U.S. Nuclear Tests Keyed To Reds Accepting Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with the grim danger of decisive Soviet gains in the atomic arms race, the United States will begin nuclear air tests in the Pacific late next month unless Moscow agrees quickly to a cheatproof test-ban treaty.

President Kennedy announced this decision in a broadcast to the world Friday night. He coupled it with an urgent bid to Soviet leaders to return quickly to the negotiating table and join in working out a "fully effective treaty" to make tests unnecessary.

"It is our hope and prayer," Kennedy declared, "that these grim, unwelcome tests will never have to be made—that these deadly weapons will never have to be fired—that our preparations for war will bring us the preservation of peace."

But he said bluntly that the next move was up to the Kremlin. "In the last analysis, it is the leaders of the Soviet Union who must bear the heavy responsibility of choosing in the weeks that lie ahead whether we proceed with these steps (for arms control)—or proceed with new tests," Kennedy said.

His reluctant but long-considered decision was made, Kennedy said, because of gains in nuclear weapons power made by the Soviet Union through a series of more than 40 tests fired last fall after months of secret preparation. The Russians did not gain superiority in nuclear power through those tests, Kennedy through development could lead to important breakthroughs in some later test series.

"I must report to you in all candor," the President declared, "that further Soviet series, in the absence of further Western progress, could well provide the Soviet Union with a nuclear attack and defense capability so powerful as to encourage aggressive designs."

Unless the arms race can be stopped with a test-ban treaty policed by an international inspection system, Kennedy asserted, the United States' most advanced own weapons development in order to preserve "the free world's ability to deter, to survive, and to respond to an all-out attack."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said in a dispatch from Washington reporting the announcement that Kennedy knew "full well that the Soviet Union rejects the system of inspection proposed by the U.S.A. and Britain as completely unacceptable."

Congressional Leaders Are Solidly Behind Decision To Resume Nuclear Tests

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congressional leaders jumped immediately and solidly behind President Kennedy's announcement that the United States will resume atmospheric nuclear testing late next month unless Russia agrees to an enforceable test ban.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said leaders of both parties met with the President before his nationwide television and radio address Friday night and supported the decision.

"The President has discharged his full responsibility in his offer to desist if the Soviets will act to sign an adequate treaty with the necessary safeguards," Dirksen said. "Civilization could require no more than this."

Rep. Leslie Arends of Illinois, assistant Republican leader: "I commend the decision. We should have resumed testing sooner."

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn. "It was a difficult decision to make because it involved an admission that we have fruitlessly gambled with our national security and have lost precious time and progress."

House Democratic Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma: "We certainly should go ahead with the testing. The President's decision should have the support of every one."

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa: "The President made it very clear that this is essential to the nation's security. If the Russians really want peace in the world, they have the opportunity."

Rep. John Saylor, R-Pa.: "We never should have stopped testing in the first place."

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M.: "In view of the Russian tests and achievements, I do not see how the President could have come to any other decision."

Steel Contract Talks Hit Stalemate; Still Hopeful

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steel labor talks have collapsed in a stalemate, but optimism continued today that a strike will be avoided.

Negotiators broke off more than two weeks of bargaining sessions Friday night but admitted in statements they had swapped offers without reaching a middle ground.

The facts seemed to indicate the vast steel industry and the United Steelworkers Union, representing some 430,000 workers in basic steel mills, had made a good deal of progress while failing to nail down a final deal.

It was reliably reported the industry had offered wage and other benefits worth 6 to 8 cents an hour, but the union held out for a settlement package more in the neighborhood of 10 cents an hour.

This argued for a faster resumption of negotiations than the May 1 day mentioned by union President David J. McDonald. It was also believed likely the government will prod the parties toward a quicker get-together.

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg said in Washington that President Kennedy asked him to say that "after a suitable recess it would be in the national good for the parties to resume negotiations to the end that a reasonable settlement in the public interest can be concluded."

This was translated in Pittsburgh to mean "wait a little while to cool off, boys, but don't make it longer than a week or so."

Goldberg added: "The immediate inability of the parties to resolve their differences is of course to be regretted. It should be recognized by all, however, that negotiations of this type present obvious difficulties."

The administration in Washington apparently still was hopeful that a settlement could be reached well ahead of the scheduled June 30 expiration of present contracts—far enough ahead to avert a full-blown steel inventory buildup disruptive to the economy.

Burmese Capital Calm After Military Coup

RANGOON, Burma (AP)—Tanks and heavily armed convoys rumbled through the streets of Rangoon today as Gen. Ne Win assumed virtual dictatorial powers following the army's lightning coup.

The capital was calm. The armed patrols encountered no resistance to Win's ouster of Prime Minister U Nu's government. Win assumed the chairmanship of an all-military ruling revolutionary council and took for himself the ministries of defense, finance and justice.

Win's deputy and heir apparent, Brig. Aug Gyi, became trade and industries minister. The only civilian to get a ministry—but not a seat on the council—was U Thi Han, who took over foreign affairs and mining.

The army said Nu and members of his cabinet were being held under armed guard, but refused to disclose their whereabouts. The revolutionary council announced that Burmese President U Win Maung, the ceremonial head of state, also was seized and detained after Friday morning's coup.

In all, the army held seven cabinet ministers and 36 others—but this apparently failed to worry the average Burmese, most of whom went about their business in quiet and orderly fashion.

Political observers were hesitant to predict exactly why the staunchly anti-Communist Gen. Win took over the country for the second time in three and one half years or what effect the coup would have on Burma's policy of nonalignment.

Win declared only that the army had taken control of a vasty deteriorating situation in order to save the nation from disintegration.

Nu's critics considered a number of fields vastly deteriorating—the increasing strength of the extreme left wing in his ruling Socialist party, government nationalization plans and recent trade ventures with Communist China.

Hunger Strike?

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (AP)—Officials at this big Army post said today that some members of a New Hampshire National Guard outfit have announced they have gone on a hunger strike in an effort to learn when they will be released from active duty.

Col. Roger Whiting, the post public information officer, said members of the 4th Howitzer Battalion, 197 Artillery, New Hampshire National Guard, has informed newspapers in New Hampshire of the hunger strike.

Col. Whiting said he did not know how many men were involved in the strike.

He added they had been informed that information about any release date would have to come from sources higher than Ft. Bragg.

Site Of Jetliner Crash Combed For Vital Clues

NEW YORK (AP) — The grim task of determining what caused an American Airlines jetliner to plunge with 95 persons into the icy waters of Jamaica Bay centered today on the theory of a control system failure.

But government investigators had no definite evidence that it was such a failure that threw the sleek Boeing 707 into a nose dive Thursday, moments after take-off from Idlewild Airport.

All aboard died in what was the worst accident in the nation's history involving a single commercial aircraft.

Begrimed searchers dug ever deeper into the salt water and muck for pieces of the disintegrated aircraft and the remaining dead.

Early today, salvage crews had recovered 72 bodies. Only 11 had been positively identified.

Possibly the most important part of the 65½-million astrotroj still buried in the bay was the plane's flight recorder box, a yellow, steel globe about the size of a basketball.

The recorder, designed to withstand the force of any crash, keeps a record of the performance in flight of an aircraft—its speed, altitude and other operational information.

If undamaged, it should enable investigators to reconstruct the exact flight path and altitude of the plane from the start of its roll down the runway until it fell out of a left climbing turn and plunged 800 feet or more into the bay.

Fragments of the plane recovered so far have been scooped up with shovels and taken to an Idlewild hangar for detailed study. These include control devices in such sections as the tail, wings and cockpit.

Early Friday, Civil Aeronautics Board investigators found a jack screw from the system for electronically moving the tail stabilizer up and down. First examination indicated it was in the up position, one that would have forced the plane's nose sharply down.

The FAA said it was fairly clear now that neither weather, runway condition nor air traffic control were significant contributing factors to the crash. And so far, it added, there is no indication of sabotage.

SWEPT BY FLAMES

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) Fire swept an island community in the Tonle Sap River near Phnom Penh today, destroying hundreds of houses. There was no immediate word of casualties.

Moscow Charges Kennedy Trying To Force Unacceptable Espionage

Moscow charged today that President Kennedy was trying to force "a completely unacceptable system of espionage inspection" on the Soviet Union as the price for holding up U.S. nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

He declared that the President smacked of blackmail, predicted a Russian rejection, and warned of a nuclear arms race.

But U.S. allies in Western Europe hailed as completely justified Kennedy's decision to resume the tests in April unless the Russians accept far-reaching controls on a nuclear test ban.

Two U.S. allies in the Pacific, the Philippines and Japan, split over the U.S. decision.

President Diosdado Macapagal declared U.S. atmospheric testing was "a necessary measure to insure the continued safety of the free world."

Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda of Japan, the only nation ever to feel the wrath of an atomic bomb in wartime, on the other hand told Kennedy in a letter, "It has been and continues to be the constant and earnest hope of Japan that the testing of nuclear weapons is never conducted, whatever the reason may be."

Masakichi Matsui, chief of Japan's opposition Socialist party's propaganda bureau, asserted nuclear tests will destroy the human race and said Japanese "are totally opposed to the decision."

A small group of leftist students demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo.

There was no immediate reaction from nonaligned nations. While refusing to comment directly on Kennedy's announcement, a spokesman for India's Foreign Ministry reiterated his nation's opposition to all nuclear testing.

Moscow's reaction was carried by Tass, the official news agency. Tass said Kennedy set conditions "strongly reminiscent of blackmail." The agency said the President knew the Soviet Union would reject the inspection system and declared new U.S. tests "opened wide the doors for a nuclear weapons race."

"The President," Tass continued, "said that if the Soviet Union accepts the British-American plan of prohibiting nuclear tests, which foresees, as is known, a completely unacceptable system of espionage inspection, then for the United States there will be no necessity to begin the tests."

The British government gave the United States full support. Newspapers throughout Western Europe viewed the U.S. move as inevitable as a result of the recent Soviet explosions.

The British Foreign Office said the U.S. decision was necessary to "insure the preservation of freedom in the world."

The British statement came a half-hour after Kennedy announced his decision in a solemn, 32-minute broadcast to the American people and the world.

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government said Kennedy's policy provided "a further opportunity for the Russians to sign a treaty banning tests altogether. Her majesty's government is in entire agreement with the decision of the nuclear policy announced by President Kennedy."

The Canadian delegation at a Canada-U.S. interparliamentary meeting in Toronto voiced support of the U.S. stand as scientifically and militarily necessary. The official Canadian position has been to oppose nuclear tests by whatever country.

Australian Foreign Affairs Minister Sir Garfield Barwick said that the United States had no choice but to decide to resume tests.

Nationalist China expressed support. "Since the Soviet Union has repeatedly rejected proposals for an effective nuclear test ban," a spokesman said, "the United States has no alternative but to take steps to protect its own security and that of the free world."

South Korea's military government also expressed support of the U.S. move.

The influential Straits Times of Singapore backed the U.S. move and said, "It is a military and not a political decision."

Two British papers, the Laborite Daily Herald and the Conservative Daily Mail, said Kennedy was forced into his move.

West Germany's Frankfurter Allgemeine said, "With great reluctance, the President accepted the arguments which called for matching the technical lead achieved by the Soviets with their own atmospheric tests. It is no light-hearted decision but comes after serious grappling with the problem."

The Communist East German news agency ADN charged "Kennedy sought to make the Soviet Union responsible for the failure to reach an agreement on the ending of nuclear tests."

Red Chinese Jet Pilot Defects; Brings MIG

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—A Chinese Communist air force lieutenant flew his Soviet-built MIG 15 to Formosa today and exclaimed: "I'm so happy to be in free China."

It was the first established defection of a Communist Chinese warplane to this Chinese Nationalist island bastion.

Chiang Kai-shek's government said the pilot, 2nd Lt. Liu Cheng-ze, 25, had taken off on a training flight from the big Chinese Communist base at Lukiao, 200 miles north of Formosa, and then flew the jet fighter to Taoyuan Air Force Base, 20 miles west of Taipei.

Reports from Taoyuan said the pilot climbed out of his MIG and handed his revolver to the Nationalist base commander.

Nationalist officials claimed that the defection was proof of Chiang's assertions of widespread unrest among Red China's armed forces.

Nationalist air force officers were quoted as saying 12 American-built F86 Sabre Jets took off from Formosa after radar spotted Liu's plane breaking away from other Chinese Communist MIGs flying in formation and heading toward this island.

The officers said Liu radioed his intention to defect to the Sabre-jets, which escorted him through cloudless skies to Taoyuan where he landed the MIG intact. Liu said he was born in the southwest China province of Kwangsi, was unmarried but has a married brother on the mainland. Liu later was taken into Taipei.

The government radio quoted Liu as saying his defection was inspired by the flight of two Communist airmen last September.

They flew a small crop-dusting plane to South Korea and later came to Formosa. Under the Nationalist system of awards, they received $2,500 in gold.

The awards depend on the type of plane. Liu is entitled to receive $35,000 in gold for bringing in the MIG 15.

Indonesians Hit Living Cost Rise

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Two thousand demonstrators shouted before the residences of the mayor and governor in the east Java city of Surabaya this week in the first public outcry against a rapidly rising cost of living in Indonesia.

Army authorities termed the demonstration illegal and announced "appropriate measures" will be taken against demonstrators.

The Pia news agency said the demonstrations occurred on Wednesday and were accompanied by "unlawful actions directed towards the residence of the mayor of Surabaya." Surabaya is the stronghold of the Indonesian Communist party.

Asheville Lawyer Is Named Judge

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford went to find a replacement as a special Superior Court judge for the late Judge W. Jack Hooks of Kenly.

Henry C. Martin, an Asheville attorney, was picked by the governor Friday to fill the unexpired term of Judge Hooks, who died early this week.

Martin, 42, was born in Lenoir, and educated at the University of North Carolina and Harvard.

Passenger Train Leaves Track, Plunges In Lake

ATHOL, Idaho (AP)—The Northern Pacific mailliner, bound from Chicago to Portland, ran off the tracks on a sweeping curve as it approached a 200-foot high trestle Friday night. The engine plunged down a lake and passenger cars were hurled around "like jackstraws."

The engineer and fireman on the three-unit diesel engine were missing and feared drowned.

At least 78 of the 100 passengers aboard the 12-car train were treated in area hospitals.

Four persons were reported critically hurt. Two of these were taken to Sandpoint, Idaho, and the others to a hospital at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

"Another three seconds and the train would have been on the trestle," a railroad worker said at the scene. "Then there would really have been a tragedy."

Two units of the engine were submerged in the ice-covered lake. The third unit stuck part way out of the gapping hole in the ice.

The combination baggage-dormitory car was overturned on the steep, snow-covered bank, part way in the water.

The missing crewmen were identified as engineer Jess S. Pruitt and fireman Stephen F. Renner, both Spokane.

The wreckage was strewn to the right of the sweeping curve. The speed and weight of the engine apparently carried it down an incline and over a second steep bank into the lake.

About 50 passengers were taken to Spokane by bus, about 50 miles to the south. Their injuries were described as mostly minor.

The grade school in this hamlet of 231 persons was crowded with the less seriously injured or unhurt.

Bethel Student Is Finalist For Four Scholarships

BETHEL — Donald Bernard Dewar has been named as finalist for four scholarships: the Morehead Angier B. Duke and Hanks and National Merit Scholarship awards.

He is one of 67 finalists being interviewed this week by the Central Scholarship Committee of the John Motley Morehead Scholarship Foundation for 1962 Morehead Scholarships to the University of North Carolina.

The interviews, which began yesterday, will terminate Tuesday, at which time the 1962 winners will be personally presented by John Motley Morehead.

Head, Channel 9 in Greenville is scheduled to carry the broadcast.

All of the boys appearing before the Central Scholarship Committee who do not receive a Morehead Scholarship will receive a merit tuition scholarship to the University of North Carolina.

The 18-year-old senior is the only Pitt county boy who scored 140 on the National Merit Scholarship test and is a finalist. He is the son of Sam Dewar, a vocational agriculture teacher at the Bethel High School, and Mrs. Dewar, a supervising teacher in charge of student teachers in business education at East Carolina College.

He is a finalist in the Angier B. Duke Scholarship awards from the Eastern District for men. He is one of 30 finalists in the state competing for the Duke Scholarship.

Dewar received a letter this week from Wake Forest College announcing that he was one of the finalists for the George Foster Hanks Scholarship.

He had been appointed to the Air Force Academy by Congressman Herbert C. Bonner, but withdrew in order to pursue the study of medicine, according to Bethel High School principal, Walter Latham.

Latham also commented, "Dewar is an all-around student. He is president of the Northeastern District Beta Club and is a member of the basketball team in Bethel. In last night's game he scored the last two points in the final seconds of the game with Winterville. Just before that the score had been tied."

"Beside all of this," said Latham, "this six-foot lad has had an afternoon and Saturday job for some time."

Couple Marry In Morning Rites

Mrs. Billy Boyd Cuthrell

In a morning ceremony at 11 o'clock Saturday, March 3, Miss Jean Eloise Smith became the bride of Billy Boyd Cuthrell at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. Dr. Edgar B. Fisher officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grey Smith of Greenville. Mr. Cuthrell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Cuthrell Jr. of Greenville.

The church was decorated with bridal greenery of Palmetta and Areca palms, and seven-branched candelabras holding cathedral candles were used. On the altar was an arrangement of white glads and pom poms. A brass Pri Dieu was placed in front of the altar where the bride and the bridegroom knelt for prayer. Pews were marked with bridal satin.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Paul Toll of Greenville, organist, and Dr. Carl Hjortsvang, soloist.

Given in marriage by her brother, William Grey Smith of Wilmington, the bride wore a formal-length dress of white Chantilly lace over taffeta, fashioned with elongated bodice, scalloped medieval neckline, embroidered with iridescents. The long sleeves ended in calla points over the bride's hands. Her voluminous skirt featured taffeta bows and cascades into a chapel-length train. Her two-tiered fingertip veil of pure silk French illusion was attached to a double queens crown encrusted with swirls of pearls and sequins. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of white orchids and nylon tulle tied with narrow satin.

Miss Lorraine Smith, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a ballerina length dress of pale orchid nylon chiffon over taffeta, designed with a portrait draped neckline and a draped overskirt. She wore an orchid headpiece of flower design and matching accessories. Her cascade bouquet of pink carnations and orchid pom poms was tied with pink satin ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Miss Jean Taylor of Greenville and Miss Jean Stafford of Elizabeth City. They wore dresses similar to that of the honor attendant, and carried bouquets of spring flowers tied with orchid satin.

Mr. Cuthrell's father served as best man. Ushers were Richard Stroud, Kenneth Harris and Bobby Bateman, all of Ayden.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Smith wore a teal blue lace over taffeta dress, matching accessories and a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Cuthrell wore a dress of green lace over taffeta, matching accessories and a white orchid corsage.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride chose an original casual costume of azure blue linen and a hat of the same material.

The bride is a graduate of Junius H. Rose High School and is a junior at East Carolina College. A graduate of Ayden High School, the bridegroom attended East Carolina College and is presently associated with Marchant Calculators, Inc.

Cake Cutting

Members of the Cuthrell-Smith wedding party were entertained at a cake cutting on Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grey Smith and Dr. and Mrs. John Horne at the home of the Hornes.

A green and white color motif was carried out in decorating the home. The appointed table featured a centerpiece of white gladiolus.

Mrs. Walter Grey Smith, mother of the bride, served the wedding cake after the bride and the bridegroom had cut the first slice of cake. The bridegroom's mother poured punch.

Luncheon

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Stroud Jr., Mr. Richard Stroud, and Mrs. Clay Stroud Sr. entertained at a luncheon for the Cuthrell-Smith wedding party and out-of-town guests at the Silo.

Nuptials Planned For June

MISS CAROL ANN TADLOCK is the daughter of Mrs. Arnold Claude Tadlock of Greenville and the late Mr. Tadlock who announces her engagement to George Cutter Wyman, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ronald R. Wyman of Winchester, Mass. The wedding will take place June 23.

MISS ALICE LEOTA EDWARDS is the daughter of Mrs. Lennie Wardell Edwards of Greenville and the late Mr. Edwards who announces her engagement to Sherrill Miller Bryant of Booneville and Greenville, son of Mrs. Jay Frank Bryant of Booneville. The wedding is planned for June 9.

All About Town
With Anne Mattox

A lab class at Chapel Hill happened to be where Carol Ann Tadlock and George Wyman met, where both were students at Carolina. Carol Ann who made her debut at the 1960 state-wide Terpsichorean Ball in Raleigh graduated from Carolina in January, and from Saint Mary's Junior College in 1960. At Carolina she was a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

George graduated from Belmont Hill Prep School and is a senior at the University, where he is a member of Beta Theta Phi Fraternity. Following their June wedding they will live in Chapel Hill where Carol Ann will teach and George will continue his education.

A teacher at Rose High School Alice Lee Edwards made her engagement known today to Sherrill Bryant. After their June wedding they will make their home at Virginia Beach. Alice Lee a graduate of Saint Mary's Junior College and East Carolina College is a member of Chi Omega Sorority. Sherrill is an alumnus of North Carolina State College and a member of Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity.

Mrs. Thomas Crosthwaite, the former Mary Moye Savage of Greenville, now a resident of Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C., is on a State Department program for foreign educators that come to America for six months.

During the recent visit to this country of Colombian teachers, Mrs. Crosthwaite obtained tickets to many concerts and acted as hostess to the teachers. At a reception at her home, the Colombians came in native costume and brought musical instruments from Colombia and did native dances and songs. At the end of their stay here they presented Mrs. Crosthwaite with a South American emerald pine.

The Pilot Club of Greenville was chartered September, 1957, with a charter membership of 15. The first president was Mrs. James B. Mallory. Other presidents have been Mrs. W. W. Howell, 1958-1959; Mrs. Orval L. Phillips, 1959-1960 and 1960-1961, and the current president is Mrs. Robert W. Fennell.

The first Pilot Club was organized in Macon, Ga., on October 18, 1921, with a charter membership of forty. The name Pilot was chosen because it means Leader and Guide and the word International was added because the farsighted founders visualized an organization which would become international in scope. At the present time there are approximately 440 clubs in the United States, Canada, England, France, Japan, Hawaii, etc. Pilot International is one of the five international classified civic and service organizations for executive business and professional women, similar to men's service clubs such as Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, etc. The basic principles are FRIENDSHIP AND SERVICE. Pilot International is a member of the council of Women's International Association of Alumnae Clubs, Inc., Quota Club International, Inc., Federation of Seropomist Clubs, Zonta International, and Pilot International.

For the purpose of more efficient administration Pilot International is divided into Districts and Districts into local clubs. The local club is in District No. Six.

The objectives of local clubs are:

- To further the objects of Pilot International, the study and teachings of its principles, the preservation of its ideals and its ethics.
- To develop friendship as a means of broadening the field of opportunity for service and to encourage and promote international peace and cultural relations.
- To inculcate the ideal of service as a basis of all worthy enterprises, and to influence its application in the civic, business, and social life of the Pilot.
- To encourage high ethical standards among business and professional women.
- To promote active participation in any movement that will tend to improve the civic, social, industrial and commercial welfare of the community.

Membership in a Pilot Club is determined by classification and is by invitation. Only two thoroughly representative women from each classification, who are actively identified with the business or professional interests of the community and hold executive positions, are eligible.

The rehabilitation of Vimoutiers, a French Village, was adopted as a Pilot International project in June, 1949. Pilot International has helped restore homes, churches, schools. Each local club has sent trees and supplies for rebuilding, and through carefully co-ordinated channels all clubs work together to meet its individual and community needs. The town square in Vimoutiers has been named "Pilot."

Twenty-one international scholarships have been awarded, with three being offered each year. Each District of Pilot International offers scholarships and a large percentage of local clubs have their individual scholarships. In 1960, East Carolina College had a recipient of a scholarship from District No. Six to which the local Pilot Club belongs. The community's need is the Pilot Club's opportunity for service. Each club selects and directs its own civic and service projects. The local Pilot Club cooperates with existing community agencies and national and international drives that will benefit humanity. It is currently participating in the Heart Fund Drive. One of the recent projects has been the benefit of the residents, along with rocking chairs for the individual rooms and a wheel chair. Supplies and services are given to the School for Retarded Children. In April, the Pilot Club of Greenville will present a puppet show entitled "Puss in Boots", with the proceeds to be used in sending children to camps in the summer.

Duplicate Bridge Winners

The Faculty Duplicate Club met in regular session last evening with five tables in play. North-South winners were Mrs. J. H. B. Moore and Dr. J. H. Stewart, first; Mrs. Merrill Bynum and Miss Marguerite Rouse, second. East-West winners were Dr. and Mrs. George Martin, first; Mrs. Joseph N. LeConte and Mr. C. J. Goodman, second.

The group was reminded by its president, Mr. Eustace Conway, that election of new officers would be an item of business next time and that it would be appropriate to consider any changes in club routines.

The club will hold its next game March 16 at 7:30 at the community room of the Planters National Bank and Trust Co. Games are held under sanction of the American Contract Bridge League and players interested in duplicate bridge are invited to attend.

Bethel Club Hears Speaker

BETHEL—Rev. Carl W. Barbee, local Methodist pastor, spoke at the monthly meeting of the Home Demonstration Book Club this week which met in the home of Mrs. J. C. Williamson.

The speaker was presented by Mrs. A. J. Crane, chairman of the program. Mr. Barbee spoke on "Poetry As Related to Life." He mentioned several authors and read a number of poems which he said were helpful in our understanding of life situations.

The Rev. Barbee included in the selection the poems "To Face His Day and Task" by Edwin Markham, "Two Gods" by Sam Walter Foss, "Wait" by Grace Crowell, and others.

Mrs. R. E. Edmondson led the group in games. Mrs. Maude Harris presided and had charge of the distribution of books. Refreshments were served by the host.

Mrs. R. E. Lee on Feb. 27 at her home on the Falkland Highway.

Mrs. Robert Fountain, president, presided during the brief business meeting. Members exchanged books.

Continuing the club's study of "New Frontiers," Mrs. Royce Hunsucker chose as her topic "Milestones in the History of American Postal Service."

She told how mail has been delivered by couriers on foot, on horseback, by overland stage-coaches, by boat, by railroads, buses and airplanes. Two especially interesting milestones were the Camel Caravan and the Pony Express.

When the American Colonies were new, the postal fee was collected when the mail was delivered. The first adhesive stamps were used in 1847.

Postcards were first sold in 1885, and Rural Free Delivery service was begun in 1896. Postal Savings accounts were opened in 1911.

The low postal rates for advertising material, and the franking privilege allowed government officials are some of the reasons for the deficit in the U. S. Postal Department.

A new frontier, now developing, is Missile Postal Service.

During the social hour, guests were invited into the dining room, where Mrs. E. E. Rawl served a sweet course and Mrs. C. O'H. Horne poured coffee at an appointed table.

Spring flowers were used throughout the house.

New ECC Dorm Is Urgently Needed

Approval by the Advisory Budget Commission for East Carolina College to seek a federal loan with which to construct a new women's dormitory is a positive step which will benefit both the college and young women of this section who are seeking a college education.

Like many other colleges in North Carolina, East Carolina has found its physical facilities taxed to the limit by the applications of new students wanting to enter college. Like some others, East Carolina has found it necessary to turn away applicants in recent years because housing arrangements could not be made for them either on the campus or in the community.

As the number of freshmen students has increased in recent years, there has also been an increase in the number of upper classmen at East Carolina College. Because of this, according to ECC officials, there will be one less women's dormitory available this fall for freshmen and transfer students than was the case last fall. The reason, of course, is that more dormitory space is required to acomodate the increased number who now have become upper classmen.

By building a new women's dormitory with the aid of a federal loan—as has been done with other dormitories on the campus—the college will be able to provide for more of the young people who are applying for admission. Although it will mean an increase in dormitory rent for on-campus students, the increase will be less than $25 per student per year. Such an amount would not likely make the difference between a student being able to go to college and not being able to go. Without the new dormitory, however, many women applicants would have to be turned away for lack of space to house them.

The new women's dormitory, if it is constructed, could not possibly be ready by the coming fall, but if steps are taken immediately to follow through with planning and constructing the new dorm, it may be possible to have it ready for use by the fall of 1963.

We trust the officials of East Carolina College will promptly move to implement plans for the new dormitory. Such a step will be in the best interest of the young people of the state and of higher education in North Carolina.

Space Project System Might Help Airlines

When there is a major air tragedy such as the one in New York which took 95 lives this week, there is hardly a limit to the expense to which the airlines and the government will go in seeking to determine the cause of the disaster.

At least one object being sought by emergency workers at the crash scene is an automatic flight recorder, one of the plane's instruments which provides a second-by-second record of the plane's operation. If the instrument can be recovered and studied, perhaps the experts will be able to determine whether a mechanical malfunction or a human error caused the disaster.

In this era of advanced communications in connection with space projects, it does not seem unreasonable that some more advanced system of communication could be used to monitor flights of airplanes in much the same way that flights of space vehicles are monitored. It would be costly, to be sure, but it could likewise pinpoint in many instances the cause of an airplane crash. It may well eliminate to some extent a part of the cost of investigating airplane disasters by conventional means, and in all probability give the experts more exact information than they are now able to compile in the case of a crash.

If scientists are able to monitor minute functions of vehicles moving through space at speeds of thousands of miles an hour over distances of many thousands of miles, they should be able to provide a practical communications system for monitoring regular scheduled airline flights. If they know instantly when a tiny switch fails to properly function on a space vehicle, they should be able to detect mechanical failures in airplanes.

Such a monitoring system might prove a major step in safer air transportation, both from the standpoint of preventing accidents and from the standpoint of determining the cause of accidents.

In Holy Horror Except When---

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's like pulling a string. Labor and industry leaders throw up their hands in horror at mention of government intrusion in collective bargaining.

They've just done it again, this time with Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg.

But when they get in a jam—particularly when both sides are feeling the effect of a strike—there's less horror and more realism and the government somehow is welcome to stick its nose in.

In modern times few steel contracts have been signed without government intercession of some kind.

The record-breaking 116-day steel strike of 1959 was halted by the Taft-Hartley law's injunction and finally settled after Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell moved in with recommendations.

In fact, before they got into the picture, David J. McDonald, head of the Steelworkers' Union, asked for recommendations by the government.

For most of 1959 President Eisenhower had tried to follow a hands off policy. Even when the strike started he wouldn't try to stop it with the only weapon he had — an injunction. He said there was no emergency.

He learned differently as the strike continued and the economy began to suffer. In the end he used the injunction and sent in Mitchell and Nixon.

Nevertheless a speech a week ago by Goldberg brought protests from AFL-CIO President George Meany and steel industry people. They interpreted what he said as government intervention in collective bargaining.

It would mean that but in only a mild way compared with what would be complete intervention if Congress ever approved, such as price and wage controls and compulsory arbitration. Goldberg said he's against those instruments.

What he said was that when labor and management negotiate a new contract they must, in addition to their own interests, consider the general welfare. For example:

A sharp price increase, resulting from sharp wage increases, could begin an inflationary spiral. A strike could trigger a recession. And a work stoppage in a vital industry could affect national defense.

Goldberg made two main points: 1. Before a labor-management failure to work out a settlement reaches the strike stage, the government should publish statistics on the industry so the public can understand what the issues really are and put pressure on both sides to get together.

In the past the government has waited until a strike started to make public the statistics.

2. The government should provide "guidelines" to both sides (Continued on Page 8)

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

IT CAN BECOME DANGEROUS

The word "maximum" has come to have an important place in modern vocabulary. It means "the greatest quantity or value attainable in a given case." Get the maximum mileage out of your tires or your gasoline. Deposit in the bank which pays higher interest on savings than any other bank. Eat this breakfast food that and get the maximum of vitamins.

This emphasis on the advantage of having everything maximum in quantity and quality has both a bad and a good effect on living. The good effect arises from the stimulation it gives one to do his best and in his seeking to get the best possible. It encourages thrift and prudence in buying. It keeps pointing one always to attainments never previously reached.

The disadvantageous aspect of such an emphasis is that it tends to make us quantitative in our thinking rather than qualitative. The biggest tends to become the best. Power assumes too prominent a place as a factor in life. People who are money-mad think in terms of maximum and growing maximum. As a nation, the maximum outlook tends to make us feel that if high living standards are maintained, if wages and income are large, if office buildings tower higher and higher into the sky, the nation is great and every day is becoming greater.

So watch out about that word "maximum." It can help or it can hurt — promote or undermine. They are always related. Steel-

To Abolish The Month

NEW YORK (AP) — Anybody care to join the society for the abolition of the month of March?

Just mail me your membership application.

Everyone has had the experience of writing a check or letter at the start of a new year and absent-mindedly dating it the year before.

This week I pulled an even bigger mental boo-boo. On the 28th of February, I wrote a column for the next day and dated it April 1, thus omitting the 31 days of March altogether.

Getting a date wrong is to a newspaperman about as big a blunder as losing a bass fiddle is to a musician. My editorial colleagues across the country have been giving me a terrible ribbing.

"How can anyone lose a whole month out of his life—particularly at your age?" they've been demanding gleefully.

When I mentioned the experience to a friend of mine who flunked psychology in college, he felt sure he had the answer.

"It is undoubtedly the result of a deep emotional blow in your childhood," he said. "Think back. Can you recall any soul-scarring emotional deprivations you suffered during the month of March when you were in kindergarten?"

"Why, yes," I replied, for if there is any period in my life for which I have total recall, it is those three formative years I spent in kindergarten.

"I was rejected by a girl named Amy, and the class bully knocked out a front tooth and took away my lollipop."

"That explains it," my friend said. "That's why you unconsciously have a grudge against March, and try to forget it."

But his theory collapsed when I pointed out that I had lost even prettier girls in kindergarten — and had other teeth knocked out and other lollipops taken away from me by the class bully — in October and May, months I prize highly.

The only reason why I can see that I forgot March this year is — it really isn't worth remembering anyway.

When you get right down to it, March is one of the dullest pages on the calendar.

March is either icy or muddy, frigid or windy. It is like an adolescent unable to make up its mind. It has both feet in winter and only one hand held out to the warming spring.

March is an ambush, a pneumonia month, unpredictable and untrustworthy. Whatever kind of clothing you put on in a morning in March is likely to turn out to be the wrong kind by nightfall.

Only people who enjoy all kinds of weather enjoy March — people who get a thrill out of being kicked in the stomach and patted on the back at the same time.

No wonder I forgot March. Why don't we all forget March? Let's simply wipe it out altogether, and give 16 days more to lovely April and 15 days more to splendid September?

In any case, friends, please don't mail me any pocket calendars with the month of March circled by a blue pencil mark. I've already received enough to last me a lifetime.

Other Editors Saying... The Gospel Truth

(Washington Daily News) William Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina says that this state faces a crisis in higher education because ever increasing needs, brought on by ever increasing enrollments, cannot be met under existing circumstances.

Offhand, it is easy for one to say that Bill Friday is crying "wolf" and that is an alarmist. Some will point to the fact that North Carolina has always been able to offer a higher education to those seeking it, and they will conclude quite dogmatically that North Carolina will always be ready, willing, and able to meet any educational challenge which might arise.

That feeling of smugness on the part of so many people serves in this hour to defeat higher education itself. When higher education is defeated in any sense, it is not a system which falls but rather it is youth which pays the high price.

If educational institutions of North Carolina, be they of the public nature or denominational schools, cannot accept the students asking admission, then we are in a tragic position. And that very circumstance is likely to happen unless the people of North Carolina awaken to the needs.

What Bill Friday says is not the words of an alarmist, and he is not crying "wolf." What he says is the gospel truth. The vital statistics of North Carolina today are available for all to see and study. It is relatively easy to figure out right now how many students will be seeking higher education next year or five or ten years from now.

How can North Carolina educate 30,000 students for instance when there are faculties and physical facilities to take care of 20,000 students? Somewhere along the line something — or someone — must give. We dare say right now that the situation is far worse than a majority of the people of North Carolina realize.

For one to take the attitude that "oh well, somehow the state can take care of the boys and girls seeking higher education" is tantamount to setting down and letting nature take its course. The only trouble is that in this present circumstance as we look to the future, nature is not on our side.

North Carolinians somehow must be awakened. Both public and private institutions must somehow be ready to meet the ever increasing challenge. More colleges are needed, and more facilities must be provided at present colleges.

Before we can expand, enlarge, and create new institutions, the people of North Carolina must become saturated with the ideas that we cannot stand still and feel that nature will look out for us. It just will not happen that way.

Once the people of North Carolina become sufficiently aware of the needs, then proper steps will be taken to meet these needs. Right now the people seem to be enjoying a deep sleep.

Perhaps 10 years from now, if we idly by, we are going to pay a terrifically high price for our indifference and our shortsightedness.

Now is the time for all good men and women to come to the aid of higher education.

PRIDE In Our Country

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

It was thrilling to hear, at long last, an American stand before the Congress and speak in unmistakable patriotic language: "I am glad to see that pride in our country and its accomplishments is not a thing of the past."

This man, John Glenn, who had risked his life for his country in two wars and who flew through the heavens to nail the American flag in a star did not and-if-or-but about his love of country.

Thousands of children lined the streets in Washington with signs bearing the slogan, "Go!" and it is this stimulant that the country has been needing for a long time, ever since we went so international during World War II that we forgot that to be international it is essential first to be national. Patriotism was killed along with the marching band as the men sailed away for World War II and the Korean War. We could not offend our Allies!

But here steps forward a darling man who says:

"I still get a hard-to-define feeling inside when the flag goes by and I know you do, too. Today, as I rode up Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, and saw the tremendous outpouring of feeling on the part of so many thousands of people I got that same feeling."

There can be no question but the past 30 years have been spiritually deadening. Ardent those who propagandized for friend and foe lessened the enthusiasm for our own country.

I was curious to watch the sharp change of attitude in the 1930's. Before the Great Depression, this was "God's own country," and anyone who failed to understand that was as likely as not to get a bloody nose. Then the guts went out of the nation and a generation approached life hopelessly, acting as though the sole value of our country is to provide money, not life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which is opportunity to be productive.

And after that came the horrible 30's and 40's when the European and Asiatic propagandists labored to destroy the spirit of our people, when textbooks were rewritten and American history and literature disappeared from high school and college curriculums; when men and women signed petitions denouncing their own country.

Spies appeared in our midst and as surprising as it may seem, there were those who came to their defense and justified their actions on grounds of "higher morality." Even when our courts convicted those who served a foreign country, there were those who criticized the courts, not the spies and cheats. This attitude was not limited to Communists or even to fellow-travelers, for there were all sorts of Americans who could condone the betrayal of our country or even, in a way, partake of such activities and plead that they could not tell the truth lest they indict themselves of criminal acts.

A younger generation inevitably appeared which had to go to yet another war, the Korean War, and to them it all seemed meaningless and futile as a war without victory must be. Their lives were interfered with, their careers disturbed, their marriages postponed. They lived their young lives with the draft hovering over them and with unanticipated uncertainties facing them. And they learned to count their earnings in terms of tax deductions until they realized that "equality of opportunity" is not what they were told that it might be.

It seemed for a while to be a bad generation, specializing in vocational subjects, hard-bolled in their relationship to each other. Sentiment seemed to be ruled out and ideals and aspirations seemed hopeless dreams.

Then came another turn — the Conservative Revolt on the campuses, a revivalist movement in many respects, small but articulate, undirected but idealistic. This was but an indication that youth cannot long be frigid, it must find excitement and fervor and faith. To say that the small Conservative movement meant all that is to exaggerate, but it is symbolic and indicative. The essence of the Conservative movement is a restoration of patriotism, (Continued on Page 8)

Opinions In Brief

"Abraham Lincoln was once asked to give his definition of diplomacy. 'Well,' he mused, 'I guess you might say that it is the knack of letting the other fellow have your way.'" — Mattson (Ill.) Journal-Gazette.

"Space scientists, who have mastered gravity and atmosphere, still bow to the same bugaboo that frustrates picnickers: the weather." — Miami (Fla.) Herald.

"As one glow worm said to another, 'I feel so stupid—I've been talking to a cigarette butt for 10 minutes.'" — Eddyville (La.) Tribune.

"Will the next step be to pay some people for not working in order to reduce a labor surplus the same as some farmers are paid to not plant in order to prevent overproduction?" — Industrial News Review.

Steel Contract Will Affect All

By ELMER ROESSNER

Almost every business in the land will be affected by the Steelworkers contract.

If it results in an increase in steel prices — and if it doesn't it will be the greatest miracle since 4,000 people were fed with seven loaves and a few small fishes — almost every price in the country will be affected sooner or later.

There will be no sudden jump. Those things made largely of steel will first be affected. Later things made of smaller amounts, and things made with steel (which includes all machinery) will reflect the higher cost of steel labor.

ALL WAGES AFFECTED An equally pervasive effect will be on wages. Many unions shape their demands according to the pattern of the steelworkers' gains. The demands are not always exact: they are not cent for cent or fringe for fringe. But they are always related. Steelworkers have never wrested a sizable increase that was not followed, first by all industrial unions and then by craft office unions.

And it doesn't end there. As business knows from past experiences, the rise generated by the steelworkers affects almost every kind of employee, organized or unorganized.

HOW TO MEET IT The Administration, which appears to be pushing for a settlement favorable to the union, is at the same time trying to give business a weapon which, in many cases, can offset it. That is the proposal to allow an 8 per cent tax credit on new capital investments, and to shorten depreciation writeoffs.

This business is getting government aid to install more automated equipment which, in turn, can increase production per payroll dollar. There are, of course, other ways of coping with the probability of higher wages: improving scheduling, reducing overtime, eliminating unnecessary functions and so on through the book.

Meanwhile, business faces trouble with its wage and salary structure from another direction: the government.

REAL COMPETITION Government is competing with private business for personnel in three ways:

1. It is trying to put through a general pay rise for governmental employees, which will tend to attract even more workers from private industry.

2. It is seeking permission to increase salaries it can pay to top executives. Top executives salaries in most government departments are about half comparable salaries in industry. This has enabled industry to keep $50,000-a-year men simply by paying them close to that. But if the government gets authority to bid against business for top men, there are hard times ahead for business.

3. The government is stepping up recruitment of stenographers, secretaries and people with other special skills, hinting at assignment in gay capitals abroad.

OLD PROMOTER FINDS NO NEW SPACE-TOY RUSH

"I suppose you expect a rash of Glenn space games and toys," the Old Promoter said when he dropped in today.

"I had surmised as much," I said.

"Put your surmise back in the box and save it for Christmas," he said. "I've been talking with people in the trade. There will be very few items. First, commercial exploitation of Colonel Glenn's flight is frowned on. Second, just about tin manufacturers could get new projects to market, a new project would be on the pad."

Bel-Falk Tops Sto-Pac 61-47

BELVOIR—The Belvoir-Falkland Eagles ended their season last night defeating the Stokes-Pactolus Blue Jays by a score of 61-47.

Led by Melvin Nelson, the Eagles jumped ahead of the Blue Jays early in the first quarter. At the end of the half, however, Stokes-Pactolus had cut Belvoir-Falkland's lead to one point 12-11. The Eagles outpaced the Blue Jays in the second period to go ahead at the half 35-23.

Stokes-Pactolus rallied in the third quarter, outscoring Belvoir-Falkland 9-6. However, the Blue Jays could not catch the Eagles as they went on to victory 67-47.

Melvin Nelson led the winners to their fourth win of the season by scoring a game high total of 18 points. Also in double figures for the Eagles were Alan Witherington and Steve Little with 15 and 10 points respectively. The Blue Jays were paced by Billie Roebuck who tallied 15 points.

Earlier in the night, the Belvoir-Falkland girls defeated the Stokes-Pactolus girls by a score of 50-46. The win was not an easy one for the Eagles as they were behind at several stages of the game.

At the end of the regular game, the score was tied at 46 all, and the two teams went into overtime. Belvoir-Falkland outscored Stokes-Pactolus 4-0 in the overtime to go on for the win 50-46.

Mary Pollard and Francis Stepps, 1962 All-County selections, led the Eagles with 27 and 12 points respectively. Andrea Wooten added 11 points to the total for the victors. The Blue Jays were paced by Linda Warren who tallied 17 points in their losing effort. Jennie Forbes and Lillian Crisp scored 14 points each for Stokes-Pactolus.

Ayden Defeats Farmville 45-37

AYDEN—The Ayden Tornados won their last game of the season last night defeating conference foe Farmville by a score of 45-37.

Led by William Edwards, the Tornados jumped to an early advantage over the Red Devils. At the end of the first quarter, Ayden had increased their lead to 18-7. Although outscored 12-8 in the second period of play, Ayden led at the half 26-19.

Farmville returned to the court in the second half to almost upset the conference champions. The Tornados outscored the Red Devils by only one point in the last half as they went on to win 45-37.

Ayden was led by Edwards who scored a game high total of 12 points in the victory, while teammate Duane Gwynn tallied 10 points. Bobby Fiser led the Farmville Red Devils with 11 tallies for the contest.

Earlier in the night, the Farmville girls defeated the Ayden girls by a score of 49-24. The Red Devils jumped to an early lead and were never threatened by the lagging Tornados as they surged on to victory.

Betsy Allen and Kay Allen led the visitors with 16 and 15 points respectively. The only Tornado in double figures for Ayden was Nancy Stokes with a total of 13 points.

The two teams do not play again until the Pitt County Tournament next week.

Bethel Tops Winterville 68-66

BETHEL—The Bethel Indians, coached by Dan Wooten, upset the Winterville Wolves last night by a score of 68-66. The results of the close fought battle left both teams with identical records of 13 victories and three losses.

Bethel, paced by Don Dewar, managed to stay ahead during most of the contest. The Indians led by one point at the end of the first quarter, but they increased their lead to 37-30 at the half.

Winterville, playing without the services of All-County James Braxton, returned in the second half to outscore Bethel in the third and fourth periods. However, with four seconds remaining in the last quarter and the score tied at 66 all, Don Dewar hit the nets for the Indians to edge the Wolves 68-66.

Dewar led all scorers in scoring a game high total of 20 points in the Bethel victory. Also in double figures for the Indians were Herman Daniels, Jesse Thomas, and Tex Everett who tallied 17, 15 and 12 points respectively.

The Wolves were paced by Steve Worthington who scored 19 points in their losing effort. Alfred Gold and Ronnie Worthington scored 16 and 13 points for the losers.

Earlier in the night, the Bethel girls defeated the Winterville girls by a score of 60-51. The Indians surged to an early lead in the first quarter and managed to maintain this advantage for the remainder of the contest.

Mary Chesson led the victors with a total of 22 points. Also in double figures for the Indians were Janet Cobb and Carolyn Manning with 10 and 26 points respectively. The losers were led by Carolyn Barnes who tallied 26 points in Winterville's losing effort.

Grifton Downs Chicod 59-45

GRIFTON—The Grifton High School Bulldogs upset the Chicod Hornets last night 59-45.

Grifton advanced to an early lead in the first quarter behind the sharp-shooting of Bill Lehman and Ben McLawnhorn. At the close of the second period, the Bulldogs had increased their lead to 14 points as they led by a score of 27-13.

When the two teams returned to the court in the second half, Grifton soon saw that they had their work cut out for them. Both teams scored an identical amount of points in the second half, 32 each, as the Bulldogs held off the Hornets to win 59-45.

Bill Lehman and Ben McLawnhorn led the Bulldogs scoring 15 and 13 points respectively. The Hornets were led by Douglas Hudson who tallied a game high total of 16 points.

The Grifton girls, led by Jane Mewborn, also defeated the Chicod girls earlier in the night, 48-32.

The Chicod Hornets fought to an 8-7 first quarter lead over the Bulldogs, but they were unable to hold on to their advantage as Grifton surged ahead to led 19-10 at the end of the half. During the second half of play, Grifton managed to maintain their lead as they went on to victory.

"At least one person seated in this student body of eight hundred is scheduled to die in a traffic accident," predicted Lt. Carl S. Pike, safe driving expert, Monday during assembly.

Lt. Pike, sponsored by the state department of Public Instruction, North Carolina Motor Carriers association, and the American Trucking association, gave the program entitled "Safety Magic" to acquaint the students with good safety behavior.

In his humorous talk he stated, "My answer to the definition of a reckless driver is a bucket of bolts and four wheels. I believe that every car should have a button on the dashboard, and, everytime one sees a reckless driver, he can push the button which makes the car collapse and hide in the bushes."

Before discussing the attitude of teenage drivers, Lt. Pike gave some rules on how to die. A few are as follows:

1. Always pass on curves or hills—it gives the driver in the oncoming car a thrill.
2. Always drive in the middle of the road—you are entitled to half, why not take the part you want.
3. Always race trains to the crossing—it helps to break the monotony of driving.
4. Stomp on your brakes when you are skidding—it is more artistic that way.

Drive close to pedestrians in bad weather—this is known as murder tag.

"The general public is in a rut and blames the teenager for accidents; that is not fair. I believe the majority of teenage drivers are better than the drivers of my generation."

"It is not too late to develop good driving attitudes and practices. The person who stated, 'I am a good driver,' has killed more people than anyone else," he concluded.

Pike Displays Tricks
Lt. Pike, who is a magician, displayed some magic tricks for the entertainment of the students.

After pulling scarfs out on an empty cylinder, he instructed senior Brenda Bowden to pour some water from a vase. She discovered that the vase had an almost endless supply of water.

Brenda was also told to hold an umbrella wrapped in a piece of brown paper over a cylinder filled with scarfs. After the magic words, "Safety First," Lt. Pike drew the covering of the umbrella from the cylinder and, having removed the brown paper, showed that the scarfs were attached to the frame of the umbrella.

To end his magic program, he demonstrated a singing Coke bottle in which the bottle echoed some whistles that Lt. Pike had "put in" the bottle.

Lt. Pike has traveled to over eighty North Carolina schools carrying over five truck-loads of equipment to demonstrate safety practices. He is on leave from the Kent County Sheriff's department in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Pitt Communities Still Divided As To Shelters

By PATRICIA MOORE Reflector Staff Writer

Whole communities in Pitt County are divided as to the merit of fallout shelters.

Farmville is the only Pitt town to actively plan for a large community shelter.

Those who "believe" in fallout shelters are very positive about getting them.

In Greenville, Building Inspector J. W. Wilson said that in his knowledge, only two or three fallout shelters have been completed here, though some eight or more persons have applied for permits to construct shelters.

Some are interested in building shelters apart from their homes, while others are investigating possibilities of renovating basement areas into havens of safety in the event of nuclear attack.

In Ayden, Civil Defense Director Cleveland Paylor said only one person had applied for a permit to build a shelter and that construction had begun.

Kenneth Branch, building inspector for Ayden, has offered a site for a community shelter on his property, but so far it has not been developed.

None in Grifton No building permits have been issued for shelters in Grifton, and apparently there are no shelters there.

Bethel has one known fallout shelter, owned and built for a family as part of their home.

Probably the most well known shelter in the county, and perhaps in the east, is the one George Cherry built in Pactolus, which has been designated as an alternate Civil Defense command post in the event of disaster.

Perhaps Others The Civil Defense headquarters and a model family shelter is located in the basement of the Pitt courthouse.

Perhaps there are other shelters, but it would take an expert to know how many. Civil Defense Director J. H. Rose notes that some who have shelters are not anxious for the public to know about them.

Wilson, Washington Hays Shelters He pointed out that Wilson and Wilson County have about 200 shelters and they are still going up.

At the present time, the federal government is sponsoring a survey over the country of safest buildings in the event of attack.

There are still those people, however, who feel shelters may not even be necessary. The interest rises and falls with international crises in many cases.

It mostly concerns the public's faith that the world will continue — or the public's fear that nuclear war or disaster will come tomorrow.

the lack of fallout shelters. Those who have gone for permits to build them believe that it is almost an emergency, though.

One person advanced the opinion that the lack of shelters in Pitt is due to the fact that Pitt does not have an active fallout shelter program.

Previously Rose has expressed the opinion that public shelters should be built to offset private shelters.

Always Had To Peer Up

By REESE HART

LILESVILLE, N. C. (AP) — James Richardson Clark has gone through life looking up to most persons.

When he was a tiny tot, Clark was little more than knee high to a grasshopper.

In his school days most students stood head and shoulders above him.

In his 39 years he has used empty drink crates and other props to boost himself up to water fountains.

The reason: Clark is only 4 feet high, a real "shorty."

But his size has been no handicap to him as a businessman. He owns and operates the Lilesville Telephone Co. The firm had 32 customers when Clark purchased it in 1944. Today it has more than 300.

"I didn't know the first thing about telephones," Clark recalled. "But I learned quickly. Before long I was troubleshooter, janitor, bookkeeper and what have you."

With the use of a ladder, Clark climbed many telephone poles in his younger days. He does little climbing now. He leaves most of that to two employees.

Clark, who lives in the house here in which he was born, weighs 90 pounds and wears size 1 1/2 triple E shoes. His wife has to alter his clothes to fit him.

Clark's parents, who were normal size, noticed when he was a baby that his arms, legs and body were not fully developed.

"My dad used to measure me a lot to see how much I was growing," Clark said.

Two years ago Clark married Mrs. Lucille Meredith Ingram, a divorcee. She has a son, 12, and two daughters, 10 and 14, all of whom are larger than their stepfather.

"But that doesn't pose any problem when it comes to correcting them," he said, smiling. "We get along fine. I've only had to spank the boy once."

Clark has served three terms as Lilesville town commissioner, is former fire chief, chairman of the board of the Lilesville Methodist Church and a member of the Anson County Industrial Development Commission.

He has been driving a car since he was 16 "and I've never had a bad accident," he said. His car and telephone repair truck have special extensions on the brake, clutch and accelerator so his legs can reach them.

He went into business for himself when he was 18. He opened a grocery store about four years ago and filled in as cashier on weekends. He stood on a box to reach the cash drawer.

In 1945, Clark sneezed so hard that he ruptured two vertebrae. As a result, he was in bed 10 months and on crutches four months.

He graduated from Lilesville High School and attended North Carolina State College one year. While at State he was drum major, "one of the biggest thrills of my life," he recalled. His only brother, Samuel H. Clark Jr., lives in Charlotte.

When Clark took over the telephone company in 1944, "We couldn't buy any new equipment," he said. "The war had halted production. I scoured the countryside and bought all the old telephones I could find, even the old magneto crank types."

His company switched over to dial system in 1953.

Clark takes a philosophical view concerning his size. "Things could be worse—I could have been smaller," he said with a chuckle. "Regardless of a person's handicap, they can look around and see someone else worse off. I found out early in life that I had to adapt myself to fit situations."

Comfort Of Ski Lift Partially Owed To Banana-Loading Rig

By ROBERT F. ALKIRE

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP)—When a skier rides a chair lift to a frosty crest, he owes his comfort in part to a publicity agent who disliked snow, a bridge designer who doesn't ski and bananas.

Vack in the mid-1930s, W. Averell Harriman, the former New York governor and chairman of the board of Union Pacific Railroad, selected a sundered ballyhoover of beaches and beauties to bring the wealthy of the world to the railroad's $3 million playground at Sun Valley in south-central Idaho. The ballyhoover was the late Steve Hannagan.

Hannagan himself preferred warm climates, but he knew his rugged winter outdoorsmen. They wouldn't be interested in walking up a ski slope so that they might slide down again.

Men to Mountain Sun Valley's beautiful slopes for skiing must have "mechanical devices to take people to the top of the slides," he ruled.

There were devices in use at the time, such as tows and toboggan-like lifts, but they either didn't carry enough skiers at one time, or they were hard on the hardy.

The problem was turned over to a Union Pacific engineering staff in Omaha, and to a non-skier named James M. Curran, designer of bridges.

Curran, while working for another firm in Omaha, had seen drawings of mono-cable systems for loading bananas on fruit boats in the tropics.

With some minor changes, how about using the same method to haul skiers?

Too hazardous, said Curran's superiors.

Curran worked on the idea anyway and slipped his plans into a stack of drawings for other systems. The chair lift almost passed unnoticed except for Charlie Proctor, well-known Dartmouth University skier also hired by Harriman to help bring Sun Valley out of the shadows.

"What's that?" Proctor said of Curran's chair lift. The plans were viewed by Harriman and others, who approved. Tests were made in Omaha to develop safe ways of picking up people in chairs attached to the side of a slow-moving truck.

Another ski consultant, John E. P. Morgan, stood on his skis and waited for the truck-car to scoop him off the ground. It didn't work.

Someone suggested using roller skates and Morgan was airborne.

The first pickups were made at a speed of about four feet per minute. Refinements boosted the speed higher and some chair lifts today clip along at 500 feet per minute or more than five miles per hour.

In the summer of 1936, two chair lifts were installed at Sun Valley. One was loaded with local belles for a test ride. A fuse blew, stranding the women high above the ground. They declined to try again, with the exception of Florence Law, a secretary at Sun Valley. Under firm orders from her boss, she made the trip and became the first certified chair lift passenger.

Curran on Ice Curran, meanwhile, was giving some thought to learning to ski. But while ice skating with a friend at the valley, he fell and broke an arm. That cooled him on skiing.

Actually, it cooled the railroad, too. A directive was issued — later rescinded — which prohibited valued employees from engaging in wild winter sports.

The husky, quiet Curran, today a 58-year-old father of three, is the assistant bridge engineer for Union Pacific at Omaha. And, he remains proudest of his bridge-building achievements, though he perhaps should be ranked with the inventors of the golf cart and the automatic bowling pin setter.

Skiers all over the world pay handsome sums to ride chair lifts. For Curran, their design was just another assignment that took him away from bridges. The man who took the "up" out of skiing and made it a sport the tired masses could enjoy never makes the trip himself.

FIRST LIFT—Miss Margaret Day of Philadelphia, Pa., rode the world's first chair lift on Dollar Mountain at Sun Valley, Idaho. Sturdy wooden poles supported the cable.

AND TODAY—A new double lift (with steel towers) at Sun Valley carries skiers high above the snow to the top of 9,200-foot Baldy Mountain.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

James Jones, author of "From Here to Eternity," is soon coming out with a new work on World War II, "The Thin Red Line," a title which sounds more like the 18th century.

Meanwhile, Mr. Jones is working up publicity in a rather strange manner. He is being widely quoted as one who hates writing but who cannot make a living any other way, since his only other skill, skin diving, is not remunerative.

"Writing," he says, "is an unnatural pursuit. Socking each other in the head is man's natural pursuit." Some critics have suspected what Mr. Jones' real interest was all along.

Regional Study From the University of Kentucky Press is coming a work which should make an interesting supplement to the now classic "Southern Regions," issued some years ago by the press at Chapel Hill.

This work is a close study of the Southern Appalachian Region. It promises to divulge some "very unwelcome facts" about that part of our country. Wonder what they could be, aside from hookworm, a dearth of flush toilets, illiteracy, unemployment, and inadequate housing.

Inside Story? A disquieting title is "CIA: The Inside Story," by a fellow named Tully. If Tully has actually got the inside story on Central Intelligence, we've all had it from the standpoint of security. If he hasn't, one can only be suspicious of the exuberance of his claims.

Define Your Terms Writing in the Saturday Reflector, Cleveland Amory tells the story of the elderly lady whose memoirs he was helping her write. Becoming puzzled about some of the material, he asked her if she knew the difference between biography and autobiography. "Oh, yes," she brightly replied. "A biography is about a living person. An autobiography is about a dead one."

Having Wonderful Time According to an article in Atlas, the Russians are showing definite signs of a sense of humor these days that indicates they are not taken in completely by the Party line.

For instance, one story from Moscow deals with a little guy named Rabinovitch, who goes on a long trip and sends cards back to his friends. The first one is "from free Warsaw, the second "from free Prase-gue," etc. Finally one comes postmarked Paris "from free Rabinovitch."

Cold Arms In England recently there has been quite a discussion about how to read in bed without freezing to death. All sorts of solutions have been advanced, but the Bishop of Ripon seems to have borne away the palm with his suggestion that if readers would learn Braille they could lick the problem. The Bishop cites Earl Gray of Fallood as the originator of this solution.

Bird Watching Earl Gray, aside from being a bed reader and British Foreign Secretary, was quite a birdwatcher in his day too. It's amazing how that pastime seems to have flourished in Greenville this winter. Identified species which we have seen or heard of include cardinals, purple finches, cedar waxwings, thrashers, orioles, evening grosbeaks, blue jays, mockingbirds, cowbirds, grackles, starling, chickadees, wrens, and several kinds of woodpeckers, sparrows, and warblers. Are there any more?

And Spring? Though the weather this week-end belies it, the time has almost come to exchange bird-watching for flower watching. And the ladies are out to prove it. On March 14, the Greenville Garden Club Council will present a flower show, "Spring Mood," at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, from 2 p.m. to 9:30.

This will be a standard flower show, which means that there will be competitions for prizes in all sorts of classes. Everyone is invited, particularly the men, some of whom have no idea what a nice arrangement an eggplant, a cauliflower, and a few dried grasses can make.

Classic on Film Coming up at the Pitt on Thursday, March 8, will be a film of the Bolshoi Ballet titled "Swan Lake." This is a color film photographed on the same stage where Tchaikowsky's famous composition had its premiere in 1877.

The only performance will be at 8:00. Tickets will be on sale at the box office from March 5, or they can be procured from the Art Center, which is sponsoring the showing. They cost one dollar, and should be worth every cent of it to anyone who can appreciate the best in ballet.

Dropped Rank Of Sergeant

By HORACE MANSFIELD

Written For The Associated Press

DURHAM (AP)—The Durham Police Department is different from most in other large cities in at least one respect: It doesn't have sergeants.

Here, emphasis has never been placed on the rank. And there were no other noncommissioned officers before sergeant was dispensed with some 12 years ago.

Col. W. W. Pleasants, the chief of police, said that there were two major reasons why the Sergeant classification was done away with.

First, "there was too much overlapping in the office" among the desk sergeants and the lieutenants.

The other reason was that a number of older policemen who originally were given the sergeant's rank to provide an avenue for a raise for the veteran officers, retired about the same time, removing most of the existing sergeants.

Pleasants said the three-stripe rank "was designed to give a raise and some responsibility" to the veteran policemen, before the present classification system was initiated. Under the present system, raises and new titles can be given without change in rank.

When the current system was begun by authorization of the City Council, the rank of colonel was assigned to the chief of police, and the rank of major was given the assistant chief.

The rank of second lieutenant was created for men who serve as desk officers. This was the major duty of the men who held the former rank of sergeant and those who were lieutenants at the time the current system was installed.

The number of lieutenants was increased considerably when the change was made.

Last year, the department went on a four-platoon and four-shift plan, to adjust the working hours of the 118-man department to a five-day work week.

There are now four captains for the platoons, and in addition to these men who are over the uniformed division, there is a captain in charge of the traffic division and one each in charge of the records and detective divisions, making a total of seven.

There are four first lieutenants in the uniformed division two in the traffic division and two in the detective division.

Four desk officers hold the rank of second lieutenant, four men in the records division, who are identification officers, also hold this status. The 12 detectives rank with the lieutenants.

Trujillo Family Property Seized

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The past six months have been the driest since the U.S. Weather Bureau began keeping records at Miami International Airport in 1939.

The Weather Bureau said only 11.9 inches of rainfall were recorded during the six-month period ended Feb. 28, compared with the normal average 25.18 inches. The previous low of 13.66 was recorded during the same six months of 1951-1952.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The government has seized $32,931,587.73 worth of property from the estate of the late Dictator Rafael L. Trujillo and members of his family, it announced Thursday, including more than $22 million in cash.

Trujillo and members of his family owned or had a share in most of the republic's business enterprises. Properties seized included real estate, stocks and bonds, and interest-bearing notes.

Week Will See Offices Move

FARMVILLE — Farmville's joint office of the Chamber of Commerce and the Tobacco Board of Trade is scheduled to make its move across Main Street next week.

The new quarters, complete now except for cleanup operations, will enable the office to free extra space at the town hall for municipal use.

Louis Williams, secretary for the Chamber and sales supervisor for the Board of Trade, said plans are to move the office Monday and Tuesday.

Included in the new quarters, located on the west side of Main Street adjacent to Bonnie's Cafe, is a large front office about 20 by 10 feet and a smaller rear office about six by 10 feet that includes a rest room and space for mimeographing operations.

The transfer of the office from the town hall has left municipal building space—formerly the town's billing room—for a meeting hall for the town commissioners and other groups. A revision of the upstairs of the town hall has moved the town's billing department into the former reception room of the joint office. Williams' office will become a storage room for supplies.

CARDS FOR CATTLE

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP)—The state Department of Agriculture is moving to give every herd of cattle in Kentucky an identification card in which each herd will be given a number allowing for immediate identification and location in the event of a disease outbreak or other emergencies.

to make sure their settlement is in the public interest. He said this doesn't mean imposing settlements. But he indicated that in some cases the government should suggest what the settlements should be.

This can be translated into meaning that the government—just as it did in the 1959 strike—make recommendations. But, big or little, the government has been intruding for years.

In 1959—although the steel contract expired June 30—the two sides didn't start negotiating until May. After a little more than two months of that the strike started, even though Eisenhower pleaded for the negotiations to continue.

This year the contract expires June 30. But this time President Kennedy and Goldberg very early began putting pressure on both sides to start negotiating quickly. They did, on Feb. 15.

Kennedy himself in the 1960 campaign said the government should make the statistics known early in a big labor tussle. The Democratic platform that year said the same thing.

Kennedy in 1959, after watching the steel strike drag on for months and brought to halt finally only by government injunction, said a president should be given more alternatives by Congress than the injunction.

This month Goldberg said the administration—although perhaps not this year—would ask Congress for more flexible weapons in labor disputes.

The East Carolina College Choir will present a varied program of songs when the ensemble of fifty men and women students appears in its annual home concert Tuesday at 8:00 p.m. in the Wright auditorium. The public is invited to attend. Directed by Gordon A. Johnson, associate professor in the college department of music, the choir is now on its ninth annual tour. A series of seven programs are scheduled in high schools in towns and cities of North and South Carolina. Numbers to be presented here March 6 have been selected from a repertoire made up of choral music of outstanding worth and ranging from inspiring and reverent sacred music to lilting and tuneful popular songs.

Pacific Nuclear Tests Need Huge Task Force

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP)—An 11,800-man task force will go into the Pacific for the series of U. S. nuclear tests scheduled to begin in late April, officials said today.

Most of Joint Task Force 8 will be based on Christmas and Johnston Islands, which are in the probable test area. Others will be manning ships and flying planes. The task force will have a long tail, reaching back to ports in Hawaii and the West Coast and to atomic laboratories in the United States.

Much of the actual testing will be done by Atomic Energy Commission scientists and technicians. Defense Department specialists will monitor the blasts with instruments gauging explosive force, radiation and heat effects.

Instrument-bearing Navy ships and Air Force planes will help record the effects. Planes will take samples of air after the test devices are detonated and ships will scoop up water samples.

Some ships and planes of the task force will be on picket duty to keep out unwary vessels or aircraft. Officials said warnings would be given to minimize risk to shipping.

There was no estimate of the number of ships and aircraft to be used in the series, which President Kennedy said would be completed within two or three months. In past exercises of this sort, the Navy has assigned command

Unable To Match Stamp Demand

WASHINGTON (AP)—Postal officials say sales of the four cent stamp commemorating John H. Glenn Jr.'s orbital flight have set new records and they are unable to keep up with the demand for special first-day issues.

A Post Office Department spokesman said Friday that 100 million more of the blue-gold stamps have been ordered, boosting the total printing to 320 million.

He said the department also has ordered 400,000 first-day covers, envelopes bearing the stamps with the Cape Canaveral postmark and Feb. 20 cancellation date, raising the first-day cover total to two million.

Separation Suit By Red Buttons

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Red Buttons sued Friday for separation from his wife.

Buttons, a movie Oscar winner and onetime television comedian, asked the court to fix his support payments at $800 a month.

His wife told a reporter, "What he wants to give me is far from what I think I am entitled to. We were married 12 years. I was very happy with him. I thought he was with me."

Buttons' suit says she has treated him with extreme cruelty and inflicted mental suffering. It didn't amplify.

Kennedy Bowed To TV Advice

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy bowed to the television technicians in the matter of his dress for his broadcast Friday night. He walked from the executive mansion to his office wearing a light gray suit, and asked if it was all right for the television cameras.

A darker shade would be better, he was told. So he returned to his quarters and changed suits. Before the cameras, he wore a dark gray suit and blue shirt.

First Church of Christ, Scientist

Value to all mankind of the healing ministry of the Master will be stressed at Christian Science church services Sunday, in a Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Christ Jesus".

Luke's account of the man with the dropsy will be included in the Bible selections.

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy this citation will be read (p. 180): "When man is governed by God, the ever-present Mind who understands all things man knows that with God all things are possible. The only way to this living Truth, which heals the sick, is found in the Science of divine Mind as taught and demonstrated by Christ Jesus."

The Golden Text is from Colossians (2): "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving."

Crewmen Of Destroyer Noa Were Set For Space Shot Walk-On Role

EDITOR'S NOTE—In the hurly-burly attending the orbital flight of John H. Glenn Jr. the part played by key actors in the drama—the men of the pickup destroyer Noa—got only support player notices. Here's an account of men who somehow knew they would have more than a walk-on role and got ready for it.

By FRANK CAREY
WASHINGTON (AP)—Heaven help any enemy submarine that's hunted by the destroyer Noa, the warship that charged in from a back-up position and made the pickup of John H. Glenn Jr. at sea. There are clairvoyants aboard—they get a feeling in their bones.

U. S. Marine helicopters from the big aircraft carrier Randolph were to have made the pickup if all had gone according to plan. But the men of the Noa, steaming some 50 miles astern of the Randolph in a kind of just-in-case position, voiced confidence at least a week before the shot that they would snare the prize.

In fact, they virtually wrote the script in advance, and they carried it out to the letter. They were helped, of course, by the fact that Glenn's capsule splashed to the sea right in their own back yard—only a few miles from the destroyer but more than 50 miles from the Randolph and her already-airborne whirlybirds.

But they were ready and they engineered the recovery with a coolness, speed and seamanship that won from Glenn the accolade that, on that day at least, the Noa was "the best ship in the Navy."

This reporter, one of the newsmen aboard the Randolph, learned of the cocky confidence of the Noa's men and of their detailed plans to welcome Glenn aboard a week before the shot. When the Noa came in to be refueled from the Randolph he went aboard to see what it was all about.

In the planning the assignment of the Noa was only to pick up the space capsule after Glenn was out.

But the Noa's officers and men were hoping and plotting for bigger game. They were so confident they had made these preparations:

—They had a big sign in blue and white paint reading, in hopeful rhyme: "Noa's men welcome

Glenn."

—The Noa's skipper, Cmdr. John Exum of Atlantic Beach, Fla., had a citation all drafted, making Glenn an honorary member of the ship's company.

—A check for $15 was locked in the ship's safe—ready to be handed to Glenn as the Noa's "sailor of the month."

—The Noa's Southern Baptist denomination chaplain, Lt. Aubrey White of Perdido, Ala., had a Bible all set to give to Glenn.

—After all, he'll be somewhat of a heavenly host when he comes on board," White said.

Throughout the ship, you could almost taste the air of confidence. It ranged from the boiler room where engineers were ready to light all four boilers for the chase—up to the rolling deck.

The Noa's young executive officer, Lt. William Hatcher, Jacksonville, Fla., summed it all up by saying that if the capsule fell more than 45 miles from the Randolph, the Noa had a good chance of snaring both prizes.

It was seaman V. W. Helms, Charlotte, N. C., one of the Noa's lookouts, who first spotted Glenn's parachute high in the brilliant sky, drifting to a point only three miles from the ship.

"We heard him come into the atmosphere," Mullin recalled later. "It was a loud boom, like a sonic boom."

The Noa raced to the impact point, approached the capsule from upwind so the ship was blown gently against the bobbing capsule.

Boatswain mate David Bell, Youngstown, Ohio, leaped out and deftly attached a line—and minutes later, the Friendship 7 was hauled aboard.

They told later how Glenn after blowing out the side hatch of his capsule, stepped onto the deck, grinning: "It was hot in there."

Today, the cocky little warship—named in honor of midshipman Loveman Noa of Chattanooga, Tenn., who was stabbed to death by Filipino insurgents while scouting for smugglers of war contraband in 1901 on the island of Samar—is back at her regular job of antisubmarine patrol in the Atlantic.

The Stone Age lingers in Netherlands New Guinea. One tribesman recently learned how to make fire.

A New JOHN CREASEY Thriller A ROCKET FOR ROLLISON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED
Kate Lawson was waiting apprehensively at a London airport to meet her fiancé, Maurice Holmes. They had been apart two years, while he was on business in the U. S. After so long a time did Maurice still have the same affection for her that had led to their becoming engaged? His letters hadn't appeared to change in tone, but they had been arriving further apart. Possibly that was only because of business demands and distractions.

The plane landed and her heart beat faster. Straining her eyes for a sight of Maurice as the passengers disembarked, Kate was bowled over viciously by an Alsatian dog. Sprawled on the ground, she was conscious of being hit on the side of her head, and then blackness came over her.

When she regained consciousness, a young doctor, Mike Kennedy, was attending her. Looking around, Kate's first thought was Maurice. There was no sign of him. After a search proved he was nowhere at the airport, Kennedy drove Kate to her home. She hoped to find Maurice waiting there for her, but instead she was greeted by another shock—in her absence her desk had been ransacked. Money and Maurice's letters from the U. S. were missing. A subsequent check with the airport proved surely that Maurice had been on the plane. Kennedy later came to Kate's aid, bringing with him a man whom Kate recognized immediately as Richard Rollison, the private detective genius known as "the Toff."

CHAPTER 6
When Richard Rollison first saw Kate Lawson, he thought: "She's really something out of the ordinary," and he could understand why Mike Kennedy was so fascinated by her.

This young woman—she was in her late twenties, Rollison judged—was dark, with a curiously smooth and unblemished complexion, and her eyes were remarkably fine, a chestnut brown. As she stood staring at him, his question about the key still unanswered, he could see that she was bewildered and distressed.

At that stage he had no idea at all whether this was a case which either did or should interest him. Mike had phoned when he, Rollison, had been taking an evening off and was in his Mayfair flat alone. Mike was a persuasive young man.

"It's got all the makings of a proper puzzle," he had urged, "and the woman in the case has got everything. Be a gallant, Rollison, like your reputation."

For once, the irrepressible Mike was silent now. Then Kate answered: "Yes, Maurice had a key, but it's quite absurd to suggest that he came here and—took those letters away. I—I mean, why on earth should he? Why should anyone?"

"It's what we're trying to discover," said Rollison. He wondered whether she could be keeping anything back, and the one certain way to find out was to make her angry; in anger, he would probably find out what was really in her mind. So he went on, as if mildly: "Were there any promises of marriage in the letters, for instance?"

"If you mean, would he take the letters so as to go back on his promise of marriage, that is an unforgivable thing to suggest," she said coldly. "There really is no need to make such suggestions."

Rollison saw that Mike was also taken aback, and the girl gave the impression that she wished they would go; but she did not give the impression that she was hiding something.

"Miss Lawson," Rollison said, more briskly, "we have a problem, and there's no point in being too touchy or sentimental about it. Mr. Holmes hasn't turned up. That could be of his own free will, or it could be what we know as 'missing'. If someone else made him—or persuaded him—to go off, the quicker we can be sure the better. There are indications that he might have been persuaded—indications that your fall wasn't quite the accident it seemed. I'm sorry if I seem to impute unpleasant motives—in fact I'm simply trying to get at the truth."

Kate gave a frown which showed a fresh alarm. "What do you mean, the accident wasn't what it seemed?"

"There is a possibility that the dog was deliberately released to jump at you," Rollison said. "Alsatians can be trained to strict obedience, and everything we know about this case suggests that a trained dog leapt at you, knocked you down, and stood over you without making any attempt to harm you. That isn't characteristic of a badly behaved dog, or one out of control."

New Grifton Town Clerk Begins Today

GRIFTON — Mrs. Nannie Smith, a native of Grifton, today assumed her duties as town clerk, replacing Mrs. Joyce McCoy.

Mrs. Smith is a lifelong resident of Grifton, having graduated from Grifton High School. She attended both Atlantic Christian College and East Carolina College.

She was formerly employed by Dr. B. C. Troutman of Grifton for six years, and also has had experience as manager of the merchandising office with Sears in Kinston. She has worked with L. Harvey and Sons, L. M. Smith and Son Furniture, and Leon Cox and Sons in Grifton.

A member of Grifton Christian Church, she is a former secretary of the church board.

Mrs. Smith and her husband, Woodrow Smith, have three children and two grandchildren. The family resides at 304 E. Queen St.

Mrs. McCoy, town clerk since June 15, 1959, submitted her resignation at the Jan. 9 meeting of the Grifton Town Board. She and her husband reside on Rt. 2, Grifton.

Says 4-Year-Old Couldn't Accept Wheelchair Life

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Mrs. Clyde Stuck said today that her 4-year-old daughter Susan had too much willpower and determination to accept spending her life in a wheelchair.

So the little girl with the big, smiling brown eyes chose to have her legs amputated. Her only hope of ever walking was artificial legs.

Susan made her own decision. "We always talked about her problem openly," Mrs. Stuck said. "We never tried to hide the truth from her. It was open and she knew right from the beginning what might need to be done."

Susan's right leg was amputated below the knee at the Shrine Hospital in Chicago last Wednesday. She will undergo another operation to remove the left leg when she has regained her strength, and then several more to prepare her for artificial limbs.

Exploratory surgery six weeks ago revealed there was no way to correct a crippling congenital condition in Susan's legs. Doctors told Mr. and Mrs. Stuck, who live on a small farm in Battle Creek, the choice was a wheelchair or artificial limbs.

"We asked Susie if she wanted to go through with it," Mrs. Stuck recalled. "She was afraid it would hurt but I reminded her that another little girl in the hospital had the same thing."

Her daughter replied, "Well, it didn't hurt her too much, and I do want to be able to walk."

"We knew Susie would make the right decision," Mrs. Stuck said. "She has too much willpower and determination to spend her life in a wheelchair."

Susan suffers from a lack of muscle development called arthrogryposis congenita multiplex. She has been in and out of hospitals from birth.

The Shriners organization plans to pay the entire cost of Susan's treatment and recovery, which might run to $20,000 before she gets her last pair of artificial legs.

"Thank God for them," Mrs. Stuck said. "We have four other children (ages 7 to 14) and we figured my husband would work days, and I'd work nights, and we'd pay the bills somehow."

The Shriners learned of Susan's plight through Dr. Paul C. Kingsley, a Battle Creek orthopedist.

Role Of 'Ben Casey' Was Climax Of 10-Year Wait

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Strange place, Hollywood. A guy like Vincent Edwards can hang around for 10 years with scant success, then suddenly become the hottest thing in town.

Edwards always seemed like one of those actors who would never quite make it. "Ben Casey" has changed all that.

He's now sitting on top of the world, turning down contracts and publicity he would have jumped at six months ago. The rigors of doing an hour television series precludes almost everything else.

Brooklyn-born, educated at Ohio State and the University of Hawaii, Edwards was brought to Hollywood to play the athlete in "Come Back, Little Sheba."

That's when he met head-on the figure that may have held back his career: Burt Lancaster.

"I was supposed to do the picture when Humphrey Bogart was going to play the male lead," said Edwards, whose acting idol was and is the late Bogart.

"When Burt Lancaster got the role instead, they decided that I was too similar to be in the same picture. So I sat around for two years doing nothing."

After he was dropped by Hal Wallis, Edwards was signed by Columbia. Again he walked up a blind alley.

"I was supposed to do 'Picnic.'"

But they cast William Holden instead," Edwards recalled. "I did manage to make one sleeper, 'The Night Holds Terror,' but it did nothing for me."

He got to be the king of the sleepers, appearing in such critical successes as "The Killing," "City of Fear," and "Murder by Contract." Edwards' career wasn't helped. He seemed to be typed as the Burt Lancaster of the B's.

He played secondary roles in bigger films like "Serenade," "Three Faces of Eve" and "Too Late Blues" as well as appearing on most of the television series. "Ben Casey" finally provided a series of his own. He got it by a prosaic route: an interview with the producers. That's how most roles are won, despite all the fanciful publicity tales.
