N. C. Travel Promoters Fly To Frankfurt Today

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—A 43-member delegation from North Carolina flew into Frankfurt today to promote their state's tourist attractions. Led by Charles B. Wade, vice president of the Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, the delegation was greeted at Frankfurt's International Airport by a colorfully garbed cowboy and Indian club.

The club, composed of Germans with a hankering to recall the "warrior days of America, assured the North Carolinians they would be a friendly welcome during their stay in Germany. Wade returned the welcome with an invitation to visit the dwelling places of real Indians in North Carolina.

It is the third stop on a European tour on which the Tar Heels are promoting a cut-rate plan for visiting North Carolina at about $10 a day per tourist, including meals, lodging and transportation.

Charles B. Wade, a member of the delegation, said in Amsterdam, The Netherlands, on Thursday that travel agents they encountered "were amazed at how economic a visit to North Carolina can be."

Wade said one of the Dutch travel officials stressed importance of having more air routes to America and entry lanes into the country other than at New York.

A recent survey by the North Carolina Motor Club showed that Britain, West Germany, Italy and The Netherlands, in that order, furnished the greatest numbers of European visitors to the United States.

The Tar Heels were honored at a cocktail party in Amsterdam and showed movies of their home state's scenic attractions.

Wade said his group was extremely happy about the reception it has gotten so far in Europe. "Generally speaking," he said, "it is going much better than we had originally anticipated."

Especially noteworthy, he said, was the interest shown by Europeans in sport fishing possibilities in North Carolina.

"They seem to be tremendously interested in our 300 miles of coast line along the Atlantic and in the trout fishing spots in our fresh water streams," he said.

Also finding a good reception among Europeans, Wade said, were possibilities of investigating historical sites in North Carolina and seeing three outdoor theatrical pageants staged annually in the state.

"We're discovering that many Europeans," he said, "are interested in seeing much more than merely the big Eastern seaboard cities of the United States."

"They want to learn how Americans really live."

Upon leaving Amsterdam, he had described the response they found there as "enthusiastic."

"When we came here most travel agents had no idea that North Carolina was any different from, let us say, Utah," Wade said. "Now they know that we have a new variety for tourists. Beaches, mountains and places of historic interest."

Old Comedian Is Cancer Victim

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The scene went like this: Clark Gable ducked as machine gun bullets ripped through the wall. Suddenly a jug-eared man with bulging black eyes looked in a window and asked:

"W-w-what's the b-b-big idea?" It brought a big laugh in a tense movie—because the face was that of Roscoe Ates, the comedian with the rubbery features and the scene-stealing stutter. For that one scene (in "A Free Soul") Ates was paid $1,000.

That was at the peak, 30 years ago, of a career which dimmed but didn't end—until Thursday. He had long been ill with lung cancer. Ates, 67, died at a hospital in the suburban San Fernando Valley.

Ates made a small fortune in the lush days of pre-World War II Hollywood, spent it freely—with the help of broken marriages and a host of pretty starlets—and ended up as an occasional player on TV and in the movies.

His last movie part was a brief appearance in "The Errand Boy," starring Jerry Lewis. His last marriage—No. 4—was in 1961, to the former Barbara Marsh, then only 26.

Ates stuttered as a youth, cured himself, and spent years helping other stutters conquer the speech defect.

Mr. and Mrs. Slade Congleton visited Mr. and Mrs. Donald Edmondson and family in Fremont Sunday night.

Bridge Club Mrs. W. S. Cherry entertained the bridge club members Thursday night. The guests were greeted at the door by the hostess and invited into the living room where three tables were set for play.

After three progressions of play, Mrs. Frances VanDyke was high scorer and Mrs. W. F. Roebuck won the consolation prize.

Other players were: Mrs. W. J. Edwards, M. T. Barnhill, H. L. Watson, Slade Congleton, H. F. Congleton, C. S. Whitchard, C. A. Forbes, E. B. Parker, Jr., H. L. Clark and the hostess.

A sweet course with coffee was served.

Marsha Perkins Honored Miss Marsha Perkins was honored Saturday evening at a birthday party given by her mother, Mrs. Jerome Perkins.

A color scheme of pink and green was used. The dining table was covered with a pale pink cloth, centered with a birthday cake flanked with burning tapers.

Mrs. J. B. Congleton poured pink lemonade. Other refreshments consisted of party cakes, salted nuts, pickles and cheese bits.

Dancing and games were enjoyed by the 28 guests attending.

Monument For Orbital Flight

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bill to authorize a monument commemorating the first U.S. manned orbital flight was offered Thursday by Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla.

As a site for the proposed monument, Smathers suggested a location as close as possible to the spot from which astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. began his historic flight at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Smathers compared Glenn's achievement to the first airplane flight at Kitty Hawk in 1903. Both feats represent, he said, a monumental breakthrough in man's conquest of the unknown.

The first all-talking picture, Lights of New York, was shown the public in 1928.

Ginger Rogers Stumped By Women's TV Failure

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Ginger Rogers, after worrying over the problem for several seasons and asking questions, confesses she is stumped. She doesn't know why women have such a hard time in television.

"It seems to me that television is like automobiles," she said. "Designed by men, and mostly for men."

"By next season there probably won't be a single series starring a woman, and as far as I can find out very, very few women behind the scenes have any say about programs."

Miss Rogers admits she doesn't understand this attitude. Ginger, however, does not find this a personal problem. She is satisfied with occasional TV guest starring appearances, including her hostess chores on tonight's salute to Irving Berlin on NBC's Telephone Hour, hand-picked motion picture roles and some stage appearances.

A couple of seasons back, she was talked into making a pilot film for a series, in which she played twins.

"Sponsors liked the idea of a 'Ginger Rogers Show,'" she said, "but nothing happened to that series. There's interest in other ideas, but they want to see pilots and a performer can't spend endless time making free samples—no when there are other things on the fire."

Tonight Miss Rogers will dance and sing. She's a natural choice as hostess, for she appeared in many Berlin shows over the years.

ABC, whose shows seem to date on way-out titles, has a couple of collectors' items coming up next week on "Ben Casey" and "Naked City." On Monday night Ben's adventures will be wrapped in "For the Ladybug, One Dozen Roses." And on Wednesday, the police drama will work in an episode called "Today the Man Who Kills the Ants is Coming."

Television's eyes will continue following astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. through his New Concord homecoming. Sophisticated New York really flipped over the space man. For instance, NBC's early bird disk jockey on WNBC, gave his station identification all Thursday morning as "W-Glenn-B-C."

Pitt Cancer Society Unit Adds 3 New Directors

Dr. Howard Gradis, president of the Pitt County unit of the American Cancer Society, today announced election of three new members to the county unit's board of directors.

They are: Dr. A. A. Best, W. H. Davenport and John H. Bizzell.

The presence of these men on the board of directors fulfills a need the Pitt ACS unit has long felt," said Dr. Gradis. "I'm looking forward to their help in bringing the message of cancer education to a large number of people that we haven't been able to reach before."

Noting that the Cancer Society had enjoyed cooperation of Dr. Davenport, Bizzell and Dr. Best in the past, the Pitt unit president remarked that it was the board's feeling that their being an integral part of the group, planning will result in a more effective campaign against cancer as well as attaining more coverage."

The three new board members have notable records of public service.

Davenport, supervising principal of the three schools for Negroes in Greenville, is a member of the Pitt TB Ass'n, the Pitt Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Pitt United Fund, and has been awarded high honors for work in scouting.

Dr. Best is founder and first president of the N.C. Citizen Council on Health and Citizenship, is serving on the Greenville Public Housing Authority, and is founder and lifetime honorary member of the Board of Directors of the Student Aid Fund at A&T College.

Bizzell served on the City Recreation Commission for four years, is currently a member of the Advisory Committee of the Greenville Redevelopment Commission, is chairman of the board of trustees for George Washington Carver Library, has been a member of the Greenville Volunteer Fire Dept. for 26 years, and is a member of the Pitt Mental Health and Pitt TB Associations.

DOLLAR VALUE—PLUS

In an emergency, the value of medicine can hardly be reckoned in dollars. Medicine is priceless when needed.

Yet it is an interesting fact that nationally the average cost of a pharmaceutical prescription is about $2.50—and more than half of all prescriptions cost less than $2.00. Although higher than 20 years ago, the increase in the cost of medicine lags far behind that of other, and less essential, commodities.

When you purchase a prescription, you are sharing in the fruits of scientific research. You are getting today's best buy.

Ruling Has A Far-Reaching Impact

This week's ruling of the North Carolina Supreme Court has the effect of reaching far beyond the question of whether a new lieutenant governor should be elected this year to fill the unexpired term of the late Lt. Gov. Cloyd Philpott.

The court answers No to that immediate question, but more than that it clarified constitutional provisions relating to the succession to the governorship.

For the people of North Carolina, this latter point is more important in the long-range picture than the immediate issue which brought the matter to the high court's attention.

The exact line of succession to the governorship of the state—below the office of lieutenant governor—has been a subject of debate for many years. Now that the court has clarified the matter in ruling on the question of whether a lieutenant governor should be elected this year, the constitutional provisions of the state has been officially interpreted.

Under the court's ruling, the presiding officer elected by the Senate to fill the unexpired term of the lieutenant governor becomes first in line of succession to the governorship. Should there not be a lieutenant governor—as is the case now in North Carolina—and the governor's office should become vacant, it would be the duty of the Secretary of State to call the Senate into special session to elect a presiding officer who would succeed to the governorship.

Now that North Carolinians know where they stand on the matter of succession to the governorship, careful study should be given the matter. If the plan called for by the constitution—as interpreted in this opinion of the State Supreme Court—does not appear to be satisfactory or practical, then steps should be taken to amend the constitution to provide for succession to the governorship.

In the meantime, the official procedure under existing constitutional provisions has been clarified by the Supreme Court. In making this clarification, the state's highest court has rendered a distinct and important service to the people of the state. The clear-cut ruling on the line of succession does away with the questions and the debating which heretofore have surrounded the question of the line of succession to the office of chief executive in North Carolina.

Four Leaders Stepping Down

By LYNN NISBET
LOSS — Sen. Joe Eagles of Wilson has announced that he will not seek reelection to the 1963 senate. A few weeks ago Sen. Lindsay Warren of Beaufort made a similar announcement. So did Sen. Archie K. Davis of Forsyth. And Sen. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg vacated his seat when he accepted appointment on the U. S. Fourth District Court of Appeals. That means at least four stalwarts of the 1961 and prior sessions of the General Assembly will not be back in the Senate next year, because of their own volition. Others will be absent because of rotation agreements in their districts which prevent them running this time.

It would be difficult to evaluate the service of these four senate leaders who are stepping down. In view of the problems anticipated in the next Legislature it is quite likely that Senators Davis and Eagles will be more sorely missed. Senators Warren and Bell had devoted much of their energy during the past two terms to constitutional matters — judicial reform, legislative reapportionment, etc. Davis and Eagles were more directly concerned with the economic and fiscal problems of the State. Although rated generally as conservative, analysis of their legislative votes for several years indicates willingness to spend money, big money, if there is assurance that the taxpayers are getting value for their spending. Senator Eagles has served on the advisory budget commission for several years which prepared, supported and obtained passage for appropriation bills larger than ever before contemplated in this state. When the rate of spending appeared to them greater than the returns in service both Davis and Eagles stood firm against the bills. There is wide spread belief that their kind will be needed next year.

SHOPLIFTING — The N. C. Merchants Association is mailing out a special edition of its house organ "The Retailer" devoted to shoplifting. Emphasis is on the idea that "shoplifting can be controlled." Excerpts from the North Carolina statutes and from a recent Supreme Court decision affirming validity of the law are included, along with instructions of manager and sales people on how to proceed when a visitor in the store is suspected of shoplifting. Shoplifting losses run into hundreds of millions of dollars a year. The Merchants Association suggests that in breaking up the practice at its inception not only will this dollar loss be saved but there is a good chance to save the lifter from more serious consequences of crimes.

OVERDONE — Whether the right word should be overdone as applied to the extensive publicity given the scheme, or if it should be overdone as applied to the incompleteness of the plan, many people fear that emphasis placed on the so-called "cheap" vacation in North Carolina may detract from the general accomplishment of the purpose sought by the current travel mission to Europe.

The plan as devised by Ted Danziger, Chapel Hill restaurateur, provides for one-time first-visit accommodations at a selected list of motels and restaurants for half price to visitors holding European passports. It is an imaginative venture in new methods of promoting business, but it is still in embryonic stage. News stories from Europe indicate that the proposition is being presented there as an opportunity for any European traveler to travel in North Carolina at an overall cost of $10 per day. It is feared that a great many visitors who come expecting that will be sorely disappointed.

HALF-WAY — The United Forces for Education has come up with a program for increased support of public schools. It will require about $45 million a year more than is now being spent on that item. When asked where the money for this program would come from the education people answered, in effect, that source of the money was not their problem. That would be up to somebody else. There was expressed hope that expanding economy would provide a good part of the needed extra dollar from existing tax sources.

Practical folks are pointing out that statement of need or how money might be wisely used goes only half way through the subject. Provision of the money is equally important. It can be said for Governors Hodges and Sanford that in their proposals for increased spending and for enlarged educational programs they suggested sources of money to finance the projects.

Even some veteran school folks are a bit disturbed at the attitude of some of the new-comers to the ranks of the non-official organizations, who proposed such spending without commensurate provision for funds. And what disturbs them more than the fact itself is that most of the folks who are sponsoring these causes are not officially attached to or connected with the State Board of Education, the Department of Public Instruction or other governmentally responsible agency.

A DeGaulle Victory If Settlement Arranged

There is every indication that a settlement has been arranged between the government of France and Algerian representatives to bring to an end the seven years of war for the independence of that country.

The agreement, when it is consummated, will represent a personal victory for Premier Charles DeGaulle. And although the agreement will mean independence for the major overseas territory of France, it should strengthen considerably the position of France in international affairs. It will end seven years of war which has been a tremendous burden to France from the standpoint of money, material and manpower, not to mention the political unrest which has resulted.

Certainly the French Premier has been the object of much abuse because of the position he has steadfastly maintained with regard to the Algerian question. It has brought to him the hatred of many of his countrymen. At the same time it has also brought to DeGaulle a greater respect from many people throughout the world.

The fighting and bloodshed in Algeria will not end quickly once the agreement has been finalized but it will represent the real beginning of a program to restore to Algeria a kind of peace it has not known in many years.

Pressure From Sec. Goldberg

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg has had to blow away some of the semantic fog that settled around a talk he made about the government's role in collective bargaining.

He was responsible for some of the fog. The rest came from people who didn't like what they heard, or thought they heard.

In a speech last Friday in Chicago he said: "In the past when government officials were called upon to assist in collective bargaining their only aim was to achieve a settlement."

"Today, in the light of our nation's commitments both at home and abroad, government and private mediators must insure that the parties to labor disputes reach settlements that are not only in the interest of the parties themselves but which also take into account the public interest."

Just what are guidelines? Goldberg didn't quite make this clear at the time. But AFL-CIO President George Meany announced some people in the steel industry didn't wait to find out. Both of them thought Goldberg had in mind more government interference. Goldberg was so disturbed by this reaction that he called in reporters Wednesday to explain.

What it amounted to was this: The government does intend to stick its fingers a little deeper into labor-management wage disputes when the outcome is either higher prices and wages or a strike — will affect the national welfare at home or abroad.

It has been common practice for a government mediator, when called in to help straighten out a snarled up union-management negotiation, to suggest to one side settlement terms he thinks are reasonable enough for the other side to accept.

But Goldberg, who said flatly he is against any government wage or price controls or compulsory arbitration, explained what he had in mind: Neither he nor the government intends to try to impose settlement terms in collective bargaining but to suggest in a general way — and sometimes very specifically — what will be good for the national interest.

This amounts to moral pressure. And there's nothing new in that. But Goldberg also has an idea that will bring public pressure to bear on a union and management in an important industry after a settlement, when it could have no practical effect on the outcome. He said he intends to have the government lay down statistics — and statistics would mean wages, prices, costs, hours worked in comparison with other industries — before a dispute gets out of hand.

The Kennedy administration already has put more pressure on the steel industry and the steelworkers union, now busy in bargaining on a new contract, by calling for a fair settlement.

The last time there was a steel strike — 116 days in 1959 — the whole country felt the effects.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
BEEHIVES AND BUMBERS

Some time ago a beehive was brought into a television studio to be used in a program involving agricultural surroundings. Somebody tipped over the beehive. One can imagine the disorder and consternation as those liberated bees began buzzing about the studio stinging everybody.

There are some people who have a genius — if it can be called that — for bumping against beehives and overturning them. They overturn them in the home, in the office, in the lodge. Wherever they are trouble is sure to arise. Everybody gets stung. Everybody is angry. Confusion takes the place of concord. Some people are this way because they are overworked and tense. Others behave in this fashion because have a mean streak through them. Still others don't know why it happens but put them in the vicinity of a beehive and they will have it broken open on the floor within a few minutes.

Individuals possessing free wills, and living in a country where the exercise of free will is permitted and encouraged, can stir up plenty of friction every day without overturning any beehives. Christian righteousness is unique in its nature because Jesus tried to forestall evil by stopping all evil doing at its source. Don't be angry and you won't kill. Don't be furtive and unclean in thought and you will not commit adultery. Agree with thine adversary. Love your enemies. Turn the other cheek. Go the second mile.

Booby Trapped

By DON SCHLIENZ

February's Better Side

In its latter days February could be considered a good month. There was a generous mixture of winter, near-winter and spring-like climate; confounding to some growth around the house.

For instance, we have a vine-like rambling plant beside the carport which began a tentative budding of leaves before the month came to a close.

There was also a day or so of "March" mixed in February's calendar. The kite-flying breezes associated with March made an appearance ahead of schedule.

It is not for these qualities alone I mourn February's passing. For now, inexorably, the procession of days brings nearer three long seasons of puffing behind a lawn-mower.

On surveying the dull dead brown of matted grasses that still prevail outside my window, it is assuming attractive qualities rarely appreciated before.

Alas, some green is showing.

"Fillers" in newspaper parlance, are those little two, three and four-line items sometimes needed to fill a little space at the bottom of a newspaper column.

One of these raised some doubts in the composing room this week . . . it had to do with a bicyclist who averaged over 100 mph in a speed test.

It is a fact.

The bicyclist had a windshield mounted on a racing car, an oversize sprocket and his bicycle had a slightly larger rear wheel than front wheel.

One other thing in his favor: he was a former professional bicycle racer.

It is still an eyebrow-raising accomplishment.

The danger of woods fires can hardly be described as critical in our area right now.

The ground is saturated with moisture. Still, Smokey the Bear is laying groundwork for fire-prevention consciousness in the months ahead.

A sheet of suggested reminders came in the mail this week all preaching the theme that "Only You Can Prevent Forest Fires."

Shrug it off, if you wish; but one point really gave me a chill of concern: "Forest fires annually burn enough timber to form a belt 1 1/2 miles wide stretching from Anchorage, Alaska, to Richmond, Virginia."

Not even our country can afford to continue taking that kind of loss.

This is a more-than-thrice-told story, which testifies as to its quality. I saw it in one newspaper which explained the tale was borrowed from another paper, which in turn said it was taken from still another source which credited it to columnist Earl Wilson . . . who presumably got it from somewhere else.

It illustrates a degree of addiction to golf;

There was once a golfer who returned home unduly late, to be met by a glinty-eyed wife who wanted to know what kept him so long.

"Well," said the golfer-husband, "today was my day to play with Irving. He had a heart attack out on the course . . . and died. From then on, it was hit the ball and drag Irving; hit the ball and drag Irving; hit the ball and . . ."

Pilferage Can Be The Last Straw

By ELMER ROESSNER
Pilferage was given as a major reason for the giant Davega Stores Corp. petition for operation under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act.

Davega operates 25 stores selling appliance and sporting goods, and five discount concessions in the East. Until the time it filed its petition in New York, it was regarded as one of the most successful chains in the area.

Its assets, as of October 28, exceeded its liabilities, $5,383,008 to $4,872,620. However, it had been operating at $150,000 to $200,000 loss a month.

The petition was filed by a new management which took over on January 2. It said this resulted from poor security and lack of inventory controls. However, other factors were involved, such as:

Expensive warehouse and trucking charges because of poorly located warehouses and poor trucking contracts; Lack of concentration on profitable business in advertising and display of merchandise; Improper sales personnel; Lack of merchandising coordination;

Excessive general office expenses and high rentals, and loose accounting methods.

$10 MILLION LOSS
The pilferage factor in Davega's troubles underscores many warnings of the rise of what is euphemistically termed "inventory shrinkage."

Only a few days before Davega went to court, Addison Verill, president of Sales Systems, Inc., told a New York business seminar that more than $10 million in cash and merchandise was stolen from one New York department store by a gang of employees before it was discovered.

He said pilferage averages 1 1/2 to 4 per cent of sales in discount operation today, and that it is often greater than net profit. Employee dishonesty has increased 32 per cent in the last ten years, he said.

Common practices, he said, include ticket switching; not recording cash from sales; taking big-ticket items off delivery trucks without recording them in inventory; hiding articles in trash bins and recovering them later; giving merchandise to confederates with smaller price tags so they can get full refunds later, and manipulating charge accounts.

While almost every business carries fire insurance, less than 5 per cent have insurance against pilferage, although the pilferage loss far exceeds fire losses.

RADIO-TV TO NET $20 MILLION FOR BASEBALL
Baseball, regarded as a sport and not a business in anti-trust laws, will net more than $20 million this year for television and radio rights, Television Age will say in its March 5 issue.

This will be a rise of $3 million over last year. The Houston Colts will get the top revenue, $1,300,000,

China's U.S. Friend

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Back in the days of our youth, when we were re-making the world, Hu Shih and I were students at Columbia University where he had already established a reputation as a philosopher. He had come to this country, tending to become an agriculturalist. Instead he went in for the higher knowledge.

Already the concept had come to him to do the Chinese what Wycliffe had done for English and what Luther had done for German — to use the vernacular as a literary vehicle, thus making mass education possible.

It must be explained, at this point, that the Chinese spoken language is highly dialectic, but that the literary language, Wen-li, is rigid and fixed. It held the place in Chinese learning similar to Latin in the Middle Ages in Europe and only scholars could read it. Thus, the enormous literature of China, as vast as that of any people, was available only to those who devoted themselves to it. What the people knew, they got by word of mouth, often only by listening to the tales of tea-house story tellers. Even before Hu Shih, however, some stories appeared in the vernacular and newspapers, seeking to widen their influence, increased the numbers of characters (word-pictures) which they used.

Hu Shih started his generation by writing poetry in the vernacular, by editing an edition of China's novels in the vernacular and by writing the first volume of his history of Chinese philosophy in the simple language of the people.

Up to the time of the Chinese Revolution (1912), civil public officials were all scholars from the standpoint that they could pass an examination in Chinese poetry. To become the equivalent of a Ph. D. — that is, a Hanlin scholar — it was necessary to write a thesis, an "Eight-legged essay," stilted in style, limited in subject.

The Hanlin scholars were gentlemen, gourmets, calligraphers, much like the Hebrew scholars in a European Shtetel (ghetto-town) who could recite the whole literature of their people from Genesis to Malachi (12th Century) by heart. But the Chinese who could similarly quote centuries of philosophers could not build a bridge across the Yangtze or manage a factory or open a mine.

Hu Shih and his companions of the literary revolution fought to open all the wells of learning for the Chinese people. After the Boxer Rebellion (1900) the United States set aside the Boxer indemnity for Chinese students to come to the United States to study in American universities. Even before that both Catholic and Protestant missionaries had set up universities and other schools in China which had an enormous influence on the younger generation.

The leaders of the literary revolution gathered together at the Peking National University, a Chinese institution of learning, not affected by missionary or other alien influences. In that group back when I first encountered it was Mao Tse-tung who is now at the head of Red China. From his university spread a great intellectual force which moved the youth of China as early as 1919 when the first Students Strike exhibited the power of the new learning.

Hu Shih was a philosopher not a politician, although the course of events dragged him into diplomacy in support of Chiang Kai-shek and the Nationalist government. He served his country as Ambassador to the United States and then spent some period lecturing here, finally returning to Taiwan where he headed the Academy, the highest institution of learning in the land.

Many of his friends regretted that Hu Shih did not complete his history of Chinese philosophy and then turn it into English. Perhaps no one else can do it with his enthusiasm, his breadth of knowledge both of Eastern and Western sciences.

Marxism had no appeal to him. The Russians tried to influence him but failed. One of Scripture—Exodus 20:15; Luke 19:1-27; Mark 11:15-19; Joshua 7:19-25; Matthew 22:15-22.

God forbade stealing. Joshua reinforced the commandment when he ordered his soldiers not to pillage in their conquest of the Promised Land. When one, Achan, disobeyed, he was stoned to death by Joshua and all the Israelites.—Joshua 7:19-26.

On Christ's last trip through Jericho a Jew named Zacchaeus, grown rich through tax-collecting, climbed a tree to see Him. Zacchaeus, his heart altered, volunteered restitution for all the exorbitant charges he had made in the past.—Luke 19:1-8.

The Pharisees, hoping to entrap Christ, flattered Him, then asked innocently whether it was right to pay the Roman taxes. Christ, indicated that we owe our state financial devotion, but God our spiritual devotion.—Matthew 22:15-22.

At the end of His ministry, as at the beginning, Christ drove the money-changers from the temple. In exchanging foreign currency for temple shekels, they had made God's house "a den of robbers."—Mark 11:15-19. GOLDEN TEXT—Ephesians 4:28.

THE LAW THAT PROTECTS A PERSON'S RIGHTFUL POSSESSIONS AND SOME CONSEQUENCES OF BREAKING THIS LAW

Scripture—Exodus 20:15; Luke 19:1-27; Mark 11:15-19; Joshua 7:19-26; Matthew 22:15-22.

By N. SPEER JONES
JUST AS we know God's most important commandment is the first, so we can realize that the others scale down from that one in order of importance. This is borne out by Moses law, which provided the death penalty for violation of any of the first seven; the last three did not bring punishment quite so vehement.

wrath against this sin, and the frightful punishment given it by other men.
Joshua, after reinforcing the Eighth Commandment by a specific warning to his soldiers not to pillage in their conquest of the Promised Land, sends troops to take a small city named Ai. The people of that town inflict a humiliating defeat and Joshua, in his anguished queries of God, learns that one of the Israelites, Achan, has defied the commands and stolen.

Achan, accused, confesses and is taken to the Valley of Achor (somewhere among the ridges south of Jericho) and stoned to death—the normal mode of execution in those days for idolatry and blasphemy.

The illustrations from the New Testament are, as usual, more subtle and more profound. Christ, in entering the heart of Zacchaeus, causes him to con-man's laws could apply only to the relationships of men to other men, not to God.

More important, Christ condemns the emphasis on man's property, especially when it interferes with what man's chief emphasis should be—the glorification of the property's true owner, God.

It is significant that His ministry is bracketed by two clearings of money-changers from the temple, one recorded by John (2:13-16) and the other, in the passage from Mark in today's lesson. The church is not to be defiled by commercialism.

The force of Christ's message comes home once more in the episode of Caesar's coin. Man's possessions have their place. He indicates, but so have God's. We, as children of God, rob Him of ourselves when we extend too much importance to our personal property.

Theft of other men's personal property is the specific subject of today's lesson, the Eighth Commandment. In the strict sense, no man has any personal property; all belongs to God, its creator, and is merely entrusted to individual men for wise investment, as in the parable in Luke 19:11-28.

God bestows this property on an individual through two channels—either through that person's work or through the free gift of another man.

There is but one other way by which a person comes into property, and this God condemns—thief. That God does condemn it, indicates His sanction of man's rights in regard to the property he has in trust.

In our Old Testament example of theft (Joshua 7:19-26), we see the full vigor of God's Based on copyrighted outlines produced by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. and used by permission. Distributed by King Features Syndicate

Phantoms Meet Bears Tonight At 9 O'Clock

New Bern Knocks Washington Out Of Tourney

By CHARLES VAUGHAN
Reflector Sports Writer

Coach Bob Lewis and the New Bern Bears moved into the semifinals last night by dropping the Washington Pam-Pack 65-37.

Tonight, the Bears meet Greenville at 9:00 o'clock while Roanoke Rapids takes on Tarboro at 7:00 o'clock. The winners tonight will play tomorrow night in the final contest for the championship.

Bears Take Early Lead

The New Bern Bears jumped to an early first quarter lead and managed to maintain this advantage for the entire contest. Washington, who was down as much as 13 points in the second period, rallied to cut New Bern's lead to 28-21 at the end of the first half. However, the Bears easily increased their lead over the Pam-Pack in the second half to go on for the victory by a score of 65-37.

Glenn Dunn led the high scoring Bears with a game high total of 22 points. Also in double figures for New Bern were Jack Lee and Roland Verrone with 12 and 11 points respectively. Washington did not place a single player in double figures in their losing effort.

Slow Start

Although both teams got off to a slow start last night, the Bears managed to control the contest during the opening quarter. Glenn Dunn hit the nets for New Bern in the last seconds of the first period to put the Bears in the lead 14-7.

In the second quarter of play, the New Bern Bears were able to increase their lead to ten points after two minutes. Washington was unable to keep pace with the Bears as their opponents advanced to a lead of 24-11 with four minutes remaining in the second period. However, behind the accurate shooting of Joe Leggett, the Pam-Pack narrowed New Bern's lead to seven points at the end of the first half, 28-21.

Pack Unable To Score

When the two teams returned to the court in the second half, the Bears immediately began to increase their advantage. Washington was unable to score a single field goal in the third period as New Bern surged to a 44-26 advantage.

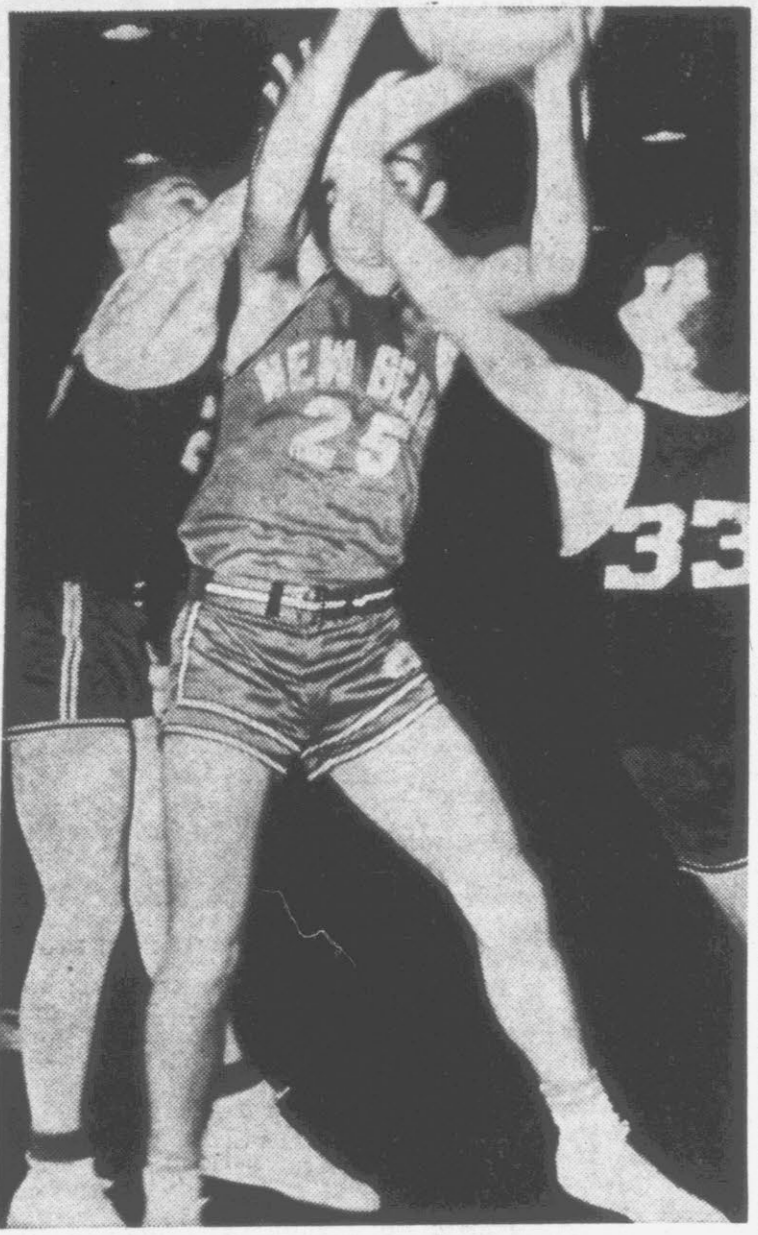

As New Bern continued to increase their lead in the fourth quarter, Coach Lewis found the chance to substitute freely. The Bears' substitutes managed to hold their own as they went on for the victory 65-37.

Tigers Win 63-57

Tarboro Stops Kinston Rally

By CHARLES VAUGHAN
Reflector Sports Writer

The Tarboro Tigers fought off a last quarter rally by the Kinston Red Devils to win their first game of the NEAC tournament by a score of 63-57.

By winning last night, the Tigers moved into the semifinals to meet Roanoke Rapids tonight at 7:00 o'clock. At 9:00 o'clock, Greenville High School plays New Bern in the second semifinal tilt.

Tarboro Takes Lead

Tarboro was able to take a commanding lead early in the first quarter of the contest last night 16-7. In the second period, the Tigers continued to increase their advantage as Kinston was unable to keep pace. John Monn, a substitute, came into the ballgame in the second quarter and helped Kinston pull within seven points of the Tigers. At the end of the first half, the Tigers led the Red Devils by a score 35-28.

When the two teams returned to the court to start the third period, the Kinston Red Devils slowly began to catch up with the high scoring Tigers. By the close of the third quarter, Kinston had cut Tarboro's lead to six points 45-39.

Kinston Narrows Margin

Behind the sharp shooting of Lynwood Hardison, the Red Devils rallied to pull within four points of the Tigers after two minutes of the fourth quarter. With three minutes left in the contest, Hardison hit the nets for the Red Devils to narrow Tarboro's lead to two points 51-49. However, Gus Andrews then scored two field goals and two free throws to seal the victory for the Tigers, 63-57.

Leading the Tarboro Tigers was Billy Freuler who scored seven field goals and six free throws for a total of 20 points. Twelve of Billy Freuler's points came in the first period. Gus Andrews and Frank Freuler scored 17 and 12 points respectively for the victors.

Lynwood Hardison led the Red Devils in the scoring department by tallying a total of 20 points. Also in double figures for Kinston was Johnny Taylor with four field goals and four free throws for a total of 12 points for the night.

Pirates Play Tonight In NAIA Playoff

Coach Earl Smith and the East Carolina basketball Pirates are in Gastonia today to claim their berth in the opening playoff games of District 26, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

The Bucs face Belmont Abbey at 8 p.m. in the Groves Gymnasium. At the same time Newberry plays at Erskine for the right to meet the winner of the ECC-Belmont Abbey game Saturday night in the Wofford College gym in Spartanburg, S. C.

At stake in the Saturday night contest will be a berth in the 32-team NAIA tournament at Kansas City, March 12-17.

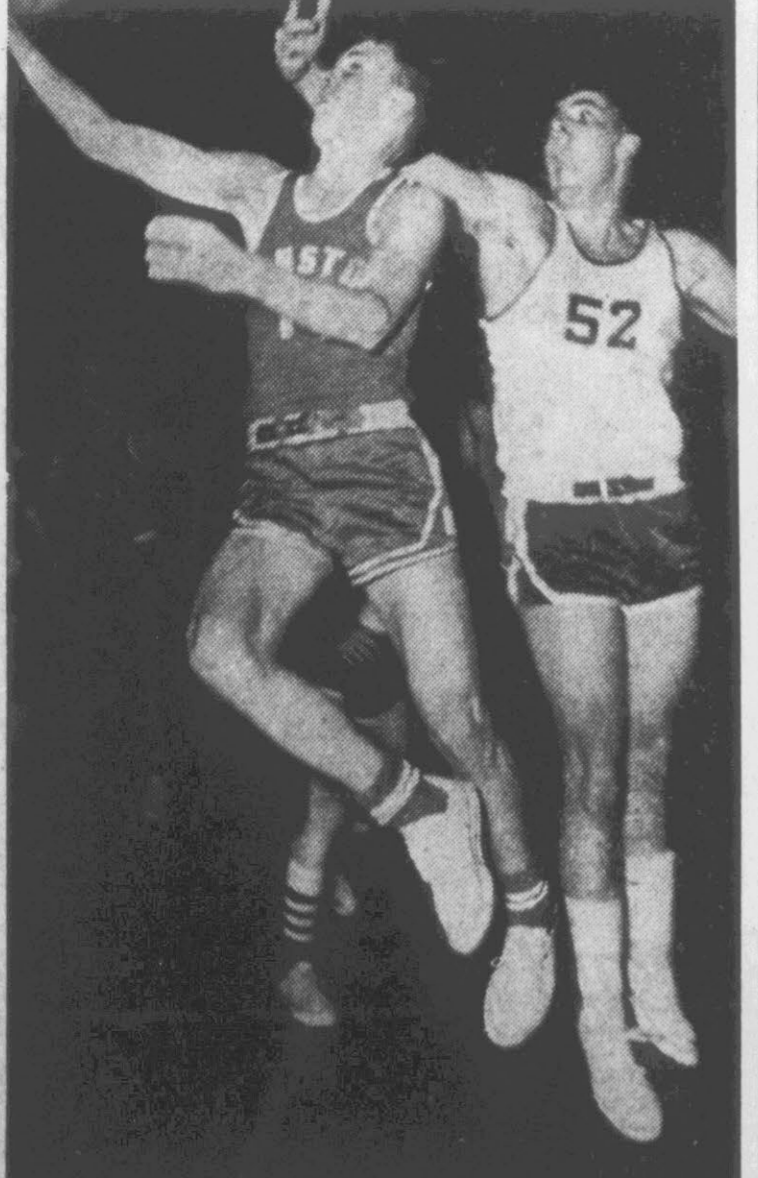

East Carolina "backed" into the district event when Western Carolina downed High Point for the Carolinas Conference crown last Saturday in Lexington. If High Point had defeated the Catamounts it would have made the trip to Gastonia instead of East Carolina.

The Pirates gained their berth in the Gastonia game by virtue of a 14-4 season mark against NAA teams. The overall season record for the Pirates was 45-11.

Leading the Pirates' against Belmont Abbey will be senior guard Charlie Lewis of Kinston who has led East Carolina throughout the season with a 16.5 scoring average.

Sophomore Bill Otte, the Pirates' leading rebounder and tallest player, will also be on hand to help the Bucs in their battle with the Abbey. Otte has about a 15-point average. Also on hand will be junior forward Lacy West of Asheboro. He has been hitting the nets at 11.2 this season.

New ACC Threat Emerged Thursday

By KEN ALYTA
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In the 9-year history of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball, North Carolina's so-called "Tobacco Road" teams have been regarded with misgivings by visiting teams. Traditionally, they've been hard to handle.

A new threat, from South Carolina, emerged from the first round of the championship tournament as Thursday's firing set up this semifinal program for tonight.

Wake Forest-South Carolina at 7:30 p.m. and Duke-Clemson at 9:30.

Clemson, long a poor relation in ACC basketball circles, went into the tournament with a 10-14 record, its best in 10 years.

The Tigers opened the tournament with a classic upset of Third-seeded North Carolina State 67-46, leading all the way as they avenged a last-second two-point loss to the Wolfpack two weeks ago.

Duke qualified for a game with Clemson tonight by trimming Maryland 71-58, but the Terps put up quite an argument before going down to their eighth loss in a row.

Duke, No. 8 team in the nation, is seeded second.

Wake Forest, top-seeded, stretched its victory skein to seven with an 81-58 conquest of Virginia and South Carolina raced from 11 points down in the last half to nip North Carolina 57-55 in the most frantic finish of the opening round, which drew 11,500 for the afternoon games and 12,000 at night. The final two nights are 12,400 sellouts.

Rebounding strength underscored all the victories. Clemson outscrapped N.C. State under the boards, 59-39; Duke led Maryland 44-27; Wake Forest clobbered Virginia 68-33 and South Carolina edged North Carolina 46-44.

The season-long big guns had comparative off nights. Wake Forest's huge Len Chappell scored only 18 points, against a 30.9 average as he hit only 5 of 15 shots. South Carolina's Art Whisman, 30 for the year at 21.5, matched his season's low of 12 for South Carolina and Duke's Art Heyman, No. 2 scorer in the ACC on a 25.4 average, had to hit 12 of 16 free throws for a 22-point game.

In regular season play Duke and Wake Forest each beat tonight's opposition twice. Duke stopped Clemson 89-66 and 104-96. Wake Forest came from 17 points behind to win at South Carolina 78-74 as Chappell hit 36. Last Saturday night big Lennie scored 42 in a 97-85 Deacon victory.

Most of the first round glory went to Clemson's Tigers for the workmanlike job they did in sending North Carolina State's heavily favored Wolfpack to the sidelines while scoring the first ACC tournament victory in Clemson history.

Going into the game N.C. State had the best tournament record in the field, 14 victories in 18 games and four championships. Clemson's post-season record was 0-8.

But Coach Press Maravich's sophomore-heavy Clemson team scored the first seven points of the game, and quickly was in front by 10. The Tigers lost all but one point of their lead then spurred for 10 in a row to close the half in front 28-19.

A State second half press didn't fluster Clemson and the Tigers pulled far in front as State, in one of its most dismal performances, was roundly outplayed.

Clemson, the best shooting team in the school's history, had a 51 per cent game against 26.8 for the losers.

Capt. Tom MaHaffey, who started along with four Tiger sophomores, grabbed 16 rebounds and scored 15 points, most of them in the second half to play his best game of a year in which he has been hampered by two bad ankles and rarely has started a game.

Coaches' 1962 All-County Girls

Belvoir-Falkland Places Three

Bob Warren, in his first year of coaching, and his league-leading Belvoir-Falkland girls basketball team head up the 1962 All-County team with three representatives on the 12-member honorary squad.

The second, third, fourth and fifth place teams as the standings are now, each had two players named to the squad picked by the nine coaches in the county. They were Bethel, Farmville, Winterville and Stokes-Pactolus. Sixth place Grifton has one representative on the All-County team.

The teams were chosen in the same manner as the All-County boys team announced Thursday. All of the coaches in the county voted and the players were chosen by the vertical point system.

Ten of the 12 members of the honorary team are seniors, two juniors and one sophomore. Five of the 10 seniors have played four years and five have played three years. The team consists of five guards and five forwards.

Named to the squad at forward were Francis Stepps and Mary Pollard of Belvoir-Falkland, Carolyn Manning of Bethel, Betsy Allen of Farmville, Jane Mewborn of Grifton and Carolyn Barnes of Winterville. Barnes and Mewborn are the only repeaters from last year's team.

The All-County guards are Betty Norville of Belvoir-Falkland, Brenda Williams of Bethel, Sue Flake of Farmville, Andrea Whichard of Winterville and Phyllis Barnhill and Angelene Haddock of Stokes-Pactolus.

Barnes and Flake were the only two named to the All-

County team with unanimous votes from the coaches participating in the selection.

Belvoir-Falkland was aided a great deal this season by Stepps and Pollard. A senior, Stepps is averaging about 18 points and Pollard, a junior, is hitting the net at 21 points. The other representative from Belvoir-Falkland, Betty Norville, has done an outstanding job at guard for the Eagles.

Coach Troy Jackson of Winterville should be proud of the work done by Barnes and Whichard. Barnes has been a big asset to the Wolves on offense with a 22-point average. Whichard has grabbed a large share of the rebounds for Winterville this season.

Bethel has been aided a lot during the 1961-62 campaign with the fine shooting of Manning. She is averaging about 20 points per game. Williams has also been a big help to the Indians under the boards in the rebound department.

Farmville has a lot to look forward to during the next two years as Allen is just a sophomore now and will undoubtedly improve as time goes on. She is averaging about 16 points now for Coach Robert Bruce's team. Sue Flake has been the offensive standout for the Red Devils this season at guard.

Stokes-Pactolus, bothered by flu for the past month, owes much of the team's early season success to its two representatives on the All-County team. Both Haddock and Barnhill have done outstanding jobs for Coach W. J. Edwards at guard this season.

Grifton's lone representative on the 12-member team, Jane Mewborn, has lived up to the honors she received during her junior year. The 5-foot 9-inch senior is averaging around 24 points at the present time.

Even though the All-County selections have been made, the work is not over for the teams in the Pitt County Conference. The tournament begins in the East Carolina gym Monday night and runs until Saturday when the trophies will be presented to the winners. Eight of the nine teams also have games scheduled for tonight, ending up the regular season's activities.

VMI Is Surprise Team

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — It's West Virginia vs. George Washington and Virginia Tech vs. VMI tonight in the semifinals of a Southern Conference basketball tournament which thus far has produced only one surprise.

Sole interloper among the survivors is a scrappy VMI team that Thursday night resurrected a winning formula presumed lost for 21 years and bumped off third seeded Furman, 76-61.

Top-seeded West Virginia blitzed Richmond 97-75 to qualify for its meeting with George Washington's defending champions, who outlasted Davidson 85-81 in the tournament curtain-raiser.

Virginia Tech, operating full throttle with a devastating fast break, gave the first rounds' most eye-popping show of offensive muscle in a 101-83 bombing of The Citadel.

Coach Chuck Noe's Techmen sank 61 per cent of their shots from the floor, getting 23 points from all-Southern sophomore Howard Pardue and 20 from all-Southern senior Bucky Keller. Another all-Southern star, The Citadel's Gary Daniels, scored 27 points.

West Virginia looked a trifle ragged against Richmond, throwing the ball away 20 times. But a 30-point show by Rod Thorn and a 17-point job by Kenny Ward kept a smile on the face of Coach George King.

George Washington fired away at a 61 per cent clip in downing Davidson, with little Jon Feldman connecting on 11 of 16 floor shots and pacing the Colonial attack with 27 points. Bill Jarman had 26 points, Bill Beerman 21 for Davidson.

A New JOHN CREASEY Thriller

A ROCKET FOR ROLLISON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Kate Lawson was waiting apprehensively at a London airport to meet her fiancé, Maurice Holmes. They had been apart two years, while he was on business in the U. S. After so long a time did Maurice still have the same affection for her that had led to their becoming engaged? His letters hadn't appeared to change in tone, but they had been arriving further apart. Possibly that was only because of business demands and distractions.

The plane landed and her heart beat faster. Straining her eyes for a sight of Maurice as the passengers disembarked, Kate was bowled over viciously by an Alsatian dog. Sprawled on the ground, she was conscious of being hit on the side of her head, and then blackness came over her.

When she regained consciousness, a young doctor, Mike Kennedy, was attending her. Looking around, Kate's first thought was Maurice. There was no sign for him. After a search proved he was nowhere at the airport, Kennedy drove Kate to her home. She hoped to find Maurice waiting for her, but instead she was greeted by another shock—in her absence her desk had been ransacked. Money and Maurice's letters from the U. S. were missing. A subsequent check with the airport proved surely that Maurice had been on the plane.

CHAPTER 5

Dr. Kennedy and a stranger stood in Kate Lawson's doorway. Kate was so acutely disappointed that Maurice wasn't there too that she didn't speak. She just backed inside the room to allow Kennedy to come in first.

The other man was taller, and quite startlingly handsome—rather like someone she knew. A film star, perhaps. He was immaculately dressed in one of those suits which seemed to be made of a material poured over the body and made to fit like a skin at the shoulders. His dark hair curled a little, and had a few specks of grey at the temples.

"Hallo, Kate Lawson," greeted Kennedy. "I've brought a friend along, a man you might say specializes in mysteries. Richard Rollison, meet Kate possibly for Katherine Lawson. I've told Rolly that we aren't exactly lifelong friends," Kennedy went on brightly, "and I've given him an outline of the situation."

Kate exclaimed: "Rollison!"

"Good evening, Miss Lawson," the stranger greeted in a pleasant voice which seemed a little deeper than most men's. "I'm sorry you're having this anxiety, and if I can help I gladly will."

She stared at him as if at a ghost.

"Spotted in one, Rolly," declared Kennedy. "A certain Mr. Rollison has been identified as the Toff. That right, Kate?" He was further in the room, glancing at the desk with the open drawers, and Rollison glanced at it, too. "You certainly didn't lose much time."

Kate said, almost sharply: "Of course I know the Toff, surely everyone—" she broke off, seeing Rollison smile. He was smiling only at her, and gave her an unexpected feeling of confidence. She had read of him over the years, for he was frequently in the headlines—especially those of the more sensational Sunday newspapers.

He was known to be consulted by the police, and if she wanted to talk about him rather cynically—as most people talked about him at some time or other—she would have called him the "aristocratic private eye." No one had ever matched the word "aristocratic" better than this man. His complete ease of movement and of manner seemed to suit the word perfectly.

"May I have a look at the desk which was forced open?" he asked, and moved towards it. "Is this the one?"

"Yes," Kate said. "But why—"

"Let the great man get to work, you can ask questions afterwards," Kennedy said. "There's no need for alarm, I just thought he'd do you more good than any doctor."

He was touching her right hand lightly, and they stood together and watched as Rollison bent over the desk, then knelt down on one knee and studied the governor lock, which controlled all the drawers.

He did not touch it with his fingers, but took a knife out of his pocket, opened it as a kind of skewer blade, poked a little, then pushed the drawer in and pulled it out with the blade. He glanced round.

"Very neat and a thoroughly professional job," he announced. "I shouldn't expect to find any prints here, but he might have left some in other parts of the room. Mike says that only the money and the letters are missing."

"Yes, that's right."

"What about jewelry?"

"I'm wearing the only jewelry I possess."

"May as well see if the chap realized that," said Rollison easily. "Which if the bedroom?"

"It's hardly a bedroom," Kate began apologetically. "It's just a cubbyhole, but there is a dressing table."

She stood in the doorway, watching Rollison as he examined the dressing table.

"I shouldn't think it's been touched, except by you," he said. "I can see your fingerprints and some marks on a light dusting of powder, but no extensive marks like there are on the desk. Is this him, by the way?"

He picked up a framed photograph of Maurice, smiling, dark-haired, preciously familiar. "Yes," Kate answered.

"He looks as if he knows what he wants," Rollison remarked lightly, and changed the subject. "How much money would you say there was?"

"Just over a hundred pounds."

"Any keys or securities?"

"No—I keep the keys in my handbag, and a duplicate set at the shop, where I'm more likely to need them."

"Can you imagine any reason why a thief would want to take those letters?" asked Rollison.

"Could there be anything particularly interesting even to a student of love letters?"

"No, I don't think so," she said, flushing a little.

"Maurice Holmes didn't write in purple phrases?"

Kate found herself laughing. "Neither of us writes in purple phrases, I suppose—well, they were affectionate letters, that's all."

"Did the letters give you any information which wouldn't be likely to be found anywhere else?"

"I can't imagine what you're getting at," Kate answered.

"Let me make myself clearer," said Rollison, as if musingly. "Could either you or he conceivably be blackmailed if anyone else knew about the letters?"

As she began to say "no," emphatically, he went on: "Let me finish, then one 'no' will cover the lot! Did he give away any business secrets or trade secrets? Was he inclined to tell you too much about his business?"

"No," she answered quickly.

"I can't think of anything in the letters which could possibly interest anyone but Maurice and me."

"The chap who did this job took his time," Rollison said. "There's no evidence of haste about anything he did. He didn't go into the bedroom, so he wasn't simply looking for any valuables he could find. He went straight to the desk, but didn't touch any business papers. The money was easy and at hand, so he would have been a fool to leave it behind and make it obvious that he wasn't simply after money. What we've got to find out is why he should be interested in the letters."

He was looking straight into Kate's eyes. "If it's true that the letters could only interest Mr. Holmes or you, and you didn't take them, then—"

"Did he?" Kennedy asked expectantly.

"I was going to ask, did Mr. Holmes have a key?" asked Rollison. "There's no sign that the front door was forced. Did he have one?"

Kate wanted to say: "It's ludicrous, it's ridiculous, you're behaving like a fool!"—but the fact remained that Maurice did have a key to the apartment.

Death Is Sooner Than Expected

HIGHLAND, Ill. (AP)—Dr. Sedat A. Kayar, who told his patients last January he would soon succumb to cancer of the pancreas, died Thursday.

The physician, 41, didn't get his last wish—to visit his native Turkey.

"It is my unpleasant duty to inform you that my services to you as your doctor must end," Dr. Kayar had said in a letter published by both weekly newspapers here. He said the inevitable would probably come within six or eight months.

It came much sooner.

"Everyone was hoping for a miracle," said Miss Verna Hornetiaux, Dr. Kayar's secretary, who had stayed on at his office receiving the mail and referring patients to other doctors.

There was little immediate reaction from the townspeople. One resident observed, "You know it's going to happen but you always hope for one more day."

The doctor, an athletic man who loved to ski, spent his last days putting his affairs in order and reading, sometimes professional journals, sometimes a few of the thousands of letters he received.

Two weeks ago complications of an undisclosed nature arose and Dr. Kayar went to St. Joseph's Hospital in Highland for four days. Early Thursday his condition worsened and he returned to the hospital.

Dr. Kayar told his physician, "I'll never see Friday." He died about four hours later.

Dr. Kayar seemed at peace and resigned to his fate, said a friend. "Of course, he was sad about many things, too," the friend said. "There were many things he had hoped to do and there was no time."

One of Dr. Kayar's last wishes was to visit his homeland. He and his widow, Annalee, had planned the trip but death intervened.

Dr. Kayar, who had practiced here about eight years, also is survived by their three children, Eileen, 11, Susan, 8, and Sedat Jr., 4.

Plenty Of Cold For Midsection

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Temperatures moderated across the north central region today, after nearly a week of below zero weather, breaking a late-winter cold spell.

But unseasonable cold still gripped most of the nation's mid-section and freezing weather extended across the major part of the country. Only areas in the South and Pacific Coast were out of the cold belt.

It was below zero again this morning in northern Midwest sections. But readings for the most part were far higher than Thursday when the mercury dropped to 46 below in Wisconsin.

The coldest air appeared confined to sections of Michigan and Wisconsin. As the cold air moved from the Midlands into the Northeast, temperatures dropped to -23 in Traverse City, Mich., and -22 in Pellston, Mich. They were near -20 in Green Bay and Stevens Point, Wis.

But in Minneapolis, which had a record March low of -32 Thursday, it was only 4 below. In International Falls, Minn., on the Canadian border, the 2 above compared to Thursday morning's 35 below.

Temperatures dropped to a little below zero in sections of upstate New York and New England. Lower readings, however, were indicated tonight as more of the cold air from the Midwest moves into the region.

No heavy precipitation was reported.

Total forest area in the United States is 787 million acres.

his closest friends and associates at Peking National University, Professor Chen Tu-shui, was the first head of the Communist Party of China, but Chen's activities ended there friendship. The great tragedy of his private life was when the Communist issued a letter, purported to have written by Hu Shih's son, denouncing his father as a traitor. He rejected the idea that his son wrote such a letter freely.

The death of Hu Shih is a loss not only to Nationalist China but to the friendship between the Chinese and American people. He belonged to both.

Nation's Traffic Deaths Tallied

CHICAGO (AP)—The nation's traffic deaths in January totaled 2,830, the same number reported killed in highway accidents in January, 1961, the National Safety Council reported.

The council said last January's total was about 200 below the average for the month.

Commandos In Secret War Are Dying Fast

By ANDREW BOROWIEC
ALGIERS (AP)—Some contemptuously call them "Les Barbouzes"—the bearded ones. Each of them is a target the minute he steps on Algerian soil.

They are French government commandos, sent here to combat the European Secret Army Organization's terrorism.

The "bearded ones" have not hesitated where normal police procedures have failed.

They are hated by most European settlers, who blame them for most deaths in Algiers. They are held in contempt by some in the French army. Moslems accuse them of not being efficient enough in fighting the European underground.

And they have been dying like flies.

It is said that roughly half of an average 40-man Barbouze commando survives to collect $400 pay at the end of their first month in Algiers.

The Barbouzes are the No. 1 target of the secret army, which is fighting to keep Algeria under French rule.

Local police are never informed when the Barbouzes strike. When one of their hideouts is attacked, news of the fighting is blacked out on the police radio and no reinforcements are sent.

A half dozen 40-man teams are believed operating in Algiers.

To a Barbouze lookout on the roof of a massive villa in the suburb of La Redoute, every car every man approaching, means a potential killer.

Nine guns were pointed at a group of newsmen who approached the villa one morning after a bazooka attack.

In the courtyard, some 20 men tensely clasped new weapons. Most carried submachine guns, and had pistols in holsters which were strapped to their civilian suits. A light machine gun was in position.

They were in their early 20s. Most were Europeans, but several had Asiatic features. One was a Moslem.

A man dressed in a tailored suit stepped forward.

"Officially we don't exist," he told newsmen. "But since you have seen us, please write that we are like bank guards sent to protect a branch office where things aren't what they should be."

May Again Use Enos' Capsule

WASHINGTON (AP)—The space capsule in which Enos the chimpanzee flew around the earth may make the trip again—this time with a man aboard.

With an eye on economizing, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration today revealed, a possible second-time-around for the MA5 capsule.

Use of the craft for a manned shot would represent the first time an astronaut had flown in a Mercury capsule that already had served as a satellite.

Enos rode MA5 twice around the earth last December. It is now at the McDonnell Aircraft Co. factory in St. Louis, being reworked for its future mission.

Thornton Wilder Looking To 2-Year Stay In Arizona Desert

By LOYAL GOULD

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—"I'm heading out into that Arizona desert to be a bum for two years," said Thornton Wilder.

"As soon as I get back to the states it's going to be two years without neckties, without shoes and without cultivated conversation," the American author and playwright said Thursday.

Wilder, 64, here from New York for the premiere of an operatic version of his play "The Alcestiad," said he had wanted to slip away to the wild beauty of that desert for the past 30 years but had only recently decided to take the step.

"It's like suicide with some people who always talk about it yet never do it, but now I'm going to realize my ambitions," the writer continued. He said he needed to "renew the springs, refresh the wells by getting away from it all in some quiet place."

After the two-year sabbatical, Wilder said, he will "return chock full of ideas for more work."

"I'm going to choose some place half way between Nogales and Tucson—a place where I can hit the bars with equal ease in both towns," he went on.

Wilder plans to get back to the United States toward the end of March and will go immediately to Arizona to search for his retreat.

"No matter where it is," he said, "it's going to be my ideal of get-away quarters—a little white frame house with a rickety front porch where I can laze away in the shade in a straight-backed wooden rocking chair."

"Some of my big city friends think I'm getting old, but I tell them it's good to be old at times because then people let you alone."

"They think you're old and senile, but at heart I feel like a 35-year-old."

The Frankfurt audience gave a 20-minute ovation Thursday night to "The Alcestiad," for which Louise Talma, professor of composition at New York's Hunter College, wrote the music. Wilder wrote the libretto from his rarely performed stage version of the Alcestis legend. German soprano Inge Borkh, who sang the role of Alcestis, shared the applause with Miss Talma and Wilder.

Wilder, who in recent years has made his home at Hamden, Conn., is best known for his play "Our Town" and his novel "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," all three of which won Pulitzer Prizes. Recently he has been at work on two omnibus cycles of plays.

"The Seven Deadly Sins," consisting of seven one-act plays in each cycle. Three of the one-act plays were given their premier in January at a New York off-Broadway theater.

Town Handyman Is Hero In Rescue Of 40 Persons

SALYERSVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Big John Hank, a man who identifies himself as the town's handy man, is a hero today because of his daring rescue of some 40 persons stranded by rampaging flood waters.

Hank, who is slightly over six feet and weighs 215 pounds, waded into flooded areas of Salyersville pulling a motorless boat, and rescued some 40 persons stranded by flood waters of rampaging

Licking River.

Hank's feats occurred Tuesday, but did not come to light until an official mentioned them to Gov. Combs Thursday.

Hank said, "Somebody had to; you just couldn't let them drown." Hank said he and Paul Marshall, whose family Hank first rescued, worked 11 straight hours without rest, pulling the boat hundreds of feet through water five feet deep in places.

"He was the only man in town who could have done it," said County Judge Clyde Salyer. "He's a big husky fellow, kind of tall, and could walk in deep water without falling down."

Hank loaded five or six persons at a time in the little boat, Salyer said. "These people might still be isolated—maybe even dead—if he hadn't of gone in there and got 'em."

Hank, 45, said the cold water didn't bother him. "I swim in cold water the year 'round and didn't pay too much attention to it. I just wanted to get the folks out."

"I don't want to be a hero or anything like that," Hank said, "but I know if we hadn't gotten to those folks they'd all be dead. The furniture was already floating around in some of the houses."

"Most of all, I'm just thankful we got 'em out. You've got to give a lot of credit to Paul—he did lots of the work."

"Hank should get a lot of credit—he saved lots of lives," Salyer said.

Crime Rate In Cities Is Rising

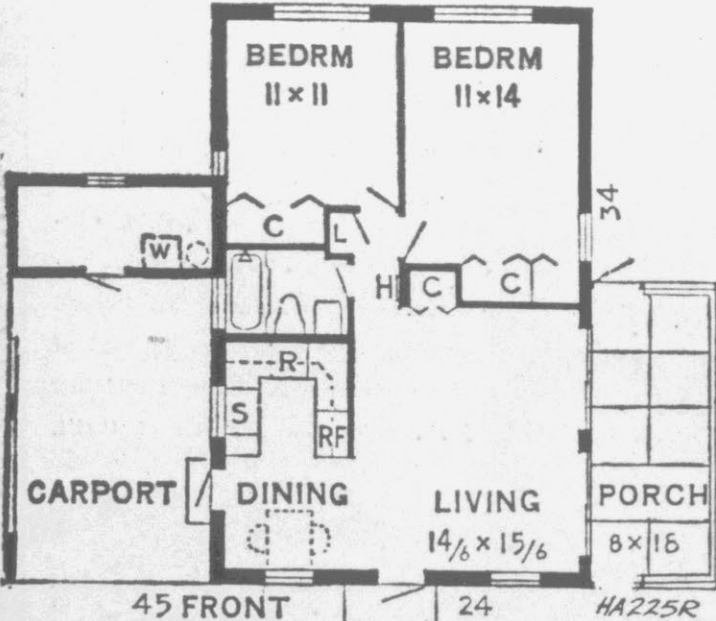

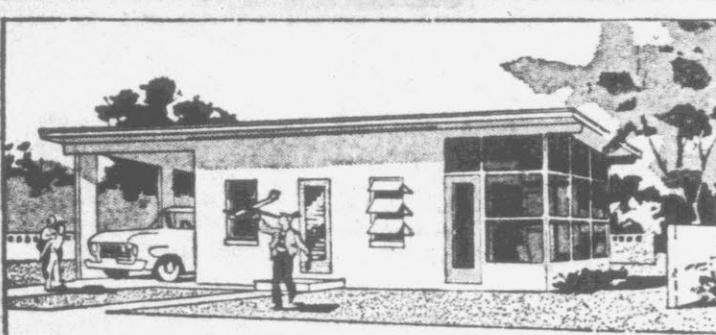

WASHINGTON (AP)—A rising crime rate still plagued the nation's cities last year.

It went up about 2 per cent over 1960—increasing in all categories except robbery which dropped 1 per cent.

The figures are for cities of more than 25,000 population and were released Wednesday by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

He said no one should get the impression the crime rise was moderate when compared to 1960's 14 per cent rise. It is significant, he said, because it came on top of the 1960 peak.

when was the last time your home was re-wired?

You and your neighbors have been adding new uses of electricity—TV sets, work-saving appliances, more lighting. But in most homes here, folks haven't added the wiring to take care of these electrical servants.

It's shocking but true: 4 out of 5 homes here have out-of-date wiring! And electric appliances must have good wiring to operate at their best.

So remember: when you add an appliance, add-a-wire, too. Up-to-date electrical living calls for up-to-date electrical wiring!

NASA Fires Three Rockets At Dawn

WASHINGTON (AP)—The civilian space agency put on a spectacular show high above its station at Wallops Island, Va., at dawn today with a series of rocket tests to measure high-altitude atmospheric conditions.

The star performer in the three-act production was a vehicle which loosed a cloud of sodium vapor that started 26 miles up and continued on to the 84-mile maximum altitude reached by the rocket.

That test spread a great cloud, glowing in colors from pink to yellow in the rays of the sun just coming over the horizon, visible for hundreds of miles up and down the coast and inland.

Preceding that, scientists of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration sent up another rocket to spread a trail of water vapor up to 89 miles. Under today's clear weather conditions that also provided a spectacular show.

A third rocket carried a load of grenades which were detonated one at a time from a height of 24 miles up to 55 miles.

The tests were aimed at learning more about such matters as air density and the velocity of currents at various altitudes, the diffusion of materials loosed in these currents, and the shearing effect where a trail of material spread by a rocket passes from an air current speeding in one direction to an atmospheric layer where the wind blows another way.

Couple Facing Tax Charges

GREENSBORO — Melton E. and Virginia S. Evans of Washington, N. C., operators of a wholesale and retail fishing business in Greenville and Washington, face income tax charges listed in an indictment returned by a federal grand jury here Thursday.

The indictment alleges that during the four-year period Mr. and Mrs. Evans reported total taxable income of $44,700.84 on which there was a tax due of $11,500.95, and that they should have reported total taxable income for the four years in the amount of $116,973.33, on which there was a tax due of $39,332.42.

Ten other indictments for tax violations were returned at yesterday's meeting of the grand jury.

Pupils To Take Qualifying Test

FARMVILLE — Twenty-five students at H. B. Sugg High School here plan to take the 1962 National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, Principal F. H. Mebane announced today.

The test will be administered at the school Tuesday, March 6, at 9 p.m. Students who wish to be considered for the merit scholarships to be awarded in 1963 are required to take the test at that time.

The qualifying test is a three-hour examination of educational development. It is the first step in the eighth annual competition for four-year Merit Scholarships provided by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation and by sponsoring corporations, foundations, associations, unions and individuals.

The number of scholarships awarded in any year depends on the extent of sponsor participation. In 1961, 945 Merit Scholarships were awarded; 556 were provided by 133 sponsors and 389 by the Merit Corporation. There are 3,275 Merit Scholars attending 403 colleges in the current academic year.

The test scores of students who are examined in March will be reported to their schools by May 15. The scores are used by class advisors in many high schools to help students make decisions about college attendance and field of study. Many students who do not expect to win a scholarship take the test in order to learn more about their individual strengths and weaknesses in the area measured by the test.

would be $106 per year. One point will bring a 5 per cent increase in insurance rates.

Two points under the plan increases premiums by 20 per cent, while three points bring an additional 35 per cent charge per year. Increasing 25 per cent per point thereafter, if a driver would accumulate 8 points, the rate change for his insurance would amount to 150 per cent.

Just as under the Drivers License Point system, this safe driving insurance point system allows points to accumulate over a period of three years, the Examiner noted.

If a total of 8 points are accumulated over this period, Morgan noted, "for the next three years, the driver would be paying an additional $250 per year for these points in addition to his regular $100 premium.

Morgan, who was introduced by the council's program chairman Sam Brooks is stationed at Highway Patrol Troop "A" Headquarters here.

Council Chairman Luther Moore presided at the meet.

STATE BANK and Trust Company
Greenville, North Carolina

The PTA Magazine is concerned because of the tendency of some teenagers to rate extracurricular activities higher on the scale of success than academic achievement.

We doubt that this is true in Greenville. We support every area of activity in our educational system, but it occurs to us that there may be some truth in this observation.

For this reason, we will deposit $100 in a savings account to the credit of the Greenville High School graduate of 1962 whose academic achievement is highest during his high school years.

Our country needs young people with minds disciplined and skilled by use to comprehend the technical aspects of space vehicles, and to understand the nature of man in all his relationships to society. Certainly those who excel in this regard merit the recognition of all of us.
