Six-County Meeting Wednesday

Plan Organizing Planning And Development Commission

About 200 representatives from six northeastern counties are expected at Wednesday's organizational meeting of the Coastal Plain Planning & Development Commission here.

B. Alton Gardner of Ayden, chairman of the Pitt County Commissioners; W. Ivan Bissette of Grifton, representing Pitt's agricultural interests; and Sen. Robert L. Humber, representing county industrial interests, are Pitt's three official delegates to the organization session.

Scheduled for 7 p.m. in the South Cafeteria at East Carolina College, the meeting's purpose is to finalize organization of CPP&DC, including Pitt, Nash, Edgecombe, Wilson, Beaufort and Martin Counties.

Featured speaker for the meeting is Hargrove (Skipper) Bowles Jr., executive director of the N. C. Department of Conservation and Development. Also appearing at the meeting will be George Stephens Jr., Gov. Sanford's economic development assistant.

Pitt County officially joined the organizational effort March 5 when the County Commissioners approved Pitt's participation. April 2, the commissioners appointed the three county representatives.

State Sen. Dallas Alford of Rocky Mount, temporary chairman of the association, will preside at Wednesday's meeting.

Stated purpose of CPP&DC is its concern for overall economic development of the six-county area with special emphasis on agricultural and industrial development. Other areas to be emphasized are transportation, recreation, youth services, education, housing, social service and others.

Over $300,000 In New Building

Seventeen residences valued at $338,500 again paced construction during March, according to Building Inspector J. W. Wilson's report.

Total construction for which permits were issued was valued at $332,000.

In addition to the new residences there was a permit for one eight unit apartment building to cost $40,000, two duplexes costing $22,000 and one business building costing $21,500.

There was one residence addition costing $7,000, one residence alteration to cost $200 and one storage costing $3,000.

The month brought construction for which permits have been issued this fiscal year to $3,723,770.

Two heating permits were issued during the month and 47 plumbing and sewer inspections were made.

Twenty-four building permits were issued bringing to 228 the number issued during the fiscal year.

Wilson turned over $602 in fees. For the fiscal year $4,476 in fees has been collected.

Bids Received On 2 Machines

The city yesterday received two bids on an accounting machine to be used in the city clerk's office.

City Clerk William Moore said Burroughs Corp. bid $6,817.98 for a 19 column machine. National Cash Register Co. bid $7,208.75 for a 21 column machine.

A committee made up of Mayor Charles M. King, Councilman James Lee and City Clerk Moore will study the machines before the bids are accepted.

Transplanting Tobacco Is Begun In Pitt

FIRST REPORTED TRANSPLANTING—James Brown, whose farm is on the Belvoir Highway, was the first farmer to report tobacco transplanting this year. Brown began yesterday afternoon. He reported his plants were getting too big and he either had to pull them and throw them out or transplant. So with the sunny spring weather yesterday afternoon Brown began setting the plants out. Grifton School Bonds Are Sold RALEIGH—The Local Government Commission today sold Grifton school bonds in the amount of $155,000 at a net interest cost of 3.815 per cent to J. Lee Peeler and Co. of Durham. W. E. Easterling, secretary of the commission, reported.

Average maturity of the bonds is 15.19 years. Easterling noted that there were seven bids, all from bond dealers.

Sealed bids were received on the bonds at 11 a.m. at the Local Government Commission's office here.

The school building bonds—in denominations of $1,000 each—are dated May 1, 1962, and mature annually on May 1 each year beginning next year through 1988 without option of prior payment. From 1963 through 1983, $5,000 in bonds mature each year. From 1984 through 1988 the bonds will be retired at a rate of $10,000 a year.

The bonds will be payable from an unlimited tax to be levied upon all taxable property in the Grifton School District of Pitt County.

Grifton voters approved the school bond issue last year in order to complete a wing at Grifton High School. They termed their needs as "urgent" to meet growth of the school.

Piling Bids

Contractors' bids on piling for the James S. Ficklen Memorial Stadium were to be received and opened by East Carolina College officials at 2:30 p.m. today.

Bids to be submitted included the furnishing of labor, material and equipment for installation of the piling for the proposed concrete, 16,000-seat football stadium. Estimated cost of the sub-foundation project is about $33,000.

Bids totaling nearly $390,000—about $125,000 above estimated cost—for the entire stadium project were rejected March 6 and officials reconsidered specifications in efforts to determine the cause of the high initial bids.

The piling project up for bids today was a separate contract and did not include work of foundations to be constructed on the pilings.

Castro Believed To Have 50,000 Political Prisoners

WASHINGTON (AP)—Reports from Cuba indicated today that the Castro regime has 50,000 political prisoners crowded into Cuban jails.

This was one of the considerations listed by U.S. officials in discussions by Washington authorities today from President Kennedy down on Prime Minister Fidel Castro's offer to free the 1,179 Cuban invasion captives for $62 million.

The invaders who unsuccessfully attempted to topple Castro a year ago were Cuban refugees who had considerable U.S. support short of direct combat participation.

It was pointed out to newsmen here that the fate of other prisoners, who also contested Castro and in some cases may have suffered more than the invaders, should be considered too. It has been estimated that Castro jailed 200,000 persons in the wake of the invasion.

American officials said the Washington discussions have not resulted in the setting of any hard and fast U.S. policy on the invasion prisoners. Two general conclusions did emerge.

1. The U.S. government condemns as barbaric Castro's ransom offer and does not want to get into any deal with him involving a swap of money for human lives.

2. For humanitarian reasons, the U.S. government has no objection to voluntary actions by persons seeking on their own release of some or all of the captives.

The government has interposed no barrier to the proposed trip to Havana today by a delegation representing a committee of relatives of the invasion prisoners. The group hopes to negotiate with Castro.

In preliminary checking, American authorities also have uncovered no legal impediment to sending money to Cuba, even though from a foreign policy standpoint Washington wants to cut down on Castro's foreign exchange. Cuban refugees currently are able to send money to the folks back home.

Four representatives of the Cuban Families Committee were to fly from Miami to Havana today, although they have no assurance that they will be able to meet with Castro. Three of the four made a similar trip last August. They were unable to see Castro and finally left after a month in Cuba.

The committee has said it has $26 million in cash and pledges with which to begin negotiations for freedom of the prisoners.

Rural House Is Lost To Blaze

A fire Monday night completely destroyed the residence of an elderly Negro man about six miles north of Greenville, firemen reported today.

Ed Hemingway, chief of the Station-House Volunteer Fire Department, said his department arrived on the scene about 9 p.m. Monday to find the home of S. T. Morning, Route 6, Greenville, engulfed in flames.

Hemingway said Morning who lived alone was away from home at the time and consequently the fire was in an advanced stage before it was discovered.

He said the loss, which included the furnishings of the house, was not covered by insurance. An investigation, Hemingway said, indicated the fire began around the chimney of the frame house.

Morning's house is located along NC 11-US 13 about midway between the Station-House department's two trucks. Hemingway said both trucks with about 15 firemen answered the call.

Editor Notes Changes In Eastern Carolina

GOLDSBORO, N. C. (AP)—A Raleigh editor, using Goldsboro and Wayne County as examples, described today the economic and social changes affecting eastern North Carolina.

"The strong back and the willing hand are inadequate today," said Jonathan Daniels of the News and Observer. "Automation which has a sort of city sound is actually creating a greater revolution in the agricultural regions."

"The fusion of the atom is probably less important in eastern North Carolina than the disappearance of the mule and the tenant with him."

Daniels spoke at the fifth annual books luncheon sponsored by the Goldsboro Public Library and the Rotary Club. The event is a feature of Library Week.

Daniels discussed the progress of public education in the state since the days of the late Charles B. Aycock, the state's education governor at the turn of the century.

"Since then," Daniels said, "the calendar has clicked off the decades. You are the citizens of a thriving city in a prosperous time. Yet it is possible that you are more directly threatened by ignorance than your grandfathers were when nearly half the county was an excuse for despair. So much has been done. So much remains to be done. The unfortunate fact about education is that it is always an unfinished business. And that is true of the people in this room as well as of the people moving from the farms where they are not wanted to the towns where they are unemployed."

Daniels said, "I am inclined to believe that the challenge in the 1960s is greater than that of the 1880s. Our present poverty is more mobile and more decorative. The loan shark has succeeded the time merchant. A good many of us have moved from bar soap to beauty parlors. But wolves can be waiting their chances at the doors of air-conditioned ranch houses."

Final Warning To Soviet By U.S. And Britain On Enforceable Nuclear Ban

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Britain gave the Soviet Union an apparently final warning today that unless there is agreement on an enforceable nuclear test ban the new U.S. test series scheduled to start late this month will have to go forward.

In a joint statement released at the White House, the two governments called on the Soviets to reconsider their position on the inspection issue and to accept the principle of international verification.

"If they will do this," the statement said, "there is still time to reach agreement."

The declaration then continued: "But if there is no change in the present Soviet position, the governments of United States and the United Kingdom must conclude that their efforts to obtain a workable treaty to ban nuclear tests are not now successful, and the test series scheduled for the latter part of this month will have to go forward."

President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan chose the joint statement technique for stating their position, in preference to forwarding another direct appeal to Soviet Premier Khrushchev. Some U.S. officials said the time is considered too late for the personal communication method.

The statement was not presented as a Kennedy-Macmillan declaration but as one from the two governments.

The 600-word statement reviewed the latest round of U.S.-British negotiations with Russia on a treaty to ban further testing of nuclear weapons.

The negotiations began at Geneva a month ago when Secretary of State Dean Rusk met Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at the opening of the 17-nation disarmament conference.

A few days before the conference opened Kennedy had announced that unless a dependable ban on testing could be negotiated before late April the United States would begin conducting tests in the atmosphere over the central Pacific.

Today's declaration said that Gromyko—as well as other Soviet leaders—had consistently rejected the principle of international inspection as a means for policing a test ban. In the view of the Western powers a treaty without adequate verification to guarantee against cheating would be unenforceable. Therefore, the statement argued, the whole issue turns on Russia's rejection of the principle of objective international verification.

The declaration obviously was designed to place upon the Soviet government the responsibility for the resumption of the nuclear arms development race.

The Soviets last September endorsed a three-year moratorium on weapons testing with a series of about 50 atmospheric explosions. Kennedy reported later that they had made gains in the improvement of nuclear weapons.

Without a reliable prohibition on further testing, Kennedy said, the United States would also have to conduct atmospheric tests in addition to the small underground explosions it began last fall.

The U.S.-British statement said the heart of the problem now is that Soviet representatives "have rejected international inspection or verification inside the Soviet Union to determine the nature of unexplained seismic events (earth shocks) which might be and requested that the prosecution explain more specifically in the charges exactly what secrets he allegedly betrayed to the Communists. The defense also objected to a charge that Kauffman made an unauthorized trip to Berlin in 1960.

The judge turned down each of the motions without explanation. Kauffman was arrested Nov. 19 at Castle Air Force Base, California, where he was a finance officer. He was flown to Wiesbaden in December and was given a closed pretrial hearing late in January.

The Air Force reported then that Guenther Maennel, who claims to have headed the American desk in the East German intelligence service, picked Kauffman from a lineup of officers as the person with whom he dealt in East Germany in 1960.

Life imprisonment is the maximum penalty on the charges. Kauffman was educated in New York City and at the University of Wyoming. A bachelor, he has had 19 years of military service and has been awarded the Bronze Star.

nuclear tests." The two Western powers asserted that international inspection is "an essential element for assuring that a ban on nuclear tests is being observed by all parties."

During three-power negotiations on a nuclear test ban treaty beginning in 1958 the Soviets first accepted the concept of international inspection, the statement said, but more recently they have abandoned that position and rejected any kind of international verification on Soviet territory.

"The ground given," the statement said, "seems to be that existing national detection systems can give adequate protection against clandestine tests."

"In the present state of scientific instrumentation there are a great many cases in which we cannot distinguish between natural and artificial seismic disturbances."

Since many areas of the world are subject to frequent earth shocks one objective of an inspection system would be to check on tremors to make sure they were earthquakes and not secret underground nuclear tests.

Secrets - Telling Officer On Trial

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP)—Capt. Joseph P. Kauffman went on trial before a U.S. Air Force court-martial today on charges of betraying American military secrets to the Communist East German intelligence service.

The trial was recessed after 50 minutes of preliminaries while defense attorneys discussed the charges with the court.

No plea was entered at the beginning of the trial. Kauffman, a 43-year-old native of Rulland, Va., is charged with giving the East Germans information on the number and type of U.S. military planes in constant state of readiness in Greenland and data on the background and weaknesses of Air Force officers in Greenland and Japan.

Throughout the discussions after the trial was recessed, Kauffman listened as the defense, prosecution and the judge argued about a number of defense motions.

The defense held that Kauffman should have been tried in the United States, demanded that the charge alleging he conspired against his country be dropped.

Oscars To Loren, Schell, West Side Story

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Sexy Sophia Loren, stern-faced Maximilian Schell and splashy "West Side Story" go into the records as top winners of the 34th annual Academy Awards. But a sensational bit of gate-crashing, stole the show.

Italy's Miss Loren is best actress. Vienna's Schell is best actor. Hollywood's "West Side Story" is best picture, winner of a near-record 10 Oscars. New York's Stan Berman retains his title as "world champion gate crasher."

Berman, 35, a cabbie who has made a career out of penetrating the impenetrable, stalked onto the stage in mid-teletext at Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, presented—astonished—Bob Hope with an ersatz Oscar, and stalked off, leaving the film famous and a nation of onlookers flabbergasted.

The handsome Schell won for his role as the defender of Nazi war criminals in "Judgment at Nuremberg"—reaching the top despite the handicap of starting in the shadow of his famous sister, actress Maria Schell.

The voluptuous brunette Miss Loren won her Oscar in absentia for playing the earthy war refugee in the Italian production, "Two Women"—climaxing a rags-to-riches tale that began on the streets of Rome. Hers is the first Oscar to a role played in a language other than English.

It was the first time since 1939 when Britishers Vivien Leigh and Robert Donat triumphed, that two foreigners have come out on top.

"West Side Story," a musical version of "Romeo and Juliet" set among the juvenile street gangs of New York, fell just one Oscar short of equalling the record of 11 set by "Ben-Hur" in 1959. Its sweep included support awards for George Chakiris and Rita Moreno, costume design, film editing, scoring of a musical, sound, color cinematography, art and set decoration.

The show was plodding dully along, seeming especially tame after last year's dramatic win by Elizabeth Taylor—until Berman strode on stage in the midst of a presentation by Vince Edwards, television's Dr. Ben Casey, and Shelley Winters.

Berman grabbed a pint-sized Oscar and held it up and said, "This is Bob Hope's Oscar for the big broadcast of 1938. To the world's greatest comedian from the world's greatest gate crasher."

Berman, who had his picture taken in the box with President Kennedy and his family at the inaugural gala, said stage crashing is a pushover.

"All you need is a tuxedo and the appearance of looking as if you belong," he said. Miss Loren didn't come for the awards, saying she was "too tired and too scared I might lose."

Schell flew in over the weekend from Germany. Chakiris came in from Hawaii and Miss Moreno spent 18 hours on a plane flying from a movie location in the Philippines.

"I spent the whole 18 hours wondering how it would feel to ride this far and then lose and have to fly back again," said the flashing-eyed Puerto Rican performer.

Chakiris, who has been around movie studios dancing for eight years, got his Oscar in his first major film role.

As Bernardo, leader of the Puerto Rican street gang in "West Side Story," Chakiris stole the picture from its better known stars.

"I feel so wonderful, so surprised, so flabbergasted that I know I won't believe it until I read about it in the papers tomorrow," Chakiris said. Said Schell: "There are many people I can thank, but I must give a special thanks to Spencer Tracy. I played all my scenes off that finest of actors. If I looked good, it was because he made me look good."

The Oscar awards lacked the drama of last year's appearance of Liz Taylor, still tottering after a near fatal fight with pneumonia in a London hospital.

Too busy in Rome to make the traditional presentation of the best actor Oscar, the beautiful Liz nevertheless came in for a lot of ribbing from master of ceremonies Bob Hope.

Referring to her escapades with "Cleopatra" costar Richard Burton, Hope quipped: "People will go to see Cleopatra to see if the ancient Egyptians lived it up the way they do in modern Rome today."

Economical Spanish Hash

Associated Press Food Editor
WHEN YOU want to make a little meat go a long way, we think you'll thoroughly enjoy this recipe from Spanish cuisine. It's a vegetable hash that gets cozy with one pork chop.

This dish has another persuasive feature. Once the vegetables are prepared, it can be cooked quickly in a skillet. If you have an electric skillet, you find it's perfect for cooking and serving this hash. But a regular range-top deep skillet will also do well.

This Pisto Manchego, to give the dish its Spanish name, looks wonderful. Its combination of colors—the white of the onion, the scarlet of the pimientos, the green or yellow of the unpared squash, the brown of the meat—make a bright patchwork against the tomato sauce. Then for a final flourish, strips of "pancake egg" are scattered over the top to add their brightness as well as substance and flavor.

We enjoyed this dish for lunch. To accompany it, you need only crusty rolls and good butter. If you offer the Pisto Manchego at an evening meal, you'll want to add a hearty dessert. A pear cobbler made with fresh or canned pears, with baking powder biscuit dough or pie pastry, would be delicious. Or if your family has been hankering after old-fashioned apple dumplings baked in a sweet rich sauce, this may be time to serve them.

FISTO MANCHEGO

- 1 large pork chop
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 3 medium onions (cut in thin strips)
- 1 pound zucchini or summer-type yellow squash
- 1 can (4 ounces) pimientos (drained and diced)
- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- Salt and pepper

SPANISH HASH—A medley of vegetables plus one pork chop make a delicious skillet dish for lunch or supper.

Pancake Egg

Cut away fat and bone from meat; dice fine. In a large skillet cook pork chop lightly in 2 tablespoons of the olive oil and onion; cook very slowly until softened but not browned. With a slotted spoon, remove pork and onion. Add squash to skillet; cook until tender-crisp, stirring occasionally. Return pork and onion to skillet; add pimiento, tomato sauce, salt and pepper. Simmer 15 to 20 minutes. Top with Pancake Egg. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Pancake Egg: Beat 6 eggs just until yolks and whites are combined. Heat 1 tablespoon olive oil in a 10-inch skillet; add eggs. Cook gently without stirring until firm; covering toward end of cooking to dry top. Eggs on bottom of skillet should not brown. Turn out and cut in squares or rectangles to use as topping for vegetable hash.

Parents Are You To Formal With Your Children?

By HENRIETTE KISH
NEW YORK—(WNS)—A new formality is taking over in some families, and it isn't always satisfying to parents of group children.

Married children are advised to break away from parental ties. Parents are told not to force their attentions on a younger family.

This is all very well up to a point. But when it builds artificial barriers, both generations are cheated.

A widow had read many warnings about infringing on the lives of children. Her daughter had heard just as much against encouraging parental takeover.

The daughter had an illness for which the doctor prescribed several days' bed rest. Someone would have to look after the house, the meals and the children.

The mother wanted to move in for a few days, but hesitated to offer her services. The daughter needed her, but didn't want to set a precedent. Had not her friends always advised, "Never let your mother come in and run things. She will start telling you what to do all the time."

So the older woman remained at home, feeling worried and useless. The younger one had to manage without the care only a close relative could give. Both feared to cross the artificial line they had drawn.

Sometimes a formal relationship develops only on one side. Frequently the parent starts it, after listening to too much modern advice.

One woman took a friend to visit in her daughter's home. As the afternoon wore on she whispered, "I wish she would make some tea. It's cold in here." The friend suggested they ask for it. "Oh, I wouldn't. I never make any demands. That's what causes friction in families."

The other woman was amazed. "When my daughter is busy I go out in the kitchen and fix for us both. She wouldn't want her mother to stand on ceremony in her house, and I doubt that your daughter does either." A neighbor of mine was taking a drive with another neighbor. She suddenly realized they were nearing a cutoff that led to her son's house. "I would like you to see how the grandchildren have grown," she said. "But I wouldn't want to barge in on a Saturday." "Why don't we stop and telephone?" the friend suggested. "That way we won't be paying a surprise visit."

The grandmother shook her head. "I don't think I should. I never go there unless it has been planned ahead."

"Bus I thought you and your daughter-in-law and son got along so well," the neighbor persisted. "Are you always so formal with them?"

"Well, now that you put it that way, I guess this is what has happened between us. And I am probably the one who started it." The woman thought a minute.

Widow Should Face Facts About Income

By HENRIETTE KISH
NEW YORK—(WNS)—A widow has to plan to sustain her morale, and frequently her finances.

At first everyone tries to help. Family, friends, advisers, an all on hand. But after a short time she is expected to pick up the pieces of her life and go on.

One of her basic concerns is how to meet living expenses. Some women know everything will get taken care of. They have been kept informed about their husband's finances. They are aware of any special arrangements he has made.

But every widow should examine these potential sources of income.

1. Her husband's insurance. How much, and in what form, was it left? Is it cash, trust, annuity?
2. His pension plan. How much of it now applies to her?
3. Her eligibility for Social Security. Was his work covered? Is a lump-sum payment due? Is she 62, the age at which a widow presently can begin to draw benefits?

Those who administer the Social Security program urge every widow to visit her local office and find out her status under the law. Some women fail to get benefits to which they are entitled, because they don't ask.

Spring Fashions Topic For Meet

"What's New in Fashion for Spring?" This is a question in the minds of many homemakers at this time of the year. The second adult meeting at the Greene Central High School to be held Tuesday night at 7:30 will bring the answer.

Mr. Jeffries, assistant manager of the Belk-Tyler Company in Wilson, will be present to show spring fashions in dresses, shoes, and other accessories. All Greene County homemakers are invited to be present for this meeting in the home economics department.

4. Real estate or securities included in the estate. The widow may need legal or other expert advice in handling or disposing of them.

5. The possibility of carrying on her husband's business. Can she step into it and take his place? Or can she participate through a qualified person in whom she has confidence?

Will any or all of these cover regular expenses? Will they provide enough reserve for unexpected demands, such as illness? If not, she will have to consider a job. And the faster she gets started, the better.

A widow, confronted with this situation, wouldn't face up to it. She continued to live on the modest insurance left her until it was down to practically nothing. She was still a year short of the age when she could add to it with Social Security.

"I wish I had gone to work after the first few months," she told the head of an employment agency. "Now I am three years older and without the backlog of money in the bank. I didn't take a realistic enough look at my finances and my future."

Employment experts agree, however, that she is no longer typical. More and more women are going to work before their funds are low, on the theory that it is easier to keep morale up before finances get down.

Justice At Its Best

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The sudden exuberance of movements is undoubtedly due to discontent and unhappiness, particularly among older folks and professional men and women. This discontent expresses itself in many ways and may easily become explosive, particularly should this country suffer from excessive unemployment and lessening of income from small investments.

Much of the discontent is reflected by stimulated and accelerated movements which must be regarded as selfishly organized by pitchmen and money-grubbers. But that does not explain why so many fine and intelligent persons join some of the wildest movements, both Communist and Ultra-Rightist. Only discontended persons can believe much of the inaccurate and untruthful literature scattered about as evidence of schemes and plots which do not exist. Using tactics long practiced by Communists, the Ultra-Rightists smear and defame even those who are most actively anti-Communist. In order that they may spread their own line more effectively.

The hearing of General Edwin Walker was a sad display of unprepared assertions. There is no question in my mind but that the general was jobbed. If he committed a military wrong, he should have been court-martialed, in which circumstance, he would have been protected by law. At the Congressional hearing, he seemed not only unprepared but confused and his statements as reported made charges which he could not substantiate. It was an unfortunate performance by a man who had had a noble career in the service of his country. It has done the conservative cause great harm because mere assertion without substantiation leads to ridicule and renunciation.

Regarding the Left, Attorney General Robert Kennedy said in Los Angeles:

"The greatest danger is not from the Communist Party, but from the espionage committed by representatives of the Communist-bloc countries here."

It also said that the American Communist Party has "no following and has been disregarded by the American people for many years."

Such statements are true and although they seem to contradict others made by J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI, who makes the correct point that in any analysis of the Communist situation, numbers do not count, he also holds that the greatest menace of the Party is its service as an espionage force for Soviet Russia. I find that these apparent differences of view are identical but each puts the emphasis on one phase of the problem.

Out of these statements, both Leftists and Ultra-Rightists have attempted to make a great issue and to give the impression that a fundamental quarrel exists between the Attorney General and the Director of the FBI. I can discover no such quarrel or any vast difference of opinion. Only those who are looking for a fight or who would like to see one, attempt to make five out of two plus two.

The law now requires the registration of the Communist Party and the indictment of its officers who fail to obey the law. Two have been brought to the courts. The preparation of a case, so that it will hold up in the courts under the rules of evidence, takes some doing and it does not matter what you or I or everybody knows to be true, under our system of law the case must be substantiated by permissible evidence. If one case is lost, a precedent is set for other cases. Therefore, the wheels of justice grind slowly. But they do grind.

The FBI, under J. Edgar Hoover, has achieved much in the exposure of Communists. If the Department of Justice prefers to hit at those engaged in espionage rather than those devoted to agitation, it probably finds it more feasible to take cases into court that way. This does not represent a conflict of ideas or methods; it simply

Extremists Reduced To Outlawry

The Secret Army Organization in Algeria had a less than fifty-fifty chance of succeeding in its fight to "keep Algeria French", at the time of its formation.

Today there is almost no chance at all. That fact was born out in President Charles DeGaulle's overwhelming policy endorsement by the French people. Ninety per cent of the valid votes in metropolitan France Sunday were in favor of the peace agreement DeGaulle had negotiated.

Popular sympathies for the extreme rightwing faction did show indications of growth in the homeland at one point in the struggle. But European Frenchmen who had been so inclined were rudely awakened when a terrorist unit waged open battle with the French Army.

It was apparent, then, that the OAS loyalties to France were of a shadowy substance.

That, coupled with the costly futility of an unending war in Algeria, swung the tide of sentiment.

DeGaulle's personal popularity and political grip received a new stimulus in Sunday's vote; a factor that cannot be discounted in the ponderously slow move toward establishing an independent

Algeria. There is no question but that the terrorists will continue to be a thorn in the side of Peace for some time to come. Their ranks number in the many thousands; they appear to be disciplined; they are trained in the arts of war.

Add to those attributes their fanaticism and belief in the rightness of their cause, and they pose a real problem for the present and future.

But the OAS has weaknesses, too.

Indiscriminate killing of Moslems can in time inspire a general sense of revulsion among European settlers who have opposed breaking up of the French empire and dread living under Moslem rule. But such incidents as the raiding of a hospital and shooting patients therein, does the cause of the OAS no good.

Absence of an economic base and a source of dependable supply poses yet another weakness for any force waging constant war.

The killings may go on, but the OAS has been reduced to an outlaw band that can only play an ever-shrinking role in Algeria's future.

The Season Confirmed By Shout Of Umpires

In two cities, Cincinnati and Washington, Spring has unquestionably arrived.

Yes, we know. The calendar proclaimed winter's end the length and breadth of the U. S. of A. in March.

But aside from the habitual sigh of relief this inspired, wintry weather played fast and loose with large areas of the nation well past the official deadline.

Locally it has been different. Trees have been touched by a new and vivid shade of green with the sprouting of new leaves. Blooms, multi-colored petals are here, there, and everywhere; lawns are turning green again . . . there's no excuse for mistaking the season.

But today the whole country knows that winter is a thing of the past.

Yesterday the Washington Senators beat Detroit, and Cincinnati lost to the Philadelphia Phillies. Today the rest of the major league baseball teams go into action.

It's hard to find a more convincing signpost of spring from Maine to California, the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico, when umpires begin calling

"Batter Up"

DeGaulle To Be More Difficult

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON (AP) — The huge vote of confidence the French gave their president should make an Algerian solution easier, and Charles de Gaulle more difficult.

He got triple approval for what he has done and may want to do in handling Algeria, France and the French allies. He has been a frequent pain to the Allies. Now he'll be a bigger one.

Yet, if France fell under the control of antidemocratic government of the left or right it would be a disaster for the Western military alliance in Europe.

De Gaulle, 71, took over the presidency four years ago at a time of chaos and is probably the only Frenchman who could have produced an Algerian solution without civil war.

Under the old French constitution the parties, through their parliamentary seats, ran the government. They ran it into the ground, wrecking one government after another.

Between the end of the war and the time De Gaulle took over in 1958, France had had a score of governments. When he came in, De Gaulle got the French people to approve a new constitution giving the executive him, far more power.

Under this constitution, in a major case like Algeria, he can bypass Parliament and go directly to the people for approval in a national referendum. This is what he did Sunday.

He asked the people to vote yes or no on the question of approval for his plan for peace and independence in Algeria where the Moslems outnumber the Europeans, mostly French, nine to one.

That the French people wanted peace, there was no doubt. The financial cost of the war on them was $2 million a day to support a 500,000-man force in Algeria.

There was no room on the ballot for them to vote anything but yes or no. This provided De Gaulle with an excellent chance for asking approval on more than just Algeria.

Strength For Today

We Can Beat 2 Kinds Of Cancer

By EMMA CARB BIVINS Executive Secretary, Wake County Unit American Cancer Society Guest Writer

My Dad was a newspaperman, a gallant one who, at 78, put the cover on his typewriter. Thus, I have a deep affinity for men and women of the press who believe that if you "shed light, the people will find their own way."

There is a little link in my own blood, but it is mixed with Science, and I am a trained health educator, working with the American Cancer Society at what my profession refers to as the "grass roots level."

Lynn Nisbet is a gallant newspaperman. He has made a career of enlightening North Carolinians. He is also a fighter in the cancer ranks, serving on State and local Cancer Society boards. His support of cancer control has taken many forms. But above all, he himself is a witness to the battle against a bitter and relentless enemy.

Communism and Cancer: A few years ago I worked as a health educator in an Asian country close to the Soviet border. I could see, first hand, the yeast of Communism working. The little Asian nation had a strong tradition of independence and wanted to hold on to it. But the pressures of progress, and the deep desires of the people for the trappings of civilization, created a demand for monies the government did not have. Russia gladly, insistently offered resources. Although America has been there too, heroically so, the little country today is no longer the master of its own fate.

Returning from the magnificent but sobering Asian experience, I wanted in my own modest way to help strengthen American fiber against cancer of Communism. I came back to the local job in the American Cancer Society, an agency that is supported by purely voluntary giving, and whose work is done primarily by volunteers. Here, I knew, we could stress Democracy, we could build leadership, and we could educate the people to help themselves to health. (A man could choose for himself whether he wanted to have regular check-ups that might save his life from cancer, or whether he wanted to give to the cancer control cause and the research that will one day free us all from the scourge of cancer. What he did was not coerced or forced, but done of his own free will.)

Over a hundred years ago, Alexander de Toqueville, the French journalist, visited our shores to find out what made America tick. His conclusion was that the voluntary movement in America was its very backbone. I believe this, with all my heart. The American Cancer Society—free, independent, voluntary—and with a single focus, moves step by step towards its ultimate goal of conquering cancer. The history of such free, independent, voluntary movements as those against polio and tuberculosis tells us that hope of success is both logical and justified.

I believe that through the American Cancer Society, as through other voluntary health agencies, I am helping combat the malignancy of Communism as well as a disease that makes too heavy inroads among men and women desperately needed at this juncture in the affairs of the world.

To Lynn Nisbet: Lynn, no matter the temporary barriers, whether they be in the laboratories where the elusive virus is beginning to look like a cancer-causing element, or in the cities and towns where the obstinate, independent role of the American Cancer Society is questioned and sometimes condemned, your old enemy will be conquered. The will of the American people is toward success, and all of Research and Medicine are bent in the same direction. We are, the researchers say, at the beginning of the end on some major factors in the cancer puzzle.

The victory that comes will be Everyman's. Taxpayers support the National Cancer Institute which the American Cancer Society helped make possible. Hand-in-hand, the Society and the National Cancer Institute underwrite 90 per cent of all cancer research in the United States. The man who is not concerned how the money is raised, just so it is raised, pays his taxes for some of the research and also gives to the American Cancer Society. In North Carolina and throughout the land, (Cancer research is the most expensive assault on a disease in this annals of medicine. Both money and men are necessary.) The man who contributes to the Society also helps finance the education that saves lives and multiple services to the afflicted.

All the signs on the horizon are good. We are doing great things in Research right here in this State you love and serve. Who knows? Some of the important answers may come from North Carolina.

Stealthily, we are beating that old mortal enemy, cancer. With the same kind of will it takes to crush this disease, we will also conquer that ugliest of all cancers, Communism. To stop the spread of cancer, to halt the encroachments of Communism—Lynn, we volunteer our best.

One Went Home To See

The pornography controversy hit the City Council full force last Thursday night. Thus the councilmen found themselves with a real hot potato. As most people know by now, they told the PTA Council that there was nothing the city could do. The matter would have to be taken to the courts if action was desired.

There was varied comment during the nearly two hours that the discussion ran.

One man, for instance, toward the end of the discussion told the group he thought the whole thing was ridiculous and that parents should see to their children's upbringing.

"I think my two teen-agers are home where they belong," he declared. "I'm going home to see and that's where the rest of you ought to be."

Having so said, the man left his seat in the packed city courtroom and marched out the door. However, nobody else followed his lead.

One college student who spoke maintained a newspaper letter to the editor had said college students are not mature enough to read the type literature under discussion.

Other Editors Saying 'America's Queen'

(The Tulsa Tribune) Warning! This is going to be a sour one.

No one should blame Jackie Kennedy for being good-looking. Nor should anyone expect the U. S. President's wife to ride a bicycle in from the airport or slip over to the Government House reception in blue jeans. We expect her to look like a lady.

But it seems to be no accident that the crowds in Rome and the crowds in New Delhi shouted the same thing — "America's Queen" — only in different languages. Jackie has certainly put on a queenly performance, backed by her sister, Princess Radziwill, of London, wife of a one-time Polish prince.

We are informed by leased wire whenever Mrs. Kennedy changes from sleek black to stunning white, whenever pearls give way to diamonds.

Worst of all, the most inconsequential statements of the First Lady, as reported with apparent awe, Jackie's earth-shaking assertions like, "I have a little girl about your age," or "That's a pretty name, are enough to send the press corps, galloping to the nearest telegraph office.

Unemployment 'Bugs' The Nation

By ELMER ROESSNER The Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank, in a new booklet, includes price fixing, sticky wages and big government among the causes of unemployment in the midst of prosperity.

Unemployment bugs America. Production has been rising. Sales, after a lag, have been increasing. Personal income keeps going up and up. But unemployment persists.

As Leon H. Keyserling, the noted economist, said recently, "The peak of each boom thus far reached has left us with more unemployment than the peak of the previous boom."

In explaining the persistence of unemployment in prosperity, the Philly Fed said, "Unemployment increases because people — consumers, business and governments — are not buying enough."

It added that shifting demand also affected unemployment. "When consumers change spending habits, unemployment may

This brought denials that such a statement was ever made from PTA forces. After the maturity question popped up several times, councilmen pointed out that it was not pertinent to the discussion. That about ended it.

Your columnist toured Airle Gardens near Wrightsville Beach during the Azalea Festival weekend and found it to be a beautiful place indeed. The flowers in the 155-acre gardens were at their height this week, which is not always true during the festival weekend. As you ride along the twisting drives, huge banks of multi-colored azaleas loomed up suddenly among the trees and brush. The closely bordered roads suddenly widened out to reveal big garden areas carefully designed to be beautiful.

But with all of the beauty and glamor of the Azalea Festival there must be tragedy. Thus Saturday night we pulled up to the bridge leading from Carolina Beach. The red lights were blinking and the warning bell was clanging but the bridge was still in place on the roadway.

After a wait, we saw the reason for the delay. A wrecker was pulling a car off the bridge and behind it was another car. They had run head-on and were locked together. As we crossed the bridge we saw the glass and debris that is always the aftermath of a collision.

On the other side, a group was huddled around a human form wrapped in a blanket. Down the road we pulled off by an ambulance sped by with red light blazing and siren screaming. Some minutes later we pulled off again as the ambulance returned along its route.

That was Saturday night. The next day—Sunday—a bright sun shone on all the peace and solitude that millions of beautiful full blooming flowers can bring to a given area.

I then read a letter which I have in my possession from the Public Housing Administration, Washington, D. C., dated March 30, 1962, stating, "sites were reported having been selected on October 1, 1961."

After reading this letter to the Council, I presented it to Mayor Charles King to read. What we want to know now is why these areas are being referred to as tentative locations when we have the proof from the highest Federal Housing Authority that the sites were reported having been selected on October 1, 1961—a little more than six months ago!

This article failed to state that I read from the March 8, 1962, issue of the Daily Reflector an article by Mr. Alvin Taylor, Reflector City Editor, quoting Mr. Charles Howard, Chairman, Federal Housing Authority, as follows, "Under consideration as a location for the white units is 8-10 acres in an area bounded on the west by Line Ave., the south by Chestnut St., the east by Boyd Ave., and the north by Farmville Blvd. . . Peerless Performance By Champion Gate-Crasher

By DORIS KLEIN
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The "world's champion gate crasher" has turned in perhaps his most peerless performance: stealing the show before a national television audience, from the world's most accomplished scene stealers, Stan Berman, 35, a New York taxi driver gifted with more brass than 76 trombones, was the sensation of an otherwise dull Academy Awards show Monday night. He came out of nowhere to outquip quip-king Bob Hope—in the middle of the Oscar telecast.

—inscribed "to the world's greatest comedian from the world's greatest gate crasher" — and stalked off.
When emcee Hope recovered, he had this rebuttal: "What did we need Price-Waterhouse (Oscar ballot tabulators) for? What we need is a doorman."
Berman's stunt caps almost a lifetime devoted to insinuating himself into situations where he is not supposed to be. It was his second major coup in a month. He handed astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. a statue after crashing New York City's giant welcome ceremony on the steps of City Hall.
After Monday night's performance at the suburban Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, Berman told newsmen: "This time I expected to get arrested."
How did he get past the hordes of guards, with no VIP badge, no press button, no ticket?

"I just pushed my way through the crowd and walked in."
Where does a man go who does not have a ticket? To the men's room, naturally.
When the awards began, Berman said, he walked into the auditorium and took a seat—third row orchestra.
"There's always an extra seat," Berman said.
How does a $100 a week taxi driver finance his hobby?
"I just spend $35 a week on myself and save the rest for my gate crashing expenses," Berman said.
He didn't mention that he's getting a little more in expense money this time. A Hollywood correspondent for a London newspaper, disclosed Berman was offered $200 if he got onstage and held an Oscar in his hand.
What's Berman's next big gate crashing effort?
"The winner's circle at the Kentucky Derby," said Berman.

New College Union Student Board Officers For 1962-63 School Year

Officers of the College Union Student Board of East Carolina College have been announced. On Wednesday, May 2, the officers will assume their new duties for the 1962-1963 school year.
The College Union Student Board, under the direction of Cynthia Mendenhall of the college staff, stages during the school year a recreational program for students. It issues each month a calendar of events, maintains in the College Union a bulletin board of interest to students, and manages lost-and-found headquarters on the campus.

Glenn Thomas Boyd of Washington was elected president. He is currently vice president of the Sophomore Class and has served as vice president of the College Union. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie R. Boyd of 207 E. 5th Street, Washington.
Serving with President Boyd will be Chester Boone of Gates, vice president; Nettie Sue Britt of Bladenboro, corresponding secretary; Carol McCullen of Clinton, recording secretary; and Harlan McCaskill of Candor, reporter.

Jury Charged By Tape Recording

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP)—City Court Judge W. C. Little charged the jury in a civil suit by means of tape recording.
Little had to interrupt charging the jury last week because of high blood pressure.
He taped his charge in portions Sunday. With approval of attorneys for both sides, he sat on the bench Monday as the tape was played in the courtroom.

That's Right, A Free Shelter

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP)—The Edward Trosis worked evenings, weekends and through vacations to build a fallout shelter in their back yard.
They dug a huge pit, mixed mortar and placed concrete blocks. Then, the job done, they visited some other shelters on display at a downtown store.
Along with hundreds of others they filled out a card entitling them to a chance on a free shelter.
Yup. They won.

Principal Says Fired Because Of Disciplining

ANGIER, N. C. (AP) — The Angier District School Committee has listed several reasons Monday for firing high school principal B. C. Scott, and Scott said he lost his job because he disciplined the son of the committee's secretary.
The committee, headed by Dr. Grover C. Pate, reported to the Harnett County School Board that Scott's attitude and failure to cooperate with the committee created an intolerable situation.
Scott asserted his difficulties developed after he punished the son of Mrs. Ethel Duncan, secretary of the school board, for throwing paper on a school bus.
The report pictured Scott as a man with a violent temper who "gradually divorced himself completely from the people to whom he was directly responsible and has subjected the school to one crisis after another which could lead to some major catastrophe in our community."

School committeeman Kenneth Jackson resigned because of Scott's temper, the report said, and Scott's minister, the Rev. Sam Alspaugh, who succeeded Jackson, resigned for the same reason.
The report also charged that Scott expelled students for an entire school year, contrary to state law; denied civic groups the use of school buildings; disregarded state school laws and county administrative practices; failed to hold fire drills and bypassed regular channels in employing teachers.

Angier High School students continued demonstrations Monday in support of Scott by picketing the office of the Harnett County superintendent of schools in Lillington.

Smith, a science major at the college, has been promoted to the rank of Cadet A-1C. A freshman, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Smith, Rt. 1, Grimesland.

VACATION'S END

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mrs. John F. Kennedy and the Kennedy children are back at the White House after a week's vacation at Palm Beach, Fla. The First Lady and the youngsters, Caroline and John Jr., returned late Monday in the family plane after visiting the President's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy.

Special Cemetery For His Favorite Foxhounds

SHERRILL'S FORD, N.C. (AP) — Is there a Happy Hunting Ground for good foxhounds who die?

J. Albert Setzer, who has been foxhunting for 54 years, has a small cemetery on his farm where he buries his most famous dogs. Each dog has its own headstone. Setzer is famous for his pure-bred Walker foxhounds.

He has won so many trophies with his dogs that he lost count long ago. His spacious home is filled with trophies, paintings and photographs of dogs.
One of his dogs was a national champion. Others have won prizes all over the Eastern United States.
"I don't know what first got me interested in dogs," said Setzer, pointing to a picture of a small boy. "But see that picture there? That's me when I was eight years old."

The boy in the photograph had a shotgun across his shoulder and two dogs at his side. One was a foxhound.

Setzer has owned as many as 110 hounds at one time.

His wife is understanding about his love for dogs — possibly because her grandfather owned foxhounds before the Civil War.

Setzer remembers hearing former slaves talk about dogs that belonged to his wife's grandfather. "They had dogs that would run foxes or people," Setzer explained. "The slaves had to have a permit to leave home. If they left without the permit, the dogs were put on their trail."

Sr. Seph Turner, an uncle of Mrs. Setzer, brought back the first registered hounds ever seen in this section after the Civil War. But it was not hounds that brought the couple together.
"I guess I married him because he played the violin and I played the piano," Mrs. Setzer said.

Nowadays, her husband talks about another kind of music. It's the music of a pack of foxhounds baying on a hot trail in the dead of night.

Milk Producers Win Their Point

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) —Milk producers resumed deliveries to retail outlets in Rio de Janeiro Monday after withholding milk for a week from this city of 3.5 million in a campaign for higher prices. Supplies were expected to be back to normal by Wednesday.
The producers had won one point: the federal government promised to negotiate. They want 35 cruzeiros per liter—roughly 10 cents a quart. That would be an increase of about 3 cents.

MODERN SHEPHERD of the HILLS

REFRESHING. Luis washes down his noonday meal with a drink of wine from the bota, a Spanish drinking vessel made of goatskin.

LONELY SHEPHERD. Luis stands a solitary figure amid his flock of ewes and lambs in the California foothills.

For centuries, sheepherding has been one of the chief occupations of the Basques, a hardy people of the deep valleys of northern Spain and the narrow strip of southern France which is Basque country. It's a lonely job, perhaps one of the world's loneliest.

The familiar figure of the Basque with his sheep is no longer confined to his native pastures. He's now a fixture seen on the vast sheep ranches of the American West, particularly in California, Colorado and Utah. Several hundred are brought over each year to tend the flocks. They're ideal for the job, say the American sheep owners.

On one of these ranches, near Fresno, Calif., is Luis Echamandi, a burly Basque in his middle thirties. With his flock of 800 ewes and 950 lambs, and a trailer for his shelter, Luis leads a lonely life as he drives his flock to favorable feeding grounds. He cooks his own meals. He sees few people during all the weeks of his journeyings. He has two large black dogs to keep him company.

Luis, like the rest of the 800 Basque sheepherders now in this country, is under contract to stay three years. At the end of that time, he will return to his native province of Navarra in Spain, richer by far with the savings he has accumulated.

For company Luis has his two faithful black dogs who respond to his every command. Together they herd the flock the year around.

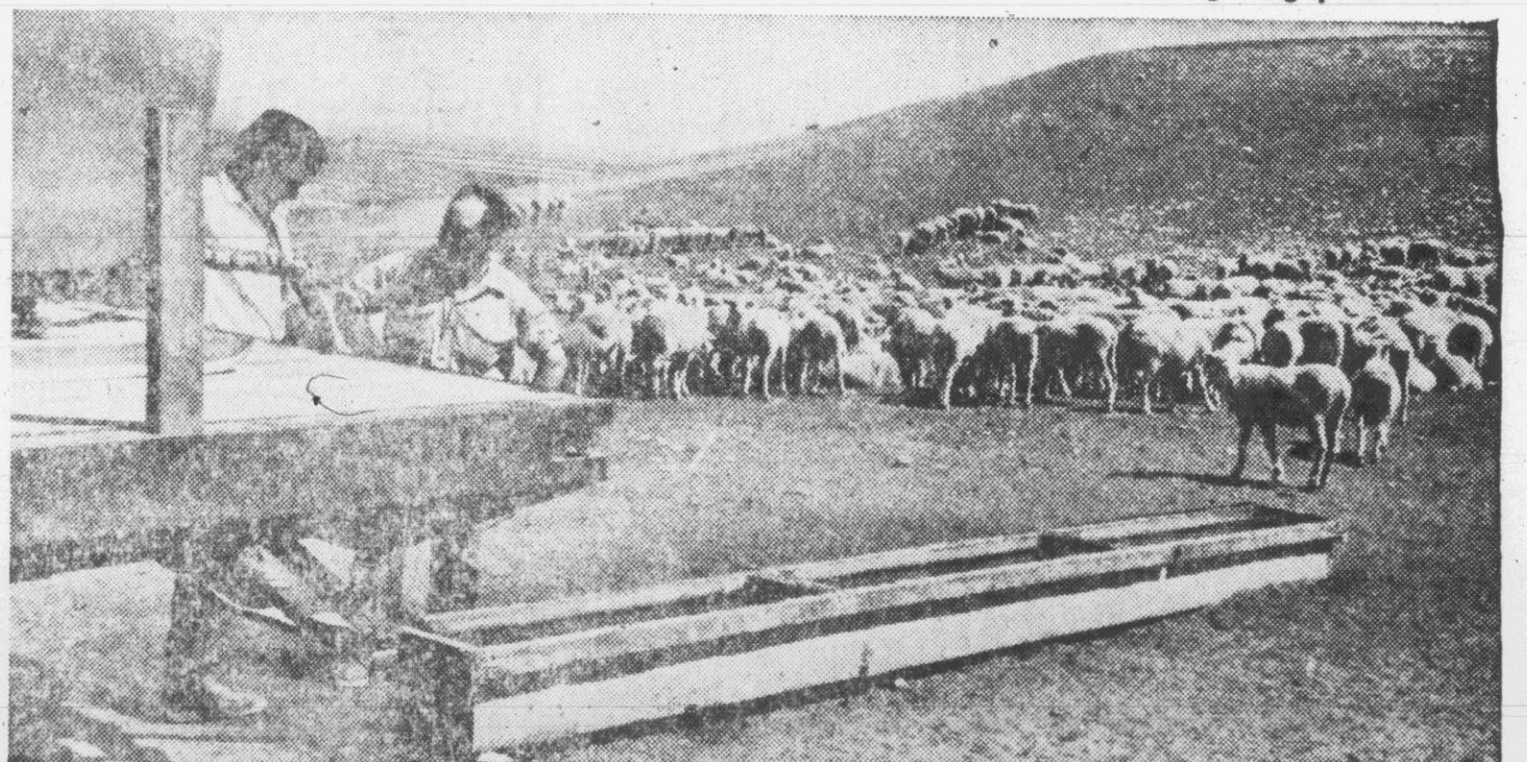

Luis and his dogs keep a watch on the flock as they graze close by his trailer home. He gets help to move the trailer when he has to find new grazing spots.

After the sheep have been driven to their resting grounds, Luis takes a few minutes to read a Spanish magazine.

He prepares and cooks his own meals in his trailer which is equipped with butane stove and refrigerator. He often cooks dishes native to Spain.

A welcome visitor to Luis' camp is Joe Elcano who drives a water and provisions truck, bringing water to the portable trough and fresh food to Luis. They chat in their native Spanish.

Question Of Adenauer's Successor Again Pops Up

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
 BONN, Germany (AP)—Who will eventually succeed Chancellor Konrad Adenauer?
 That question is popping up again while Adenauer, 86, takes a six-week rest in Italy.
 Two leading possibilities have lost part of their political stock recently—Vice Chancellor Ludwig Erhard and Defense Minister Franz Joseph Strauss.
 When Adenauer campaigned last year, he gave a half-promise he would retire before his term runs out in 1975. Lately, the situation has reached a point where many believe he will stay on.
 Adenauer's Christian Democrats last year designated Erhard as the eventual successor, although Adenauer once described Erhard as lacking the experience required for a chief of government.
 For several years, popularity polls showed Erhard's stature in the public image as the "father of the German economic miracle." However, West Germany's boom has been leveling off sharply.

 The upward reevaluation of the mark a year ago failed to produce any visible benefits for the economy. It made life more difficult for exporters. Some parts of industry hardly conceal their animosity against Erhard.
 Strauss lost some of the Chancellor's support by backing Erhard for chancellor last year. Also Christian Democrats have become aware that Strauss' clamor for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to become a fourth atomic power is embarrassingly out of place with the U.S. administration's views.

 Strauss also has become a principal figure in a parliamentary probe to find out whether he acted properly in recommending a Munich construction company to the U.S. Defense Department for a U.S. Army housing project.
 There are several other potential successors.

Dr. Heinrich Krone, minister for special affairs and a former youth leader of the pre-Hitler Catholic Center party, helped bridge the Adenauer-Erhard rift. He is one of Adenauer's most loyal supporters but seems a man of compromise rather than action.
 Heinrich von Brentano resigned as foreign minister last fall after the Free Democrats, part of the coalition government, opposed him. Brentano has since made progress as a floor leader of the Christian Democrats.

Dr. Gerhard Schroeder succeeded Brentano in the Foreign Ministry since 1953. Schroeder is credited with settling an embarrassing controversy involving Hans Kroll, Bonn's ambassador to Moscow, who was alleged to have made proposals running counter to Bonn's position.
 Much speculation has centered on Joseph-Hermann Dufhues, acting chairman of the Christian Democrat party. A hard-driving politician, he is a native of the Ruhr and would draw backing from powerful sections of industry.

Student Artist Exhibits Work

Michael Stephen Miller of Baltimore, Md., senior at East Carolina College, is now exhibiting his work as a student artist in the Kate Lewis Gallery, Rawl Building, at the college.

Sponsored by the Art Department, the show includes eight large canvases and was prepared under the direction of Dr. Wellington B. Gray, director of the department, and M. Tran Gordley of the faculty.

Miller exhibited works include both landscapes and figure and still life studies done in oil. The paintings show an abstract approach to subject matter. Among their chief characteristics are an interesting use of color and a sense of movement in design.

After attending Baltimore Junior College in 1958-1960, Miller entered East Carolina, where he is specializing in commercial art and painting.

Mr. Miller has had experience both in commercial art and in teaching. He worked for two years with a Baltimore advertising agency. During his two years at East Carolina College he did student teaching in the Rocky Mount High School and also has conducted classes at the Greenville Community Art Center and the Ayden Recreation Center.

In recognition of superior academic work, both the College Honor Roll and the Dean's List of Superior Students have included his name.

Show Series Of Foreign Films

The International Film Committee today called attention to an outstanding motion picture which it is bringing to the ECC campus.

Sir Laurence Olivier's Shakespearean drama Henry V will be presented Wednesday April 11 in Austin Auditorium at 3:30 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. The afternoon performance has been scheduled to make it possible for more students to see the film, and so as not to prevent students from attending the Spring Carnival.

Viewing of the International Film Series is open to the general public.

Other interesting films which will be presented in Austin Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. on the following dates will be:

April 18 — Black Orpheus (French). A modern adaptation of the Orpheus legend filmed in technicolor during Carnival Week in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
 May 9 — End of Innocence (Argentine). Study in the problems of growing up of a girl from an aristocratic Argentine family during the 1920's.
 May 23 — The Last Ten Days (Austrian). Powerful drama centering on Hitler during the last days of his life.

CHERRY BLOSSOM FESTIVAL QUEENS — Two pretty girls chosen by a wheel of fortune to serve as Queens of the National Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, have their gowns fitted by Frances Crupi, fitter for a local store. Kathleen Knous, left, daughter of the Colorado lieutenant governor, was chosen first when the wheel stopped on Colorado. Then the wheel slipped back and indicated that Miss Frances Elizabeth Pastore, daughter of U.S. Sen. Pastore of Rhode Island, was the winner. Officials decided to name them both Queens. Oscar Awards Show Again Is Prolonged

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
 AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Hollywood's annual big moment—its Motion Picture Academy Awards show—meandered along for more than two hours Monday night and into this morning on ABC before the television audience finally learned the names of its best picture, best actor, best actress and best supporting players.

There were many other awards of Oscar statuettes, too, of mild interest to the television audience. But those were the five that kept the yawning public up through endless "I want to express my gratitude to—" speeches. But if you like to look at stars, there were a lot of them to see, and Bob Hope managed to keep things moving as a bright master of ceremonies to the bitter end.

"West Side Story" picked up so many awards that it almost became monotonous. I wouldn't miss watching this annual show, but each year I wonder why Hollywood can't manage to honor itself with a shorter, more interesting program—and also why a great industry like motion pictures must have its big event of the year sponsored, this year by a manufacturer of home permanent waves and a tooth paste.

Edie Adams' half-hour musical special that preceded it on ABC was a bright and sparkling little program. This viewer even wished it could go on longer, a reaction rare in these days of hour-long specials which often seem padded to fill the time.

 Miss Adams sang well and in a wide range of moods. Dick Shawn was amusing in a comedy bit and Andre Previn played the piano brilliantly. It was very nice, and one hopes she'll do this sort of thing often.

Expense Account Way Of Life Getting Closer Look

By SAM DAWSON
 AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—The expense account way of life is up for a closer look these days.

Many businessmen are protesting loudly, and so are some forms of business that profit from outlays of free spenders who in the past have written off the costs on their tax returns.

But despite the protests, the Internal Revenue Service says it will scrutinize more closely the income tax returns now being filed or fretted over, and will take a primer view of just what is a reasonable cost of doing business.

The tightening of tax forgiveness of expense spending touches many facets of American life—all the way from a night on the town to taking your wife to a convention.

Involved are the folk habits of businessmen in going after sales and the financial health of such groups as the entertainment industry. But also in the picture are discussions of business ethics, and even of what the average American thinks business ethical standards really are, as apart from the pious public utterances about them.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin has put businessmen on notice that this year the taxmen will cast a fishy eye on spending that is only remotely connected with business activity. And he has warned that a wife must be closely connected with such business activity to qualify as a deduction when tabulating the costs of a trip or entertainment of a customer.

Worse for many persons will be the tax collector's insistence that better records of expense spending must be kept—more receipts or canceled checks, and fewer lump sum estimates.

As for the future, the bill now before Congress will blacklist for deduction purposes much spending where entertainment is the obvious factor.

You'll have to prove that taking a customer to the ball game or on a hunting trip is actively connected with doing business. And if you own a yacht, swimming pool or fishing camp you'll have to prove that at least 50 per cent of its use is for business purposes if you want to write it off the expense account. The same goes for club dues if use for business is only casual and rare.

And the bill contemplates putting a limit of $25 on the amount that can be deducted in any one year for business gifts to a single person. The lawmakers think that shows appreciation enough of a customer or a supplier.

The taxmen call all the changes, current or contemplated, reasonable. Many who have enjoyed an almost-free night on the town or a trip to the Caribbean or a fishing and hunting vacation in Canada are aghast at the prospect of another way of life about to fade away.

Birds' Freedom Dash Fowled Up

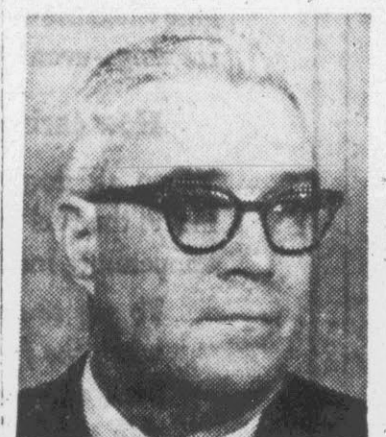

NEW YORK (AP)—A truck loaded with 400 chickens and 60 turkeys crashed into a girder in Brooklyn Monday. Four cases of the birds fell off the truck and broke open.

The birds made a dash for freedom, but it went a-fowl.

"Gobble, gobble," went the turkeys, and a lot of scrambling Brooklynites took them at their word. They grabbed the poultry and headed for the nearest stewing pot.

A headcount by the truck driver showed 10 turkeys and 25 chickens had found new homes.

Visitor Finds Cuba Not Yet A Communist Country

CITY CARAVAN — Furnaces and chimneys in a two-block-long caravan move through Philadelphia en route to pier for shipment to Europe. Workmen on mobile scaffolds raise power and other utility lines to permit the 18-foot-high furnaces to pass.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dave Roberts, travel editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, visited Cuba two years ago when Fidel Castro was riding the crest of popularity and beginning his love affair with the Soviet Union. When an old friend in Havana recently asked him to fly down for a little fishing and hunting, Roberts felt it would be a good chance to find out what had happened to the Cuban people.

During a 10-day visit in March, sanctioned by the State Department and the Castro government, Roberts got in his fishing and shooting. He also drove more than 1,300 miles through Cuba's interior and nosed around Havana. Here are some of Roberts' findings.

By DAVE ROBERTS
Distributed by The Associated Press

After a few days of roaming around the island of Cuba, I came slowly to the realization that this was not a Communist country at all—not in the way Russia is Communist. I was witnessing a race still being run, not one that already has been lost.

The race is between men and their ideas, in which the forces of communism, by "education," are trying to win the hearts of free men before the free men can effectively organize their scattered strength.

Every day the Castro regime's educational campaign is making converts, but each day new opposition is born, particularly in the rural areas where Fidel Castro once had his strength.

Firing of the sugar cane fields, Cuba's main source of income, has long been the hallmark of Cuban farmers in revolt. Castro, still deep in the hills of Oriente in 1958, pointed to the smoke clouds as portents of popular support.

But for every fire lighted in support of Castro in 1958, I saw a dozen lighted against him in 1962.

In one 54-mile stretch I saw 16 fullfledged blazes within sight of the highway as we drove home from a morning of fishing.

The 1,300 miles I drove around the country showed me hundreds of scorched fields. About one third of the loads of cane being hauled by truck toward the mills was charred black. This can still be processed into sugar, but it loses two thirds of its value.

The Castro government has decreed death for anyone found guilty of burning cane, but the culprits are not easy to catch.

With Castro's agrarian reform program, farmers are beginning to realize that instead of getting ground for themselves, they're doing the same old work but for a new boss.

Cuban leaders look upon the island's schools as a proper vehicle for political indoctrination. They are depending on schools to indoctrinate the whole nation with the Communist philosophy before mounting anti-Communist forces can topple the government.

With government appropriations for schools second only to those for military purposes, Castro has done more for education in three years than was done in the previous 25.

But while students in the public schools will absorb a little reading, writing and arithmetic, they'll also absorb full dosages in the science of communism.

Castro is depending on two factors which he hopes will smother the seeds of anti-Communist rebellion until his system of Red indoctrination has had time to conquer the hearts of the Cubans.

They are first, the military organization and second — actually part of the first—the enthusiastic, hard-working and sometimes brilliant young Cuban Communists.

Castro's strong and able military forces are made up for the most part of young men and women who share a common enthusiasm. The army polices Cuba. There are no other police forces such as we have in our cities and counties.

You can't spend an hour in the country without seeing evidence of the great need which must exist for strict and constant military control.

One of the most insistent sounds in Cuba these days is the "hup, hup, hup" of squad sergeants shouting cadence for marching troops. You move nowhere without permission of the military.

The primary purpose of these militiamen, according to the Castro government, is to be ready for the forthcoming invasion of "mercenaries" from the United States.

Castro's military machine has begun to move down the same road followed by ex-dictator Fulgencio Batista. There are arrests, tortures and executions, and they increase the number of anti-government Cubans.

Another cause of mounting unrest is the shortage of food, although it is not as bad as some outsiders believe. Shortages appear in homes and restaurants. But while the old abundance is gone, there is still enough food to maintain a fair standard of living. In some of the night clubs and government hotels you can still find hints of the old luxury.

In homes, conditions appear considerably more serious. Still, if the present rate of rationing can be continued, no one will starve.

Uncle Sam and his Western Allies get the blame for everything from chinch bugs to broken drive shafts, from dirty flour to soles shoes. How well this hate campaign is working is hard to answer.

I found no evidence of personal animosity from anyone anywhere in Cuba. I was as warmly received and as hospitably treated as I ever was.

But it has been only in recent weeks that the real chips have been down. Castro's been howling how much the United States was hurting Cuba. But Cuba had not been feeling much pain. Now things aren't going well. Fidel now has proof that Cubans are being hurt.

According to the Florida Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program, the occurrence of blackouts, or memory lapses caused by alcohol, is an early sign of alcoholism.

Disease Threat To Immigrants

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Dr. Paul Dudley White, heart consultant to former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, says that heart disease is a threat to all immigrants coming to the United States.

Dr. White told a group at Tuskegee Institute Monday that heart disease occurs in immigrants from every country. He said people from southern Japan, where heart disease is rare, have the trouble as easily as anyone else when they come to the United States.

He put the blame for heart disease, the nation's No. 1 killer, on the "soft life" which he defined as too much food, television and physical indolence.

The southern borderland of Nepal is a steamy, malarial jungle which abounds with tigers and rhinos.

Even at 50 degrees, ice can form in your carburetor and stall your engine. Read how Super Shell's anti-icer helps to fight these mysterious stalls.

How one of Super Shell's 9 ingredients fights the mysterious icing stalls that can strike when the temperature is above freezing

ODD as it may sound, you're more likely to need Super Shell's anti-icing ingredient at this time of year than in the middle of winter.

Another odd fact explains why: carburetor icing is most likely to stall your engine when the outside temperature is above freezing—even as high as 50 degrees.

How carburetors can get cold

When air flows into your carburetor, it makes the fuel evaporate. This lowers the temperature inside the carburetor.

To get some idea of what happens when the fuel evaporates, moisten the back of your hand. Notice how the skin suddenly feels quite cool? That's due to the moisture evaporating. The same thing happens inside the carburetor of your car.

Now that you know how carburetors can get cool, it's easy enough to understand how ice can form. Here's the sequence:

1. You can't have ice without having moisture first. When the temperature goes below freezing, there tends to be less moisture in the air. But when it warms up a bit—during the spring, for example—the air can pick up and hold much more moisture.

2. With your engine running, your carburetor takes in great quantities of air. At this time of year, it's very likely to be moisture-laden air.

3. The refrigerating process inside your carburetor can turn that moisture to ice almost instantly.

4. Once that ice sticks to vital carburetor parts and starts to build up to a critical level, you're an A-1 candidate for an icing stall.

How Shell's anti-icer works

Super Shell's anti-icer fights ice buildup in your carburetor by coating vital carburetor parts with a thin protective film. This film helps carburetor surfaces to shrug off the ice before it can build up to a critical level and cause you to stall.

Since you now know the facts on Super Shell's anti-icer, check the box on the right for a capsule report on the other ingredients in today's Super Shell. Then you'll know why it can give top performance all year.

Super Shell's 9 ingredients for top performance

- #1 is TCP* for power, mileage, and longer plug life.
 - #2 is Pentane mix for fast warm-ups.
 - #3 is anti-knock mix to resist all kinds of knocks.
 - #4 is gum preventive to help keep carburetors clean inside.
 - #5 is Butane for quick starts.
 - #6 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—for power.
 - #7 is an "anti-icer" to help check cold-weather stalling.
 - #8 is Alkylate to help control "high-speed knock."
 - #9 is Platformate for extra mileage.
- *Trademark for Shell's unique gasoline additive. Gasoline containing TCP is covered by U.S. Patent 2802,112.

Baseball Telecasts

At a meeting April 1, the Directors of the Carolina League, Inc., unanimously agreed the league through its member cities would exercise its rights to blackout restrictions on telecasting the Major League Game of the Week on Sundays.

The league teams are also contemplating playing all Saturday doubleheaders as afternoon-night affairs, in which event the telecasting of the Saturday Major League Games of the Week would also be subject to blackout restrictions.

The television stations in the area are bound to abide by the blackout because of the contracts made by the networks with the Major Leagues whereby the telecasting of the Major League Games of the Week will be blacked out by the TV stations located within the franchised area (50 miles) when those teams are playing at home.

This restriction affects both of the television stations in our area. A. Hartwell Campbell, president of WNCT in Greenville, and Pat Patterson, executive vice-president of WITN in Washington, both have noted that the Carolina League has offered to waive the restriction and allow the stations to televise the league's All-Star games if the broadcasting stations would pay a sum of $18,000 to the Carolina League. However, this would not help the stations because of the contracts with the networks.

The ruling is not a new one. The blackout restriction has been in effect for years, but up to this year Greenville and Washington were not bothered too much by the blackout. Until this year the only minor league team in the area was Wilson and WNCT said they had always asked permission in the past and the Wilson team had agreed to let them broadcast the major league games. Of course this was in violation of the major league contract with the network, but this was not known at the time. At any rate this does not matter now and had the restriction been put on in the past it would not have bothered the stations too much because, with just one team in the area, there would just be a few games the stations could not broadcast.

Carolina League Expanded

This year the Carolina League has expanded to eight teams including Kinston and Rocky Mount which means that three teams are within 50 miles of the Greenville and Washington stations. Campbell of the Greenville station has noted that there carry major league baseball and he was not sure about the Saturday games.

We feel it is the public that will lose when they can not watch the major league games. According to the stations it will not hurt them as far as profits are concerned or in programming. Neither of the local stations are bitter about the restrictions, but they both seem to feel that it is the public that the restrictions are hurting.

Another question that has come up is the matter of gate receipts at Carolina League games. We feel the blackout will not increase the attendance at minor league games. Those that are interested enough to attend would probably do so regardless of television. Also there are many

Yankees Start Campaign Defending Reds Defeated For 3rd Pennant In Row In Opener By Phillies

By MIKE RATHET

President Kennedy has thrown his last pitch of the season, and Willie Ford is set to fire his first today as the world champion New York Yankees start their campaign for a third consecutive American League pennant.

The President officially opened the baseball season Monday, throwing out the first ball amid the traditional pomp and circumstance in the national capital, then staying to watch Washington whip Detroit 4-1 behind Bennie Daniels' five-hitter.

The two teams take the day off today while the remainder of the league raises the curtain with Baltimore at New York, Cleveland at Boston, Los Angeles at Chicago and Minnesota at Kansas City.

In the National League, Cincinnati is at Los Angeles, Chicago at Houston, New York at St. Louis in a night game, Milwaukee at San Francisco, and Philadelphia at Pittsburgh. The defending champion Reds held their traditional NL home opener Monday, losing to Philadelphia 12-4.

Daniels went the distance in his opening-day assignment before the crowd of 44,383 that jammed the Senators' new $20-million District of Columbia Stadium. It was the largest crowd ever to see a baseball game in Washington.

Daniels struck out seven and walked only two while driving in one of the Senators' runs. The Tigers scored when Al Kaline hit into a force play following singles by Jake Wood and Bill Bruton. Bob Johnson led a 13-hit attack with a two-run homer in the fourth inning off Don Mossi that put the Senators ahead for good, plus two singles.

Ford, the little southpaw who won the Cy Young as the outstanding pitcher in the majors last season after compiling a 25-4 record, will be backed by the powerful Yankee attack that numbers Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle among its homer hammerers. Shortstop Tom Tresh, filling the post vacated when Tony Kubek went into the Army, is the lone new face in the starting lineup.

Left-hander Billy Hoef (7-4) will start for the Orioles, who'll have rookie sensation John (Boog) Powell in left field, trade acquisition Johnny Temple at second and Jerry Adair at shortstop in place of Ron Hansen, like Kubek a member of Uncle Sam's forces.

New Cleveland skipper Mel McGaha will unveil rookies Ty Cline and Al Luplow in the outfield and send Dick Donovan (10-10 at Washington) to the mound against the Red Sox. Boston will go with Don Schwall (15-7), rookie of the year in 1961, and start newly acquired Ed Bressoud at shortstop.

The White Sox, returning to the go-go formula that won the pennant in 1959, will have trade acquisitions Joe Cunningham and Charlie Smith at first and third base, respectively. Juan Pizarro (14-7) will handle the pitching facing the Angels' Eli Grba (11-13).

Ed Rakow (2-8) is tapped for the A's starting assignment and will oppose Jack Kralick (13-11). The Twins, still counting on the potent bats of Harmon Killebrew, Bob Allison and Jim Lemon, will go with an almost completely remade infield.

Cincinnati's defending champion Reds, first National League team to occupy 10th place since the turn of the century, will try to climb out today as the expanded circuit gets its 87th season rolling with a full program of second day openers.

The Reds, as original franchise holders in the NL, traditionally are accorded the privilege of officially opening the season at home each year. They raised the curtain for the 76th time Monday and were unceremoniously drubbed 12-4 by the Philadelphia Phillies.

They'll be trying to register on the other side of the ledger when they invade Los Angeles and help the Dodgers get under way before an expected sellout crowd of 56,000 in the new $18-million Dodger stadium.

Houston and New York will make their debuts under different circumstances, the Colts opening before the home folks against Chicago while the Mets are at St. Louis for a night game.

Milwaukee is at San Francisco and Philadelphia at Pittsburgh in the other openers as the National League unveils a 10-club circuit playing a 162-game schedule for the first time in its venerable history.

Four games are on tap in the American League, which opened Monday with President Kennedy throwing out the first ball and watching Washington beat Detroit

4-1. Baltimore is at New York, Cleveland at Boston, Los Angeles at Chicago and Minnesota at Kansas City.

The Reds sent 21-game winner Joey Jay against the Phillies Monday and the ace of the staff lasted 2-13 innings before leaving with the score 5-0, including a homer by Clay Dalrymple in the second.

The Reds are expected to come back today with left-hander Jim O'Toole, 19-9 last season when Cincinnati won its first National League pennant in 20 years. Southpaw Johnny Podres (18-5 last year) will oppose him for the Dodgers, who launched their new ball park in Chavez Ravine Monday with a dedication program.

The Colt's send their cast of hand-me-downs front and center in a temporary stadium that will serve as home until a new domed ball park is completed. The Cubs will start with four rookies in the line-up—Lou Brock in centerfield, Ken Hubbs at second, Elder White at short and Cuno Barragan catching Don Cardwell (15-14). Bobby Shantz (6-3) will open for Harry Craft's Colts.

The Mets open with a host of old faces—Richie Ashburn, Charlie Neal, Gil Hodges, Gus Bell and Frank Thomas, pitcher Roster Craig (5-6)—and Manager Casey Stengel. Stan (The Man) Musial, operating in the No. 2 batting position for the Cardinals, can set another league record if he scores two runs. Larry Jackson (14-11) will be the pitcher.

Warren Spahn, (21-13), like Musial a member of the over-40 club, will be gunning for victory No. 310 when he takes the mound for the Braves at San Francisco, facing a Giant batting order led by NL home run king Orlando Cepeda.

The league-leading Phils will send Jim Owens (5-10) against Bob Friend (14-19) at Pittsburgh.

Golf Has Now Moved Into The Palmer Era

By MERCER BAILEY

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Golf is in its Palmer era.

Once it was the Jones and Hagen era.

Then it was the Snead and Hogan era.

Now it is the Palmer era. It's Arnold Palmer's all alone. No one shares it with him.

In any major tournament today, Arnold Palmer, the onetime steelworker from Latrobe, Pa., must be given the favorite's role.

What makes him greater than the rest is his tenacity, aggressiveness and refusal to concede defeat.

Twice in two days, en route to his third Masters golf championship, Palmer proved no one can equal his ability to rally sensationally when it appears all hope is gone.

In Monday's playoff with Gary Player and Dow Finsterwald, Palmer trailed Player by three shots after nine holes.

Then that characteristic Palmer comeback began unfolding. He birdied No. 10 with a 30-foot putt. Player took a bogey. On No. 11, Palmer got a birdie deuce with a tee shot 3 1/2 feet from the cup.

Again Player took a bogey and Palmer was ahead by one-shot. Palmer collected two more birdies on the next two holes and it was just a question of how big his victory margin would be. Palmer wound up with a 4-under-par 68. Player had a 71 and Finsterwald, who never got started, finished with a 77. They had finished the 72-hole route deadlocked at 280. Par for the 6,990-yard Augusta National course is 36-72.

Palmer's $20,000 first prize vaulted him ahead of Doug Ford and Cary Middlecoff to the top of the PGA official money winning list for the past 11 years, since official records first were kept.

Palmer has collected $298,738 in official PGA purses. Ford $298,037 and Middlecoff $283,232 although Arnold has been a pro only since November 1914.

Player, who failed in his bid to become the first Masters champion to successfully defend his title, won $12,000 second money and Finsterwald pocketed $8,000.

Palmer's rally, which electrified a milling gallery of about 18,000 who stretched and craned and raced from one vantage point to the next, was his second in a row.

Leading Finsterwald by two shots and Player by four at the start of the fourth round Sunday, Palmer skidded to a 39 on the front nine, took a double bogey-6 on No. 10 and coming into 16 needed two birdies on the last three holes to gain a tie. He got them.

Pirates Send 3 To N.C. Minors

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates sent three players to North Carolina minor league clubs as part of 14 players sold or optioned to reduce the team's roster before today's opener.

Infielder Duncan Campbell was sold outright to the Pirates' Asheville, N. C., farm club of the Class A Sally League.

Hunsaker Remains In Critical Condition

BLUEFIELD, W. Va. (AP)—Tunney Hunsaker, a veteran heavyweight, remained in critical condition today while steps were taken to:

- Investigate circumstances surrounding the fight in which he suffered a severe brain injury, and
 - Launch a fund-raising drive to meet the fighter's mounting medical and hospital costs.
- Gov. W. W. Barron announced Monday that he would ask the State Athletic Commission to give him a report on the fight. Barron said he was particularly interested in the kind of physical examinations given fighters in West Virginia.

Pender Anxious To Clear Title

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP)—Paul Pender, who regained the title and England's Terry Downes each earned $44,670 from their middleweight championship fight. The monetary benefits from the bout for the title recognized in Europe, Massachusetts and New York were revealed today as Pender sought rest and Downes considered visiting relatives in Baltimore.

Pender recaptured the crown he lost to Downes in London last summer via a unanimous 15-round decision Saturday night. Pender, 31, is anxious to arrange the title-clearing match with National Boxing Association middleweight king Gene Fullmer for June. "I'm going to take it easy for a month," Pender repeated from seclusion. "I'm hopeful we can sign this fight with Fullmer as soon as possible. "I don't care where it is held. I'll fight where the money is the best. But I want to have the fight in June."

INJURED BOXER — Heavyweight Tunney Hunsaker was reported in grave condition after surgery for a brain injury suffered in a fight in Beckley, W. Va. This picture of Hunsaker was made in 1960 after a workout for a fight with Cassius Clay in Louisville, Ky. (AP Wirephoto)

George McLaughlin, a Beckley sports writer, was named chairman of a committee to solicit funds in Hunsaker's behalf. McLaughlin said donations would be sought from throughout the state. He said an amateur boxing card would be held in Beckley later this month with the proceeds to go to Hunsaker.

The 32-year-old fighter remained in an oxygen tent following two brain operations. Dr. E. L. Gage reported that there was little change in his condition. Hunsaker was knocked out in the 10th round of a fight with Joe Shelton of Cleveland at nearby Beckley last Friday night. He collapsed while being helped to his corner and was rushed to the hospital here.

N. J. Installs Boxing Rules

TRENTON, N. J. (AP)—Boxing rules designed to prevent serious injuries or death will take effect in New Jersey on a trial basis next month. Rules changes were announced after a meeting Monday between Gov. Richard J. Hughes and Joseph F. Walker, the state athletic commissioner.

- The changes provide:
- That 10-ounce gloves be used in all bouts. Previously, 8-ounce gloves were used in non-championship fights and 6-ounce gloves in title events.
 - That the rest period between rounds be increased to 90 seconds, instead of 60.
 - That each boxer be examined between rounds. The present practice is for a doctor to examine a fighter only when the need is apparent or the referee requests it. Hughes said the changes would be invoked after a 30-day waiting period.

MEMORIAL TROPHY WINNER — Linda Martin of Bethel, riding Silver Temptation, is shown receiving the Roland A. Mayo Memorial Challenge Trophy from Susan Willis of Greenville at Sunday's Greenville Saddle Club Horse Show. The Memorial trophy is presented by the saddle club to the champion five-gaited horse in the show. The prize was one of five challenge trophies presented at the local show for the first time this year. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

persons in the Washington and Greenville viewing area who are too far away from any of the minor league cities to attend a game and who are unable to pick up a television station that is carrying a major league game. This deprives some sports fans of seeing any baseball. The question of television affecting gate receipts is an old one and no doubt, broadcasting of some sports events will hinder the gate. In this particular case, we feel it will not help or hurt attendance at minor league games. Television has been blamed for a decline in reading by Americans and many other things, but it also has some good points. Before television, radio was subjected to the same criticisms.

Palmer's Longtime Caddy Comments On Strong Boy

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Arnold Palmer's longtime caddy says it's easy to tell when the Pennsylvania strong boy is going to make one of his now fabled charges on the golf course. "He just jerks at his glove, tugs at his trouser belt and starts walking fast," Nathaniel (High Man) Avery said Monday. "When Mr. Arnold do that, everybody better watch out. He's gonna stampee anything in his way."

High Man, a skinny, 6-foot Negro, who has toted Palmer's clubs in all eight of the Masters in which Arnold has played, said the Latrobe, Pa., pro is not a demanding or unreasonably difficult boss. "Anybody who can't get along with Mr. Arnold can't get along with anybody," added High Man.

who wore the "No. 13" on his green and white overalls. "I should know. I been almost in his pocket on every hole."
High Man said Palmer frequently asks his advice on what club to use but usually winds up making the final decision himself. "Sometimes he go with my advice—and it better be right," the caddy said. "If I misclub him, he don't chastise me. He just look a little mean, and I feel like going through the ground. But he is a great man."
High Man said he suggested the wrong club to Palmer Sunday on the fourth day of the tournament and caused Arnold to take a double-bogey 6 which almost cost him the championship. "After that hole, Mr. Arnold look at me and say, 'Well, High Man, we lost the tournament there.'"
"I say: 'We ain't lost nothing, Mr. Arnold, we got eight more holes to play.' He don't say nothing. He just look up in the sky like he is wishing for some miracle to come down."
"And the miracle come down—like somebody was answering him."

South Viet Nam Hacking Apart Red Pockets In Unique Kind Of Strategy

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—South Viet Nam, on the offensive, has begun the job of hacking apart great pockets of Communist resistance dotting the country.

During the past month, the government, supported by U.S. advisers, equipment and transportation, has been hurling forces of up to regimental strength deep into strongholds of the Viet Cong guerrillas.

The Communists are fighting back, and casualties on both sides have sometimes reached 1,000 in a week. The long war is apparently moving toward a showdown—but the end could be years away.

A key problem is finding the Viet Cong in large enough groups to make massive operations fruitful. Certain sections are almost wholly dominated by the Viet Cong, but even in them the problem of finding large units is acute. Improving intelligence facilities have helped. So has the new mobility U.S. helicopters are giving Vietnamese troops.

"The Vietnamese Communists have invented a kind of war that may be unique in history," one U.S. official said.

"Merely to call it a guerrilla war does not fully describe it. They are careful to attack and destroy only the things they feel vital to their cause, leaving the countryside superficially at peace."

Estimates of Viet Cong strength and location depend partly on definition. The regular, full-time guerrillas are frequently shifted. Intelligence estimates of total numerical strength vary widely, but well-informed U.S. observers feel the Viet Cong probably has 16,000 to 18,000 hard-core fighters plus many additional part-time supporters.

Most of their strength is concentrated in the southern third of the country, particularly in five large pockets. One of the most stubborn begins about 35 miles north of Saigon. This heavily forested zone is virtually free of government control. It is referred to by the Viet Cong as a liberated area.

Another stronghold is the marshy region comprising several provinces along the Cambodian frontier.

The Viet Cong apparently is paying no attention to the Cambodian border. It flees across the line whenever pursued. Government forces and aircraft have occasionally crossed by accident, adding tension between neutralist Cambodia and its pro-Western neighbor.

The largest Communist stronghold in the south is at the tip of the country—a wilderness of jungle, mud flats and waterways. The principal town, Ca Mau, and a few fortified villages are fairly free from Communist infiltration. Most of the countryside is securely in Communist hands.

In the north, there are two mountainous pockets inland from the China Sea where heavy artillery bombardments, frequent mopping-up operations and air strikes have failed to drive out the Viet Cong.

While most of the country nominally under government control, the Viet Cong moves freely in large marginal areas. The jungle-covered mountains of central Viet Nam are believed to serve as an important infiltration route for Communist cadres moving in from Laos.

Virtually the entire 900-mile frontier joining South Viet Nam to Laos and Cambodia is believed to be infiltrated at least part of the time.

Bolivia Enjoying A Political Stability, But Economy Fails

By THOMAS J. STONE
LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—This South American country has been free of revolutions for 10 years. Despite the stability of one-party rule, Bolivia seems as much on the skids as it did when the National Revolutionary party ousted a military regime in an upheaval that began 10 years ago today.

It has taken $225 million in U.S. funds to keep Bolivia alive since 1952. Per capita income for the nation's 3.5 million people is $95 a year, although the Bolivian Andes yield about 15 per cent of the world's tin.

The ruling party, called the MNR, was founded during World War II by Nazi and Communist sympathizers. It seems likely to hold power for many years to come.

The MNR stamps out any outside political opposition if it gets out of line or shows signs of gaining popular strength.

On the heels of the 1952 revolution, thousands of Bolivians in all walks of life fled to neighboring countries to live in exile.

Foes of the party were captured. Some were killed and others tortured. One man who wrote a book critical of the regime said later he was forced to eat it page by page.

The party is leftist but of varying degrees, and therein lies the cause of almost constant feuding and bickering within. Communists are well entrenched, especially in the lower echelons of the government.

The leaders of the party in 1952 are the leaders today: President Victor Paz Estenssoro; Vice President Juan Lechin, leader of the miners; and former President Herman Siles Zuazo, now ambassador to Uruguay.

When the MNR came to power it proposed universal suffrage, and ambitious land, social and educational reforms. The army was dissolved and arms handed out freely to the peasants.

Then, as now, the landlocked country high in the Andes, was one of the hemisphere's most backward countries.

Without a seaport, it could do little foreign trade. Although almost twice the size of Texas, it is mostly barren and only a tiny portion of land is under cultivation.

It has two million Indians, almost all of them illiterate and downtrodden since the 16th cen-

Explosives Plant Blast Kills 16

PONT-SAINT-ESPRIT, France (AP)—Sixteen persons were killed and 13 were injured in the explosions and fire that wrecked an explosives plant Monday at St. Just d'Ardeche, four miles from this southern French town.

Officials said about 75 civilian workers and 20 soldiers were at the plant when the first explosion set off a chain reaction. The plant produced explosives for farm blasting and munitions for the French army.

Escaped Prisoner Riding An Axle

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—A 5-foot-6 prisoner rode out of Monroe County penitentiary on the rear axle of a bakery truck Monday, penitentiary officials said. He was recaptured a few hours after his escape while trying to thumb a second ride.

Officials said the prisoner, Milton Fehlman, 32, of Fredonia, was serving a one-year term for unlawful entry.

ture when their Inca forefathers were enslaved by the Spanish Conquistadors.

One of the first major acts of the MNR was to nationalize the tin mines, operated then by the great tin barons—Patino, Hochschild and Aramayo.

Under private management, the mines paid off. The government shared in profits and collected heavy taxes. Nationalization of the mines was a grave mistake, which the party now admits.

Skilled foreign engineers and technicians quit. Equipment wore out. Efficiency dropped. Production costs went up. Control of the 28,000 miners fell into the hands of Communists. There were strikes.

In 1952 the rate of exchange was 190 bolivianos to $1. Now, it is 12,000 bolivianos to $1. That is one of the worst cases of inflation in the world.

Business is generally bad. Gold reserves are near zero. Cost of living is up.

Aid from abroad is trying to help Bolivia put its mining industry back on its feet through a three-year program launched in 1961.

CARTER A. VAUGHAN'S Exciting Novel of Revolutionary Romance SCOUNDRELS' BRIGADE

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Waiting for her in a highly favored London tavern, young Hugh Spencer thanked his stars for attracting the attention of beautiful Sara Dean. During the two weeks he had been enabled to be in her company every evening he had fallen in love, and he was impatient for the return of her mother from Bath to ask Sara's hand in marriage. He could not go to Bath to seek Lady Dean for she was in the Prince of Wales' entourage.

When Sara joined Hugh in the tavern she told him of her nervousness about carrying a large sum of currency she had been given by her lawyer and asked Hugh to be its safekeeper until she returned home. Obliging gallantly, Hugh placed the bills in his wallet. Their conversation had turned to his experiences as a lieutenant in the King's Dragoons in the colonies when a royal bailiff appeared in the tavern, centered his attention on Hugh and announced: "In the name of King George III, I place you under arrest."

CHAPTER 2

Hugh Spencer reached for his sword but changed his mind and let the bailiff's two deputies search him. Sara's mortification would be even worse if he became embroiled in a fight.

The deputies removed his belongings from his pockets and spread them out on the table. His captors looked disappointed, but the bailiff drew his breath when one of his assistants took the wallet from Hugh's inner pocket.

"Ah, that's what we want!"

The smaller of the deputies removed the money and counted it carefully. There were thirty-five ten-pound notes, and several of smaller denomination, which belonged to Hugh himself.

"Make a list, Wiggins, make a proper list," his superior told him, and taking one of the ten-pound notes, studied it carefully.

"Be careful with that money," Hugh said. "It belongs to the lady, not to me."

"What lady?"

Glancing across the table in bewilderment, Hugh saw that Sara had slipped away. He couldn't blame her for wanting to avoid the limelight of notoriety, and hoped the situation would be clarified quickly so he could find her and offer his apologies.

In the meantime, he had no intention of allowing her good name to become involved in the humiliating farce. "The lady is a friend," he said.

The bailiff laughed coarsely. "Met her in Newgate prison, I'll venture," he said, and was pleased when several members of the crowd smiled appreciatively.

Hugh hoped that Sara was out of earshot. Had she been present he would have felt it necessary to vindicate her honor by trouncing the vulgar bailiff, even though the courts forced anyone who attacked a crown official to pay a heavy fine.

The more intelligent of the deputies finished making his list of the money he had taken, handed it to his superior, and gazed curiously at the bill that the bailiff was holding in his thick fingers.

"If it or ain't it?"

"I make the arrests, but I don't judge the evidence," was the crushing retort. "Do what you're told, don't try to rise above your station."

His assistant continued to scrutinize the ten-pound note. "It looks real to me. Maybe Sir Harry made a mistake."

The bailiff's cheeks puffed indignantly. "Sir Harry has never been wrong in twenty years." "No offense meant, I'm sure," Wiggins realized he had aroused his master's wrath, and tried to back away.

The bailiff reached out with his free hand, caught the lapel of the man's threadbare coat between his thumb and forefinger, and, still speaking for the benefit of the Red Roan's diners, thundered richly. "There are experts who know these things at a glance. They protect you, Wiggins, and hundreds of other innocents like you. Spencer and all the other scoundrels of his sort are caught sooner or later."

Hugh's patience was exhausted. "I suspect that someone hired you to play a prank on me, but I'm not amused by schoolboy tricks. Be good enough to return my property, and take your leave."

"The property we've confiscated is evidence," the bailiff replied ponderously, "and it can't be returned to you without an order signed by a crown magistrate. As for taking our leave, we'll go quick enough, but you're coming with us. Maybe you'll meet that lady at Newgate." He signaled to his assistants, who took hold of Hugh's arms.

"You can't arrest me without a warrant."

"Is that what you want, eh?" The bailiff reached into the pocket of his coat and pulled out a sheet of paper which he unfolded triumphantly. "Here you are, then. An order for the arrest of Hugh Spencer, Esquire, signed personally by Sir Harry Gresham-Aston, royal prosecutor-general of the city of London."

Hugh insisted on looking at the document, and the official government seal, the blob of wax bearing the imprint of a lion and unicorn, and the scarlet ribbons hanging from the paper convinced him that the warrant was genuine. All that bothered him, however, was the knowledge that his pleasant dinner engagement with Sara had been interrupted.

He had committed no crime, and felt certain that he was the innocent victim of a clerk's error, but he wanted to know why he had been arrested. "What is the charge that had been lodged against me?" he asked loftily.

"You are accused of high treason," the bailiff replied in a loud voice.

Hugh was shocked. "What am I supposed to have done?"

"You know right well, you rogue. Under the Revised Money Act of 1769, Parliament decreed that all makers of counterfeit notes are traitors. Take him, jads."

The deputies, holding Hugh's arms tightly, led him out of the booth, and the Red Roan's patrons stared at him in angry distrust.

"I hope," one of them said distinctly, "that they hang him!"

Newgate prison was old, dilapidated, and crowded; its staff had become callous to human suffering, food was inadequate and un-

Bashful Birds Helping Species

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—Crip and Josephine are two bashful whooping cranes determined to do something about preserving their nearly extinct species.

Their fifth offspring cracked through its egg Sunday at Audubon Zoo to increase the world population of the rare bird to 48.

Crip and Josephine are taking turns incubating a second egg, which zoo director George Douglass believes will hatch by the end of the week.

The two adult whooping cranes, who are so shy Douglass keeps them away from public view, hatched the first of their species ever born in captivity four years ago. Since then, Crip and Josephine have produced two other cranes, one 3 years old and the other 1. The parents are the only whoopers to ever produce in captivity.

Josephine got off the nest and helped push her baby out of the egg when the shell cracked.

The rusty-colored baby crane is about twice the size of a newly hatched chick.

"It's a very healthy bird," said Douglass, who put the baby under a 24-hour watch. "We are hopeful it won't catch aspergeriosis."

He said there is no known cure for the disease—a lung fungus caused by an airborne germ. It doesn't affect domestic fowl and many wild birds, but Audubon lost two cranes from the disease in the past.

"We leave the incubation of the eggs up to mother nature but we are doing everything possible to safeguard the birds," Douglass said.

Asked about the sex of the new bird, Douglass replied, "We have not learned how to determine that yet—not even with adults."

Here's real proof of reliability—not just claims. It's your assurance that Kelvinator will wash dependably year after year after year.

And you don't sacrifice a thing to get it. In fact, you're ahead. Kelvinator Deep Turbulent Washing Action is so thorough, pre-scrubbing by hand is completely unnecessary... so safe it can even wash a paper napkin without tearing it.

You get all these features of higher-priced washers with Kelvinator!

Only $1.94 Per Week

Automatic pre-scrubbing • Deep Turbulent washing and rinsing • Choice of wash and rinse water temperatures • Normal and small load cycles • Special wash-wear cycle • Lint filter-bleach dispenser • No gears to cause trouble.

* Kelvinator will repair or provide a new part for any defective part during the first year after purchase, and for any defective drive mechanism part during the next four years. These are the drive mechanism parts which are covered for five years: agitator boot, drive and crankshaft, seal assembly, washer and pad assembly, boot seal, tube and seal assembly, pulley and bearing assembly, right- or left-hand spring, thrust washer, lower bearing, ball bearing, and bottom housing assembly. Replacement and service call labor and transportation of the parts, if any, are the responsibility of the customer.

Here's why Kelvinator can offer such a guarantee.

Kelvinator doesn't waste money making costly annual model changes—mere "change for change's sake." Instead, Kelvinator concentrates on making appliances more useful, more dependable and more economical to operate. Just as soon as improvements are tested and approved, they are introduced. Because of this policy of Constant Basic Improvement, you are always sure of the newest improvements and greatest reliability with Kelvinator.

Greenville Man Is Elected To NG Association Office

Sgt. Mayo E. Allen, administrative supply technician for one of Greenville's National Guard batteries, was elected one of three vice presidents of the N. C. National Guard Association during its weekend convention in Durham.

SGT. MAYO ALLEN

Elected Saturday, Sgt. Allen moved up within the Association's ranks from a post during 1961-62 as chairman of the Membership Committee. Re-elected to head the association again was Maj. Gen. Weston H. Willis of Jacksonville.

As vice president, Sgt. Allen will meet with other members of the Executive Council of the association that convenes for several called meetings during the year.

Sgt. Allen, AST for Battery A, 4th Howitzer Battalion of the 13th Artillery, was among a 14-man delegation to the Durham convention representing Batteries A and B of Greenville.

Butts. All officers of the association for 1962-63 were elected when a Saturday morning session accepted unanimously the report of the Nominating Committee.

With about 500 delegates representing the approximately 6,500 members of the association, the convention adopted several resolutions, including a statement of the association's condemning complaints of five National Guardsmen who filed complaints when called into active duty.

A feature of the second annual convention was an address by Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison Jr., president of the National Guard Association of the U. S., who discussed recent proposals to retire some Guard units.

Two of four honor plaques presented during the convention went to the Greenville units. Both Greenville batteries, A and B, received association plaques citing their outstanding service record during the past year.

The association, which has grown from about 3,000 members a year ago to about 6,500 represented at the Durham convention, voted to hold its third convention at Morehead City next year.

In addition to the business sessions, the convention included a Friday night banquet and dance attended by the guardsmen and their wives.

Other local guardsmen attending included: Capt. and Mrs. A. D. McArthur Jr., 1st Lt. and Mrs. Sidney E.

Tobacco Meeting Set Thursday

A tobacco fertilization meeting is scheduled Thursday at 2 p.m. on the Edgar Warren farm on the Greenville-Belvoir Road about two miles east of Belvoir.

At the meeting, according to S. J. Weeks, assistant county agent, fertilizer suggestions from soil test reports will be explained. Special emphasis will be placed on top dressing recommendations determined by the depth of the soil to the clay.

Farmers attending, Weeks said, will have an opportunity to observe the soil structure at different depths. How to use the composition of soil structure in determining the tobacco fertilization program will also be explained, Weeks said.

Briley Jr., 2nd Lt. and Mrs. Bobby C. Harrington, Sgt. Robert E. Smith, Sgt. Bruce Baker, Sgt. Julian Pierce, Sgt. Shelton Whitehurst, Sgt. Dallas Eason and Pfc. Elbert J. Peaden.

Blast Sets Back Atlas Program

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Air Force plans of developing the advanced Atlas F series missile for deployment in underground launching silos this year have been jolted by the explosion of one of the rockets on its launching pad.

An Atlas F blew apart Monday just as the engines ignited to boost the intercontinental range vehicle on an intended 5,000-mile test flight to the South Atlantic Ocean.

No one was hurt in the fiery blast, but extensive damage was done in the launching area, the only one available for test-firing the F model.

The Air Force said extent of damage could not be determined for several days, but unofficial estimates placed it at about a million and said the pad would be out of service for several months.

Officials had hoped to wrap up the F test program with about 10 more launchings, all in 1962. The last two missiles in the series fell short of their intended 5,000-mile range because of suspected trouble during separation of the two booster engines.

The Atlas F is designed for prolonged storage in hardened underground launch tubes. The earlier D and E Atlas missiles, now operational, are stationed on surface launching pads.

Optimists Hear Chief Of Police

Greenville Police Chief Guy D. Langston told Greenville Optimists Monday curbing of narcotics traffic must be a genuine popular desire before it can become a reality.

In discussing the problem of addiction and related law enforcement problems, Langston explored a series of possible solutions.

He concluded that America, in order to deal effectively with the problem, must develop a general public opinion against use of narcotics before preventive or restrictive measures would be effective.

He cited what is referred to as the "British System" of control which involves a public desire to eliminate drug addiction from the nation. He noted that the so-called "British System" is "very similar to ours except for that one factor."

Langston was introduced as the evening's speaker by M. E. (Red) Cavendish, Optimist program chairman.

District Winner In Science Fair

ELKIN—Samuel Burgess, son of former Greenville residents, the Rev. and Mrs. L. Grady Burgess, was a district winner in the science fair at Yadkinville High School.

Burgess' exhibit is a display to prove how light can control motion by having a motorized car, with the use of a photoelectric cell, follow a white line. He has carried out his project without assistance.

Burgess organized the Electronics Club at Yadkinville High School, where he is a student.

Nebraskan Will Address Ass'n

George Everett Owen of Omaha, Neb., vice president and general attorney of the Woodmen of the World, is scheduled to address Friday's meeting of the Bright Belt Log Rolling Association at Ching School.

GEORGE E. OWEN

Owen, a former assistant attorney general of Florida, is scheduled to speak during a 7:30 banquet meeting following the business session of the association's annual spring meeting set for 6:30 p.m.

A graduate of the University of Florida School of Law, Owen headed the Law Enforcement Division of the Attorney General's Office after 1949 when Florida's anti-bookie and anti-gambling laws were enacted. In 1954, while a Tallahassee resident, Owen was presented a "Worthy Citizen's" award for his work in combatting racketeers, hoodlums and other undesirables in Florida.

Shelve Defining 'Aggression'

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—A 21-nation U.N. committee decided Monday to shelve for another three years the problem of trying to define aggression.

The committee approved a resolution submitted by Cyprus proposing postponement. The resolution said many new members had not yet expressed their views on definition of aggression, and there was not sufficient indications from member states as to when they wanted another General Assembly debate on the issue.

The question came up in the 1951, 1952, 1954 and 1957 assembly session.

DRESSED FOR 'OSCAR NIGHT' Socialite-actress Dina Merrill, often called one of the world's best-dressed women, models the gown she wore for Hollywood's Academy Award 'Oscar' show. The gown is of emerald green Italian shantung with belled skirt. Bodice is of blue-gray satin with bateau neckline. The peplum is encrusted with jewels. She wears a matching stole with the outfit. N. Y. Teacher Strike Is Postponed At Least A Day In Stormy Session

NEW YORK (AP)—A strike of public school teachers scheduled to begin today was postponed for at least a day in a stormy session of the United Federation of Teachers' delegate assembly.

The assembly, meeting until 3 a.m., voted to reject terms of a strike postponement proposal offered by the city and to hold a full membership meeting at 4 p.m. today to determine a course of action.

Charles Cogen, union president, said the action put off any walkout of the city's 40,000 public school teachers until Wednesday morning at the earliest.

Such a walkout could affect up to one million of the city's pupils.

The union's negotiating team had agreed Monday night to the city proposal, which included an agreement on wages and working conditions the negotiators had worked out with the Board of Education.

But when Cogen appeared before the delegate assembly at St. Nicholas Arena after midnight to plead for ratification of the agreement, he was greeted with cries of "strike, strike."

Cogen told the 700 assembly members that about $28 million is now available for salary raises and other benefits for the next fiscal year.

A storm of boos greeted this announcement. The teachers had asked $53 million.

Cogen said the agreement also called for establishment of a three-man fact-finding committee.

"We were offered the proposition that there would be the prospect of additional money that might become available," he said.

There were only 600 members present when the final votes were taken—both by a show of hands.

Some delegates had been in session since 4 p.m. Monday.

Although the union has only 15,000 members, it is the bargaining agent for all 40,000 teachers. Cogen has estimated that at least 30,000 would participate in a strike.

Schools Superintendent John J. Theobald has said he would recruit parents to man classrooms in an attempt to keep the educational system functioning despite a strike.

Harold L. Friedman, father of two children who attend a public school in Flushing, Queens, obtained a temporary restraining order against the strike from acting State Supreme Court Justice James A. Roe.

The order, granted Monday, still had not been served on the union. There was no indication of whether the union would heed the order, or go ahead with the walkout.

A state law, the Condon-Wadlin Act, bans strikes by public employees. State Education Commissioner James E. Allen Jr., has advised teachers that it would be enforced in the event of a strike. The law provides for instant dismissal. Violators may be rehired, but with loss of certain pay increase and tenure rights. The law has never been invoked, and its constitutionality has never been tested.

Conservation Notes

G. E. Trevathan of Fountain constructed a six-acre fish pond on his Home Farm in 1953. He is a co-operator of the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District and has supervised the construction of a dam, a drop inlet, and a spillway of sufficient size were planned and built.

The water ranges in depth from three feet around the edges to six feet near the dam. The deep water is cool for the fish in the hot days of summer. Not having water less than three feet deep keeps weed growth under control. The pond was stocked with bream fingerlings in September, 1953. They were grown by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and furnished Trevathan through the district. Bass fingerlings were supplied the following May.

A fertilizing program was adopted, and has been followed. Trevathan uses about 2,400 pounds of 8-8-2 fish pond fertilizer annually, divided in four applications of 600 pounds each. Most fish ponds need more frequent fertilization.

We asked, "Who uses the pond?"

Trevathan smiled and said, "Everybody." He further said, "We make a nominal charge of 50 cents per day for fishing. This gives a little fund for maintenance and just about covers it."

He estimated about 300 to 400 people fish his pond annually. He smiled as he said: "My wife and I spend many happy hours with our rods and reels down there trying for the big one!"

"No swimming allowed," he said in answer to that question. "It does permit some boating, but no motors. He spoke with pride about how the pond is a gathering place for Sunday School and other picnics. His eyes brightened as he told about the Boy Scouts having a campsite in the grove adjoining the water.

Larry Jackson of near Ayden has planted the first "field border" in Pitt County.

He dug a dragline ditch along the eastern boundary of his farm. This serves as an outlet for tile drains and surface water.

When the farm was planned, with the aid of a Soil Conservation Service technician, the idea of a buffer strip of grass between the field land and the canal was presented. This was to prevent surface water washing soil into the canal.

Jackson was not ready, but some two or three years later he saw the need and seeded the field border next to the canal to fescue grass and Ladino clover. The strip varies in width because the property line canal is not regular. The sod strip helps square up his fields.

Jackson says, "I should have planted the sod strip or field border when the ditch was dug. It would have well paid me then. It protects the field from erod-

Find Four Lost In Deep Cave

MADRID (AP)—Four holidaying employees of the Spanish Nuclear Energy Board were rescued Monday, hungry but apparently unhurt, after being lost for more than 33 hours in a deep cave about 45 miles north of Madrid.

Civil guards and mountain experts located the four chemists, who entered the cave on an outing Sunday and couldn't find their way out.

IT'S JUST DOLLARS-AND-CENTS SENSE that people value what they pay for more than what they get free. Just human nature...but it helps make the daily newspaper a superior advertising medium. People pay for newspapers because they want to read the big national and international news, the important hometown news, and the vital shopping news they find in the advertising columns. To get all this, last year they paid $1.7 billion for their daily and Sunday newspapers.* Advertising media like mail throwaways, radio, TV, billboards come free—and often unwanted.

When you place your advertising in the daily newspaper, you know it will reach a guaranteed, paying audience. That helps make the daily newspaper the safest, surest advertising investment.

Wilson cash cattle prices, steady, steers and heifers, choice 23-25, good 21.50-24, standards 17-21; beef cows 14.50-16.50, heavy cutters 13-14.50, light bulls 12.50-15, heavy bulls 15-18.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tobaccos rebounded in an irregularly higher stock market early this afternoon. Trading was moderate.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .10 at 253.40 with industrials off .10, rails up .20 and utilities up .10.

Except for tobaccos, changes made a strong recovery, which of most key stocks were small, leaving the plus signs in the majority.

The tobacco stocks met substantial buying support, several rising well over a point. Steels were fairly steady. A slightly better tone was apparent among rails, oils, rubbers, drugs and mail order-retailers. Chemicals and electrical equipments were mostly lower.

Reynolds Tobacco, which fell 5-8 as Monday's most active stock, again was the most heavily traded tobacco as it held a gain exceeding a point. Philip Morris recouped about a point also.

Recovering recent losses, Financial Federation was up more than 4 and Bristol-Myers more than 3.

The top steels showed very narrow changes. Jones & Laughlin held a fractional gain.

Ford, up a point, was the best performer in a virtually unchanged auto group.

Rails held a small edge to the upside on balance.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 89 at 693.85.

Prices were mixed in quiet trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were firm in slow dealings.

Warn Coastal Farm Land Face Ocean Flooding

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The All-Seashore Highway Association says half a million acres of coastal farm land in North Carolina are threatened with ocean flooding unless breaks in the Outer Banks are repaired.

Joe DuBois, association secretary, told the group Monday that the best solution would be to pump or dredge soil onto the Outer Banks from Currituck Sound.

The association recommended that a federal flood control program be set up for the North Carolina coast, rather than handling storm and wave damages as a matter of beach erosion.

The group also heard a recommendation for a federally supported insurance program to protect properties of coastal citizens against flood waters; and that letters be written to Gov. Sanford and the State Highway Commission asking immediate improvements to U.S. 17 to handle the increase in traffic after the opening of the Chesapeake Bay Tunnel.

Benjamin L. O'Neal of Ocracoke was elected president of the association.

Second Marines Go Aboard Ships

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Men of the Second Marine Division from Camp Lejeune, headed for a three-week amphibious exercise, were loaded aboard ships this morning at nearby Radio Island and at Wilmington and Onslow Beach.

President Kennedy will observe Navy and Marine exercise off the North Carolina coast and, on Onslow Beach starting Friday.

Later this month, more than 40,000 Marines and sailors aboard 83 ships will take part in a mock amphibious assault at Vieques Island off Puerto Rico. Some of these men will participate in the landings the President will watch.

Tree Trimmer Electrocutted

GARLAND, N.C. (AP) — Clayton Holmes of Wilmington, an employe of Wilson tree trimming firm, was electrocuted here Monday. He came into contact with a 13,000 volt electrical line while trimming a tree.

Sampson County Coroner Coleman Carter ruled the death accidental, and said no inquest would be held.

Missionary's 102nd Birthday

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Thomas J. McCormick, who was told he had only a year to live when he became a missionary to the Indians in South Dakota—60 years ago, observed his 102nd birthday Monday.

Father McCormick, believed to be the nation's oldest Roman Catholic priest, lives in retirement at the Victorian Neovittale in suburban Arlington Heights.

He joined the clerics of St. Viator in 1886 while living in La Salle, Ill., and was ordained in 1894.

Officer Injured Chasing Suspect

Five stitches were required to close a wound suffered by a Greenville policeman last night while chasing a suspect in the Colonial Heights section of East Greenville.

Investigators reported that Cpl. R. E. Elks suffered a cut over his left eye after running into clothes line while chasing 18-year-old Tommy F. Adams of 2603 Jefferson Drive.

Officers who charged Adams with being a peeping tom said Elks chased the youth from 2708 Jefferson Drive.

Adams was observed by police as he allegedly went to a window of the 2708 Jefferson to dwell, about 10:40 p.m. The house is occupied by W. T. Higging and family.

As the lawmen approached, the subject ran Adams was taken into custody behind the Colonial Heights Super Market.

The youth was released under bond for trial in Greenville Recorders Court.

Scout Division To Pinpoint Site Of Joint Airport

ROCKY MOUNT, (AP) — A special steering committee set out today to pinpoint the site for a proposed airport to serve Nash, Edgecombe and Wilson counties.

Representatives of the three counties and the cities of Wilson and Rocky Mount met here Monday night and gave tentative approval to the project.

It appeared the group favored at Town Creek in Wilson County if it can acquire land there.

The airport would cost $1.2 million with each county spending $20,000 a year and each city $40,000 a year for five years to provide $700,000 for construction and land acquisition. The federal government would put up the remaining $500,000.

Chairman Ray Bandy of the Rocky Mount Airport Commission said Rocky Mount would try to construct an airport even if the other groups do not support the proposal.

Wilson City Attorney Clem Gibbons said his group approved the $40,000 a year expenditure but stipulated that the airport must be built on the Town Creek site.

Representatives of the three counties and the cities of Wilson and Rocky Mount met here Monday night and gave tentative approval to the project.

It appeared the group favored at Town Creek in Wilson County if it can acquire land there.

The airport would cost $1.2 million with each county spending $20,000 a year and each city $40,000 a year for five years to provide $700,000 for construction and land acquisition. The federal government would put up the remaining $500,000.

Chairman Ray Bandy of the Rocky Mount Airport Commission said Rocky Mount would try to construct an airport even if the other groups do not support the proposal.

Wilson City Attorney Clem Gibbons said his group approved the $40,000 a year expenditure but stipulated that the airport must be built on the Town Creek site.

Scout Division To Pinpoint Site Of Joint Airport

ROCKY MOUNT, (AP) — A special steering committee set out today to pinpoint the site for a proposed airport to serve Nash, Edgecombe and Wilson counties.

Representatives of the three counties and the cities of Wilson and Rocky Mount met here Monday night and gave tentative approval to the project.

It appeared the group favored at Town Creek in Wilson County if it can acquire land there.

Kennedy Enjoys Robersonville Cub Pack Takes Ft. Bragg Tour

WASHINGTON (AP)—He almost got beamed and did get caught in a lashing downpour—but President Kennedy had himself a fine time at the ball park and hopes to return for more.

He enjoyed the Washington Senators' 4-1 opening day baseball victory Monday over the Detroit Tigers so much, in fact, he put off business at the White House and stayed to the finish.

Back at the mansion, aides talked over trouble in Southeast Asia with Laotian Ambassador Tiao Khampan while the President rooted for the home team at Washington's magnificent new stadium.

The ambassador was aware the game had been delayed by rain and obligingly agreed to a half-hour postponement of his 1 p.m. appointment. Subordinates filled in until the President showed up with apologies at 5:30.

It wasn't all fun. Kennedy threw out the first ball, grabbe Washington pitcher Marty Kutyna. A half-hour later he had to duck through the Senators' dugout to escape a drenching from the rain that delayed play for 22 minutes.

Kennedy spent the recess in the umpire's dressing room, chatting ball with ump Joe Paparella and Hank Sgar and E. R. Quesada, president of the Washington Club.

Temperatures Up To 84 Yesterday

Temperatures reached the 84-degree mark yesterday, the warmest day of spring so far for Greenville.

Though today was warm and pleasant, the weatherman predicted temperatures would be a little cooler and there is possibility of scattered showers.

Linwood Hudson of the Greenville Utilities Plant gave the noon temperature for today as 74 degrees. The low came at 4 a.m. and was 53 degrees.

The Tar River level was 10.8 feet, dropping.

Pre-School Day Set Wednesday

The annual Pre-School day will be held at Belvoir-Falkland High School Wednesday at 9:00. All parents in the Belvoir District are asked to bring their children who will be six on or before Oct. 16 for registration. Parents should bring their child's birth certificate, records of immunizations, and paper from their family doctor stating examination of child.

Mrs. Goldie Hemingway, Public Health nurse with Pitt County Health Department, will be present.

"It figures"

When thousands of people put millions of dollars in a bank... and by putting the funds soundly to work, the bank thrives... and its area thrives, too...

The bank's statement of condition becomes one in which a good part of the community can take personal pride.

"It figures." Take these totals, for instance:
