Angry Washington Plans Fight Steel Price Hike

By STERLING F. GREEN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry Washington today whipped up two congressional investigations and a price-fixing probe in swift counterblows at the steel industry's price increase.

Worthington said these costs have continued to rise without even considering higher labor costs after July 1 under new contracts signed last week.

"But the American people have a right to expect in return for that freedom a higher sense of business responsibility for the welfare of their country than has been shown in the last two days," he said.

More than 70 major steel corporations agreed in that case to refrain from price-fixing, although none admitted FTC's charge that they had done so.

Should the commission find evidence of collusion now, it would ask a federal court to invoke any of several penalties. The toughest would be a $5,000 a day fine for each offense. FTC views each sale at a conspiracy-fixed price as a separate offense.

Unpoliced Moratorium On Tests Again Rejected

GENEVA (AP)—The Soviet Union today proposed an unpoliced moratorium on nuclear weapons tests. The United States and Britain immediately turned down the proposal.

Joseph Godber recalled that it was the Russians who first began testing again. Both W. stern delegates took the position that having been fooled once by Soviet promises their governments were not prepared to be fooled a second time.

A six-county cooperative venture into economic development became a reality here last night as the members of the newly formed Coastal Plain Planning and Development Commission were named at an area-wide rally.

member. Representatives come from three fields, the county commissioners, industry and agriculture.
The CPP&DC is the result of work by a 32 delegate steering committee. Dr. Sylvester Green, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission was chairman of the steering body's Projects Committee.

"If this area is to stand still between now and 1970, 15,000 new jobs will have to be created," Bowles said.
Referring to the six-county area, Bowles also said, "This is a bad economic picture, although I can think of no better place to live."

But in North Carolina it is up 18 per cent he said.
Bowles said that "food processing" has an opportunity in Eastern North Carolina and "we intend to do our part on a State level to help you."

August Release Indicated For Reserves, Guardsmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 145,000 National Guardsmen and Reservists will go marching home from the cold war in August, unless the Communists raise a new hot war threat.

he said.
Because of higher draft calls and enlistments, the nation's regular armed forces will total 2,690,700 next September after the Guard and Reserves return home. This will be about 200,000 more than last June 30, before the Berlin crisis mobilization began.

The Army ordered up 8,000 men and pulled 80 ships out of its reserve fleet.
The Air Force mobilized 27,000 Reservists and Air Guardsmen in 36 fighter and troop carrier squadrons. Eleven of the Guard fighter squadrons—about 4,400 men and about 220 jets—went to Europe to bolster U.S. airpower there.

I Had My Baby By Natural Childbirth

EDITOR'S NOTE: Childbearing has been going on as long as mankind itself. Once it was taken as a matter of course. Then obstetricians replaced midwives, and anesthesia became a part of parturition. Now there are movements afoot to return to a natural way of having children. The method of a French doctor named Lamaze has just been used by a delighted mother whose experience is detailed here in an account written exclusively for The Associated Press.

By HELEN GAVZER
Written for The Associated Press

I have just had the most magnificent experience of my life—giving birth to a son, without so much as an aspirin to stop my pain.

My husband was with me every moment. He saw our baby—we call him Adam—seconds before I did.

And—oh, there's no way really to tell what this means—a few minutes after Adam was born he was placed next to me so that I could kiss him.

"Now you really found like you want to tell the whole world about it," my husband, Benny, said to me.

It's true, I do. I've wanted to all along. While I think that childbirth is a highly personal and private thing, I don't think I am violating this privacy by sharing it with others.

I had this baby through the Lamaze Method. To say it is completely without pain would be a lie. There is pain, but it is not intolerable nor is it something that gets out of control. It can be overcome, quite easily, I found.

It requires a great deal of co-operation from the husband and, hopefully, a sympathetic doctor.

Anesthetics Were Unpleasant. I am able to tell the difference for me between childbirth with anesthetics and natural childbirth because in three previous deliveries I received drugs.

Our first child was born in breech in 1957 and died a few hours later. Anne is now 3, Jonathan 2. When they were born, it seemed as though it was a matter beyond my control. A contraction would come and I would be helpless. I know I moaned terribly. Then I'd fall back to sleep.

The effects of anesthetics, I found, were unpleasant. I seemed to have nightmares.

So when I learned last summer that I was again pregnant, I decided I would not go through such nightmares again. I had heard about natural childbirth and it made sense to me that having a child could be a thrilling experience rather than a recollection of sheer pain. If we are creatures of God, as I believe we are, it didn't make sense to LIMBERING UP . . . Helen Gavzer (right) and class practice exercises to stretch muscles needed in delivery.

Helen Gavzer, 30, is a native of London and once was a staff member of "Musical Express," an entertainment industry publication there. She is the wife of Bernard Gavzer, an Associated Press Newsfeatures writer.

me that He would want us to suffer as we fulfill our role as women.

I discussed this with my obstetrician, a fine gentleman in his 60s who has delivered thousands of babies, including Annie and Jonnie. He thought it would be an excellent idea to have natural childbirth and recommended a woman who would train me.

Mechanics Explained
It was with this woman that I found myself on a morning six weeks before the baby was due, the recommended time for starting classes. Benny was with me. There were four other couples in the class.

She began by showing us illustrations of the various phases of labor and explaining the mechanics.

I won't go into the details because this is better left to a doctor or to people qualified in giving training in the Lamaze Method. There are a number of exercises designed to help the muscles do their work.

Husband Helped
"I'm never going to be able to do these exercises at home Benny," I said. "Annie and Jonnie'll be all over me."

"They" were. But then I got them to do the exercises, too, so that solved that problem.

I needed Benny's help in the concentration-relaxation exercises. In the concentration exercises, the goal is to make your responses automatic and have full control of your body. We did this mostly in the evening.

He also timed me during the breathing exercises. This ticking off of time is very important because it lets you know how much longer a contraction will last. The contractions may last from 45 to as much as 90 seconds, and when someone tells you 30 seconds have passed you realize there's only a matter of a few more seconds.

At the final class session we were told that in addition to the usual things taken to the hospital we should include a washcloth, a paper bag and lollipops.

Take Wet Washcloth

"You'll find a wet washcloth very refreshing," our instructor said. "The bag is in case you get hiccups. Blow it up and then hold it over your mouth and breathe into it. Your own carbon dioxide will calm the nerve controlling hiccupping. The lollipops will come in handy because with all this open-mouth breathing your throat will get very dry and you won't be able to drink anything."

Most of all, we were told to take it easy around the due date and not get overtired.

My day came and passed. The next day I went to the doctor and he said, "Mrs. Gavzer, I may see you tonight, or at least before the week is out."

Contractions began at 1:30 a.m. I timed them for the next hour and they seemed to be occurring every four or five minutes. We called the doctor and he said to go to the hospital. A neighbor came to stay with the children, and we set out.

The hospital was nearby, so we walked. It was a drizzling rain. At the first stoplight, I had a contraction so I did the breathing and massage while Benny held an umbrella over me. I had another contraction before we reached the hospital at 2:50 a.m.

We went directly to the labor room. While I was being prepared my husband was dressed in hospital garments, white trousers, shirt, cap and mask.

The resident had examined me and told me I was three centimeters dilated. I had seven centimeters to go. About 4 a.m. my doctor examined me and said I was four centimeters dilated. I was terribly discouraged. I expected more progress than that.

Mouth Got Dry
The doctor decided the tempo of labor was slow and the tone of contractions too shallow. He suggested intravenous injection of a hormone to speed the process. I agreed.

The Lamaze Method was introduced in France by the late Dr. Fernand Lamaze who had observed the technique in Russia in 1932. Dr. Lamaze's significant contribution was that the father should be present throughout and that the mother should stay alert and awake rather than permitted to relax and rest between contractions. In France, the mother is aided in delivery by the woman who trains her.

In the United States, the method has been modified to do away with the midwife and the father takes over the duty of timing and assisting.

Information about the Lamaze Method may be obtained from the American Society for Psychophysical in Obstetrics, 2 Grace Court, Brooklyn 1, N. Y.

Forty five minutes later, the contractions got closer together and stronger. My doctor kept telling me what was happening.

My mouth did get very dry. I asked Benny for a lollipop. I had it in my mouth a few seconds and then threw it away. I didn't like the sweetness.

But what was really a Godsend was the washcloth that Benny kept wetting with cold water.

THE REWARD . . . Young Adam, 2-weeks-old, busses Mama.

Of the four women in training with Mrs. Gavzer, one succeeded in having a completely natural childbirth. One woman gave birth after the third class and reported that even this much training was of great help although she required anesthetics during her labor. The fourth got into the labor room but her husband said he couldn't take it and left. She was given anesthetics.

Heard Baby's Heart

Between contractions I rubbed my face briskly. I was so tired I wanted to sleep but I knew that if I did a contraction would come and I wouldn't be ready for it. This way, by staying alert and keeping all the lights on, as soon as a contraction began I would start rapid breathing and massage. This gave me so much to do I didn't really have any time to know whether anything hurt or not.

Then I was being examined by the doctor during a contraction and he told me I was eight centimeters dilated. Oh, how happy I was! He also let me listen to the baby's heart through a stethoscope, and Benny did the same thing.

About 6:35 or 6:40, he said, Mrs. Gavzer, I think we should start for the delivery room. I believe you will have your baby in 5 or 10 minutes and I don't want a mad rush down the corridor."

In the delivery room, I expected to have a tremendous urge to push, as I had been told in my classes. For this part of the labor, we had trained so that my husband would help me up to a position of a 45 degree angle in order to bear down properly and also hold my breath so I could use my diaphragm. But I didn't feel the urge to push. Instead, the doctor told me to push.

She Kissed Him

When the baby's head was in the birth canal, the doctor asked Benny if he wanted to see the baby's head crowning.

"Just make sure you don't brush against me or touch anything," he warned.

Benny went to the foot of the table and I could see an amazed smile in his eyes. Then as Benny came back to my side, the doctor told me to push real hard. And with this push, I really strained doing it. Adam was born. It was 6:55 a.m.

He let out a cry immediately. No slapping of the buttocks or feet or anything.

Then I was asked, "Would you like to kiss your baby?"

The cord was cut and clamped and Adam was put next to my face and I kissed him on the cheek and head.

I never knew there could be such a feeling.

Miss Chauncey Gives Fine Arts Program

The Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club met Tuesday afternoon at the club building, with Miss Mamie Ruth Tunstall and Mrs. Paul T. Ricks as hostesses.

Arrangements of azaleas, iris, and other spring flowers decorated the club.

Refreshments, consisting of punch, cakes, nuts, and candy were served from an appointed table.

Mrs. R. P. Rogers introduced Miss Chauncey of the E. C. C. music department, who with her ensemble of ten students gave a delightful musical program. The group sang a number of folk and modern songs.

During the business session, Mrs. H. H. Settle, chairman, appointed the program committee for next year. Several announcements were made, after which the meeting adjourned until next fall.

Round Table Members Hear Mrs. Taylor

The Round Table Book Club met April 10th with Mrs. Charles O.H. Horne Sr. on West Fourth Street. After the arrival of members and guests Mrs. Horne served a sweet course and coffee.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. R. A. Fountain, the roll was called and minutes were read. Several items of business came before the group and were transacted. The speaker of the afternoon Mrs. David R. Taylor was introduced by Program Chairman Mrs. E. E. Rawl, Sr.

Mrs. Taylor's subject was The Department of Agriculture. The tremendous efforts of the U.S. in this administration is headed by Orville Freeman. This year of '62 is the centennial year of the Agricultural program. There has been tremendous growth and direction in the programs and activities in this department since President Lincoln approved an Act of Congress creating the Department of Agriculture in 1862.

Mrs. Taylor discussed how every day our lives are affected by the services of the United States Dept. of Agriculture. This Dept. is involved directly or indirectly with the food on our table, the cotton or wool of our clothes, the wood or furnishings of our homes.

Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. Bertie B. Merritt and Mrs. Ellen Petrie.

THE SUZARI MARIONETTES . . . will present their hit show "The Remarkable Mr. Puss In Boots" tomorrow in McGinnis Auditorium on the East Carolina College campus. Performances will be given at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. "The Remarkable Mr. Puss In Boots" sponsored by the Greenville Pilot Club, is a marionette version of the French Classic by Charles Perrault.

ECC Student To Appear In Recital April 17

Linda Ann Comer of Concord, pianist, will be presented by the Department of Music at East Carolina College in her senior recital Tuesday, April 17, at 8:15 p.m. in the McGinnis Auditorium. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Miss Comer, piano student of Dr. Robert Carter of the college music faculty, transferred to East Carolina her junior year from Shenandoah College and Conservatory of Music in Dayton, Va. The recital, part of the requirements for the Bachelor of Music degree at East Carolina, is the first one in which Miss Comer has appeared at the college.

The evening program will begin with Bach's French Suite II in A minor played by Miss Comer. Other representative works on the program will include Sonata in D Major, K. 284 by Mozart; Davidsbundler Dances, Op. 6 by Schumann; Oiseau Tristes, Op. 6, No. 1 by Griffes.

Miss Comer has received official recognition from East Carolina because of her excellent records in academic work. For this honor her name has appeared both on the Dean's List and the Honor Roll.

At the college, she is a member of the Chapel Choir and is also active in the Sigma Alpha Iota, national professional music fraternity for women.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Comer Sr. of 7 Mills Street, Concord.

Tea Given April 21 Bride-Elect

Bride-elect of Easter weekend, Miss Nelson Blount, was honored at a tea Saturday afternoon given by Mrs. D. M. Clark, Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, Mrs. John Wooten and Mrs. W. I. Wooten.

Mrs. W. I. Wooten's home was the scene of the tea. The front door of the home was decorated with a wedding bell showered with lilies of the valley. Upon arrival guests were greeted at the front entrance by Mrs. K. B. Pace and Mrs. F. L. Blount.

Mrs. W. I. Wooten introduced guests to the receiving line composed of the hostesses, Miss Blount and her mother, Mrs. Marvin Blount.

A guest register in the library was presided over by Miss Lilah Gaut and Miss Nettie Brogden. Of focal interest in the library was a St. Francis with an arrangement of pansies, jonquils and yellow gladiolus in colors of yellow and brown.

In the dining room a color note of pink and white was used. On dining table overlaid with a white organdy cloth over pink satin; was a silver candelabrum holding burning white tapers featuring an arrangement of pink and white snapdragons and pink sweetroses in the center holder of the candlebrum. Mrs. S. M. Crisp, mother of the bridegroom, pouring tea from one end of the dining table. Serving French Coffee from the opposite end was Mrs. Hoover Taft.

Spring flowers were used throughout the home.

Assisting elsewhere in the home were Mrs. J. P. Nowell of Ahsokie, Mrs. W. H. Taft, Sr., Mrs. W. H. Taft Jr., Mrs. Joe Taft, Mrs. M. B. Massey, Miss Grayson Waldrop of Charlotte, Mrs. Ed Clement, Mrs. Powell Bland of Goldsboro, Mrs. Lyman Ormand Jr. and Miss Anna Taft.

As Home Nurse, Wear, Wash Mask

While serving as a home nurse, safeguard the patient from a secondary infection by wearing a gauze mask over your nose and mouth, advises the New York State Department of Health. This is because you may be carrying germs which your patient, in his weakened condition, can easily pick up.

Other important precautions are to always wash your hands with soap after removing a used mask, and to launder the masks in hot soap or detergent suds after each wearing.

Costly, But A Tremendous Asset

North Carolinians have never taken to the idea of having toll roads in their state as evidenced by the fact that the state has no toll highways or bridges.

Governor Sanford's suggestion that a study be taken to determine the feasibility of financing an east-west highway across North Carolina by tolls is certain to arouse considerable opposition in itself. We trust, however, that opposition to the toll road idea will not automatically eliminate any consideration of a major highway to link eastern and western sections of North Carolina.

Like many other Tar Heels, Gov. Sanford has asserted that for a long time he has recognized the need for a major east-west highway across the state. This in itself is encouraging for it is indicative of a growing recognition throughout North Carolina that such a highway link is needed.

Traditionally North Carolina has been traversed by major north-south highways in various sections of the state. It has been sadly lacking, however, in a major route that linked the eastern and western sections of the state. Such a facility has been long needed in North Carolina—and with each passing year the need becomes greater. We have no objection to a study of the feasibility of financing such a road by tolls, but we strongly feel that consideration of such a highway should not be confined to toll road possibilities. Serious consideration should be given by the State Highway Commission to undertaking such a project financed by public funds as are the other highways in North Carolina.

The state is spending literally millions of dollars on super highways that for the most part link North Carolina with states to the north and the south. Should not similar consideration be given to a major highway which would link the eastern and western sections of the state and tie in with major highway systems of states to the West of North Carolina?

North Carolina has not found it necessary to resort to toll roads for financing the major highways it now has. Why should it be necessary to resort to the toll idea as the only possible means of constructing a major east-west highway that is so sorely needed for North Carolina?

Such a highway would be extremely costly, to be sure, but it could also be a tremendous asset in the development of North Carolina.

Something In A Name, After All

By LYNN NISBET

FLOOD CONTROL — The All-Seashore Highway Association has decided that it may be something in a name after all. After working for years to obtain adequate State and Federal aid in combating beach erosion along the coast, the group Monday changed its approach. It has redefined the outer banks strip as a "dam" and is asking for aid in a "flood control" project. There would seem to be merit in this position. The objective all along has been protection of the coastal area for many miles inland from the ravages of sea floods if the "dam" off shore should break down. Beach erosion has been a relative insignificant phase of the overall problem.

The highway association is seeking cooperation of other interested groups and is planning a conference with high level Federal and State officials to devise ways of financing the needed work. They believe it will be easier to get flood control than for beach erosion — which is more limited and has some selfish personal connotations.

STATE HOUSE — Good weather for the past few weeks has enabled workmen on the new State House building to catch up with their schedule. Prolonged bad weather plus the sickness and death of one of the supervising architects, threw the work behind schedule. It appears now that the new building will be ready for the opening of the 1963 General Assembly on February 6 next year. The Assembly is expected to convene in the old capitol, but to move immediately to the new building for the working sessions. If for any reason the new quarters are not ready by February 6 there will be no serious handicap, since the Legislature usually sort of marks time for a week or so before buckling down to the real job.

AIRPORT — The people in mid-central Eastern North Carolina are continuing their efforts to get a regional airport. Latest development was at Rocky Mount the other night when representatives of the counties of Edgecombe, Nash and Wilson and the cities of Rocky Mount and Wilson reached tentative agreement on a site at Town Creek in upper Wilson county and a construction budget of $1,200,000. Of that amount the local units would pay $700,000 and the Federal Government would provide $500,000.

This agreement is purely tentative and effectuation of it will depend upon formal action by the official governing bodies of the units involved. Several times before within the past ten years the project has reached comparable stage, only to fail when it came time for the local governments to put up their share of the money.

There had been a good deal of talk about a regional airport before the General Assembly of 1953 (Chapter 804, Session Laws '53) created the Eastern Carolina Airport Authority. This agency was clothed with all the powers of a municipal corporation, including the right of eminent domain. It was composed of the counties of Edgecombe, Nash, Pitt and Wilson, and the cities of Greenville, Rocky Mount, Tarboro and Wilson. The act set out in detail the percentage which each corporate member should pay into the common treasury, ranging from 6 per cent for Tarboro to 18 per cent for Rocky Mount.

The Authority organized but almost immediately split up in controversy over location of the airport. Most likely site seemed to be at Cobb's Crossroads, a few miles east of Wilson. That choice was not unanimous and some of the members announced withdrawal of their support.

MORE EFFORT — Then Rocky Mount determined to develop its own airport, and obtained assurance of major airline cooperation and Federal aid. It needed endorsement by the State. The Rocky Mount folks appealed to the C&D board for such endorsement, but the board declined, insisting that the Rocky Mount port could not serve the whole area.

The C&D board joined in advocating location of a regional airport at Walsenburg, with the hope maybe of getting Goldsboro and Kinston to participate. That site wasn't acceptable either. Rocky Mount, which was expected to put a larger part than any other member of the money and perhaps a larger share of the traffic, found that the difference in distance to Walsenburg and to the already established and well-served Raleigh-Durham port would not justify the expenditure. So the Walsenburg dream went the way of Cobb's Crossroads.

The current project for Town Creek is being promoted by five members of the original Authority, having lost Pitt County, Greenville and Tarboro along the way. Ray Bandy, chairman of the Rocky Mount committee, has the same idea now he had ten years ago. If the rest of the members decline to go along, Rocky Mount will try to build its own airport up to required standards.

No Community Should Put Up With Hoaxers

It was bad enough that classes at South Greenville Elementary School had to be interrupted yesterday while officials searched for a bomb an anonymous caller said had been placed in the building.

It was even worse, however, that over 500 children had to be sent out into the pouring rain because of the bomb hoax.

Law enforcement officials and school officials should leave no stone unturned in their efforts to apprehend the person or persons responsible for the bomb scare at the school. It is a serious offense and the parties responsible should be made to answer for it if they can be found.

Neither Greenville nor any other community can afford to have pranksters using bomb scares to interrupt the work being carried on in the schools.

Many Affected By Steel Action

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — What a new wave of price increases and therefore another jump in living costs?

Keep your fingers crossed. A lot of industries using steel will be affected by Tuesday night's announcement of the U. S. Steel Corp. that it is raising the price of steel.

Other steel companies, as a starter, can be expected to start raising prices since the U. S. Steel Corp. usually sets the pattern for the industry. This sudden move must have been a surprise to the Kennedy administration, judging from what it said just a few weeks ago. It may even have been a surprise to some firms in the steel industry itself.

Only a few hours before the U. S. Steel Corp. announcement President Edmund F. Martin of Bethlehem Steel was telling a stockholders meeting his firm was trying to hold the price line in the face of increasing domestic and foreign competition.

President Kennedy was so delighted when the steel union and the steel industry agreed on a new contract without a wage increase or a strike that he sent both sides telegrams.

He even told David J. McDonald, president of the union, "it is obviously noninflationary and should provide a solid base for continued price stability."

At the time of the settlement there was no public evidence that the industry, or anyone in it, planned a price increase, at least any time soon.

McDonald seemed so carried away with what he got for his members when it was quite possible sooner or later the union benefits might affect steel prices — that he said: "Let's forget about the price and look at the benefits."

Those benefits amount to about 10 cents an hour more for the workers, whose average wage is $3.28 an hour. The additional 10 cents an hour didn't go into a pay raise but into things like longer vacations, better unemployment pay, more job security.

The industry estimated the cost of the contract at about 2½ per cent of payroll costs. U. S. Steel Corp. prices which went into effect at midnight Tuesday will average about 3½ per cent more than the old prices, roughly $6 more per ton of steel.

U. S. Steel President Leslie B. Worthington said the increase was a "catch-up" adjustment made necessary by a profit squeeze between rising costs and declining prices. The last price boost was in 1958.

The Kennedy administration put a lot of pressure on the industry and the union to reach a settlement before their old contract expired next June 30. The talks began Feb. 14; an unusually early starting time for the union and industry. By March 23, it was learned, agreement had been reached.

News of this contract, which contained no wage boost, the usual excuse for a price boost — so pleased Kennedy that he told both sides they "deserve great credit for developing this imaginative program."

Tuesday Worthington seemed to be explaining the reason for the new price increase largely in terms of increased costs before this latest settlement.

This raises, therefore, a question: Did U. S. Steel have this price increase in mind before the settlement and, if so, why didn't U. S. Steel say so then instead of now?

The industry's steel output is about 100 million tons a year, a quarter of the world's output. It employs 430,000 men directly and, indirectly, provides jobs for another half-million. Eleven companies were involved in the settlement.

TO THE EDITOR:

I read the piece in the paper about the P. T. A. group trying to put Mr. Young out of business. Why don't we mothers gripe over the way we raise our children? We are always trying to put the blame on someone else.

Do we raise our children at home? Lots of us don't. We let them grow up by themselves. Lots of mothers and fathers get a bottle of spirits, forget about children and just go off somewhere with other men or women and think they are enjoying themselves. But what happens to our children when we do this? Lots of us expect to do as we please, but think our children should do better. We can't expect more of our children than we do of ourselves.

We do things we should not do. We say things we should not say, but we think our children should do anything or say those things either.

We should quit blaming the trash, as you call it, for our children's downfall, and come home and ask ourselves how we raised our children right.

All of us, or the most, can say, no, we have not. Your children do not have to buy those books. Sometimes they might learn a lesson from them, maybe you have not taught them.

I think we as parents should live right and pray to God to guide our children. When we do the best we can, it is not always good enough.

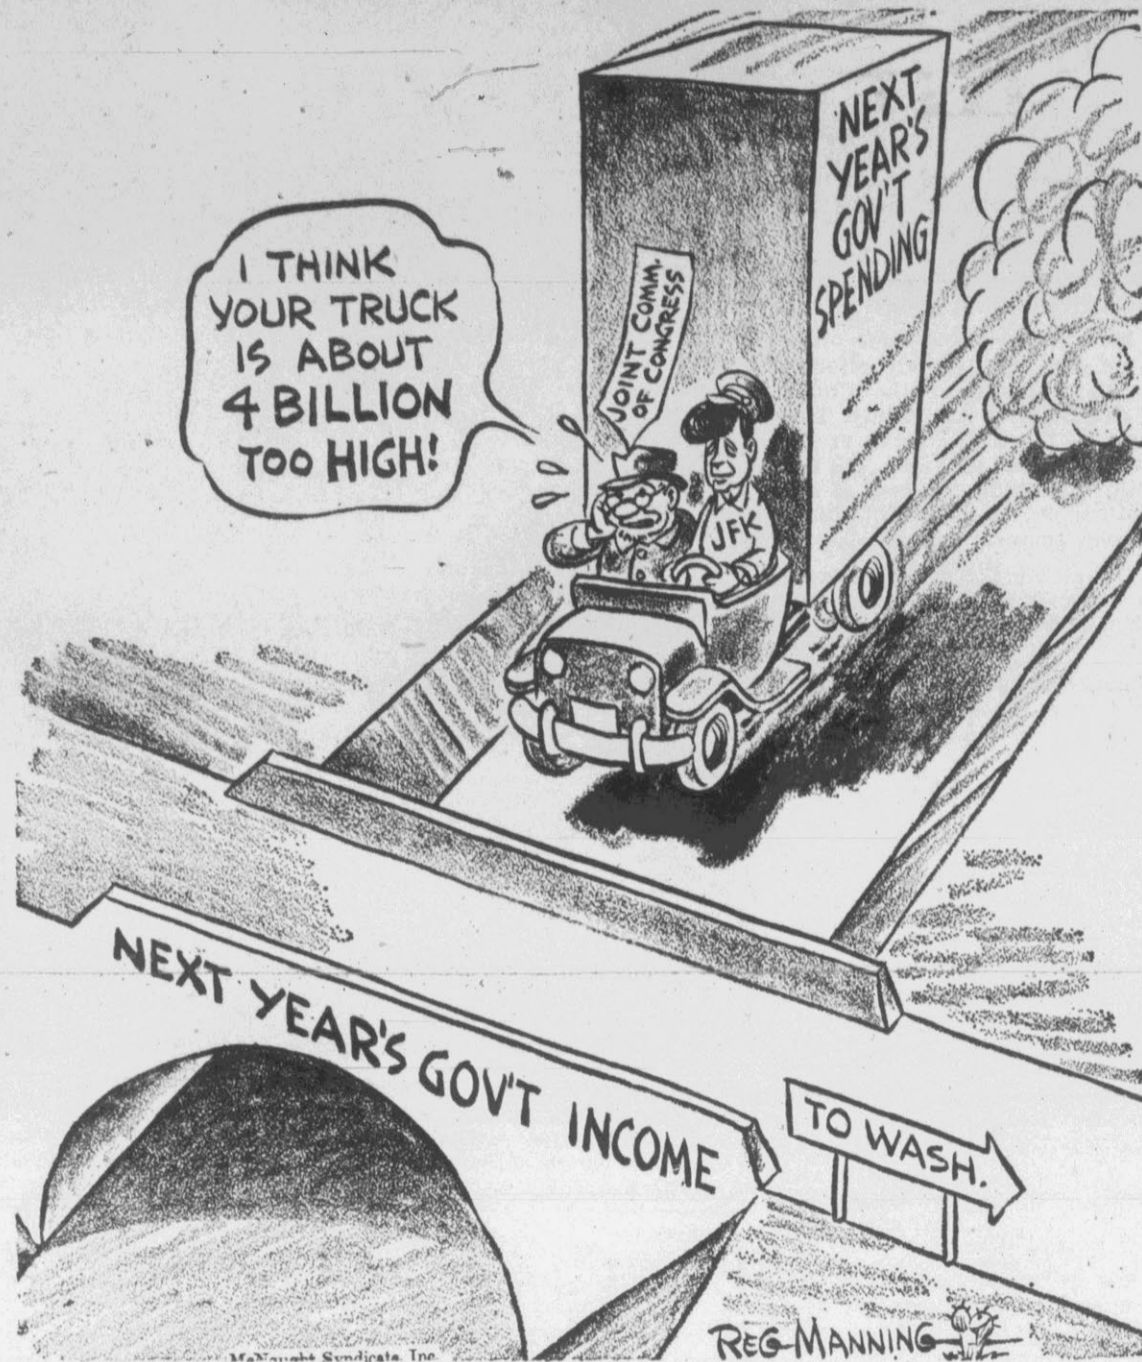

You don't go around putting the ABC stores out of business because they sell our children drink to make them act crazy and etc. Even you buy that and think that's okay. So why try to stop just one thing when there is lots others we should think about?

I guess you will say she's not a mother. Well, I am. I have five children and some of them are married and have children. I have tried to raise them to be honest and treat people like they were people. I am just a poor person in worldly goods but with God's help I am doing the best I can and not blaming other folk for our mistakes. I am a very proud mother, although everything has not always been as I would like it to have been. My children, I can say, I am very proud of. It was the Lord's help they are as nice as they are.

I think we parents should clean out our lives and then start other places if it's necessary. If their minds are clear, they read won't hurt them.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lee Byrd

Back To The Dictionary

Courthouses are many things to many people — trouble for some, marriage for some and etc. For us, to use an old cliché, the courthouse means words and dictionaries.

In the confusion that results from our complicated English language, due to both education and ignorance, words are oftentimes mixed up. And, consequently, so are the people who use them.

It came to our attention yesterday, as it has in the past, that every time we receive some information which mentions the word "courthouse" the word is spelled alternately "courthouse" and "court house." For years we spelled the word courthouse, as one.

For years, we got information calling the word "court house." But we and the dictionary kept right on spelling the word as one. We like togetherness. The other day, using a very authoritative source, we finally gave in and spelled the word in two installments. Yesterday we got something else involving the word and it was spelled in one installment.

We referred to not one, but two dictionaries, and they spelled it as one. We held our office consultation.

The word — "courthouse." Never again will we falter on THAT one, but there will be others as long as we "up here" and the confusion will continue on and on.

We were informed that one dictionary spells the word "burglar" like this, and another dictionary spells the word as "burgler." We think the word is "burglar" but when one goes to a dictionary as a final authority on a spelling, what does one do?

It's interesting to think what happens when a dictionary, of all things, misspells a word.

Speaking of words and such things, we enjoyed a story told by Edmund H. Hardy of little Washington, at the recent E.C.C. senior banquet. It seems that someone asked a crowd if anyone could tell what Napoleon's nationality was. A girl answered, "Course-ah-can." And that was the right answer.

If confused, we recommend a biographical dictionary.

For the benefit of the thousands of college students who attended the Azalea Festival and failed to spot the lovely buds, we wish to present a definition, straight out of a dictionary, so they can, if necessary, save face: an azalea is "any plant of a particular group of the Ericaceae genus 'Rhododendron,' comprising species with handsome, variously colored flowers, some of which are familiar in cultivation."

These flowers were located in both Orton and Airle Gardens, as well as throughout Wilmington.

We figured a few people might have missed seeing the azaleas.

Other Editors Saying A Case Of Blackmail Quote

(Henderson Dispatch)

Fidel Castro's demand for $62 million as the ransom price for 1,179 prisoners captured in the abortive invasion of Cuba last April is sheer political blackmail. It affords the Cuban communist leader an opportunity to get American dollars, as he thinks. Shortly after the invasion started a year ago, Castro had offered to liberate the prisoners in return for 500 American tractors. An effort to raise money to buy that many pieces of machinery bogged down at the time and was dropped.

Now that the men have been tried and convicted in a court whose verdict of guilt was accepted in advance as a matter of fact, and have been sentenced to thirty years of servitude, Castro is prompt in making an offer to get money he so desperately needs for the island's economy. More than one-third of the ransom, reportedly, has been raised to apply against the ransom.

Should the United States, either by government or private subscription, provide the funds needed, Castro could boast of having Uncle Sam across the barrel and forcing him to come to terms. Moreover, in the eyes of the world, this powerful nation would be put in the role of appeasement of a shirt-tail dictator who exists largely by tolerance of this country. If Castro's terms are met, firmness of Washington's stand in placing an embargo on trade with Cuba would be largely blunted, morally speaking.

Senator Capehart of Indiana had a word for it. He called the sentences one hundred percent communist blackmail, and added that "if we have a moral obligation to put up $62 million, then we should do what we should have done many months ago — take over Cuba, militarily and establish a free government down there."

The United States intervened in Cuba in 1898 to free the Cubans from Spanish tyranny under its very nose. It is doubtful if conditions were worse then than they are today under Castro, an admitted tool of the communists.

While we do not necessarily advocate a military invasion, there is at the same time very little difference between half a century ago and today. One new angle is the fear here that intervention now would involve Castro's supporters, namely, Soviet Russia, and antagonize other Latin American countries. So far as hemisphere effect is concerned, there was no hesitancy in 1898. Actually the move enhanced the prestige of the United States in the eyes of the world. It could do the same now, and the United States needs as much as anything else to exhibit some of the stamina that could not fail to attract respect where respect does not exist today.

"According to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, our government spending has grown so vast that in a 15-month period it would be sufficient to buy up everything that Soviet Russia produced in one year, including financing the Russian armed forces and all their missile work." — Industrial News Review.

While I was thus believing or aghast he purchased for my money, he was writing in a book, demanded to see the book. He said that I must not write in it. I said that I did not trust him. # Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
SUCCESS AND FAILURE

Why do some people succeed and others appear invariably to fail?

Well, the problem of ability is primarily involved. On the whole, those people succeed who deserve to succeed and those people fail who deserve to fail. But this is not always true. Circumstances often enter in and spoil the picture, and to term misfortune is alone adequate to describe this catastrophe. Something happens over which the individual has no control. He misses out and the world does not know why. Or in spite of his apparent lack of ability he forges ahead and comes out at the head of the line carrying the banner.

Let us never depend upon anything but our diligent efforts to make us successful. Knowing the right people may help a little now and then, but the so-called right people will drop you fast if you do not make good. Special gifts are a help, but you may find yourself living in an age which does not place much value upon these special gifts. So in the end we have to go back to hard work — sweat, blood, and tears — to ensure success. Sometimes even these, for some strange reason, do not prove adequate. But we can be sure that they are the best factors for us to trust and use.

There is no substitute in life for diligence, character, and the honest desire to do and be the best we can.

Remedy Of Adding To Confusion

By ELMER ROESSNER

President Kennedy's message to Congress on the transportation problem is a strange and wonderful document.

He attacks the problem of confusion; his solution appears to be more confusion. Both American transportation and the laws governing it are among the most incredible messes in the world.

The rules change from area to area, from one type of transportation to another, from one government agency to another. It has been said that a camel is a horse designed by a committee. If that is so, American transportation is a herd of camels designed by a legion of committees.

The mess began with the canals, which got government help because of their importance to the economy and defense. The Erie Canal opened in 1825.

Three years later, the first regular passenger train steamed out of Charleston, S. C., and the government got into that act, too. The government began an endlessly changing pattern of help and restrictions, subsidies and taxes. The more the railroads demanded spoils, the more they got. The era gave us the slogans, "All the traffic will bear" and "The public be damned."

Years later came the truck and the bus, the plane, and the pipeline. Ahead is the rocket. Each was lathered with laws, commissions and rules. With each new layer of regulations came new layers of federal, state and local agencies and new layers of commissioners, inspectors, specialists arresting officers and taxers.

Meanwhile, layers of unions, union leaders, union lawyers and union lobbyists were building up. And each new form of transportation and each new agency caused transport companies to create associations, hire more lawyers and expand lobbies.

That's what we have today. Every time you buy a ticket or ship a box of apples you pay something for transportation and something to support those layers and layers of people and agencies.

HOPE IN SIGHT
It was to this almost incredible bowl of spaghetti that President Kennedy addressed himself last week. His assault on confusion was to stir in more meatballs.

In one of the most diverse messages on a single subject so far, he presented a series of proposals for Congress, mixed in instructions to the Executive branch of the government and sprinkled it with electioneering for the general public.

Many of his proposals are good, sound and long needed. He referred to the "chaotic patchwork of inconsistent and often obsolete legislation" evolved from a history of specific industries and specific times.

His remedy: more patchwork. His recommendations for changes in the law were thrust upon a Congress that has not yet scheduled its business for the rest of the session and which still has many pressing decisions — such as on the tax bill — to make before scurrying home to campaign in the primaries and in the November elections.

Mr. Kennedy, a former Senator, must know he can't possibly get action this year and that there will be a new Congress next year.

At least he has brought the subject out into the open. He has not simplified the problem and that might be his intention; to stir things up to get statements to start working on it, with results about the time of Robert Kennedy's first term as President.

Hiding Behind A Front

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

We, in our household, have long been urging the Lady of the House to adjust to modern times. We say that anything that was not current in 1896, she regards unfavorably. So we bought numerous gadgets of all kinds only to discover that sooner or later she threw them into the garbage pail.

So, for years, we have agitated for a dish-washing machine. We showed her the wonders on television and cut advertisements out of magazines and really did a first-class brain-washing job.

However, about a fortnight ago, on the spur of the moment, secretly, even furtively, she went out and bought the most modern dish-washing machine on the market, with the label of greatest of all dish-washing manufacturers. When the machine arrived we all gathered in the kitchen to see this wonder of wonders. It was factory inspected and guaranteed and was delivered with absolutely correct instructions.

So we had our dinner and put all the dishes in the washing machine and hooked everything up according to instructions. The machine made the proper noise and then when the top was opened, the water from the machine contained water. The next day it was tried again and this time, the machine conked out and started again and conked out again.

The following day, we telephoned and raised hell and in a slow due course, a mechanic showed up who said that the timer was defective. He took it away, kept it several days, meanwhile a young lady efficiently telephoned from the great company's service station to announce when the mechanic would show up. He came. He spent half a day on the job. Then he announced that there was nothing wrong with the timer but the motor was out of order. He would get a new motor. It would take some time.

I did not like the gleam in my wife's eye. She was back to her good old days of 1896. So I informed the mechanic that his company was a swindler and I would get the Better Business Bureau, the District Attorney, the Supreme Court and the Mafia after them.

He said that he was only working for the company. He would give me the telephone number of the customers' relations department. Calling the customers' relations man every five minutes I know in every language I know, I said that I would not telephone to him. I had nothing to sell to him. His company was selling me a defective washing-machine which they claimed was factory inspected.

While I was thus believing or aghast he purchased for my money, he was writing in a book, demanded to see the book. He said that I must not write in it. I said that I did not trust him. I wanted to see what he was writing. At this point, he was not a little frightened, although I am a very mild man and would not actually kill anybody.

Elementary School Science Fair Winners Named

Winners of the Pitt County Elementary School Science Fair, currently on exhibit at Winterville High School, were announced this week by Mrs. Edna Earle Baker, supervisor of elementary schools for the county.

Each elementary school held its own science fair and then selected two entries from each classroom for the countywide fair. Winners were selected from these entries, grades four through eight.

Winners are as follows, listed according to grade level, and including home town and title of entry:

Fourth Grade
 First Place — Mike Hudson, Grifton, "Homemade Battery"; Denise Whitaker, Ayden, "Growth of Bean"; Second Place — Steve Wynne, Bethel, "Electric Motor"; Carol Smith, Fountain, "By the Sea"; Third Place — Lois Umphlett, Winterville, "The Story of a Frog"; Lorelle Barwick, Winterville, "Classes of Animals."

Honorable Mention — Debra Jones, Belvoir, "Fish"; Rusty Gower, Grifton, "Electric Tower"; Steve Barrington, Grimesland, "Parts of a Robot"; Brenda Evans, Pactolus, "Kinds of Bark"; Sherry Corey, Winterville, "Solar System."

Fifth Grade
 First Place — Johnnie Cates, Falkland, "Shells from N. C. Coast 12,000,000 to 30,000,000 Years Ago and Today"; Jane Darden, Farmville, "Edison's Lamp"; Second Place — Robert Short, Ayden, "The Effects of Water Pollution on Fish"; Ann Bass, Farmville, "Miracle of Birth"; Third Place — Jeannine DesVerges, Grifton, "How Paper Is Made from Wood"; Brenda Bullock, Pactolus, "Plant Growth in Different Soils."

Honorable Mention — Norma Manning, Bethel, "Time Comparison of the Continents"; Wallace Woodard, Grifton, "Electric Pendulum"; Larry Simmons, Grifton, "Electric Motor"; Carolyn Triplett, Grifton, "The

Sixth Grade
 First Place — Carl Worthington, Winterville, "Fallout Shelter"; Ray Gaskins, Ayden, "Chemistry of a Flame"; Second Place — Betty Lynn Gower, Grifton, "Chick Embryo"; Curtis McLawhorn, Ayden, "Photograms"; Third Place — Jackie Burns, Ayden, "Human Hearing"; Denny Branch, Winterville, "The Heart".
 Honorable Mention — Joette Aboyounis, Bethel, "Constellation Projector"; Earle C. Tucker, Grifton, "Florida Sea Shells"; Lois Edwards, Pactolus, "Making Rain"; Martin McLawhorn, Winterville, "Fallout Shelter"; Mary Emily Thompson, Fountain, "Human Cells"; Jimmy Hillard, Farmville, "Six Simple Machines"; Harvey Winstead, Farmville, "Types of Springs."

Seventh Grade
 First Place — Valerie Vanne-man, Grifton, "Soil-U.S.A."; Dickie Schott, Ayden, "Air Car"; Second Place — Elaine Stroud, Ayden, "Yeast Plants Are Living Cells"; Steven Pratt, Ayden, "Microbes"; Third Place — Jim Sumrell, Ayden, "Tension Tester"; John Martin, Stokes, "Space Today."

Honorable Mention — Ricky Worthington, Winterville, "The Earth's Origin"; Wayne Foskey, Belvoir, "Weather"; Ginger Lewis, Belvoir, "Uranus"; Ronnie Harper, Chicod, "Electrical Connections"; Bill Boyd, Chicod, "A Model Plane"; Martha McDavid, Farmville, "Tobacco"; Danny Thomas, Farmville, "Ability of Soils to Hold Water"; Mary Lang, Farmville, "Cross Section of the Skin"; Julia Mewborn, Farmville, "Crude Oil and Its Products."

 scrawl was not clear enough. Then he said that some people like to make trouble and enjoy it. I laughed like Chaplain in Faust. I told him that I love to make trouble for dopes, idiots and bureaucrats; that that, in fact, was my job and that I was sorry for him that he worked for a company that sent me a defective washing-machine.

I once bought an automobile which bore a most famous label. The salesman drove the car around the block and it worked perfectly. But when we took it to the country to go up a hill, the car could only make about two miles an hour. It was strictly a lemon.

After much trouble, it was discovered that piece of tin or steel or whatever they used got into the carburetor and whenever the car got into a certain angle, the small piece of metal moved into a hole and shut off the life of the car. That carburetor was also factory inspected.

The curse of bureaucrats is that they hold their jobs by covering up incompetence. Up in the Berkshires, I deal with small merchants and avoid the horrors of big company service stations.

Report Carrier Plane Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jet attack plane from the new atomic carrier Enterprise has been missing since Wednesday the Navy said today.

The F4H jet was launched from the carrier about 7 p. m. Wednesday night while the Enterprise was operating off the Carolina coast.

The F4H normally carries two persons.

The Navy said the search for the missing plane was being centered in the area off Myrtle Beach, S. C., and Cherry Point, N. C., and offshore.

A spokesman said the plane might have come down either at sea or on the land.

Three carriers—the Enterprise, the Lake Champlain and the Forrestal — put search aircraft into the air to hunt for the missing plane, along with a surface and air search by the Coast Guard. The Coast Guard had a report that a "Mayday" distress call had been heard.

Funny Money Is Laid To Printer

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A commercial printer, who police say supplied a counterfeiting ring that operated in six Southern states, has been indicted here along with another man by a federal grand jury.

Rene Marcel Nachbauer, 32, the printer and Carl Albert Johnson, 45, Negro, were indicted Wednesday on charges of manufacture, possession and sale of counterfeit bills.

The two men were arrested Monday night following the apprehension of five persons in Charlotte, N. C., suspected of passing bogus bills.

Still in custody in Charlotte after charged with possessing and or their April 5 arrests are selling counterfeit currency. James Ellis Trollinger, 49, and his wife Julia, 41, of Sherman, Ga.; bauer printed $20,000 to $30,000 Clyde R. Pinedo declared the austerity measures—expected to increase the cost of living by at least 10 per cent—were necessary to repair the damage done the economy by the dictatorship of Juan D. Peron, ousted by the military in 1955.

But the Argentine worker enjoyed relative prosperity from Peron's free-spending policies. Labor demonstrated repeatedly against deposed President Arturo Frondizi's austerity program, which was less stringent than Pinedo's.

CARTER A. VAUGHAN'S Exciting Novel of Revolutionary Romance SCOUNDRELS' BRIGADE

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Waiting for her in a highly favored London tavern, young Hugh Spencer thanked his stars for attracting the attention of beautiful Sara Dean. During the two weeks he had been enabled to be in her company ever evening he had fallen in love, and he was impatient for the return of her mother from Bath to ask Sara's hand in marriage. He could not go to Bath to seek Lady Dean for she was in the Prince of Wales' entourage.

When Sara joined Hugh in the tavern she told him of her nervousness about carrying a large sum of currency she had been given by her lawyer and asked Hugh to be its safekeeper until she returned home. Obliging gallantly, Hugh placed the bills in his wallet. Their conversation had turned to his experiences as a lieutenant in the King's Dragoons in the colonies when a royal balliff appeared in the tavern, centered his attention on Hugh and announced: "In the name of King George III, I place you under arrest!"

While the balliff and his deputies searched Hugh and found the currency she had brought him, Sara slipped away. The balliff charged Hugh with possessing counterfeit notes and dragged him off to Newgate prison. Days later, when Hugh's case was heard by Sir Harry Gresham-Aston, the latter had the prisoner taken to the address given by Hugh as Sara's home. A new nameplate was on the door and the housekeeper denied recognizing Hugh.

CHAPTER 4

"If you're wasting my time Spencer, you'll have ample reason to regret it." Sir Harry's answer was controlled.

"I swear I've been telling you the truth," Hugh said desperately.

"I might be more inclined to believe you if you can prove this female, Sara Dean, isn't the product of your imagination. Some of your friends, men of repute and standing, can vouch for her existence?"

"I've spoken to several of them about her, but they haven't met her."

"How odd."

"Not at all, I met her a short time ago myself, and my interest in her was so great that I didn't want to share her time or company with anyone else."

"You're incriminating yourself with every word you speak, Spencer."

The shirt that the jailers had given Hugh was soaked with perspiration. "The principal waiter at the Sign of the Red Roan has known Miss Dean since she was a child."

"Ah," Sir Harry waved the prisoner into the carriage, and they drove quickly to the tavern, which was located on a narrow street off the Strand.

If the proprietor was disturbed he was too urbane to show his feelings and, behaving as though he received visits from representatives of the crown every day, he ushered them into a small office at the rear of the ground floor. Paul Bartley, he said, had been one of his most trusted employees for more than thirty years.

Hugh felt certain he would be vindicated, and, while waiting for Paul to arrive, stared out of a small window at the rear of the office. Soon he would be free again, but he realized that a formidable task awaited him. He couldn't blame Lady Dean for trying to protect her daughter from a man she believed to be a criminal, but Mrs. Radway's denial of her own identity had jarred him, and he realized, he would have to exert extraordinary efforts to convince Sara's mother that he had broken no laws.

It was probable that he would not be allowed to see Sara again until he established his innocence, and Lady Dean was wise to shield a lovely and innocent girl, but at the same time he wished Mrs. Radway hadn't gone to such lengths to pretend she didn't know him. She could have helped him to establish his innocence, but instead had complicated his position.

The proprietor returned, followed by Paul, who bowed to Sir Harry and smiled. "I've had the pleasure of serving you," he said. "You like your Channel sole grille over hickory, and your favorite wine is a white Bordeaux."

"A remarkable memory!" Sir Harry exclaimed. "I haven't dined here in the better part of a year."

Smiling faintly, Paul bowed again.

"Have you ever seen this man?" Sir Harry asked abruptly.

The waiter glanced disdainfully at Hugh. "Of course, sir."

"Will you tell me what you know about him?"

"Gladly, although my acquaintance with him is limited. I've only seen him once, Sir Harry, a little less than a fortnight ago. He sat in one of the private booths on the second floor, and he drank a rum toddy."

Hugh tried to interrupt, but the prosecutor glowered at him. "I'll conduct this interview, Spencer. Go on, Paul."

"There isn't much more to tell, Sir Harry. A balliff arrived and arrested him."

"Was he alone in the booth?" Sir Harry asked.

"Yes, sir." The reply was flat and perfunctory.

Hugh gasped.

"There was no woman with him?"

"No, Sir Harry."

Hugh could not remain silent any longer. "Certainly you remember that a young lady joined me."

The waiter shrugged and shook his head.

"It was Miss Sara Dean!"

"I don't know the lady, and I've never heard her name," Paul replied.

Frustrated and angry, Hugh said, "You've known her since she was a child. Her father and her uncle were patrons of the Red Roan for many years."

"Sorry, but I can't oblige you. I don't know any more—would you care to try another drink?"

"And you don't remember serving her a West Indian punch?"

The waiter turned to Sir Harry. "I'm not familiar with the concoction, sir."

The proprietor, a soberly dressed man in his late fifties, tugged gently at the gold watch fob that hung from a waistcoat pocket. "I can corroborate that, Sir Harry. I serve no drink here known as a West Indian punch. And I know all of my patrons, naturally. I'm sure you'll agree I'm not boasting when I say there's no finer in London than the Sign of the Red Roan. The secret of my success is very simple. I cater to the same people year after year. The only Dean I know is Colonel Thurston Dean of Cornwall, who was a member of the Commons for several years after his retirement from the Light Infantry. I believe he's been afflicted with the gout for the past decade or more, however, and he hasn't made a trip to the city in years. He's a widower, incidentally, and has no children."

Hugh turned to the proprietor in astonishment. "You refused to give me a table when I arrived, but you changed your mind and showed me to the booth yourself when I mentioned the name of Sara Dean and said I was expecting to meet her here!"

The proprietor sighed. "I fear I can offer you no substantial proof that the scene this man has described is a figment of his own imagination, Sir Harry."

"Perhaps you'll be good enough to tell me what did happen," the prosecutor suggested.

"Of course. This fellow arrived at the afternoon dinner hour, introduced himself as Spencer, and said that he had a transaction of some importance to conclude. He intimated that his business was of a rather delicate nature, and although I would have refused him admittance under ordinary circumstances, Prince Frederick's enquiry had arrived no more than a quarter of an hour earlier to inform me that His Royal Highness was indisposed and would be unable to use his booth. So, rather than allow the table to remain empty, I granted this Spencer person permission to use the booth."

Hugh was so angry he was speechless.

"If you wish," the proprietor added, "you're at liberty to check my story at Prince Frederick's household. He's in the city at present. I feel reasonably sure you'll find his enquiry at Whitehall."

"There is no need to embarrass any member of His Highness' staff," Sir Harry said succinctly. "Your word is enough for me—and for any magistrate in the country."

Oscar Unlikely To Get New Act Show Needs

AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Just about everyone is agreed: Oscar needs a new act.

The question is will he get it? The answer is probably not.

None but the most simple-minded movie fan—and there aren't many around any more—would claim that Monday night's Oscar telecast was a good show.

it rolling. But even a master quipster can't breathe life into an over-burdened, poorly conceived, downright dull show.

Only in the last 10 minutes of the two-hour-plus show was there any degree of importance and excitement. Then the timing had lagged so far behind that film clips of the nominated pictures had to be eliminated.

Between the opening fanfare and

Found New Career In Learning About Government

ROBERT L. MARTIN . . . member of the board of County Commissioners.

"MIDDLE-OF-THE-ROADER" . . . enjoys accomplishing things for Pitt people.

COMMISSIONER MARTIN . . . "still need to keep improving school system."

SIGNING CHECKS . . . "do things according to our ability to pay."

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A native of Pitt County, R.L. Martin of Bethel, a member of the Board of County Commissioners since 1956, finds working with people and seeing things accomplished very enjoyable.

Born on a farm three miles south of Bethel, Martin was orphaned at the age of eight, and two years later entered Oxford Orphanage. He graduated in 1929 then took post graduate courses in business and telegraphy.

Martin returned to Bethel in 1932 and began farming, then accepted a job with the Atlantic Coast Line railroad in 1936, working "extra" in the Norfolk district for the next five years.

He was then assigned to Hasells as a telegraph operator, then moved to Kinston and on to Parmele as telegraph operator. He was made Agency supervisor in Greenville for the Atlantic Coast Line in 1953.

Martin first ventured into the political field in 1949 when he ran for the town board of commissioners of Bethel.

Martin explained that he entered politics because of a "desire to learn something about government."

After serving on the board of commissioners, Martin ran for Mayor of Bethel in 1951 and was elected. He also was voted mayor in 1953 and again in 1955.

school system and it should be done as fast as our ability to pay increases.

"We should do things according to our ability to pay for them."

Recently appointed a member of the board of Directors of Oxford Orphanage by Governor Sanford, Martin is a district advisor for the orphanage, past district deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of the N. C. Fifth District A. F. and A. M. and a past master of Bethel Lodge No. 598 A. F. and A. M.

WASHINGTON, N. C. — Construction is underway on a 23-unit addition for the Washington Motel located on US 17 in Washington.

The addition, to be known as East House, is a "double-decker." There will be four extra large executive suites, but all of the units are scaled considerably larger than most motor hotels.

The new building is scheduled to open June 15.

The Washington Motel, a Quality Court, is owned and operated by Al Lewin, president of WGTC Broadcasting Co. in Greenville.

Claims Record In Newest Fad

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP)—A Union College student claims the world record for the latest in college endurance fads—maintaining a continuous flame in a cigarette lighter.

Marshall Munson of Providence, R.I., said Wednesday night he kept the flame alive 83 minutes, 30 seconds. He said the old mark of 34 minutes, 34 seconds was held by Riverside Junior College, Riverside, Calif.

Desire to Know More

Martin, who "still wanted . . . had a desire to learn more about government", ran for his county office in 1956. Enjoying it, Martin noted the county government is more complicated and he is still learning.

"I like people. . . like to do things for people," he commented. "I like public service" and "I like to get things done."

In addition to his law-making duties as a member of the board, Martin is a member of the committee of education and vice-chairman of the Finance Committee.

Martin, saying his overall job "brings me together with people" says he likes "accomplishing things for the people of Pitt . . . helping carry Pitt County forward."

"I am right much concerned about the growth in government on all levels," he commented. "I think that at times it gets a little larger than the people's ability to pay for it."

"The county has grown and the government has grown with the county."

Saying he is a "middle of the roader", Martin expressed the viewpoint that "if private interests can do a job we should keep government out of it."

He made the statement while commenting on a county rest home.

He explained that if private interests cannot be found to run a home, "I think we will have to go into it. . . there is a big need for it."

Fountain Board Meets Chief

FOUNTAIN — Fountain's Commissioners Tuesday met their new police chief, replaced a street department dump truck and authorized a contract for the town's fiscal 1961-62 audit work.

Police Chief Donald R. Price, who began his duties Monday, attended the commissioners' regular monthly meeting and heard the official board discuss the nature of police department responsibilities.

Price succeeded veteran chief L. F. Bradshaw who retired effective March 15.

The commissioners approved payment of $750 to Duke Buick-Pontiac Co. of Farmville for a dump truck to replace an old vehicle in J. H. Harris' street department. It is Fountain's only dump truck.

Mayor J. L. Peele and town clerk Mrs. Shelby Owens were authorized to contract W. C. Faines & Co. of Tarboro to audit the town's books for the current fiscal year. The work is expected to require about a week after it is begun, probably in July or August.

Will Talk On Philippines Work

House Republican 'Talkathon' Had Its Entertaining Aspects

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans staged a nighttime talkathon against the Kennedy administration, but whether it was as effective as it was entertaining is debatable.

The six-hour show Wednesday night was not meant to be funny. A procession of Republican speakers tried grimly to stick to their appointed task of lambasting the administration but some Democrats made it difficult.

There was Rep. John C. Kluczynski, D-Ill., for instance. As the torrent of words continued he donned a pair of buff-colored ear muffs, put his feet up on the chair in front of him, and with an unlit cigar in his mouth read a newspaper.

And there was Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, who twice in the early going forced a halt while a quorum was rounded up and was talked out of others only by Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass.

McCormack finally put Hays in the speaker's chair, trying to forestall any further quorum calls. But trouble broke out on a new front.

As presiding officer, Hays was happy to announce the expiration of a speaker's time and reluctantly recognized a new one. His performance drew cries of rage from the Republicans who declared the chair out of order. This was a point on which Hays, as acting speaker, had to rule.

"Well, the chair is in the chair, so what are you going to do about it?" he replied, and gavelled the show along.

The talkfest was billed as "Operation Spring Thaw" and featured mainly the more conservative Republican members. Although Minority Leader Charles

A. Halleck, R-Ind., stayed until the midnight quitting time, he took no part in the talks and any other House Republican Leaders.

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., one of the sponsors, said the operation was designed to give Republicans a chance to counteract the "flannel-suited, army of opinion makers" that has been spreading the administration's word.

The Republicans attacked President Kennedy's foreign, fiscal domestic and defense policies. Their theme, as given by Wilson, was that the new frontier is not good for this country.

The Republicans kept from 40 to 50 members on the floor the entire time but the ranks of the Democrats ranged from a low of seven to a high of about 35 at adjournment. The galleries were well filled, with about 150 to 200 present at all times. Most were members of the District of Columbia Young Republicans Club.

Denouncing Of Steel Price Hike Has Ring Of FDR's 1936 Assault

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy has struck at big steel with the political vigor that Franklin D. Roosevelt employed in attacking big business generally.

Kennedy's sharp-tongued indictment of "a tiny handful of steel executives whose pursuit of private power and profit exceeds their public responsibility" had the ring of FDR's 1936 assault on the "new economic dynasties, thirsting for power."

The President's caustic assertion at Wednesday's news conference that a steel price increase was "a wholly unjustifiable and irresponsible defiance of the public interest" seemed to draw the lines for a Democratic attack on big business in this year's political campaigns.

Kennedy sketched this strategy with the contention that the price boost would hit the mass of voters through increased costs of homes, autos, appliances for the average consumer and of machinery and tools for business men and farmers.

"It would seriously handicap our efforts to prevent an inflationary spiral from eating up the pensions of our older citizens, and our new gains in purchasing power," he said. For the benefit of those who back budget balancing, he said the price increase would boost defense spending by $1 billion in the next fiscal year.

Democrats, sensing a fresh issue, rallied quickly to the President, denouncing big steel's action.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., called it "an affront to the President and an irritant to labor." Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., predicted that "the country will pay a stiff price" for the boost.

Sen. George A. Smathers, D-Fla., said "I'm a friend of business but this was a dumb thing to do"—a view obviously shared privately by some Republicans.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., who once said the Republican party should be proud to be the party of business, told the Senate "I deprecate and deplore" the price increase. He said it is "very likely to put the steel industry in hot water with the people of the United States."

Republican comment was sparse, but Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., a member of the antitrust and monopoly subcommittee, said he couldn't subscribe to Kennedy's statement that the action of the steel companies was irresponsible and defiant.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, of Iowa, chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, said in a separate interview he doesn't follow the President's reasoning since he said Kennedy has encouraged actions which brought about increased costs to the steel industry. "When costs go up, prices go up," he said.

Food Shortage Plague Accompanies Communism

EDITOR'S NOTE — From China's Pacific Coast to the Red toehold in the Caribbean, the story is the same: Most Communists are hungry. On Khrushchev's own testimony, the Soviet Union produced less grain and had less livestock in 1953 than it did under the czars. What are the reasons for communism's serious inability to provide for its millions? An AP news analyst suggests the answers in this second in a two-part series on the Communist food crisis.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst
Soviet Premier Khrushchev's biggest cold war gamble is not

Berlin or Viet Nam or any other of the world's hot spots. It is in Soviet agricultures.
He is gambling that he can get away with heresy in a desperate attempt to cure the chronic food troubles which historically beset Soviet and other Communist-ruled lands.
If he wins out in a relatively short period of years, the Kremlin can consider it a victory far more important than taking over a new slice of real estate.
If he loses, he can lose his job. Persistent failure of Communist agriculture is regarded in Washington as one of the most important aspects of the cold war. President Kennedy is known to feel that if the U.S.S.R., while it still is led by those obsessed with the notion of world domination, should ever out-produce the United States in food and consumer goods, the cause of the whole free world would be in danger.

Agricultural failures are common to the whole Red bloc, an ever-present reminder to other countries that communism means anything but abundance.
Red China is in a perpetual state of crisis in food supply.
Red East Germany's leaders have just completed a long session laboring farmers for production and exhorting them to produce more.
Hungary is chronically short of grain and frequently even such humble staples as potatoes. Bulgaria and Poland both have had to turn to the United States for grain purchases. Of all the Communist states, only advanced Czechoslovakia has made a show of meeting her farm problems, but even Czech production continues under prewar, pre-Communist levels.

What's the matter with Communist agriculture?
Causes of the failures go all the way back to the early days of the Stalin era. Because communism requires blind obedience, other regimes imitated Stalin and suffered similar consequences.
Shortly after Stalin died nine years ago, Khrushchev, rising rapidly to pre-eminence in the party, boldly exposed the frightful mess that was Soviet agriculture. By his account, Soviet output of grain and the livestock population both were lower in 1953 than in czarist 1913.
Soviet agriculture received a heavy blow when Stalin forced collectivization with a campaign of slaughter of unwilling peasants. That brought the U.S.S.R. to the edge of famine.
Food production troubles were intensified by Stalin's insistence that heavy industry, which builds world and military power, retain priority over the consumer side. Khrushchev continues to insist on that, but with some modifications. The investment in heavy industry prevented delivery of sufficient farm machinery, fertilizer and other essentials for modern farming to feed huge populations. Productivity suffered. Even today one Soviet farm worker can produce only enough to feed five persons. One U.S. farm worker produces enough to feed 40 persons.
Khrushchev blamed Stalin. He said there had been too much bureaucracy; too much toadying to the boss; too much "indulging in eyewash." All decisions had to be made at the center and problems could not be solved on the spot. Today—as for years—the most productive side of Soviet farming is the private sector, the produce of peasants' own small plots which they sell on the free market. Khrushchev intends eventually to eliminate this, as too closely resembling capitalism. But he must have something in its place.

He is seeking what he calls material incentives. He proposes bonuses for production, payment in money to collective farmers instead of in goods, payment of both managers and farmers on the basis of what they produce.
He experiments with decentralizing authority. He demands radical reorganization of collective farms. He demands that managers solve their problems on the spot without reference to a central bureaucracy. He demands cost reduction.
Some of his proposals smack of heresy to doctrinaire Communists. The heresies add to the bloc's ideological confusion.
But doctrine still gets in the way. When Khrushchev commits heresy he creates new doctrine and it, too, can be followed out the window.
For example, Khrushchev currently is campaigning against the grasslands system which ruled Soviet farming under Stalin. This involves rotation of crops with planting of grass in alternate years. It was intended by its sponsor, Prof. Vasily Williams, son of a U.S. engineer, only for the humid northwest areas.

But once Stalin blessed the system, fearful underlings adopted it all over the nation rather than risk being accused of treason. Results were disastrous. Now Khrushchev is blasting the system. This can mean its abandonment all over the country. Soviet politics being what they are, with new disastrous results.
Ever since Khrushchev came to power he has been promising the Red world that Soviet food and consumer goods production would catch up with and surpass that of the United States. Year after year he revises his estimate. The promise for catching up now stands at 1970, for surpassing at 1960.

But in 1961, by Khrushchev's own figures, meat production fell three million tons short of planned output, grain and milk each by more than 16 million. Khrushchev is raising the roof.
Khrushchev has lost several big agricultural bets in the past. But he is an inveterate gambler. If he wins this time he will be a hero of communism. If he loses there can be convulsions all over the Red bloc.

Common Sense Can Beat 'Luck' Of Friday The 13th

Throw away those dime store good luck charms, tomorrow is Friday the 13th and it's no laughing matter.
By midnight tomorrow, an estimated 254 Americans will be dead as a result of accidents. More than one-third of them will die in auto mishaps. The rest will be killed in accidents, ranging from drowning to slipping on roller skates. The death toll will top the fatalities from the Chicago fire of 1871.

Another 25,700 persons will be injured in accidents. The causes will be common such as auto crashes or falling off a ladder. They will be as bizarre as swallowing a table fork. (It really happened recently.)
Those two statistics merit some consideration when it comes to looking at Friday the 13th as an ill omen. But there is even more evidence to support the superstition.
Last year, two Fridays fell on the 13th of the month. The evil spirits were busy both days. Their efforts caused gigantic financial loss as well as the personal suffering which parallels every accident or sickness.
Loss of wages alone amounted to $22 million for those two Fridays. Medical and hospital expenses collected another $5 million. Property damage losses in motor vehicle accidents cost $12 million and fire losses added $5 million to the soaring bill.
These figures make a strong case for validity of the folklore which has come to make Friday the 13th unlucky. But the argument is lost when a closer study of the statistics bring out one important fact.
Those tragic deaths and accidents — those staggering financial losses are average figures for ANY DAY OF THE YEAR, NOT JUST FRIDAY THE 13TH.
Estimated from the latest detailed report of Accident Facts, published by the National Safety Council, the figures pinpoint a shocking realization that every day is unlucky for thousands of Americans when they become accident or sickness victims. They make every day as bad as the mythical spirits which roam on those infrequent dates which bring Friday and 13 together on the calendar.

Good luck charms don't work. Rabbit's feet fall short of their reputation for protection. It doesn't help to avoid walking beneath a ladder or stepping on sidewalk cracks. An unbroken mirror won't prevent trouble. The answer is simple, according to Bill Ellington of the Allstate Insurance Companies, representing the Allstate Safety Crusade.
"Use common sense to avoid accidents. Obey safety rules at home or at work, on the highway or playground. Protect yourself from injury by these basic ideas and protect your financial future with a reliable accident and sickness insurance program."
Ellington said, "Friday the 13th doesn't have to mean bad luck."
In fact, his company looks forward to such days as a time to remind its employees and friends that sound insurance planning, coupled with good health and safety habits, can provide people with protection from bad luck any day of the year.

To Sail Again

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Crews from striking seafaring unions signed on today for a resumption of West Coast and Hawaii shipping under a Taft-Hartley court order asked by President Kennedy.
Some of the approximately 60 vessels tied up in the month-old strike were loaded and ready to sail as soon as crews report. A number expected to leave port during the day.
The American President Lines announced its luxury liner President Wilson would sail Monday for Honolulu and the Orient.
U. S. Dist. Judge George B. Harris issued a temporary restraining order late Wednesday under the Taft-Hartley Act after President Kennedy requested that the Justice Department file a petition in the national interest, and particularly for relief of Hawaii.

Hawaii's Gov. William Quinn appealed to the White House to intervene because of steadily dwindling food supplies. The pinch also was felt on the West Coast where some processors contracted with foreign flag ships to bring in raw materials.

Acting Career Aided By TV Selling Job

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—James Daly Broadway, television and motion picture star, says that one of the best things that ever happened to him was his selection—six years ago—as television spokesman for a cigarette company.
Daly, who will be seen in the title role of "Give Us Barabbas," an NBC re-run of a Biblical drama on Sunday, finds his regular role as a salesman gives him financial security to pursue his professional career with freedom.
"It takes care of things so that I can afford to work in the theater and to take chances," explained the actor. "You know, it is very hard to make a decent living in Broadway shows—so many of them close so soon."
Daly has been fortunate, in that his six years as a television salesman have not stamped him with the identity of the company.
Daly believes that his selling job has actually helped his acting career.
He has starred in two Broadway hit shows in recent seasons; is currently in a movie, and is working on a show for Broadway next year. In addition, he has appeared often in television dramas sponsored by other companies.

"And if I didn't have this spokesman job," he said, "I'd probably have to move myself and my family to California and work in movies. I'm perfectly happy and hope I can keep this extra job forever."
NBC's "Telephone Hour" next season will be a monthly show, and pop up here and there all over its prime-time schedules.
The program, often a rather stilted affair, has alternated this past season with the Dinah Shore Show on a Friday night spot.
ABC's "Queen for a Day" has been on the road for a couple of weeks demonstrating that the program which has been a radio and television stalwart for 17 years still delights the ladies. It packed 14,000 of them a day in Philadelphia's Convention Hall for a week and is now getting a daily overflow crowd in Columbus, Ohio.

Hardy Hit Grand Slammer For Red Sox 4-0 Victory

By BOB SALMON
Associated Press Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP)—"What are you complaining about?" yelled Garold Hardy with a big grin. "We gave you four runs, didn't we?"

The joshing remark to pitcher Bill Monbouquette came in the Red Sox dressing room after the former pro football halfback belted a bases loaded home run to give Boston a 4-0 win over Cleveland Wednesday.

Sugar Ray Goes On Boxing Tour

NEW YORK (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson, who celebrates his 42nd birthday on May 3, leaves today for Miami, Fla., en route to a four-stop boxing tour of the Caribbean area and South America.

The grand slammer didn't come, however, until the bottom of the 12th inning—nearly three hours after Monbouquette hooked up in a brilliant pitching duel with Indians rookie Ron Taylor.

In the interim, Monbou had hurled a one-hitter for nine innings and Taylor had allowed only five hits over the regulation distance. It looked as though the two teams might never score until Hardy's first-pitch blast off Taylor.

"Yes, that was my first homer in Fenway Park in three seasons with Boston," said Hardy, 28. "I hit line drives most of the time and they are not tailored for this park."

"I'll have to admit that was my biggest thrill since the last football game I played for Colorado University," said Hardy, who won the starting right field position vacated by slugger Jackie Jensen's retirement last winter.

Hardy, under prompting, recalled that he gained 248 yards while scoring three touchdowns against Denver in 1954. He gave up a promising pro football career with the San Francisco 49ers to concentrate on baseball.

Hardy was one of Boston's best hitters in spring training and is batting .625 at the moment.

Hardy, who makes his home at Boulder, Colo., came into the majors in 1958 with Cleveland. He came to the Red Sox in 1960 but was shunted to the bench with Ted Williams and Jensen on the scene.

Michigan Racing Is Under Fire

DETROIT (AP)—A proposal to abolish pari-mutuel betting in Michigan wouldn't stop residents from gambling on horses and would cost the state a tax bonanza, says State Racing Commissioner Edgar Hayes.

"This proposal could get to the voters and then it could easily get across," he said.

The proposal, approved 80-42 by a constitutional convention committee, could close all race tracks in Michigan within a couple of years. Michigan now has two thoroughbred tracks and four harness tracks.

"Horse racing employs a lot of people in Michigan," Hayes said. "It's a tax bonanza for the state. I don't see what advantage there would be in shutting it down."

Hayes said if Michigan closed its tracks, horseracing would flourish just on the other side of the state's borders.

"It wouldn't stop Michigan people from gambling on horses," Hayes said. "There'd immediately be a new track in Windsor and the track at Toledo would extend."

Windsor, Ont., is just across the Detroit River—the United States-Canadian boundary—from Detroit, Ohio, is about 60 miles from Detroit and is near heavily populated southeastern Michigan.

Hayes said horseracing—both thoroughbred and harness—paid Michigan $7.3 million in taxes last year and more than $8 million the year before.

The proposal to outlaw racing will come up at least twice more in the state constitutional convention now under way in Lansing.

Celtics Can Still Win Big Games

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Boston Celtics still win the big games and they're back in the running for their fourth straight National Basketball Association championship.

They gave the Los Angeles Lakers a 115-103 lacing Wednesday night to draw even at two games each, and flew back to Boston at once to rest for the fifth contest Saturday night.

"We just had to win this one," Celtic Coach Red Auerbach said as he herded his athletes into a bus headed for the airport. "I'm tremendously proud of the way they bounced back from that heart-breaking loss Tuesday night (117-115)."

"The fellows had a lot of life and our shooting was just about at capacity. This was the time for them to be on. Otherwise we would have been down 3-1."

Boston started off with a 3-0 lead on a basket and foul shot by Bill Russell and never surrendered it. The Celtics were in front 32-20 after one quarter, 60-51 at the half, 91-76 after three quarters. Six players shot in double figures with Russell the top man at 21.

Stan The Man added another record to his bulging file by scoring the 1,859th 1 in his career, equalling Mel Ott's National League record.

The 41-year-old Musial had two singles, a double and two runs batted in.

Musial now has his sights on Honus Wagner's National League career record of 3,340 hits. He needs 27 more to break it and move into third place in the all-time list behind Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb.

"Let's get that one real quick, two hits at a time," Stan said, smiling. "You never know when fate might step in."

Musial now holds or shares 38 National League records and 13 major league records.

Greensboro Open Begins

By KEN ALTYA
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—The 23rd annual Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament, which has taken on the character of a Sam Snead benefit since his 1958 inaugural began today with about 120 of the nation's foremost players in the field.

The 4-day, 72-hole chase for the winner's $6,300 end of the total $35,000 jackpot began with a lengthy list of top drawer swingers on hand.

Among them were Arnold Palmer and Dow Finsterwald, who met in the Masters playoff at Augusta, Ga., Mike Souchak, Doug Ford, Stan Leonard and Bob Goalby, like Snead and Finsterwald former winners here; and such worthy challengers as Bill Casper, Doug Sanders, Art Wall, Julius Boros, Kel Nagel, George Bayer, Jack Nicklaus, Charlie Siford, Billy Maxwell, Phil Rodgers, Joe Campbell and Dave Marr. All told, 11 of the year's top 17 money winners and 24 of 40 are here.

But Snead, nearing his 50th birthday, still commands the lion's share of interest.

Slamming Sam has compiled a fantastic record here since winning the first GGO 24 years ago. In all, he has notched seven victories, the last in 1960. Last year he was runner-up to Souchak.

Gary Player, the little South African, flew back home earlier in the week, electing to pass up the GGO.

Hole-In-One For Youngster

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—The Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament opened today with all eyes on the big pros, but Bob Kulp Jr., a 15-year-old high school sophomore from Winston-Salem stole a lion's share of the glory in Wednesday's pro-amateur tournament.

Kulp came up with a hole-in-one on the 244-yard third hole to help his pro partner Thorne Wood of Asheboro win $320 as the pro member of the three-man team with the lowest best ball score.

Wood shot a par 71 on his own. Sharing the spotlight with Kulp was professional Billy Maxwell who shot an 8-under-par 63 to lead the field of 50 pros and win $400 of the $4,000 pro jackpot.

Dave Marr, winner of the Azalea Open last week, was three strokes behind Maxwell with a 66 that earned him $340.

Six other pros shot 67s to win $105.71 each.

Focus On Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Back pains, arm pains, and a way to help artificial teeth work better are medical topics this week:

CURING THAT ACHING BACK
Psychoanalysts, like many other people, do most of their work sitting down.

They don't use many muscles, and a high percentage of them are afflicted with backaches. The reason is mainly too little physical exercise, say Dr. Hans Kraus and Sonya Weber of New York City.

They prescribed muscular fitness tests, and then exercises, for 26 psychoanalysts complaining of low back pain and pain in the upper back, neck, shoulders and legs. After continued regular exercises, eight were free of pain and the rest had definite relief. All improved considerably in muscle strength and flexibility, Dr. Kraus reports.

DENTURE FIT
Now there's a way to help artificial teeth "grow" so they will meet properly with teeth in the opposing upper or lower jaw.

Natural teeth are continuously erupting, and this allows them to keep meeting despite normal wearing down, explains Dr. Bernard Jankelson of Seattle. When people get false teeth, the original fit may be good, but the wearing process eventually allows a denture to become loose.

In a new technique, porcelain teeth are used in the upper denture, and acrylic or plastic ones in the lower. If wearing occurs in the dentures loosen, a plastic

New Assistant Secretary Sworn
WASHINGTON (AP)—Robert J. Manning was sworn in Wednesday as assistant secretary of state for public affairs. He will serve as chief public information adviser to Secretary Dean Rusk.

Manning, a newsmen for a quarter of a century, is the second man to hold the $20,000-a-year position since Rusk took office at the outset of the Kennedy administration in January 1961. The previous public affairs chief, Roger W. Tubby, was recently named U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and other international organization headquarters at Geneva.

Old Man Musial Defeats Stengel

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Stan Musial—whose first major league game 21 years ago was against a Casey Stengel team—ruined Ol' Casey's return to the National League by getting 3-for-3 Wednesday night.

Casey tried not to appear impressed.

"Yeah, he's still down" the job—that's what they're paying him for," grunted Stengel after his New York Mets were clipped by the St. Louis Cardinals in their opener, 11-4.

"He's the only player left from my last time in the National League," (as Boston Braves manager) said the 71-year-old manager. "No wonder they keep him around."

Stan The Man added another record to his bulging file by scoring the 1,859th 1 in his career, equalling Mel Ott's National League record.

The 41-year-old Musial had two singles, a double and two runs batted in.

Musial now has his sights on Honus Wagner's National League career record of 3,340 hits. He needs 27 more to break it and move into third place in the all-time list behind Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb.

Last Will Lauds Loving Wife

LONDON (AP)—Sir Hubert J. Wallington, in his will made public Wednesday, described his wife as "darling, charming, wise, loving, tender, kind, sweet, helpful, patient, considerate, unselfish, joyfully self-sacrificing, devoted and loyal."

Sir Hubert, a former high court judge who sat in the divorce division, died in January at age 86. He left his beloved lady his entire estate of 12,000 pounds ($33,600).

CAUSES OF ARM ACHE

Painful conditions of the shoulder and arm seem to be increasing, perhaps because "somewhat violent episodes seem to dominate our working life, and leisure," says Dr. Harold A. Sofield of Oak Park, Ill.

We hurry when we go to work, or engage in violent sports occasionally, and such rough treatment causes injury.

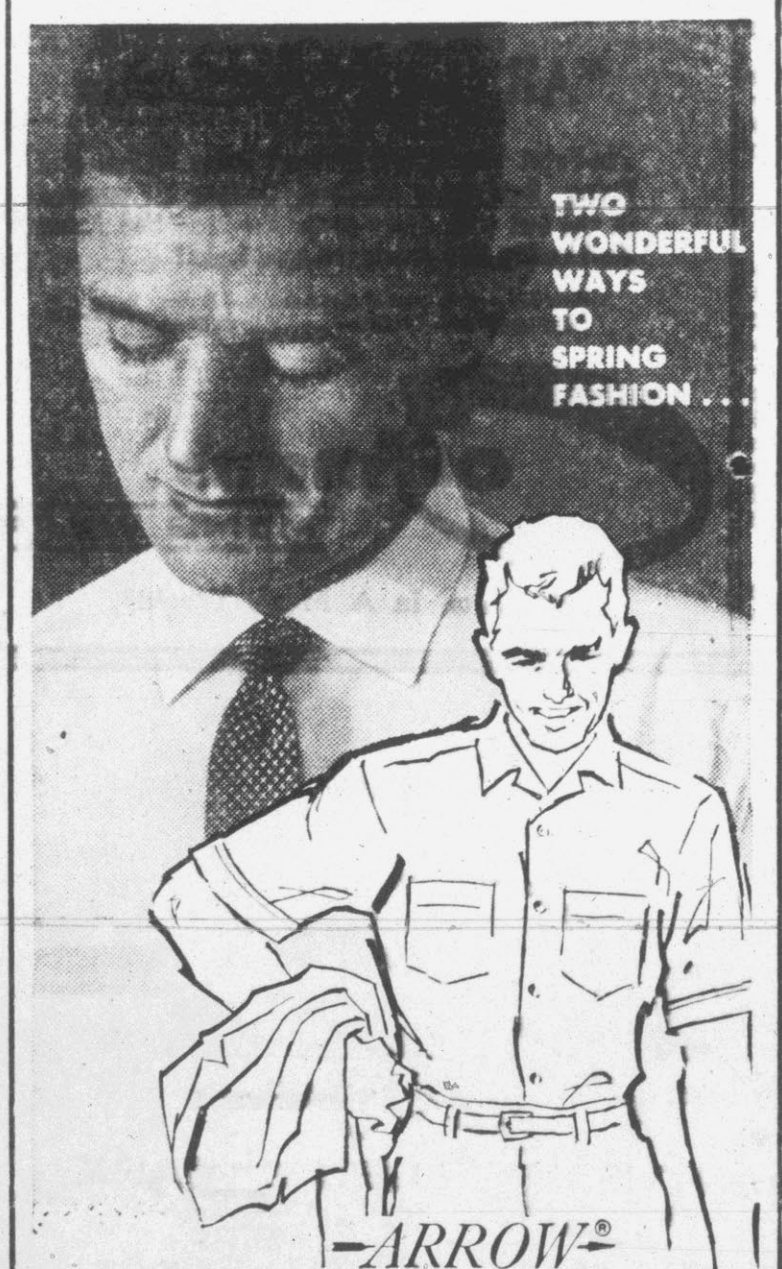

"Part of the problem stems from our ancestors' determination to walk in an upright position. Our arms swing through a wide range of motion, and tendons are thus subjected to extra wear and tear. When this wear and tear is excessive, tendon fibers degenerate and calcium deposits may occur."

SET LEHIGH RECORD
BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP)—Halfback Charles LaMotta of Pittsburgh set a Lehigh University football record in 1961 when he returned an intercepted lateral pass 92 yards for the winning touchdown against Colgate.

LAND OF ART

ART IN THE SUN. Sculptors and artists at work in courtyard of school at Carrara.

Italy, the home of great classical art, is still rich soil for the modern artist. In town and city, in the bright outdoors of the open field or the fountained piazza of the village, in studio or classroom, artists, young and old, can be seen almost daily applying their skill to clay and canvas.

The artist in Italy finds much to inspire him. Everywhere around him, as subjects for his painting or sculpture, or other forms of art, are the time-mellowed homes and land, the ancient ruins and statuary, the vast collections of the works of great artists, all accessible for study and reproduction.

The Italian government encourages art and artists. It subsidizes most of the art schools where tuition is free or fees are low. These schools thrive not only in the large cities like Rome, Naples and Florence, but also in the smaller communities. They offer a wide variety of subjects, from painting, sculpture, mosaics and ceramics, to such courses as woodwork, ironwork, copperwork and glassblowing. Classes are maintained throughout the year.

Giant Newspaper Trade Ass'n Saw Start In Casual Idea 75 Years Ago

NEW YORK (AP)—At noon on Feb. 16, 1887, at Powers' Hotel in Rochester, N.Y., William H. Brearley of the Detroit Evening News opened a meeting of 45 other daily newspaper publishers and managers with these words: "We have a little plan to suggest—"

That was the beginning of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the influential daily newspaper trade association that holds its 75th anniversary convention here April 23-26.

From its modest start, the ANPA has grown until today it has more than 845 daily newspaper members in the United States and Canada. Its membership represents more than 50 per cent of the total U.S. daily newspaper circulation, and 94.8 per cent of total Sunday circulation.

The association's by laws say: "The objects of this association are the protection of the members from irresponsible customers; the gathering and disseminating among its members of news of value to them; and the rendering to each other of such other assistance as may be within their power."

Appropos of the simile "as up-to-date as today's newspaper," a highlight of the convention will be a demonstration of how the newspaper business may use the communications satellites in the future.

A news story will be transmitted at 1,000 words a minute from a sending station to a full-size model of the communications satellite "Telstar" suspended over the stage. The copy then will be relayed to a receiving station, all located in the hotel's grand ballroom.

The demonstration will accompany a speech by E. J. McNeely, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., on "new developments in communication."

Telstar is the experimental communications satellite developed by AT&T. Scheduled to be launched in late spring from Cape Canaveral, it is 34½ inches in diameter and is designed to provide 600 voice channels or the equivalent for worldwide communication.

Also on the program is an address by Edward W. Barrett, dean of the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. His subject, "The Next Generation in Journalism."

The ANPA serves as a clearing house of information for answers to publishing problems. It maintains a research laboratory dedicated to improving daily newspaper production and guiding manufacturers toward more efficient methods and equipment for producing the daily newspaper of tomorrow.

Stanford Smith is general manager of the association, a position he has held since Aug. 1, 1960. Previously he was secretary-manager of the Georgia Press Association.

It was the need of an organization to look after the business side of newspapers that prompted Brearley to present his proposal at Rochester.

He told the publishers there were many editorial associations in the country, but none particularly interested in the business problems of daily newspapers, and business was becoming more complicated.

One of the publishers present was Melville E. Stone, founder, editor and co-publisher until 1888 of the Chicago Daily News. Stone later became the first general manager of the reorganized Associated Press.

Also present were Col. Charles H. Jones of the Jacksonville, Fla., Times-Union; William M. Singery, publisher of the Philadelphia Record; Samuel H. Kauffmann, president and one of the owners, with the Noyes family, of the Washington Evening Star; Joseph Dear, editor of the Jersey City Journal; Milton A. McRae, busi-

Big Question For Today; Can Steel Make Price Hike Stick?

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The big question today is: Can steel producers make a price hike stick? In the past a few have had to be rescinded.

U.S. Steel, which raised prices an average of $6 a ton to around $156, is the biggest producer by far and usually sets industry rates. Other producers have put consumers on notice for months that they felt a price hike justified and are eager to go along.

The industry has protested that the new wage contract in July won't be noninflationary as the Kennedy administration and steel union leaders contend.

But against all this pressure for higher steel prices on the part of the producers are some counterbalancing factors:

The administration is strongly opposed to a steel price hike, lest it set another wage-price spiral whirling in other industries.

Consumers may be balky, especially if increased steel costs are passed along in higher prices on end products in the stores.

Most observers of steel industry trends are looking for a slowdown in new orders, now that the fear of a strike in July has been averted. And even with the upswing in orders in the first three months of 1962 the industry is operating below capacity.

This has sharpened competition among the steel companies themselves for available business.

Producers of other materials are increasing their inroads on what once was steel's field alone. Aluminum and copper have taken some part of the old market. Plastics have taken more. Glass and concrete have a much larger share of the construction business than a few years back.

Finally, over the American industry is the shadow of foreign steel. Government statistics show that in the last few years steel imports have increased while exports have declined.

Foreign steel is cheaper because of lower wage scales abroad and to some extent because of newer and more efficient plants erected since the war. This has taken some of the world market away from American companies and some domestic business, too.

All of these factors are why many thought steel prices would be held. Steel users who cut back on their ordering after the new labor pact was reached obviously thought so or they would have rushed to beat the price hike. The administration and the labor union apparently thought so when they issued their noninflationary prospectus.

But steel management warned costs had already risen so high that profits were badly squeezed, and that the new pact would squeeze them even more.

So, Big Steel raised prices in face of all the reasons that led steel consumers and administration officials to believe a price hike unlikely. Now we'll have to wait to see if the hike will stick.

56 Fire Dept. Calls In March

Members of the Greenville fire department responded to 56 calls over the 31 days of March, Chief George W. Gardner reported.

According to Gardner, 28 of the calls were received by telephone while six were transmitted by the fire alarm box circuit. Twenty-two calls were for rescue.

Of the fire calls, nine were to mercantile establishments while eight were to residences. Others included calls to autos, trash fires, false alarms and the like.

The city's fire prevention bureau inspected a total of 138 businesses including 23 within the fire district and 110 in outlying districts.

Volunteer firemen's payroll for March totaled $135 while total volunteer pay for the fiscal year amounts to $1,667.75.

Fire and rescue personnel are continuing their weekly training the chief reported.

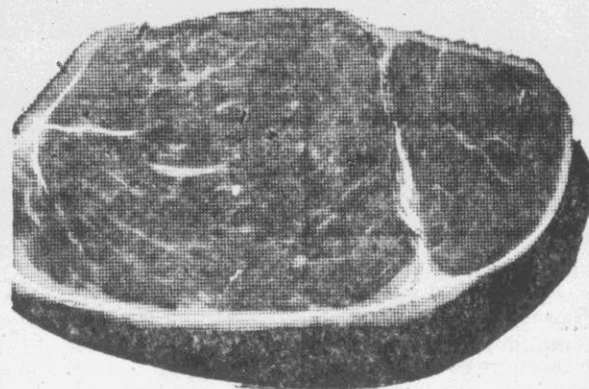

In addition to his regular report, Chief Gardner reported that two firemen, Captain Claude H. Christopher and Dawson Nethercutt have returned from a three-week school at the Canadian Civil Defense College at Arnprior, Ontario, Canada.

The two, the 25th and 26th Americans ever to attend the rescue school, were graduated "distinguished" from the course.

The annual hospital bill for cancer is estimated at about $350 million.

New College Prexy Looks In 2 Directions

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP)—Dr. Ansley Cunningham Moore called for the merger of the intellectual and the spiritual as he was inaugurated as the first president of St. Andrews Presbyterian College today.

"Today, as you can imagine, I am looking in two directions: at the past, and toward the future," he said in his presidential address.

"We have intimations of tomorrow because we can read the past. We are safe in saying this: Tell the next generation that the intellectual and the spiritual are not incompatible. They merge nicely. They cross fertilize each other."

St. Andrews was created by the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina to replace three existing Presbyterian colleges in the state. Dr. Moore, 58, a Presbyterian minister, was named president of the $8 million school in 1960 and the first classes began in 1961.

The inaugural ceremonies opened with an impressive academic procession which included Gov. Terry Sanford and official representatives from nearly 100 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

The inaugural address was delivered by Dr. Goodrich C. White, chancellor of Emory University, from which Dr. Moore received bachelor of philosophy degree.

Dr. White said, "Difficult and confusing and even threatening as the days in which we live may be, they cannot be for us a time of defeatism and despair. We must not yield our faith in the things for which the college stands. We must be able to see in a college such as this a final citadel of man's highest hopes and aspirations."

Following Dr. White's talk, Dr. Moore was inducted by Hector MacLean of Lumberton, chairman of the board of trustees.

Dr. Moore's talk was entitled: "Tell The Next Generation."

"Tell the next generation that the intellectual and spiritual are not incompatible," he said. "We can tell the next generation that, in our judgment, there will always be a place for truly great teaching."

"We may tell the next generation that a certain type of student will always be the one who sets the tone and course of the world of tomorrow. The entire college exists to produce significant changes in the lives of boys and girls."

"Every responsible student must have a willingness to learn, to be taught, a conviction that college is a privilege, and a sense of responsibility for those who come after him."

St. Andrews, with a co-educational enrollment of 850, was formed through the merger and consolidation of Flora Macdonald College, Peace College and Presbyterian Junior College.

"This is a new college," said Dr. White. "Yet within its first year it is able to have alumni meetings. This fact, too, is symbolic. This new college has a more recent and a more immediate heritage; the traditions and the record of service—and the alumni—of the institutions which have merged their life and the hopes of St. Andrews."

Dr. Moore, a native of Atlanta, was graduated from Emory and received his bachelor of divinity degree from Columbia Theological Seminary, Atlanta. He served pastorates in Georgia, Florida and Alabama and in Pittsburgh, where he conducted a ministerial radio program and wrote a column for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. He is a former member of the General Board of the National Council of Churches and served as a sociate editor of the Presbyterian Outlook. He also has served on the boards of Agnes Scott College, Muskingum College and Columbia Seminary.

Chapel Choir Of ECC Elects New Officers, Plans Easter Programs

Robert Tilley of Goldsboro, voice major at East Carolina College, has been elected president of the Chapel Choir at East Carolina, according to Dr. Carl Hjortsvang, director of the Choir and faculty member of the Music Department at the college. Mr. Tilley succeeds Julian D. Wagmaker of Williamson, N. Y., past president.

Serving with President Tilley are Lynda Lewis of Knightdale, vice president; and Betty Jo Gaskins of Grifton, secretary-treasurer.

Highlighting the Easter season, the Choir will present a program of "Seven Last Words" by Dubois, which tells the Easter story through music, on Monday, April 16, at 8 p.m. in the Austin Auditorium at the college. The public is cordially invited to attend.

On Tuesday, April 17, the Choir will travel to Raleigh. At that time a tape of "Seven Last Words" will be recorded for the "Vignettes in Sound" Series sponsored by the East Carolina Music Department and broadcast weekly over WRAL-TV, Channel 5. The program will be heard Sunday, April 22, from 2:00 p.m. until 2:30 p.m.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

When you buy a house, the chances are you expect to live in it a long time. But the records show that, on the average, a family lives only six or seven years in the same home. Now you know why there are so many new homes up for sale all the time.

What causes this constant shifting of the population into different residences? There is no one reason—not even one reason that stands out above all others. People move for a variety of reasons.

The family breadwinner may get a job opportunity in another city or may find that his company either has relocated its headquarters or has transferred him to a branch office somewhere else.

The family may have an added income that enables it to seek a more luxurious dwelling. The house may be condemned for a public improvement. The area may have become too crowded. The house may be too rundown to make remodeling practical. Or the family may have grown so over the years that there just isn't enough space.

Another contributing factor in this home-to-home movement is the tendency in recent years to move into retirement houses and areas. Old folks once were content to live out their lives wherever they were at the time of retirement. Now they want to sell the old homestead and move somewhere else. In many cases, they move hundreds or thousands of miles away in order to get the benefit of warmer climates. Some prefer retirement developments where the needs and wants of older persons are given special attention. Others prefer to settle in areas where they can mix with younger persons.

But there no longer is the feeling of years ago that they must stay close to their children and grandchildren. Modern transportation has made it easier for families to get together on special occasions even when separated by long distances. Yet it isn't the speed of transportation alone that has generated this feeling. It's a kind of modern attitude that retired people should live where they want to live, not necessarily where their families live.

One reason why you often can get a good buy in a home that isn't new is, as we said a few paragraphs back, people expect to live a long time in houses they buy. They make changes, add landscaping and do a dozen other things to turn the house into a home. Then, when they decide to move for one reason or another, the buyer gets the benefit of the improvements.

His only problem is to decide whether it is more economical for him to pay extra for a home with such improvements or to put the improvements in a house that doesn't have them.

Rare Tie Vote In High Court

RALEIGH (AP) — A rare tie vote by the State Supreme Court Wednesday had the effect of ruling in favor of a group of Southern Railway employees in a case involving union dues.

The employees contended they should not be required to pay union dues as long as a portion of their money is used for political purposes.

The 3-3 decision left in effect a decision handed down in 1958 in Mecklenburg Superior Court by Judge J. Will Pless. The tie vote also had the effect of reversing a 1959 decision by the Supreme Court on the issue.

Judge Pless held that the group of workers could not be required to pay union dues in excess of the amount required for the workers' pro rata share of the expense of the union's legitimate collective bargaining activities.

He also ruled that the workers could not be required to join unions in order to hold their jobs. A provision of the National Railroad Labor Act states, however, that railroad workers can be required to pay union dues whether they belong to the union or not if it is spelled out in the contracts.

Several employees of Southern Railway and two unions—the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and the Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen—were involved in the case.

A jury had held that the unions used dues to influence votes in elections to public office.

The State Supreme Court reversed Judge Pless in 1959. The U.S. Supreme Court later issued a new ruling on the subject. Following this, the rail workers asked for a rehearing and the State Supreme Court granted it.

Every Christmas For Past 31 Years, In Hand Of Law

By ASHLEY B. FUTRELL
Washington Daily News
WASHINGTON, N. C. (AP) — "I haven't spend a Christmas at home since I was 15 years old." That is Clarence (Tight) Brown's way of saying that on every Christmas for the last 31 years he has been on the roads or behind prison bars. Tight's criminal record is something to behold.

The record shows that Tight began his criminal career in Washington on March 3, 1930, when he was 15. In the intervening years he has been arrested in Washington 81 times.

His first offense was drunk on the streets, and he received a sentence of 60 days on the roads. He appealed, and before his trial, he was caught gambling and another 60 days sentence was added. Within a few days he was caught drunk a couple of more times and additional 90-day sentences were added. He served his time and with time off for good behavior, he came back to Washington only to run afoul of the law quickly. He was caught driving drunk on November 12, 1930. He was also charged with an affair. This cost him six months on the roads.

His difficulties with the law have been mostly what officers call "harassing" offenses. They mainly include drunkenness, breaking, entering, larceny, receiving, trespassing, and gambling. His longest sentence came in 1946 when he was given three to five years on two charges of breaking and entering.

"Tight" has an unusual story to tell because he is an unusual fellow. He has become so accustomed to court procedure that he always acts as his own lawyer. And lawyers say that he is very adept at the art of cross examination.

"Tight" says, "Liquor causes most of my troubles. When I get a few drinks in me, I think I own this town, and then you know what happens."

In 1946 Phillip Paul, now Washington Chief of police, noticed a window open in an automobile agency. He investigated, and inside the building he found "Tight." In court "Tight" told the judge and jury, "I was standing down at the bus station minding my own business when along comes Mr. Paul and takes me with him to this auto place. He forces me in the window and then arrests me for breaking and entering." His story did not impress the court and he was convicted and given a two-year sentence.

In February, 1952, he gained his freedom, was put off a truck in Washington, walked a couple of blocks and saw a chicken coop. He climbed over the fence in full view of the housewife nearby, picked up a chicken, and walked on. She called police, and within minutes "Tight" was in jail charged with larceny. In court he said, "Here I was walking down Fifth Street, minding my own business, when this chicken flew into my arms and I just couldn't turn him loose." Again his story did not impress the court and he was given four months.

Later he gained his freedom and in less than five minutes after he was put off the truck, he walked by the Salvation Army home. There was an old table on the porch. He walked over, picked up the table, put it atop his head, and sauntered off. Police were called, and he told the court, "I just can't figure out how that table got on top of my head." It cost him another 60 days.

"Tight" often comes into the newspaper office to discuss his affairs. When he enters the door, he is admonished, "Keep your hands in your pockets because we do not wish to lose any typewriters." He laughs and says, "How about lending an old man a quarter?"

Not listening carefully, in a few minutes this writer said, "Tight, what is it that you want?" He said, "Lend me 50 cents." Then it was realized that he had only asked for a quarter a moment before. The writer asked, "You only asked for a quarter a minute ago." Quick as a flash he said, "Well, my time is worth something."

Sometime ago "Tight" disappeared. Where he is right now, officers here do not know. They hope he stays away for good, but they are keeping their fingers crossed.

Denies Sub Was Sunk By Reds

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Navy spokesman denied Wednesday a rumor that a U.S. submarine had been sunk by a Soviet submarine and that American survivors were in a Tokyo hospital.

Rear Adm. Daniel F. Smith, Navy chief of information, said he had been informed the rumor was current in the area of Santa Barbara, Calif.

"It is not true," Smith told a reporter. "We have all of our submarines. Nobody is being treated in any hospital for injuries in any such attack."

Wallace D. Bowling of Oxford, N. C. got 472 more pounds of tobacco per acre by following the Agrico Program.

How I Increased My Tobacco Profits by $307 an Acre

"I COMPARED fertilizer programs last year to see which would return the most profit on my tobacco," says Wallace D. Bowling of Oxford (Granville Co.), N. C. "The Agrico Soil Service tested my soil and I followed their advice, broadcasting 800 pounds of Zell's Tobacco Fertilizer 3-9-9 and putting 800 pounds of Agrico for Tobacco 3-9-9 in the row. I compared this with my usual program of applying all the fertilizer in the row.

"The tobacco fertilized according to the Agrico Program came back much faster after the early rains and never seemed to lack plant food as was the case where I put all the plant food in the row. The difference at harvest was substantial. Where I followed the Agrico Program, I averaged 472 more pounds and $307.56 more income per acre than with my old practice."

Won't Restrain Bunny-Bopping

RALEIGH (AP) — A Charlotte man has lost out in his legal battle to restrain the Harmony American Legion Post from holding any future "bunny bopping" rabbit hunts.

The State Supreme Court said in effect Wednesday that James Yandell, a Humane Society official, didn't have much of a case. In fact, the court added, Yandell offered no evidence to support his contention that the legion post in Iredell County planned to sponsor any future rabbit hunts with sticks and stones.

"Certainly," the tribunal said, "the future health, safety and welfare of the public cannot be endangered by what occurred on previous hunts."

The opinion, one of 25 handed down, made no mention of the health, safety and welfare of the rabbits.

The high court upheld the decision of Superior Court Judge Walter Crissman who declined to issue an order enjoining the Harmony post from holding any future sticks-and-stones hunts.

The Harmony post has been holding the hunts each fall, with the felled rabbits making the menu for a subsequent barbecue.

When the post announced plans for its 1961 hunt, protests went up from humane groups. The legion switched signals and used shotguns instead of sticks and stones.

Yandell offered no evidence, the court said, to show that a criminal prosecution under laws forbidding cruelty to animals "is not an adequate remedy, if, in fact, the defendants are guilty of a violation of that statute."

In closing, he urged teachers to be co-operative, courteous and diligent in their work.

Following remarks by Principal E. L. Smith, the meeting adjourned.

Modern Ballet Entertains Shah At White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran's royal family—bedecked in medals and jewels—saw a finger-snapping sweat shirt and sneakers jazz ballet staged at the White House.

It came as the climax Wednesday night to a glittering state dinner President and Mrs. Kennedy gave for the shah of Iran and his young queen, Farah.

Queen Farah's gown was encrusted with sparkling sequins, gold and jewels. She wore a heavy tiara of diamonds encircling seven enormous emeralds—a pattern repeated in a necklace and in her earrings.

Mrs. Kennedy showed up a new hairdo—called a "brioche"—and wore a Chez Minon creation with a sleeveless white satin top and a heavy floor length silk skirt in hot pink. There was a diamond sunburst pin in her hair and she wore diamond drop earrings.

The shah had a crescent of a dozen or so medals suspended from ribbons across his chest.

Kennedy's only color was a blue cornflower in his lapel—the flower that is Mrs. Kennedy's favorite.

The center of attraction after the state dinner was Jerome Robbins' "Ballet: U.S.A." It was the first time a ballet company had ever performed in the White House. The dancers put on their show on a special stage that took up nearly half the East Room, to the light of dimmed crystal chandeliers.

The performance emphasized contemporary developments in the American dance, beginning with a modern version of "Afternoon of a Faun" and ending with five jazz themes.

Italian Probe Of Mafia Approved

ROME (AP)—The Italian Senate Wednesday night approved a bill authorizing a thorough investigation of the Mafia and legislation to end the dread secret society's grip on Sicilian life.

The legislation comes up soon in the Chamber of Deputies, which is expected to approve it also.

The bill calls for creation of a commission of 15 senators and 15 deputies. The Mafia operates as an illegal government in Sicily.

Most crimes of violence on the island are blamed on it, and police investigations into its activities usually run into a wall of silence.

Suspects Ring Is Making Licenses

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—Police Chief Francis L. Scott says a counterfeit driver's license ring may be operating in Florida.

Scott said Sebron Burton Willis Jr., 33, was arrested because his operator's license appeared to be incomplete. A check with state authorities revealed that no license had been issued to Willis.

Scott quoted the man as saying that he bought the license for $2.50 in a supermarket.

SAVE REPLANTING! INCREASE YIELDS!

KILL WIREWORMS with CHLORDANE IN TOBACCO TRANSPLANT WATER!

Wireworm larvae damage tobacco transplants by feeding on the roots and stems. Unless wireworms are controlled, it may be necessary to replant large areas, or settle for greatly reduced yields. It's easy to control wireworms, though. All you have to do is add Chlordane to your transplant water. No extra work is required. The cost is just a few cents per acre, and increased yields more than pay for it. All principal tobacco growing states recommend Chlordane for wireworm control. Use it this year to protect your crop!

NO EXTRA WORK/VERSATILE/ECONOMICAL LASTING ACTION/NO OFFENSIVE ODOR!

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCAD)— North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers, market undertone about steady. Supplies adequate in most instances, barely adequate to short at some points. Demand generally good. At farm quotations 14 cents with some sales under contracts or agreements up to 1/2 cent higher. Delivered plant price 14 1/4 to 15 1/4.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slumped sharply early this afternoon as a frightened Wall Street eyed an angry Washington in fear of counter blows at the steel industry's price increase.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was down a substantial 1.70 to 252.50 with industrials off 3.00, rails off 50 and utilities off 50.

Steel shares paced the decline as key issues throughout the list took losses ranging from fractions to 1 or 2 points. Greater declines were registered by higher-priced or more speculative issues.

Two congressional investigations and a price-fixing probe combined with President Kennedy's fury at the price boost to intimidate traders.

Steel shares were down 1 or 2 points. Chemicals, oils, tobaccos, electronics, rubbers, nonferrous metals, rails and most auto stocks were among the losers. Trading was fairly active.

Steels were unloaded in sizeable blocks. Bethlehem and Republic Steel were down about a point each, U.S. Steel and Jones & Laughlin more than a point apiece, Youngstown Sheet and Lukens about 2 each.

Du Pont fell more than 4. Union Carbide, closely tied to the steel industry, opened down 2 1/2 at 108, then trimmed the loss fractionally. Air Reduction slipped more than a point.

Down about 3 were Xerox and Beckman Instruments. IBM fell 2 or more.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was down 6.39 to 688.51—below the year's closing low of 689.92 set Jan. 29.

Prices moved irregularly lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds declined in light dealings.

Six-County . . .

(Continued from page one) processing can mean much to the State, the farmer, the fisherman, the investor and in the creation of more employment. Bowles also noted that three men have been assigned to help promote the development of this industry.

"So far as I am concerned," he added, "we will not have made any progress until we see North Carolina processed food on the shelves of our food stores and North Carolina processed food served in our restaurants, schools, prisons and hospitals."

And furthermore, Bowles said, "The time for talking is over. I want to see some bricks and mortar going together." The C&D head also reminded the group that there is one task which is relatively easy and one that many communities have failed to do to help promote industry in the area. "We keep a community inventory file in our office and only three communities in this six-county area have filled this out."

This inventory is used when a prospective industry has given the state office its requirements, to see what community can best fill the needs.

Dallas L. Alford of Rocky Mount, chairman of the Steering committee told the group that a great milestone for this area has been reached. He noted that the organization was patterned after the Western North Carolina Planning Commission which now includes 17 counties. "If we can do only a small part of what the western organization has done we will have done an excellent job," Alford noted.

George Stephens Jr., economic assistant to Gov. Sanford was also on hand at the meeting. He told the group that the Governor was willing to help all he could. "I think you have a flexible organization and a strong one. It can operate with or without a budget, but will take hundreds or thousands of people to do the job. Not just the commissioners," Stephens noted.

The newly formed commission set its first meeting for April 19 in Greenville at which time officers will be elected and the committees set up. Stephens said that he would be on hand at this meeting to help the commission get the ball rolling.

The members of the commission are as follows:

Beaufort: Sam Moore, chairman of the commissioners; Albert Mills, industry; William H. Hackett and Mrs. McDonald Gautier, agriculture.

Edgecombe: R. M. Fountain, chairman of commissioners; Ralph Blake, agriculture; Henry G. Shelton, industry.

Martin: John Henry Edwards, chairman of commissioners; Sherwood L. Roberson, agriculture; John R. Rogers, industry.

Nash: Henry M. Milgrom, chairman of commissioners; George B. Watson, agriculture; Horace Meacomes, industry.

Pitt: B. Alton Gardner, chairman of commissioners; W. Ivan Bissette, agriculture; Sen. Robert Lee Lumber, industry.

Wilson: Thomas Daniel, chairman of commissioners; Russell Stephenson, industry; Preston Harrell, agriculture.

France To Repay Overdue Sum
PARIS (AP)—France is going to repay the United States $58 million overdue on its long-term debt, Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said today.

The payments were due in 1958 and 1959 but were delayed because of France's unfavorable foreign exchange balance at that time. After the payment France will still owe the United States $1.6 billion.

'Grateful' For His Reception
BRASILIA, Brazil (AP)—President Joao Goulart said today he was grateful for the very great reception he had received in the United States and Mexico.

Goulart appeared in good health after the plane trip Wednesday from Mexico, where he had been forced to cancel all official engagements because of an illness described as a dizzy spell caused by Mexico City's high altitude.

Speakers On Alcoholism To Address Local Pupils

Five speakers will go into senior class homerooms at Rose High School tomorrow to discuss alcohol, in conjunction with a program sponsored by the Woman's Society of Christian Service at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Speakers this year are the Rev. Thomas Money, pastor of Hooker Memorial Christian Church; Dr. John Putrell, Pitt County health director; Dr. H. T. Paterson of the Kinston DuPont Company; Louis Collier, local businessman; and T. R. Jones, also with the Kinston DuPont branch.

Each man will present a study of alcohol in his own manner. The study actually began, some weeks ago, when the W.S.C.S. mailed a pamphlet entitled "It's Smarter Not to Drink" to each senior student and a parent, along with a letter asking them to read and discuss the book together. The letter and pamphlet are followed by the discussions in school during activity period. The W.S.C.S. has sponsored this program for some five or six years. Mrs. T. R. Jones, secretary to the Christian Social Relations Committee of the W.S.C.S., said. The group conducts the program in cooperation with J. H. Rose, superintendent of city schools; O. E. Dowd, principal at Rose High School; and George McRorie, counselor.

Pamphlets are also given to W. H. Davenport, principal of Eppees High School, for distribution. Last fall the W.S.C.S. for the first time approached alcoholism with members of the junior class at the high school, providing them with Ann Landers' pamphlet, "Teenage Drinking." The organization hopes to continue the junior class program in the fall, with the senior class program in the spring.

Nello Teer Co. Is Target Of Labor Dept. Charges

DURHAM — The Nello L. Co., if federal Judge L. R. Preyer rules with the U.S. Labor Department, will be liable to pay about $50,000 in back wages to laborers it hired on past jobs near Greenville and Hartswell Dam, S.C.

The Durham firm was the initial site-clearance contractor for the Voice of America project involving nearly 6,000 acres in the Greenville area.

Arguments in an action brought by the Labor Department against the Teer Co. were heard in U.S. Middle District Court here Monday, but Judge Preyer indicated it would be several weeks before a decision is reached.

The suit covers alleged past violations of overtime pay provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act and concerns work done at the VOA site and at the dam project near Clemson, S.C.

Teer Co. contends it fulfilled provisions of its contract with the United States Information Agency, parent organization of VOA, to pay employees time-and-a-half for over eight hours of work a day on the Greenville project.

The Durham firm also disputes the Labor Department's claim that the Greenville project was not of an interstate nature.

Over An Inch Of Rain Yesterday

Over an inch of rain fell here yesterday during a day filled with heavy showers and thunderstorms.

William Mills of the Greenville Utilities Plant reported the exact measurement for the 24-hour period ending at midnight as 1.35 inches.

Temperatures have dropped slightly since the shower system moved in and cooler temperatures are forecast for tomorrow.

Wednesday's high was 70 degrees, and the low was 56. For today, temperatures remained in the 50s during early morning hours, registering at 55 degrees at 8 a.m.

The weatherman has predicted continued drizzle and showers for today with scattered thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. The same forecast is on the agenda for early Friday in the coastal area.

The Tar River level this morning had risen slowly to the 11.1-foot mark.

Kept Police At Bay With A Toy

ORANGE, Calif. (AP)—After a four-hour siege by more than 50 police, sheriff's officers, highway patrolmen and firemen, an escaped mental patient said he'd like to talk to a reporter.

Los Angeles Times photographer Al Monteverde climbed a ladder to the attic where John Leo Ward, 48, was barricaded. He reached out to shake hands with Ward—and pulled him bodily out of the attic to where two policemen could grab him.

Ward had kept the officers at bay Wednesday by brandishing what they thought was a 32 automatic. It turned out to be a toy.

He was returned to the nearby mental institution from which he had escaped the day before.

Ward said he wanted to talk to a newsman to tell his side of his difficulties. He never did get the chance.

Cut Off Water For Wall Repair
BERLIN (AP)—The West Berlin water company cut off the water supply today to the north railroad station, close to the Communists' Berlin wall.

They found that East German authorities, who control the railroads, were using water from the station to repair the hated wall dividing the city.

Candidates See Friday Deadline For Filing

Three more candidates Wednesday and today paid filing fees to enter the May 26 Democratic Primary seeking nomination to county offices.

More activity was expected during the afternoon and Friday morning before the deadline for filing at noon tomorrow.

Roland Gray Brinson of Simpson paid a $5 filing fee Wednesday afternoon to create a three-way race for the two seats on the county Board of Education up for election this year.

Brinson is seeking the nomination in the primary along with incumbents William F. Stokes of Stokes, who filed March 16, and E. W. Fleming of Grifton, who filed March 30.

S. T. Hodges of Grimesland paid a $10 fee to become a Democratic candidate for constable against incumbent Elijah Heath who filed for re-election April 4.

Walter E. Lee of Greenville paid a $25 filing fee by mail from Florida to seek re-election to his Greenville Township justice-of-the-peace office.

Filing fees for constables and jaypees are a minimum of $10 plus one per cent of their annual income exceeding $1,000 derived from the position.

In addition to various township constable and jaypee posts up for election, major county offices to be filled at the polls include three county commissioner seats, Pitt's state Senate and House seats, sheriff, clerk of Superior Court, coroner, county judge and solicitor.

Five Gilts And Boar Given To 4-H Clubbers

Five registered Yorkshire gilts and one boar were distributed Wednesday among five Pitt County 4-H club members, according to Negro county agent Leroy James and his assistant, Milton Merritt.

The six animals represent an extension of the Pig Chain established in Pitt County with funds furnished by the Sears Foundation of Atlanta, James said.

"The objective of the chain is to establish good foundation stock at a reasonable cost," James said. "It should provide a knowledge of sound production practices by encouraging 4-H club members participating to fulfill all production and management requirements under supervision of the county agents."

Another feature of the program, James noted, is that 4-Hers are provided meat-type hogs which consumers are demanding today.

The gilts went to Fred Mills and Oliver Leary of Calico; Frank Anderson Jr. and Willie Earl Morris of Simpson; and Wayne Crandal of Grimesland.

Officers said an estimated $150 damage was done to the Stevens auto while damage to the Watson vehicle was estimated to be about $50.

No injuries were reported in the collision.

81 Year Old Is Staying On Job

SUTTER CREEK, Calif. (AP)—Miss Minnie Provis, city clerk of this community for 50 years, is starting another four year term. She is 81.

Miss Provis didn't campaign, but her backers did and she had no opposition in Tuesday's city election.

"I had about decided not to run again, but my friends talked me into it," Miss Provis said. "I guess they've gotten kind of used to me."

Miss Provis also operates a bookkeeping and notary public office in her home where she carries out her city clerk duties.

Thieves Dressed As Postmen

BRIGHTON, England (AP)—Five thieves dressed in postmen's uniforms walked off the main railway station platform Wednesday night with a mail bag containing 15,000 pounds ($42,000) in cash and other valuables.

They told a real postman who was sorting a pile of bags from London: "We'll look after this one for you, chum."

A post office spokesman said it was a mystery how the thieves knew which bag to take.

Eppes Glee Club In Concert On Friday

The C. M. Eppees High School Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. S. L. Davenport, will appear in concert in the C. M. Eppees auditorium on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Sacred, spiritual and secular music will be presented by soloists, the Boys' Glee Club, Mixed Chorus, Girls' Glee Club and a small mixed ensemble.

The concert is one in a series of events that will conclude the academic year.

The Mixed Chorus will present "Alleluia," "Bless the Lord," and "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" to open the program and will conclude it with "Are You Sleeping, Brother John?" "No Man Is An Island," "Elijah Rock" and "One Melodious Song."

Soloists will be Sylvia Goins with "Slave Song," Mavis Gardner with "Lullaby" from the opera "Jocelyn," Velma Scott with "On My Journey" and Ella Tyson with "Love Is Where You Find It."

The Boys' Glee Club will present "The Sleigh," "Ave Maria" and "Kemo Kimo." The Girls' Glee Club will render "I Would Weave a Song for You," "Music," "A Spirit Flower" and "To a Wild Rose."

The small mixed ensemble will sing "The Happy Wanderer" and "Steal Away."

Saleeby To Seek State JC Post

GRIFTON — George Saleeby of Grifton has announced he will seek election as president of the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Saleeby, who is owner of George Saleeby Insurance and Realty Co., has served as president of the Grifton Jaycee club. He has also been first vice president, treasurer and a member of the club's board of directors, as well as a charter member.

Saleeby received the DSA and Key Man award in Grifton. He received the outstanding local president's award for the 11th Jaycee district.

On the state level, Saleeby is currently serving as national director and in his assigned district seven new clubs have been organized this year. His two districts have ranked one and two in state competition during the year.

Saleeby is married and the father of two girls and two boys. He is an elder in the Grifton Presbyterian Church.

The election will be held on May 12 at the state convention in Raleigh.
