from Southern Democrats.

This doesn't leave Kennedy room for telling city voters in this year's congressional elections the Republicans did him in. The most he can say is that he was for it. That can't help his party much.

Republicans' opposition was based on the argument that a new department would only make the government that much bigger and, since it would be concerned with cities, it would interfere with the rights of states to be concerned with cities.

It became clear that the bulk of Southern Democrats would oppose the measure after Kennedy announced that he would appoint Robert C. Weaver, a Negro, to his Cabinet to head the new agency if the department were created.

Right now the various government agencies dealing with housing are grouped under one main unit, the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Weaver is head of that. But both he and the HHPA lacked the prestige and influence which go with a department. The idea for creating such a department has been bouncing around for years.

It has been examined inside and out by congressional committees. Kennedy recommended it last year in a message to Congress. In effect, he has said the problems of cities and their people are so big they need a department.

He backed a bill to set it up. But the bill never got out of

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

EMOTION

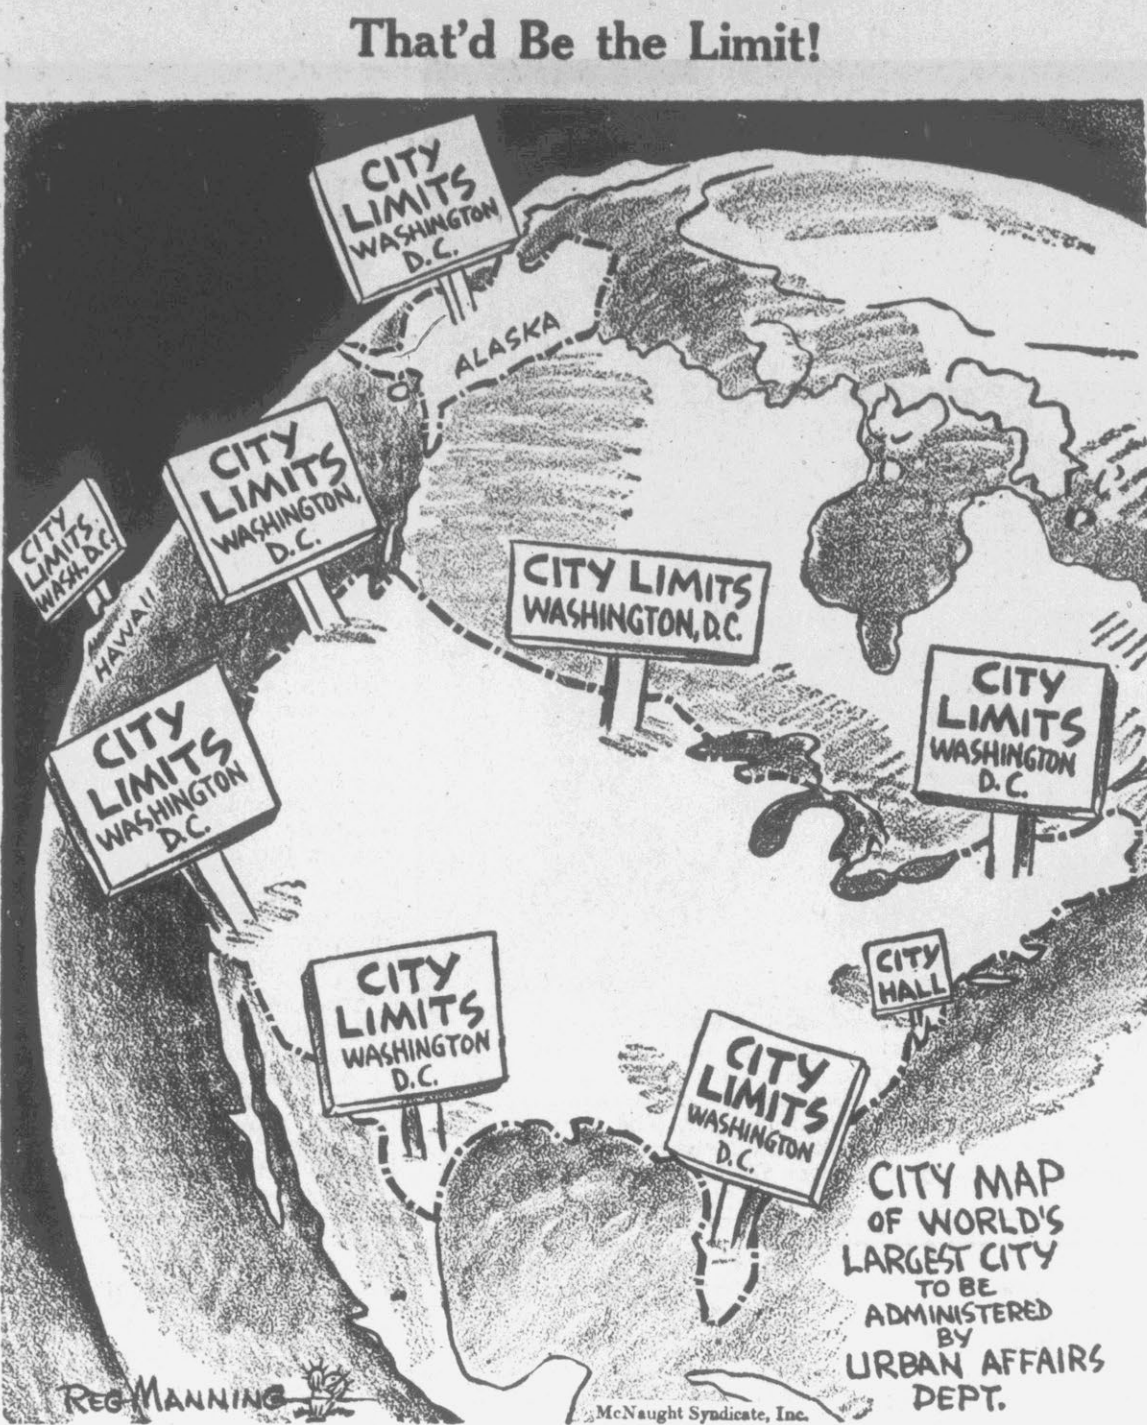

Some people have the idea that emotion is always wrong. Oh, to be sure, there is emotion in every love affair. Boy meets girl, girl meets boy, and of course, falling in love is an emotional experience. But the emotions are meant for more than romantic experiences.

Anger is a good and necessary emotion when kept within bounds and when directed only against evil and injustice. Fear is a proper emotion when we confront things of real danger. Zeal and enthusiasm will get us a long way toward success. So never let us smile at those people who appear always to be bubbling over with plans, projects, and loyalties.

Physically we are built in such a way that if our emotions get out of balance the body cannot bear them without pain and disorder. Well-channeled emotions fill life with joy and a sense of purpose. Ill-adjusted emotions, uncontrolled anger, morbid fear, sensuality in all its forms — these first corrupt the soul, then distort the mind, then tear the body apart.

Well-integrated emotions are not the only thing in the makeup of a satisfactory individual, but there can be no satisfactory life unless the emotions are well integrated. They must be controlled.

The true formula for joyous living is the proper channeling of emotions in such a way that our lives glow with lustre, our minds see the world as it is, our hearts rest in peace.

In A Philosophic Mood

By DON SCHLIENZ

The wonder of an astronaut safely orbiting our earth, and all it implies in terms of future wonders, is very much in the popular mind. No getting around it, we're going to see some marvelous things in the next two decades.

But come to think of it, the past generation saw a lot of marvels become commonplace; and perhaps they saw a greater number of revolutionary changes than we. It was a terrific half-century immediately behind us.

For instance, my father saw development of the automotive age from his infancy. He saw the tremendous growth of communication devices (telephone, radio, television) from their primitive ineptness to sophisticated systems we take for granted.

During his lifetime the airplane and air travel graduated from the dream of a few dare-devils to the commonplace; and the invasion of space had already begun, with serious talk of going to the moon and beyond.

He saw the creation of man-made fibres, plastics and their adaptation to general use; new metals and uses of metals, the introduction of innumerable household items. All changes in his lifetime that far and away surpass those in my memory (and I'm no longer a newcomer to the terrestrial scene). To match his generation, ours has a long way to go.

A friend and I were ruminating on this, and came to a tentative conclusion that there might be a new trend in scientific advances underway. . . that refinements of past and present fields would continue (transportation, communications and comforts, etc.); but we thought we could see some changes.

For instance, the discovery and development of hundreds of new drugs within the past decade . . . affecting multitudes and society in general. Uses of atomic power in peaceful and warlike pursuits. . . affecting all the world to some degree today, and more so tomorrow. And the mere existence of a United Nations organization, which is an accomplishment of worldwide impact, should not be omitted from the picture.

Looking to the promised future of space science, we see a more tightly-knit communications system covering all the peoples of the world; the accomplishment of weather-watching satellites, with potential benefit for not only individuals and individual nations, but for the world at large.

Even the great adventures of space travel, with unguessed "returns", has yielded scientific knowledge, developed new fields of study and skills. . . promising society-wide implications.

It may well be a stars-in-my-eyes concept, but I'm inclined to think the present generation is seeing a new trend in the kinds of discoveries and accomplishments.

Society (there's that word, again) seems to have begun building upon past achievements that affected individual lives and is getting into fields of discovery that can and may change the course of all mankind. One might say this attitude has reached into government with a sort of mutual understanding "we're all in this together," and striving to understand and help one another to a degree history has never witnessed before.

Yessir. The past generation saw some marvels, but the next thirty years ought to produce some startling changes too. I suspect that we today are too close to the trees to see the woods.

One result of this undue power of the rural vote is that state legislatures ignore the needs of cities. Many U. S. cities by-pass their state governments and turn directly to Washington for aid on urban renewal, housing, etc.

The most serious effect, however, and one that is noticeable in the present Congress, is that rural-dominated state legislatures maintain Congressional districts that give disproportionate influence to the rural vote. This results in a national House of Representatives that is dominated by rural interests at a time when the population of America is moving at a faster rate than ever out of the country into the suburbs and the big cities. It is essentially undemocratic.

With the dwindling of economic prospects of agriculture, this population movement will continue and probably even accelerate. Unless state legislatures can work out their own reapportionment — which appears highly doubtful — the present unequal representation will become more unequal.

The only other alternative is action by federal courts to require legislative reapportionment. A Tennessee reapportionment case is now pending before the Supreme Court. If it should be decided in favor of court-ordered reapportionment, a log-jam of such procedures could be started moving. This appears to be the only practical way to get the job done, and the sooner it comes the better. Continuation could have far-reaching national and even international consequences at a time when American democracy above all needs to work.

Planning Ahead For Tariff Cuts

By ELMER ROESSNER

Commerce Department is quietly shaping a what-to-do program if Congress grants the President power to lower tariffs to maintain trade with the European Common Market. You can look for:

Industry - by industry advice. When lower tariff makes competition more difficult for industries, expect Commerce to send in experts with ideas for making new products, finding new markets and so on.

Technical guidance. Commerce will be forewarned of possible tariff changes and it keeps one representative, technical information ready to show possible opportunities to affected industries.

Other look-aheads in business:

Toy commercial complaints: The Federal Trade Commission has evidence that some toy manufacturers did not change pre-Christmas toy commercials so as not to mislead youngsters. A passel of complaints is about to be served on manufacturers who did not live up to the code.

UNCLE SAME EYEING COUPON BOOKS
Coupon plans also suspect:

"The FTC is also looking into plans whereby consumers get books of coupons good for discounts on various items. If these mean one price for some dealers and some customers, but not for others, the FTC will crack down. One company has already been ordered to discontinue inducing discriminatory price and allowances from suppliers through its book plan.

Knob steering: Detroit is working on plans to replace the steering wheel with knobs. They may appear experimentally on one 1963 model.

Garbage can replacement: Tough, disposable paper bags have been tested in Montclair, N. J., as a substitute for garbage cans. More than 80 per cent of the households favored them, even in winter weather. Now that acceptance has been proved, Westvaco, the maker, is mapping a high-pressure sales campaign to get cities to approve the system.

"SEND BOY THROUGH COLLEGE"
New real estate promotion: Real estate groups are working on a new sales theme: "Buy income-producing real estate and assure your child's college education." Income plus in value will insure costs of a college education in 10 or 15 years, they will say. While shady operators may use their technique to unload doubtful property, the fact is that good property, wisely chosen, can do exactly that.

Higher tufted floor coverings: Higher prices for materials and higher wage scales will push tufted floor coverings and possible other constructions higher this year.

More thermoelectric cooling: Electric power will soon cool and heat your house, chill your drinking water and keep your food cold.

Efficient thermoelectric devices promise to heat or cool, or do both, at a fraction of present fuel costs, and all large electric appliances are trying to be first with the most breath-taking devices. Already heading to market is a room heating-cooling device, an office water cooler, and a compact thermoelectric refrigerator. It will benefit householders and profit dealers to keep close watch on thermoelectric products. They may give birth to a business surge comparable to the television boom.

No One Need Be Silent

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The advantage of a free country is that no one need be silent. When the Left Wing was moving public opinion back in the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt, there were so many splinter groups that neither Karl Marx nor Bakunin would have recognized any of them as socialists.

Now there is a Rightist reaction and the same splintering excitement is making a fierce noise. What is wrong is that there are no definitions. A man calls himself a conservative and immediately he is in a wrangle, principally with other conservatives.

What, for instance, does a member of the John Birch Society stand for? Well, he is opposed to Marxism in any form; he wants to restore what he calls, "Americanism," which leads to confusion because he does not quite mean Jeffersonian Democracy or the inherent equality of man as expressed in the Declaration of Independence, although he is not opposed altogether to either. He believes in the Constitution but not in the authority of the Supreme Court because he does not trust the Chief Justice, Earl Warren. He feels that the people should have freedom of choice, but not to vote for anyone named Kennedy. As one reads the material provided by Bob Welch, he reaches the conclusion that this is a sincere form of vigilantism.

Dr. Fred Schwarz is apparently a brilliant orator who can stir the emotions of great masses, but whereas the published works of Robert Welch indicate an inclination to study problems, what I have seen of Schwarz's effort indicates anger, excitement but no philosophical approach to anti-Marxism. It angers Dr. Schwarz's followers to question his intellectual prowess, they believing that he is the greatest living authority on the subject. Although Dr. Schwarz is a Baptist evangelist, reports from Australia indicate that he is of Jewish origin.

In the center stand many groups who may be said to follow the "National Review" and the philosophic concepts of Bill Buckley, Jr. The most notable expression of this group is YAF, a body of students who write, make speeches and are very active in their attack on Communism. Within YAF (Young Americans for Freedom), cliques have manifested itself as it should, but it is likely that in time, several organizations will derive from this one.

Also in the center stand the ancient, the anti-Communists who have been battling Marxism since 1917 or more recently and who have long strategic and tactical experience in the fight. Many of them are former Communists and, on the whole, they have a clear perception of what the quarrel is about.

Many of the Extreme Rightists unfortunately know the substance neither of Marxism nor anti-Marxism.

Shouting, yelling, booing, mass-meeting, the raising of enormous funds — these are not the means for saving the world from the terrorism of revolution; nor will counter-revolution change much in the circumstances of current armaments, nor will vigilantism serve any other purpose than to expose the Right to ridicule and contempt.

What is needed is to rebuild our economy so that the private enterprise system is restored to greater strength. Arresting the trend toward socialism will not be easy when we are forced to spend huge amounts of our national increment for war, but if we do not find a means to achieve that end, there can be no advantage in opposing Marxism.

We must recognize that the basis of our way of life lies in the first hundred or so words of the Declaration of Independence, which gives to this nation a philosophy of life based upon Natural Law which must mean that all human beings are created by God equal.

an 8-6 record in the Northeastern Conference and an 8-10 overall record. The visiting Pack grabbed the opening tap and immediately scored two points to take the lead. However, it did not take the Phantoms long to pull out in front 4-2 and hold on to the lead for the remainder of the contest.

Phants Lead

With two minutes left in the first period the Greenville boys held a 10-point lead with the score 16-6. The closest the trailing Pam Pack could get during the remainder of the contest was within eight points of the sharp shooting Phantoms.

In the last meeting between the two teams Greenville also came out on top, but the victory did not come quite so easily. The score was 74-58, but it was a nip and tuck affair until late in the third quarter.

McArthur High Scorer In last night's contest the Phantoms were led by Alan McArthur who picked up 18 points for Greenville. Playing his best game of the season, the 5-foot 10-inch senior completed eight field goals and two out of three free throws for the total.

By the end of the first half the Phantoms held a 14-point lead with the score 36-24. The lagging Pam Pack was unable to keep up with Greenville's fine job under the boards during the first stanza of the contest.

When the two teams returned to the floor for the second half the Phantoms wasted no time increasing their lead another two points before Washington was able to hit. By the time the third period was over Greenville held a 15-point advantage with the score 49-34.

Pack Narrows Margin However, during the fourth quarter Washington managed to narrow the margin with about four minutes left in the game to 12 points with the score 59-47. But Greenville managed to regain their 15-point lead with the score 68-53 with two minutes left on the clock.

At this point Coach Parley sent in his reserve forces to finish out the game. Ken Cox and Robbie Powell scored three points while the Pam Pack dropped in four. However, Greenville still held a 16-point advantage when the final horn sounded.

Scoring in the double figures for the Phantoms in addition to McArthur were Kroghie Andersen and Kenneth Allen with 12 points each, and Rodney Knowles who was held to 10 points.

For Washington the high scorer was Churchill Grimes with 11 points. He was followed by Alan Boyer, Floyd Perry and Roberson with 10 points each.

The next game for Greenville will be Wednesday night in the first round of the tournament when the Phantoms meet the Cardinals from Jacksonville. Washington will face New Bern on Thursday night of the tournament.

They dare not face the moral and intellectual consequences of the word, created, which, once

Those who call themselves conservatives, however, dare not abandon the thousands of years of history that have preceded us and have given to our period its particular character, which rightly is called the Judeo-Christian civilization, for it is based upon the hereditary lore of both Jews and Christians to which is given the word, "the Bible."

This then is the weapon for fighting Marxism — a weapon not of hate but of love.

New Experience To Theatergoers

By MARY GREENE

Last night's audience at "The Wages of Sin" by Prime Minister U Nu of Burma had an unusual and interesting experience in the theater. Presented by the East Carolina Playhouse, the performance was the first to be given in this country.

Too, the play, a political drama, has international significance and implications. It deals with the world problem of the Communist threat to democratic principles of government and the way of life of a free people. The Burmese background of 1952, pointing up grave stresses in the East, reveals how the Communists extend their influence, particularly over youth; combat opposition; and struggle for power and ascendancy in the political life of a people.

Through the three acts of the play U Nu hammers away at his theme — that democracy cannot survive if its leaders are corrupt. His chief character — and the only fully developed role in the play, — Home Minister U Po Lone, is presented as the type of government official who endangers his country by breaking the moral law. Guilty of gambling, bribery, drunkenness, and seduction of women, he not only estranges his wife and his son but comes dangerously near to effecting the ruin of his party and the government.

The playhouse, under the direction of Dr. J. A. Withey, gave the Burmese drama an effective production.

The play was well acted. Dr. Albert Kikiet, of the faculty, guest star with the Playhouse, was an excellent U Po Lone. In the third act, especially, where disaster crowds upon him, he capably conveyed to the audience the varied emotions of the Home Minister and gave the drama its chief emotional impact.

Cassandra Drake of Washington, N. C., as the graceful and beautiful Hia Hia, and James Rockey of Amak, Washington, as U San Lin, Communist instructor of young Burmese trainees, dominated Act II. In spite of the rather heavy-handed propagandistic reason-for-being of the act, they brought to the action a sense of drama, of emotion and suspense.

Lucile Dew of Rose Hill, following up her successful first role with the Playhouse earlier this year as the mother in "The Glass Menagerie," made a considerable contribution to "The Wages of Sin" through her interpretation of Daw Khin Thike, disillusioned wife and grieving mother.

Ben Avery of Goldsboro, whose beautiful voice always pleases this reviewer, as Po Thong, son of U Po Lone, combined restraint and intensity in the character of the son, whose shame for his father's conduct turns him toward Communism and finally to the tragedy of revenge.

Among a large cast of some thirty people commendations are due, among others, to Shirley Morse of Hamlet as the grasping mistress of U Po Lone; Karen Best of Mount Olive as Ma Tin Tin, his loyal secretary; Gerald Harrell of Edenton as Po Sein; Jim Shanahan of Norwalk, Conn., as Po Hein; and Lawrence Behr of Greenville as Ko Ba.

An attractive patio scene, the Communist headquarters of U San Lin, and the office of U Po Lone, provided a satisfactory background for the action.

The exotic and colorful costumes were designed by Mrs. Lois Garren of Greenville. Attractive, in part because of their strangeness to most of the audience, were the longyi, or sarong, a long skirt-like garment; the flowery headresses and jeweled ornaments of the women; the Burmese sandals; the gauzy banyan, close fitting headgear with flowing bow at the right, worn by men; and the loose-fitting jackets of the men and the not-tucked-in blouses of the women.

Make-up by a student committee headed by Loretta Foster of Peconic, N. Y., admirably suggested the Burmese coloring and cast of feature.

Act I dragged a little at first last night, but the pace increased as the plot developed, and the play moved along well to its dramatic climax. Surprising too — for it seldom happens in Playhouse productions — there was here and there a slight stumbling over lines.

In spite of these difficulties, the Playhouse, it seems to the reviewer, gave the U Nu drama a sympathetic, intelligent, and successful performance.

For the authenticity of details of the production the playhouse is indebted for aid and advice from the distinguished Burmese historian, educator, and former representative to the United Nations Daw Mya Sein, who spent several days this week at rehearsals, and to U Ba Myint, cultural attache at Washington, who was present for the final rehearsal.

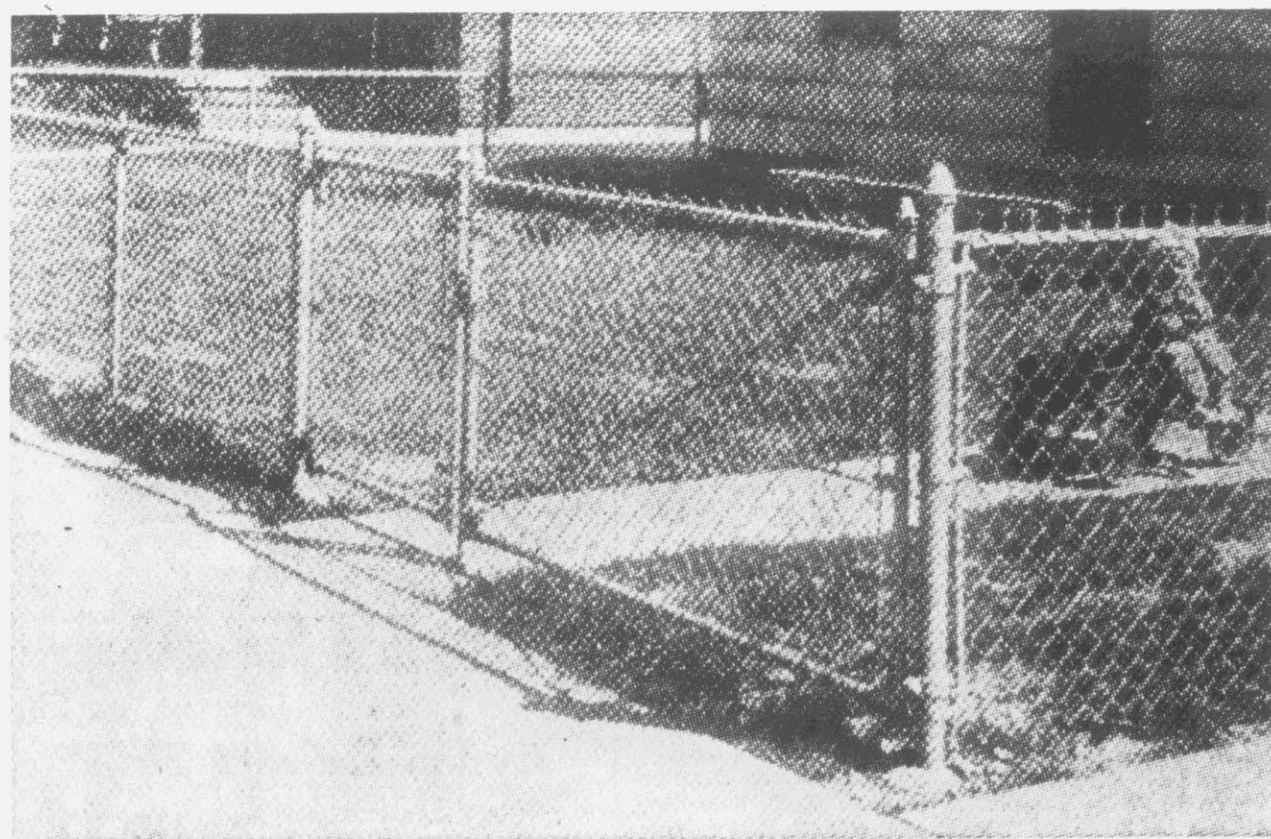

Among those assisting Dr. Withey as members of the production and technical staffs were William Rackley of Goldsboro, technical director; Karen Best, of Mount Olive, assistant director; Michael Lewis of Morehead City, state manager; Joe P. Brannon of Sanford, lighting technician; and Mollie Lewis of Snead's Ferry, properties manager.

Final performance of "The Wages of Sin" is scheduled for tonight at 8:30 in the McGinnis auditorium. Honor guest will be His Excellency U On Sein, Burmese Ambassador to the United States. Also present for the performance will be North Carolina State officials; members of the college Board of Trustees; representatives of the Press; and other distinguished guests.

Wide Speculation On Odd Church Bell Tower

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

HOOKEKERTON CHRISTIAN CHURCH . . . as it stands today. On the left is the bell tower which was constructed on the ground instead of atop the church. (Staff photos by Anne Mattox)

Why did they build the bell tower of the Hookerton Christian Church on the ground? Was it as some say for economic reasons? Was it as others say because it was a custom at one time to build such structures on terra firma? Or was it as some would have it, the concern of the builders sweet-heart for his safety? They say she was afraid he would fall off the roof. All three reasons are possible, but the last one is the story that tickles the interest. So you set off on a journey back to days gone, in hope of finding an answer, or at least the name of an authority who can supply one.

Village on the Contentnea
The village on the Contentnea Creek was incorporated in 1817. It was named after the Hooker family who were prominent in the area.

Three preachers, James Moore, Levi Braxton, and Jesse Heath organized the church at Hookerton in 1830. The congregation met in the red pointed "union meeting house on the public square."

It was first known as a Free Will Baptist church. In August 1838, it became the "Baptist Church of Christ." In August 1853, another change in name took place—"Church of Christ at Hookerton." It seems that every fifteen years, the church changed its name. For in 1868 it was changed to "Church of Christ at Hookerton."

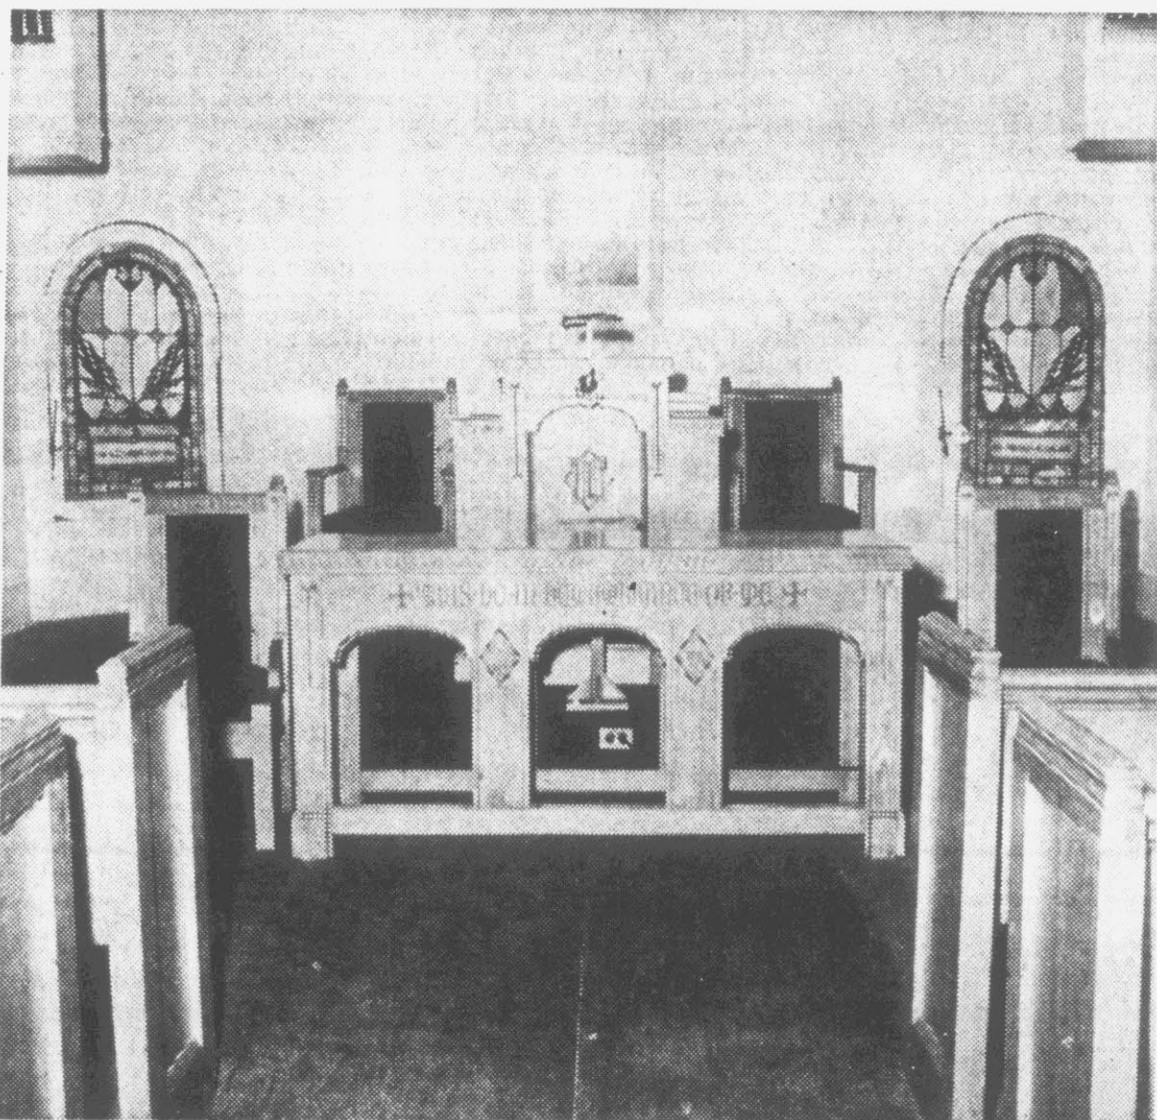

For thirty-four years the congregation met in the union meeting house. The life of the church was a turbulent one at times. They met opposition in the neighborhood around Hookerton. A letter to Dr. J. T. Walsh for publication in "The Watch Tower" told in no uncertain tones what faced the people of Hookerton Christian Church. It was written by Jesse T. Davis, and dated Nov. 14, 1877.

Owing to the opposition the Disciples meet in this neighborhood, they have to worship outdoors so far, or not at all, as a congregation. Now in view of this, and with an eye single to the glory of God and the salvation of our souls, we respectfully ask every Disciple in the name of Jesus, if you love Him, to send $5 to us, or at least $2.50 apiece for the purpose of building a house for the Lord in this community, for His people to praise His name. We do not ask for a palace, but a place. Think brethren and act immediately as we are out of doors, and it near winter." The plea did not go unheeded, for money came in for the church building. It was built in 1878 "a building with classic dignity," that "occupies in ample depth the front of an entire block in the residential heart" of Hookerton.

For many years the congregation met in the wooden church in the elm grove. And the sound of its bell pealed every Sunday from the bell tower standing near, the front door.

In 1948 the building and bell tower were brick veneered. But nowhere in the reading of the history of the church is there any reference to the bell tower.

Story of People
What you have found is the story of people. For the story of the Hookerton Church is much more than that about a building. It is about people, their trials, their hopes, people who across the years have done their part in spreading the word. Voices crying in the wilderness and the patient pacing of the soul in its hope for life beyond here in the aisle of the sanctuary and wonder about these people into whose past you are probing. You think of the countless hymns that have been sung within these walls and the prayers that have been sent heavenward. You think of the tears that have fallen in the grief for a member at his passing.

LOOKING INSIDE THE CHURCH . . . which was built in 1878, it is a building with classic dignity. It occupies the front of an entire block in the residential heart of Hookerton.

You read the names on the stained glass memorial windows, and there comes a thought that maybe the names of the builder and that of his sweetheart are among them.

But in such a place this kind of thinking seems of no consequence. So you go out into the winter day again. The sun has thrown a shadow of a tree across the doorstep of the bell tower. Young pines stand knee high among those forest leftovers that reach high above. The grounds around the church have a simple beauty, just as the inside of the church building has a simple beauty.

The Bell Tower

The answer to the why the bell tower was built on the ground didn't come from asking questions of people. Neither did it come from the reading of books. For what you started seeking out on a December day was found in your mailbox on a January morning.

Dr. C. C. Ware of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson supplied the answer. According to Dr. Ware the story of the builder and his sweetheart's concern for his safety is true. And that is why the bell tower of the Hookerton Church is built on the ground. Dr. Ware says the story was told to him by Mrs. Clara A. Dixon Gainer in the early 1920's.

But lost in the years are the names of the builder and his worrying sweetheart. And perhaps this is as it should be. For such knowledge would take away half the interest of the story. It is better to leave it in the realm of wonder. And maybe it will remain so forever, for all those who could know are gone.

President Kennedy Writes To Strangers Nearly Every Day

By WHITNEY SHOEMAKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy sits down and writes to perfect strangers almost every day.

Recently, he dictated, for instance, a letter to a well-wisher in Houston, Tex., who a few days before had written the President in a clear pen-and-inked congratulatory letter to you and your very efficient co-workers, who secured the freedom of Francis Gary Powers. You are certainly to be commended, not only for this, but other things good you have done and are still doing.

The lady from Texas added a lot of nice words about Kennedy's performance, prompting him to reply: "I certainly appreciate your writing me and I want to thank you for your very generous comments."

The President does read his mail—some of it. He has instructed employees in the White House mail room to sort out every 50th letter among the thousands received each week and pass it on for his personal attention.

On one day, he heard from: Virginia woman thanking him for the card he sent on her 90th birthday and expressing hope that his father, convalescing from a stroke would soon regain good health.

A Chicago man who denounced Soviet Premier Khrushchev for resuming nuclear tests and promised to denounce Kennedy if the United States resumed testing.

A New York woman who found it "particularly shocking" that his picture should appear in a full-page ad for a men's fashion magazine.

A California woman enclosed without comment a letter to Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., complimenting him for "unflinching efforts to get some semblance of sanity in our national financial procedures."

And there was a home-made Valentine signed "love Charles" in the scrawling hand of a 5-year-old.

About 2,500 letters to the President were received this day alone. Some days the volume is greater. Mrs. Kennedy, Caroline and John Jr. also get their share.

Letter scanners in the mail room bundled up 93 of the 2,500 for the President's eye. These included a big batch protesting a cutback in plane production laying off workers at Republic Aviation's Long Island, N. Y., plant.

There also was a sampling on the nuclear test issue and a set from foreign countries (two from a Canadian woman, postmarked on consecutive days; another written in German.)

The balance dealt with all sorts of subjects. These made up the every-50th file. The letter scanners attach a little yellow slip to each, summing up the contents. Some topics are so common that slips have been mimeographed to mark the writer, for instance, as pro or con nuclear tests.

There's also a check list to indicate what size picture of whom perhaps Kennedy, perhaps the First Lady, etc., or other items should be sent to the writer.

Some letters in the sack bring a chuckle or a frown. Every once in a while they bring an

The "HATI", 85-foot Navy YP boat converted into a floating laboratory, is on its way to Haiti where it will form the nucleus for an unprecedented medical research project.

The boat, named "HATI" for its sponsoring organization—the Haitian-American Tuberculosis Institute—will be docked in Jeremie, Haiti, harbor and medical experts will begin a five-year program of testing a potentially superior anti-tuberculosis vaccine on the Haitian population.

Scheduled arrival in Jeremie for the "HATI" is around March 1 with the project getting underway immediately. Vaccines to be tested are the potentially superior R₁ developed in the research department of the N. C. Sanatorium System under the direction of Dr. H. Mac Vandiviere, and the best of several BCGs, a vaccine which is widely used throughout the world.

According to Dr. Vandiviere, "The vaccines will be evaluated simultaneously with the development of a tuberculosis control program built from the ground up and based on all the knowledge of the present and the mistakes of the past in an area virtually untouched by public health or medical facilities."

The organization HATI, over the past two years, was jointly planned to carry out the study by a group of North Carolina scientists and the Republic of Haiti. Dr. Turgot C. C. Port-au-Prince is the Haitian co-director, a similar position to Dr. Vandiviere's.

The N. C. Tuberculosis Association, headquartered in Raleigh, a Christmas seal supported agency, is the American sponsor of the research project.

Dr. Vandiviere has pointed out: "This opportunity is unique in the history of mankind. He has commended the Haitian cooperation and participation and expressed the hope that the program HATI offers will result in some alleviation of Haiti's most deadly health scourge and also the scourge of 90 per cent of the world's population—tuberculosis."

Haiti, with a very high incidence of tuberculosis and a death rate approximately 60 times that in the United States, provides "a perfect locale for evaluation of the effectiveness of the vaccine, as well as a population in need of this medical service," according to NCTA sources.

The NCTA also reports: "The desire for this program has been expressed by the Haitian Ministry of Health. The field personnel from the United States are all qualified individuals (including physicians, statisticians, bacteriologists, radiologists, a medical records librarian and an epidemiologist).

20-YEAR NAVY VETERAN . . . "HATI", floating research laboratory, scheduled to dock in Haiti about March 1. Hailing port for craft is on Pamlico River, Washington, N. C.

They will work several months each year, some on limited salaries, others volunteering their time."

The study also involves scientists associated with the N. C. Sanatorium System, the University of North Carolina, Duke University, the Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina, the U. S. Public Health Service and the Ministry of Health of Haiti. Cooperating agencies in the Haitian project include CARE, MEDICO and the U. S. Operations Mission in Haiti.

Total cost of the American obligation in the five-year program is estimated at about $400,000. Of that total, $70,000 was required to convert the Navy boat into a self-sufficient laboratory. The vaccine, effective for only three days after it is made, will be produced on board.

The project is designed, first, to abate one of the two major health problems in Haiti—tuberculosis; and, secondly, to test an important potential contribution to medical science.

It consists of three definite phases:
1. An epidemiological survey to determine the extent of the problem and the most medically eligible groups for a well-standardized anti-tuberculosis vaccine.

2. Vaccination.
3. Treatment of cases of tuberculosis detected in the survey.

Although the organization HATI is operating on a "shoe-string" at present, interest shown by individuals and the gift of the Navy craft, a tuberculosis hospital and funds to aid in its support have encouraged the American research team.

A 100-bed unit for tuberculosis patients is being added to the MEDICO hospital by the U. S. Operations Mission in Haiti. To be operated jointly by MEDICO, HATI and the Haitian government, long-term support has been given to the hospital by the Public Welfare Foundation.

After a long process of major repairs and alterations, the HATI was extended a hailing port of the Pamlico River in Washington by the Fowle Estate of Washington, arranged by Hal Wilson, NCTA president.

In commenting on the program, Dr. Vandiviere has said: "As many people point out from time to time, guinea pigs are not people, but people have a much higher natural resistance to tuberculosis than guinea pigs."

He continued: "The new high potency R₁ vaccine is interpreted as stimulating antibody production and supplementing natural resistance to such a high degree that a person protected with it would be unlikely to develop tuberculosis unless he takes in overwhelming numbers of tuberculosis germs."

The people of the District of Jeremie in Haiti are predominantly of African descent and their native language is Creole. The official language is French and the better educated speak both French and English fluently.

About 90 per cent of the people cannot read or write at present, but more and more emphasis is being placed on education.

Although the per capita income nation-wide in Haiti is estimated at only $60 a year, the people of the District are moderately well-nourished and appear well-dressed compared with those of some other areas of Haiti. Their daily 1,200-2,000 calorie diet, however, is very low in proteins and protein deficiencies are common.

Although financially poor and living in crowded conditions, most of the people own their own homes which are located on foot and horse trails and are almost always whitewashed.

The people are clean, but sanitation is poor because of a lack of knowledge and practice of public health.

Tuberculosis and malaria are the two major health problems, but tuberculosis is the most lethal disease in the adult population.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

Reverberations of the Civil War Centennial still sound here and there.

Like the one the other day in Boston. It seems that someone got the idea of saluting the opening of a special exhibit of Civil War art at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts by firing a captured Confederate cannon. Said firing, enacted by some kids in blue coats, shook out several dozen window panes and let in a good deal of sub-zero air. The cannon was cast from the church bells of Macon, Georgia, in 1864. If there were a moral in this story, we'd probably be the last to spot it.

Sea Bull
It's not very often that both the Times and the Herald Tribune feature the same book on the same Sunday in their book review sections. But it happened last with Mary Renault's "The Bull from the Sea."

This fact is all the more remarkable because Miss Renault is a well-known and obviously popular type with readers or critics, being a retelling of a group of Greek myths. These myths center around Theseus, legendary founder of Athens, and his struggles with Poseidon, the sea god, who was manifested on several occasions as a bull.

The book, called a "legendary romance" by Dudley Fitis, embodies, of course, the current view of myth as being symbolic of man's deepest longings and strivings, and Moses Hadas in the Herald Tribune review compliments Miss Renault for having evoked the universal and the tragic.

Incidentally, her earlier book, "The King Must Die," to which the present work is a sequel, is popularly available in paperback and is also highly regarded.

Lunatic Corner
The lunatic fringe is still widely operative in the world of books. In Texas, a House of Representatives investigating committee is looking into charges that public school texts are instruments of Communism. The trouble reportedly is that these texts speak favorably of such matters as the UN and civil rights. Ever worse, they carry the writings of such subversives as Eugene O'Neill, Sandburg, Hemingway, and Allan Nevins.

Another manifestation of lunacy (head-in-the-sand type) is the Cunningham Amendment, which passed the lower House of Congress the other day, making it illegal to circulate Communist political propaganda by mail. This new effort to impose ignorance by law (as if there were not enough ignorance anyhow) could mean that every Iron Curtain publication now received by private citizens, including editors and scholars, would be stopped. Maybe the rumor that every copy of Pravda is cunningly soaked in dried cobra venom is true after all. In that case, we withdraw our objection.

Negro History
News from Warren County is that progress is being made on a project to present an outdoor drama dealing with the Negro in America. Proposed site for staging the drama is a new Negro recreation area which is being developed in the county. The project has reached the point where Paul Green has been approached about doing the script and, according to the Warren Record, county newspaper, he has reacted very favorably to the opportunity to work with a subject which has always been of deep interest to him.

By now the wrestling card and Sir Alan Garfield has come and gone, but there is not a complete cultural vacuum left behind. Lovers of the arts will find some consolation this weekend in two events.

Burmese Play
The first is the last performance this evening, McGinnis, 8:15, of U Nu's "Wages of Sin," the anti-Communist Burmese play. Many distinguished Burmese and others are in town for the occasion, and Joe Withey and his associates at the College should receive a good round of applause for this solid gesture of international friendship and understanding.

Art Show
The other matter is the show which will open tomorrow at the Art Center. It will consist of work by members of the Associated Artists of North Carolina, and according to Director Marjorie Jackson, represents the most ambitious project which the Center has undertaken. The show is a competition, judged by Francis Speight, and prizes, including a Purchase Prize, will be awarded.

At 3:00, Sunday, the show will be opened by a lecture on "Tradition in Modern Art" by Walter Manguam of Salem College. Place: Eighth Street Christian Church. Every one is invited to this illustrated lecture.

Incidentally, rumor has it that there will soon be an exhibit of Francis Speight's work at the College and of Mrs. Speight's work at the Center. If this is true, Greenville art lovers are in line for a rare double treat.

Pres. Kennedy . . .

Glenn Jr.
 A 15-year-old girl from Dallas wanted to commend his administration personally "for the magnificent job I feel you are doing."
 From Hawthorne, Calif., a correspondent demanded to know "what you are doing to protect the individual and collective security of the American republics." A North Bergen, N. J. poet concluded: "And may our President today be such another one, that history will honor him as we do Washington."

Find Washington Sword 'Missing'

BOSTON (AP)—City officials went to the Public Garden Thursday to place a floral tribute to a statue of George Washington. They found the sword held by the mounted figure was missing. This is the second time the sword has been stolen.

First Church of Christ, Scientist

Brotherhood will be stressed at Christian Science church services Sunday. Scriptural selections in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Mind" will include this advice of Paul: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1)

One of the correlative citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states (pp. 469-470): "With one Father, even God, the whole family of man would be brethren, and with one Mind and that God, or good, the brotherhood of man would consist of Love and Truth, and have unity of Principle and spiritual power which constitute divine Science."

CHAPTER 36

Swiftly, like a pale seal, Emilio Largo dived down to the firm sand and stood facing James Bond. Slowly he advanced between the walls of coral, the big hands held forward for the first hold.

His teeth drew away from the rubber mouthpiece and the clefts of a smile appeared in his cheeks. Largo was being melodramatic.

He took a pace forward and then another. Bond crouched, backing carefully so as not to cut his rubber skin on the rough coral, into the narrow passage. Largo came on, slowly, deliberately. In two more paces he would attack.

Bond caught a glint of movement out in the open behind Largo. Someone to the rescue? But the glint was white, not black. It was one of theirs.

Largo leaped forward.

Bond kicked off the coral and dived down, but Largo was ready. His knee came up hard against Bond's head and then from above, both his hands came down and got Bond by the neck, lifted him up like a child, and held him at arm's length, pressing. The blood was roaring in Bond's head and he knew he was gone.

Slowly he sank to his knees. But how, why was he sinking? What had happened to the hands at his throat? His eyes, squeezed tight in agony, opened and there was light. In front of him Largo, Largo with a spear sticking horribly through his neck, lay kicking feebly on the sand. Behind him and looking down at the body stood a small, pale figure fitting another spear into an underwater gun. The long hair flowed round her head like a veil in the luminous sea.

Bond got slowly to his feet. He took a step forward. Suddenly he felt his knees beginning to give. He leaned against the coral, his mouth slackening round the oxygen tube. Water seeped into his mouth. No he said to himself. No! Don't let that happen! A hand took one of his. But

New Pactolus Fire Dept. Planning Ahead

PACTOLUS—Area fire protection has been placed in operation in the Pactolus section with the arrival of the community's first fire truck.

With the Pactolus department in operation less than one week the young department is already making future plans for additional equipment and a fire department building.

Fire Chief George Causby, said "We are ready to go and the truck is performing fine." The fire truck built on a second hand chassis, carries 800 gallons of water and related equipment. A front mounted pump will supply water for a one and one-half inch hose line and a second booster reel.

The truck, which is fully paid for, cost around $2,600 not counting donation of equipment and labor which would add about another $600 to the total cost of the fire pumper. Additional equipment including helmets, firemen's coats and extinguishers have been purchased.

shadow over the bed. Bond staggered over to the bed and knelt down beside it. The small head on the pillow turned toward him. A hand came out and grasped his hair, pulling his head closer to her. Her voice said huskily, "You are to stay here. Do you understand? You are not to go away."

When Bond didn't answer, she feebly shook his head to and fro. "Do you hear me, James? Do you understand?" She felt Bond's body slipping to the floor. When she let go his hair, he slumped down on the rug beside her bed. She carefully shifted her position and looked down at him. He was already asleep with his head cradled on the inside of his forearm.

The girl watched the dark, rather cruel face for a moment. Then she gave a small sigh, pulled the pillow to the edge of the bed so that it was just above him, laid her head down so that she could see him whenever she wanted to, and closed her eyes.

this week for the new truck.

Included in the Pactolus Rural Fire Department Association are nearly 2,000 buildings. Noel Lee is president of the Rural Association.

Formation of the new department actually was kicked off more than a year ago at a meeting of community leaders at the Pactolus Rural Club meeting. Since that time a handful of dedicated men have labored to bring about the formation of the department.

Emergency fire numbers for the Pactolus Department are: PL 2-7656, PL 2-7603 and PL 2-6994.

Other officers of the Fire Department include: C. J. Satterthwaite, Captain; Bruce Hart, Assistant Chief; Natham Smith, 1st Lt.; Sam Bowers 2nd Lt. and Billy Wynne, secretary and treasurer. The department and association also has a board of directors which includes: Dan Wynne, B. W. Baker, Fred Mizzle, Roy Baker, Paul Davenport Jr., Harry Ferguson, Jessie Moye, John Ebron, Roy Tripp, in addition to the officers.

Causby said that the department wished to express appreciation to the many persons who by donations helped to make the new department a reality. The department will have regular monthly meetings following weekly training sessions at the start.

"We hope to raise enough money this spring and summer to build a fire house by the fall," the Pactolus Chief said. "In addition we have a surplus ambulance which we hope to equip and place in service as an emergency rescue unit."

The Pactolus department will join with Station House, Carolina Township, Grimesland and Washington in fighting rural fires in the Pactolus area. This will mean that everyone in the area will have adequate fire protection.

The Pactolus department serves roughly a five mile radius of the area. Long range plans also call for securing a tanker-pumper combination for the department as soon as funds are available.

In a business meeting this week the new department voted to join the Pitt Firemen's Association and the Eastern Carolina Firemen's Association.

A fee will be made for any call to a non-member of the Pactolus Association who has been contacted about membership but did not join. Mutual aid will be rendered other departments without cost. Pitt Firemen's Association President Roy Hardee said that "we are very pleased that the Pactolus Department has now been placed in service and know that it will fill a great need and render a service to the citizens that it serves."

"This is another example of what a community can do to protect itself, its school and churches by working together. This has been the driving spirit which has enabled seven new fire departments to be formed in Pitt County in less than two years."

Art Meeting Here Tomorrow

Associated Artists of North Carolina will meet here tomorrow at 3 p.m. at Eighth Street Christian Church with William G. Mangum, assistant professor of art at Salem College, as principal speaker.

Following a general meeting, the formal opening of an exhibition sponsored by Associated Artists will be held at the Greenville Art Center.

A large number of paintings and other art media were submitted for consideration for the show, and the entries were judged by Francis Speight of East Carolina College.

Mangum, in his address, will discuss "Tradition in Modern Art." Mangum has exhibited and won honors at museums over the eastern part of the United States.

Planning Meets 'Heart Sunday' Will Be Slated In Pitt Held In City Tomorrow

Leroy James, Negro county agricultural agent, announced today that a series of program planning meetings will be held in all of the communities in Pitt County beginning Monday.

"The purpose of these meetings is to develop a program of work for 1962-63," James said, "that will be based on the more pressing needs of all the people."

The meetings will be conducted by members of the Extension Staff, James said, it is hoped that "together with the aid of the people many of the problems people are faced with and possibly suggestions as to what can or need to be done by the Extension agents and the people toward the solving of these problems will be brought out."

James also stated that program planning is a continuous process, and that it must identify the following: the situations, the problems, objectives, alternatives and solutions.

A letter will be sent to all of the people giving the time and place of the program planning meeting in their respective communities.

FWB Mission Is Organized As A Church

Several members of the Winterville Free Will Baptist Mission met in the Community Building Wednesday for the purpose of organizing the Mission into a Church.

The Rev. Adam Scott, an ordained minister of the General Conference of Original Free Will Baptists, officiated in the organization.

The members affirmed their faith in the Bible as being the inspired Word of God, and accepted it as being the only rule of faith and practice for the believer.

The church was organized on the basis of congregational church government. It accepted the treatise of the National Association of Original Free Will Baptists.

The church adopted as its church name, Immanuel, and will be known as the Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church. The Sunday School and Morning Worship each Sunday in the church is currently meeting for Winterville Community Building.
