NEW YORK (AP)—A federal grand jury has indicted the United States Steel Corp. and the Bethlehem Steel Co. on charges of violating the antitrust laws by conspiring to fix prices and rig bids.

The indictment made the same charges against two other steel companies, five company executives and a trade association. The stock market reacted quickly to the indictment Thursday.

Government officials said the indictment had no connection with the steel industry controversy that started earlier this month when U.S. Steel and some other producers announced a price increase of $6 a ton.

Emil Lang, board chairman of Erie Forge. R. B. Heppenstall Sr., president of Midvale-Heppenstall. The individual defendants, if convicted on the conspiracy charge, could be sentenced to a maximum one year in prison and fined $50,000 each.

U.S. Atty. Robert M. Morgenthau said the individual defendants met at several places in New York City from time to time. They allegedly reported to the institute all requests for price quotations on forgings worth more than $500.

Army Plan To Cut Nat'l Guard Units Sets Off Big Protest By Governors

WASHINGTON (AP)—Some of the nation's governors are up in arms over an Army plan for cutting out 475 of the states' National Guard units.

A barrage of telephone calls, telegrams and statements hit the Pentagon after the Army's National Guard Bureau Wednesday sent out the plan to all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

he would resist "as fully as I can an effort to cut Colorado's guard strength by five companies." An appeal for congressional intervention was sounded by Idaho's Gov. Robert E. Smylie.

Candidates Briefly Talk Before Pitt Demo Women

Politicking for the May Primary gained momentum Thursday night as candidates gathered at a reception sponsored by the Democratic Women of Pitt County.

The women, counting the reception as their second quarterly meeting since organization last fall, were host to about 25 candidates—most of them already assured of nomination—in the May 26 party voting.

Estimate 7,000 Throughout Pitt Attend Clinics

Approximately 7,000 persons from throughout Pitt County received tetanus immunization on Wednesday, at clinics set up by members of the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society, Dr. Charles P. Adams, president, announced today.

This result was slightly less than that of the first tetanus immunization day held April 4, which attracted almost 8,000 persons.

Dr. Adams estimated that about 1 out of 10 persons who received tetanus immunization during the drives still needed to complete their immunization. These were the persons who were unprotected against tetanus, and needed the tetanus toxoid immunization, which consists of a series of two injections.

Second Shot

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States today fired the second shot of its planned series of nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

Like the first on Wednesday, it was a detonation of a device dropped from an airplane in the vicinity of Christmas Island in the Pacific.

Such a hope was voiced by space officials assembled here for the launchings.

Registration. Registration for Pitt County voters in the May 26 primary gets underway in the county's 25 voting precincts at 9 a. m. Saturday.

British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, speaking in New York Thursday night, named the satellite "Ariel"—high wind—and said: "This joint enterprise reflects great credit on the British and American scientists and technicians concerned. It provides a fine start to the United States program of international cooperation in space."

One of the many objectors, Iowa's Gov. Norman Erbe, interpreted the action as an order and said he would not comply.

Caught in the middle was Maj. Gen. Donald W. McGowan, chief of the National Guard Bureau, who was carrying out Pentagon orders to reduce the guard by about 33,000.

McGowan said the plan was a proposal, not an order, and he stressed that law requires approval by a governor before a unit in his state may be altered or disbanded.

Such a hope was voiced by space officials assembled here for the launchings. An American Thor-Delta rocket Thursday blasted a packet of British experiments into orbit as the world's first international satellite.

Two secret satellites were launched by the Air Force at Point Arguello, Calif. One employed a Blue Scout booster, the other an Atlas-Agena B, which has been used primarily for Midas and Samos spy satellites.

McGowan himself gave only lukewarm support for the reorganization plan of the Guard when he appeared before a Senate Appropriations committee April 6.

He said it was the best possible plan "within the strength and budget guidelines" but that he was sorry to lose the men.

U.S. and British scientists were jubilant at their successful satellite firing and celebrated with a party Thursday night.

Robert Gray of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration called working with the British "excellent. It was wonderful cooperation and a real pleasure working with them."

Prof. Sir Harrie Massie, chairman of the British National Committee for Space Research, commented that "I've always regarded the United States as very proficient technically and I'm even more convinced now."

British, Japanese, U. S. See Space-Shot Success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The successful launchings of a U.S.-British satellite and an American-Japanese probe have given rise to hopes the United States and Russia will eventually combine their great resources for an all-out assault on space.

Such a hope was voiced by space officials assembled here for the launchings. An American Thor-Delta rocket Thursday blasted a packet of British experiments into orbit as the world's first international satellite.

Two secret satellites were launched by the Air Force at Point Arguello, Calif. One employed a Blue Scout booster, the other an Atlas-Agena B, which has been used primarily for Midas and Samos spy satellites.

It was learned that at a session today of the International Association of Geodesy in Washington, some further details were to be made public on the proposed Anna satellite, which would involve use of a flashing light for visually observing earth satellites.

U.S. and British scientists were jubilant at their successful satellite firing and celebrated with a party Thursday night.

Robert Gray of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration called working with the British "excellent. It was wonderful cooperation and a real pleasure working with them."

Prof. Sir Harrie Massie, chairman of the British National Committee for Space Research, commented that "I've always regarded the United States as very proficient technically and I'm even more convinced now."

Massie referred to another Anglo-American satellite scheduled for launching late in 1963. That satellite, like the one launched Thursday, will be built by the United States and carry experiments devised by British universities.

They Banished Talking Crow

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—A talking crow named Joe has been banished from suburban Rock Hill because he couldn't stay out of trouble.

Mrs. Arthur C. Brown found the bird with a broken wing last August and took it in. The bird learned to say "hello," "mama," and "oh, mom," and became a pet of neighborhood children.

But recently Joe pecked several children. The humane society held Joe for 11 days so he could be examined for rabies and then put him up for adoption.

A naturalist who owned a female crow rescued Joe from the humane society shelter but soon turned him loose in the woods. It turned out that Joe was no gentleman.

As a matter of fact Joe was a female.

Banquet Given Yearbook Staff

The 1962 BUCCANEER staff was entertained at the annual Spring Banquet on Wed., April 25, at 5:30 p.m. at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Walter C. Faulkner of Henderson, editor of the yearbook, served as master of ceremonies as some fifty guests were on hand for the banquet.

The guest of honor at the banquet was Miss Nancy Lockwood of Hampton, Va., who was chosen last fall to reign as the 1962 BUCCANEER Queen. Miss Lockwood, escorted by James B. Early III of Madison, Va., was presented an attractive trophy by the editor of the yearbook. The BUCCANEER Queen wore a corsage of red roses presented by her sponsor, Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity.

Other special guests present included Dr. James H. Tucker, chairman of the Publications Board, and Mrs. Tucker; Dr. John C. Ellen, literary advisor to the yearbook, and Mrs. Ellen; Dean of Women Ruth White; and Mrs. Agnes W. Barrett, administrative secretary to Dr. Leo Jenkins and to the Board of Trustees of East Carolina College.

It Would Be Helpful To Tell How

The North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers, which represents a membership of some 340,000 Tar Heels, has called for a legislative program that would add some $45 million annually to the cost of public education in the state in the next two years.

Items proposed by the PTA Congress coincide with the legislative program recently proposed by the United Forces for Education.

The programs offer improvements which would make for better public education in North Carolina. If recommendations of the programs were followed, each child in the state would have better educational opportunities in the public schools. They set forth worthwhile goals that fit into the overall program of the state to improve the quality of its education.

As representative groups of citizens interested in the betterment of public education in the state, the PTA and the UFE could have rendered a further service to the state by also recommending means by which these additional funds might be acquired. If the funds are to be made available for public education, they will have to come from the taxpayers of the state in some form. Is it the feeling of the PTA Congress and the UFE that present state tax levies will produce a sufficient amount of revenue in the next biennium to underwrite their proposed expenditures? Do the PTA Congress and the UFE anticipate new tax sources will have to be found to provide the additional amount they proposed be spent for public education?

Do the more than 340,000 PTA members in North Carolina expect to support measures for additional tax revenues if they are required to provide the additional funds called for by the PTA legislative program?

North Carolina needs to continue to move forward with its program to improve the quality of education in its public schools. In order to do so, however, it must give as much attention—if not more—to the matter of paying for better quality education as it does to citing needs within the educational system. It needs the constructive thought of such groups as the PTA Congress concerning methods of financing a quality school program as it does concerning what new steps must be taken to improve the schools.

It would be most helpful to members of the 1963 General Assembly, we believe, if the 340,000 member PTA Congress would suggest methods by which state revenue may be acquired to offset the additional $45 million annually they are asking to be spent for education.

Great Public Service In The Tetanus Clinics

Members of the Pitt County Medical Society have rendered a distinct service to local citizens through the tetanus immunization clinics held in the county during the month of April.

Literally thousands of Pitt Countians have been immunized against the disease commonly referred to as lockjaw. Without the clinics sponsored by the medical group, only a fraction of these people would have received the immunization on an individual basis. A number of citizens who responded to the clinics received only one instead of two shots, however, and these should heed the plea of the medical group to obtain the second immunization shot from their private physician.

The tetanus clinics were another step in providing better health for the people of this county through preventive medicine and we join with others in commending the doctors of this county for their efforts which made the undertaking a success.

Quieter Nikita On Our Hands

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev seems quieter, perhaps because he's getting older. This, if true, would be comforting to the Western nervous system that he has kept a-tangle.

This bubbly and imaginative man, just turned 68, has been notoriously impatient with delay and stuffed shirts. He acted as if under compulsion to get the show on the road, no matter what show.

But now for months, compared with the earlier Khrushchev, he has seemed rather withdrawn. There has been less flamboyance, in word and deed, less animal spirit, less thunder in his threats of lightning.

At least he seems that way to this writer, although it is easy to read too much into the periods of quietude between escapades. He has had them before and came charging back like a refreshed bear.

An example of the slowing down in the Khrushchevian tempo—if that's what it is—was laid on the table this week with release of an interview he gave an American publisher, Gardner Cowles.

In the past Khrushchev seemed obsessed with the need for a summit, without such preliminaries as a meeting of foreign ministers to see if there could be any agreement before the top men got together.

But the interview with Cowles showed he has changed his mind. Now he says there should be a Kennedy-Khrushchev meeting only if their diplomats can first negotiate agreements or if war threatens.

This doesn't sound like the bouncy, hard-driving Khrushchev of old. Nor was it his only recent change of heart, although it's always been tough to figure whether his many changes were in him or just in his tactics.

In an interview with American columnist Walter Lippmann in 1961 Khrushchev said Russia had never done any nuclear testing underground, and never would, because there is no value in small tactical weapons.

By April 13, 1962, he had changed. At that time, refusing the kind of nuclear test ban agreement the West wanted and knowing Kennedy would resume testing if he didn't, Khrushchev said:

In the future Russia would match all tests carried out by the West—whether underground, in the atmosphere, or in outer space.

So his moments of calm after crises don't necessarily mean that he is getting tired.

Meanwhile, he's had some problems at home in this past year, despite some spectacular successes like orbiting men around the earth. One of them is the fact that the Russians have a miserable food supply.

This alone would be enough to make many a leader a little self-conscious about directing the destiny of the world before he could feed his own people better. It may have had a sobering effect on Khrushchev.

Western leaders will begin having uneasy moments if they believe Khrushchev is getting tired and may not be around long. At least they know how to deal with him. They may not be able to deal with his successor.

"Perhaps, ultimately, farming will be returned to the framework of the free, competitive enterprise system, where production is geared to consumption and the law of supply and demand prevails in the market place. That's about the only 'solution' we haven't tried."—San Francisco Daily Commercial News.

"Look for the silver lining—to be certain it is not a recent dye job."—Anderson (S. C.) Independent.

Public Forum

To the Editor: Sincerest thanks to our fine medical personnel, who have given so generously of their time and efforts in operating the Tetanus Clinics in order to protect our community from a dread disease.

Very truly yours, Mrs. U. W. Fetsch

To the Editor: We have heard much of late about the pinch increased public spending is putting on the taxpayers' pocketbook. The recent state bond issue referendum results showed a protest to the food tax. Locally even more has been heard about the addition of the sewer fee to water and light bills.

Yet on top of this utility increase we are faced with the possibility of even higher bills when the Utilities Commission finances the City's share of the cost of the Shore Drive Redevelopment Project by putting $891,618 worth of underground wiring, water lines, gas lines, etc. down on the river. This policy was reported in the December 13, 1961 issue of the December 12 meeting of this Commission which appeared in this paper.

The only way this money spent on this project to "save the down town business district" can be repaid is through water, light and gas bills. Can it be that you as a user of these utilities will face an increase to cover this little item? Can it be that this cost will even be spread to rural subscribers served by this Utilities Commission for this project, which we believe would not have a chance of passing if put to a vote of the people for a bond issue?

You're Gonna Keep Foolin' Around—

By DON SCHLIENZ

A Lesson In Show Biz

One can learn something about show business by watching performers (live ones) on stage.

For instance, one big secret is audience identification, identifying itself with the performers. This is easier to attain when members of the audience are acquainted with members of the cast, in, say, the hometown staging of a Dixieland Minstrel. And it helps when performers are obviously enjoying themselves. The atmosphere is contagious.

The foregoing should lead any reader to conclude "Schlienz went to a minstrel this week."

So I did. So I did. The audience passed judgment by laughing and applauding at all the right places, so the writer won't attempt a critique.

Little reason, anyway. The curtain closed for the last time last night until another year, another show.

But back to our contrived lesson in show biz: Producer-director Eli Bloom insured a degree of audience identification with his cast of 144 people. I quit counting after 97. The odds are that everyone in the audience had a friend or acquaintance in the production, which virtually assured a home run before the cast strode to the plate.

Another factor: the entertainers were having a good time, and that always inspires a warmth on both sides of the footlights. A display of disinterest on-stage throws ice water on the proceedings.

An extra asset hometown performers probably are unaware of, is the unspoken recognition of their audience that hours of work above and beyond that of daily duties and responsibilities are involved.

The writer will recall with pleasure (and a purpose) the one segment of the minstrel program which will be heard again in a full-scale production of their own. That was the singing of the S.P.E.B.S. (Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America—or the equivalent thereof).

This group sings for the love of singing; and it shows. One of the Reflector staffers attended a meeting of the S.P.E.B.S. and afterward remarked "You know how it is when a small crowd gets together for regular meetings; they do a lot of socializing and after awhile more or less get down to business. These guys don't. When the hour strikes, they start singing in earnest."

At any rate, the Society is planning a program for the public in May. You'll read or hear more of the details another day. But the sample they offered at this week's minstrel is a good reason for making a point to go and hear them.

The new physics textbook developed for high school freshmen by the Physical Science Study Committee had a picture of a high energy machine on page one. How high is high? The youngsters know.

We regret the need to resume American atmospheric testing. We join the Easter protest marchers in at least one respect: we share their agony that men have not found it possible to stop this part of the high energy war machine yet.

But the tests—cannot be repeated too often—are part of a great effort to prevent aggression and thereby to prevent war. Reasonable men, not militarists or monsters or even bureaucrats likely to miscalculate, are in charge of this policy. Courage of this order has its dangers and they will have to be guarded against, but they do not approach the dangers of Western cowardice before Hitler.

It looks as if peaceful space testing and military missile testing will have to go on together until humanity reaches a better means of separating the tares from the wheat.

Other Editors Saying Various Kinds Of Testing

(Christian Science Monitor) It would be interesting to know who orchestrated the rocketry this week.

If there was a grand design—it could have been coincidence—it made good sense. A series of peaceful American explorations of space was aimed at the headlines just as the United States braced itself to resume military nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

The telemetry of the moon shot malfunctioned, as young guidance systems will do. But there remain a second test of Saturn, perhaps the world's most powerful rocket, and the first peaceful space experiments made jointly with Japan and Great Britain.

It would be unnecessarily cynical to call all this a mere public relations maneuver, although that was at least a by-product. An electronic scouting party on the moon, sending its pictures and findings back to earth, would have outranked the military testing if it had succeeded.

But there is a larger meaning. The West has been forced into rapid space exploration by the cold war, just as it was forced into splitting the atom in the first place by hot war. Military need gave the first impetus in each case. But the peaceful uses of space, just like the peaceful uses of atomic energy, are the civilian dream of the West which looks far beyond the immediate task of restraining war.

The peaceful element in this week's show of rocketry puts first things first.

This may not appear so to the present adult generations. Nuclear power is slow in developing. The moon seems like a diversion from unfinished business on earth. But look at the gleamed exultation on the eyes of youngsters emerging from the theater after seeing Walt Disney's Moon Pilot. Remember the wife of the space scientist who has her young son describe what her husband is up to. The husband can tell the boy and the boy finds the simple language his mother can understand.

No Cure In This Solution

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The President's Commission on Campaign Costs has issued an interesting but futile report on how to control campaign expenditures. The 1960 campaign cost the Republican and Democratic Parties $19,900,000, which is far less than the fact because considerable amounts in any campaign are paid in cash and are not accounted for and cannot be proved.

The Commission proposes: "Where an individual or organization is subject to taxation, we recommend that the reasonable costs of these activities be declared a deductible expense for tax purposes."

That would be a sensible proposal if groups contributed only to absolutely defined campaign funds, not to so-called educational funds, which are a device to deceive. The Commission further proposes:

"We recommend that individuals and private organizations—including corporations, labor unions, farm organizations, civic societies, and other appropriate groups—be encouraged as a matter of good citizenship to take part in and to make expenditures for bipartisan political activities (or multipartisan political activities where more than the two major parties benefit from such expenditures)."

This is nonsense. It is a re-nunciation of partisanship. Our political system is based upon two parties. The Communists permit only one party to exist. Partisanship is wholesome and is the only protection that a free people have against tyranny. Recently, I tried to explain to some youngsters that the reason I voted for Richard Nixon in 1960 was that I was a partisan. They did not seem to understand that at all.

The Commission also proposes a tax incentive for contributors on the ground that charitable, health, welfare, religious, and educational groups are exempt. However, their inclusion is the only protection that a free people have against tyranny. Recently, I tried to explain to some youngsters that the reason I voted for Richard Nixon in 1960 was that I was a partisan. They did not seem to understand that at all.

The Commission wisely objects to the splintering of political organizations into many Committees, which is a current device to raise money for campaigns. However, their recommendation that the benefits be limited to political parties whose candidates for President and Vice President appeared on the ballot in 10 states is a curb upon the freedom of conscience. I have saved my conscience on some occasions by voting for Norman Thomas and I once voted for Roger Babson because both the Republican and Democratic candidates were repugnant to me. That may happen to me in the 1962 Election in New York State.

It seems to me that this Commission has dodged the central issue, which is that campaign expenses run too high; that the candidate who has the money to buy more television time, competing for slots with toothpaste and detergents, has a better opportunity than the man who has less money. It may be that the man with less money may be more suitable.

The Kennedy-Nixon Debates in the 1960 campaign made sense. Nixon was defeated because he was non-aggressive, defensive, unable, because of his office, to denounce or defend his President. Granted that Nixon was on a spot and that Kennedy belted him to the ropes; nevertheless, the voter had a chance to see both men in action.

Even this is not the cure. The British have it in their strict limitation of expenditures and if a nickel more is spent than the law permits, the election is null, and the candidate's manager is liable to punishment. This is a good law. They do not bother there about the contributors, who might slip a bill under the table. They go after the candidate and his manager who spends that extra money which he has a right to have but not to spend on the campaign.

This is an honest and direct method of keeping elections decent. The President's Commission on Campaign Costs wanders all over the Earth seeking

"What we obtain too cheap we esteem too lightly; it is dearer than gives everything its value."—Thomas Payne.

The Use And Abuse Of The Law

By ELMER ROESSNER

A businessman refused to buy a ticket to a firemen's benefit. The next day he was slapped with summons for 20 violations of fire regulations.

A friend of mine protested an income tax settlement. The courts upheld him. But it cost $15,000 to get justice.

In half the cities of the land innocent people pay traffic fines because it is cheaper than standing up for fair play.

Seven years ago a tax collector asked another friend for $20. The friend called in the FBI and the collector went to jail. But every year since then my friend says he has been called in for auditing of his tax report, and has lost more than $250 in working time.

MUCH OF THE SAME

Another fellow I know of was upset because a businessman advanced his prices after being required to increase payroll costs. This fellow had a grant jury impounded to investigate anti-trust activities. Perhaps illegally, he ordered that no purchases be made from the price riser.

Coincidentally, that same man who used the law to his own ends has proclaimed May 1 as Law Day, calling upon schools, civic and service organizations, public bodies, the legal profession and the media of information to participate in this worthy educational undertaking.

President Kennedy's proclamation states that "just as freedom itself demands constant vigilance, it is essential that we nurture through education the values of our system of justice and that we foster through improved understanding the function of law and of independent courts an increased respect for law and the rights of others as basic elements of our free society."

THE NEXT STEP

The proclamation did not comment on the fact that laws are often used as instruments of power by cops and presidents; that laws are being used to deny black men civil rights; that the law is being used to force industrialists to kneel and kiss the flag.

Perhaps it was unnecessary to point that out; it is unnecessary as long as there are lawyers who still respect the law as law.

In years as a newspaperman, I know of no great advancement in the cause of freedom under the law that has not been championed by lawyers. I have seen wealthy lawyers shove corporation practice aside to give time for fighting wrongs; I have seen beginners work until sun-up without fee to bring about justice.

But there still is that nagging problem: the use or abuse of the law to attain ends, no matter how worthy, not written or intended in the law itself.

If the law is to "underlie our whole social, economic and governmental structure," as President Kennedy suggested, then the law should never be used as a needle or a sandbag. The bar may some day act to remedy the misuse of law. It might be given some consideration this Law Day, May 1.

A Disciplined Faith

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Genesis 12:1-9; Exodus 3:1-6; Hebrews 10:19-12:29.

The letter to the Hebrews defines faith as "the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen."

Among other examples of faithful Old Testament figures cited is Abraham, who obeyed God's call to "go out into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance."

Another example was Moses, who spurned wealth and ease, "refusing to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter," choosing instead to share the ill-treatment of his people rather than "the fleeting pleasures of sin."

Others clung to their faith despite mocking, scourging, chains and imprisonment, "For whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth."

GOLDEN TEXT: Hebrews 10:36.

A Disciplined Faith

THE STRENGTH, PATIENCE, HOPE AND JOY TO BE FOUND IN A LIFE OF UNWAVERING FAITH IN GOD'S PROMISES

Scripture—Genesis 12:1-9; Exodus 3:1-6; Hebrews 10:19-12:29.

By N. SPEER JONES THIS WEEK'S lesson continues a study of the letter to the Hebrews, written about 65 A.D. by an unknown author in an unknown place, to the converted Jews in Jerusalem.

In the assigned part of this letter we find the third of three fairly extensive reviews of Old Testament history in the New Testament. The first two are in Acts 7 (in which St. Stephen reminds the Jerusalem Jews of their continuously rebellious spirit) and in Acts 13 (in which Paul speaks in the synagogue at Antioch of Pisidia). The Old Testament passages assigned here are but two examples of the direct tie-in in this lesson between New and Old Testaments.

The 11th chapter of this letter has sometimes been called the "Westminster Abbey of many authors consider "the sin" mentioned as not sinfulness in general but the specific sin of lack of faith, or unbelief.

Andrew Murray (quoted in "Peloubet's Select Notes," p. 156) reminds us that the essence of faith is obedience. "Faith is always the power by which a man gives himself up to an unseen object, and receives it into his heart and being. It is in the very nature of things impossible to receive God without receiving His will."

This obedience is that of children to their father. For a child to grow, he must experience discipline. Like that of all good parents, God's discipline is for the good of His children, that they may grow to sufficient stature to participate in His holiness and imperishable life. Some suffering is usually necessary for education. Some of us find faith more easily than do others. Sometimes intense sorrow is necessary for us to become aware of the great inner life.

On this basis, as Johannes Schneider points out ("Peloubet's," p. 159), "Chastisement appears in the Letter of Hebrews to be even a privilege of a son. This distinguishes him from the illegitimate descendant, the bastard, who has no claim to the inheritance."

As the letter itself says, "My son, regard not lightly the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art reproved of Him; for whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth. It is for chastening that ye endure; God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is there whom his father chasteneth not?" (Hebrews 12:5-7).

The absolute importance of faith is perhaps indicated in the first verse of the 12th chapter; Based on copyrighted outlines produced by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., and used by permission. Distributed by King Features Syndicate

GOLDEN TEXT "You have need of endurance, so that you may do the will of God and receive what is promised."—Hebrews 10:36.

Faith,"—a roll-call of those who exhibited their faith in various ways. Its opening sentence is frequently quoted as a definition of faith—"the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen."

This assurance and conviction come from God Himself; we are to be—and can be—faithful because God Himself is faithful. "Let us hold fast the confession of our hope that it (our faith) waver not; for He is faithful that promised" (Hebrews 10:23). Our hope is rooted in the fact that God makes and keeps His promises.

Blistering Talk On Race Issue

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers closed its annual meeting Thursday night after hearing a blistering speech on race issues by a Yale University professor.

Dr. Marvin H. Pope, associate professor of semitic languages and native of Durham, said North Carolina "is in every way the leader among the states in this region and has the responsibility to show the way" in solving racial problems.

He said the nuclear arms race is the top issue in the world, but "race and religion are burning issues in the South."

In its day session, the PTA congress approved a proposal by the United Forces for Education that the state spend an additional $90 million on schools during the next two years.

The state now spends $250 million on education.

Pope said he was no carpet-bagger "come to harass you, but I have something to say on a burning issue. I do not pretend to know how this problem may best be solved, and speedily. No stop-gap, halfway measures will really work," he said.

In the world struggle, Pope said, the United States is losing ground because of its failure to live up to its ideals of freedom and equality.

"Our dirty linen is displayed and hourly around the clock and round the world," he said.

Spire Is Placed With Helicopter

COVENTRY, England (AP)—Dangling from a helicopter, the great bronze spire of Coventry's new cathedral was gently lowered into place atop the $3.78 million building Thursday.

It took only 10 minutes to lower the ton and a half spire to its base plate in the cathedral roof. Ground crews guided it down by control ropes while a large crowd looked on.

The new cathedral is a replacement for the one blitzed in World War II.

He plans to have the barren walls painted, carpet on the concrete floor and something better to sit on than rows of second-hand straight-backed chairs.

Townsend gives the censors another preview Monday. By then

SEATTLE (AP)—The producer of a World's Fair girlie show is going to change the setting, but not the curvy scenery and see if Seattle's censors will let the show go on again.

"I'm not going to change the show, because it's not dirty," said Arthur Townsend of Las Vegas, Nev.

He defended his production Thursday at a meeting with fair officials. George Whitney, fair director of concessions and amusements, told Townsend certain changes in the theater would have to be made before the show may re-open.

It was closed Wednesday after members of the Seattle Board of Theater Supervisors decided. "In this short show of less than 20 minutes, we would say that nudity is the only reason for its existence."

The censors said the production was different from the one they previewed. Townsend said it had to be changed because the original show was "terrible."

The censors' main complaint was that a lightly clad girl in an outside display window beckoned to passersby, drawing ribald comment from some men. They also object to part of the show, complaining that bare-breasted girls in tight leotards promenade to the front of the stage.

Townsend insisted the girls neither shimmy nor shake — just walk briefly around the small stage.

Said Comedian Jose Duarte, imported by Townsend to bolster the production: "One guy blinked and missed the girls the other night."

Registered 39 For First Grade

BETHEL — Thirty-nine prospective first graders registered at Bethel School Thursday morning during the pre-school clinic. Principal Walter Latham announced.

By the time registration is completed, Latham said he expects 51 to sign up for first grade work this fall.

Parents attending the clinic heard brief talks by Latham; Mrs. Edna Earle Baker, elementary supervisor of Pitt County schools; and Mrs. Goldie Hemmings, public health nurse.

The film "Sippy and the Three R's" was shown. While parents were hearing discussions, children visited first grade-rooms, where they heard stories and colored pictures.

Detroit Hurting, Lary In Trouble

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Sports Writer The Detroit Tigers may be in trouble. Frank Lary is. And it follows that if Lary is in trouble the Tiger situation is less than the best.

"I think it's a bad problem," he said. "I guess he's going to miss at least one start." Lary's shoulder first started to bother him early in spring training and he was ineffective in Florida. The pain went away just before the season started, but he had a relapse last Saturday when he was beaten by Boston.

Little Leagues

An auctioneer's chant rang out in Greenville last night, but it was not the usual product that was up for sale. The product at this particular auction was a very special one. And what could be so special? Of course, none other than a young boy's ability to play baseball.

The auction for the Little League players was held as it is every spring with the coaches and managers bidding their allotted points on players for their teams. Each team gets 10,000 points a year, plus any that are left over from the previous year.

Attending the affair, listening to the conversations about the prospective players and watching the bidding, you could only get the feeling that this is the fairest way to select players when the supply is greater than the demand. The boys have a chance to show their ability to play ball during the tryout period with the coaches watching carefully and taking notes on each player.

We got the feeling that it did not make any difference who a boy was or where he lived as long as he could play ball. This was what the coaches were looking for. This same thing is true at a tobacco auction. The buyers don't care who grew the leaf or on what farm. The product itself is what they are after.

In a tobacco auction you can feel sure that all of the leaf will be sold. However, the price is something else. Well, at the player auction one could also be sure that there would be a place for every boy. Maybe not on a Little League team. But, here in Greenville the boys are fortunate enough to have a fine recreation program when it comes to baseball and for those who do not make the Little League, there is a program sponsored by the recreation department which will enable all boys interested in playing ball to take part on a team. Then they can go out for the Little League again the next year and their chances should be better then after some experience on a recreation department team.

A tobacco auction works much the same way. All of the tobacco may not be good enough to go into cigarettes, but there is a place for it somewhere along the line of tobacco products.

A farmer selling his tobacco anxiously awaits his sale ticket to see what he made on his crop. A player who is trying out for a Little League team awaits the auction with the same anxiety to see if he made it. We are sure there is no bigger moment in a boy's life when a coach calls him late at night saying he has been chosen for a team. This is the big moment and the rest of the night most likely goes without sleep. But, it is worth it.

For those who were chosen for a team last night we give you our congratulations. For those who didn't, we want to see you on a recreation department team and out again next year for the Little League. A farmer that does not make as much one year on a crop as he had hoped, will be back again the following season trying for more. The players should do this also.

Sophomore Hitting Is Said Behind Wake Forest Rise

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Wake Forest Coach Jack Stallings says one of the prime factors in his team's rise to the top of the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball standings is the hitting of his sophomores.

"We have gotten real good hitting from our sophomores—real good," said Stallings. "All three of our starting outfielders are sophomores." These are centerfielder Bill Scripture of Virginia Beach, Va., (.302) rightfielder Wayne Martin of Max Meadows, Va., (.279) and leftfielder Mike Budd of Siler City, N.C., (.254).

Not only is Stallings pleased with the hitting of his club, but he believes the other ACC teams are stronger at the plate. "I think the hitting in the conference is as strong, if not a little stronger, than last year. Every club has good hitters.

The pitching in the conference is not as strong as in the past," and the young coach, a 1955 graduate of Wake Forest, "but that may have something to do with the hitters looking better."

There were no games scheduled in the ACC Thursday, but four league games were on tap today. They sent Virginia to Wake Forest, Clemson to North Carolina, Maryland to Duke, and South Carolina to North Carolina State.

Stallings, despite his team's 4-1 record in the ACC and 11-4 overall, wasn't taking today's game lightly, or Saturday's game with last place Maryland. "We don't take any game for granted," he remarked.

After this weekend, Wake Forest's next game is with second place Clemson, the only team thus far to beat the Deacons in the conference.

Tentative Okay For Regulations

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Proposed hunting regulations for the 1962-63 season were given tentative approval by the State Wildlife Resources Commission here Thursday night.

One of the proposals calls for an earlier starting to the hunting season for quail, rabbits and wild turkeys. The season would open Saturday, Nov. 17 instead of Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 22.

The change was recommended by Clyde Patton, executive director.

The commission members planned to tour the Kerr Reservoir area today and take a look at fishing access areas. The proposed hunting regulations will be submitted for discussion at public hearings in the state May 15-25. The commission will take final action on the proposals in June.

Stallings then turned to his pitching. "Our pitchers this year are a lot different from the past. We have Bob Plemmons (who graduated last year) who was our ace and out big man. We used him in all of the tough games.

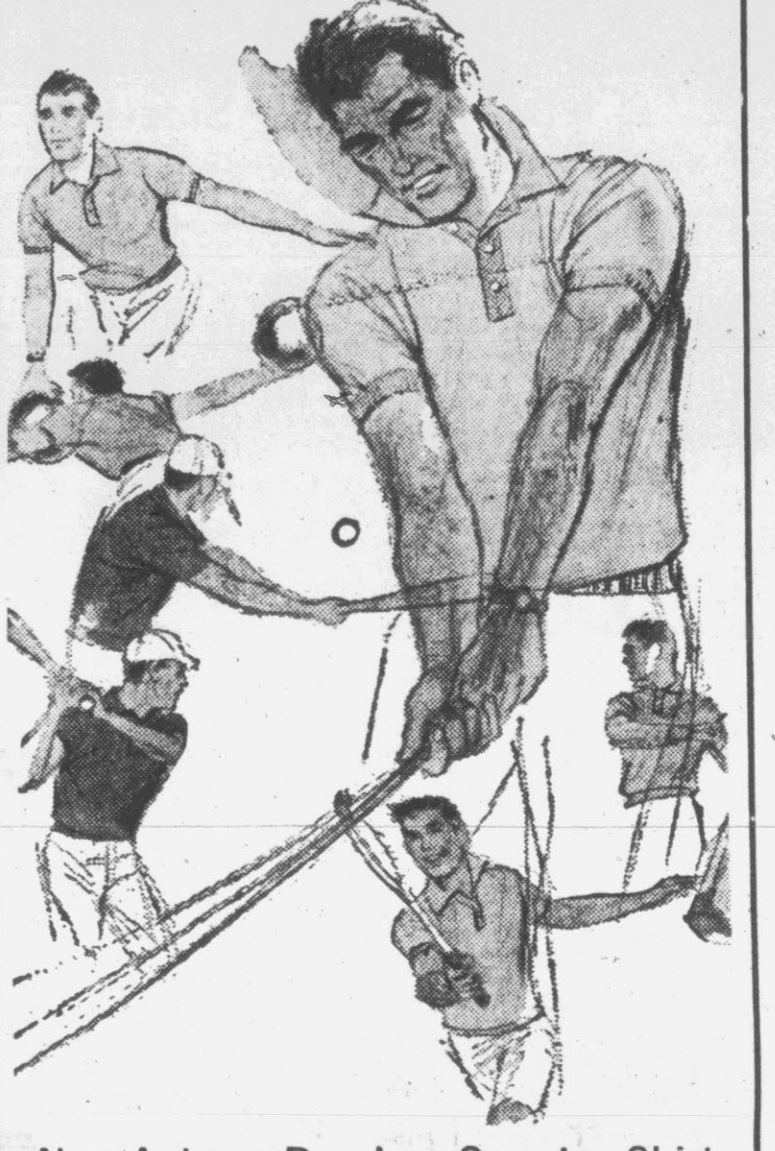

This year we have four or five pitchers who are doing a good job. We don't have any real good pitchers, but they are capable of doing a pretty good job. We haven't had any one pitcher who is real consistent. Don Roth is our top man with a 3-1 record."

Stallings believes to have good college baseball team, the club "must have the right attitude, want to hustle and want to win.

"As far as physical things are concerned, a team needs good pitching, and speed."

Old Wood Burner Has Been Slowed By Time

WASHINGTON (AP)—Time has slowed "The General" to a walk but the ancient wood burner retained enough pep to complete its latest mission—just barely.

The star of the Civil War's "Great Locomotive Chase" tooted into town Thursday to take part in ceremonies commemorating the creation of the Medal of Honor. It ran smack into a skirmish with a section of District of Columbia railroad tracks.

The General now is 107 years old and its joints have stiffened. But it started out jauntily enough on a 1½-mile run to the Navy Yard, tooting its whistle, belching black smoke and fiercely hissing steam.

An hour and a half later, the General arrived. Average speed: one mile an hour.

In the interim, the passenger car loaded down with newsmen, dignitaries and Civil War buffs was lost and a second load of dignitaries waiting at the Navy Yard had their fill of a hot sun.

The curves were just too much for the General's joints. But some railroad fans said it was a tribute to the old engine that it reached its destination at all.

Part of the credit, too, should go to W. Alvin Gaines, manager of equipment for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, which owns and keeps the General.

Decked out in a stove pipe hat and gray frock coat, Gaines, of Louisville, Ky., walked alongside the engine, armed with a big oil can. He oiled guard rails and signaled the engineer to back up a bit and then inch forward.

Receiving his signals was Russell White of Covington, Ky. As White brought The General to a halt before a sharp bend and then based the locomotive back and forth until the curve had been cleared, crowds of onlookers cheered.

Things were different back on April 12, 1862. That day, 22 Union raiders, led by spy James Andrews of Kentucky, stole the engine north of Marietta, Ga., and sped toward Chattanooga, leading Confederate troops on a hectic 87-mile chase.

The idea was to burn bridges and otherwise play hob with Confederate communications. But the raiders were captured and eight hanged as spies.

Six of the survivors received Medals of Honor. That's why The General is figuring in ceremonies commemorating establishment of the medal during the Civil War.

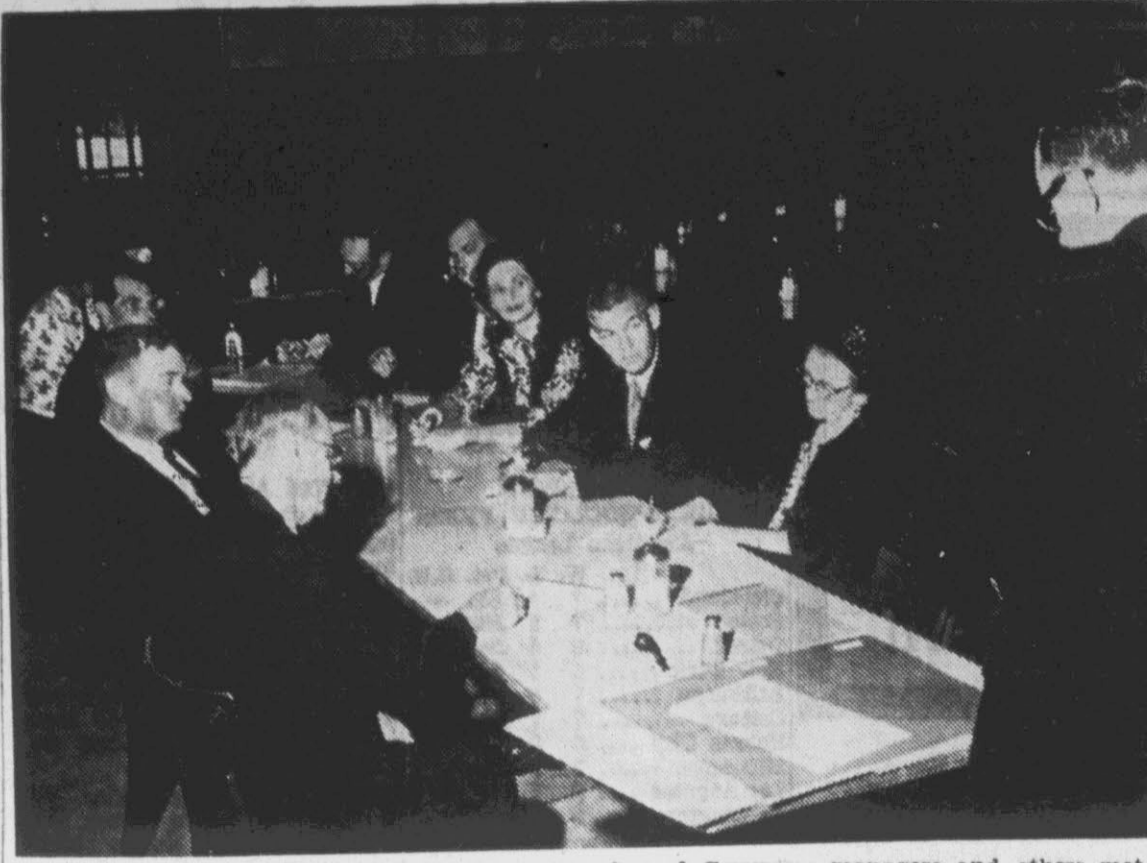

Two Art Works Hung Sideways

SEATTLE (AP)—There were red faces in the fine arts pavilion at the Seattle World's Fair.

A visitor pointed out Thursday that two paintings were hanging sideways.

The abstractions by French artist Roger Bissiere had been hanging that way since the fair opened last Saturday.

Officials corrected the mistake.

'MADE IN N. C.' MEETING—These Chamber of Commerce managers and others met at East Carolina College Thursday to hear plans for a June 10-16 "Made in North Carolina Week" discussed by Thomas B. Broughton of Raleigh, head of the Department of Conservation and Development's Community Development Section. Broughton told the group the special week was planned by C&D in an effort to promote purchasing of more N.C.-manufactured commodities. Cooperation is being sought from local chambers and merchants associations. In the photo are Broughton (right) and John R. Hardy, Greenville Chamber president; Willard T. Claim Women Lured Victims

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Police say they have broken up a robbery ring in which two young women would lure motorists to a lonely area by telling them they had missed the last bus home, and men confederates would rob the motorist.

Two women and three men have been charged with robbery and conspiracy. All have waived preliminary hearings and are held under bond for Superior-Court trial.

The latest man involved in the case, Ted William Batten of Wadesboro, N.C., was picked up in Columbia, S.C., and waived a preliminary hearing in Charlotte today.

The others had waived hearings earlier in the week and were held in bond of $5,000 each. They were

Macmillan Tells West To Be Patient, Stand Firm

NEW YORK (AP)—British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan urges the West "to be firm but patient; never to yield and never to give ground; but never to take provocative action ourselves."

He says he believes that if the free world follows this policy the Russians—in "maybe one, maybe two generations, maybe more"—will be ready for a better peace than one "preserved by mutual fear."

Calling President Kennedy's decision to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere "a tragedy," he says "the world must realize the responsibility for the tragedy is not Kennedy's. It is Khrushchev's."

Macmillan says the test resumption is tragic because "it means the nuclear arms race is again in full spate."

He says Britain and the United States "maintained a voluntary moratorium of three years, which was rudely broken by the Russians last autumn. The British Conservative party leader discussed the present state of the world and looked into the future Thursday night in addressing 1,800 persons at the annual dinner of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Newspaper executives and their guests joined in toasts to the health of President Kennedy and Queen Elizabeth II. The toasts were led by Russ Stewart, retiring board chairman of the ANPA Bureau of Advertising and executive vice president of the Chicago Sun-Times and Chicago Daily News.

The dinner ended the city's annual press week events.

Macmillan goes to Washington today for formal discussions with President Kennedy Saturday.

The prime minister was applauded warmly several times during his dinner speech—especially when he blamed Premier Khrushchev for this country's resumption of nuclear tests in the atmosphere. Macmillan was given a standing ovation at the end of his address.

Macmillan said the West should not abandon its efforts in any sphere "where we can find the possibility of some agreement between East and West to their mutual advantage and to that of the whole world."

He urged continued efforts to end nuclear testing and to achieve a peace suitable to the "dignity of civilized men."

Macmillan said Britain would continue to support the United Nations, and added: "If there are from time to time —as there are bound to be— influence of the only human institutions and stresses, these must not weaken our determination to seeds of growth into an effective work for a steady increase in the world authority."

PAINT STORE OPENING . . . Mrs. J. T. Snowden Jr., is shown cutting the ribbon officially opening the Mary Carter Paint Center in East Greenville. Looking on are Rev. C. F. Hirschi, Snowden, W. E. Martin, Gordon S. Lynch and Mrs. Lynch.

The Mary Carter Paint Center located in Colonial Heights next to the A & P Food Store held its formal opening yesterday morning.

The grand opening celebration of the new retail paint center will continue through Saturday.

Owners of the business, J. T. Snowden Jr. and Gordon S. Lynch, termed the new business a "pilot store" . . . the first of several Mary Carter Paint Centers they hope to operate in Eastern North Carolina.

Snowden, vice-president of WGTC radio, will remain with the local broadcasting station while Lynch, state manager for an insurance firm, will continue his duties.

Manager of the business will be William E. "Bill" Martin, Snowden said.

The local Mary Carter Paint Center is one of over 700 stores throughout the nation. It will carry a full line of paint plus a line of do-it-yourself items.

Principal owners of the nation-wide Mary Carter chain, Snowden said, are Lowell Thomas, noted news commentator, and Thomas Dewey, once Republican candidate for President of the United States.

CARTER A. VAUGHAN'S Exciting Novel of Revolutionary Romance SCOUNDRELS' BRIGADE

CHAPTER 17
Hugh Spencer and his little unit examined every box of biscuits, every roll of blankets, and opened every barrel of meat, but found no counterfeit notes anywhere.

Hugh continued his examination doggedly, and it was late in the afternoon before he was prepared to admit to himself that his reasoning had been false. The Simpsons were looking at the pickled pork in the last two carts. Benji Flaherty was rummaging through a sack of mail, and the drivers of the carts, who had resented the investigation from the start, were becoming impatient.

It would be humiliating to notify Captain Tallmadge that he had failed, Hugh thought, and that he had wasted the precious time of a battalion that the army needed elsewhere. But he had been mistaken, and as he plunged his cold hands into the pockets of his greatcoat, he wished Tallmadge would release him and send him back to the Blue Ridge regiment. He was a soldier, not a counterfeiter catcher, and he was as irritated as he was chilly.

"Hey, Captain, when are you going to let us go?" one of the drivers demanded belligerently.

Hugh was so annoyed he forgot diplomacy. "You'll leave when I release you!" The drivers didn't know it, but he planned to subject each of them to a personal search before he conceded complete defeat.

"We came through the lines on a safe-conduct pledge signed by three of your generals. Is this the way rebels keep their promises?" The man was shouting at the top of his voice now.

"Rebels?" Hugh stared at the man, and forgetting the cold, let his anger take possession of him. "You're speaking to an officer in the army of the United States of America, you miserable Tory. The safe-conduct pledge doesn't grant you the license to insult the free citizens of a free nation!" He slapped the bare floor of an empty cart to emphasize his words.

The driver backed away, muttering apologetically, and hurried off to the far side of the cordon to join several of his colleagues.

Hugh realized that something odd had just happened, and was puzzled for a moment. Then, suddenly, he realized that the floor board had moved when he had struck it, and he turned to the wagon quickly.

The board had slid the better part of an inch out of position, and Hugh knew instinctively that he had discovered the secret of the smugglers. He ripped the board aside, moved three others, and in his excitement, completely forgot military etiquette.

"Benji!" he called.

The note of urgency in his voice brought Benji, the Simpsons brothers, and four of the battalion's officers to his side.

Hugh pointed at the flooring, his face grim.

"I'll be damned," Benji said. "We've spent hours looking for something that's been right under our noses."

"False flooring on carts is one of the oldest tricks in the world," Dave Simpson said.

Hugh recovered his breath. "Remove the flooring of every cart," he said sharply. "And Major, I'll be obliged if you'll assign a platoon to make certain that none of the wagon drivers escape. I want to talk to every last one of them."

The commander of the troops gave an order, and the drivers were surrounded by soldiers who paid no attention to outraged comments about "safe-conduct pledges."

Benji and the Simpsons worked feverishly, prying up floor boards, and after an hour's intensive work they discovered counterfeit money in five of the forty carts. Hugh stuffed the notes into burlap bags, keeping count of the sums, and the total was staggering.

Someone had tried to smuggle more than two hundred thousand dollars in false Continental bills into Philadelphia. There were smaller denominations of forged notes from several states, too, including eight hundred pounds in Massachusetts pounds, nine and almost two thousand Rhode Island pounds.

The drivers of all the wagons except those in which the counterfeit money had been carried were released.

The five prisoners claimed they knew nothing about the false flooring and stubbornly insisted they had been hired to do a specific job; they neither owned the contents. Each swore that he was being paid three pounds to carry out his task, and that he had no idea how the money had been placed in the cart that had been assigned to him.

Hugh was unable to prove any of the men guilty, but took no chances, and sent all five to Captain Tallmadge under guard.

Washington wisely avoided a pitched battle with Cornwallis, however, and instead struck another unexpected blow, overwhelming the enemy garrison at Princeton on January 3. The British, confused and frightened, withdrew their remaining garrisons from New Jersey, leaving Washington in possession of the entire state and temporarily relieving the threat against Philadelphia.

The people responded as enthusiastically as Washington had hoped, and volunteers came from every state to join him, bringing his total strength to twelve thousand men. But American independence had not yet been won and Ben Tallmadge, now a major, explained the situation candidly to Hugh when they met by prearrangement one evening in March at a Philadelphia inn.

"Folks don't realize it, but the worst is yet to come," he said. "Howe is going to leave his winter quarters in New York soon, and at best we can delay him. Our new troops are untrained militia, and they'll need a few battle scars before they're worth much to us. Some ships are sneaking through the British blockade, but Admiral Howe has managed to cut us off from the world pretty effectively. You tell me that counterfeit money is starting to appear again, so people will become disillusioned with Congress and the governments of the states. Have you read that new pamphlet of Tom Paine's? He's right when he says, 'These are the times that try men's souls.' I'm afraid our worst year is ahead of us."

"When do you suppose we'll begin to pull ahead?" It didn't occur to Hugh, any more than it did to Tallmadge, that the Americans would give up the struggle.

"After we've won some major victories. We need the help of France, but Mr. Franklin has written from Paris to the general that we aren't going to get it

Seek Cause Of Warehouse Fire

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP)—The ruins of two burned fertilizer warehouses at Shipyard River Terminal here were probed today for clues to the cause of a fire which did $1 million damage Thursday.

The huge blaze broke out in the rear of a warehouse belonging to Ertivan Fertilizer Co. That facility, containing 16,000 tons of Chilean soda and 4,000 tons of potash nitrate, was destroyed. Another warehouse was partially burned.

There were no serious injuries reported although several persons suffered burns from chemicals. Some firemen were treated for exhaustion.

Threatened by the fire were numerous dock facilities. Several hundred yards away were the sprawling storage tanks of Humble Oil Co.

Seven boxcars of sodium nitrate and one containing nitrogen were removed from danger on a nearby railway siding.

Firemen were prevented at first from getting too close to the warehouses because of the intense heat of the flames and small explosions which shot hot, burning materials high into the air.

Flames shot 200 feet into the air and could be seen for miles around.

All available city firemen were called into action. Equipment from the nearby Air Force Base and the Charleston Navy Yard also was used.

Both the terminals and the fertilizer plant are owned by James B. Gibbs and the combination is probably the largest privately owned waterfront facility in the Southeast.

A half-million dollar fire occurred there in 1944.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — North Carolina egg markets irregular. Supplies barely adequate to short demand good. Prices paid producers for clean, unsized eggs, delivered nearby grading stations on a grade-yield basis, cases exchanged: grade A large, whites 29-30; medium, whites 27-29; small, whites 19-20.

NEW YORK (AP) — Steels and other industrials recovered early this afternoon as the stock market moved ahead in moderate trading.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .80 at 251.10 with industrials up 1.70, rails up .30 and utilities unchanged.

Gains of fractions to 1 or 2 points outnumbered losers among key stocks.

A second look at the news that U.S. Steel and Bethlehem had been indicted for alleged price rigging showed Wall Streeters this involved only a small part of the firms' total business and was not a consequence of the recent crisis over the canceled $6-a-ton price boost.

At the same time, brokers said the market seemed "oversold" after two straight days of sharp decline.

Rails perked up after sliding to a 1962 low Thursday. Chemicals, motors, oils, airlines, tobaccos, building materials, nonferrous metals and drugs were generally higher.

Jones & Laughlin and Lukens Steel rebounded about 2 apiece. U.S. Steel and Republic Steel showed gains of close to a point and Bethlehem rose fractionally. Youngstown Sheet recovered more than a point.

General Motors, down about a point, was reacting to the government decision not to appeal the final court judgment on how Du Pont must divest itself of its 63 million shares of GM. Du Pont rose a couple of points.

Chrysler advanced a point. Ford was steady and American Motors added a fraction.

IBM rebounded more than 4 points. Gains exceeding 2 points were posted for Beckman Instruments and Litton Industries.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.98 at 680.66. Prices moved higher on the American Stock Exchange in slow trading.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were strong.

Two Issues Before Wake Forest Board

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Trustees of Wake Forest College were to meet here today to receive a committee report on whether to admit Negroes to undergraduate schools of the Baptist-supported college.

Public controversy, however, concerned not integration but public relations — the image Wake Forest presents to the North Carolina Baptists, especially the image supposedly created by a novel written by a college staff member.

The Rev. Wendell Davis of Charlotte, one of the trustees, said he believed the group would consider punitive action against Russell Brantley, the college's communications director. Brantley is author of "The Education of Jonathan Beam," a novel set on a college campus identified by many readers as Wake Forest.

The novel concerns efforts by a Baptist state convention to control what is taught at the fictitious college.

Two weeks ago the Rev. Mr. Davis sent letters to the 35 other trustees declaring the novel is filled with "vulgarity, foul language, a picture of drunkenness and other misconduct at Wake Forest College. This misleading picture will cause Baptists of North Carolina to withhold their support from our program of Christian education — not only at Wake Forest but at all Baptist institutions of higher learning in the state."

Similar concern was voiced by Marse Grant, editor of "Biblical Recorder," official publication of the Baptist State Convention. In an editorial this week, Grant did not mention the book, but urged trustees to take action to improve the college's image in the minds of North Carolina Baptists.

Brantley's defenders included Irving Carlyle, a Winston-Salem lawyer and college trustee, and the Rev. W. W. Finlator, Raleigh Baptist minister.

Carlyle criticized Grant's editorial as a "veiled suggestion that the book and its author should be punished by the trustees."

The Rev. Mr. Finlator, in a talk to Wake Forest students in Wait Chapel here April 12, praised the book as "refreshing, fascinating and valuable. . . . Brantley has punctured a lot of ecclesiastical pride and pretense."

Grant also has criticized "The Student," campus humor magazine. In the last issue of the "Biblical Recorder" he singled out an article that spoofed evangelist Billy Graham's recent visit to the college.

The integration matter was to be reported on by the trustees' Race Relations Committee, headed by L. Y. (Stag) Ballentine of Raleigh, who also is state agriculture commissioner.

U.S. And Allied Army Officers To Tour Area

A group of about 85 U.S. and allied army officers, currently enrolled in the U.S. Special Warfare School at Ft. Bragg, are scheduled Saturday to tour East Carolina College and the Voice of America installations surrounding Greenville.

W. T. Kyzer, manager of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said the group is expected to visit Site C of the VOA project near Bell Arthur about 10 a.m. before arriving at the local Army Reserve Armory about 11:30 for lunch.

A tour of the ECC campus has been planned for the officers by school officials. Following the trip through the campus, buses will take the group to VOA Site A at Leggetts Crossroads in Beaufort County.

According to Kyzer, the group will include 48 officers of foreign national armies who are attending the school at Ft. Bragg.

17-Year Locusts Soon Will Swarm

RALEIGH (AP) — Locusts will begin swarming from the ground in at least six Tar Heel counties late next month.

Gulford, Orange, Rockingham, Rowan, Stokes and Surry can expect the insects. Dr. David L. Wray senior entomologist with the State Department of Agriculture, said Thursday there is a possibility some locusts from the brood will also appear in Davie, Warren, Yadkin and Bertie counties.

"Brood II, as the swarm is known for this year, is the true 17 year variety of locust," Wray said.

Firemen Called To Smoke Scare

Greenville firemen were called to Mayor Charles M. King's residence on West Longmeadow Road last night when a washing machine started smoking.

The call was received at 8:15 p.m.

U.S. Rocket Launch To Venus Set This Summer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Encouraged by success of the crippled spacecraft Ranger 4 in hitting the moon, U.S. space scientists today disclosed plans to launch a similar rocket called Mariner toward Venus this summer.

Mariner will be boosted into space by the same Atlas-Agena B combination that aimed Ranger 4 so accurately it landed on the moon even though electronic failures prevented mid-flight corrections.

Ranger 4's 233,000-mile journey, which ended on the far side of the moon Thursday, took 64 hours. Mariner will take four months to reach Venus, 26 million miles away.

Current plans call for Mariner to pass within 16,000 miles of Venus but scientists at the jet propulsion laboratory, builder of both Ranger and Mariner, believe it could reach that planet if plans were changed.

Although the Mariner space vehicle weighs 230 pounds less than Ranger 4's 780, it too will be loaded with scientific instruments. These will measure Venusian temperatures from the surface up through its dense atmosphere; the planet's magnetic field; the deadliness of any radiation belts surrounding Venus and the density of cosmic dust in space between earth and Venus.

Two Mariners are being readied at the laboratory, the second as a possible backup for the one now scheduled to be launched in August.

Failure to achieve a successful launch during the few days Venus is closest would mean a wait of 19 months until the planet swings near earth again.
