New City Manager Hired By Council, Will Arrive In July

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Col. Harry Edward Hagerty, a retiring U.S. Army officer, last night was named Greenville's new city manager.

The 51-year-old Hagerty, who resided in Greenville prior to World War II and married here, will assume his new duties July 15. In the meantime he will be completing his army service and finishing up a masters degree at George Washington University.

Col. Hagerty had been interviewed by the city councilmen earlier, officials indicated, as had been several other applicants for the city manager post.

He was not present for the formal City Council hiring last night. However, he told the Daily Reflector by phone, "We—the whole family—are looking forward to returning to Greenville under these circumstances."

Col. Hagerty's starting salary was set by the councilmen at $7,600 annually.

He replaces Louis Scheipers Jr. who resigned in January and died before he relinquished the office. Scheipers, who began work June 5, 1961, had started at an annual salary of $9,000.

Hiring of the new city manager took only a few moments. The item had been added as the final matter on the council agenda. In bringing it up, Mayor King said, "We have interviewed several men for this job and I think we have come to some conclusion."

Ford McGowan made the motion that the council hire Harry Hagerty as city manager. The mayor called for a vote and the councilmen unanimously approved. Later McGowan amended his motion to stipulate the annual salary.

Councilman M. W. Aldridge pointed out that Col. Hagerty is "married into the mayor's family." He married a niece of the mayor, Mattie Moye Gaylord, when he worked here as an insurance adjustor in the late 1930s.

"I'd like the fact to be known that all five councilmen are behind this man," Aldridge declared. He said that Hagerty had impressed each of the councilmen in their interviews with him.

"I hope the people of Greenville will give him the chance to do the job we all feel he is capable of doing."

Col. Hagerty said by phone last night that he is in the process of retiring. He expects to complete his army duties June 30. "I hope to be there (Greenville) ready to commence work on July 15."

He was born in Indiana and completed high school in Muncie, Ind. He graduated from De Pauw University in Greencastle, Ind. in 1934 with a business administration degree. On June 6 he will receive a masters degree in international relations from George Washington University.

In the army he attended the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas in 1950-51 and remained there as a faculty member for another two years.

He attended the U.S. Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. in 1954-55 and returned there as a faculty member in 1958. This is his present assignment. Col. Hagerty also attended the Army Command Management School at Ft. Belvoir in 1956.

During World War II he was a battalion commander in Europe and during the occupation following hostilities gained experience in city administration as allied units took over cities.

He was also an ROTC professor at the University of Wisconsin for four years and he served a tour of duty in Korea in 1953-54.

He has 3½ years duty in the Pentagon as deputy chief of staff for personnel.

Col. Hagerty came to Greenville in 1937 as an insurance adjustor and he remained here until 1941 when he was called to active duty. He had obtained a reserve commission in 1934.

While in Greenville he married the former Mattie Moye Gaylord, daughter of Mrs. L. W. Gaylord Sr. and the late Mr. Gaylord. They have three sons, all of whom were born in Greenville. The oldest son, 21-year-old Harry Jr., is graduating from West Point this year. The 17-year-old twins, Roy and Guy, are completing high school this year and are enrolled in East Carolina College for next year.

The colonel will be Greenville's fourth city manager since the council-manager form of government was approved in a city-wide referendum in 1953.

James S. Hughes was first city manager. After he resigned to take a similar post in Florida, the council hired Leonard Bloxam in 1956 to serve as both city manager and utilities director.

In late 1960, the Utilities Commission requested that Bloxam be returned to full-time director duties. Subsequently the council employed Scheipers, then working as Southern Pines city manager. He held the job until his death in January. The position has been open since that time while the council considered applications for the job.

Hold Trainmen In Tragic Toll

TOKYO (AP)—An engineer and four other trainmen involved in Thursday's three-train wreck which killed more than 150 persons were arrested today on suspicion of criminal negligence.

Both houses of Parliament scheduled extraordinary Sunday sessions to begin an investigation of the tragedy.

Police, reducing their casualty figures, listed 154 dead and 165 injured. The fire department list had 152 dead and 336 injured, 144 seriously.

The engineer of a freight train involved in the crash, Norifumi Minakami, 38, was grief-stricken before his arrest and told newsmen he might have missed a signal. Arrested with him was his conductor, and the engineer and conductor of a commuter train leaving Tokyo which hit the derailed freight, and a station signal man. The third train involved was an inbound commuter train.

Council Tables Move To Annex

Councilmen last night tabled the annexation of Stratford subdivision Addition 3 because the subdivision has not met city ordinances requiring curb and gutter.

The annexation apparently will not be reconsidered until arrangements are worked out with developers for meeting the subdivision ordinance requirements.

Pior to the tabling action, Mayor Charles King read correspondence which had been carried on between former City Manager Leonard Bloxam and Ollie VanNortwick representing developers of the property.

The correspondence concerned street paving in the original section of Stratford which, it said, was 20 feet in width. The ordinances required 22 foot paving. A later letter set forth an agreement to require the subdivision to install the additional paving when curb and gutter is placed on the subdivision streets.

Mayor King said a search of the minutes showed that a final plat of the third section of Stratford subdivision has never been approved by the council.

"The ordinances say that new subdivisions shall include curb and gutter before they are acceptable to the city," the Mayor said. "That's all I have to say."

Councilman Ralph Brimley offered the motion to table the matter and it was approved.

In the process of the discussion, however, the councilmen learned from City Attorney R. B. Lee, that they could legally annex an area under state law by 100 percent sign-up of property owners even though it had not complied with subdivision ordinances

The ordinance could be amended to stipulate that its provisions would have to be complied with before the area is annexed, the attorney said.

The councilmen instructed him to submit such a revision for council consideration.

A resolution was passed asking the State Highway Commission to remove County Road No. 1439 from the state highway system. The half mile road is located within the city limits in Greenfield Terrace. City Engineer C. A. Holiday said the change could mean approximately $1,000 annually in Powell Bill funds for the city.

Councilmen also approved purchase of a triangle of land on S. Wright Road for a neighborhood park site. The small area was left isolated when a street was cut between Harrington - Williams and College Courts subdivisions. It has been offered to the city for approximately $25.

Charles Cobb asked the councilmen for any assistance they could offer to obtain water and sewer lines in the N.C. 11 south area. Cobb said he is building apartment units south of the U.S. 264 intersection to serve married college students. He pointed to other developments planned for the area including the Industrial School.

Cobb said a high water table is creating problems concerning the installation of septic tanks. The water and sewer service is being considered by the Utilities Commission, he said.

Meet Saturday

Pitt Democrats are scheduled to gather in their respective districts at 12 noon Saturday for their precinct meetings to elect officers and delegates to the County Democratic Convention next Saturday.

Pitt Democratic Chairman J. Henry Harrell again urged precinct officers to encourage participation in tomorrow's noon meetings. Attendance of at least five registered Democrats at each precinct meeting is required for a quorum.

The 25 precincts will elect five-member executive committees that include the chairman, vice chairman and secretary-treasurer.

The chairmen and vice chairman elected tomorrow are scheduled to meet next Saturday noon, following the 11 a.m. county convention, as the county Executive Committee to elect a county chairman.

Business of the county convention includes election of delegates to the May 17 State Democratic Convention in Raleigh.

House Okays Corporation In Space Business

WASHINGTON AP) — The House has given a green light for a private, profit-making corporation to run the nation's future worldwide space satellite communications network.

The 354-9 vote by which the House approved the bill Thursday reflected the strong bipartisan support it commanded. Since this compromise version was worked out in a Senate committee, something very close to what the House passed is likely to sail through the Senate.

Even as the House was voting the Air Force announced it recently sent a television picture from California to Massachusetts, using the aging Echo I balloon satellite as a relay point 1,000 miles in space. The picture was fuzzy but readily recognizable. Rep. Oren Harris, D-Ark., announced the achievement on the House floor.

A few House liberals tried to change the bill, contending it is too favorable to existing communications companies, such as the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The bill provides for stock in the satellite corporation to be split 50-50 between the communications companies and the general public, which could buy in at $100 a share.

A key part of the bill directs the Federal Communications Commission to encourage existing companies to build their own ground receiving stations to utilize the satellite network.

The communications industry originally favored limiting ownership of the system to themselves. The Kennedy administration favored sale of stock in the corporation to the public.

Attends Church, Must Pay Fine

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Mary Ellen Benson, who skipped Sunday morning union meetings to attend church services, has agreed to pay a $5 fine assessed by the union.

Mrs. Benson agreed to pay the fine and court costs of $5.40 after a pretrial conference Thursday. The suit was brought by Local 356 of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers Union, which said its bylaws provided that any member missing three out of five meetings must be ifned.

Mrs. Benson admitted missing the meetings, but said she considered church more important. County Judge Robert J. Meich praised her motives, but said that past court decisions made it clear the union had the right to assess the fine.

President Urges Nation To Lead Free World Into Big Trading Partnership

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — President Kennedy beckoned to America today to spurn timidity and lead the free world into a genuine Atlantic Partnership of expanding, two-way international trade.

The choice confronting the nation in May 1962, Kennedy said in a prepared address, is "to trade or fade."

More trade, the President insisted, will mean more jobs, more national security, and a bulwarked foreign policy. And the tools to obtain them, he said, are in a legislative kit—his proposed trade expansion law now before Congress.

The arguments were old ones, but the phrases were new and so was the setting for them—a new $10-million wharf in America's third greatest port.

'I know of no occasion," Kennedy said, "where the topic and the location of a presidential address have so neatly fit together."

The President flew down from Washington to maket he address, accept a key to the city, and then fly on to Eglin Air Force Base in western Florida to watch the Air Force display its might.

Once more in his New Orleans speech, Kennedy spelled out what he considers some old and new economic facts of life which, he said, require America's moving ahead.

"For what we are moving toward is an open partnership among all free nations, a gradual leveling of trade barriers that will draw the whole non-Communist world together with the strings of economic self-interest. And that partnership will be specifically and initially expressed in terms of a genuine Atlantic Partnership—between the Common Market of Europe and the common market of 50 united states," he said.

"That partnership will be based relity. The dollar economy can produce nearly 90 percent of the free world's industrial power; the lion's share of its technical skills; two of its greatest markets for raw materials, and atariff wall.

very large portion of the capital available for investment and development.

"It will extend these benefits of these new opportunities to the continents of Asia, Africa and Latin America, who will be able to buy more from the industrialized nations by selling more goods in our markets. And, finally, it will pose to the leaders of the Communist world a direct, deep and abiding challenge."

The United States, Kennedy said, must be willing to buy as well as sell. It must be willing to allow European producers easier access to our market in return for opening the doors in their common

This is what Kennedy seeks from Congress—the power to reduce and in some cases wipe out tariffs on a reciprocal basis.

A few people and industries may be hurt, he conceded. But safeguards have been built into the projected trade law for them.

"No one," he said, "is going to be sacrificed to the national interest with a medal and an empty grocery bag."

The trade law, he said, will improve U.S. security by building a sufficient surplus of exports over imports to halt the outflow of gold, thus financing with overseas earnings the $3 billion a year it costs to maintain U.S. troops abroad.

Gasoline Truck Booby-Trapped In Moslem Area

ALGIERS (AP) — A booby-trapped gasoline truck loaded with fuel blew up with a roar today on heights above the Moslem Casbah quarter, setting fire to more than a dozen vehicles and several nearby houses.

The driver was killed but there were no early reports of other casualties.

Flaming gasoline was hurled onto the walls of the houses, mostly occupied by Moslems living outside the Casbah.

A thick towering cloud of black smoke drifted over the center of the city.

The truck blew up several blocks from the narrow entrances into the Casbah where 80,000 Moslems make their homes. An angry mob of Moslems quickly circled the area.

The terrorist Secret Army Organization which vows to keep Algeria French was blamed by officials for the latest vehicle booby-trap.

Wednesday a booby-trapped car blew up, killing 62 Moslem dock workers and wounding more than 100 others.

The explosion occurred early in the afternoon after a series of secret army terrorist attacks left 12 Moslems dead and five wounded.

Earlier troops and riot police sealed off a section of the city which has had a high rate of terrorist attacks and began house-to-house searches. The identities of many of the 20,000 persons living in the area, known as the "drill ground" quarter, were being checked by security forces.

Police decreed a curfew in the closed-off section, and refused to say how long the blockade would last.

Railroads, Unions Both Object To Board Findings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Non-operating rail unions and railroad executives today criticized a public board's recommendation to President Kennedy that 450,000 union members get a $100-million annual pay increase.

The union spokesmen, describing as deplorable the board's recommendation Thursday of a 10.2 cent hourly average increase, thought it was too low. The rail leaders said it was too high.

G. E. Leighty, chairman of the committee representing 11 unions of nonoperating rail employes—those engaged in service and maintenance as contrasted with engineers and other operating personnel—said the proposed pay increase "departs from all recognized standards of justice in wage determination."

He repeated his charge that the railroads had tried to prejudice the board in advance by declaring last month that a wage increase meant a rate hike.

The unions, whose workers average $2.42 an hour, had sought a 25 cent increase.

The estimated $100-million cost of the 10.2 cent increase compares with a net income of $382 million reported by all U.S. railroads in 1961.

Said Wayne Johnston, Illinois Central president: "Where are we going to get it? "It's worse than the steel settlement."

Ben Heineman, chairman of Northwestern Railway, called the three-man public board's recommendations "a very severe blow to the industry. It is difficult to see where we'll get the money."

In an apparent allusion to President Kennedy's stated desire that wage settlements generally conform to productivity increases. Leighty said in his statement:

"To conform to that policy would have required a wage increase for these railway workers much greater than that which the emergency board recommends. Railroad labor's productivity has risen much faster than the general national average."

Kennedy carefully refrained from endorsing the board's report after receiving it at the White House Thursday. He said it represented a diligent effort to help solve the big pay dispute and that he was gratified to note the board maintained its proposals stayed within administration economic guides.

"It is now the plain duty of both parties," the President stated, "to negotiate a responsible and noninflationary settlement in their own and in the public interest."

There was no immediate reaction from the unions but a statement was expected later today.

In Chicago a spokesman for the Western Carriers Conference Committee said there would be no statement until the conference had an opportunity to study the recommendations.

Under the law, both sides have 30 days in which to bargain before a strike can be called. The 11 unions have already obtained authority from their members to order a walkout at the end of the no-strike period.

The emergency board, headed by labor arbitrator Saul Wallen of Boston, roundly criticized the rail industry and unions for poor bargaining records in past years.

The board's recommendations:

1. A four-cent hourly pay boost dating back to Feb. 1. On top of this would come an increase effective May 1 of 2½ per cent, which averages out at about 6.2 cents in addition to the 4 cents, making the 10.2-cent total.

The unions had asked for a 25-cent hourly raise. The industry had called for a 20 per cent pay cut in many pay categories, and no pay change in the balance.

2. A moratorium against the unions seeking further wage increases for a year, until May 1, 1963.

3. A rule providing for advance notice of five working days before employes are dismissed due to force reductions. The unions had asked for six-month advance notice, but the board said this would amount to a job freeze for unnecessary employes.

4. Establishment of a labor-management study group, with representatives of the public participating, to evaluate pay differentials between jobs. The board said there is too little difference between skilled and unskilled worker pay rates resulting in loss of incentive morale.

5. Finally, creation of a labor-management committee, perhaps with public representatives helping, to work on repairing the labor relations status of the industry. This group would discuss problems affecting the rail industry or the employes or both sufficiently in advance to anticipate solutions and forestall crisis.

$400 Pledged To Grifton Body

GRIFTON — Four hundred dollars has been pledged to the Grifton Recreation organization by the local United Fund, it was reported today by Dan McLaughlin, chairman of the recreation group.

Of the total, $200 is for the recreation organization and $200 is for the Little League program.

It was announced earlier this week that several hundred dollars had been pledged by the United Fund, but the exact amount was undertermined. Jimmy Herring is United Fund chairman for Grifton.

McLaughlin noted that the recreational organization wants to cooperate with any of the existing recreation groups in Grifton, but does not want "to absorb them" without their request. The Little League program is not operated as a part of the Grifton Recreation organization, which is a newly organized group with plans to offer more facilities to local youth.

Mental Hospital Toured By 35 Students Thursday

This is Mental Health Week. Reflector staff writer Patricia Moore traveled with a group of psychology students to Dorothea Dix Hospital yesterday and she reports on the tour).

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

Future psychologists, welfare workers, counselors and teachers from East Carolina College, who toured Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh yesterday, had an insight into a mental hospital and found that this addition to their education would not change their future plans.

Some 35 students took the tour, which was sponsored by the Pitt County Mental Health Association as part of their observance of Mental Health Week. They were accompanied by Mrs. M. P. Bailey Jr., executive secretary of the association; Dr. Clinton Prewett, chairman of the college psychology department; and Mrs. Ann Harrison.

Most students agreed that the trip was educational, as many of them had never been inside a mental hospital before. They were impressed with the employes who seemed dedicated to their work.

Kenneth Trogden, senior psychology major who plans to enter the field of psychiatric social work, expressed the feelings of fellow students: "It was an educational experience to be exposed to the situation." Trogden has previously worked at Caswell Training School in Kinston, which emphasizes the mentally deficient.

Some students, such as Barbara Parker, junior education major from Belvoir, found that the hospital was not "as bad" as they expected it to be. However, Miss Parker felt that though she had been exposed to some facts about the mentally ill in reading, she was surprised to find them in reality. She felt the trip would be beneficial to her as a future teacher and might be her "one opportunity" to visit a mental hospital.

Margaret McLaurin, sophomore psychology major from Fayetteville, was interested in the patients' reaction to the touring students. She observed that the patients seemed completely unconcerned about the visitors and went on about their activities.

Patients in the occupational therapy department were happy to have new faces.

Victor Horrell of Wilmington, who plans to make a career of clinical psychology, said his visit would not alter his plans. He hopes to work in a public or private clinic rather than in a mental hospital.

Another primary education major interested in psychology, Carolyn Beck of Zebulon, said she had always lived near the mental hospital but had never visited it. So, she took advantage of the tour. She, like other students on the trip, was interested in what she saw.

Psychology student Katrina Crumpler of Clinton felt the newer patient facilities with single rooms were "brighter" than the dormitory type rooms. The newer facilities had pastel colored walls, which she felt lent a more healthy atmosphere.

Psychology major Larry Byrd of Salisbury observed that "If I had been interested in clinical psychology, from what I have seen of state institutions, I would reconsider this area because the state does not seem to employ clinical psychologists." Byrd plans to enter the field of experimental psychology.

Most of the psychology students taking the trip were interested in the clinical aspect, but plan to enter the field in public or private clinics rather than in hospitals such as the one visited.

Students making the trip were first given an orientation talk about the hospital, the types of mental disorders treated there and the treatment offered, by Dr. W. J. Buffaloe, assistant superintendent.

The tour included trips through admissions and continued therapy wards, as well as through occupational therapy and recreational departments.

Many of the patients were attending an afternoon fashion show, which was arranged by volunteer workers from Raleigh. Patients modeled clothes and furnished intermission entertainment.

Local Advertisers Win 10 Contest Awards

Eight Greenville retail newspaper advertisers have swept nearly one-third of all awards going to stores in cities of less than 25,000 population in the 1962 "Best Advertisements Contest" sponsored annually by the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association of the Carolinas.

In 11 categories included in the judging, Greenville stores grabbed six of the first-place awards, two second-place honors and a pair of third-place ribbons. The 10 awards represented a lion's share of honors from the total 33 citations handed out by NAEA.

Awards will be presented to the winners at a May 22 luncheon during NAEA's annual convention in Charlotte.

Among the Greenville firms were two double winners and two first-place winners who hung up blue ribbons in the competition for the second straight year.

Brody's notched a first-place award in the Women's Apparel Stores category and claimed third place in the Shoe Store division. Dot and Jean's Supermarket placed one and two in the Food Stores category.

Repeating first-place winners in the Men's Clothing Stores and Financial categories, respectively, were Coffman's and Planters National Bank & Trust Co. of Greenville.

Greenville's winners, listed with their advertising managers, are: Heilig-Meyers Co., first place in the Appliance and Hardware Stores division, Gene Laughter of Richmond, Va.; Planters National Bank & Trust Co., first place in the Financial division, Carlyle Gay of Rocky Mount; Dot & Jean's Supermarket, first and second places in the Food Stores division, Mike Brocato of the Daily Reflector advertising staff.

The Jewel Box, first place in the Jewelry Stores division, Nick Dorroll of Greenville; Coffman's, first place in the Men's Clothing Stores division, George Coffman of Greenville; Brody's, first place in Women's Apparel Stores division and third place in Shoe Stores division, William D. Upchurch of Greenville.

Blount-Harvey Co., third place in Department Stores division, Kenneth Kannon of Greenville; Larry's Shoe Store, second place in Shoe Stores division, Larry Averette of Greenville.

All of the Greenville winning entries were submitted as tear sheets of advertising published by the Daily Reflector. Thirty-three awards went to advertisers in the identical categories in competition among cities of above 25,000 population. Thalhimers of Winston-Salem was declared the winner of the contest's Grand Award.

In the smaller-cities category, the city closest to Greenville's award-sweeping was Hickory with seven awards, one of which was a top award. Jacksonville advertisers gathered in four ribbons, including to first place awards. Thomasville advertisers also won four awards.

The remainder of the 33 awards went to advertisers in Hendersonville (3), Statesville (2), Concord (2 and Lexington (1)

Shirts To Sun In By The Seashore

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Writer

Shirts are going to great lengths to get out of the closet and onto the beach this summer

Tee-shirts, he-shirts, she shirts and night shirts, white ones and ultra bright ones, all of which were once quite satisfied to share fashion billing with skirts, shorts and slim jims, now are bidding to shine in the sun all by themselves.

They have grown too long to be blouses, too short to be dresses. They are happily in between.

If it were not for the fact that shoulders and bodices fit more than adequately, the shirts would look like big brother's five or six sizes too large for the wearer.

The shirt styles, for the most part, are unabashedly adapted from the masculine wardrobe, but the femine figure adapts them nicely.

The shirt tail of a front button sport skirt model halts just short of the knees. A favorite of seafarers, the horizontal striped jersey tee-shirt stretches over the fair sex at the seashore to about a mid-thigh hem length. A cool, sleeveless variety of a night shirt also comes to an end just as it is getting a good start.

The shirts cover up bathing suits to preserve modesty, and to protect the wearer from sun burn and nippy breezes. But they still have as much sex appeal as Brigitte Bardot in a bath towel.

News And Notes From Bethel

Piano Students In Recital

Mrs. Robert Beverly will present a group of piano students in their annual spring recital at the Bethel Elementary School auditorium May 7 at 7:45 p.m.

The following pupils will participate in the program: Peggy Womack, Frances Rowlette, Bobbie Weeks, Trudy Whitehurst, Terry Gardner, Sandra Nicholson, Sally Ann Whitehurst, Betty Faye Jones, Bobbie Lee Tetterton, Eleanor Weeks, Mary Agnes Hammond, Beth Manning, Bobbe Sue Martin, Jim Taylor and Dwan Thomas.

P.-T. A. Meets

The Bethel P.-T.A. held its regular monthly meeting in the auditorium of the high school Thursday night.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. L. Gurganus Jr. After the reading of the minutes, routine business was discussed. A slate of new officers for the coming year was presented and approved. The new officers are: president, Mrs. J. L. Gurganus Jr.; vice-president, Mrs. Roy M. James; secretary, Mrs. Donald H. Jenkins; treasurer, Mrs. Major Manning.

A program on physical fitness was presented by Mr. Dan Wooten, physical education teacher of the Bethel Schools. Mr. Wooten pointed out that: (1) Parents should understand exactly what physical fitness is; (2) that a child should also understand what physical fitness is; (3) that you should see that your child gets good medical care, proper foods, plenty of fresh air and rest; (4) that you should buy toys that can be used physically rather than mentally; (5) that children should have a work schedule at home; (6) insist tha your child do considerable walking or bicycle riding as an exercise; (7) arrange family activities so that they may be carried out together, such as hiking and camping.

Mr. Wooten was assisted by Frederick Tetterton and Philip Michaels, school students, in exercise demonstrations.

The room count was taken with Mrs. Gold's fifth grade and Mrs. Latham's 11th grade showing the best representation. Following the room count, the meeting was adjourned.

A chicken and pig barbecue dinner will be served Sunday from 12 noon until 2 p.m. by the P.-T. A.

Rubber Tile Floors Need Extra Care

Rubber tile flooring has a distinctive appearance, but requires careful maintenance. Since grease, oil, or abrasives can damage rubber tile, spills should be wiped up promptly with a sudsy cloth.

To maintain its brightness, wash a rubber tile floor with thick soap or detergent suds, followed by a damp-mop rinse. When dry, wax it lightly with self-polishing wax.

How To Make Your Room Look 'Cooler'

An ingenious decorator from Virginia suggests a special trick with paint to make a room look cooler. Just cover "warm-looking" washable objects—such as dark lamp bases and plant stands—with water-soluble paint.

Come fall, wash the paint off with soap or detergent suds—and your "summerizing" will vanish along with the hot weather.

Parkers Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cleveland Parker

The Golden Wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cleveland Parker was celebrated at the family homestead where Mr. Parker was born, near Fountain, Sunday from 3-5 p.m. Hosts for the happy occasion were sons and daughters of the honored couple.

The home was decorated in the anniversary motif. Gilt dusted greenery and gold colored candles, chrysanthemums and snapdragons were used in the two living rooms. Gilded greenery, golden-hued candles and gift plants decorated the gift room. In the dining room, the table was covered with a white, lace-trimmed nylon cloth over gold, that dipped near the floor at the corners. The centerpiece was an arrangement of gold-colored chrysanthemums, carnations and snapdragons, interspersed with white candles, all composed in a handsome brass and crystal epergne. Decorations on the buffet were of greenery and white candles in crystal candelabra.

Guests were greeted at the entrance by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clary of Tarboro, the last named a cousin of Mr. Parker. They were then introduced to Mr. and Mrs. Barney Bland, neighbors and a distant family connection, who in turn presented them to the receiving line composed of the honored couple, Mrs. Claudia O'Brien and Mrs. Cynthia Sherwood of Leaksville, sisters of Mrs. Parker, and Mrs. Nannie Hearne of Macclesfield, sister of Mr. Parker.

In the other living room, Mrs. E. B. Beasley Jr. and brother, Henry T. Smith, both cousins, introduced callers to a second receiving line composed of the Parkers' sons and daughters and their wives and husbands. They are Byron Parker of the home, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Parker of Winston-Salem, Mr. and Mrs. David C. Parker of Wadesboro, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Kressin of College Park, Md., Mr. and Mrs. Lentis Lewis of Enfield and Mr. and Mrs. Alan Parker of Fountain. Mrs. B. L. Webster of Greensboro, a niece, also assisted in receiving, circulating among the guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Ed Beddingfield of Stantonsburg invited guests into the dining room. Mrs. Beddingfield is a great-niece of the honorees. Mrs. M. D. Yelverton served portions of a tiered wedding cake. At the opposite end of the table, Mrs. L. H. Ellis of Winterville served punch from a crystal punch bowl. Mrs. Ellis is a niece of the Parkers. Cheese straws, nuts and mints were self-served.

Those assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Jack Yelverton of Farmville, Misses Barbara Parker of Winston-Salem, Mary Lou Lewis of Enfield and Kim Parker of Fountain, three granddaughters; Misses Edna Beasley and Mary Newton of Fountain, cousins. Mrs. Henry T. Smith also assisted in this area.

Mrs. C. E. Case Sr. directed guests to the gift room where many rememberances were on display. Presiding here were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Messick of Winston-Salem. Mrs. Messick is a granddaughter of the Parkers. Mrs. Stella Parker of Macclesfield, a sister-in-law, presided over the register, signed by 165 guests.

Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Newton of Fountain. Mr. Newton is a nephew.

Among the guests were four who had attented the reception given for Mrs. Parker when she came here from Leaksville 50 years ago, this week. They were Mrs. Nannie Hearne of Macclesfield, Mrs. Della Smith Jackson of Winterville, Mrs. C. H. Rasberry and Mrs. Wyatt Tucker Sr. of Farmville.

Before spraying brass or copper with protective lacquer, clean the surface with metal polish, wash the piece with soap or detergent suds, and wipe it with lacquer thinner.

Safety Council To Sponsor Auto Inspection Lanes

By GEORGE BRYANT
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Safety Council voted yesterday to sponsor automobile safety inspection lanes in the county later in the month.

May and June are vehicle safety-check months throughout North Carolina and the lanes will be conducted along with the statewide program.

Luther Moore, chairman of the Pitt County Safety Council told the group that he had been approached by the National Vehicle Safety Council and local law enforcement personnel about operating the inspection stations.

Moore also told the group that he felt this project was the one thing the council could do that would benefit the area. He noted that the local insurance offices have assured him that they will help buy the supplys needed to operate the lanes.

Captain S. H. Mitchell of the Highway Patrol and Chief Guy Langston of the Greenville Police Department have agreed to help with the inspection lanes in the interest of public safety, in the community, Moore reported.

The dates for the inspection program have not yet been set, but it is hoped that the lanes can be held by the end of the month Moore said.

In other business at the meeting yesterday the safety group announced the officers for the coming year. Leonard Bloxam is the new chairman, W. Ivan Bissette is the vice-chairman and Polly Dail is the secretary-treasurer.

The slate was draw up by a nominating committee and presented to the group by John D. Grier, current secretary-treasurer. The officers were elected by acclamation. The new officers will be installed at the June meeting and will take over in September when the council resumes its activities after the summer break.

Leonard Bloxam, utilities superintendent in Greenville, presented a program on safety in electricity.

Bloxam told the group that many persons take too much for granted when it comes to electricity and do not take into consideration the dangers that go along with it.

The utilities superintendent said that the majority of accidents involving electricity come from low voltage circuits. The reason is because the people do not realize or think about the danger involved because they use these low voltage circuits in everyday life.

Persons that have to work around unusually high voltage circuits know and respect electricity and therefore there is less chance of an accident than with the smaller circuits. Also, a shock by a high voltage circuit often times is enough to knock the individual away from the current whereas 110 volt circuits are not enough and the victim may not be able to turn lose.

Bloxam noted that many fires are listed as caused by faulty wiring. This is true, but he mentioned that the faulty wiring is not always in the house or building, but in the appliances being used in these buildings. Bloxam told the group that here in Greenville about 70 per cent of the homes have bad cords or something that is a fire hazard in the electrical line. It does not necessarily have to be in the main wiring in a house, he noted.

As a personal example of what causes electrical accidents, Bloxam said he was helping inspect a school building (not in Pitt County) and when looking at the fuse box collected 43 cents in pennies from behind the fuses. This is especially dangerous as there is nothing to stop an overloaded circuit from burning when a penny is put behind a fuse. However, a fuse can blow out when a circuit is overloaded and prevent a fire or other accident involving electricity.

Bloxam noted that the utilities department cautions its employees that if they should go into a home and see some faulty wiring or equipment that they are to tell the occupant so that the matter can be corrected. "We feel this is rendering an additional service to the citizens," Bloxam said.

The utilities superintendent reminded the group that "electric shock is one thing that medical men have not found the answer to." When it strikes it is hard and fast and many times too late.

JAN GARBER, "Idol of the Airlanes", will play for the Greenville Moose Lodge Thursday night. His daughter Janis (above, right) is vocalist with the band. Both father and daughter have won popularity polls conducted by the National Ballroom Operators Association. Garber has been fronting his own band for 41 years, has made over 750 record sides, and his popularity has been enduring at hotels, night clubs and theaters. The limited number of tickets to this dance are being issued on a first-come first-served basis.

Class Of 1942 Plans Reunion

The Greenville High School class of 1942 will hold its 20th anniversary reunion next month.

The reunion will be held in the Moose Lodge auditorium June 9.

President of the class Leonard Briley said a social hour, banquet and dance are planned. He said correspondence has been going on between the classmates for the past three months and a large turnout is expected.

There were approximately 100 members of the 1942 class. Two have since been killed in combat and two had died.

Briley said a local committee is planning the reunion and it came about at the suggestion of many of the classmates.

He noted that this will be the first 20th anniversary reunion ever held by a local high school class.

Officers of the 1942 class were: Leonard Brily, president; James Leonard Briley, president; James Briley, vice president; Elizabeth Rachel Fleming Edwards, treasurer.

Sgt. Stubbs Is Civitan Speaker

Sergeant Clyde Stubbs of the Greenville Police Department spoke to members of the local Civitan Club at the group's regular bi-weekly dinner meeting Thursday night.

Introduced by program committman Nick Dorroll, Sgt. Stubbs outlined problems encountered in dealing with juvenile delinquency in the city.

The speaker, who recently attended a course concerning juvenile delinquency conducted by the FBI, cited the lack of proper guidance and love in the home as the principal reasons young people get into trouble. "Juvenile delinquents are nearly always from broken homes," stated Sgt. Stubbs.

"We need new laws with more teeth in them in order to deal effectively with these children and their parents," he said.

Petty larceny is the most common offense committed by juvenile delinquents locally and this stealing occurs mostly from unlocked automobiles, Sgt. Stubbs said.

If the offense is sufficiently serious or consultations with parents concerned have not been fruitful, Stubbs explained, juvenile warrants are drawn and the offenders are turned over to Welfare Director, J. S. Grimes for further attempts towards rehabilitation.

For the more serious offenses the child under 16 is brought before Juvenile Judge D. T. House who may decree a probationary period or send them to a training school if space is available, according to the sergeant.

Club President Herbert Wilkerson presided at the meeting and urged attendance at the North Carolina District Civitan Convention to be held in Asheville May 11 and 12.

Dr. Rives To Lecture Abroad

Dr. Ralph Hardee Rives of the Department of English at East Carolina College will lecture in Great Britain during June and July, 1962, under the sponsorship of British-American Associates.

Founded in 1931, British-American Associates is an independent, unofficial organization concerned with creating an informed public opinion and with furthering British-American understanding and cooperation. Both British and American lecturers participate in its programs on both sides of the Atlantic.

Dr. Rives has just been informed by Mrs. Charles Jannaud, General Secretary of British-American Associates, of his appointment as a lecturer during this summer.

His program of lectures before educational, business, cultural and other organizations in Britain is now being arranged. Among topics on which he will speak are "The British Tradition in the South," "The American CollegeWhat Is Its Role Today?" and "The Roaring Twenties—A Period of Transition in American Life."

Dr. Rives, a B. S. and M. A. graduate of East Carolina College, has been a member of the Department of English since 1960 and has served also as Associate Director of the East Carolina Playhouse, campus dramatic club. He holds the Ed. D. degree from the University of Virginia and has studied at Oxford University in England.

Dr. Stokes Talks On Pakistan At Tarboro Club

Speaking to members of the Tarboro Kiwanis Club, Dr. Kathleen Stokes of East Carolina College, reviewed the history of the areas now comprising West and East Pakistan. The Muslim religion, she said, was the chief influence for 800 years and its revival culminated in the formation of the Muslim state of Pakistan in 1947.

"Pakistan" Dr. Stokes explained, is about to launch what its President, Mohammad Ayub Khan calls 'Basic Democracy', which he asserts is a form of representative government suited to the needs of a new country where the mass of the voters are illiterate." Only persons of status will vote, she continued, for representatives to new National Assembly which will meet in the interim capital, Rawalpindi, early in June.

Because of the significance of Pakistan's strategic geographical location in the sub-continent of India, Dr. Stokes said, the U. S. has joined with Pakistan in a mutual defense assistance agreement and has granted to this country approximately $1 billion in foreign aid.

Mr. John Bede of Perhawar, Pakistan, a graduate student at East Carolina College, was also a guest at the meeting.

Almost $10 Million In Cancer Research Grants

RALEIGH, N. C.—"Cancer research—1962: Almost ten million American Cancer Society dollars have been allocated for the National Research Grants program during the fiscal year ending August 31, 1961," Dr. H. Max Schiebel, Research spokesman for North Carolina Division, American Cancer Society, said today.

This money plus long-term grants and payments awarded previously brings the total of grants in effect on March 1, 1962, to almost seventeen million dollars. Since 1945 the American Cancer Society has devoted more than $87,000,000 to cancer research.

Dr. Schiebel continued, "In North Carolina last year $136,305 was raised for cancer research and $322,768 came back to our medical institutions in this state for research."

Grants are in effect at Duke University in Durham, at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and at Wake Forest College in Winston-Salem.

Three Institutional Research Grants have been made in the State to stimulate new ideas and new minds to enter cancer research: One for $25,000 at Duke, another for $15,000 at the University of North Carolina, and a third for $12,000 at Wake Forest College. Local Committees at each of these institutions allocate funds to Faculty members with a high interest in cancer investigation.

Remind Scouts Of Camp-Time

Pitt Scout District officials have issued a reminder to Pitt boys planning to attend summer camp sessions at Camp Charles near Bailey.

Registered to date are 29 scouts in Grifton Troop 24 for the second session of camp (June 17-23) and 14 members of Black Jack Troop 401. Four of the Grifton scouts have registered for the June 17-23 session of Junior Leaders Training Camp, conducted simultaneously with regular sessions.

In reminding scouts of the upcoming camp season, officials said reservation vacancies at Camp Charles through the month of May will be diminishing rapidly. They urged scoutmasters to aid the boys in registering for the sessions.

The following sessions of regular camp are scheduled: June 10-16, June 17-23, June 24-30, July 1-7, July 8-14, July 15-21, July 22-28. Two sessions of Pioneer Camp are scheduled for July 29-Aug. 4 and Aug. 5-11.

Found Stranger Singing To Child

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The hour of 1:45 a.m. is an odd one in which to be awakened in your home by the sound of a strange voice singing.

But that's what happened to Zelma R. Brewer of Omaha Thursday.

Mrs. Brewer told police she awoke to hear a man singing. She followed the sound to her kitchen. There she found a young man changing the diapers of her one-year-old daughter.

Quickly the young man explained he had heard the child crying as he passed by and had knocked on the door. When there was no answer, he crawled in a window.

Then, he said, he began singing as he changed the baby.

With that he handed the child to the mother and left via the kitchen door.

Detours Set Up On Pitt Roads

Greenville resident engineer R. A. Merritt has reported the following road and detour information in Pitt County on the Chinkapin Road (Secondary Road 1218) and Cannon Crossroads (SR 1708);

State forces will be grading, stabilizing and surfacing Chinkapin Road, from SR 1200 southwest to US 264-A, 1.4 miles southeast of Farmville; and Cannon Crossroads from a point on NC 11 three miles south of Greenville to SR 1725 at Bell Frok.

Merritt said one-way traffic will be required only where work is in progress. Approximate date of completion on the 5.79-mile area of improvement in July 1, Merritt noted.

He advised motorists to drive carefully where the work is in progress.

Power Failure Due To Mishap

Utilities Superintendent Leonard Bloxam reported this morning that a crane unloading steel towers for the Voice of America near the city watertank became tangled in a high voltage feeder circuit about 8:30 a.m.

The accident resulted in a power failure for areas north of the River as far as the Stokes-Pactolus area and the Big Oak section of the Bethel Highway for about an hour.

Pennies Paid For The License

ASHEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Thomas Walter Lance of Candler and Carolyn Sue Hooper of Asheville decided to save all their pennies to make a down payment on some item they would need after their wedding.

When the collection of pennies passed the 500 mark, they decided the idea of a down payment was taking too long so they plunked down $5 in pennies at the register of deeds office here and secured a marriage license.

WITN Obtains Mobile Unit

The latest type Mobile Tape Equipment and Complete Remote Equipment including cameras has been purchased by WITN-TV, Channel Seven in Washington, N. C., it was announced today by W. R. Roberson, Jr., President and General Manager. This equipment will be installed in a 24 foot Metro-Van, a product of International Harvester.

This new equipment will be used on many major special events in the WITN viewing area. It is also planned that interesting and unusual documentary programs from various parts of eastern North Carolina will be brought to Channel Seven viewers.

This additional $100,000 expenditure for improvement is indicative of the ever expanding service being offered by the television station.

Most Prosperous Yet Debt-Ridden

By almost every economic yardstick the last 32 years in the United States have been the most prosperous of any similar period in the nation's history.

It should be somewhat alarming to the average American that during these 32 years the federal government has been able to live within its income only six years. In each of the other 26 years since 1930, the federal government has ended the year in the red and had to borrow money to carry over its operations.

The fact that the ceiling on the national debt has been increased several times in recent years is nothing new to the American people. Proponents of the proposal each year point out that the nation is in good shape financially and that in order to keep government operations moving it is necessary for the limit to be upped, at least "temporarily." It is of significance not only that the national debt climbed to staggering heights, but that in a period of continued and unprecedented prosperity the debt has gone up rather than come down.

Members of Congress almost every year have shown their reluctance to increase the already high federal tax rate. They have also given lip service to the need for greater economy in government and better use of the dollars which taxpayers dole out for the support of their government.

In the final analysis, however, spending continues to climb at a more rapid rate than federal revenues to off-set the spending. Not only is there no money left to apply against the debt, but in most years an additional indebtedness has been incurred to take care of the deficit spending.

There can be no reduction in taxes until there is a better balance between federal income and federal spending. There can be no reduction in the national debt until income year-by-year is greater than federal expenditures. It is understandable that during the past 32 years there have been specific periods in which it was essential that government spending continue at a pace greater than federal income. It is difficult to accept, however, that in 26 of the past 32 years it has been necessary for the welfare and the best interest of the nation and its people for government spending to be greater than its revenue collections.

If the federal government is unable to live within its means during the most prosperous years of its economy, what will it do if lean years return?

In the overall scope of national planning, it is essential that leaders give careful consideration to bringing about an era in which the balanced federal budget year-by-year will be the rule rather than the rare exception to the rule as has been the case in the past three decades.

Outer Banks In Business Again

By CHARLES PARKER,
Director North Carolina
News Bureau
Guest Writer

The old saying about no news being good news is like most generalizations — there are important exceptions. One of them is when there are favorable developments following a deluge of bad news.

North Carolina's Outer Banks, which made the headlines and tv screens in a big way during the Ash Wednesday storm, are now having their troubles getting the word around that so far from being wiped out by the big storm, they are very much back in business and have the welcome mat back out for beach vacationers — all the way from Kitty Hawk to Hatteras and Ocracoke.

It has happened before, and probably will happen again for all the miracles of modern communication. So actually it was no surprise for Outer Bankers to hear visitors express surprise as late as this week that they were even able to get to Nags Head and other coastal resorts. This despite the fact that roads have been repaired, ferries operating and accommodations open since April 1.

It happens this way:

In the more than 4,000 travel information stations in the U.S. and Canada operated by automobile clubs, newspapers, and all kinds of travel agencies, there are files. When there is a disaster like a hurricane or tidal wave that disrupts communications, they hear about it quickly and file the information to warn travelers to avoid such areas. This is a good service. Trouble with it is that little headlines are slow to catch up with big headlines, and the "disaster area" information can stay in travel information files long after it is out-dated.

The extent to which the Outer Banks have erased the March storm business and are back in the business of welcoming tourists is detailed in a bulletin distributed by the Travel Information Office of the Dept. of Conservation and Development to these travel information agencies. This followed a series of half a dozen news reports to travel editors throughout the nation about progress in rebuilding roads, restoring ferry service and repairing storm-damaged accommodations. They have been widely published.

But it takes a long time for good news to catch up with bad news.

Seldom has any area had as much good news in a span of two weeks as coastal North Carolina.

Dedication of the U. S. S. North Carolina War Memorial at Wilmington on April 29 and of the Lindsay C. Warren Bridge across the Alligator River upcoming on May 10 mark the opening of tremendously significant travel assets in areas where travel is the No. 1 industry.

The battleship memorial has already demonstrated its visitor pulling power with a gate of more than 112,000 prior to the official opening.

The $3 million bridge removing the last gap on U. S. Highway 64 not only improves multiple highway access to the Outer Banks from the mainland, but frees ferries for increasing service across Oregon and Hatteras inlets in the Cape Hatteras National Seashore where bottlenecks were developing.

No longer is it difficult to drive to the Outer Banks, or anywhere on the North Carolina Coast, and the tourist can go one way and return another. New roads, bridges and ferries have eliminated dead ends.

In years past, commercial fishing was the No. 1 coastal industry. Now the biggest money crop is tourists. This will be discussed next week at the meeting of the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association at Nags Head. It is important now not only to preserve our coast lands from erosin for purpose of protecting the mainland, but also to save the means of livelihood of thousands of citizens doing business on the coast.

For the first time statistics are available on the economic importance of our coastal vacationlands. They are contained in the survey of the State's travel industry made by Dr. Lewis C. Copeland of the University of Tennessee's Department of Economics under the sponsorship of the Travel Council of North Carolina.

Dr. Copeland's figures reveal not only great potential, but a multi-million dollar industry already in existence.

In the eight counties actually bordering on the Atlantic ocean, The Travel Council survey shows 1,371 travel-serving businesses employing 4,457 workers and grossing $44,761,000 in 1960, the last year for which complete statistics are available.

Impressive as these figures are, they are pale in comparison to the potential of the coastal travel industry. The present total is less than six per cent of the State's total travel-serving business.

For many years, it was difficult to get to our beaches. Accessibility is greatly improved this summer with the new bridge and increased Outer Banks ferry service. A great new attraction is at Wilmington in the battleship memorial. Sports fishing facilities are expanded all along the coast, and there are new accommodations and conveniences.

Coastal North Carolina is on the threshold of its greatest prosperity through development of its tourist industry.

No Propaganada Goes With U. S. Testing

In sharp contrast to the recent major propaganda campaign conducted by the Soviets in connection with their recent series of nuclear tests in the atmosphere, the first week of the U.S. testing of nuclear devices has been conducted without an accompanying propaganda campaign.

The United States has followed a policy of announcing each blast in this new series of tests, but beyond the announcement before and after each explosion, there has been little publicity emphasis placed on the tests by government officials. There has been a conspicious lack of boasts on the part of American officials about the power of the devices so far exploded, or what the successful test meant in terms of international nuclear power.

This situation sharply contrasts with the Soviet assertions of a few months ago when after each test blast the Soviets quickly pointed out that the power of their weapons could wipe out the free world. The Soviets carried out a program of intimidation in connection with their test series. The United States clearly is avoiding any boastful statements.

One reason, of course, is that the United States is seeking to provide opponents of its tests series as little information as possible that may be used in denouncing the U. S. tests. It is also probable that the United States is considerably more interested in the new information secured by its scientist from the tests than in showing off its nuclear power to the world.

The Soviets coupled their recent nuclear test program with a major propaganda effort pointed toward putting fear into the rest of the world. The United States is carrying out its tests without the major propaganda program that might have been expected. It is a policy which should stand this nation in good stead in the long run.

Kennedy Plays Game By Ear

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy is playing it by ear in trying to get labor and business to avoid price and wage boosts that might trigger a new inflation.

He has no authority under peacetime law to set prices or wages. He can suggest what he thinks they ought to be. But neither labor nor business has to listen to him.

How then can he persuade them to sign noninflationary contracts? Only through devices simliar to those he used in the steel case or can dream up in the next big dispute.

They may not always work. There will probably be unions and industries which ignore him and sign contracts he thinks damaging to the public interest.

He is probably reconciled to that possibility and is settling for the hope that if, in general, he can keep prices and wages down, it's a gain and the best he can expect with his present limited power.

For months before the steel contract was signed he used a very limited technique of persuasion, although behind it, of course, was the tremendous moral influence of the presidency.

This was simply to suggest the public good required a noninflationary settlement which meant no wage or price boost.

The contract as signed gave no wage increase, although other benefits the union got cost the industry money, and there was no indication the steel companies intended to raise prices.

When they did, just a few days after the settlement, an angry Kennedy had to abandon the technique of polite nudging which hadn't worked and think up in a hurry brand new forms of persuasion.

He used denunciation. His aides got in touch with steelmen whose companies had not yet raised prices. And the Justice Department, headed by his brother, Robert Kennedy, threatened antitrust suits and a grand jury investigation of price-fixing.

In the end the steel industry called off the price increase and Kennedy had won.

In the next contract crisis, and there seems sure to be one, the circumstances will be different, so Kennedy's techniques of pressure and persuasion will have to be adapted to the situation.

Strength For Today

THE SUGAR BOWL

Why do we crave sweets?

For the most part this craving is an indication of insecurity. It reveals the desire to experience a different type of life than the type we are actually living. We long for romance after the days of romance are past. We count the lines in our faces as we stand before the mirror and think with regret of how we looked many years ago. We think of the successes we might have had and didn't. We look with envy upon those people who move with ease among their companions and seem overwhelmingly popular.

Then we reach for the sugar bowl. If we can't have these big things in life at least we can put an extra teaspoon of sugar in our coffee. We can gnaw away at a piece of hard candy or gulp down a few chocolate creams.

Some people crave sweets because they have a definite taste for sweets. For most people, however, this craving is a psychological matter. The people whose marriages have been less than successful, the person who feels small and insignificant in most of the groups in which he finds himself — these are the people who crave sweets. These are the ones who reach for the sugar bowl.

Physicians tells us that there is plenty of sugar in the ordinary foods of a well balanced meal. There is also plenty of satisfaction to be found in the activities of a sincerely lived life.

Two-Gun Man

History Becomes Alive

Eight yellowed and brittle pages of an 1898 newspaper came my way yesterday.

Beyond the obvious fact that it was printed for eastern North Carolinians, and in eastern North Carolina, there are no clues as to its origin.

The masthead has been removed from the sheets, and nowhere else is there an identifiable label.

David Morrill, who brought the relic to my attention, suspects it has a Newbern (that's the way it was spelled in those days) origin; but there are reasons, too, to suspect it has a root in Wake County.

There is no advertising.

It could very well be a publication put out by a political party for it carries no "news" as we know it today; but the columns are full of desperate partisan infighting..

And small wonder.

North Carolina at the time this unknown paper went to press was fighting off the disastrous results of the Reconstruction Acts.

Our lessons in Tar Heel history, and perhaps subsequent readings in that vein, tell of those days before the turn of the century in a detached and objective manner. There is so much history that truthfully it must be condensed and refined into a kind of "instant" brew.

But this final product is a dry and tasteless version of what our forebears, did, say, suffered, overcame.

Reading those old sheets made the month of August 1898 come alive. The indignation, the desperation, the vigor of the times was captured in print.

Detailed, itemized and notarized instances of inequity were assembled; lengthy accounts of wrongs and complaints were put before the readers in convincing style.

The writings are impassioned, and come from correspondents and the pages of other newspapers.

Craven County figures heavily in the matter of identifying candidates; but there are a number of stories that could only have a Raleigh source. Adding to the mystery of the publication's origins, there is also a certified list of magistrates in Edgecombe, New Hanover, Craven and Bertie Counties.

There is harsh criticism of the apparently recently-adjourned legislature, and reprints of editorials and comment from the Wilmington Daily Record, the Raleigh News and Observer, the Wilmington Messenger, The Chatham Record, the Charlotte

Lawsuit Footnotes

(In Greensboro Daily News)

Two aspects of the celebrated Mims case in Nashville raises serious questions about the fairness of the estate laws in North Carolina and about extra-curricular activities of the state's duly elected congressmen.

The long and expensive Nash County litigation ended with the court upholding the wife and son as legal heirs to the $1,250,000 estate of the late A. J. Mims. Bob Moore, a Rocky Mount paint contractor, had challenged the 1958 will by turning up a later one which a jury held was obtained under duress. Moore had befriended the aged Mims, but the court found he was of insufficient capacity to make a will at that time, particularly one which made Moore beneficiary.

But whatever the merits of the case, it points to one sad aspect of the law: The court costs and attorneys' fees on both sides must be borne by the Mims estate, thus depleting it sharply even after inheritance taxes. Because of the law such litigation often becomes, in the words of The High Point Enterprise, "a veritable picnic of lawyers feasting on estates powerless to prevent dissipation at the hands of unscrupulous claimants."

Moore may have had legal right to prosecute his claim at the expense of the state, but quite plainly the law is subject to flagrant abuse.

When you add to this picture the participation of the deal of the state's congressional delegation, Rep. Harold Cooley, as one of the chief lawyers for Moore, the picture becomes even more dismal. At the height of the legislative session in Washington Congressman Cooley ought to be tending to his congressional duties, not chasing after legal fees back home in North Carolina.

Why should a U. S. congressman continue his private practice while serving in a job which, if performed properly, should consume his full time attention.

We don't know a good answer, and we wish Congressman Cooley would explain.

Public Forum

TO THE EDITOR:

Is it legal for the Greenville Utilities Commission to spend funds to develop one special area?

The Greenville Redevelopment Commission proposes that the City of Greenville paired with the Federal Government provide the funds for the Greenville Shore Drive Project. Since local Governing Bodies do not have the resources to match the Federal Government in spending then it is logical to assume that the City of Greenville would not undertake such a large and costly project with only the Cities resources.

Even paired with the Federal Government the City of Greenville would not have its proportionate share of funds. This can be partly remedied by the simple process of giving Greenville credit on its share of the Project cost of any monies spend by the Greenville Utilities Commission on Utility improvements in the area. What part of an anticipated investment of $891,618 in the Shore Drive Area as approved by the Greenville Utilities Commission during its December 12, 1961 meeting and reported in the December 13, 1961, issue of the Reflector would be spent in this area if it was developed by Private Enterprise.

Any monies spent by the Utilities Commission on improvements in this area in excess of the amount that would be spent for normal improvements if the area was developed by Private Enterprise would be money expended for a Special Project. Can the Utilities use funds that are contributed by all its customers for the improvement of one area?

If the Utilities have the funds for such a costly program then why was it necessary to add a sewage fee to each water bill? Every home is billed regardless of the residents ability of pay. If the Utilities have excess funds then why not pass some benefits to the less fortunate subscribers by reducing the water, gas and electric rates.

If the sum of money spent by the Utilities in the Shore Drive Area did not add up to the amount that was required as the Cities share of the Project cost then the City would have to furnish the additional funds. Where will these funds come from? A bond issue? I think not. Who will benefit from saving the "Down Town Business Area"? Can the Utilities spend money on a special project?

Hardly Humor Here

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Leo S. Jacoby, of New York, writes to me in two inks, blue and red. The letter is supposed to be funny. If it amuses you, please laugh. It does not amuse me. This is the letter:

"I am opposed to all subversive elements in the United States.

"The Republican party is trying to overthrow the present government by force (of dollars) and violence (of words).

"Why do we allow this subversive element to exist?"

Perhaps the name is a pseudonym. I am rising to the occasion because, I assume, the writer of the letter may truly believe that roubles are superior to dollars and a prison sentence for holding an opinion is superior to freedom of speech and of the press.

There are such people in this sad world. They prefer to live in the United States because it is comfortable here and they can be Communists or anti-Communists or dance the twist or even be Nazis here with impunity and the only peril they face is that someone will regard them as idiots or dopes or exhibitionists or anything you please.

It is like the horrible mail I get from something called the National Renaissance Party, 10 West 90 Street, New York 24, N. Y., which has, as a masthead, a bolt of lightning in a circle. The title of the circular is "Mass Meeting To Oppose Jewish Leadership Of The Conservative Movement."

That too is funny because when anti-Communism was unpopular, the overt activists in such a movement included many Jews. Now that the word, conservatism, has become more popular and even profitable, many opportunists rush in. The National Renaissance Party circular reads in its first paragraph:

"While all major Jewish organizations in the United States, inclusive of the Jewish War Veterans, the American Jewish Committee, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and various Zionist groups, have viciously smeared and denounced the rebirth of American nationalism as embodied in the Conservative Movement, many Jewish intellectuals, some with former Communist records, have been ordered to infiltrate and capture key positions of leadership within the conservative hierarchy. These phoney Jewish conservatives want to divert public attention from internal subversion and focus national opinion on the activities of foreign Communist governments in Cuba, Soviet Russia, and Red China. . ."

One would pay no attention to such nonsense were it not that Conservatism in the United States is damaged by such gibberish. In a free society, men of all faiths tend to join organizations of all types. The American Conservative position, politically and economically, may be traced back to Alexander Hamilton and his associates in the Federalist Party just as modern Conservatism in Great Britain may be traced back to Benjamin Disraeli.

Conservatism has nothing to do with hate or with an itinerant personality earning a living. It is a conception of life growing out of historic memory. Most people in the United States are guided by what might be called 19th Century Liberalism, namely, by the ideal of an expansion of human rights, liberties, and mutual aids. In the 20th Century, this concept of life, rich in humanistic literature, is Conservatism.

The circular before me is aimed at stimulating racial hatred. Take this paragraph:

"Are you aware that every effort is being made by Jewish 'Conservatives' like Barry Goldwater, Roy Cohn, Dr. Fred Schwarz, an Australian Jew who grosses over one million dollars per year through his 'Christian Anti - Communist Crusade,' George Sokolsky, and Marvin Liebman, to discredit and undermine such Gentile patriots as Major General Edwin Walker and Robert Welch of the John Birch Society?"

The absurdity of this statement is apparent on its face. Senator Barry Goldwater, strong of faith, has done more than any man alive to give to

Senate May Modify New Tax Bill

By ELMER ROESSNER

It looks, as of today, that the Senate may modify provisions of the new tax bill calling for withholding taxes on dividend and interest income.

There has been a wave of public protest against this provision, backed up, naturally, by savings institutions and corporations. Scores of spokesmen have protested the provision and Senator Jacob K. Javits R., N.Y.), one of the leading opponents of the idea, says he has received 25,000 letters about it since April 1. Almost all were strongly opposed.

Even the opponents concede that many taxpayers forget or resist reporting dividend or interest income. The Treasury estimates it loses $850 million every year by this negligence.

To plug this loss, the bill requires payers of interest or dividends to withhold 20 per cent and to slip it to the Treasury. If the amount withheld were excessive, it would be up to the taxpayer to request the Treasury for a refund.

ANNUAL EXEMPTION

The bill provides that persons under 18 not liable to taxes, and older persons who owe no tax, might file exemption claims to avoid the deduction.

This, savings institutions and corporations say, would make matters worse, since that would mean the employment of more clerical workers to take care of the exempt accounts.

The clerical work thrust upon these institutions and corporations is one of their major causes of anguished screams. A corporation or a bank with 100,000 stockholders or depositors might have to hire 50 more accountants to handle the increased volume of work caused by straight withholdings, but a system of exemptions might require 25 more workers.

LOST SAVINGS

However, the savings institutions have a greater complaint. Depositors, they say, would be less inclined to save, more inclined to spend. This would reduce the total amount available for mortgages and other income-producing loans for the institutions.

Wealthier depositors would also be inclined to put savings into tax free state and subsidiary bonds, with interest free of taxes and withholding.

Senator Javits has been fighting largely for modification of the provision, suggesting that a minimum in interest and dividends by exempt, and that exemption authorizations be permanent instead of yearly. He has also suggested an alternative: that each taxpayer either list dividends and interest or swear that he had no stock or deposits — which would make him liable to arrest for perjury if he misstated the facts.

Readers having strong views on either side of this subject should write to their own Senators, or to Senator Javits, Washington, D. C.

Christians in a Pagan Society ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Bueschor

Scripture—Acts 3-5; I Peter 2.

Soon after Pentecost, Peter and John, on their way to the Jerusalem temple to pray, came across a lame man begging. Peter said he had no money, but would give him what he had; in Christ's name he ordered him to walk. The man leaped up, completely healed.—Acts 3:1-8.

So many people—about five thousand—heard of this miracle and believed in Christ that the high priests, jealous, arrested the apostles. Peter and John boldly accused their accusers of murdering God's Son, and refused to obey their injunction to keep silent. —Acts 4:1-20.

The little company of Christ's followers in Jerusalem was so bold that its wealthy members gave up their economic security to share with the poorer. When one of them, Ananias, hypocritically hid part of his wealth, he was struck dead, as was his wife. Acts 4:32-5:5.

The second time the apostles were arrested, one of the Sadducees was bold enough to rise in their defense. Gamaliel said that if the apostles' undertaking was "of men," it would fail; but if it was "of God," they would be against God.—Acts 5:33-39

Christians in a Pagan Society

THE NECESSITY FOR CHRISTIANS TO BE WITNESSES FOR CHRIST, WHEREVER THEY ARE, AND TO SUPPORT THEIR TESTIMONY BY A RIGHTEOUS LIFE

Scripture—Acts 3-5; I Peter 2.

By N. SPEER JONES

KEY WORD for today's subject might be "boldness."

The letter on which our lesson is based is Peter's first epistle (written about 60 A.D.) to the Jewish Christians, "exiles of the Dispersion," who were scattered about the Mediterranean. Our lesson also encompasses some early experiences of Peter, almost 30 years before he wrote this letter.

In both the experiences and the letter, Peter—who had once lacked the courage even to acknowledge that he knew the persecuted Christ—shows that he has so overcome his weakness that boldness in witnessing for Christ is now one of his most salient characteristics.

This change on Peter's part was evident soon after the descent of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost (the seventh Sunday after Easter), when Peter and John in Christ's name healed the lame man at the temple (Acts 3:1-10). When the amazed crowd collected, Peter was bold enough to admonish them for their sin in having denied and crucified Christ, and to exhort them to repent.

In the trial the next morning before the high priests, Peter again boldly accused them of their sin, then even more boldly refused, under threats, to keep silent about Christ, saying, "We cannot but speak of what we have seen and heard" (Acts 4:5-20).

This boldness was evidenced by all the company of Christ's followers in Jerusalem in those early days, who willingly gave up their wealth—their economic security—in order to spread the word of their beliefs (Acts 4: 32-35).

As this word spread farther, so that people from other towns brought their sick to Jerusalem to be healed, the high priests once more imprisoned them. Once more, Peter and the others, through the Holy Spirit within them, were able to stand their ground, boldly accusing their accusers.

Now we see a different example of boldness. One of the Jewish council had the courage to come to the apostles' rescue. When Gamaliel spoke out, telling the council to leave these men alone, he addressed a body so enraged that they were ready to kill (Acts 5:33-39).

This Gamaliel, a doctor of law, was undoubtedly the same man who was the teacher of Paul (Acts 22:3). "So great was Gamaliel's fame that one of the ancient Hebrew books of the 'Mishna,' when he died, said 'The glory of the Torah ceased, and purity and sanctity died out also.'" (J. R. Lumby, quoted in Peloubet's Select Notes, p. 166).

Many years later, in his letter, Peter encourages lonely believers by reminding them that they are a chosen race, "God's own people," so that they "may declare the wonderful deeds of Him" Who called them "out of darkness" (I Peter 2:9).

Not only must they be bold in declaring their faith, but they must give their words validity by living as blameless a life as possible. Peter urges strict compliance with man's laws in order to squelch the rumor that Christians, with their talk of God's and Christ's kingship, are not plotting overthrow of the empire.

Christians, in other words, must be bold enough to live temperately.

Garry Moore Attains Historic TV Milestone: 5,000th Show

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) —Thomas Garrison Morfit had a profound feeling of gratitude this week.

The reason: Thomas Garrison Morfit—better known to millions as Garry Moore—reached an historic milestone in a fabulous career. He performed in his 5,000th national network broadcast.

"All I ask is to be allowed to continue," said Garry, who quit school in Baltimore back in 1935 to become a radio continuity writer.

There is no immediate hurry in the industry to dust off a place on the shelf for Moore. He remains, after 27 years in radio and 12 in television, one of the biggest profit-producing performers in the entertainment field.

His shows are estimated to bring to Columbia Broadcasting System an annual income of between $15 million and $20 million. This puts him on a par with, or ahead of, such other network money-winners as Arthur Godfrey, Art Linkletter, Dave Garroway and Ed Sullivan.

"I must be extraordinarily fortunate," Garry said. "I've never had as much fun as I'm having now. I never get up with a feeling of hating to go to work, as some people do.

"I suppose it's because I'm still a fan myself. I still get a big thrill out of working with people I've admired for years—such as Duke Ellington and Ed Wynn. As a kid, I can remember standing outside a threater in Baltimore to get Ed Wynn's autograph. He's still a hero to me."

This quality of youthful enthusiasm is still one of the greatest assets of Moore, who feels he is lucky to have lasted so long and at present would like to go right on performing forever.

"Of course, you don't really retire in this business," he said with a wry smile. "You just wake up some morning and find they've retired you.

"Three or four years is an average lifetime on television, and already I figure I'm at least eight years to the good."

Garry has his own theory on how he and his program pals have managed to endure without boring their public.

"Our survival is probably the result of a remarkable lack of being spectacular," he said. "When you are spectacular, you have a skyrocket quality that can become so bright you burn yourself up."

At the ripe age of 47, Garry has this philosophy of life:

"It pays to remember to be grateful, and to forget the idea you have a right to be happy all the time. If you have one really happy hour every day, you're ahead of the game.

"If I got fired tomorrow, I'd have no cause for anything but gratitude—although they'd probably have to drag me out of the studio, kicking and screaming."

News and the Goldsboro Argus.

Some newspaper people and some teachers are strong advocates of using newspapers as teaching aids in current affairs. With the passage of time, they should be likewise great sources of inspiration in the teaching of history.

True, newspaper files go back only a relatively few years; and acquiring reproductions of newspapers printed during, say, World War I, or World War II, would not be an easy matter for a history department.

But I venture to predict that someday somebody will devise a way to economically reproduce selected issues for classroom use, and the students will re-live days of history-making change.

Try it on yourself some day when you have a bit of spare time. Go to the library and delve into the newspaper issue of a time 20 years ago, 25 years ago . . . a date that was important to you at the time. Read the paper, and the past catches up with you in an astounding fashion.

he has a clearly thought out line of action — as there would be, and spelled out, if he had a law to work by — for any future crises.

Last February Secretary of Labor Arthur Goldberg said the government has no intention of dictating terms — this was superfluous since there's no such power under law — but he did say this:

He intended to suggest in general and perhaps occasionally in specific terms what management and labor should do for the public good.

Then, this week, Kennedy's advisory labor - management committee went so far as to suggest that, under law, Kennedy should be able to set up fact-finding boards, in disputes which might create national emergencies, to make recommendations on contract terms.

This might not mean much if this had been just an ordinary board. It wasn't. It was made up of representatives for labor, business, the government and the public.

For this board to make this kind of proposal meant that Kennedy already — in his fight against inflationary contracts — had been very successful in rallying broad support for what he wants to do.

Conservatism form and vitality in this country. I have never known Roy Cohn to express a view of either General Walker or Robert Welch. He is apparently too busy. Dr. Fred Schwarz is a Baptist of Jewish parentage who claims his father was converted to Christianity in England. By the circular's analogy it might be said that St. Paul must be denied because his name was originally Saul.

I have been in overt opposition to Communism since 1917 and have my writing to prove it. I do not need to apologize to anyone. Marvin Liebman is a young man who has devoted himself to anti-Communist causes in recent years. To my knowledge, he has done this at considerable personal and discouraging sacrifice.

Old Line Demos Regain Control

By ERX THOMAS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Old-line Democrats have regained control of party machinery in Alabama and with it the power to prevent another states rights presidential revolt.

Virtually complete returns from Tuesday's primary gave the loyalist faction at least 39 seats on the incoming 72-member State Democratic Executive Committee and a chance to pick up eight more.

States righters who spearheaded the 1960 uprising—which saw six of Alabama's 11 electoral college votes go to Sen. Harry Byrd, D-Va., instead of Democratic nominee John F. Kennedy—were sure of no more than 25 places on the new committee.

The six states rights electors who ran as Democrats refused to cast their ballots for Kennedy because of the national party's racial stand.

Loyalists won 37 state committee seats outright in Tuesday's election and 10 seats were to be decided in a May 29 runoff because no one got a majority of Tuesday's votes in those contests. But the party regulars will get two of them automatically because in both instances loyalist will be running against loyalist.

In the remaining eight undecided races, it will be loyalist vs. states righter.

In putting loyalists back in control of the state committee, the voters reacted just as they did 12 years ago following another states rights revolt. All 11 presidential electors in the 1948 election had withheld their ballots from Harry S. Truman.

Protection From Vaccine Cocktail

LONDON AP) — A vaccine cocktail giving protection against poliomyelitis, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus in one shot has been successful in a clinical test, the British Medical Association journal, The Lancet, reported today.

A team of Belfast University scientists tested the four-in-one serum on 44 babies, aged 6 to 19 months.

All the children developed far more protective antibodies against polio virus than had been the case with standard Salk vaccine, said the report by Prof. George Dick and his team.

The scientists reported it may eventually be possible to add to the cocktail vaccines against measles and smallpox, to make a six-in-one serum.

Bennett Expects Closest Race In N. C. 9th District

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina's new Eighth Congressional District, now represented by both a Republican and a Democrat, is getting the most attention these days as the May 26 primary nears.

But Bert L. Bennett Jr. of Winston-Salem, chairman of the state's Democratic party, thinks the closest race will be in the Ninth District, where he believes incumbent Hugh Q. Alexander will find a tough opponent in Republican James T. Broyhill in the November general election.

Broyhill, son of Republican National Committeeman J. E. Broyhill of Lenoir, still must win the nomination. He is opposed by W. Leslie Burdick of China Grove. But Bennett thinks Broyhill will be nominated and will "be tough to beat" in the general election because of "the money back of him and the nose count of Republicans in that district in the last congressional race."

Bennett was a guest Thursday at a White House luncheon for Dr. Alfons Gerbach, chancellor of Austria. "I don't know how I go on the guest list," said Bennett. But Henry Hall Wilson of Monroe, assistant to President Kennedy, said that "Bert Bennett was invited as a friend of the President."

"I believe," Bennett added, "the President has more dedicated in North Carolina than in any other state."

Bennett declined to predict which Democrat — Rep. Paul Kitchin of Wadesboro or John P. Kennedy Jr. of Charlotte—would win the nomination in the 8th District to face Republican Rep. Charles R. Jonas of Lincolnton. Jonas and Kitchin were put in the same district when the Legislature redrew the lines to eliminate one congressman in keeping with the 1969 census.

However, both Bennett and Wilson said reports apparently are unfounded which say that organized labor opposes Kitchin and favors Kennedy.

Deny Assassin Shot At Nasser

LONDON (AP) — The United Arab Republic's Middle East News Agency today denied rumors that an assassin had shot and badly wounded President Nasser.

The semi-official agency quoted informed sources as saying the report "is an utter fabrication that has no foundation."

The U.A.R. Embassy in Washington also announced the report was "absolutely baseless." A spokesman said the embassy had been in touch with officials in Cairo and had determined the report was not true.

The denial by the Middle East News Agency was broadcast to the agency's foreign subscribers. It said the report was "cheap propaganda" on the part of the Israeli Radio.

The report of the assassination attempt was published in Britain today by the Daily Telegraph, which said the Israeli Radio on Monday "quoted strong reports of an assassination attempt, following this with strong reports that President Nasser had succumbed."

The Telegraph said "at least one Arab state has received the same account," with additional word that the assassin was Ali Amer, brother of Field Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer, commander in chief of the U.A.R. armed forces.

Sources in Cairo said Lt. Gen Ali Amer is chief of staff of the armed forces but is not the commander in chief's brother.

Real-Life Incident In A Police Show Format

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—You know how they do these television police shows—the camera showing the action and the urgent voice of the unseen narrator explaining what's going on.

Herewith, then, a personal dramatized account of a real-life, disillusioning incident:

(The setting is a newspaper office, full of cluttered desks, old coffee containers, clattering teletypes and reporters rushing in crying "scoop!" Theme music comes up and over, rising to a crescendo).

Narrator: The meet was set by a third party. A contact called—from a coin booth, of course—to say that Sgt. Steve Carella of the 87th Precinct had gone on the tightrope and had something to tell me.

Carella, the smartest, toughest, bravest cop in the precinct. Under-cover! This was news—and I wanted the story.

My name is Lowry. I'm a pusher (pencil).

We set the meet: 9:30 the next morning in a good place, a restaurant called Schrafft's on 51st between Fifth and Sixth. My contact said Carella was using his real name Robert Lansing and had taken an acting job in NBC's May 20 war drama "A Sound of Hunting." Sounded like a good cover.

At 9:30 on the dot I walked into the restaurant, cleverly disguised as a lady shopper. I sat down at a corner table and ordered coffee, black. My contact arrived, nervous. To allay suspicion we ordered breakfast—fruit juice, pancakes, sausages. Our eyes never left the door. No Carella. The minutes ticked away.

By 9:45 it was certain something had happened. The contact made some telephone calls. Carella had left his hotel. By 10 we were sure: Carella was not going to show. Why? Had he decided not to talk? Had someone else decided he was not to talk?

We left and separated swiftly. I went back to the office—to wait. What had happened? After all Carella had never failed to break a case.

The call came at 10:30. It was Carella—he called himself Lansing, of course.

"I couldn't find it," he said. "The restaurant. I was there at the corner of 51st and Sixth but I couldn't find Schrafft's. And it was drizzling too. Later I noticed the note said it was between Fifth and Sixth. So maybe we can set up something again. . . .?"

A cop's life is hard enough. But when you're on the tightrope, brother, it can be pretty lonely. Particularly in a drizzle on the corner of 51st and Sixth.

ABC is staying with animated cartoons even though they've not had a very inspiring reception this season. It will add one, "The Jetsons," to its Sunday night schedule next fall. Where "The Flintstones" is about a Stone-Age couple, this one is about a Space-Age pair.

Hunting Regulations

Starting May 15 the Wildlife Commission will hold a series of public hearings in each of the nine Commission districts to give hunters a chance to air their views as the seasons and bag limits on upland game.

In the past the season on wild turkeys, quail and rabbits has opened on Thanksgiving Day. However, this year the Commission proposes to open the season on these species on November 17. This would make the season four days longer than last year. The proposed season would run through February 16. Last year the season ended February 15.

According to the Wildlife Resources Commission there are some sound reasons for the change. "The earlier date is based on research that has shown that natural mortality takes a percentage of wild game the year-around, and that in the case of quail, for example, only 23 per cent of the birds alive on opening day will be around a year later, and starting the harvest earlier will give hunters a chance to shoot birds that would otherwise have been lost to natural mortality.

"A four year study of quail populations showed that about three per cent of quail are less than 90 days old on November 15. Although considered to be juvenile, 90-day-old birds are fully grown and capable of string flight. Birds in the squealer class are only about 70 days old.

"The sooner the season is opened after birds become adult size the greater the opportunity for hunters to harvest birds that would otherwise be lost to natural mortality. At the same time Commission biologists believe that the earlier opening date will not endanger carry-over breeding stock for next spring. The same general biological principles apply to wild turkeys and rabbits."

For those interested in attending one of the hearings by the Wildlife Resources Commission here are the dates and places. The meeting place in each case and the times are the same. The hearings will be held in the courthouse at 7:30 p.m. One exception is Rocky Mount where the meeting will be held in the City Court.

District 9, Sylva, May 15; District 8, Morganton, May 16; District 7, Dobson, May 17; District 6, Albemarle, May 18; District 5, Graham, May 21; District 4, Elizabethtown, May 22; District 3, Rocky Mount, May 23; District 2, New Bern, May 24; and District 1, Edenton, May 25.

Awards Given Bel-Falk Stars

FALKLAND — The Belvoir-Falkland High School athletes were entertained at a supper here last night by the local Ruritan Club and awards were presented to the players.

The most improved player award for the girls basketball team was presented by Coach Bob Warren to Donna Stancill for her outstanding achievements during the past season.

Receiving the most improved and most outstanding player award for the boys team was Alan Witherington, a senior, who has done an excellent job in athletics and academics during his four year high school career. Coach George James made the presentation.

Girls awarded bars for their outstanding efforts were Betty Norville, Frances Stepps, Mary Pollard, Sue Pierce, Donna Stancill, Faye Pollard, Judy Zurface and Andrea Wooten.

Letters went to freshmen Linda Morris and Lois Garrett.

Boys receiving bars were Steve Cobb, Charles Watson, Melvin Nelson, Alan Witherington, and Frankie Edwards. Letters went to Billy Parker, Robert Norville, Roosevelt James, Tommy Bell and Gene Hudson.

Awads were presented to the cheerleaders by Lois Tetterton. Bars went to Harriette Turner and Anna Sue McLawhorn. Letters were presented to Melba Everette and Sybil Manning.

During the basketball season the Belvoir-Falkland girls won the regular season when they tied with Farmville and won the toss. However, they were defeated in the county tournament by Stokes-Pactolus.

Principal Ed Warren told the group that this was the first year the school had won the conference that he could remember. In commenting on the boys team which did not have a very good record, Warren said, "They never gave up no matter how much they were behind."

Warren told the group that he was for athletics and he felt de-emphasis was going "backwards." Out of the 22 players on the All-County team this past year three were presidents of student governments and the group had an 86.7 scholastic average which is better than a B, Warren noted.

"Athletic ability is one thing money can't buy. It will always stand out," the principal said.

Warren said athletics build leadership which entails decision, intelligence, discipline and character. Success, according to Warren, comes from the four Ds. They were drive, desire, decision and destiny. He said that the first three equal the last one, destiny.

In commenting on the need for athletics and physical fitness Warren cited figures which showed that 46 per cent of the prospective draftees are turned down by the selective service because of of physical and mental disorders.

The reason for the softness, Warren noted, was because the public today eats, drinks, sits and rides too much.

The evening's program was conducted by Ruritan President Eugene James.

Jacksonville Wins Track Meet

The Jacksonville Red Devils won the Northeastern Conference track meet held here yesterday when David Dunaway won four events and set two meet records as his team picked up 49½ points for the victory.

New Bern finished second with 35½, Kinston third with 31½, Greenville fourth with 30½, Elizabeth City fifth with 18, Roanoke Rapids sixth with 12, Washington seventh with 9½ and Tarboro eighth with 8½.

During the tournament nine records were shattered. Dunaway set new marks in 220 and the high jump, Adger Stokes of Kinston set new records in the high and low hurdles, Tarboro's J. Sasser broke the pole vault record, Clyde Delangia of New Bern cracked the mile, Greenville's William Allen broke the 440 record, Oliver of Kinston crashed the 880 mark and the Greenville relay team set a new record.

Dunaway's 220 record was 22.4 and in the high jump the new mark was 6 feet. Stokes' record in the hurdles was 15.2 in the highs and 20.3 in the lows.

The new pole vault record is 11' 4 3-4", the mile was run in 4:42.4, the 440 was 51.1, and the 880 record was 2:06.2. Greenville's relay team set a record with 3:39.0.

The summary:

Two Derby Favorites Withdrawn From Field

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Sir Gaylord, strong favorite to take Saturday's Kentucky Derby, was declared officially out of the race today by trainer Casey Hayes after the colt developed a lameness following a half-mile workout.

Donut King, Verne Winchell's California-bred colt who was rated a leading contender, was withdrawn. This cut the field to 16 horses for the 1¼-mile classic.

Hayes, pending arrival of owner C. T. Chenery, declined to give the nature of Sir Gaylord's lameness. However, from an authoritative source, after X-rays were taken, it was learned the horse suffered a fractured sesamoid bone in the right foreleg.

Sir Gaylord came off the track limping after working a half mile early this morning. The lamness increased decidedly as the horse cooled out and the lame leg was placed in ice packs.

No decision was announced on whether Cicada, the stable's ace 3-year-old filly would go in the derby or today's Kentucky Oaks. She was entered in both races.

Donut King showed up with an infection in his left hind foot Thursday about the time the names of 18 horses for the $125,000-added classic were being dropped into the box.

Trainer Ron McAnally decided after an early morning examination that Donut King should not run.

"We could take a chance with the derby," said McAnally, "but he had that infection last winter at Santa Anita and when it reoccurred this time, we thought it better to hold him back for the Preakness at Pimlico on May 19."

After Sir Gaylord's injury, Hayes at first refused to say anything about his horse. He later announced that the colt would not make the race.

Southern Loop Discusses ECC

By DEL BOOTH

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP)—Southern Conference rules changes, a new member and basketball crowd behavior were discussed here today at the athletic group's annual spring meeting.

Former Commissioner Wallace Wade of the conference was on the program to address the closing luncheon.

Up for adoption were several rules changes. Chief among them were ones that would (1) leave an athlete his full year of eligibility if injured in his first contest of the season; (2) allow intra-conference transfer of athletes.

The probable application for membership in the fall of 1963 of East Carolina College was discussed. Here for the discussions were four East Carolina athletic officials, headed by faculty athletic chairman Robert Holt.

Ray Duncan, conference president and faculty representative for West Virginia, declared crowd behavior at basketball games had improved "noticeably" in the conference during the past season.

The conference conducted campaign starting last December to reduce unruliness among basketball crowds.

Conference Commissioner Lloyd Jordan said that overcrowded seating conditions could be blamed for bad behavior in many instances. Duncan noted that improved seatingh as been made available, or is being planned, at several member colleges.

Such matters as "red - shirting" — holding an athlete out of competition for a year; requiring more academic achievements for scholarship athletes, and setting minimum qualifications for athletic scholarship recipients were discussed.

Regulations on topics may be offered for adoption at the December meeting.

D. S. McAlister of The Citadel, conference treasurer, offered a financial report showing the conference in the black for the first time since 1953, and with money in the bank. Expansion of publicity and other conference activities may result from this surplus of funds.

Thursday night the conference football coaches elected Ed Merrick of Richmond president of their group to succeed Milt Brewer of William and Mary. They voted to support the proposal to outlaw "red-shirting", and discussed ways to improve officiating.

BASS FROM LOCAL CREEK

Mrs. Danford Bland of Stokes reports that she caught three bass in a creek near her home that ranged from nine pounds to five pounds. She made the catch with a cane pole using live bait.

Carry Back won five races in which more than $100,000 changed hands. They were the Garden State, Flamingo, Florida Derby, Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Farmville Rally Defeats Belvoir-Falkland By 11-6

FALKLAND — The Farmville Red Devils captured their fifth win of the season yesterday as they downed Belvoir-Falkland 11-6. Freshman Gerald Tugwell was the winning pitcher, allowing eight hits, striking out 11, and walking three. The losing pitcher was Eugene Hudson.

Farmville tallied three runs in the top of the first inning to get the game underway. The Red Devils added two more runs in the third frame to go ahead of Belvoir-Falkland 5-0.

The Eagles tallied to score one run in the bottom of the third. After Farmville had scored another run in the top of the fourth, the Eagles returned to the plate to score five runs and set the score at six-all.

In the top of the fifth, the Red Devils continued to put pressure on the Eagles as they tallied two more runs. Belvoir-Falkland was unable to score in their half of the inning. Farmville added three runs in the sixth frame to put the score at 11-6 and held on to this lead until the end of the contest.

Chester Outland led the Red Devils in the hitting department as he collected four hits in five trips at bat. Outland had a near perfect day as he hit a home-run, a triple, a double, and a single. Red Hodges and Ben Monk also collected triples for Farmville.

Allen Witherington paced the Eagles at the plate as he tallied three singles in four trips to the plate. Steve Cobb collected a pair of singles for Belvoir-Falkland.

Farmville plays host to Stokes-Pactolus Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Snead Predicts A Lot Of Stars Around The Top

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The old West Virginia slammer, Sam Snead, was evaluating prospects in the $58,000 Tournament of Champions and observed:

"Unless somebody goes crazy out there, there's goin' to be an awful mess of us around the top when this one finishes."

Sam's prophecy came quicker than he suspected. For today the top spot was crowded with four professional golfers, tied at 69, and Snead himself, the defending champion, was deadlocked with three others at 70.

Heading the parade was the usual pre-tournament favorite, Arnold Palmer; the 1959 winner here, Mike Souchak; Cary Middlecoff and Doug Sanders.

Bracketed with Sam were Doug Ford, Joe Campbell and Gay Brewer.

Bucs Meet Catawba Here Saturday Night

The East Carolina College baseballers go after their tenth win of the season Saturday night as they meet the Catawba Indians. The contest is scheduled to be played in Guy Smith Stadium at 8 o'clock.

The game could be considered a must for the Pirates if they want to keep in contention for the conference championship. The Bucs have won five and lost three in conference play this year while league leader Lenoir Rhyne has suffered two setbacks. The Bucs do not meet Lenoir Rhyne during the season.

Carlton Barnes, Lacy West, and Merrill Bynum will be expected to pace East Carolina in the hitting department. Barnes is currently hitting at a .500 clip while West and Bynum are both hitting above the .300 mark.

Earl Boykin is expected to get the go-ahead nod from coach Jim Mallory. Boykin has been a little slow starting this year as he has picked up one win in four starts. Nathan Green and Lacy West will also be ready to pitch if they should get the nod.

East Carolina has shown that they're out to get this game as they have been practicing under the lights at Guy Smith. The Pirates will also be practicing tonight.

Coach Mallory and the Bucs leave Sunday to start an away-game stand against Wake Forest, High Point, and Elon. The Pirates return home next Saturday night to meet Elon at Guy Smith Stadium in another night contest.

Charges Mount, Estes' Fortune Collapses

By ROBERT E. FORD

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Billie Sol Estes said last year he was worth $50 million. Today his financial empire has collapsed and criminal and civil charges mount.

National finance companies, the federal government and plain dirt farmers in Texas are trying to recover from a series of jolts handed them by the 37-year-old man who gained the title of "boy wonder of West Texas agriculture."

Investigations continue along four general lines—his dealings as the world's greatest distributor of anhydrous ammonia fertilizer and tanks for the substance, cotton allotments on lands he controlled, his relationship with Department of Agriculture and other federal officials, and his vast grain storage operations.

A congressional investigation is under way. A federal grand jury already has indicted him for fraud. Eight criminal indictments for felonious theft have been returned against him by a grand jury in his hometown of Pecos, Tex. Another grand jury at Amarillo, Tex., is expected to receive new evidence soon. Scores have filed suits totaling millions, some trying to obtain money from Estes, others trying to void contracts with him.

His entire financial affairs are in the hands of a receiver who is being required to post bond of $10 million.

The Estes empire began wobbling when a group of lending companies called him to a super-secret meeting in Dallas. His empire crashed three days later when he was jailed under federal fraud charges. Lending companies claimed he bilked them of $24 million. Estes himself said he owed $32 million and had assets of $20 million.

Estes, a Church of Christ elder and minister, has issued no defense. He has simply remained silent on the basic issues of the case.

The man who says he grew up in moderate circumstances on a Texas farm and made his first million before he was 30, took the original blows cheerfully.

"I've felt better in the last week than I ever have in my life," he said. "I've always felt that if a man had five real friends he would be real lucky. I've been real lucky."

The original pin which burst the vast financial bubble involved storage tanks for the fertilizer. Mortgages were found on record totaling $34.5 million for $33,500 tanks in 11 West Texas counties. Only a few hundred such tanks are needed in the area. The FBI in charges against Estes and three officials of a manufacturing firm, claims most of the tanks don't exist.

The probe spread. Texas Atty. Gen. Will Wilson, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, held six courts of inquiry. One of many points covered involved possible improper influence by Estes with Agriculture Department employes.

William E. Morris, an Agriculturel Department employe, was fired because he failed to make himself available to department investigators looking into allegations Estes accompanied several officials on shopping tours in Dallas for expensive clothing. Morris' wife quit her job as parttime secretary to Rep. Ed Edmondson, D-Okla. Emery E. Jacobs, deputy administrator of the agricultural stabilization and conservation service, quit his job but denied any wrongdoing.

The names of governors, senators and congressmen and other high federal officials have been mentioned in the case—either in print or privately.

The Republican National Committee said Estes was appointed to the National Cotton Advisory Committee by President Kennedy.

"Loaded with political TNT, an FBI probe now under way may yet come to rest on the doorstep of the White House," said the committee's publication, "Battle Line."

No mention has been made of the White House or the President in extensive testimony, however.

Estes did claim, a witness testified, that he could telephone Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas and Johnson would quash an FBI investigation. But the investigation continued.

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., started a probe with his Senate Investigations Committee. The general accounting office began looking into the matter for the House Inter-Governmental Relations subcommittee.

Meanwhile Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., introduced a resolution asking for investigation of cotton allotment transfers as well.

No one will venture a guess where it will end. Hardly a day goes by without new developments. Even now a staff member of the Senate Investigating subcommittee is in Austin examining records. A decision whether to hold public hearings is expected in three or four days.

It may be years before anyone knows the financial jumble's full impact on West Texas agricultural economy, individual farmers, the lending companies and possibly persons in Washington—on all the thousands of persons touched in one way or another by Estes' fabulous life.

Believes Soviet Has 80 ICBMs

BONN, Germany (AP) — The West German Defense Ministry said Thursday the Soviet Union has at least 80 intercontinental missiles capable of carrying atomic warheads against targets in all parts of the world.

The ministry's estimate on Communist military might added that the Warsaw Pact has 4.706 million men under arms—3.57 million in the Soviet Union, the rest in satellite countries.

Other statistics for the Soviet Union: 19 long-range bombers; 200 intermediate range missiles backed by 1,100 bombers; 500 submarines, six atom-powered and 15 equipped with missiles; a total of 15,000 planes in the air force and 2,300 ships in the navy.

Gen. Longstreet's Widow Dies Quietly At Age Of 99

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP)—Helen Dortch Longstreet, widow of Confederate Gen. James Longstreet, fighter for things in which she believed, Southern beauty and World War II airplane factory worker, is dead at 99.

She had hoped to reach 100 but the end came quietly Thursday in Milledgeville State Hospital. She was one of the very few surviving widows of a Civil War general.

Mrs. Longstreet never liked to talk about her age, but her niece and only survivor, Mrs. R. H. Rumph of Atlanta, said she was born in Carnesville, Ga., April 20, 1863.

In failing health for 10 years, she entered the state mental hospital in 1957. Doctors described her case as mild and said she seemed perfectly happy.

Mrs. Longstreet attended Brenau College at Gainesville, Ga., and there met Longstreet's daughter by his first wife, Marie Louise Garland who died in 1889.

On Sept. 8, 1897, she married Longstreet at the old governor's mansion in Atlanta. He was 76 and she 34.

Her greatest fight was a battle to clear her husband "of any accusation wrongfully made against him that he failed to carry out Lee's orders at Gettysburg." She contended he had been cautious, nothing more.

Longstreet was second in command to Lee of the Army of Northern Virginia. He was described as immovable in the battles of Williamsburg, First Manassas, Second Manassas and Antietam. But a show of caution at Gettysburg drew the charge that he had ignored orders.

The general, called "the bulldog of Chickamauga," was almost killed by his own troops in an error at the battle of the Wilderness. However, he was present at Appomattox where he urged Lee not to surrender.

He fell into virtual disgrace among Southerners when he applied for a job with his cousin by marriage, Ulysses S. Grant.

It was after the general's death in 1904 that Mrs. Longstreet began a career which included the holding of more jobs than she could remember in later years. She was at one time a newspaper reporter, a freelance writer on politics, the postmistress of Gainesville, Ga., a Veterans Bureau employe, and a riveter in a B29 bomber plant.

As state librarian, she was the first woman in Georgia to hold public office.

"I had to get the legislature to change the law before I could assume office," she recalled a number of years ago. "A hundred thousand women signed a petition that the law be repealed so I could be appointed."

Her employment during World War II as a riveter at the Bell bomber plant at Marietto, Ga., created a storm of protest by union organizers who called it a publicity stunt.

But she stuck to the job for nearly two years and a sub foreman described her work as ranking with the best done in the plant.

In May, 1956, Mrs. Longstreet was found wandering and incoherent in the treets of Elmira, N.Y. She was placed in a hospital and later taken to Atlanta.

Jayne, Mickey Quarrel; She Asks For Divorce

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Jayne Mansfield had her first big fight with her husband Thursday, stormily told him she was going out shopping—but didn't tell him she was shopping for a divorce.

"I still don't believe she did it," said her stunned muscleman spouse, Mickey Hargitay, early today. He spent the night under the same roof with his bosomy wife.

That togetherness, unique even for Hollywood, led some observers to believe that the divorce won't take.

And Jayne's own words, breathlessly delivered, accented that belief.

"Our differences are really minor but maybe because they are the only ones we have ever had they seem bigger than they are," she said.

"I'm sure we'll work it out."

Hargitay first learned of the suit from newsmen.

"Jaynie's out shopping. Why, we're waiting supper on her," said Hargitay—usually not the last one to know.

By suppertime, Jayne indeed had come home, sneaked in a back door of her huge pink and white home.

Then she secluded herself in her bedroom and first called her press agent.

Then she summoned Hargitay, 33. He was both hurt and angry when he came out a few moments later.

"She won't say much. I guess she doesn't want to talk with me. I love her very much but she's making me madder than hell," he said.

Then the press agent ushered in a group of reporters and photographers.

Before long Jayne, 28, appeared on an inside balcony of her house, which is decorated in early Mae Murray style.

She wore a gold lame slack outfit that looked as if it had been sprayed on that famed 40-22-35 frame. Each newsman got a friendly handshake as she called each by name.

"We have had differences. We're not used to having them and I guess it comes as a big shock," she said.

"I'm no different from any other married woman. I really believe in a happy marriage and Mickey and I have been deliciously happy. We hope we can work it out."

Her surprise divorce action was taken in Santa Monica Superior Court.

Rejects Protest On Meet Sites

CHARLOTTE (AP)—David McConnell, chairman of the State Board of Elections, has rejected a Republican protest against holding of Democratic precinct meetings May 5 in Alexander County at the same time and places that voter registration is going on.

William E. Cobb of Morganton, state GOP chairman, made the protest in a telegram Thursday to Raymond C. Maxwell, executive secretary of the state board.

The telegram said in part, "There is a fee paid by the taxpayers for the use of polling places as registration locations and in all cases, the registrar is paid to serve the public uninterrupted by political meeting. . . We question the propriety of holding meetings which would tend to present a highly partisan group to persons seeking to registrer to vote."

McConnell called "novel" Cobb's request that the board restrain double use of registration places, adding:

"Many polling places are the sole place that is convenient for meetings in the precinct. Quite frequently, these places are school houses. It is not believed that the integrity of the election or registration processes will be in the least affected by the holding of party precinct meetings in polling places of convenience."

Left His Will Writ In Verse

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Eugene B. Tankersly, who died April 4 at the age of 45, left this will which was accepted for probate Thursday.

"All my earthly goods I have in store
I leave to my dear wife, forevermore.
Freely I give, no limits do I fix:
This is my will, she is the executrix."

Bottle Cap Has Odd Reaction

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — A Danish brewery reported today that Lebanese police have closed its Beirut distributor and arrested some of the employes because of a design on the inside of its bottle caps.

The Tuborg Brewery said the design, resulting from the casting process, apparently resembles the symbol of an outlawed Lebanese political party.

The firm asked the Danish Embassy in Beirut to convince the local authorities that its beer had no connection with any illegal organization.

Teachers Fail Get Injunction

DETROIT (AP) — Seven teachers of Anchor Bay High School in New Baltimore, Mich., failed Thursday to obtain a federal court injunction against the school board, which had suspended them for a week.

The teachers were suspended and the school's principal, Rudy Kamischke, was fired by the board after they wore black arm bands of mourning following the election defeat of a teacher tenure proposal.

The board action precipitated a brief strike by most of the school's 351 students, who protested the suspensions nd he firing of Kamischke.

U.S. istrict Judge theodore Levin denied the temporary injunction and reprimanded the teachers. He found no basis for their charge that their rights of freedom of speech had been violated.

CHAPTER 23

No explanation was given for the postponement of the trial of August and Katie Dale, but the Rhode Island government reluctantly granted Major Tallmadge's request, and in the meantime the prisoners were kept under close guard in the old town jail on Benevolent Street in Providence.

Hugh Spencer waited with mounting impatience for word from headquarters, and after three weeks he finally received a brief letter from Tallmadge. The commander-in-chief had been persuaded to accept the plan to round up the New York counterfeiters, and if Rhode Island agreed, action could be taken immediately.

Hugh went to the Rhode Island authorities and asked that the Dales be paroled into his custody. Israel Stewart, the lieutenant governor, was a patriot, a hardheaded man who believed in using any means to win the war, and when Hugh convinced him that the Dales could help the United States achieve her freedom, he signed an order releasing them from prison.

It was necessary to gain the consent of the pair first, however, so Hugh went to the jail and, after conferring briefly with the warden, was admitted to August Dale's cell. The old man had lost his ebullience and listened apathetically as Hugh began to outline his plan, but gradually August brightened, and by the time that Hugh finished explaining his general idea, the counterfeiter's eyes were sparkling.

"You've come to the right man, Captain Spencer," he said. "You show remarkable perspicacity and wisdom for someone so young. I can give you a virtual guarantee that I can locate the people who are making Continental dollars in New York. You can rely on me, Captain."

"That's why I arranged for your parole," Hugh replied quietly. "I want to make it clear, though, that Rhode Island isn't dropping the charges against you and your daughter. If we should succeed, the state might be persuaded to parole you permanently, but that's something I'm in no position to promise."

"I realize that your powers are limited, but I'm grateful to you for offering me an opportunity. I had given up all hope of obtaining my release, but you're giving me what may prove to be a fresh start in life."

"You realize that I'll be in a dangerous personal position, Dale." Hugh measured his words. "So it's only fair to warn you that if you try to trick me, I won't hesitate to kill you."

The old man, who had been sitting cross-legged on his pallet in the corner of his cell, stood and brushed straw from his breeches. "It is obvious," he said proudly, "that you have no concept of my code."

"I didn't know you had one." Hugh couldn't conquer the bitterness that rose up in him.

"I have never played a colleague false. You and I will be colleagues. What more can I say?" He extended his hand.

Hugh gripped it, conscious of the irony of shaking hands with the man who was responsible for all that he had suffered. "If the enemy catches us, they'll hang us as spies, you know, so my offer is less than generous."

"I've taken gambles all of my life, and my record of success speaks for itself." August fingered the ruffled cuff of his shirt. "What specific plans do you have in mind?"

"I haven't made any as yet."

"Ah, then you'll be wise to give me a voice in your council. I've had experience in confounding authority, vast experience that will prove beneficial to our venture.

"I'm counting on your help," Hugh said with a smile. Then, suddenly, he sobered. "Naturally you'll want your daughter placed on parole too. But I doubt if you want her to risk being hanged as a spy, so you may feel that she shouldn't join us. If you wish, she can retire to some place where she won't be conspicuous and wait there until we either succeed or she becomes an orphan."

There was a ring of genuine admiration in August's voice as he said, "You claim you aren't generous, Captain. I beg to contradict you. When you started to outline your thoughts to me, I was prepared to hear you say that Katie would be held here as a hostage."

"I thought of that," Hugh replied candidly, "but I don't believe it would be fair to any of us. If we're taking risks together, we've got to work together. You'd resent me if your daughter remained in jail."

"I would, Captain." August hesitated for a moment. "Katie can be extremely valuable to us, if she can be persuaded to join us. However, she has a mind of her own, and she can behave in an infuriatingly stubborn fashion when she chooses."

"I'll talk to her."

August coughed delicately behind his hand. "With your permission, I'll speak to her first. Women let their feelings cloud their logic, and I regret to say that Katie's attitude toward you is extremely hostile at present." Brightening, he patted Hugh on the shoulder. "But I have confidence in my persuasive powers. Arrange a meeting with her in fairly pleasant surroundings, and give me a quarter of an hour alone with her before you see her."

Later that same day August conferred with his daughter in the warden's office at the jail and Hugh waited impatiently in the corridor outside. It was difficult to control his indignation, and he thought it was absurd that he should be placed in the role of a supplicant. His temper was still rising when August, his manner that of a gracious host, opened the door and stepped into the corridor.

"Katie has consented to speak to you," he said in a confidential tone.

"Has she agreed to the plan?"

The old man looked less confident. "Children occasionally forget all their parents have done for them, and Katie is no exception to the general rule, I fear. In brief, she wouldn't give me her decision. She listened to me without saying a word, and finally told me she'd be willing to see you. I hope, for my own sake and that of your mission, that she'll be willing to forget her animosity toward you. There are times," he added plaintively, waving Hugh into the office, "when I wish I had been blessed with a son rather than a daughter."

Katie stood at the far end of the warden's office, behind the desk, staring out into Benevolent Street, and did not move when she heard the door close. Curbing an impulse to move closer to her, Hugh forced himself to lean against the door.

"Good afternoon, Miss Dale," he said.

Katie turned slowly. "When I knew you in London I thought you were very innocent. I didn't suspect that you have a diabolically clever mind."

In spite of what her father had said, Hugh was surprised by her unpleasantness. "Nonsense," he replied brusquely.

"Is it? You seem to think I have no mind of my own." When Katie was angry, the green in her eyes became deeper and more opaque.

"I've thought many things about you, a great number of them unflattering," he retorted, "but I've always given you full credit for originality."

She became even more thoroughly aroused. "You felt sure I couldn't resist your offer. The prospect of freedom, even temporary freedom, is so tempting, and the knowledge that the alternative is a long prison term was bound to influence me." She laughed contemptuously, her hands on her hips.

When Hugh had known her in London she had always behaved like a lady, and he hadn't suspected that she had an earthy, violent temper. "I've made you a legitimate offer. If you're afraid of the enemy, reject my plan, and that will end the matter."

"Who is the enemy, you or the British?" Katie demands of Hugh. The story continues here tomorrow.

Sanford Avoids Expressing View

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford has sidestepped comment on the work of the Governor's Committee on Education Beyond the High School.

Sanford told his news conference Thursday he would wait to see the committee's report before deciding whether he will adopt it as the aims and policies of his administration.

Two subcommittees of the commission have voted in favor of a plan to reorganize the State Board of Higher Education.

Sanford told newsmen he had not given any of his views to members of the commission, except that it should search for the "broadest possible opportunities" for higher educational resources.

He asked the committee to prepare a plan for the development and use of higher educational resources for at least the next 15 years.

On another subject, Sanford said he is gratified the state has reduced its bond debt, but he thinks bond financing is the best method of providing improvements and services.

He made the comment when asked about statistics which showed North Carolina was one of four states that had a reduction in per capita debt in the 1950-1961 period.

Sanford made a strong plea in behalf of automobile seat belts. He urged North Carolinians to install them in their cars.

"I feel it will save lives," the governor declared. In reply to a query, he said the state's No. 1 limousine has seat belts in the front seat but none in the back. Sanford added he understands belts are not as effective in the back seat as they are in the front.

New Conductor For Symphony

CHICAGO (AP) — Jean Martinon, French conductor and composer, has been appointed to succeed Fritz Reiner as music director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, it was announced Thursday.

Dr. Eric Oldberg, president of the Orchestral Association of Chicago, said Martinon, 52, will take over the duties in the fall of 1963. He will become the seventh music director of the orchestra since its inception in 1891.

Sanford Denies He Has Grudge

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford says he has no grudge against State Republican Chairman William E. Cobb.

Sanford told newsmen Thursday that Cobb "got a cordial reception" when he called on the governor recently "and if he comes back he will get a proper reception."

Sanford said, "I'm not going around carrying grudges."

A newsman wanted to know if the governor had discussed with Cobb the appointment of a Republican member of the State Board of Elections.

"I don't think I will discuss what we discussed," Sanford said.

Republican Dan Judd of Asheville, a candidate for Congress in the 11th District, has announced he will resign from the board. He has indicated, however, he will withhold the resignation until the governor gives assurances that the vacancy will be filled by a Republican approved by Cobb.

Sanford said recently he would appoint a bona fide Republican to the board but he had no intentions of letting anyone dictate his appointments.

Win $5,500 For Crash Damages

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) —Two Brunswick County farmers have won a total of $5,500 for damages they claimed resulted to their property from the crash of a National Airlines plane in January, 1960 that killed 34 people.

A civil court jury awarded Horace Johnson $3,000 Thursday. After jury was picked to hear the suit brought by Richard Randolph, attorneys announced it was settled for $2,500.

Johnson had sought $9,500, Randolph $7,000. The men claimed the crash damaged their property and that fields, private roads and fences were damaged in salvage and rescue operations.

The Federal Aviation Agency said evidence showed a dynamite blast in the vicinity of a seat occupied by Julian Frank, New York lawyer who was heavily insured, caused the crash.

Florida Vote Test For Kennedy's Program

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Some clues to the thinking of Florida voters on President Kennedy and his program for medical care of the aged will be provided in state primary election voting next Tuesday.

More than 900,000 Floridians are expected to turn out for the Democratic and Republican primaries where congressional contests have overshadowed races for George Smathers' U.S. Senate seat and two State Railroad Commission posts.

Kennedy himself provided some of the fireworks for the campaign, which has been red-hot in two Miami area congressional races.

The President lost Florida to Richard M. Nixon by 46,000 votes in 1960, but Gov. Farris Bryant, who gave Kennedy lukewarm support then, said recently Kennedy was 50 per cent stronger now.

Kennedy, in effect, kicked off the campaign when he endorsed his friend, Sen. Smathers, and his most consistent Florida supporter in Congress, Rep. Dante Fascell of Miami.

Smathers' two Democratic rivals—Roger L. Davis, 32, Fort Lauderdale attorney, and Douglas R. Voorhees, 50, Miami Shores real estate salesman — accused Kennedy of trying to influence primary voting.

Since then, Davis and Voorhees, comparatively unknown and handicapped by lack of funds, have failed to mount much of a drive. Smathers remained in Washington most of the time and didn't bother with a formal campaign.

The Republican U.S. Senate candidate, Emerson Rupert of St. Petersburg, is unopposed.

It has been something else in Fascell's case. Fascell, 45, has drawn hot opposition from State Rep. David C. Eldredge, a conservative. Their bitter two-man contest has provided voters of South Dade and Monroe counties a clear-cut choice between liberal and conservative.

Eldredge has charged Fascell with being an integrationist and with blindly following the Kennedy line. Over-all Fascell has supported Kennedy's program 82 per cent of the time, even more than Smathers who has sided with the President less than 50 per cent of the time.

Fascell has called Eldredge a "little Faubus, a reference to Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas, and has charged Eldredge with being supported by right-wing organizations connected with The John Birch Society.

The winner of the Fascell-Eldredge battle will take on either of two Republican candidates—J. C. McGlon Jr., or Ralph W. Schmidt.

Five other of the state's 12 congressional seats are being contested on the Democratic side and two on the Republican. Four of the Democratic fights are for the new congressional seats Florida gained in the 1960 census.

In the new 3rd Congressional District of Miami and North Dade County, former U.S. Sen. Claude Pepper is opposed by State Sen. W. C. Herrell and two other Democrats, Metro Commissioner Chuck Hall and Miami businessman Ernest Busker.

Pepper, champion of New Deal causes in the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, is the only candidate to endorse the Kennedy administration right down the line.

"I'm a real Democrat—a Roosevelt Democrat, a Truman Democrat and a Kennedy Democrat," said Pepper, who spent 14 years in the Senate before losing to Smathers in 1950.

Republican candidates are Dr. Robert C. Bartlett, a physician; Paul J. O'Neill, a financial consultant, and Robert A. Peterson, president of the Greater Miami Crime Commission. Dr. Bartlett advertises his membership in The John Birch Society.

In the four other Democratic congressional battles the King-Anderson bill which embodies the President's plan for medical care of the aged through Social Security, has been made a campaign issue in varying degrees.

Most opponents of the President's plan have declared for the Kerr-Mills bill which provides for aged persons who declare themselves medically indigent.

Veteran Democratic Rep. D. R. Matthews of Gainesville is opposed by a Lake City chiropractor, John A. Marcello, 48, who has endorsed Kennedy's medical care plan. Matthews favors the Kerr-Mills bill.

The medical care issue has had an impact in Florida because the state has one of the highest percentages of retirees in the nation.

Peace Corps Denies That Rugged Training Imposed

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Peace Corps official says the training program for overseas duty is not designed to turn out Tarzans or Janes—despite the charge of a 65-year-old widow that she was ousted for refusing to do pushups and run a mile before breakfast.

Janie Fletcher, of Panhandle, Tex., said the Peace Corps ran her ragged at its training camp in Arecibo, Puerto Rico, and finally dropped her from a group bound for duty in Brazil because she objected to the physical training program.

The Peace Corps denied Mrs. Fletcher was pressed to undertake physical training beyond her ability.

"Obviously a woman of her years would not be expected to perform like the younger people," Timothy J. Adams, acting chief of public information, said Thursday night.

Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver said Mrs. Fletcher's dismissal was not due to her inability to take part in physical conditioning.

"There were other reasons and these were discussed with her," he said. "One of them was that of all candidates for Brazil she had the lowest language facility."

Mrs. Fletcher told a different story—and she told it in a letter to her senator, John G. Tower, R-Tex. She said she was dropped because "the staff at the camp disliked me because I objected to the training. There could have been no other reason."

Adams said the Fletcher matter "is closed as far as we're concerned." But Tower demanded an investigation before the Senate votes on the corps $63.75-million budget.

Mrs. Fletcher said younger Peace Corps volunteers at the Puerto Rico camp stayed up until the wee hours and did much drinking. She said she was "cursed and shoved beyond my strength" in a program that "would do justice to any army training."

Shriver said he couldn't imagine anyone in the training camp cursing the Texas schoolteacher. He said night discussion groups were allowed to drink beer, but there was no moral laxity.

He said Peace Corps selections are based on merit, not politics, race, religion or age. "We have said from the beginning that Peace Corps standards would be high," Shriver said. "They have to be and we don't intend to relax them because of political pressure."

Adams said Mrs. Fletcher was one of eight trainees dropped for various reasons from the Brazil-bound group.

"Every Peace Corps applicant is invited to training with the understanding that there will be no final selection for overseas assignment until it is over," he said.

He said three people over 60 successfully completed the training program in Puerto Rico without complaint and now are overseas.

NO WIG, SAYS WHITE HOUSE—Here are front and rear views of the new hairdo of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy displayed at the Senate wives' Red Cross unit luncheon in the Capitol. It's a modified Cleopatra style coiffure, and the White House says it's no wig. The wig rumor rose during Mrs. Kennedy's Pakistan and India tour earlier this year when there were reports she might be taking along a portable hairdo to ease her coiffure problems. The White House denied the presence of a wig on that tour, also. (AP Wirephoto)

Downfall Began At A Distillery

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Norman King had a flourishing business — until he won a contract to paint a whiskey distillery.

"That was the beginning of my downfall," he told a bankruptcy court in Inverness.

"Instead of working on the job my men were lying around drunk or playing football."

Master-painter King said he lost 400 pounds ($1,120) on the distillerly contract and that put his business on the decline. He went broke with debts [illegible]86 pounds ($3,265) against assets of [illegible] pounds ($2,[illegible]

Shouldn't Serve Mourners Food

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's funeral directors decided Thursday it is not within the bounds of their professional ethics to serve coffee or food to mourners.

The 83rd annual convention of the Michigan Funeral Directors association supported a State Mortuary Science Board ruling that refreshments should not be an integral part of the funeral service.

Balance Of Payments Put In Simple Terms

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—If you've wondered what balance of payments really means—how a deficit or a surplus could possibly affect you—our neighbor to the north today spells it out for you in dollars and cents.

Canada has devalued its dollar. With 92½ American cents you can now buy there what costs a Canadian $1 in his money. Why? Balance of payments—in this case unfavorable to Canada.

Back in August 1957, it took $1.06 of your Yankee money to buy in Canada what cost $1 in their money. Why? Balance of payments—unfavorable to the United States five years ago.

But both in 1957 and in 1962 Canadians bought more goods from us than we bought from them. That is, the balance of trade—not payments—has been favorable to the United States all along.

The difference—the thing that gave the United States an unfavorable balance of payments—not trade—in 1957 and a favorable one now—isn't just in actual goods exchanged. It is in these goods and services, plus the flow of money for investment.

In 1957 Americans were buying many Canadian dollars to put into Canadian resources and securities. This outbalanced the surplus of goods we sold them. And the demand for Canadian dollars exceeded their demand for U. S. dollars to the tune of around six cents.

The investment flow north has slackened. For one thing, Canada had discouraged it, fearing U.S. citizens would own too big a share of the Canadian economy. For another, the price of many Canadian stocks has tumbled.

Today Canadians need American dollars to pay for the surplus of goods they buy from us. So now that demand means a premium of around eight cents in our favor.

True, this oversimplifies Canada's problem. Its continuing balance of payments deficit involves many other nations. And there are internal reasons bearing on the devaluation move.

But Canada does furnish a concrete example of how balance of payment surpluses or deficits can affect a nation's currency — ours as well as others.

With devaluation Canada will now offer you a slightly cheaper vacation there. The dividends you get from Canadian stocks could mean less in U. S. dollars. But the goods you make and sell in world markets could be up against lower price tags on Canadian goods.

Balance of payments isn't a problem just for Canada. The United States has been running a deficit for several years, too, and because of it we are still losing more of our gold reserves. This doesn't mean we're in danger now of devaluating our dollar, as the Canadians just have. But it does point up the danger — if a deficit runs long enough, anyone would have to face it.

So when Washington or Wall Street worry about the balance of payments it isn't just a lot of international financial double talk. It boils down to dollars and cents — and some of them could be yours.

Silent Vigil By Protest Group

NEW YORK (AP) — The Greather New York Council for a Sane Nuclear Policy conducted a five-hour silent vigil in Times Square Thursday night to protest resumption of nuclear bomb tests by the United States and the Soviet Union.

The demonstrators — ranging through the evening from 50 to 100 — were joined at times by theatrical personalities, including actresses Shelley Winters and Julie Harris, comedians Orson Bean and Milt Kamen and actor Douglas Campbell.

Miners Trapped For Two Days

ODENDAALSRUST, South Africa (AP) — Little hope was held today for 13 miners trapped for two days in a gold mine rock fall 5,200 feet underground.

Rescue workers recovered the bodies of three miners Thursday but said they might not reach the other entombed men until Saturday.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Reacting after three days of advance, the stock market entered a slow decline early this afternoon. Some losses were sharp.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .70 to 247.80 at noon with industrials off 1.40, rails off .50 and utilities unchanged.

Some key stocks were off 1 to 3 points and declines of 3 points or so were common among some of the more volatile issues.

Steels were down appreciably. Motors also declined but their losses were not as bad as steels.

Stock analysts said that after the three-day rise it was in the cards for the market to test the recent lows to see if they will hold before another recovery drive can get under way.

Jones & Laughlin and Lukens Steel were down about 2 apiece. U.S. Steel dropped a point and Republic Steel more than that. Bethlehem was off a fraction.

A 3-point slump by Du Pont hurt the market averages. This was partly offset by Eastman Kodak's rise of about 2.

Chrysler lost more than a point while General Motors and Ford held their declines to fractions. American Motors was easy.

After a slight rise at the opening, IBM showed a 1-point net loss. Texas Instruments dropped about 4 points of its recent recovery while losses of around 3 were posted for Amerada, Litton Industries and Polaroid.

The trend was generally lower among electronics, aerospace issues, mail order-retails, utilities, chemicals, building materials and oils.

Superior Oil of California dropped 28 to 1,160.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was down 3.92 at 671.57.

Prices were mixed in moderate dealings on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were unchanged to lower.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — Hog prices steady. Tops of 16-16.50 Rocky Mount; 15.50 - 16.50 Wilson, Nahunta, Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Mount Olive, Newton Grove; 15.75-16.25 Smithfield; 15.50-16 Spring Hope; 15.25-15.75 Pembroke; 16.50 Clinton, Fayetteville Elizabethtown, Pink Hill; 16 Tarboro, Enfield, Scotland Neck, Rich Square, Greensboro, Goldsboro, Bethel, Murfreesboro, Robersonville; 15.75 Albertson; 15.50 Lillington, Castle Hayne, Burgaw, Siler City.

Wilson cash cattle prices steady: steers and heifers, choice 14.50-25.50, good 23-24, standards 19-22.50; beef cows 14.50-17, canners 13-15.50; light bulls 16-18, heavy bulls 17-20.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — North Carolina Egg markets steady. Supply fully adequate, demand fair. Prices paid producers for clean, unsized eggs, delivered nearby grading stations on a grade-yield basis, cases exchanged: grade A large, whites 28-29½, mostly 29-29½; medium, whites 26-27; small, whites 19-20.

LI'L GENERAL STORES, INC.

Recent Developments

On April 23, 1962, Management announced that they had acquired the "Little Giant" chain of stores operating in the Orlando-Ocola area of Florida. This group comprises eight bantam stores and two super markets, which gives Li'l General a total of 106 stores in operation. The addition of these 10 stores with annual sales of approximately $4 million makes Li'l General one of the largest in the industry from the standpoint of sales and number of operating units.

Sales and earnings for the fiscal six months ending April 30, 1962, are expected to be substantially above former projections. Management has expressed optimism over prospects for the balance of the year, with other acquisitions and further increases in earnings definitely possible.

We congratulate this fine young company on its continued growth.

We will send our full report on this company upon request.

Grimesland FFA Chapter Captures Contest Banner

BETHEL—The Future Farmers of America chapter from Grimesland High School took the banner yesterday at a livestock contest held at the high school here.

Placing second was the Chicod chapter, while the Winterville chapter was third.

The Grimesland beef cattle and swine team came in first place. The team included Larry Ray Elks, Harvey Craft, Herbert Mills and Reggie Edwards. The school's dairy team, composed of Jim Facuette, Jenies Mobley, Gerald Childs and Dennis Hardee came in second.

First place in the dairy judging was won by Bethel, with team members Bill Staton, Mitchell Manning, Jimmy Keel and David James.

Chicod's beef cattle and swine team placed second and was comprised of Billy Elks, Lavern Mills, Talmadge Adams and Graham Mills. The school's dairy team consisted of Wayland Adams, Jackie Dixon, Ephraigm Smith and Ray Hardee.

Seven schools participated in the F.F.A. sponsored contest, which consisted of two parts: the beef cattle and swine division and the dairy cattle division. Winning teams will represent the county at the district contest to be held in Williamston on Saturday.

Judges were Pitt County Vocational Agriculture teachers L. E. Tetterson of Grimesland, S. F. Peterson of Ayden, Sam Dewar of Bethel, Eugene James of Belvoir, James H. Mobley of Winterville, Paul Bradley of Grifton, Edison Plato Bass of Farmville, Charlie Johnson of Chicod and Marion Nobles of Stokes.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Charlie Sherrod Sr., who passed away two years ago today, May 4, 1960:

There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the year long since you went.
There is someone who thinks of you daily,
But tries to be brave and content
So we shed a tear that is silent,
And breathe a sigh of regret,
For you were ours, we remember,
If all the world should forget.

Sadly missed,
Mrs. Leareau Sherrod and Children

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my dear husband, Thomas May, who departed this life on May 4, 1959:

Three years have passed,
And my heart is still sore.
As time rolls on,
I miss you more.

His devoted wife, Sindia D. May, and family

Car Rolled Over, Wound Up Close To Porch

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT . . . This vehicle operated by a Rt. 1 Fountain youth overturned on N. C. 43 Thursday night, landing about three feet from the house. (Reflector Staff Photo)

An 18-year-old Rt. 1 Fountain youth received face and shoulder abrasions when the automobile he was operating overturned several times on N.C. 43 about two miles north of Greenville late Thursday.

Highway Patrolman W. L. Whitehead identified the driver of the car as Melvin Phillip Langston.

The investigating officer said the vehicle was heading toward Greenville when the accident occurred. Ptl. Whitehead said the driver apparently lost control of the vehicle as he rounded a curve.

The 1956 model car overturned several times, going over a four foot hedge around the C. E. Manning house and landed in the front yard about three feet from the front porch.

Ptl. Whitehead estimated the damage to the vehicle in the 10:05 p.m. accident at $600 and damage to shrubbery and the Manning yard at $50.

Langston was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital by the Greenville Rescue Squad. He was treated and held over for observation. Hospital officials said he was released early today.

Ptl. Whitehead charged Langston with driving under the influence.

Flake To Speak At Kiwanis Club

Joe M. Flake Jr., immediate past governor of Circle K in the Carolinas, will be guest speaker at the local Kiwanis Club tonight.

Flake has served as head of the district organization comprising all Circle K Clubs in North and South Carolina for the past year. Under his leadership, the district was ranked third in the nation in new club progress.

Circle K Clubs are college-level men's service organizations performing the same functions as their sponsors, Kiwanis International. There are over 7,000 members in the United States and Canada presently affiliated with Circle K.

A junior at East Carolina College, Flake is specializing in social studies. He will be installed next week as the new president of the Circle K Club on campus for the ensuing year.

Bryan Bennett, sophomore at E.C.C. from Bayside, Va., will assist Flake on the program. He was recently elected lieutenant governor of the eastern division of Circle K, which includes the club at the college.

Bethel PTA To Sponsor Dinner

The Bethel PTA is sponsoring a barbecued pork and chicken dinner Sunday to benefit next year's music and physical education program.

Service will be from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at the elementary school cafeteria on Highway 11.

Ernest H. Pender Funeral Set Sunday

Mr. Ernest Harvey Pender, 73, died at Pender Memorial Hospital in Burgaw Friday morning at one o'clock.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Wilkerson Chapel Sunday afternoon at two o'clock by the Rev. W. E. Thompson, pastor of the Greenville Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Mr. Pender was born and reared near Whitakers and had lived in Greenville and Rocky Mount for the past forty years. He was married to Virginia Tate of High Point in 1911 and she died in 1937. He was a retired dry cleaner and had been living near Burgaw for the past two years. He was a member of the Memorial Baptist Church.

Surviving are a son, Charles A. Pender of Greenville; three grandchildren, Charles Tate Pender, of the U.S. Air Force, now stationed in Japan, Ernest Julian Pender of the U.S. Army, now stationed in Kentucky, and Fredrick Bryan Pender of the home; and two sisters, Mrs. T. A. Etheridge of Greenville and Mrs. Marvin Murrill of Norfolk, Va.
