Snow Flurries And Wind Gusts Reached Greenville

Snow flurries and winds up to 35 miles per hour occurred in the Greenville area during the night and morning hours as one of the worst storms of winter battered parts of the state.

All roads in Pitt County were open for travel, though the Highway Patrol Station here warned motorists to watch for icy spots. The weather forecast for the remainder of the day was considerable cloudiness, cold and windy, with occasional snow mainly in the east.

The low temperature reading for Greenville came at 4 a. m. and was 32 degrees, L. M. Bullock of the Greenville Utilities Plant reported. The noon temperature was 35 degrees. Winds reached 25 to 35 miles per hour in gusts about 5 a. m. today and had decreased to 25 to 30 miles per hour in gusts this morning.

Vietnam Troops Hit By Ambush

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Communist guerrillas reportedly ambushed an under-strength company of South Vietnamese rangers in the Mekong River delta Tuesday, killing 24 government troops, capturing five and leaving seven wounded.

It was the fourth considerable success for the Viet Cong guerrillas in South Viet Nam's southern and delta provinces in two weeks. In the same period government forces have reported two victories in which more than 100 Viet Cong troops were killed and hundreds wounded.

Seven Bids Received By City Utilities On Planned Projects

Greenville Utilities Commission yesterday received seven bids on sanitary sewer outfall and service lines which would serve Lakewood Pines, Sherwood Acres, Lynndale subdivision and other areas.

The bids, taken yesterday afternoon in City Hall, ranged from a low of $165,974.15 to a high of $258,419.

Blue Laws Fate In Court Hands

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Supreme Court has taken under advisement a case which will decide whether North Carolina's Sunday blue law is constitutional.

The court heard arguments Tuesday in the suit brought by four firms in the Charlotte area who contest the law is unconstitutional because of its "vagueness and indefiniteness."

However, James O. Cobb, representing Mecklenburg County and Charlotte law officers, spoke in defense of the law, saying it was modeled after a Pennsylvania statute which has been upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The law was enacted by the 1961 General Assembly. It prohibits sale on Sunday of 16 categories of merchandise and also authorizes local government units to exempt themselves from its provisions.

The Mecklenburg firms were represented at Tuesday's hearing by B. Irvin Boyle. "There is no way a merchant confronted with this statute can determine what he can or cannot legally sell on Sunday," Boyle commented.

He said the law does not specify punishments for violators and fails to point the finger at who should be charged—the clerk, the manager or the owner.

beating. Bruce H. Jackson of the local Highway Patrol station said all roads south of Kitty Hawk were reported to be covered with water and several beach homes and cottages had been washed away as of this morning. Roads going north out of Manteo also were under water.

Tides were about five feet above normal. Telephone communications were out along the coast in many areas, including Hatteras.

Much of the snow which fell here during the night melted as the morning temperatures rose above freezing. The amount of precipitation up to midnight was not enough to be measured at the Greenville Utilities Plant.

The weatherman has predicted clearing and cold tonight, with Thursday mostly fair and not as cold.

In Wrong Place At Wrong Time

DETROIT (AP) — It was a case of being in the wrong place at the wrong time for both James Harkins, 36, of suburban Nankin Township, and his car.

Harkins, sought on a larceny charge, was arrested Tuesday when he walked into the Wayne County sheriff's office to get information on a traffic accident he had been involved in.

Deputies were tipped that Harkins, on parole after serving time for armed robbery, might be in the building because his car was parked in front.

The interceptor line along Greene Mill Run will consist of a 24-inch line which is of sufficient size to later serve the area to the Wilson highway, Bloxam pointed out.

Brewer Called To Tax Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) — Kidd Brewer, Raleigh businessman under indictment on charges of plotting to defraud the state, has been summoned to explain his income tax returns for the last eight years.

The State Department of Revenue served Brewer with five summonses Tuesday to appear Friday at tax hearings before Revenue Commissioner William A. Johnson.

The day before he was to have appeared at a similar hearing Jan. 23, Brewer was found in an outbuilding at his home here with slashed wrists and throat suffered in an apparent suicide attempt.

He was taken to Duke Hospital in Durham for treatment and psychiatric observation and was released over the past weekend.

Brewer is to be questioned Friday morning on state income tax returns of four business firms with which he is connected. He is to discuss his individual income, gift and intangibles tax returns in a hearing Friday afternoon.

Brewer was indicted last month along with discharged highway engineer Robert Burch and Burch's son on charges of conspiring to cheat the state through rigged specifications for highway signs.

The case has been docketed for trial April 19 in Wake Superior Court.

In addition, the elder Burch has been charged with nine counts of evading state income taxes. He is to be tried in Raleigh City Court March 20.

Hospitality For Guests Pledged

PARIS (AP) — A 41-member North Carolina travel mission today promised Frenchmen plenty of Southern hospitality if they visit their state.

The group, headed by Charles D. Wade of Winston-Salem, is the first state-sponsored European tour to promote travel in the United States. The members, who are paying their own travel expenses, leave Thursday by plane for New York.

The delegation heard a briefing on the current French political situation by a U. S. embassy official. Later they met with John Watson, U. S. Travel Service manager for Paris.

Many of the delegation made individual calls on Paris travel agents, distributing literature and a warm invitation to visit North Carolina.

"We're promising our potential visitors plenty of Southern hospitality—and that's what they will get," said Dick Anderson, travel agent from Winston-Salem.

Paris officials made five of the group honorary citizens of Paris. They are Wade, Mrs. Mariam Rabb, Raleigh, Edward Pickard, Charlotte; O. M. Allsbrook, mayor of Wilmington; and J. V. Morgan, High Point.

Allsbrook and Morgan gave officials keys to their home towns. In the afternoon, 20 of the delegation took a bus tour of Paris.

6,000-Ft. Step In Re-Enlisting

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — Sailor Frank Moncreiff took a big step when he re-enlisted—about 6,000 feet.

He stepped out of a plane flying at that altitude Tuesday. So did Chief Warrant Officer Lewis T. Vinson. As they fell, Moncreiff handed Vinson a baton. In it were his re-enlistment papers.

At 2,500 feet the men opened their parachutes and descended to a marker on the desert. There an enlistment officer signed Moncreiff on for six more years.

Moncreiff, 30, has been in the Navy seven years, most of it as an underwater demolition team member. He is now assigned to a Navy parachute exhibition team at El Centro Naval Air Facility.

Vinson is the group's jumpmaster.

PARIS ORIGINAL, YANKEE ADAPTATION . . . This shimmering nylon and silk pleated dress (center) was a part of Nina Ricci's spring collection introduced during the French couture showings. Its designer, Jules Francis Crahay, also created an American (and much cheaper) adaptation of the dress (sketches) for an American manufacturer. You can see the similarities in the two dresses. NEW YORK (AP)—What does Paris fashion mean to the average American woman—the woman who buys her clothes from the ready-to-wear shops in her own home town?

The garment center here is busily sewing up two answers—Paris line-for-line copies and adaptations.

Seventh Avenue's production lines move so rapidly, in fact, that in most cases their French-inspired apparel is available to the American public almost as quickly as the Parisian couture houses make deliveries to their own wealthy clientele.

The line for line copies match the originals fabric-for-fabric, button-for-button, seam-for-seam, as the name implies. Only the couture house labels are missing.

But this oversight and American production methods enable the average woman to own Parisian style ideas for less than $100, often as little as $39.

Patterns for the line-for-lines are made from original costumes purchased by manufacturers' representatives in Paris and shipped here. These French imports are resold outside the country within a year to avoid duty fees on the foreign purchases, a precaution which enables manufacturers to sell their dresses more cheaply.

However, the line-for-lines are often not as popular with, or as practical for, the middle class American woman as adaptations. Adaptations are almost always made from these originals shipped to the factories. But designers also create them by memorizing clothes seen at the shows and examining them more closely later on.

With adaptations the fabrics, particularly woolen ones, are lighter in weight, better for American methods of home heating. Construction is less complicated, better for mass production methods. And the design itself is altered somewhat, but the basic idea is there. Paris thoroughly approves and cooperates with American fashion plagiarism to the extent that some designers adapt their own originals for ready-to-wear.

Jules Crahay of Nina Ricci, for example, contracted to produce a junior miss line for manufacturer Cole-Mort. This line made its debut in America only a matter of weeks after fashion reporters applauded Jules Crahay's new style ideas at Ricci's opening in Paris.

Jules Crahay's American clothes are not exactly like those the French mannikins modeled. But very, very much so.

The significant difference is that the white collar girl and the middle class suburban housewife can afford them.

Pomp, Festivity Mark Birthday

RALEIGH (AP) — Pomp and pageantry were the keynotes today as North Carolina State College celebrated its 75th birthday. The day-long schedule featured dedication of a classroom building, an academic convocation and a speech tonight by Adlai Stevenson, U.N. ambassador, two-time Democratic presidential candidate and former Illinois governor. His topic is, "Some Perils of Peacemaking."

The college was to dedicate formally Harrelson Hall, a $2½ million classroom building constructed in a circular shape. Its design has attracted national attention.

The building was named for the late Col. J. W. Harrelson who was N.C. State College chancellor from 1934 to 1953. Dr. Robert B. House, chancellor emeritus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was to deliver the dedicatory speech.

Former Virginia Gov. Colgate Darden Jr. was to address the academic convocation. State College Chancellor John T. Caldwell, Consolidated University of North Carolina President William C. Friday and Gov. Terry Sanford also were on the program.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

Associated Press Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Remember, man, that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return."

With the pronouncement of these Biblical words, ashes in the form of a cross were being imposed today on the foreheads of millions of Christians around the world.

It is "Ash Wednesday," the beginning of Lent, a 40-day interlude of penitence before Easter.

The midnight tolling of bells marked the beginning of the period in some areas, such as Austria and southern Germany.

There and elsewhere, worshippers were called to services this morning, with other special devotions scheduled throughout the next six weeks.

For church people, it is a time of self-denial and spiritual discipline to get rid of habits—whether of work or pleasure—that distract from making God the prime object of love and service.

Roman Catholics and some Protestants observe rules of fasting for the period, except Sundays. Generally, this means taking only one full meal a day.

The other two combined should be less than the main meal.

Aside from such formal features, the churches put the main emphasis on personal reform, heighten spiritual sensitivity and clear away obstacles to devotion to God.

This might mean a sharp cut-down on entertainment or the professional work schedule, a reduction in social activities, less television watching, no drinking, or more time in prayer.

It is an individual matter, between each person and his conscience.

The 40 days is in token of the 40 days and nights of fasting by Christ before he began his ministry.

The ceremony of ashes is used mainly by Roman Catholics. Protestants discarded the practice at the time of the 16th century reformation. In recent years some have resumed it.

It is an ancient custom, going back to the fourth century. Ashes were a symbol of penitence in Judaism. Christianity carried on the tradition.

Originally it was used only for "public sinners"—and was a far harsher affair than now.

As time went on, however, most all Christians began submitting to the imposition of ashes. The practice became general by the 11th century. Even the Pope gets ashes on his brow.

Gov. Sanford To Be Speaker For Breakfast

WOODSTOCK, Ga. (AP)—At 85, Dr. T. J. Van Sant has been this north Georgia town's family doctor for 55 years. He is partially deaf and his sight is failing. He would like to retire, but he can't. Woodstock has no other doctor.

At a recent wedding, Van Sant looked about him and realized why he can't quit—not yet.

The bridegroom, the bride, the parents of both, and nearly the entire wedding party all began life with a slap on the rump by Van Sant.

Once he was one of four doctors in Woodstock, which now has a population of about 750. The other doctors moved away.

Through the years he has gone where he was needed—from Canton to Ball Ground, to Atlanta, to Tate, to Acworth and to towns such as Lathamville which no longer exists.

He recalled the 1918 flu epidemic. Glancing from a window of his small clinic, he remarked, "Over there, within a six-mile radius, there were none dead one day; the next day, 15. Churches and funeral homes were overrun by mourners and dead."

"I never did get over death. Each time it was an ordeal, and a sad one."

Through it all, from the early days when he used a team of horses, he always answered when someone asked, "Please come quickly."

There were amusing incidents, too; such as the time he delivered a baby to an Indian mother at Hickory Flat Creek in 1912. He returned two days later to check on his patients.

The mother was doing all right, Van Sant said, "but that woman was feeding that baby pea soup."

Although he can read only with a large magnifying glass, Van Sant says he will go on helping those who need him because they have nobody else.

"He's the salvation of this county," said Walter Hill, 70. "They don't make them like him any more. In Woodstock, we wish they did. We need a doctor bad."

Bridge Decision Seen Next Week

RALEIGH (AP) — The Highway Commission may reach a decision next week on location of a proposed bridge spanning the New River at Morehead City.

Gov. Terry Sanford recently intervened in the dispute over the bridge location and said he wanted it settled as soon as possible.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Hamilton B. Allen, theater editor of the Rochester, N. Y., Times-Union, toured the Soviet Union with the Eastman Philharmonia during a State Department-sponsored concert tour. This is Allen's report on the assignment written for The Associated Press.

By HAMILTON B. ALLEN
Theater Editor, Rochester, N.Y., Times-Union

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—The three-month tour of the Eastman Philharmonia was a triumph of artistic endeavor and American good will in the 16 countries of Europe and the Near East. The month-long Russian stay that ended Feb. 24 was fantastic.

Eighty-seven students enrolled in the Eastman School of Music comprised the orchestra which began the tour Nov. 26 with a concert in Lisbon.

Everywhere the orchestra went, from Moscow to Odessa on the Black Sea, to Leningrad on the Baltic and through major cities of the Ukraine the receptions accorded the Rochester orchestra were the greatest of the tour. The Philharmonia appeared in 14 concerts in seven cities of the U.S.S.R.

"Our problem was how to end the concerts and get the audiences out of the music halls," says Dr. Howard Hanson, director of Eastman School of Music and principal conductor of the Philharmonia. Six and seven encores were demanded, extending the concerts for over an hour. This became standard procedure.

Standing ovations, wild cheering, refusal to admit the concert was over—these were the inspirations that pushed the young musicians into playing "way over their heads," according to the obviously pleased Dr. Hanson.

Critics of Soviet journals were unanimously laudatory of the musical excellence of the orchestra.

But a rather more important reason for the adulation was the peoples' reaction to the visit by the young Americans; the impression the musicians made in personal contacts.

They accepted their appearance as proof of America's interest and friendship. They wanted terribly to know this, to believe it.

They said it over and over again to the musicians.

They wanted to know about life in America, and what the Americans thought was the future of the Soviet Union. Bolder ones talked about these matters openly but the real contacts were made in private meetings with the orchestra musicians where the Russians expressed their inner thoughts.

"You have shown us a joy of living that we no longer know," said a tearful woman in Lvov.

"It was an experience in human relations, the real thing, not books or theory, that I shall never forget," says violinist Janice Baty, Bozeman, Mont. Miss Baty is one of several Philharmonians who garnered long lists of Soviet pen pals.

The popular hit of the Soviet tour programs was Sousa's "Stars and Stripes," announced by interpreters simply as "Sousa March." Its popularity preceded the orchestra. Audiences were waiting to hear it announced among the encores. Wild enthusiasm greeted its performance and often it was repeated, complete with brass section flourishes, to gratify audiences.

The Philharmonia's programs included a list of major symphonic pieces—Barber's First Symphony, De Falla's brilliantly showy "Three Corner Hat," Hanson's own "Second (Romantic) Symphony," Shostakovich's First Symphony and works by Dvorak, Beethoven, Prokofiev, Schuman and Tchaikowsky.

The tour was a showcase for the American school system of music education which fosters and develops talent to professional excellence in colleges of music such as are unknown in Europe and the Soviet Union.

One important Berlin critic suggested after hearing the Philharmonia, that the system of music education in Germany "needed a second look."

Soviet critics, educators, heads and faculties of conservatories, were similarly impressed.

Dr. Hanson, invited to address them, explained that in America, a musician is given the same high degree of concentrated training that the Syrians, newly separated from the United Arab Republic, had never heard their national anthem performed by a symphony orchestra. Overnight, he orchestrated the piece for performance in Aleppo. It now has been adopted, Dr. Hanson has learned, as the official version.

When the orchestra returned to Rochester, Dr. Hanson said: "I am sure the musicians of the Philharmonia made as deep an impression as representative young Americans as they did as creators of beautiful music."

"Throughout, their conduct was exemplary. The entire tour was graced by great good feeling on both sides, opening new avenues of friendship for America in areas where we so badly need friendship."

Can We Hike Outlays So Rapidly?

Proposals of the United Forces for Education that North Carolina add another $90 million to its spending for public education in the coming biennium raises the clear-cut question of whether the state can afford to jump its educational expenditures at so rapid a pace.

The proposal for an additional $90 million in expenditures raises the question of where the necessary $90 million in additional state revenues will come from to off-set such an expenditure. This particular question the UFE carefully avoided in issuing its proposal for spending.

Most Tar Heels, we think, are anxious for the state to improve the calibre of education in its public schools. At the same time, most of them realize that the goal of quality education cannot be reached in one or two years, or perhaps within a decade, for that matter. The rate of progress must be geared to the amount of additional spending for public education the state can afford and is willing to pour into the effort.

During the current biennium spending for public education is being carried on at a rate of more than $100 million over the previous biennium. This rate, for the most part, was made possible by the three per cent sales tax on food and other items which prior to last year were exempt from the state's sales tax law.

At the time the sales tax on food was proposed by the Sanford administration, the governor made it clear that this particular method of financing additional spending for schools was chosen because it offered the broadest possible base for revenues, and further that it offered the potential of producing an increasing amount of revenue in each biennium. This combination of factors was seen as a method of providing additional revenues each year with which to carry out a continuing improvement program in public schools.

The increased amount of money available from one biennium to the next obviously would not be as great as that provided in the first biennium in which the sales tax on food was effective. The pace of progress in public education, therefore, would have to be scaled to some extent to the general economic progress of the state and the additional revenue produced by this long-range program for financing school improvements.

North Carolina needs to continue to improve the quality of its public schools as rapidly as practical; but from the realistic point of view, it can meet its needs only as rapidly as its financial position permits it to.

This can most successfully be done by a realistic approach to the problem at both the state and local levels, in which there is full recognition that every additional dollar which is spent to meet these needs must be balanced by an additional dollar of revenue.

Revenue Report Not All Good

By LYNN NISBET

STATE TAXES—The report of tax collections for the general fund account of the State for the first eight months of the current fiscal year does not reflect a healthful economy. The figures for the one month of February are slightly better.

Total general fund collections for the eight months from July 1, 1961, through February 28, 1962, amounted to the hefty sum of $219,805,428. This was $24,011,273 more than was collected for the comparable period last year, an increase of 12.26 per cent.

But the increase in the sales and use tax bracket amount to $87,291,620, an increase over the previous year of $25,517,641. In other words, the major sources of general fund revenue other than the sales tax showed considerable decrease in yield. Income taxes were off nearly six million dollars, privilege taxes about half a million.

Next to the general sales and use tax the biggest increase was shown in the beverage schedule, which is also essentially a tax on consumption. The base of application of the general sales and use tax was greatly expanded by the 1961 General Assembly and the liquor tax was raised 20 percent. These raises were effective July 1, 1961, subsequent to the comparative period covered in the current report. It seems obvious that the increased yield in these brackets was due entirely to the higher rates, not to increased business; while the decrease in yield from the old established sources which were not changed reflects less business in these areas.

In view of this record it seems unduly optimistic to suggest that "the expanding economy of the state can take care of greatly increased spending without revision of the tax structure."

DAMS—Sen. Everett Jordan and Rep. Harold Cooley disagree on the best method to control floods and conserve water in the Cape Fear valley and its upper branches of the Haw river and New Hope creek. Senator Jordan supports the idea of one big dam on the Haw and a couple of smaller ones on its tributaries, as proposed by the Army Engineers. Rep. Cooley favors the plan for a number of small dams up and down the streams, as proposed by the Soil Conservation Service.

There is no reason to question the absolute sincerity and the honesty of conclusions

Script Does Little To Inspire Geneva Hopes

Past experience in negotiating with Communist governments does little to raise hope or enthusiasm over the forthcoming disarmament conference in Geneva.

The speech marathons of the past, that began with feverish hopes, that were marked by propaganda exchanges, that ended with nerve-dullened stalemate, are too well remembered.

Logic dictates there must be understanding and agreement on disarmament or halting the nuclear weapons race. So what are we to do?

Experience is discouraging enough, but the immediate future wears no aura of hope, either. The observer has good reason to feel Geneva conference participants were going through mechanical motions memorized from past experience, fulfilling a formula playwrights would discard as lacking in originality and inviting an audience to walk out before close of Scene One, Act One.

The fact that President Kennedy deemed it necessary to remind Premier Khrushchev that negotiators must avoid "sterile exchanges of propaganda" is in itself evidence of the ill wind that blows. Such a statement should not be necessary if there was reason for optimism on the eve of the meeting.

But to Geneva we must go;

If only to prove the leopard has not lost his spots and the intransigent Communists are still intransigent.

There is simply nowhere else to go, and nothing else to do.

Noisy Prelude To Geneva Talk

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The buildup for the new disarmament talks has been too big, too tense, and too dramatic for them to fade out quietly.

They may not accomplish any more than all the other dismal disarmament discussions since World War II.

But the background of these new ones — a 17-nation conference opening in Geneva March 14—has been too flamboyant to produce less than some fireworks of their own.

In that background were the Soviet nuclear tests of last fall, President Kennedy's call for 17 foreign ministers to start the talks, Premier Khrushchev's demand that they begin with a summit conference, and Kennedy's decision for the United States to resume testing.

Most dramatically of all he riveted attention on these talks by saying America would test by the end of April unless, before then, Russia agrees to a nuclear test ban with an inspection system.

In other words he asks agreement on the ban when the disarmament talks — supposed to last till June — are less than six weeks old.

No wonder then that the world's attention and its hopes — although from experience the hopes must be diluted with some skepticism — are fastened on these disarmament talks as never before.

Now that the two giants have started down the nuclear testing road again there is nothing to look forward to, unless the disarmament talks succeed, except an endless nuclear race.

If the talks collapse, it's a good guess the fallout from East-West denunciations of each other will last for weeks. If

By HENRY HOWARD

There is, as everybody involved either takes for granted or consciously appreciates, an overwhelming wealth of blessing that came to the successful members of that universal and eternal army that carries on the institution of marriage.

Not least among the multitude is the knack (as universal and eternal as the institution itself) of these blessed people to recall to the most minute detail the ceremony that initiated them into the ranks.

What is unceasingly remarkable about it is the inexhaustibility of the warmth and pleasure that comes from recalling and reconstructing and then recalling and re-reconstructing, etc., these magic moments.

We spent a most enjoyable evening recently doing just that. There were six of us comparing those ceremony notes, but, as usually happens, one account stole the show.

Dot remember the sudden surge of affection and love that swept through her usually composed companion the moment the vows were completed and they were "man and wife."

"Right there in front of all those people, he turned to me, grabbed me, and boy he flat planted one on me!" she declared and explained, "And that's so unlike Joe. He's usually so quiet. I was just swept off my feet."

Then, as most frequently happens when couples are re-doing the ceremony, came the classic question: "Whatever possessed you to do that in front of all those people, Joe?"

What is most irregular was Joe's answer that set off a hearty round of laughter.

"I had to. That wedding director you hired told me to."

Monday's discussion at the commissioners' meeting of the Coastal Plain Planning and Development Commission led to the topic of agricultural diversification.

County Agent Sam Winchester, at the meeting to file his monthly report, was pointing out the economic benefits that could be derived from production of various crops by an individual farmer.

Chairman Alton Gardner cited a drawback: "Everybody around here is too tobacco-minded. They put all their emphasis on tobacco."

Bob Martin of Bethel explained that situation: "Tobacco money rolls in by the hundreds, other-crop money you count by tens."

Then Robert Little of Simpson added this: "A tobacco farmer just can't afford to be interrupted during harvest season. Take those hogs of mine. They never break out until July."

Little's remarks made us wonder if domestic animals develop the same sense of season that is so apparent in game birds.

Everybody knows the ducks flock into Mattamuskeet the day before and the day after hunting season.

Domestic animals, perhaps, know they can wait until the busy tobacco harvest season. Then they have a better chance to enjoy a free day or so.

Maybe the creatures we call animals have been exposed too long now to a human environment. Their apparent reasoning appears so very human at times.

Caught Up In Errors

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg comes out of labor and has had a vast experience with labor-management problems. As Secretary of Labor, one of his tasks is to avert work stoppages, particularly at this time when the government is directly or indirectly the largest employer of labor in relation to the defense.

There are several approaches to the problem of employer-management relationships. These may roughly be stated as follows:

1. Permitting the law of supply and demand to apply to the utilization of labor which would mean the free disposal of the time of the worker as the needs of management appear;
2. Collective bargaining between a more or less powerful management with a more or less powerful labor bureaucracy — the tendency being that both bureaucracies, management and labor tend "to together" to keep the shop going, as long as a selling price can be maintained;
3. Arbitration, either by professional arbitrators or by agreed upon groups;
4. Mediation, in which the government appears as a third party, representing the public;
5. Strikes for political reasons, as for instance the "sit-down" strikes for organizational purposes.

All these relationships are tried from time to time in this country and none has succeeded altogether. The largest part of the work force remains outside the unions; the unions in some industries are more powerful than management which may, at times, and under special circumstances, even become dependent upon them, as, for instance, when management borrows from unions to keep going or when the unions use surplus funds to buy into industry.

Government mediation is constant either through the National Labor Relations Board or similar federal and state agencies. As a matter of fact, big labor grew protected by federal mediation (it has been called interference and worse names by management) just as big business grew protected by the tariff and other acts of Congress.

There is then really nothing new or startling in Secretary Goldberg's proposal concerning mediation, except that he states his program as one of national policy, proposing to use it not as the Wagner Act was used to protect unions but as a medium for the protection of the interests of the American government and people. In a word, he seats the government at collective bargaining tables as a third interested party. The fiction has been, up to now, that the government is disinterested, impartial, unbiased even when a strike occurs at Cape Canaveral.

For instance, in a speech at the Executive's Club in Chicago, Secretary Goldberg said:

"It is a universal truth shared and obvious truth that we cannot this year afford a repetition of the 1959 steel strike."

Actually, we could not afford such a strike in 1959 either. There are strikes which only affect the strikers and the particular industries involved. There are other industries in which the national interest is the dominant factor and in which a strike may so imperil the nation as to be equated to a defeat in a battle, or bring on a destructive inflation of the currency. It is the latter type of labor-management fracas that Secretary Goldberg was obviously discussing, in which the public interest becomes a party issue.

But when unemployment is still our leading social problem, is it possible to say that the public interest is not always involved? Do we have to wait until unemployment becomes acute to attempt to solve our problems by the artifices of the New Deal, which almost destroyed free endeavors in this country? May we not employ foresight, at least to the degree that we stave off acute unemployment?

Fault-finding with either management or labor does not serve much purpose at this moment. We are caught in a vise of prolonged international and domestic errors which cannot be corrected by the usual means.

Other Editors Saying Job Is Just Beginning

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

South Carolina moves to put into operation a decision to expand and strengthen its University of South Carolina at Columbia. Such a decision was reaching two or three years ago. A president was elected for U.S.C. with his understanding that he would serve only until the "right man" to lead the development program was found.

The special committee picked to find the right man has proceeded slowly and carefully. In recent months its search has turned to Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina College in Greenville. The fame of what Dr. Jenkins has accomplished in two years as E.C. president has spread far and wide. The man and the moment met when he was picked to succeed Dr. John D. Messick. For 12 years previously as dean and as vice president of E.C., Jenkins had been gaining background and knowledge and understanding for the greater work of administrator of the college.

Under Jenkins East Carolina has moved first to deepen the quality of instruction. Faculty and other college officers have been encouraged to join in the new spirit of scholarship. Greenville people will tell you the closeness of college and city was never better. Witness business men of Greenville putting up $225,000 to build a coliseum. The seeking spirit among students shows in its lively college newspaper and in its challenging student magazine. One not familiar with E.C. and its enrollment of 5,000 students would sense this undercurrent of moving out in its student publications.

It was only natural that South Carolina came to Dr. Jenkins with an offer to go to Columbia. That offer is so good that it could not be turned down without consideration, informed sources say.

But Dr. Jenkins must balance the offer against known situations which might develop. Today Jenkins is as Tar Heel as they come but he is not a Southerner. He is a native of New Jersey. And if South Carolina reacts true to history the place of birth of the educator could be used against him when the chips came down as issues developed.

But Jenkins would not dodge such a fight. His final decision as with any other man, would be predicated on the challenge and the opportunities for betterment for himself and family.

We predict that offers to Jenkins from South Carolina will be followed by offers from other institutions. If North Carolina keeps him to go on with the great job now just well started, the state must meet the competition for his services. Flatly said, we will have to pay him what others offer.

Opinions In Brief

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THINK ON THESE THINGS

Alonso Stagg, the famous football coach and trainer, did not retire until he was 98. Why should he have retired? He still had vigor and ideas. The calendar is the poorest thing in the world to consult when contemplating retirement. The thing to ask is whether or not you have any more usefulness in you, and what you are best suited to do now that the age digests have begun to pile up.

Stagg was a stickler on the matter of self-discipline. He put his foot down hard on liquor for any of his "boys." He held that the poisoning of the body never goes with athletic achievement. He was hard and unyielding in his rules. Instead of be-

Twenty Different Airline Rates

By ELMER ROESSNER

When new transatlantic group airline rates go into effect this Saturday, there will be a total of 20 different round-trip rates between any city in the United States and any city in Europe.

These 20 different rates, according to Business Week, will range from $189 a round trip (by chartering an entire prop plane off season) to $900 (for all-year first-class jet rate).

There is another group rate, granted to clubs and societies that have been in existence for more than a year and which will charter an entire plane.

This rate was approved by the International Air Transport Association several years ago, and since then has become one of the shambles of the industry.

EVERYBODY IN THE ACT

Under chartered plane rates, round trips cost from $189 to $258, depending on whether the group goes in the on or off season, and whether byprop or jet.

While some effort was made to limit charters to established clubs, societies, etc., some organizations appeared to spring up and age a year in a few days to take advantage of the charter-plane rates. And some organizers would charter planes from lines that were not members of the I.A.T.A. and fix their own price.

A large part of the business I.A.T.A. had hoped to develop for members was drained off by opportunistic entrepreneurs and ad hoc societies.

ANY NUMBER CAN PLAY

To regain this business, I.A.T.A. has developed the new group plan that goes into effect Saturday. It provides that groups need not be more than 25 strong. Groups are expected to be six months or more old, and to have been formed for purposes other than beating regular airline rates. However, groups formed spontaneously—without a travel agent nudging them—are entitled to the rates, which are slightly higher than the chartered plane rates. The new group rates are $278 per person a round trip between New York and London by prop planes and $300 by jet.

There are a number of restrictions on these group flights, but busy agents will probably find ways of getting around them.

Charter plane rates appear to be the cheapest, followed by the new group rates, 17-day excursions, family plans and the regular all-year fares. The 17-day excursion and family-plan rates are available only between October 1 and March 31.

SPREAD OF RATES WORSE IN AUTO INSURANCE FIELD

An even greater variation in rates has been found in the auto insurance field by Consumers Union. In what it calls the "first comprehensive survey of the $6 billion auto insurance market," Consumers Union found a "chaotic" market.

"Perhaps the most astonishing single fact about the private passenger automobile insurance today is the range of different prices consumers pay for identical insurance coverage," the union reported in its "Consumer Reports."

It found that the rates in Connecticut for one kind of liability coverage varied from $27 to $884, depending on numerous criteria. Including the geographical location of the insured; his classification, based on age, sex, marital status and occupation of the car's drivers; the distance they drive; the purpose for which the car is driven and other factors, including discounts and surcharges based on driving records.

The union concluded that auto insurance is "one of the most complicated purchases a consumer can make."

Except, perhaps, a flight ticket to Europe.

PLASTIC COATED PLOWS FUND TO WORK BETTER

The same plastics that make no-fat frying easier, may make plowing easier, too, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Engineers have found that covering plows with Teflon or high-density polyethylene keeps soil from sticking to them.

Recall Astronaut Slayton Having Eyes On The Sky

SPARTA, Wis. (AP)—“Don was a determined boy, who knew where he was going.” That’s how his one-time science instructor, remembers Donald Kent Slayton who is scheduled to become his country’s second man in orbit next month.

There are many other recollections of the astronaut by family and friends.

He played a trombone for four years in the high school band, and was proud of the uniform; he raised a prize sheep and won a blue ribbon, and sometimes he ran the five miles from school to his farm home to keep in shape for the track team; he has 3,600 hours in the air, and he told his mother the wildest ride of his life was in a taxi cab taking him from one Chicago airport to another.

For “Don Slayton—he did not become Deke until Air Force bud- dies made a nickname of his initials—the urge for wings came early. The Sparta High School yearbook said of him in his junior year that his theme song was “keep ‘em flying.”

Walter Pribnow, who was Slayton’s science instructor and now is superintendent of schools at Appleton, Wis., remembered that during Don’s senior year he took a special interest in an aeronautical text.

“We made black airplane models for identification,” Pribnow said. “Don was a determined boy, who knew where he was going.”

Slayton was born, 33 years ago last week, in the Sparta hospital to Charles Slayton and his second wife, Victoria, both of Norwegian stock, and spent his boyhood on the family farm near the town of Leon.

He was graduated from Leon Elementary School at the head of his class and entered Sparta High School in a class of 180. A new $1.5 million high school, just completed, will be named for him if the board said last week, he approves the move.

In high school, he played trombone for four years with the band and there is a picture of him in the band uniform, looking proud, and a little shy. He was out for the track team all four years, and played on the school’s Future Farmers of America basketball team for three years.

Don, his brother Howard, his sisters Beverly and Verna, and Russ and Lloyd Harris made the five-mile trip to school daily in a Model T Ford the Harris boys bought for $26.

During track season, Don sometimes ran the five miles to improve his wind and legs.

It was with the Future Farmers that he raised the prize Oxford sheep, and after winning classes at the Monroe County Fair in Tomah went on to the state fair.

Graduated 16th in his class, he enlisted in the Air Force on his 18th birthday.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration biography of his Air Force career takes up most of a page: 56 combat missions over Germany, seven over Japan, time out to win an aeronautical engineering degree at the University of Minnesota, a brief tour as a civilian engineer.

“He quit a good paying job at Boeing,” his mother says, “because he was grounded.”

He went back into service with the Minnesota Air National Guard and then to a berth as an experimental jet test pilot at Edwards Air Force Base.

While in Germany, Slayton married a civilian secretary, Marjorie Lunney, whose home is in California. They have a 4-year-old son, Kent. In a brief visit home after Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. made the first orbital flight, the Slaytons were busy with plans for building a home near NASA’s new headquarters at Houston, Tex.

At home, his parents—now 74 and 67 years old—hear little of the Mercury project. Charles Slayton is town treasurer of Leon.

“We share Don’s confidence in this program,” his mother says. “We know that God willing, Don’s flight will be as successful as Glenn’s.”

“No parents have a right to interfere with their children’s futures. If Don is happy in what he is doing, we are happy.”

“And Don would not be happy unless he was flying.”

First Money Bill Cleared In House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House sent to the Senate by voice vote passage Tuesday the first regular money bill of 1962 — a $5,461,671,000 measure financing the Treasury and Post Office Departments and several small agencies.

No efforts were made to change money recommendations of the Appropriations Committee, although several members grumbled because the funds provided were $148,813,000 more than the same agencies were given last year.

Despite this increase, however, the bill cut $113,715,000 from funds requested by President Kennedy for use during the fiscal year starting July 1.

Primate Plans To Visit Russia

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Michael Ramsey, archbishop of Canterbury and primate of the Anglican Church, announced Tuesday night he has tentatively accepted an invitation from the Russian Orthodox Church to visit Moscow this year.

He was last in Moscow in July 1956 as archbishop of York when he attended a theological conference with leaders of the Orthodox Church.

rected short of war, but can be accommodated by various devices until a new plateau is reached. The fear of most of the opponents to a positive government policy in too many aspects of our lives is that such a process could ultimately lead to fascism or to some other form of socialism. The danger is real.

However, those who fear the consequences of concentrated government power cannot advocate anarchy without bringing on the danger that is feared. As I read Secretary Goldberg's effort the task he has set himself is to avert that danger.

Dinah Shore Files For Divorce; Nothing To Say

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dinah Shore says she wants a divorce. That's about all she does say.

Her suit for divorce from actor George Montgomery was filed Tuesday. Her complaint was brief.

So was her press agent's announcement: "Miss Shore has filed for divorce. A property settlement has been reached, and an agreement has been made concerning custody of the children."

The brief complaint charged Montgomery with mental cruelty, but gave no details.

She requested that the children—Melissa Ann, 14, and John David, 7—be placed in Miss Shore's custody, with Montgomery granted visitation rights.

Miss Shore's attorney said, "The couple has agreed to keep all the details private." Newsweek couldn't locate Montgomery. Miss Shore was out of town.

A New JOHN CREASEY Thriller

A ROCKET FOR ROLLISON

CHAPTER 9
When Richard Rollison heard a faint sound outside Kate Lowson's flat, he felt quite sure that this was his man, Jolly. He kept to one side and peered on to the landing, for safety's sake.

It was Jolly, who was slightly below medium height, in his early sixties, rather pale-faced, and with a bag of skin under his jaw which suggested that he had once been very fat but had lost weight suddenly.

His large brown eyes often held a doleful or a puzzled look, but just now he was obviously very wary. He wore a dark grey topcoat and a white silk scarf. "All right, Jolly," Rollison said. "We've got some work for you, and we want to get off before Ebbutt's boys arrive. Is that chap all right downstairs?"

Jolly stared at him. "What chap, sir?"

"It's absolutely unbelievable," Mike Kennedy declared harshly. "I could have sworn I'd put him out for at least twenty minutes. He couldn't have gone off on his own."

"More likely you missed the vital spot," Rollison said, "and as he knew you were here he didn't like the odds, so he cut and ran for it. There's just a possibility—"

He hesitated, frowning, while Kennedy stared in vexation. Jolly was washing the cut at Rollison's knee. He had found gauze, a salve and plenty of adhesive plaster, and would do an excellent first aid job.

"What possibility?" demanded Kennedy.

"He could have telephoned for help," Rollison answered. "It isn't likely, but we'd better be sure. Jolly, get that done as soon as you can, then go downstairs and wait for Ebbutt's boys. Leave two of them downstairs, and bring any more who come along up here with you. If anyone you don't recognize comes, give me a shout."

"Very well, sir," Jolly said, and as he went out, Kennedy's face began to pucker into a grin.

Kennedy was never likely to be in a gloomy mood for long, although he still sounded lugubrious when he said: "The gent's gentleman to the nth degree. How long did it take you to train him?"

"Sometimes I think he trained me," Rollison answered briskly. "Mike, we haven't a lot of time to waste. We'll wait until these friends arrive—you know Ebbutt's gymnasium in Whitechapel, don't you?"

"I also know Ebbutt's men would sell their souls for a certain Mr. Ar," answered Kennedy. "And then?"

"Tell Jolly everything we want the police to know, and have him call them," Rollison went on. "We'll go and see your contacts at the airport, and find out what we can about the business this evening."

"Don't mind playing hide and seek with the coppers, I'd much rather you handle this job," Kennedy said. "But do we need to go to the airport now? Can't you make Flat Nose tell you all that you need to know? Obviously, ly he's one of the paid staff, surely he must know a lot."

"We'd be wiser to hand him over to the police," Rollison said. "They may know him, and if he hasn't a record, he can start one now. If they think I've handed them a prisoner on a plate they'll believe me when I say that I'm co-operating in every possible way."

Kennedy began to smile. "And aren't you?"

"I don't understand this job yet," answered Rollison, with the quizzical expression which would have told Jolly that he was genuinely puzzled indeed. "I think there's a lot I might be able to find out quicker than the police. This chap is likely to pretend that he's more badly hurt than he is. I wouldn't expect him to start talking for a long time. But there was a sister, so called, with him at the airport. Now if we could find her—and if we could find out from anything in his pockets where she lives, we might make some progress."

"You don't improve at all," remarked Kennedy, drily. "But I'm game." He put a hand on Rollison's arm. "Rolly, I want you to believe one thing: that girl matters to me. You can laugh your head off because I'm such an impressionable clot, but it remains a fact. Count on me to do anything humanly possible."

"Thanks," said Rollison. Then Jolly came upstairs again, to report that William Ebbutt of Whitechapel had sent two men as an advance party. These were downstairs on duty, and others would soon follow.

Jolly listened intently to his instructions, and when Rollison had finished, said in a voice in which confidence and deference were nicely balanced: "Very well, sir. The police may know everything, including the fact that there was a young woman—this man's 'sister' according to his own statement—who presumably went off with the Alsatian. But they don't know that you have taken the wallet and some letters out of the pockets of the man who escaped."

As no one else has appeared, it is hardly likely that he went or sent for assistance, is it, sir?"

"It doesn't look like it," Rollison agreed, "but you can assume the worst until the police take over."

"I will indeed," said Jolly. Obviously he amused Kennedy, as obviously as two lean, middle-aged, tough-looking men who were downstairs by the open front door intrigued him. Each of these touched his forehead to Rollison, each called him Mr. Ar, each showed a curious blend of familiarity and obsequiousness which made it even more obvious that Rollison was not regarded like a normal human being.

No one else was in the street when they reached the corner and Rollison's Rolls-Bentley. "In you get," said Rollison. "Let me do the driving to the airport," said Kennedy.

"Not tonight," said Rollison. "What makes you think we're going to the airport?"

After a moment's pause, Kennedy said blankly, "Eh?"

"That's the last place I'd go for the police will be there almost as soon as we would," reasoned Rollison. "I said we're going there because Flat Nose was coming round, and he undoubtedly heard it. If Jolly doesn't tell the police, Flat Nose will."

"Then where the heck are we going?"

"We have some addresses," Rollison said, touching his breast pocket, "and at any of them we might find this so-called sister and the Alsatian. As you've had R. A. F. training," Rollison added airily, "you can take care of the dog."

Some Soldiers Still Boycotting

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP)—The Army says a boycott of Army food that started last week in a New Hampshire National Guard outfit has ended "for practical purposes." Some protesting soldiers say it hasn't.

The boycott of mess halls began as a protest against what was called a delay in information on when Guardsmen would be released from active duty. The unit, the 4th Howitzer Battalion, 197th Field Artillery, was called to active duty last fall because of the Berlin crisis.

The outfit has been in the field since Monday on a routine exercise, and field kitchens have reported serving the usual number of men.

However, some members of the unit told a newsman Tuesday they bought food to take on the field exercises. Some said they had enough to last until they got back to the post, where they are able to eat at the Post Exchange instead of the mess hall.

One said the boycott would continue "as long as the men have money to obtain food from outside sources."

The men are not required to eat at mess halls, and Lt. Col. Roger Whiting, public information officer, said the soldiers apparently have broken no regulations.

Pfc. Thomas Dion of Claremont, N.H., told a newsman, "I go along with the strike because it does not make sense to me why we are still being held on duty. The Berlin crisis has passed. We are not doing the Army any good now."

MacMillan Hopes Glenn Will Visit

LONDON AP—Prime Minister Harold Macmillan said Tuesday President Kennedy has promised an early reply to an invitation for Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. to visit Britain.

"We all hope it will be possible for Col. Glenn to visit this country," Macmillan told the House of Commons. "No doubt the Americans have to take into account all the other demands made upon him."

Sparsely populated New Zealand has only 2,500,000 inhabitants. Its two islands are about the size of Colorado.

Bethel Takes 89-54 Win Over Belvoir-Falkland

By CHARLES VAUGHAN
Reflector Sports Writer

Coch Dan Wooten and the Bethel Indians defeated the Belvoir-Falkland Eagles last night 89-54 to win their first game of the Pitt County Tournament.

Indians Surge To Early Lead
Led by Tex Everett, the Indians surged to an early lead over the lagging Eagles. Bethel went on to increase their advantage to 18-11 at the end of the first period. Belvoir-Falkland was unable to keep pace with the high scoring Indians as they moved to a 43-22 half-time lead.

The Indians started the second half by outscoring the Eagles 12-0 in the first three minutes to surge ahead 55-22. Coach Wooten then sent in his substitutes, but the Eagles slowly began to narrow the Indians' advantage. However, Bethel once again began to out-distance Belvoir-Falkland as they went on to win 89-54.

Dewar Paced Winners

Don Dewar paced the victors with nine field goals and six free throws for a game high total of 24 points. Also in double figures for the sharp-shooting Indians was Tex Everett with 16 points for the night. Everett also found time to control the rebounds for Bethel. Jimmy Lewis and Herman Daniels tallied 20 and 10 points respectively for the winners.

Belvoir-Falkland was led by Melvin Nelson and Alan Witherington who scored identical totals of 20 points each. They were the only Eagles in double figures for the contest.

Early in the opening period, the Bethel Indians jumped to a 7-2 advantage over the Belvoir-Falkland Eagles. As the quarter progressed, the Eagles continued to fall behind the accurate shooting Indians. Tex Everett hit a field goal and a free throw with 19 seconds remaining in the quarter to give the Indians an 18-9 advantage. Melvin Nelson hit the nets for the Eagles to narrow Bethel's lead to 18-11 at the end of the period.

Bethel Increases Lead

Bethel continued to increase their advantage over Belvoir-Falkland during the second quarter as they surged to a lead of 12 points after four minutes of the period. The Eagles were unable to keep pace with the Indians as Bethel charged to a 43-22 half-time advantage. When the two teams returned to the court for the second half, Bethel continued to out-distance the Eagles. The Indians tallied twelve points early in the third quarter, while Belvoir-Falkland was unable to hit the nets. Coach Wooten then sent in his substitutes and they also played fine ball as they pushed to a 61-33 third quarter advantage.

Eagles Unable To Rally

Belvoir-Falkland was unable to rally their forces in the final period as Bethel continued to pace ahead. The Indians outscored the Eagles 27-21 in the fourth quarter to go on to victory 89-54.

Bethel does not play again until Thursday night when they meet the Winterville Wolves at 9:30 o'clock.

Winterville Boys Defeat Grifton

The Winterville Wolves won their first game of the Pitt County Tournament last night, defeating the Grifton Bulldogs by a score of 58-35. Winterville returns on Thursday to meet the Bethel Indians at 9:30 o'clock.

Led by James Braxton and Steve Worthington, the Wolves surged ahead of the Bulldogs early in the first quarter. Winterville went on to increase their lead to 14-10 at the end of the opening period. The Wolves found no difficulty in advancing their advantage to 28-15 at the end of the first half.

Wolves Increase Lead

The second half was a duplication of the first in that Grifton continued to fall further behind the quick scoring Wolves.

At the close of the third quarter, Winterville had increased their lead over the lagging Buldogs to 41-23. Grifton was unable to guard the Wolves as they swept to a 58-35 victory in the final period.

High scorers for the night were James Braxton and Steve Worthington, both of Winterville, who scored 15 points each. These boys also controlled the rebounds for the Wolves. Also in double figures for Winterville was Alfred Gold who tallied

11 points for the winners.

Warren Leads Bulldogs

Leading the losing Bulldogs was Butch Warren with a total of 10 points. All-County Tommy Riley was held to eight points last night by good defense on the part of Winterville's Bobby Hobgood.

After the first quarter last night, Grifton could not keep pace with the high scoring Wolves. The closest the Bulldogs could come to Winterville was when they cut the Wolves' lead to six points after two minutes of the second quarter. For the rest of the night, however, Winterville just outplayed the Bulldogs and went on to win 58-35.

Bethel Girls Post Win Over Grifton

The Bethel girls, coached by Charles Mathews, ran to a 61-36 victory last night over the Grifton girls. By winning last night, the Indians earned the right to meet Farmville in the quarter finals.

Carolyn Manning led the Indians with 12 field goals and 5 free throws for a game high total of 29 points. Also in double figures for sharp-shooting Bethel was Janie Cobb with 23 points.

Newborn Led Grifton

The Grifton Bulldogs were paced by Jane Mewborn, an All-

County Selection, who tallied 18 points for the night. Betty Reaves tossed in 10 points for Grifton in their losing effort.

Bethel, paced by Janie Cobb, raced to early first quarter advantage over the Grifton Buldogs. At the end of the first quarter, the Indians led by a score of 15-7.

In the second period, Bethel continued to slowly increase their advantage over the lagging Buldogs as they surged to a lead of 11 points with five minutes remaining in the period. Grifton, fighting desperately to overcome the Indians, managed to cut the margin to ten points at the end of the half.

Bethel Increase Lead

The Bethel Indians, leading

31-21 at the end of the second quarter, returned to start the second half by surging to a 38-

21 advantage before Grifton could score. The Bulldogs could not keep pace with the Indians

as Bethel went on to a 51-31

third period lead.

In the fourth and final quarter, Grifton could do nothing to overcome the high scoring Indians. However, the Bulldogs outscored the Indians 15-10 in this quarter, but to no avail as Bethel went on to 61-36 victory.

Bethel returns to the Pitt

County Tournament Thursday night to take on the Farmville

Red Devils at 8:00 o'clock.

Coaches Discuss 1962 Prospects

Atlantic Coast Conference baseball coaches and Coach Jim Mallory of East Carolina were given a chance last night following the Batter Up Golf Tournament dinner to discuss their prospects for the coming season in a press conference with newsmen from most of the big North Carolina papers.

Coach Walter Rabb of the University of North Carolina, acting as moderator, told the group prior to the press conference that he wanted them to be as honest as possible, even with the other coaches present.

Good Representation

All of the ACC schools were represented at the meeting with the exception of Virginia. The heavy snowstorm which hit the Charlottesville area Monday prevented Jim West of that school from attending the meeting.

However, Coach Jack Jackson of Maryland braved the weather and drove down from College

Park yesterday morning.

Immediately following the dinner at the Country Club, Reynolds May introduced Dr. Leo

Jenkins, president of East Carolina College, to the group.

Jenkins Speaks

Jenkins told the group that

East Carolina was "definitely not apologizing" for the emphasis put on the sports program at the school. He has been criticized for the expanded program in the past.

However, Jenkins noted that no more emphasis was being put on sports than anything else at the college. He added that it was his belief that the best job possible should be done for anything undertaken. "We also emphasize music, art and the other academic programs at the college," Jenkins said. He added,

"To play, but not to play to win

is foolish."

Bad News

In commenting on the new football stadium, Jenkins said he had hoped to have "good news to report tonight," as the bids were opened yesterday. However, Jenkins had to report that the bids were about $120,000 more than anticipated.

He noted that East Carolina would get the stadium and the "original objectives" of the project will be completed. "I hope to have good news in a month or so," the college head stated.

Jenkins told the group that the new stadium when completed would be "one of the most beautiful of its size," according to the architects. "The press box facilities are also excellent,"

Jenkins said.

Unique Occasion

Coach Rabb told the group that "this meeting is a unique occasion in college baseball and we hope it will be the first of many like it in the United States.

The sport deserves the attention of the public and the press."

Rabb stated that many people feel college baseball games are too long. He noted that this opinion is probably taken from the length of time it takes to play a pro game on television.

"We want college baseball to move a little faster," he noted.

This year the ACC teams will follow "experimental speed up baseball rules" during the first round of play. The rules were drawn up by the coaches, patterned after some that have been used by Rollins College and Amhurst.

The experiment is being done at the request of the NCAA and precise records of time will be kept so that the efficiency of the plan can be studied. Rabb noted that one of the midwest conferences is also experimenting with the new rules.

'Killer' Winter Storm Still Lashing The Northeast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The remnants of a killer storm, short of snow and freezing rain but strong in battering winds and inundating tides, continued to lash the populous Northeast today.

The storm, by far the area's worst of a waning winter, was born of systems that converged from the west and south and hurled up the Eastern seaboard Tuesday, piling up to three feet of snow in some inland areas and flooding vast coastal areas.

At least 11 deaths were attributed to the storm. At least that many more were missing and hundreds had been evacuated. Damage was expected to run into the millions of dollars.

Winds at 40-50 m.p.h. with high gusts were expected to pound the area north from Virginia into central New England through most of the day.

Tides running 3 to 5 feet above normal promised little relief for the coastal areas flooded at the height of the storm. Tides accounted for a lion's share of the deaths.

At Dover, Del., five children—members of the John A. Waters family—drowned as they started to flee the flooded shoreline of Delaware Bay. A sixth child was missing and presumed drowned.

Two New Jersey couples were washed away and declared missing Tuesday night when a Coast Guard amphibious vessel evacuating them was smothered by a 10-foot wave near Beach Haven Inlet. Three other evacuees and two Coast Guard men managed to hang on.

There were other known storm dead in New Jersey, Maryland, New York and North Carolina—through drownings, electrocutions from fallen wires, highway accidents and heart failures.

Schools were closed in many places. Thousands of homes were without power for hours.

Atlantic City, N.J., and Ocean City, N.J., two famed shore resorts, were completely cut off from the mainland at the height of the storm when winds reached 75 m.p.h. and 20-foot waves poured ashore.

Part of the famed Steel Pier at Atlantic City was torn away and 2,000 feet of boardwalk was destroyed at New Jersey's Asbury Park.

Waves cut completely across Fire Island, a summer vacation mecca off Long Island's south shore.

Monmouth County, N.J., with much of its eastern section blitzed, in the word of one official, was declared a disaster area. A state of emergency was declared at Brick Township in New Jersey, and police used school buses, garbage trucks and other vehicles to evacuate 22 people and three dogs along submerged Route 35.

Rivers overflowed their banks in Wildwood, N.J., fire destroyed summer dwellings while firemen fought the blaze from rowboats afloat on flooded streets.

At Sea Isle City, N.J., five Roman Catholic nuns were evacuated from their flood-threatened convent by Coast Guard boats.

Hotels in downtown Philadelphia were filled with storm refugees. That city's suburban trolley line system was knocked out at the height of the storm.

Metropolitan New York City service was suspended for a time between New Jersey and New York, and Manhattan and Staten Island.

While New York City escaped the full force of the storm, it was lashed by winds of 60 m.p.h. that cloaked skyscrapers in rapidly melting coats of snow and ice.

Some low-lying sections were flooded by the surging tides.

A South Shore branch of the Long Island Rail Road was knocked out for two hours when high tides flooded the third rail.

The flooding Passaic River marooned 494 rush hour commuters aboard a Hudson River tube train for 3 1/2 hours.

The 40-foot yacht Guinevere out of New York was missing in stormy seas off the South Carolina coast with three persons aboard. Off the New Jersey coast, a destroyer in tow with no one aboard broke loose and ran aground.

Crews of two Texas Towers, totaling 132 men, rode out the storm off Provincetown, Mass., and Nantucket. In a 1961 storm, 28 persons died in the collapse of a similar tower off the New Jersey coast. The towers are part of the nation's offshore radar warning system.

At Providence, R.I., winds tore away part of the copper roof of city hall, leaving big sections of metal flapping in the gusts. Rhode Island got winds of hurricane force, with a peak of 84 m.p.h. at Block Island.

For residents of the storm area's southern fringe, this was a day of digging out of monstrous snow drifts and trying to keep ahead in areas where snow continued to fall.

Virginia's Shenandoah Valley reported its deepest accumulation in history, with up to two feet in Winchester and Harrisonburg. It was still snowing heavily early today in the Richmond, Va., area where 12 inches already was on the ground.

Scores of Virginia highways were blocked by snow drifts and jackknifed trucks, and some motorists were stranded for almost 24 hours. There was a 70-mile traffic jam on heavily traveled U.S. 1 Tuesday.

There was a general warming trend in the central part of the nation but unseasonable cold weather was reported in most of the Southeast. Light snow fell in sections of North Carolina and temperatures dropped into the 30s in northern Florida and freezing in some Southeast sections.

Coldest spots were in sections of the Dakotas with temperatures ranging from zero to 10 above.

Foggy and cloudy weather prevailed in the Great Lakes region and over Mississippi Valley. In the West, rains hit most of California and rain mixed with snow slicked highways throughout the Plateau region from eastern Oregon and southern Idaho across Nevada and Utah.

Town Votes Wet After 277 Years

BOXFORD, Mass. (AP)—This northeastern Massachusetts town of 2,000 went wet Tuesday for the first time in 277 years.

By a vote of 320 to 284, the town approved the sale of alcoholic beverages in taverns.

Harry L. Cole, chairman of the selectmen, said Boxford never has issued a liquor license since it was incorporated in 1685.

The first nuclear reactor on a college campus was installed at the North Carolina State College at Raleigh, in 1953.

Long, Free Ride For Ship's Pilot

NEW YORK (AP)—Harold Kaiser is getting a free trip to Europe and back as a result of the storm that lashed the Eastern seaboard Tuesday.

Because of high winds, the Sandy Hook pilot was unable to leave the outbound luxury liner United States when it passed Ambrose Lightship.

It's a 13-day round trip.

Science At Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Some hints for resetting your alarm clock, the question of whether an insect thinks, and sparks from the surface of the moon are subjects for Science at Work.

TO SLEEP, TOO LONG

Most folks can get along on only six hours sleep a night—and the same goes for spacemen, an Air Force study claims.

The study also finds some other interesting points about sleep. It's hard for anyone to perform critical jobs well when they have been working on a 24-hour-awake schedule.

When you do sleep, sleep for at least two hours. And then, for best results, don't perform monotonous jobs continually for longer than two hour periods.

Under conditions of stress, schedules should not be more severe than two hours on and two hours off.

THINKING INSECTS?

Ever wonder what a mosquito thinks as it sinks its feeding proboscis into your arm, and you raise your hand to retaliate?

Well, it's unlikely that insects have any individual consciousness, as we understand it, says Dr. R. E. Snodgrass of the Smithsonian Institution. They are apparently governed by some sort of incomprehensible and unconscious instinct—not like human or animal instinct either.

The queen or mother apparently governs insect societies through some sort of transmitted instincts, which do not leave the subjects of the colony individual freedom, Dr. Snodgrass suggests.

Science has yet to define what this insect instinct is, and how it operates, but many feel that it must exist. It is hard to imagine insects as mere machines when you scan their varied activities, Dr. Snodgrass adds. It would be like imagining automobiles driving themselves on crowded streets without ever colliding.

MOON SPARKS

For 10 days each month, while the earth's shadow shields the moon from the brilliance of the sun, a telescope with an electronic eye is watching the moon for meteorite collisions.

The electronic eye—without the human faculty of becoming bored and unwatchful at a monotonous job—is expected by scientists at Martin Marietta Corp. to pick out meteor flashes or "flares" as the fragments of space matter strike the moon at some 54,000 miles an hour.

MIRROR, MIRROR

From earth, man has for some time used the upper layers of his atmosphere as a mirror to reflect and bounce back radio signals.

Now he is planning two satellites that will beam radio signals back to earth from 600 miles above—and may tell him what radio signals he will have to use to reach the earth from planets like Mars or Venus.

Extremely high radio frequencies do penetrate the atmosphere—some fast vibrating signals, and some slower vibrating signals. The faster the rate of vibration or the frequency of the signal, the farther into the atmosphere it can penetrate before meeting its particular mirror and bouncing back to earth.

This way, scientists have been able to profile the layers or mirrors of the upper atmosphere. Now they will try—with the help of satellites—the same experiments from above.

Prosecutor Charges Late Senator Accepted A Bribe

NEW YORK (AP)—A federal prosecutor has charged that the late Sen. George H. Bender, Ohio Republican, accepted a $100,000 bribe to quash a stock fraud investigation.

The accusation was made Tuesday by Asst. U.S. Atty. Gerald Walpin as he was finishing his opening statement in the trial of 12 men and four corporate defendants in the stock fraud case.

The defendants were indicted for allegedly selling 575,000 shares of unregistered stock of the United Dye and Chemical Corp., now known as Chemoil Industries Inc., in 1953 and 1956, costing the public $5 million.

Walpin said a defendant—oil promoter Samuel S. Garfield of Clare, Mich.—paid the money to Bender. Bender at the time was special assistant to the secretary of the interior in the Eisenhower administration.

"The government will show," Walpin said, "that when the investigation commenced the defendant Garfield paid $100,000 to former Sen. George Bender, then special assistant to the secretary of the interior of the United States government, in order to get this investigation quashed."

Defense lawyer jumped up to accuse Walpin of "a false and inflammatory reflection upon a man he knows is now dead." Arguing that bribery was not an issue in the case, the lawyers called Walpin's statement "a deliberate attempt to prejudice the jury."

Judge William B. Herlands overruled defense motions for a mistrial. He noted that Walpin's statement was not evidence but merely an outline of what the government hopes to prove.

Bender, who had served several terms as a congressman from Ohio, was in the Senate from 1954 to 1956. He died last June 17 at the age of 64.

Walpin said two other defendants shared responsibility for the bribe attempt. He named them as Virgil D. Dardi of New York, president of Chemoil, and oil investor Irving Pasternak of Denver.

As outlined by the government, the case against the defendants involves intricate stock manipulations and the alleged misleading of the public on earnings and prospects of United Dye and Chemical.

If convicted, each of the defendants could face a maximum penalty of five years in prison and $10,000 in fines.

ILO Director Is Re-Elected

GENEVA (AP)—Teh governing body of the International Labor Organization formally re-elected David A. Morse as director general of the ILO Tuesday. He was unopposed.

Morse, an American, was first chosen for the post in 1948 and re-elected in 1957 for a five-year term expiring next year.

Interest Rates Picture Could Change By Spring

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—How much it will cost you to borrow and how much you'll be paid to save may change come spring.

Interest rates already are being juggled. Up till now it has been largely the saver who has been affected, as competing institutions raised the rates of what they'll pay him.

Their aim is to get more money to lend. And competition was the cause of the increase starting in January, in what they'll pay for savings. The changes so far have been largely to bring the rewards of various forms of saving more in line with each other.

But to pay the increased rates to savers, some lenders may be raising lending rates. This could come along with spring if that brings the hoped for increase in business activity and home building.

This is one of the ticklish situations facing the Kennedy administration. It wants to keep short-term interest rates high—to hold money in this country and prevent another run on our gold supply as in late 1960, when interest rates were very low here compared with European money centers.

Washington also would like to keep long-term interest rates from rising much. This is to make it easier for business to borrow to extend its activities and enlarge its plant, and to encourage home builders.

News that California savings and loan associations are set to raise their rates of payments to savers will be watched closely in Washington. West Coast interest rates already are higher than in most sections of the country. The great demand for funds there has led the West to offer higher rates to lure funds from other money centers.

What Washington fears is that if these associations pay out still more for funds, they'll start charging more on mortgages to be able to meet the outgoing payments.

That is a form of dear money the administration hopes to avoid as an obstacle in its quest for a greater rate of economic growth.

Higher mortgage costs could cool the ardor of many would-be home owners in the spring. And just how big the home building will be is already doubtful enough.

Many bankers say the threat of higher mortgage costs is quite small. They say that in most parts of the nation there are ample funds for mortgage needs and that interest rates have been soft, if anything.

They tend to regard any increased payments on savings on the West Coast as a sectional thing.

Racing Pigeons In 100-Mile Test

The first 100 mile race from Chapel Hill was flown Sunday by the Eastern Carolina Racing Pigeon Club.

Seven lofts competed with 53 birds released.

The birds were released by Billy Brann at 6:15 a.m. in partially cloudy weather with the wind northeast at 5-10 miles per hour. Weather was generally the same at all lofts.

The winning bird arrived at Hadie C. Walston's loft in 2 hours and 18 minutes with companion just behind for second place honors.

Winners in pigeon racing are determined by the birds' yards traveled per minute.

The top seven with owners, type bird and yards per minute are: Hadie C. Walston, Wilson, Blue Bar Hen, 643; Hadie C. Walston, Wilson, Blue Check Hen, 640; T. F. New Sea Tower:

Lightship's Successor

LONELY VIGIL. Off the Massachusetts coast, the Coast Guard's new light station stands at the approach to the Cape Cod Canal. It replaces the 55-year-old lightship that plied the waters in the area.

Helicopter hovers over station's flight platform, preparing to land.

For years, the Coast Guard's 24 floating lightships have helped guide the ships entering and leaving America's coastal waters. Now they'll all be eventually replaced by fixed light structures that resemble the oil-drilling rigs in the Gulf of Mexico and are slightly smaller than the so-called Texas Towers that form part of the off-shore Early Warning Continental Air Defense.

The first of the new light stations was recently put in operation off the Massachusetts coast. It replaces the 55-year-old Buzzards Bay lightship at the southerly approach to the Cape Cod Canal.

The new Buzzards Bay station stands on four steel legs seated on bedrock 268 feet below the surface. The deckhouse is 71 feet above the water. The roof of the deckhouse serves as a helicopter landing platform and there is also a boat landing near the water line. The platform is surmounted by an octagonal tower for the light. There are also a fog horn and a radio beacon.

The crew of six normally assigned to the station has spacious quarters and comfortable recreation facilities to help ease the monotony of months-long tours of duty.

Four of the six crewmen assigned to station wave goodbye to Coast Guard ship Relief.

Strong wind and high waves made transfer of visitors from crash boat to tower a risky venture.

Ensign Joseph Gilmartin, left, receives instructions about running control panel of the radio beacon equipment from James Larkin, Coast Guard district engineer.

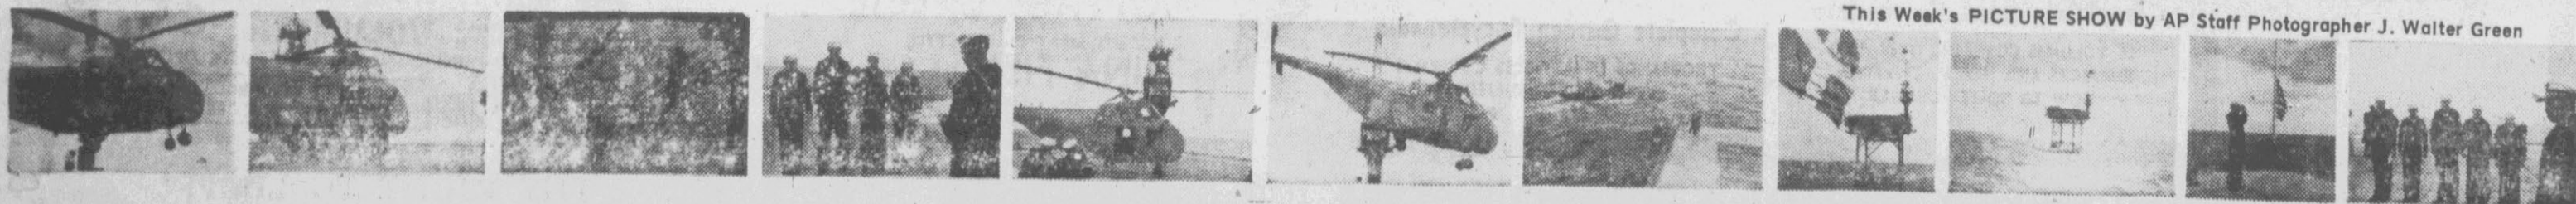

EN2 Robert Trudeau checks power plant under his care. Most machinery on tower is automatic. Tower is furnished with six-months supply of fuel and fresh water.

Crewman gets his exercise by walking narrow walkaround tower. Radio mast in back houses light, fog horn, other equipment.

Varsity Band Of ECC To Give Concert Mar. 13

The East Carolina College Varsity Band appearing in concert Tuesday, March 13, will give a program of selections ranging from Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music" to work by outstanding modern composers and including familiar and widely popular music for band.

The program will take place at 8 p.m. in the Wright auditorium and will be open to the public.

The Varsity Band is organized each school year on the campus. An ensemble of 57 student instrumentalists, this year the group has played together since the beginning of the winter quarter. The group, composed of music majors and of other student musicians who perform for pleasure, has the purpose of providing recreation and instruction for members and of presenting concerts appealing to audiences of varied musical interests.

Barry M. Shank, who joined the East Carolina faculty last September, is director of the Varsity Band. A native of Ashland, Ohio, he holds degrees from Oberlin, Ohio, Conservatory and from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, where he also taught for a year. He has taught also in high schools in Medina, Ohio; Cambridge, Mass., and Birmingham, Alabama, where he was a member of the Birmingham Symphony Orchestra.

Little Susie Is About To Lose Her Second Leg

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP)—Susie Stuck, recovering quickly from her first operation, is getting ready for the second in a series of operations to amputate both legs at the knees so that she may walk with artificial limbs.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Stuck, of suburban Battle Creek Township, were in Chicago last weekend to see her. They report she is doing fine and is as cheerful as ever. They plan to go back next weekend for another visit.

It was a week ago today that surgeons at Chicago's Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children amputated Susie's right leg at the knee. Previous surgery had indicated that the amputations were necessary to help overcome a congenital condition which prevented the muscles in the lower extremities from developing.

Susie is now embarked on perhaps a year of surgery, therapy, being fitted with artificial limbs and learning how to use them.

Relatively few people knew Susie Stuck before last week.

Now the story about the bright-eyed, 4-year-old brunette who participated in the decision to have her less amputated has gone far and wide.

Susie has friends throughout the nation. She is getting a lot of mail from people she has never known. There are cards and letters from children and adults wishing Susie well.

Susie is independent and has wanted to do things herself. Before the surgery, Susie wouldn't let her mother or father or four older brothers put her into bed or into a chair. She had a stool she could push around and with this was able to accomplish these things herself.

Although Susie doesn't know it yet, one of the members of the local Shrine Club who helped make the arrangements for Susie's care has already spoken for her first dance when she becomes a teenager.

Uncertainty Of Season Felt By TV Performers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It is of but passing interest to television viewers when Perry Como wants to lighten his working schedule, when ABC debates whether to cancel a series like "Maverick," when CBS is moving its programs around its blueprint of next season's schedule like chessmen in a giant game.

But when you're a performer in a television series, you're going through the end-of-winter anxious days as next year's plans are being made. The decisions vitally affect many careers and bread-and-butter sources.

Comedian Paul Lynde, a popular member of the Perry Como Show cast for the past season, is like so many others—in a typical March situation. Como's next-season plans are still up in the air. Lynde is co-star of a projected comedy series which is under consideration for a possible network spot. He can't make any real decisions about his life.

"Television has been very good to me," Lynde said. "The exposure has been great. But it scares me to realize how fickle those audiences can be. I've seen what happened to comedians—Red Buttons, George Gobel, Martha Raye. One season they're right on top, and the next—nothing. What happened?"

Lynde, whose own specialty is comedy character roles, believes the secret of longevity is to "move along almost blandly—not demanding too much attention, not making too much of an impression."

He'd love to work in his own series. He enjoys working on the Como Show. What he'd really like is to know what he'll be doing next fall—it's the uncertainty that is so hard to take.

NBC picked up the highest rating of the season for its "White Paper" series with its recent report on Red China.

Ambassador Dies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mariano de Yturralde y Orbegoso, 57, Spanish ambassador to the United States for 18 months, died Monday. The embassy said the career diplomat died of pulmonary complications and peritonitis which developed after an operation last Thursday.

Anthony Eden Takes Check-Up

BOSTON (AP)—British diplomat Anthony Eden arrived Tuesday to undergo a three-day checkup at New England Baptist Hospital. He was accompanied by his wife.

The 64-year-old former prime minister said he wasn't here to have doctors examine anything specific.

Eden underwent surgery here in 1953, having his gall bladder removed. He said this visit had nothing to do with that illness.

Eden, now Lord Avon, has spent the past three months in the West Indies putting the finishing touches on the second volume of his memoirs.

Grifton Calling For Project Bids

GRIFTON—Town officials decided at a special meeting last week to call for bids on water and sewer projects for Grifton, with the exception of the Lenoir County side of town.

The bids will pertain to sewer line extensions, water line extensions with the exception of the line going to the south side of Contentnea Creek, and the new well.

Mayor Wiley Gaskins said this week, "We hope to get this added water line in during the summer." He said probably work on the lift station and sewage disposal plant would be started during the summer.

Other business of the meeting primarily was concerned with parking on Queen Street and the telephone exchange.

It was decided that in the near future parallel parking will be used on the north side of Queen Street. Parking will remain diagonal on the south side of the main street.

Permission was granted Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. to hold a hearing or to get a ballot count in Grifton to ascertain whether townspeople want to be put on the Kinston exchange. However, it was noted a rate increase would follow if Grifton is put on the Kinston exchange.

Humber Aiding Lectureship

WINSTON-SALEM—Dr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville has been appointed to a special committee which is seeking to raise funds to endow a chair of philosophy and a distinguished lectureship in philosophy at Wake Forest College.

The committee, made up of alumni mostly from North Carolina, has set a goal of $45,000 and it hopes to get an additional $25,000 from an outside source.

Funds for the chair of philosophy would be used to supplement the salary of a prominent professor who would be brought to the Wake Forest campus. The position probably will be named in honor of Dr. A. C. Reid, chairman of the department.

The lectureship funds would be used to attract an outstanding speaker to the campus each year. He would give several lectures on some specific subject related to philosophy, Christianity and a major contemporary problem.

A recent statement by Dr. Reid says in part: "The seething unrest now existing in our society and the powerful evil ideological tides now flowing in our world show plainly that the policy of a Christian College demands full and wise commitment to educational standards of unqualified merit. A strong department of philosophy, whose mission is the recognition and appreciation of ethical principles and enduring values is an essential part of a great Christian college."

Over 150 Rose High Students Take Merit Scholarship Test

One hundred and fifty-five students at Junius H. Rose High School took the 1962 National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test administered at East Carolina College on Tuesday, Principal O. E. Dowd announced today.

All students who wished to be considered for Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1963 took the test at that time. Test scores of students will be reported to their schools by May 15.

Many students who do not expect to win scholarships take the test in order to learn more about their individual strengths and weaknesses in the areas measured by the test.

The qualifying test is a three-hour examination of educational development. It is the first step in the eighth annual competition for four-year Merit Scholarships provided by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation and by sponsoring corporations, foundations, associations, unions and individuals.

The number of scholarships awarded in any year depends upon the extent of sponsor participation. In 1961, 945 Merit Scholarships were awarded; 556 were provided by 133 sponsors and 389 by the Merit Corporation. There are 3,275 Merit Scholars attending 403 colleges in the current academic year.

Some 10,000 semifinalists, the highest scorers in each state, will be named early next fall. Names of semifinalists are published in a booklet which is distributed to all colleges and to other sources of financial aid for undergraduates.

An additional 25,000 students selected on a national basis, receive letters of commendation for their high performance on the qualifying test. These students are considered for special awards made through the Merit Corporation and their names and test scores are also sent to their first and second choice colleges, as are the semifinalists.

Each semifinalist will be asked to take a second examination. Those who repeat their high performance will become finalists in the Merit Program. Winners of scholarships will be selected from the finalist group on the basis of school records and recommendations, test scores, extracurricular activities, leadership ability and accomplishments outside the classroom.

Scholarship stipends are based on financial need, with the minimum award being $100 and the maximum, $1,500.

New Fire Dept. Officers Chosen

BELL ARTHUR—Raymond Webb was elected fire chief of the newly formed Bell Arthur Fire Association at a meeting of the group here Tuesday.

Named to serve with Webb were Alton Joyner, captain, and Fred Carraway, Carlton Young, Jack Tyson and H. C. Kinsale, lieutenants.

The association's Assessment Committee reported a total of $4,431 already collected from subscribers. A spokesman said many potential subscribers in the area yet remain to be contacted.

Association President Rob Jones appointed a committee to begin investigating purchase of a fire truck. Jones said the association would buy a truck "just as soon as a suitable one is located."

The association will meet again Wednesday, March 14, at 6:30 p. m. in the luncheon of the old Bell Arthur School. Fish stew and chicken stew will be on the supper's menu and all area residents have been invited.

Past District Governor Speaks To Ayden Rotary

AYDEN—Charles L. McCullers of Kinston, past district governor of Rotary, discussed the four avenues of service for Rotarians at the Ayden Rotary Club's annual Ladies' Night on March 1.

Following humorous commentaries, McCullers compared Rotary with a four-wheeled vehicle, each of the wheels representing one of the four avenues of service of the club: club service, vocational service, community service and international service.

If any one of the wheels is missing from a club, Rotary is incomplete, just as an automobile is incomplete without its four wheels, McCullers pointed out.

McCullers, introduced by President-elect, Lee Nance, was accompanied by his wife. Among the other special guests were the present district governor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ralph. Ralph represents the Belhaven-Pantego Rotary Clubs. Nance also presented Ralph to club members.

Introductions and presentations were made by Corey Stokes.
