Two Fugitives Recaptured, Leaving Five Still At Large

Shealy Arrested In Mooresville; McMurray Picked Up In Durham

Law and order has taken its toll among the ranks of the eleven prisoners who ran from the Pitt County Prison Unit here Monday. Last night, two of the remaining seven still at large were captured, one in Durham and the second at Mooresville.

Capt. L. F. Dail, superintendent of the local prison, said John W. Shealy, 22, of Hickory was arrested in Mooresville while John T. McMurray, 21, whose home is Albemarle, was taken into custody at Durham.

The prison official quoted Durham Detective R. D. Ray as saying McMurray was captured after police were tipped about his presence in the city.

Shealy, officers said, was returned to custody after a motorist with whom he had thumbed a ride suspected he was a fugitive and reported him to authorities.

Dail said at least one of the men recaptured last night was wearing civilian clothes, and theorized that one or both of the men might be implicated in the break-in of a Conetoe store Wednesday night.

The store was entered and two sets of civilian work clothes and two pairs of shoes were taken, as well as some bread, lunch meat and razors. A truck, believed to be a 1961 Chevrolet, was found parked at the Edgemont County store.

The two were scheduled to be returned to Central Prison today, local officials noted, and the clothes were to be returned here to aid in the investigation of the break-in.

The other four men returned to custody were caught Monday, two in Pitt County and two in South Carolina. The two taken prisoner in South Carolina were driving a car stolen from a trailer park near the Prison Unit.

A second vehicle taken from near the camp just after the prison break was recovered at Norfolk, Va. Capt. Dail said probably three of the escapees left the state in that truck.

Still at large are Woodrow Whitfield, 48 of Norfolk, Va.; Thomas Woodman, 21 of Lumberton; James B. Wilson, 41 of Beckley, W. Va.; Marvin Tew, 28 of Kinston and Johnnie Cobb, 44 of Rocky Mount.

Both Woodman and Whitfield have records of previous escapes. Whitfield was serving a 30-year sentence for second degree murder.

Wednesday the Federal Bureau of Investigation entered the search for the then-seven escapees and federal complaints were issued charging the seven with "unlawful flight to avoid confinement" under the Federal Fugitive Felon Act.

The felons made their bid for freedom by sawing through bars to make a 12 by 18-inch hole in a cell block window, then scaling a seven-foot compound fence topped with five strands of barbed wire.

Calls Received By Draft Office

The Selective Service has announced it has received a call to send eight Pitt County men for armed forces physicals on June 1 and another call to send eight men for pre-induction and three for induction on June 15.

The local board said today that Columbus Ebrum failed to report for his armed forces physical examination as scheduled on Thursday. If he does not report to the local board immediately, he will be declared delinquent, Mrs. Josie Evans, assistant clerk, stated.

Two other men, Robert Alonzo Moyer and Jessie Pollock have failed to notify the board of their addresses. Anyone knowing their whereabouts is asked to notify the local board.

Shower Helpful To Pitt Crops

Showers came to the Pitt County area this morning, providing much needed rain for crops. The weatherman has predicted possible showers for Saturday, though a warming trend will likely begin then.

Temperatures dropped here today after rain started, from 67 at 8 a.m. to 65 at noon. The low for the night was 60 degrees. Linwood Hudson of the Greenville Utilities Plant said.

Thursday's high was 72 and the low was 56 degrees. The Tar River level this morning was 42 feet, rising.

More Liberal Tax Write-Offs Ahead

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—The Kennedy administration made a major move today toward better relations with business by announcing that liberalization of tax depreciation write-offs will be ordered soon.

Unofficial estimates set the 1962 tax savings at about $1.25 billion for big and little businessmen. The announcement was made at a singularly appropriate forum—the Business Council, an organization of major industrialists headed by Chairman Roger M. Blough of U.S. Steel Corp.

Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon sent the word that the revision is now in its final stages. He said the write-offs will be ordered into effect late next month or in July at the latest.

Dillon, detained in Washington by congressional hearings, was unable to attend today's opening session of the Business Council's spring meeting. Undersecretary Henry H. Fowler read Dillon's speech at the closed-door session after giving copies to newsmen.

As if in direct reply to those who have charged since the steel battle that the Kennedy administration is antibusiness, Fowler told the 100 assembled corporate heads: "Our depreciation revision as a whole will, indeed, be meaningful to American industry and to the entire American economy."

"Can anyone any longer doubt this?" The Treasury official gave no actual figures and made no estimate of the amount industry would save—and the Treasury would lose—by shortening the periods in which companies can write off the cost of new machinery and equipment.

But, he said the bigger annual deductions it will permit will take effect in this 1962 tax year, will be usable as a matter of right by all taxpayers, and will apply to machines and equipment already in use as well as to those bought subsequently.

His words dispelled suspicions voiced in some quarters that there would be only a token liberalization, or that the prospect of faster depreciation was being used merely as bait to induce businessmen to support the other key elements of the administration's tax program—the bill providing a tax credit for investment made in modernization.

Together, Dillon has declared, the twin tax measures will give U.S. industry a better tax break than their long-envied foreign competitors. And, he has said, they should stimulate the kind of plant improvements that can bring American exporters closer to cost equality in world markets.

Fowler assured the business leaders that the guidelines are rooted in reality—that they recognized the more rapid obsolescence of industrial equipment in an era of changing technology. He left no doubt that the new rules will go into effect regardless of the fate of the tax credit legislation, and disclosed also that:

The new rules will be vastly simpler than those set forth in the Treasury's existing, 20-year-old Bulletin F. Instead of specifying official useful lives for 5,000 separate items, there will be only a handful of broad classes of items for each industry.

The new schedule will not cover factory structures, warehouses, or other buildings, Fowler said, because the Treasury wants to see whether Congress passes proposed legislation closing what he called a loophole in the tax treatment of gains made on the sale of depreciable property.

If Congress does close this loophole, the Treasury will go ahead with revisions of Bulletin F covering buildings, Fowler assured the businessmen.

A highly placed source, declining to be quoted by name, said that as a result the Senate Investigations subcommittee now has hopes of at least partly solving the riddle posed by entries in Estes' cash books indicating payments of about $235,000 to a "Washington project."

Who or what the Washington project is remains a mystery. Estes has been quoted in a Texas court of inquiry as having bragged about making payoffs amounting to $100,000 to $200,000 a year, without suggesting who got the money or for what purpose.

In other developments here: 1. Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the subcommittee, said Estes definitely will be subpoenaed as a witness for public hearings expected to start within a month. Estes would have a constitutional right to refuse to answer questions.

2. Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., told a news conference he has evidence indicating the Estes scandal "may make Teapot Dome look like a Sunday School picnic."

Ready To Talk About Billie Sol

WASHINGTON (AP)—Investigators were reported today to have received a major break in the Billie Sol Estes case—discovery that some of the indicted financier's former employees are willing to talk about his financial dealings.

Set A Date For New State House

RALEIGH (AP)—Mid-November has been set as the expected time when construction work will be completed on North Carolina's multimillion dollar state house.

Johnnie Jones, superintendent of the Rea Construction Co., said Thursday, "We hope to move out by the middle of November."

The ultra-modern building, which will house the General Assembly, will cost more than $6.3 million, including land and equipment.

Architect Ralph Reeves of the Raleigh firm of Holloway-Reeves said the state should be able to start occupying the building about Jan. 1.

The local forces are interested in one centrally located airport to serve all these cities plus other communities in the area.

Jaycee co-chairmen of the project, George Coffman and Casson Taylor, distributed the petitions to club members last night. Coffman told the club the petitions were to be circulated in Pitt, Martin and Beaufort Counties and other areas where interest is found. He said the club is interested in obtaining 25,000 to 50,000 names.

Taylor said this morning that the Farmville, Ayden and Williamston Jaycee clubs have agreed to circulate the petitions. The Washington club will be asked to participate in the project, as well as other Jaycee clubs in the area.

"The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority and its attorney, W. W. Speight, have fought the battle almost alone," Taylor continued. "We feel we owe them this support. We want to let them know we are supporting this fight through this petition."

Pitt-Greenville has the backing of the federal Bureau of Economic Regulation in its request for an investigation of a airport needs. That bureau filed an answer with the CAB after the local petition was filed.

The petition reads: "We, the undersigned citizens of Eastern North Carolina, wholeheartedly support and favor the establishment of a centrally located airport to serve Eastern North Carolina as contemplated in the petition of Greenville in the Piedmont Local Service Investigation case.

"We pledge our best efforts to support and patronize and use such service and to encourage other citizens of Eastern North Carolina to actively support the area airport."

CHICAGO (AP)—A Negro sent to Chicago by Louisiana segregationists is returning home, convinced that it was a mistake to accept the offer by the White Citizens Council of Greater New Orleans of free transportation to the North.

Rezzie Moffett, 45, one of three Negroes sent by the New Orleans segregationists, boarded a bus Thursday for a return to New Orleans.

More Refugees For Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP)—Hundreds of soldiers and militiamen—some carrying weapons with them—were among refugees streaming into this British Crown Colony from Communist China Wednesday, local newspapers report.

Government officials refused to comment on the reports, and newsmen are barred from the border area.

Five Hong Kong newspapers, including the conservative English-language Morning Post, carried the reports of the military refugees.

The Post said 300 military men crossed over Wednesday and that villagers in the border region reported Hong Kong police quickly surrounded them.

The Chinese-language Hong Kong Times said the troops carried white flags and their leaders asked that they be sent to Formosa to join Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist army.

The surge of refugees from Red China has increased to about 10,000 a month. Because of the overcrowded conditions in the colony, British officials are shipping thousands of them back.

There have been growing suspicions that Peiping is behind the exodus to embarrass the British authorities in Hong Kong and to get rid of many persons regarded as nonproductive in the country confronted with an acute food shortage.

The English-language Hong Kong Standard reported armed Communist guards were herding large groups to the border during the night and forcing them to scramble through the barbed wire. The paper said villagers along the border and refugees reported 30,000 to 40,000 Chinese were waiting in villages and hill-sides on the China side for a chance to slip over.

Talking A Stronger U.S. Stand In Laos

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. leaders were reported today to be considering more forceful action to prevent Laos from falling to pro-Communist forces if the spreading military crisis cannot be brought quickly under control.

President Kennedy and his chief diplomatic and military advisers were understood to consider the events so far in the renewed fighting as both discouraging and alarming.

Kennedy met with his advisers at the White House late Thursday and further talks were held at the State Department.

The White House conference is understood to have included an assistant secretary of state, W. Averell Harriman; Gen. George H. Decker, Army chief of staff; Roger Hillsman, State Department intelligence director and a guerrilla warfare expert; and McGeorge Bundy, presidential assistant for security affairs.

The new crisis began developing with a recent buildup of pro-Western government forces and Communist-support Pathet Lao forces in and around the government stronghold of Nam Tha. The Reds captured Nam Tha last Sunday.

The government forces fled and have been in retreat ever since. In the view of U.S. officials, one of the most serious aspects of the engagement was a display by the government troops of reluctance to fight.

Without a strong base of military resistance against Red advances, the whole country would soon be jeopardized and so would the political policy which the United States has been pursuing in an effort to establish a permanent, compromise peace. The policy calls for the formation of a coalition government under neutralist control, headed by neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma.

The United States has charged that the Red assault of Nam Tha constituted a breach of the year-old cease-fire.

The United States and Britain asked the Soviet Union to use its influence to halt the advance of pro-Communist forces and Souvanna Phouma called on pro-Communist Prince Souphanouvong to pull Red troops back to the original cease-fire line.

Kennedy decided about a year ago against employing U.S. forces in Laos.

The United States has employed limited forces for training and combat support purposes in South Viet Nam where the pro-Western government troops are considered to be vigorous anti-Communist fighters.

The present crisis, it was learned, has caused Kennedy to order a new look at the whole situation.

Found No Better Life In The Soviet

NEW YORK (AP)—A former Philadelphia railroad worker, who forsook the United States in the belief that a better life beckoned in the Soviet Union, returned home with his family today in bitter disillusionment.

"I have made an exceptionally tragic mistake," David Paul Johnson, 32, sadly told newsmen at Idlewild Airport.

Although Johnson, his wife and twin 4-year-old sons spent about a week in the Soviet Union, he said it takes only 10 minutes there to see that the Soviet Union is "an evil, bad thing."

Johnson said that anyone inclined to support Communist causes in this country, as he did, ought to go there and look around and see what is there.

The Johnsons and their sons, Cole and Lindsey, appeared extremely weary as they stepped from an airliner at Idlewild. There was no immediate word as to what they would do next, except that Johnson said he wished to talk with a State Department representative.

Before leaving London on Thursday night, he told embassy officials that he misjudged the whole situation. He reported he found Russians ill-fed and clothed, and living in poor housing.

Johnson said he had supported Communist causes in Philadelphia for the past eight years but never was a party member.

Johnson seemed nervous as he faced a large group of reporters and photographers.

"I have made an exceptionally tragic mistake," he said to them. "Unfortunately it involves my family and myself. We are trying to pick up the pieces of our tragic life. I hope we can make it. We want to get home."

Johnson was asked to give his impression of the Soviet Union, as he found it during his short visit.

"It is an evil, bad thing," he said.

Someone wanted to know how he could make up his mind in such a short time.

"Ten minutes is all you need," Johnson replied.

Johnson's wife, Joanne, 30, and children stayed in an airline office during his brief meeting with the press. Johnson consented to meet with the press only on the basis that his wife not be present. He said she was very tired.

Johnson had been a $112-a-week timekeeper for the Pennsylvania Railroad in Philadelphia. He and his wife sold all their furnishings and most other possessions to finance the move to the Soviet Union.

They left London for Leningrad on the Soviet liner Baltika on April 23. By train they went from Leningrad to Moscow.

Their disillusionment came quickly. By last Monday they were back in London—again on the Baltika. They had to spend three days on it at the London docks because British immigration officials refused permission for them to land.

That was because the Johnsons had only about $450 left, not enough to pay for plane tickets home. The order was rescinded when Mrs. Johnson's father, John Zapenas of Manchester, N.H., put up the $300 additional needed.

Local Airport Briefly Hosts Big Mainliner

For an hour this morning, the Pitt-Greenville airport had the atmosphere of a big city airfield, as some 60 passengers, accompanied by twice as many friends and relatives, boarded a big Pan American DC 6-B Mainliner bound for Miami.

The four-engined plane had no difficulty landing here, though runways were cleaned off in preparation of its coming, E. E. Rawl, charterer for the trip, said. Takeoff time was 11 a.m., and the mood was gay in spite of threatening rain which finally came just as the airliner taxied down the runway.

Rawl chartered the flight to take North and South Carolina officials and dealers of Carolina Sales Corporation who won a sales contest on a weekend trip to Miami. The troop will return Pitt-Greenville airfield about 5:30 on Sunday afternoon.

One stop was made today enroute to Miami to pick up 30 more persons in Columbia, S. C. In all, some 110 employees were making the trip, 90 of them on the chartered airliner.

Those arriving for takeoff here were from throughout eastern North Carolina including Pitt County, Greenville, Kinston, Tarboro, Williamston and as far as Elizabeth City.

The Young Adult and Bible Classes of Oak Grove Church of Christ met together for a "Social" on Friday night at the Stokes School luncheon.

As the members of the Bible Class arrived, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kirkman greeted them and directed them to chairs. The classes gathered around the speaker's table, which was centered with an arrangement of spring flowers.

Miss Gail Bullock, president of the Young Adult Class, was mistress of ceremonies. She began the program by leading the group in two songs and Tracy Barnhill led the opening prayer. Austin Anderson introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Ray Giles, minister of Mount Pleasant.

Plastic 'Scarf' Aids Travel Facial
Stow a bar of soap, a washcloth, and a strip of plastic in your purse or make-up case while travelling.

When you stop for a meal or a rest, tuck the plastic into the neckline of your dress or blouse to protect it from moisture. Then later up your face and neck, rinse off, apply fresh make-up—and you will feel like a "new" woman!

Protect Fragile Personal Laundry
Fragile personal laundry, such as hose and lingerie, should be kept separate from the regular family wash. To do this, use a piece of heavy cardboard to divide the clothes hamper into compartments.

This protects against snags, and eliminates poking around to find items which are best subdued by hand.

Buchanan, Henderson To Attend Girls State

Anne Buchanan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Buchanan, and Martha Henderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Henderson, have been chosen by Greenville Unit 39, American Legion Auxiliary, to attend Girls State which is scheduled to be mencement this year and until time of graduation next year.

In the month of June more than 17,000 young women in 51 Girls State sessions will begin the ascent to leadership by informing themselves of the processes of government and serving as leaders of the government they will create. Last year National Girls State celebrated its 25th birthday and this is the 23rd year for Tar Heel Girls State.

Girls Nation is a product of the American Legion Auxiliary on the national level, conducted since 1947 in the summer at the National Capital by the national organization of American Legion Auxiliary. Its citizens are chosen from the Girls States over the nation and they enjoy a week's citizenship program in Washington, D. C., as guests of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Two citizens of the 1962 Tar Heel Girls State will have the privilege of attending Girls State as senators from July 29 to August 4, 1962, and this is an honor to which all Girls Staters aspire. The Greenville Unit is very proud to have Anne and Martha as its representatives at Tar Heel Girls State.

held at Woman's College in Greensboro from June 17 to June 23.

These young ladies were selected from the rising senior class of the Junius H. Rose High School as outstanding in leadership, scholastic ability, physical fitness, initiative and honesty. They will have the honor of serving as marshals at Commencement.

Mrs. Whichard Circle Hostess
Mrs. John Whichard was hostess to Circle No. 1 of the Women's Auxiliary of Sweet Gum Grove Church Wednesday at her home on Rotary Avenue.

The meeting was opened by prayer led by Mrs. Dennis Alexander, followed by the song "I Love to Tell the Story." The president, Mrs. Charlie Martin, read the scripture taken from Psalm 41:1-3 and presided over the business session.

Following the roll call and past minutes by Mrs. Heber Briley, Mrs. David Nobles gave the treasurer's report. The various chairmen gave their reports and the group voted to send a donation to the Children's Home.

All members took part in discussion concerning the revival and Bible School which will be held in June.

The topic for the lesson, "Blessed Are Ye That Sow Beside All Waters," was discussed by Mrs. Billy Brown and others.

Mrs. Martin led the closing prayer and the hostess served iced tea, strawberry shortcake and pickles.

Church Women Have Meeting

The WMU of Memorial Baptist Church met Monday night at the church.

The meeting was opened with the singing of a hymn, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nation." The devotion given by Miss Grace Smith, president, was taken from the fifth chapter of the Book of Matthew. Prayer followed.

Secretary Ruth Garner read the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved. A treasurer's report was given by Mrs. R. E. Pittman. Various committees gave their reports.

A discussion on helping to send young people to designated camps for the summer followed. A motion was made to encourage camp anticipation and to help on the expenses for the young people.

Mrs. John Marr made the announcement that the G. A.'s would have their coronation service 7:30 p.m. May 20.

The Virginia Miles Circle was in charge of the program for the evening which was presented by Mrs. Fred Myers. She gave a program on the Indian mission fields east of the Mississippi. This work is carried on with the Seminoles of Florida, the Cherokees of North Carolina, the Pembroke of North Carolina, the Choctaws of Mississippi and the Alabama Indians.

Mrs. Kemp Baldwin Named BPW's Outstanding Club Member Of Year

Installation of new officers of the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club was conducted last night by Miss Nettie Brodgon. Incoming officers are: Miss Camille Clarke, president; Mrs. Eva Warren, first vice-president; Miss Gladys Stokes, second vice-president; Mrs. Frances White, recording secretary; Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Helen Snyder, treasurer; and Miss Ruth White, parliamentarian.

Prior to the installation of officers, the program was presented by Miss Alya Taylor, Mrs. Ruth Garner, and Miss Nettie Brodgon. "The Golden Key" was sung by Miss Rachel Steinbeck, accompanied by Mrs. Daisy Rogers. Slides were shown of the National Headquarters building in Washington and of the local club officers accompanied by a brief history of the National Federation and its purposes.

Awards were given to members with perfect attendance for the past year. Delegates were named to the State Convention to be held in Charlotte June 7-10.

Mrs. Kemp Baldwin was named "Outstanding Club Member of the Year." In making the presentation, Miss Gladys Stokes, is a member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and active in the Wesleyan Service Guild. She is advisor to the Future Teachers of America of the local unit. She is a past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Miss Ruth White read "The Emblem" and the meeting was closed with the singing of the emblem benediction by the club members. Guests were Miss Lucy Stokes, Miss Rachel Steinbeck and Miss Elizabeth Freeman.

Protect Linens From Mildew

If you live near the seashore or in a warm humid area, here's a good way to protect your linens from mildew.

Set inexpensive cake-cooling racks on the shelves as a base for stacks of freshly laundered towels and linens. This allows space for air to circulate all around, keeping the linens dry and safe. Also try this "platform" system for stored clothing in dresser drawers.

Whether you prefer to bathe or shower, whether you want to be relaxed or pepped up, soap is vital—because it ensures the cleanliness so necessary to both health and beauty.

MRS. KEMP H. BALDWIN was presented the Business and Professional Women's Club Outstanding Club Member Of Year Award. Mrs. Baldwin (left) received the award from Miss Gladys Stokes, outgoing president.

Art Student Club Speaker

Mrs. Jack Gates entertained the Clio Book Club Tuesday afternoon. Spring flowers were arranged throughout the home.

The president, Miss Agnes Fullilove, welcomed the guests for the afternoon. Mrs. Vernon Tyson and Gayle Hammond, after which a short business meeting was held.

The hostess introduced her speaker, Mr. Hammond from Wilmington. He is a senior art student at E. C. C. and has also studied in Chicago. Mr. Hammond gave a program on the art of water colors and demonstrated his talk by painting a picture of a scene that he sketched of the harbor at Wilmington. He also showed his finished paintings.

A salad course was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Tyson and Miss Jane Hadley, after which books were exchanged and the club adjourned.

Ladies Do Some Good Promoting

When it comes to promoting the community and instituting events which reflect favorably upon a community, the ladies can do just as effective a job in some instances as the men.

An outstanding example of this is the annual Ladies Invitational Golf Tournament which was instituted last year by ladies of the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Yesterday the second annual tournament brought to Greenville some 180 lady golfers from more than 20 other towns in North Carolina. They were accompanied by other ladies from these cities and towns who did not actively participate in the tournament, but came to Greenville for the event anyway.

It is significant that the tournament last year attracted considerable interest among ladies throughout this section of the state and this year the field of participants had to be limited because of the overwhelming response. When the tournament was begun last year, it was the first and only one of its kind in Eastern North Carolina. Since that time ladies of two other cities have begun ladies invitational tournaments of their own, but Greenville's tournament is the largest of the three.

There can be no doubt that the ladies who come to Greenville for the event—even though it is only one day each year—carry back with them a good impression of Greenville and the local ladies who are responsible for the long hours of work which make the tournament possible. It is another evidence that Greenville is on its toes, moving forward, not only from the men's viewpoint, but from the women's viewpoint as well.

We commend the local ladies on their tournament and express to them our appreciation for this annual event which already has become a distinct asset to Greenville and its reputation among the other communities of this part of North Carolina.

Tarheel Boaters Are Objecting

By ROD AMUNDSON
Wildlife Commission
Guest Writer

BOAT OWNERS — Tarheel boat owners, and others throughout the nation have risen up in righteous indignation over certain provisions of legislation introduced in Congress. The provision would call for an annual user tax on all boats 14 feet long or longer, and two dollars for each foot over 14 feet. This would include sailboats and has no provision whatever for horsepower or lack of it.

Tarheel boaters already pay an annual registration fee of three dollars for boats powered by machinery of more than ten horsepower, and the additional federal fee would run the cost of legal boat operation considerably.

Their two companion bills involved, H. R. 11172 and S. 3118, and the essential purpose of the bills is to get more money to buy federal lands to meet the growing need for lands for outdoor recreation. Although the general public, including boat owners, realizes the growing need for outdoor recreation, it is difficult to see why a small segment of the population should be called on to support a program of national significance and for the benefit of all U. S. citizens of all ages.

A phone call to the Outboard Boat Club of America, with headquarters in Chicago, turned up unofficial information that so many boat owners have raised to many objections that it is likely that the boat user tax provision of this legislation will be sliced out entirely. But boat owners had better keep a weather eye out to make certain that this is done.

The Wildlife Management Institute, speaking of the general aspects of this legislation says: "It is made necessary by a single, over-riding consideration. Recreational use of wildlife refuges, fish hatcheries and game ranges is increasing each year, and the Secretary of the Interior, through the Fish and Wildlife Service, lacks authority to regulate and accommodate this public use. The legislation would assist the Service to control public use and develop necessary facilities for the millions of people already using the refuges for wildlife observation, photography, sight-seeing, picnicking, swimming, fishing, hunting and boating. The legislation makes clear, however, that such recreational use will be secondary to the primary purposes for which each particular area was established, and be limited to recreation compatible to the purposes and functions of the individual areas."

"The legislation would also authorize the Secretary to acquire limited areas of lands adjacent to refuges or fish hatcheries for recreational purposes with appropriated or donated funds. It specifically bans the use of any duck stamp funds for this purpose."

On the surface, this appears to be perfectly sound legislation. Not having seen copies in their present form, this reporter cannot say whether the five dollar user tax will go on all boats 14 feet long or longer, or whether the fee applies only to boats using the areas affected by the proposed act. In the latter case it would seem reasonable enough to charge a fee for using boats on government-owned waters. After all, you have to pay a fee to hunt geese at Mattamuskeet or visit Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. The latter is a national park.

RECOGNITION—North Carolina has gained world wide recognition as a blue marlin fishing center. There are two marlin tournaments scheduled in coming weeks. The first is a local affair headquartered at Morehead City which goes on from June 2 through June 11. This will be followed by the International Blue Marlin Tournament scheduled soon after at Cape Hatteras.

WILDLIFE — Complete records of the waterfowl killed at Lake Mattamuskeet during the past season indicate that a total of 4,040 ducks and geese were killed, an average of 1.05 birds per hunter. This is much lower than the waterfowl take in past years, reflecting the drop-off of duck populations due to drought and other adverse conditions in the northern nesting grounds.

At a press conference in Raleigh recently, Governor Terry Sanford told assembled newsmen that he is completely confident of the ability of the Wildlife Resources Commission and its executive director, Clyde P. Patton, to carry on our wildlife conservation program.

Patton and members of the Commission have been able to do an excellent job of managing the State's wildlife resources for almost fifteen years largely because North Carolina has one of the finest pieces of enabling legislation setting up a wildlife conservation program. Basic features of the enabling act provide for the appointment of commissioners by the Governor for staggered terms of six years for district commissioners and four years for two commissioners — at — large. The same law makes the Commission self-supporting (no tax appropriation from the Legislature) from hunting and fishing license receipts; it gives the Commission authority to spend its own funds under Budget Bureau supervision with State auditing, and also authorized the Commission to employ an executive director who may serve in that capacity as long as the Commission desires, and who must be highly trained in the technical field of wildlife conservation. Clyde Patton has served for more than fourteen years.

These features have given North Carolina a continuing wildlife conservation program that has succeeded in making steady progress over the years based on applying the findings of research, careful handling of finances, and impartial and efficient enforcement of regulations and laws pertaining to hunting and fishing—and more recently—boating safety.

As a result of these factors, North Carolina has gained a nationwide reputation of the quality and popularity of its wildlife conservation program. Much credit for this must go to the men who wrote the original enabling act, and the men who put the law into efficient operation.

One More Day To Get On The Voting Books

Residents of Pitt County who have not gotten their names on the registration books of the precinct in which they live have only one more day to do so before the registration period closes.

Registrars of the county's 25 precincts will be at their respective polling places Saturday for the purpose of registering voters for the Democratic Primary on May 26. The registration period ends at 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

We again urge residents of Pitt County who have not registered in the precincts in which they now live to do so Saturday in order that they will be eligible to vote in the primary later this month. Each citizen has both the right and the responsibility to participate in the election of public officials. In order to do so, however, they must first be properly registered.

Again Sounded Like A Theodore

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy, who has used a phrase or two from Theodore Roosevelt in the past, sounded a little like him this week when he talked to the United Auto Workers.

But Kennedy, in telling the UAW he intended to be an active President and was acting for the general welfare in opposing inflationary price and wage increases, was laying down some of his philosophy about the presidency.

What he said wasn't new, or new for him. But he did manage to pull a lot of pieces together. "I know there are some people who believe the President of the United States should be honorary chairman of a great fraternal organization and confine himself to ceremonial functions."

"I did not run for president of the United States to fulfill that office in that way. I believe it is the business of the President to concern himself with the general welfare."

This sounded like the first Roosevelt who, after leaving the presidency, said: "My view was that every executive officer, and above all every executive officer in high position, was a steward of the people bound actively and affirmatively to do all he could for the people, and not content himself with the negative merit of keeping his talents undamaged in a napkin."

This was not the only resemblance between the two men, both of whom understood the importance of staying in the public eye to be persuasive, even with the help of their families.

In their book—"The Presidency Today"—Edward S. Corwin and Louis W. Koenig in 1956 pointed out that "Roosevelt was the first modern president to exploit fully the possibilities of rallying public opinion behind his policies."

Besides all Kennedy's personal appearances on television, at meetings, conventions, public places, and news conferences, the Kennedy clan stays in news and pictures.

Clinton Rossiter in his book—"The American Presidency"—also in 1956 noted that "with the help of an attractive and active family he (Theodore Roosevelt) put the presidency on the front page of every newspaper in America."

All the presidents since Roosevelt — some more than others — have asserted some presidential leadership for the general welfare, recognizing a responsibility to act.

But it wasn't until 1946—in the Employment Act—that Congress finally said in so many words that the government does have a responsibility for the general welfare. It put most of the responsibility for action on the president.

So, where their predecessors had to assert responsibility under their constitutional powers, explicit or implicit, Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy had congressional blessing for acting for the general welfare.

While business and labor may be angry at Kennedy for butting in on them by telling them to keep down but hasn't, pointed to something else in that 1946 Employment Act.

It even set up a council of economic advisers for him to "formulate and recommend national economic policy to promote employment, production and purchasing power under free competitive enterprise."

In addition, Kennedy's anti-inflation program, vague as it is, was all spelled out in the report of his economic advisers which he presented to Congress last January. It didn't draw much attention at the time.

And no one needed to be surprised by Kennedy's intrusion in the steel dispute even before the economic report came out. His urging both sides in the steel industry to avoid wage and price increases was all foreshadowed in speeches he made in the 1960 campaign, before he became President.

At that time he was saying: "Without resorting to the compulsion of wage or price controls, the President of the United States must actively use the powers of leadership in pursuit of well-defined goals of price stability. For those powers—of reason, moral suasion, and informed public opinion—have by no means been exhausted to date."

As for what he told the UAW—that he intends to be an active President and not just an honorary chairman—his campaign speeches of 1960 abounded in such promises.

Although there is no coordinating movement yet, pressures are growing for a shortening of the work week.

Since the New York construction electricians gained a 25-hour week, other unions in the New York building trades have started shaping similar demands.

Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers Union, has asked that the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act be amended to increase overtime pay from time and a half to double time. The objective is to make overtime prohibitively costly.

WANTS EARLY RETIREMENT
Reuther also advocated reducing the retirement age for men to 62, if desired, under Social Security, and to provide retirement pensions for disabled persons at 55. These provisions would increase Social Security taxes on both employer and employee.

The demand for the shorter work week arises from unemployment and from the fear that automation will create further unemployment. Employers say automation will, in the long run, create more jobs than it eliminates; labor says it will not.

Also stemming from this fear of unemployment are several other demands voiced by various labor groups: that the number of foreign agricultural workers be reduced; and that steps be taken to limit the immigration of waitresses from Ireland, secretaries from England, and chefs from France.

CAN WE GET THE JOB DONE?
There is another curious demand: that the temporary employees agencies be investigated. One complaint is that companies hire temporaries for short periods instead of regular employees at full time. While labor favors a short work-week, it would much prefer fulltime employees loaf through a seven-hour day than to see temporaries work steadily for three or four hours.

The basic question about the shorter work-week is whether America can produce enough for the present standard of living, plus necessary defense materials to keep ahead of Russia, on the short week. Labor says that, with automation, it can. Employers say America can't. Russia, they observe, also has automation.

There is another critical problem. President Kennedy has declared America must "trade or fade" that America must import more and export more.

The United States can import more, as long as our dwindling gold supply holds out. But it seems doubtful if we can export if our pay scales continue to accelerate, as they did in steel, as is recommended they do in nonoperating phases of railroad, and as Reuther will insist they do in auto making.

With high-production costs, we will lose our foreign markets to low-wage competitors. We can reduce costs with more automation, but our automatic devices are copied far more easily than our atomic bomb techniques were. In fact, many of the companies that are now making automated equipment for American plants have offered to do the same for foreign manufacturers.

President Kennedy, in his "trade or fade" talk, urged the strengthening of America's foreign policy for Latin America and nations like Japan to trade with the United States.

Mr. Kennedy should know that Japan, with factory labor around $1 a day, has already taken over a large segment of the U. S. electronic industry, and that Japanese cameras, radios, optical goods, tape recorders, motorcycles and other goods have surpassed the quality of many German products and are underselling American products, even after trans-Pacific shipment and duty, right here in the U.S.A.

REG MANNING

By DON SCHLIENZ

And I Hope It Rains

Sooner or later every father has to face up to the appeal of every small boy, "Can I sleep outdoors tonight?"

This poses no problem when there are no prospects of rain, the mosquitoes aren't roaming, it is neither too hot nor too cold, there is a sleeping bag or reasonable facsimile thereof, and a tent is available.

Those are some of the prerequisites. Another might be that the boy is old enough to tolerate a night in the open without all of the above conditions and without requiring his pappy to share the ordeal.

Now this pappy, as have innumerable others, has slept in hammocks, on steel decks, on straw-filled ticks, on the ground, in the rain, with hungry mosquitoes, on canvas webbing, and on inner-spring mattresses with electric blanket and downy pillows.

The last I like. The other misadventures in sleeping are better forgotten. A couple of weeks ago, on a Friday afternoon, the skies were clear and the air warm and neighborhood mosquitoes had not yet made an appearance.

So the tent was raised in our backyard! pinestraw gathered for a cushioning effect, and a small tarp spread for flooring.

The process was accompanied by much ecstasy on the part of the junior tent-raiser who invited the whole neighborhood to camp out with him that night . . . despite the fact his tent will sleep a maximum of two (uncomfortably).

Only a few investments such as the Federal government plans at Butner in the way of a $17 million hospital are needed to transform a small town into a thriving bustling city of modest proportions. Decision of Washington authorities to locate the mental hospital for prisoners at the southern Granville county town has given high stimulus to the region directly involved.

Uncle Sam discovered the Butner area twenty years ago and spent some $30 million in mushrooming one of the major infantry training camps in the country. With the end of the war and the mad rush to return as quickly as possible to the ways of peace, big government had no further use for the facility. It was sold to the State of North Carolina for a song, a mere three million dollars. Included was a modern hospital which itself represented an outlay of some five to six million dollars; a water system which at that time was the last word in efficiency and equipment; barracks buildings, huge warehouses, paved streets, and even a fire department. Thousands of acres of land passed to State ownership.

Since then, industry has moved in to utilize warehouse properties. Mount Hope Finishing Company is living in several of them. The State modernized the hospitals, established a center for training youthful first offenders and another for alcoholics. Now comes this enormous mental hospital for federal prisoners, employing a staff estimated at several hundred persons.

Here is an example of a thriving town rising within twenty years out of tobacco fields, wooded areas, infestation of snakes, wildlife and the like.

Public institutions, whether State or Federal, and educational facilities, all of a permanent character and to large degree immune to the ebb and flow of the tides of economic currents, are a tremendous asset to any locality. It is coming to be the making of Butner, which ultimately may rival Oxford and Henderson, and smaller communities and cause even populous Durham to lift its eyebrows.

Unfortunately, Henderson has nothing whatever of a public institution built and maintained by government. It would be a tremendous asset if it did have. We know of no way around such a situation.

Several years ago there was speculation about attempting to establish an industrial training school here, but the idea never really caught fire. Actually, according to reports, cold water was thrown upon the talk until it was finally quenched entirely. That is an attitude which must be changed if there shall ever be any sort of public facility in our environs.

What Butner has acquired and is about to get are institutions which literally dropped into its lap without the lifting of a finger in encouragement. It is one of those rare instances where such things come about.

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Nations like people become tired. They cease to be inspired by the need for up-going, for building anew, for out-doing their neighbor, for expansion. Their people count their luxuries and seek stabilization and security. They permit themselves to be governed by clerks while they loiter about in sybaritic delights, directly or vicariously. They read not for knowledge or inspiration, but for the excitement of their emotions which become increasingly more frigid. They love themselves but not their country and in their religion, they substitute ritualism for belief.

There have been many such tired nations in history and they always bring calamity upon themselves. The post-Hasmonean period in Palestine, the post-Macedonian period in Greece, the post-Republican era in Rome, the post-Chien Lung dynasty in China, the post-Catherine the Great period in Russia, the post-Tudor period in Britain.

It does not always mean that a nation dies from weariness, as Spain declined after Ferdinand and Isabella or as China suffered dryrot during the end of the Manchu dynasty. However, if the civilization is affected, if the roots as well as the bloom suffer from weariness, it is altogether possible that the civilization disappears, as the Aztec or the Yucatan civilizations or the land of Khwarizm disappeared.

The American civilization is an amalgam of numerous races, numerous nationalities, varying civilizations. There has been no clear bloodline and no clear intellectual content. It is an assimilation, a melting pot. It is now reaching a separate and distinct characteristic, more positive in music and in technology than in art and literature. The American character is of music, articulated by Gershwin, Copland, Hindemith, Barber and Menotti, is not an imitation of European music; it is distinct. Although most musicians would deny it, it is even nationalistic and Copland uses the American idiom more often than he believes. The popular music of Ernest Ball was not Irish, as the Irish know, just as Stephen Foster's music was not Negro any more than Irving Berlin's came out of the synagogue.

These men were the beginning of something and all three have become American folklore.

Similarly in technology, the American theory has always been to reduce the element of human labor in both production and distribution. This trend has raised numerous social problems, but it eliminated the proletariat and increased the possibility for equality of opportunity. Not only the blue-collar class, the supervisory worker, but the white-collar class, management, usually emerges from what in Europe is regarded as the proletariat. Our workers are, by earning and expenditure, middle class persons, practically on an economic and social level with the bosses.

The very rich are few in number; they play a small role in the affairs of the country. On Election Day, they have only one vote. Those who talk about "The Establishment" talk nonsense. What happened is that intelligence is being recognized for what it is worth; the expert is finding a better niche for himself in the affairs of the nation. If, for instance, such names as John J. McCloy or Lewis D. Baggett appear on the boards of all kinds of organizations, it is because they choose to devote themselves to public service rather than to play a bridge or do what others do who have too much time on their hands.

Nevertheless, a weariness does manifest itself in this country and this is a disease which needs curing. It may be due to many causes and I am not quite sure of the diagnosis. Certainly the development of a large government bureaucracy and of the trend toward bureaucracy in business has something to do with it. Initiative is held down by excessive structure on top of nearly every large business. Education is becoming too formalized by the rule of departmental controls in our colleges and universities.

Opinions In Brief

"A government is not an earner—but merely a spender—a distributor of our taxes. Anything that President Kennedy or any President for that matter, says he will give to the people he must first take from them. In such a process we inevitably grow poorer for the vital point that many miss, is that the money comes from all of us."—East Dubuque (Ill.) Register.

"Is a state board of any value if it passes into the hands of the institutions it was created to advise and supervise?" — The Durham Sun.

"There's only one thing wrong with the younger generation. A lot of us don't belong to it any more."—Anderson (S.C.) Independent.

THE DIVINE PATTERN
The Biblical statement that Christ died for our sins has often mystified Christian believers.

And no wonder. Paul tries to explain it, but even the Apostle Peter comments upon the fact that in the epistles which Paul wrote some things are hard to understand (II Peter 3:15). Yet it is upon the death and resurrection of Christ that the redemptive aspects of the Christian religion are built.

Jesus might have come into the world and lived a helpful life as teacher, healer, and leader. This would have been inspiring and good, but not good enough to furnish the basis for a redemptive gospel. For it was in his death on the cross that Jesus Christ set forth a cosmic pattern to which we must all conform if we would arrive at a knowledge of the truth. Christ was not compelled to go to the cross. He simply put himself aside utterly and accepted the cross as the pattern to which his life must conform and by conforming furnish both a pattern and an example to the world.

The secret of sound living is to be found in sacrifice. The cross of Christ is the greatest example of sacrifice in the world. Furthermore, the fact that the Being who was sacrificed thereon was the divine Son of God makes God's salvation of his creatures possible.

The cross is a pattern to which God invites us to conform our lives.

CARTER A. VAUGHAN'S Exciting Novel of Revolutionary Romance SCOUNDRELS' BRIGADE

Late in the summer of 1777, Hugh Spencer finally came to the conclusion that the British seamen were members of the counterfeiting ring and that they were responsible for passing the false Continental notes into circulation.

His tedious, unending task of charting the reports of his colleagues and himself indicated that sailors stationed on some of Admiral Howe's warships were guilty. At least half of the powerful fleet was anchored in the East River, and when a pattern began to emerge from the haze, it became evident that most of the bills first appeared in the taverns, shops, and mercantile establishments that catered to naval personnel.

Hugh assigned his subordinates to new tasks immediately. August Dale became friendly with rear admirals and senior captains. Benji Flaherty began spending all of his time at the establishments frequented by petty officers, and the Simpson brothers, who had visited the favorite eating and drinking haunts of the common seamen from time to time, now concentrated all of their attention on these taverns.

Hugh and Katie ate most of their meals at inns and catered to junior officers, and Hugh spent most of the daylight hours in the area too, wandering from one place of business to another.

Shop owners and tavern keepers who had suffered losses were now refusing to accept any Continental dollars because it was too difficult for them to distinguish between genuine notes and counterfeit, Hugh learned, and the other members of his unit brought him similar reports.

What puzzled him was that the bills appeared sporadically; new notes circulated for a short time then there was a lull. But the areas occupied by the Americans were less fortunate, according to a letter written by Major Tallmadge that was smuggled into the city. The United States was being inundated with counterfeit bills, he wrote Hugh, and confidence in the money printed by the Continental Congress had dropped to a new low.

Hugh redoubled his efforts to find the men who were making the counterfeit bills, and his colleagues worked feverishly too. Katie, however, was inactive, for Hugh had refused to permit a young, unusually attractive woman to roam through the waterfront district alone. August agreed that she would be courting trouble, so she was forced to spend most of her time at the Duke of Albany Inn and idled away her days there.

She complained bitterly that she was doing no good and should have remained at Black Ox farm, but Hugh refused to reconsider.

his decision, and their relations became increasingly strained.

Personal complications were forgotten on September 28, however, when news reached New York that Washington had been compelled to abandon Philadelphia the previous day and that General Howe had occupied the American capital. The Tories rejoiced and held an impromptu victory parade, warships fired their cannon, and the citizens who had been praying for Washington's success remained behind the locked doors of their homes.

Hugh heard the news shortly after he and Katie finished eating their breakfast, and hurried down to the Tory newspaper office near the Battery to see if he could glean more detailed information. The crowds were so dense that it was late morning by the time he was able to make his way back to the inn, where Katie was waiting for him in their room. She wasted no time observing ordinary civilities.

"A messenger brought you a letter," she said, handing him a small, folded sheet of parchment. "But he was taking a freightful risk coming up here, so I didn't try to question him."

Hugh broke the seal, scanned the brief communication briefly, which he had stopped wearing in order to create the impression that he was harmless. "We're going to your father's suite," he said.

Katie heard the note of excitement in his voice and snatched a scarf from a peg.

August and Dave Simpson were alone in the sitting room. "Where are Benji and Dick?" Hugh asked.

"Down the street, watching the parade," Dave replied.

"Get them."

August was aware of Hugh's agitation too, but controlled his curiosity.

When the entire group had been assembled and the door had been bolted, Hugh took charge crisply. "Katie, pour some brandywine for everyone. If we should be interrupted, it will look as though we're celebrating General Howe's victory."

He opened the letter. "I've heard from Major Tallmadge who doesn't share our gloom. He says the fall of Philadelphia was expected, the British lines are now too thin to be protected, and he predicts that we'll force the redcoats to retreat within six months to a year."

August's expression was dour. "I know very little about military matters, but I think American independence is a lost cause."

"In that case," Hugh replied crisply, "you're excused from taking part in our coming operation. I believe Major Tallmadge's esimate is correct."

"I didn't know we were going to engage in an operation," the old man said cautiously.

"Neither did I until a few moments ago," Hugh glanced at the letter. "Tallmadge has sent us news that he considers more vital than the temporary loss of Philadelphia. Our mystery has been solved."

The others stared at him, and Benji, who had been sitting quietly near the windows, jumped to his feet. "Who has been making the money? Is it people we know, maybe?"

"The counterfeiter," Hugh said, "are officials of the British government who have been acting on direct orders from King George's ministers."

Only August remained unperturbed. "Very clever," he murmured. "Judging by the excellent techniques they've used, I'd guess that the money has been made by men who have been employed by the royal mint."

"Correct. The plates were engraved in London, and the notes are printed by experienced government workers."

Benji was bewildered. "Why would the British government print counterfeit bills? The ministers are rich men. They don't need the money."

Hugh smiled broadly. "They haven't been seeking personal profit. They've been engaging in a campaign more harmful to American liberty than all of General Howe's victories." He became tense again as he explained.

"Their purpose has been a simple one. They've tried to create an atmosphere of despair to induce the people of the United States to lose faith in the Continental Congress. So far they've succeeded, and they've sapped our will to fight. But we're in a position to strike back."

"That's what I like to hear," Benji said eagerly.

Hugh consulted the letter again. "Major Tallmadge writes that American privateers recently captured two small British warships, the Blacksnake and the Morning Star. Both were carrying large quantities of counterfeit money, which they intended to pass on to English agents operating behind our lines."

"That's disgraceful!" Katie said indignantly, sitting erect in her chair.

She was revealing her true sympathies, and Hugh was heartened, but this was not the time to pause for a private word with her. "The notes," he went on, "are being printed right here in New York, and it's no wonder that sailors have been passing some, which they undoubtedly stole. The presses are located on board the H.M.S. Phoenix."

Hugh has reason to feel wildly jealous. The story reaches a climax tomorrow.

'Galaxy' Girls Back In Business

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — The girls of the galaxy show were back in business at the Seattle World's Fair Wednesday night, still semi-nude but not quite so racy.

The show was closed April 25 after Seattle censors said it had been changed from the version they approved. The new format was passed by the Board of Theatrical Supervisors Tuesday. Under the revised format, comedian Jose Duarte spends more time on stage and the bare-breasted girls less.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The mayor of Fairbanks delivered the granddaughter of the mayor of Anchorage Thursday. Fairbanks Mayor Joseph Ribbar, also a physician, officiated at the birth of Kathleen Joyce Sharrock, granddaughter of Mayor and Mrs. George Sharrock of Anchorage. Kathleen's father is a student at the university here.

New Home For Two Walrus

NEW YORK (AP)—Olaf and Ookie have moved into their dream house—a turquoise, robin's egg blue, violet, mauve, pearl gray and sand gray affair complete with swimming pools.

The swimming pools are not a luxury item for this particular couple. Olaf and Ookie happen to be walrus. Their new, $84,000 home took a year to complete at the New York Aquarium at Coney Island.

City officials and trustees of the New York Zoological Society appeared for the grand opening Thursday, as did wealthy Bernard Gimbel, who contributed $25,000 to the project.

Olaf—apparently feeling there's no pool like an old pool—almost didn't make it. He balked at entering the new pool and chased an assistant from the area. A power crane had to be used to hoist the 1,800-pound Walrus into his new home.

The female of the species was more enthused about the quarters. Ookie went into the pool without even a tearful look backward.

Actually, the couple isn't married yet, and aquarium officials—who are proper folk—are keeping them in separate quarters for the time being.

For now, Olaf has three gray seals for company, while Ookie is sharing her section of the home with baby walrus Seeku and Tipuk. There's plenty of spare space in the pool, and aquarium officials hope, once Olaf and Ookie are mated, to fill it with lots more walrus.

Gimbel was pleased. He explained that he spearheaded the initial effort because, at age 77, he still goes swimming daily, "and when it comes to swimming—Olaf, he's all right."

which often means little more than writing, inoffensive, duplicative books and monographs. Newspapers and magazines are too proper in their attitudes and muckraking is looked upon as controversial. The Church has become too humanistic and caters to its members rather than being a dynamic moral force.

These are a few manifestations. There are many more that are symptomatic of national fatigue. The task of the present young Administration is to crack through this disease and to produce a stirring, moving, happy people.

More than 45 million families live in the United States, over six and a half million more than a decade ago.

Academy Award Winning "Spartacus" Opens Today

"Spartacus," the epic film which depicts the momentous episode in history when a rebel army of slaves led by the heroic gladiator Spartacus fought for freedom from Imperial Rome and nearly destroyed that tyrannical power, will open today at the State Theatre.

Winner of 4 Academy Awards, "Spartacus" is headed by a notable cast of seven major stars. Kirk Douglas, Laurence Olivier, Jean Simmons, Tony Curtis, Charles Laughton, Peter Ustinov and John Gavin. The motion picture, made by Bryna Productions for Universal-International release, is one of the costliest ever put on the screen. It was directed by Stanley Kubrick and was scored by Alex North, six-time Academy Award nominee for motion picture music. A key supporting cast of such players as Woody Strode, Nina Foch, Joanna Barnes, John Dall, Charles McGraw and John Ireland also appear in the film along with many thousands of extras who perform in the massive and exciting scenes of rebellion against the power of pagan Rome. Based on a novel which sold 3,000,000 copies in 45 languages, "Spartacus" has been widely acclaimed by critics. Time Magazine called it "a new kind of movie with spiritual vitality and moral force." Life Magazine declared it to be "a mighty tale told large... titanic... gigantic." Look Magazine found the film "brilliant, eye-filling, compassionate, absorbing."

Business Notes

To Retire
BURLINGTON—A Greenville native, E. H. (Pat) Foley, senior vice president of North Carolina National Bank here, has announced his retirement effective June 1.

He will retire under physical disability provisions of the bank's retirement program. Foley, who has headed local operations of the bank since July 1, 1948, will end a 44-year career in banking. He began his career at 18 as a runner for the National Bank of Greenville (now State Bank and Trust Co.).

Foley left Greenville in 1925 to open a unit of Branch Banking and Trust Co. at Warsaw, and in 1930 Branch transferred him to Fayetteville to open a unit there. He served in the Army finance department in 1942 and 1943. From 1945 to 1948 he was with a bank in Richmond, Va. On July 1 of that year he came to Burlington as a vice president of Security National Bank, a predecessor of North Carolina National.

During his service in Burlington the bank's deposits have increased 300 percent, and its staff has grown from nine to its present 52. Foley was first married to Miss Ellie Moonenham of Raleigh, who died in 1935. He married Mrs. Louise May of Burlington in 1951.

Foley has held many offices in the North Carolina Bankers Association. He is a Kiwanian, a Shriner, and an Elk. Active in Front Street Methodist Church here, he has been chairman of the finance commission and a member of the board of trustees of the church.

He was president of the Chamber of Commerce here in 1960 and a director for many years. He is a past president, former director, and past annual drive chairman for the United Fund.

He served as chairman of the Alamance District of Boy Scouts, to climax 36 years of service to Scouting. He has also served as a director of the YMCA and of the Alamance County Cancer Society. He has been president and director of the Alamance County Tuberculosis Association.

Named Agency of Month
 The Greenville Strawn Agency of Franklin Life Insurance Co. has been named the company's General Agency of the Month for April, according to an announcement by James R. Maloy, vice president of Franklin Life.

Maloy visited the agency last week to inform its general agent, J. Frank Strawn, of the achievement.

The recognition was awarded to the agency for having ranked tenth in the entire nation on volume production during April and for ranking ninth in premium income for the same period.

Joins Nationwide
 Joseph C. "Joby" Griffin, former representative for the North Carolina Motor Club in Pitt County, has joined the sales force of the Nationwide Insurance Co. as an agent in the District 7 area.

Griffin has been in the insurance field for four years, and came to Greenville in January 1961 from Williamston. His home is in Edenton.

Griffin is a 1951 graduate of Atlantic Christian College, where he received an AB degree in Science and Physical Education.

After graduation he was signed to a contract by the Milwaukee Braves, and was a pitcher in their organization for six years, and was in spring training with the Milwaukee club in 1954. Prior to returning to North Carolina in 1959, Griffin was in the teaching and coaching profession in Louisiana.

Griffin will continue to live in Greenville, and resides at 2901 Jefferson Drive. He is married to the former Barbara Chaisson of New Orleans, La. and they have four children.

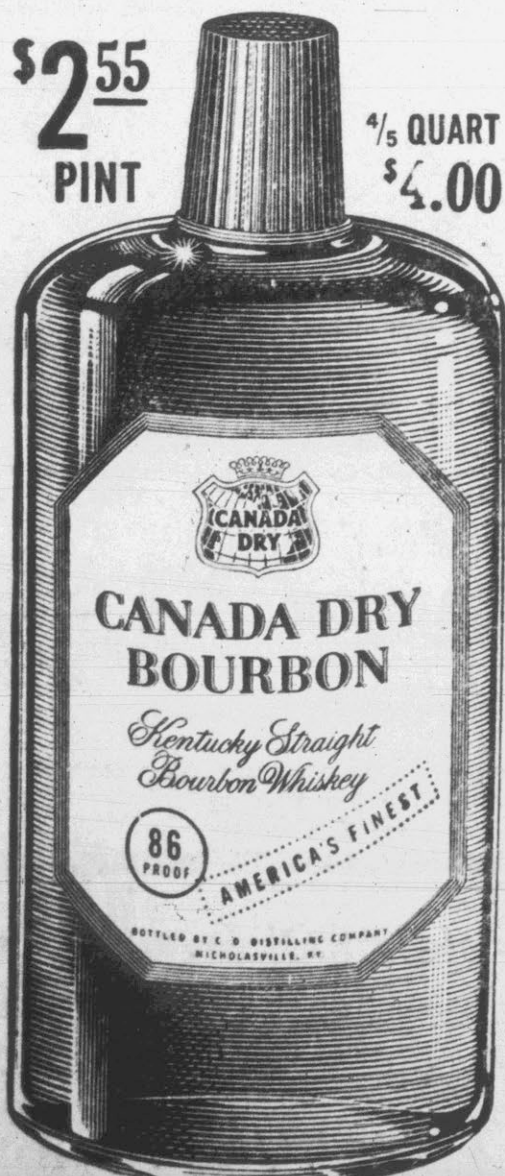

He is a member of the North Carolina Athletic Officials Association and is considered one of the top high school football and basketball officials in the state. He is also a member of the Greenville Toastmasters Club.

Got A Shower, He Asked For It

QUINTON, Okla. (AP)—Ola B. Ross, bachelor bank president in this eastern Oklahoma town, complained he was always a guest, never an honored guest, at wedding and baby showers. Then he happened to mention his prize mare was expecting.

Ross got a shower, complete with bottles, a curry comb, horse shoes and a bale of hay.

12-Year-Old Is Playing Market

By BOB HARING

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Like many other stockholders, Pete Harpster is behind in a falling market. But Pete—who's only 12—figures to hold on for a recovery.

Pete has been trading in stocks since he was eight years old. His parents got him started with five shares of El Paso Natural Gas Co. Now they let him trade as he wishes—with the advice of his broker.

What does he think is behind the stock market decline, which sent prices tumbling again Thursday and dropped the Dow-Jones averages by 7.47?

"President Kennedy," he replied.

Pete explained he thinks President Kennedy frightened investors by forcing the steel industry to rescind its recent price increase. Stockholders are selling out as a result, he said.

Pete hasn't sold and doesn't plan to, although he's behind more than $9 on his $336 portfolio. "I'm waiting for a recovery," he said.

He is confident of an eventual recovery, but cautious about forecasting when. Is now a good time to buy, then? "I'd wait for a little while," Pete said. "It should go down further."

Pete's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Harpster, figure his stock trading has been useful.

"He learns about industry, government, money—stocks are an opening to a number of things," his mother said. "He can't play with toys forever."

Pete scans reports which his father, an accountant, brings home for him, but trading is strictly up to the sixth grader.

Pete's worst loss has been a 3 1/2-share fall in a space stock. A recent purchase of a gas and electric company bolstered his overall position, though.

"It's what's keeping me alive," he said.

"Autograph this: Atlanta, 1922, if you will, please. You remember that, don't you, Mr. Garber?"

"Oh, sure," said spritely Jan Garber, busily autographing as requested a Garber record album cover during intermission at his one-night stand here Thursday. Another patron handed over an album for the autograph with this comment: "We'll never forget dancing to your music in Chicago. That was in the '20s."

Garber smiled graciously from his seat near the bandstand while a Wilson remembered nearly 40 years back when Garber was a Wilson resident and was making a start in the dance-band business.

To a reporter's question, Garber quipped: "Come November, I'll be 68. But I'll tell you one thing. I'm the youngest 68 you ever saw. If you don't believe it, just listen to my music."

And that's what the 200-plus dancers did. They listened to his music. Some were young, most were older, but the Moose Lodge auditorium was mostly vacant seats during Garber's numbers. His spritely personality was apparent in the rhythms and the dancers couldn't sit still.

Garber, 41-year veteran in the dance-band business, was equally impressed with his patrons. "They're the dancingest group I've seen in a long time. I've never been so surprised."

The Indiana native, former Tar Heel and current Shreveport, La., resident, with his vocal daughter, Janis; his saxophonist, Julio Maro; his saxophonist, Freddie Large; the Garber Trio; and the remainder of the ensemble played a 9-1 engagement enroute north to the Richmond, Va. Country Club this weekend.

His lively musical presentation convinced dancers Garber's music is justifiably ranked for the third straight year (by the dance-band poll) the best dance-band rhythms in the country.

Garber, who has made Shreveport his home for the last 35 years, is still a perennial favorite at New Orleans' Roosevelt Hotel. After road trips around the country each year, the Garber ensemble settles down for winter-long stands in New Orleans.

Ranked High In State Contest

CHAPEL HILL—James P. Eatman and Sammy A Mayo of Rose High School are among students receiving honorable mention in the State High School Chemistry Contest of 1962, sponsored by the Extension Division of the University of North Carolina.

Eatman ranked eighth in the list of honorable mention students, while Mayo ranked thirteenth. First, second and third place winners were selected, with 20 students ranking high enough for honorable mention.

A total of 1,591 students from 87 high schools in the state competed.

Tighten Curbs On Cuban Imports

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Treasury further tightened curbs on imports of Cuban goods Thursday, barring traveling Americans from purchasing such items in other countries and bringing them home in their baggage.

The new restriction goes into effect May 20. Some American tourists have been able to bring back Cuban rum or cigars from abroad under an exemption, now being repealed, covering items brought in as baggage for personal use.

Found Before Loss Reported

NEW YORK (AP)—Bernard Korman, a Brooklyn cab driver, discovered a pocketbook in his cab Thursday night containing $3,009.05 and close to $1,000 in French francs. He turned it over to police in Brooklyn's 62nd Precinct.

The officers, who said the money belonged to a woman who is leaving for France today, said Korman showed up with the money before the loss had been reported.

New Commander In West Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—Gen. Paul L. Freeman, new U.S. Army commander in Europe, pledged himself Thursday to work to maintain freedom of West Berlin.

Gen. Freeman was on his first visit to the divided city since taking over his post.

He signed West Berlin's "Golden Book" and heard Mayor Willy Brandt praise the cooperation of German and American officers in Berlin.

An Open Letter To All The Voters In Pitt County

Ayden and Grifton having always been one Township, Grifton petitioned for a division, their Northern boundary line came within one mile of Ayden City Limits, I called together a group of businessmen, I told them that Grifton should have a Township. Ayden countered their petition signed by property owners so they could have some say in establishing a line that would be satisfactory to all concerned. A spokesman presented petition to the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners in their regular meeting with a group of businessmen from Ayden and Grifton present, in the discussion of the issue involved, a committee was named to study the School District and Township lines. They were told by the Chairman to meet back next first Monday at the second meeting with a delegation from Ayden and Grifton present. The Chairman of the Board, stated, the County Auditor had found in checking duplication of School District and Township lines, making them conform county wide, would save the taxpayers thirty five hundred or four thousand dollars per year. With this saving for the taxpayers, Ayden asked that the line be moved back one mile South and East to straighten out line, redistricting of School District and Township lines in the County called for a new registration of all voters.

The redistricting of School District and Township lines in the County carried by a big majority in the primary election giving Grifton and Grimesland new Townships increasing the number from thirteen to fifteen.

Pitt County was the first in the East and third in the state to vote area development, the League of Women voters sent a questionnaire to the candidates for commissioner. Do you Favor a three cents tax levy for area development? I answered in the affirmative, my reason being our tobacco quotas had been cut thirty two percent in two years. Area development carried in Ayden Township by eighty five majority, it carried in the county only thirty four votes, a new sixteen member development commission was created.

Grifton having a vacancy on the Hospital Board, I telephoned the Chairman of the Board, now my opponent, for an appointment he told me to come on. I told him I came in Ivan Bissette's behalf, for an appointment to the Board. When the Hospital Board was created and set up, they gave each Township one board member, Greenville two. When they gave Grifton a Township that left Ayden without a representative on the board, Grimesland a new township was entitled to a board member. He assured me Ayden and Grimesland would get board members, the next board meeting, the appointments went to Walter Stroud, Ayden; Ivan Bissette, Grifton; and Leslie Ellis, Grimesland. I made an appointment to have the three new members sworn in together.

Suffering for Christ's Sake

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Acts 12:1-5; I Peter 4:1-5:14.

In about 44 A. D., Herod Agrippa I, ruler of Judea, persecuted the Christians. "And he killed James the brother of John with the sword."—Acts 12:1-2.

"And when he saw that it pleased the Jews," whose favor he courted, "he proceeded to seize Peter also. And those were the days of unleavened bread."—Acts 12:3.

"And when he had taken him, he put him in prison with a heavy guard, intending after the Passover to bring him forth to the people."—Acts 12:4.

"... prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God" for Peter, and miraculously, he was delivered by an angel.—Acts 12:5-11. GOLDEN TEXT: I Peter 4:16.

Suffering for Christ's Sake

HOW WE MAY LIVE VICTORIOUSLY EVEN WHEN COMPELLED TO SUFFER FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

Scripture—Acts 12:1-5; I Peter 4:1-5:14.

By N. SPEER JONES

AGAIN THIS WEEK our letter "faith, counsel and courage" is the so-called First Epistle of Peter, and it draws much of its inspiration from Peter's own early experiences. The experience cited in our lesson probably occurred in 44 A. D., 14 years after Christ's resurrection. At that time the ruler in Judea was Herod Agrippa I. He was a grandson of Herod the Great, infamous in Biblical history for his massacre of the babes of Bethlehem. Herod Agrippa I was the son of Aristobulus, and the nephew of Herod Antipas (son of Herod the Great), who put to death John the Baptist for his criticism of his marriage to Herodias, wife of his half-brother.

Herod's was not the first persecution, of course; there was that of Sadducees and chief priests studied last week, that incited by the Hellenists (see Acts 7:1-60) and that of Saul of Tarsus, before his conversion. There were to be many more in the succeeding centuries, though their severity was not so great, according to modern historians, as earlier writers would lead us to believe. There is always the question as to why James, one of Christ's closest and most honored followers, should be executed and Peter delivered by God. The answer, of course, lies with God, but we may be sure that it best served His purpose this way.

GOLDEN TEXT
"If one suffers as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but under that name let him glorify God."—I Peter 4:16.

Herod Agrippa was brought up in Rome in extravagance until his debts forced his return to his homeland, Idumea, or Edom, a country south of Palestine. Through his friendship with the Emperor Caligula he enlarged his domains to include those of his uncle, who had been exiled, and when Claudius ascended the throne in 41, his reign extended over all the lands of Herod the Great.

Perhaps both a martyrdom and an organizing were needed at the time to keep the church alive, and God chose the men best-suited to these different tasks. Both, of course, suffered for Christ's sake, each in his own way. Much of our assigned material deals with encouragement to those Christians who suffer for Christ's sake (I Peter 12-19). Suffering is a purification, we are reminded; rarely it embitters, but more often it perfects and sweetens character. There is a wealth of material in this letter of Peter's, including his exhortations in view of special privileges (1:13-2:10), special relations (2:11-4:11) and special trials (4:12-5:11).

Homecoming At Hollywood

An annual event on Mother's Day at the Hollywood Presbyterian Church is Homecoming and Sunday the members of this Church will be greeting friends and former members.

For this occasion, the minister, the Reverend Charles M. Voyles, has chosen "Mother and the Christian Home" for the title of the message he will deliver. Following the morning worship service, a dinner will be served on the church grounds.

Many people have an interest in this 19-year-old organization, and probably at the top of the list is Miss Annie Carroll, who the consolidation of the public school came the abandonment of the school building, and was purchased by Miss Carroll who later presented for a Sunday School meeting place. After twenty-three years as a Sunday School, the group was organized as a church.

The members of this Church issue a warm and cordial invitation to former members and friends to worship with them Sunday and remain for the dinner.

Detroit Honors A Dozen Mothers

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit staged a civic reception for 12 "Mothers of the Year" Thursday, breaking its custom of honoring only one.

It took special qualifications to be among those honored this time — an even dozen children.

And the mothers brought along an even gross of 124 children, to a luncheon at a local hotel.

Altogether, 131 mothers of 12 children were nominated. The association drew lots to reduce the field to a dozen, plus children, and thereby be able to stage its luncheon somewhere other than a mammoth Cobo Hall, which was filled by a foundry show, anyway.

MORE MISSIONARIES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventh-day Adventists world headquarters here reports that it sent out 431 new missionaries last year. The church carries on medical, educational and evangelistic work in 196 countries, employing a total of 48,890 workers.

Sectional Track Meet Here Saturday

Sixteen Schools Competing

About 300 high school athletes are expected to converge on Greenville and Guy Smith Stadium Saturday for the Eastern Sectional Track Meet to decide next weekend's state finalists. The event is set for 1 p.m.

Sixteen Eastern North Carolina high schools, having wound-up regular track and field conference meets, will vie for first and second places in 12 events. Those 24 prep stars will represent Eastern schools in the state meet in Raleigh next Saturday.

Schools scheduled to participate include seven Northeastern Conference teams: Greenville, conference champ Jacksonville, last year's league champ New Bern, Roanoke Rapids, Washington, Elizabeth City and Kinston.

Other schools to be represented include Williamston, Rocky Mount, Edenton, Jones Central of Trenton, Charles Aycock of Pikeville, Perquimans of Hertford, Burgaw, Shallotte and Pamlico Central of Bayboro.

Greenville's Rose High Phantom trackmen place their hopes for state meet berths on William Allen, senior 440-yard dash sprinter, and the four-man mile relay team, including Allen.

Allen took the Northeastern meet's 440 title last weekend and sparked the Phants' mile relay foursome to the conference crown in that event. Other members of the relay team include Fred Baker, Phil Savage and Jimmy Newman.

Jacksonville's Cardinals perhaps bring the strongest track squad into Saturday's sectional meet. The Cards displayed both individual standouts and team depth in unseating New Bern from the NEAC track throne. Greenville's squad, coached by Don Bennett, finished third last weekend.

Another hope for Greenville to enter the state meet stems from Jack Foley's second-place finish in the 220 dash last weekend. His strongest competi-

Jane Sauve Takes Top Honors In Play-off

Jane Sauve of Greenville took top honors in the second annual Ladies Invitational Golf Tournament here yesterday on the third hole of a sudden death playoff with Evelyn Faulker of Kinston.

Both golfers finished the regulation 18-hole medal play round with scores of 81, and went into the sudden death contest to determine the winner of the championship flight.

On the 135-yard third hole Mrs. Faulker hit the green with her tee shot, but Mrs. Sauve overshot the green and her ball landed in the rough behind the green. She chipped back to the putting surface and sank a long putt for a par three. Mrs. Faulker three-putted for a bogie four.

Third place in the championship flight went to May Gravely of Rocky Mount who had an 82.

A total of 178 women golfers from 22 Eastern Carolina towns participated in the tournament over the 6,000-yard, 18-hole course of the Greenville Golf and Country Club. The tournament was played under overcast skies and in cool temperatures that matched the temperament of most of the competitors.

Prizes were awarded for first, second, and third places in each of the 10 flights with first place winners receiving golf bags, second place winners receiving either a wood or umbrella, and third place winners receiving a half dozen golf balls.

Harriette White of Greenville, tournament chairman and defending champion from last year, won the prize for the longest drive from number 9 tee. Gray Clark of Tarboro took honors for closest to the pin on number 3, and Molly Fountain won the prize offered for the ball closest to the pin on number 15.

"It was a good tournament," commented Mrs. White, "and I think all of the girls had a better time than last year even though the weather was better than last year even though it wasn't what we had hoped for."

In addition to Mrs. Sauve, three other Greenville golfers won first places in their flights. Louise Ficklen won the fifth flight with a score of 91, Dardie Longino took honors in the sixth flight and Dot Aldridge won the ninth flight.

Awards to winners in the tournament were presented at a social hour following completion of tournament play.

Championship Flight: Jane Sauve, Greenville, 81; Evelyn Faulker, Kinston, 81; May Gravely, Rocky Mount, 82.

First Flight: Gray Clark, Tarboro, 81; Vivian Collins, Comp Lejeune, 84; Betty Ann Poindexter, Tarboro, 86.

Second Flight: Mary Freeman, Farmville, 87; Jennie June, Camp Lejeune, 91; Dot Croom, Goldsboro, 91.

Third Flight: Kay Kirkman, Jlymouth, 87; Molly Fountain, Tarboro, 89; Annie Bateman, Plymouth, 93.

Fourth Flight: Gloria Nelson, Camp Lejeune, 91; Sister Baldwin, Rocky Mount, 94; Beverly Raskin, Tarboro, 96.

Fifth Flight: Louise Ficklen, Greenville, 91; Bernie Rawl, Greenville, 93; Mabel Ennis, Sanford, 93.

Sixth Flight: Dardie Longino, Greenville; Gloria Lee, Greenville; Cooley Sanders, Morehead City.

Seventh Flight: Yvonne Bath, Kinston; Molly Post, Sanford; Margaret Jordan, Windsor.

Eighth Flight: Majorie Allen, Camp Lejeune; Lucy Allen, Plymouth; Pat Tacktenberg, Goldsboro.

Ninth Flight: Dot Aldridge, Greenville; Virginia Minges, Greenville and Ruggy Gooding, Ayden.

Boone-Bound

Coach Ray Pennington and the East Carolina golfers leave for Boone Monday where they will be competing in the Carolinas Conference Tournament. If the Pirates should win the tourney, they also win the opportunity to represent the conference in the NAIA participation.

During the regular season, the Pirates won nine, tied two, and lost one. The last match of the season was a loss to Pfeiffer College.

East Carolina will be represented by Billy Brodgen, Mike Romaniv, Chappy Bradner, and Rick Sauve.

Winding Up The Season

The East Carolina baseballers wind up their season tomorrow night as they clash with Elon College at 8:00 o'clock in Guy Smith Stadium.

Coach Jim Mallory is expected to start either Lacy West or Earl Boykin on the mound for the Buc's. West is currently holding a 3-2 won-lost record for the year. Boykin has been credited with one victory and three losses.

The Pirates will be seeking revenge for Wednesday's 5-3 defeat at the hands of the Christians on the strength of a five-run seventh inning, sparked by a grand slam home run. Wednesday's victory for Elon marked the first Christian conquest of the Pirates in four seasons.

The Pirates' batting hopes depend largely on the booming bats of Carlton Barnes, Lacy West, and Tom Kidd. Barnes is the team's top hitter as he is currently hitting around the .400 mark.

East Carolina was previously scheduled to play Western Carolina on Monday, however this contest has been called off.

Chemical Plant Blast Kills 9

By CLETE JONES

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—A chemical plant exploded with devastating force near downtown Toledo Thursday, killing at least nine persons and spewing wreckage over a five-block area. The explosion and subsequent fire injured 41 persons and left one employee of the Maumee Chemical Co. unaccounted for. Firemen discovered five of the dead as they dug through the charred debris of the three-story plant Thursday night.

Great clouds of multicolored smoke rolled over the city as chemicals in the plant burned.

Streets were littered with glass from windows shattered by the force of the explosion.

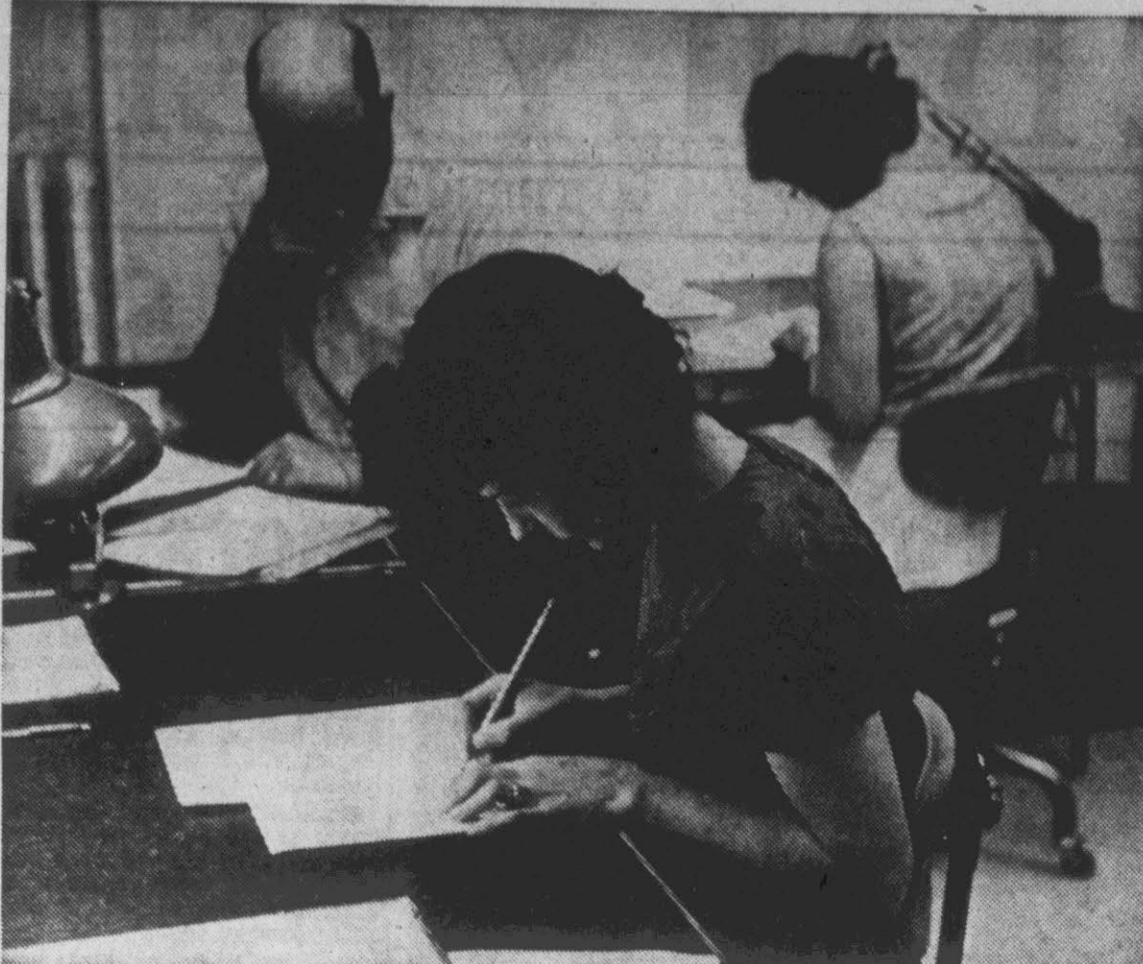

"I'm damned lucky to be alive," commented Wilfred C. Lauer, manager of a grocery store across the street from the plant. The plant was located on the east bank of the Maumee River. The downtown area is on the west bank, less than a quarter mile away.

Lauer said there was a terrific explosion. "The building just collapsed," he added.

In a nearby office building, Charles Bigley, 73, said the blast "just lifted me up. For a minute or two I couldn't breathe."

The blast could have been caused by a lot of things, said R. H. Baldwin, company chief engineer. "We may never know."

Officials declined to estimate the amount of damage.

Would Tell Women They Are Different Band Will Give Lawn Concert

NEW YORK (AP)—A good-looking psychiatrist named Marie N. Robinson thinks it's high time women were told the truth: "They're different from men. They should be educated differently. Their place is in the home. When she says this, sometimes educators shudder, men rush up to insist their wives are as good as they are and women inquire coldly if she also favors keeping them barefoot and pregnant."

"To acknowledge the difference in sex roles doesn't mean to put women back in the kitchen," Dr. Robinson argues.

"But a woman's historical and biological role is in the home. Her job is keeping the tone of that home happy and loving, interpreting members of the family to each other. This is what we women are uniquely designed for."

"A woman who feels deprived if she can't go out to work every day, who says 'I can't do anything, I have four children to take care of' isn't enjoying the rightful role of women. Our contribution is to set the spiritual tone of the household. Let the men go out and make the money."

Slim, brunette Dr. Robinson, wife of a writer and mother of a 15-year-old son, is the author of "The Power of Sexual Surrender," a study of the frigid woman. Besides maintaining a private practice she is active in community health projects and consequently is not one to point a finger at working wives.

"It pleases me to work during the day," she explains. "We women doctors would rather work than play mah jongg. I'm not minimizing the quality of work. But the kind of anxiety we women bring to it."

"Because a woman's major anxiety is loss of love, Dr. Robinson says, she is more concerned about her home than her job."

"I bring more anxiety to family problems or the kind of dinner I'm going to cook than to my outside work."

She thinks hopefully that the trend is slowly spiraling back toward recognizing the difference between the sexes, but on a higher level of understanding.

There's a crying need for women's colleges to stop turning into men's schools, says Dr. Robinson. "Instead, some brave school should stand up and say 'women are different, have God-given gifts, and let's see what a woman's pleasure does come from—chemistry 203 or from keeping the love level high in a family!'"

East Carolina College's Varsity Band, appearing in a lawn concert Sunday, at 5 p.m., will present a program featuring the light, tuneful and familiar in music. The concert will take place near Whitehall Music Hall and will be open to the public.

Barry M. Shank of the faculty will direct the ensemble of student musicians as they play spirited marches, selections from light opera, folk tunes, and other numbers with popular appeal.

Included on the program will be the "January, February March" by Gillis; Beecham's "March for Band"; "This Old Man" by Widdowson, which will feature the percussion section of the band; an arrangement of "Casey Jones" by Selbert and Norton; and "West Side Story" by Bernstein.

Organized in 1959, the Varsity Band is playing this year for the first time under the direction of Mr. Shank, who joined the faculty of the Department of Music last September. An Ohio native, he is a graduate of Oberlin, Ohio, Conservatory and the New England Conservatory in Boston and is a former member of the Birmingham, Alabama, Symphony Orchestra.

Fifty-seven music majors and other student instrumentalists who perform for pleasure were organized into the Varsity group early in the school year. In March the ensemble appeared in concert in the Wright auditorium.

Aluminum Tent For Firefighters

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP)—A new aluminum tent, developed to protect trapped forest fire fighters, uses the same principle found in backyard barbecuing.

The shiny foil reflects heat. The conical shelter, large enough to cover one man, folds to the size of a rolled newspaper and weighs about two pounds.

It can be attached to the firefighter's belt and unrolled when needed. It is lined with fire-resistant cotton and paper backing. Two loops enable the occupant to hold it down in a wind.

There is a slit for ventilation and a flap to cover this opening when the heat is greatest.

The device has been tested experimentally by its developers, the Smokejumpers Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service, with headquarters just west of Missoula.

In a man-made fire, a volunteer at the test center stayed inside the cone for 32 minutes while outside temperatures reached more than 600 degrees. Inside the shelter, temperature reached only 130 degrees.

Other designs of aluminumized garments tested for such use, poncho, blanket, and gown, came in contact with the fire fighter's body and proved unsatisfactory because they conducted heat.

Gasoline Tanks In 8-Alarm Fire

NEW YORK (AP)—An eight-alarm fire in two huge gasoline tanks raged out of control for three hours Thursday in Brooklyn. Explosions shot smoke and flame skyward, making the fire visible for 30 miles. Several firemen suffered minor injuries.

Fire Chief George David said a spark from a workman's torch touched off the fire at the Sinclair Oil Co. storage plant in the Mill Basin district. There are 17 tanks at the plant. The flames spread to a nearby dock operated by the Gulf Oil Co.

Damage was estimated at a million dollars.

Lady Blocking Highway Route

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—A highway is coming through her area, but Mrs. George Woods refuses to vacate her apartment and the building is the only one standing in the section.

She has locked herself in the building with her teenage son and a dog.

Mrs. Woods, about 60, was one of thousands of tenants in the area who were notified by the state last fall they would have to move. Tenants began leaving in February. In March the section's gas, electricity, water and heat were discontinued.

Still, Mrs. Woods hasn't budged. She uses candles for light. She wears extra clothing and fur-trimmed galoshes to keep warm.

Youngsters Will Fire A Rocket

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—Eight youngsters will be chosen at random from spectators and allowed to fire an Army rocket at the Armed Forces Day show at Redstone Arsenal Saturday.

They will push buttons to begin the count down on four rocket motors and to start four rocket-propelled sleds on high speed runs. Graphs, recording thrust developed by the engines, will be given to the children as souvenirs.

Mobile, Ala., has been settled twice. The first site of the city was at Twenty-Seven Mile Bluff, up river from the present location.

Consul's Car Is Destroyed

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—The official car of U.S. Consul Donald Lewis was destroyed by a thrown gasoline bomb in Maracaibo Thursday.

The U.S. Embassy here said it received word the car was parked in front of Lewis' residence when unknown persons threw the bomb into it.

Venezuelan authorities said they suspected extreme leftists were involved.

Will Give Cello Recital At College On Sunday

Donald C. Tracy, cello soloist and faculty member of the department of music at East Carolina College, will be presented by the college department of music, Sunday, May 13, in a recital which will include a program of works by Tartini, Kodaly and Rachmaninoff.

The program will take place at 3 p.m. in McGinnis auditorium and the public is invited to attend.

Mr. Tracy's recital will open with Concerto in D Major by Tartini. He will be accompanied at the piano by Charles Stevens of the college music faculty.

Sonata for unaccompanied Cello, Opus 8, by Zoltan Kodaly, a work for the soloist, will be played by the faculty artist.

As the closing selection for the afternoon, Mr. Tracy has chosen Rachmaninoff's Sonata, Opus 19, with Emily Vinson of Stedman, senior student of piano at East

Plan Dream City For Ellis Island

NEW YORK (AP)—Private buyers have offered $2.1 million for Ellis Island to build a dream city on it.

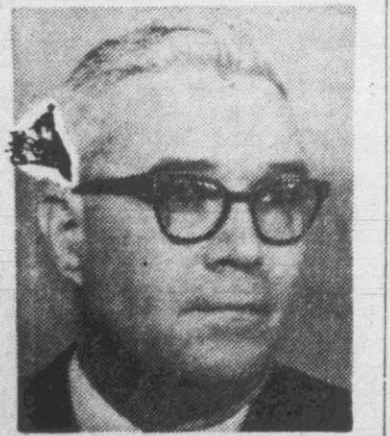

The offer was made Thursday by the Damon-Doudt Corp. to the federal General Services Administration office here.

The island, a former immigration processing center, was put up for sale in September, 1956.

A company spokesman said it was the last commission accepted by the late architect, Frank Lloyd Wright.

"It will be called The Key, because for 20 million immigrants it was the key to a land of freedom and opportunity," he said.

The firm said the city would cost $100 million to build, with financing entirely by private funds.

Club Bringing German Grandparents To Tots

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP)—The German parents of a slain woman are to flow here in July to visit three little granddaughters they have never seen.

The Salem Ruritan Club of Morganton today launched a county-wide drive for $1,800 to defray round trip expenses of Mr. and Mrs. H. Quint of Frankfurt, Germany, whose 23-year-old daughter was shot to death Jan. 28. Another daughter, living in Minnesota, is to meet her parents here and serve as interpreter.

They will visit at the farm home five miles southeast of here, of Mrs. John Marshall Wilson, where the three children of Army Sgt. and Mrs. Ray Alexander Wilson are being cared for by their paternal grandmother.

The younger Mrs. Wilson and her 63-year-old father-in-law were killed in her car by Ralph Nesbit Cook, 25, an unemployed furniture worker, who has been ruled mentally incompetent.

The bodies were discovered near the farmhouse in the car, which had crashed into a willow tree. Investigators first thought the impact had killed the attractive brown-haired mother and her farmer father-in-law, but a doctor discovered they had been shot.

Sgt. Wilson then was stationed in Korea and his wife and children made their home with his parents. Sheriff Ray Sigmon said Cook admitted persuading Mrs. Wilson to drive him to see relatives a few miles away. The father-in-law decided to go along and when an argument developed, Sheriff Sigmon said, Cook shot both with a high-powered rifle. Cook led officers to the death weapon hidden in a henhouse. Sgt. Wilson, whose enlistment soon will expire, flew home for the double funeral and since then has been stationed at New Orleans.

Ruritan-Club officials said that Quint, a factory worker with five years remaining before retirement has been advised of the plans and has agreed to come here with his wife the last two weeks in July. In that period the club plans to take them and their three little granddaughters — Henrietta, 4; Barbara, 3; and Jacquelyn, 17 months, on an extensive tour of western North Carolina's mountain country.

Sgt. Wilson and Miss Maria Quint were married while he was stationed in Germany. The children were born in Texas, where the sergeant formerly was stationed.

"Service Is Our Most Important Product"

August A. Busch, Jr. makes an important announcement to the people of Greenville

A NEW BEER WILL BE INTRODUCED SOON—ONE WHICH MEASURES UP, IN EVERY WAY, TO THE ANHEUSER-BUSCH QUALITY TRADITION

"It's always been tradition here at Anheuser-Busch that we produce nothing but the very finest of beer.

"That's a trust which I inherited from my father and my grandfather before him...and one which I fully intend to keep.

"Our Budweiser® is, we are sure, the very finest lager beer it is possible to produce. It's made from the finest malt and hops. It's naturally carbonated by a slow and costly brewing process.

"Michelob®—another product which we have produced for years—is considered by many to be the finest of all draft beers. Because of its exceptional quality, it is available only in the better bars and in the better restaurants and clubs.

Now a Third Great Beer

"Now we are about to bring our third great beer to this market. A different kind of beer... already popular in neighboring areas. In fact, so extremely popular that we had to postpone its introduction here until production could be properly and carefully expanded for you—in keeping with our tradition of Anheuser-Busch quality.

"The idea for this great new beer came from Bavaria... a land which is known for its energetic, active people, its outdoor sports and festivals, its majestic mountains and clear, cool, invigorating air.

"The type of beer they drink there is different. It has body... yes! And flavor. But it is also light on the tongue... leaves your taste fresh and leaves you feeling fresh, ready to enjoy food or fun.

Fits America's New Way of Living

"We felt that this type of beer would fit well with the new type of living here... the informal 'come-on-over' type of entertaining... the outdoor sports and barbecues... the bowling and golf and 'do-it-yourself' activities which more and more Americans are adopting as they find they have more leisure time.

"We are proud of this new kind of beer... and its outstanding success in market after market where it has already been introduced makes us feel sure you will like it, too. It's as clear and bright as a day in the Alps... and as refreshing. It's light, yet flavorful. It goes well with food—with sports. We feel it is thoroughly in tune with America's new way of living.

"The name is Busch® Bavarian. I hope you'll try it."

BOATING SAFETY IN THE CLASSROOM

In the Virginia seaport of Norfolk spring brings boats into the classroom.

All eighth graders in Norfolk's nine junior high schools are required to take a course in boating safety. "The boats in the classroom serve as a terrific factor in the acquisition of boat safety skills," says Greyson Daughtrey, director of health, physical education and safety for the Norfolk public school system. Daughtrey incorporated the boat safety course in the general program of his department four years ago.

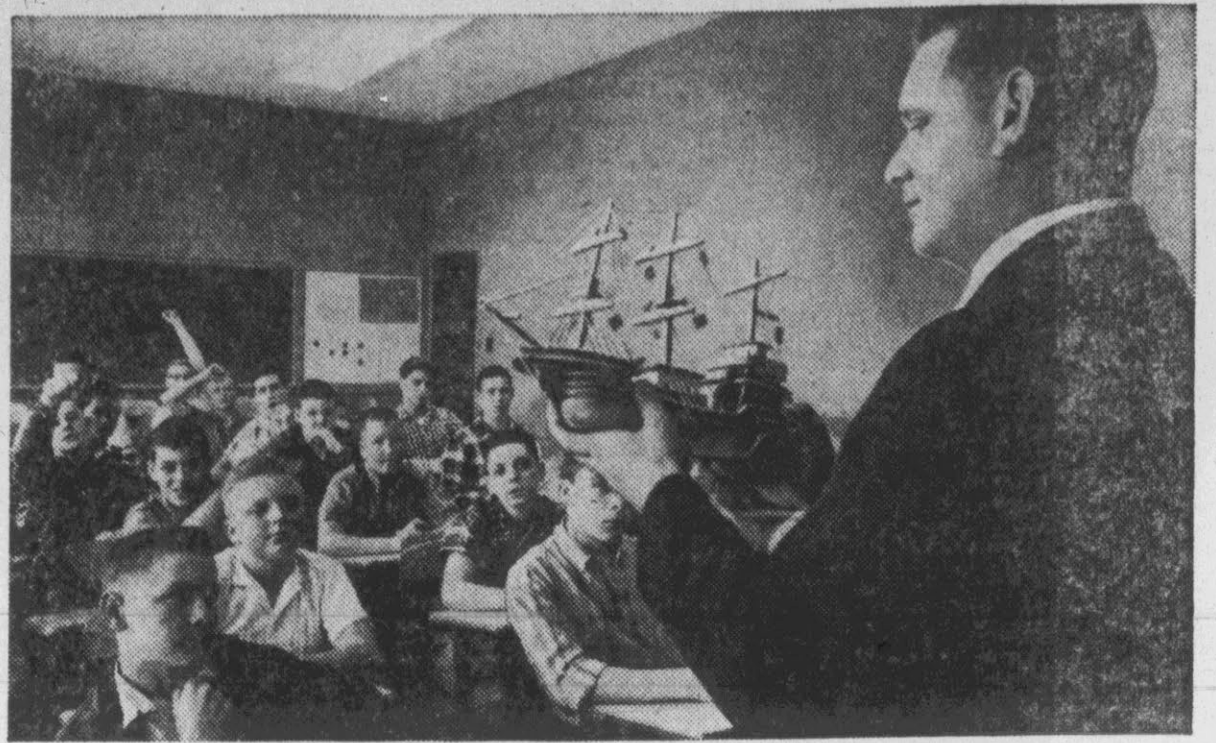

More than 20,000 boys and girls have taken the boat safety course, which carries one hour of instruction daily for three weeks. The textbook is "Outboard Boating Skills," a Norfolk merchant pays for the books, Norfolk boat dealers lend boats, motors and trailers for classroom instruction. The Coast Guard Auxiliary provides guest speakers and slide films on request.

The boating safety course includes instruction in boat handling and seamanship, safety equipment, rules of the road, care of boats and equipment, aids to navigation, weather, storm warnings, barometer and wind observations, and a dozen other topics related to safety afloat.

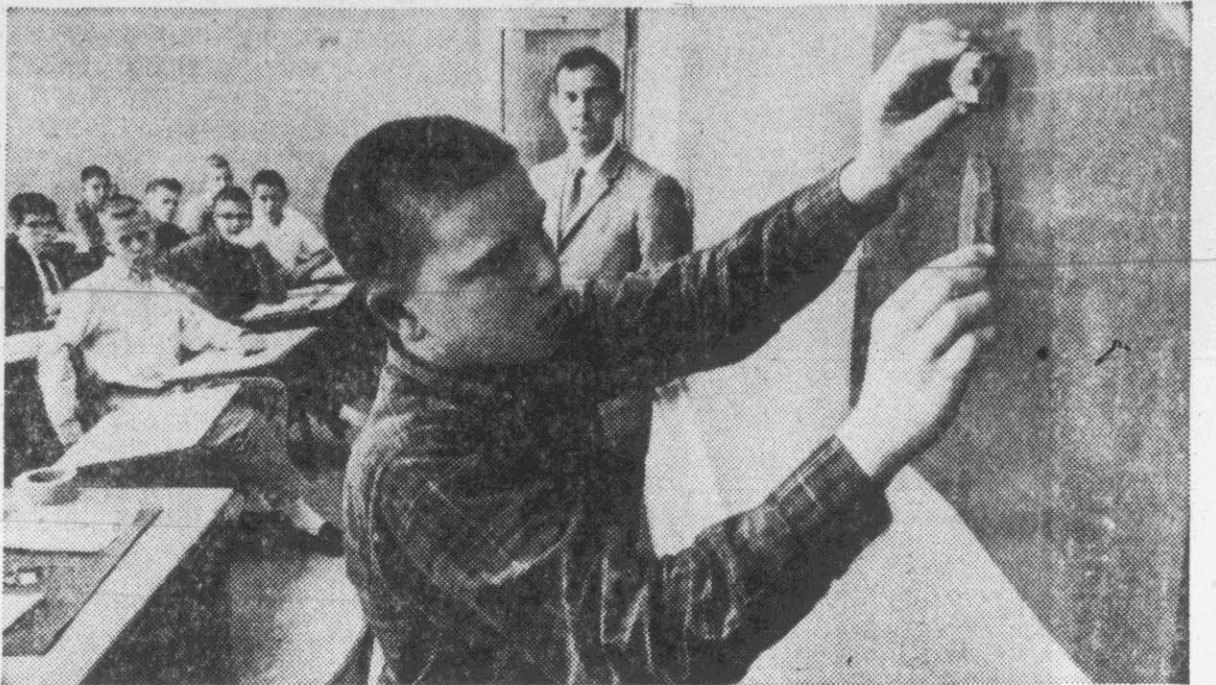

Richard Keeling, 13, says the course "has been awfully valuable to me because in Norfolk, where we are almost surrounded by water, it is important to know how to handle boats safely."

Richard's mother, Mrs. Harry W. Keeling, Jr., says that since he took the course she feels "more at ease when he goes out on boats."

Model of old pirate ship, held by teacher, lends an air of adventure, and the class wishes it could have more hours like this one.

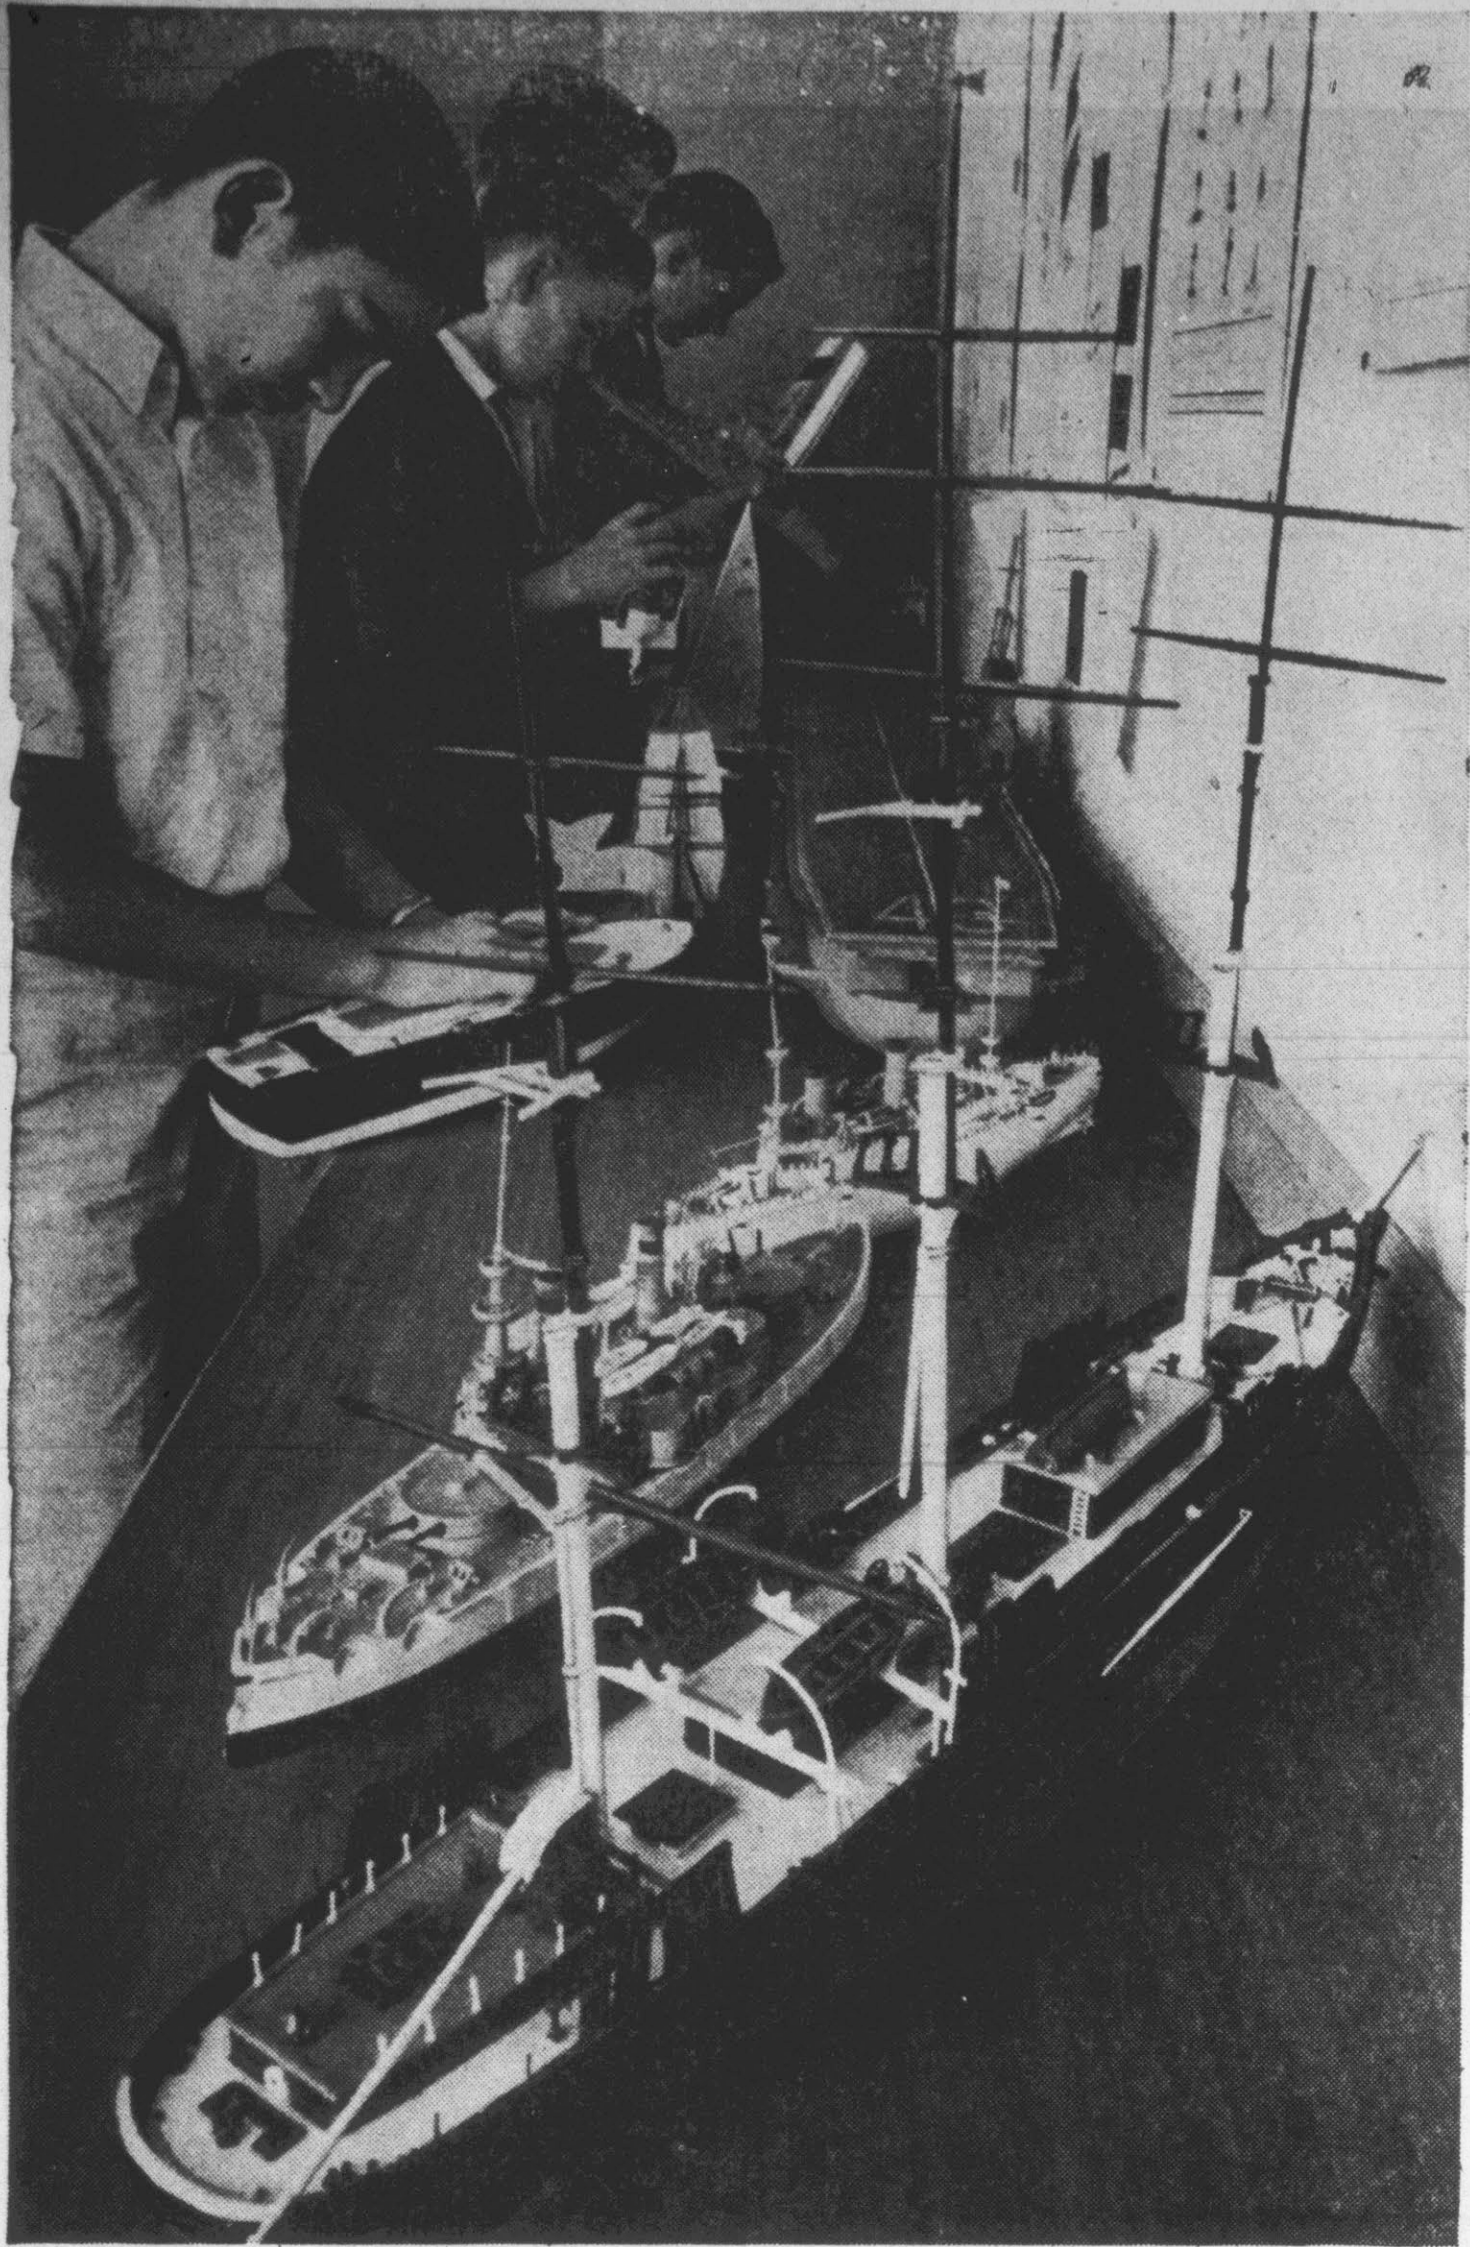

Young Frank Durfee demonstrates his knowledge of magnetic board as instructor Lynwood Manuel looks on. He has well versed his students in rules of the sea and water safety.

Instructor Lynwood Manuel has little trouble in getting the boys' attention while explaining basic parts of motor, and just what makes the boat run.

Final exam is a real breeze as the pupils go for their first cruise on Norfolk's waters. After year in class, these boys and girls feel they have the "knowhow" when it comes to boating and water safety.

YOUNG SALTS. Boat models, furnished by the students, serve as examples for study in boat safety class.

In boat run up onto school grounds, girl students go through "trial runs" before they are ready to test out their sea legs. Standing next to boat is the teacher, Miss Joan Snyder.

"They don't work if you don't blow 'em up," says Bobby Gurley as he helps Becky Jennings adjust her life belt.

Royal Laotian Troops Flee Before Pro-Red Forces

By ANTOINE YARED

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Royal Laotian troops were reported fleeing across the Mekong River into friendly Thailand today as pro-Communist forces seized Houei Sai more than 100 miles beyond the cease-fire line.

The Red rebels drove forward to capture the government outpost on the Mekong border and complete their occupation of the whole of northwest Laos in defiance of a demand from the neutralist ally Prince Souvanna Phouma, to halt their offensive.

The shattering of the year-old truce raised growing concern in the U.S. government, which has been pressuring Prince Boun Oum's anti-Communist Vientiane regime to come to terms with the neutralists and Red-linging Prince Souphanouvong and form a national unity government.

Officials of the Kennedy administration still held hopes the pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces would be checked. But informants in Washington said some U. S. forces conceivably could become involved in Laos if the Reds try to overrun the whole of the jungle kingdom.

The Vientiane defense ministry announced the pro-Communist forces moved into Houei Sai today after overrunning government troops fighting a rearguard action Wednesday.

American military sources said government troops were crossing the river into Thailand Thursday night but added, "We don't know exactly what happened then."

Royal army units had fought a five-hour battle with the onrushing Pathet Lao troops at Tha Fai, 20 miles north of Houei Sai, but failed to check them, the defense ministry reported.

Reports reaching Vientiane indicated Houei Sai, last government outpost in the northwest, was taken up without a fight.

The Pathet Lao, backed and armed by the Soviet Union, North Viet Nam and Red China, surged forward in a lightning offensive that advanced more than 100 miles in five days after the capture of Nam Tha, provincial capital near the Chinese border.

Details on the fall of Houei Sai were meager. There were no reports of government casualties or how many escaped. The royal garrison at Nam Tha totaled 5,000 men but they had proved no match for the rebel onslaught and beat a hasty retreat south.

A government spokesman previously had said Red Chinese and North Vietnamese troops spearheaded the capture of Nam Tha. American sources suggested that the Chinese actually were Laotian tribesmen who live near the Chinese border and speak a Chinese dialect.

The Pathet Lao kept up their advance despite an order from neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma to Prince Souphanouvong, his half-brother, to pull his forces back to the cease-fire line established May 3, 1951. Souvanna, the choice of the major powers to head a coalition government, is in France for medical treatment and the wedding of a daughter.

So far there has been no public reaction to Souvanna's order from Souphanouvong. The Red prince earlier this week was reported in Sam Neua province, in northeast Laos, suffering from an eye infection.

The rebel advance to Thailand's northeast frontier was certain to arouse grave new fears in that pro-Western kingdom and to bring new demands for action by the United States or the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization to check the pro-Communist Laotians.

The Thai government has said repeatedly that a Communist takeover in Laos would be a ma-jeor threat to Thailand, which the United States is pledged to defend against Communist aggression.

Communist control of the Laotian side of the Mekong is certain to be followed by an increase of Communist infiltrators into Thailand's northeast provinces. The Bangkok government for the past year has been waging a vigorous hunt for Communist subversives there and has made a number of arrests.

Malcolm MacDonald, British co-chairman of the Geneva international conference on Laos, flew to Bangkok Thursday after a six-day stay in Laos. He said he hoped the rival Laotian leaders would be able to overcome "an obvious difficult political and military situation" created by the fresh Communist attacks.

The British diplomat said he had very frank and full discussions with pro-Communist, neutralist and pro-Western factions and expressed confidence they would get together soon for new talks on formation of a coalition government.

In Tokyo, the Vientiane government's ambassador to Japan, Outhong Souvannavong, said that he hoped the rebel attacks would make the United States revise its support for a coalition under Prince Souvanna Phouma.

Cunard Queen In Cruise Market

LIVERPOOL, England (AP)—The Cunard Line announced today it is switching the Queen Elizabeth from the transatlantic run to Bahama cruising next winter.

Cunard officials said they hope to cash in on the dollar-earning cruise market because of dwindling passenger traffic on the North Atlantic during the winter and keener competition from other European shipping lines.

The 83,000-ton liner will make three, five-day cruises from New York to Nassau in February and March with a two-day stay in the Bahamas. Passenger capacity will be reduced from the normal 2,200 to not more than 1,300.

Ready To Work On Cold Vaccine

CHICAGO (AP)—Medical research into the common cold has progressed to the point where efforts can be made to develop an effective vaccine, medical scientists have reported.

In an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, a group of Philadelphia researchers said a virus called coryzavirus causes cold symptoms in a fairly large percentage of sufferers.

This new discovery coupled with knowledge of other cold inducing viruses "permits intelligent selection of virus strains for vaccines which, if successful, may control a reasonable portion of the respiratory diseases spectrum," the journal article said.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The indoor-outdoor living theme continues to get the full treatment in newly built homes. Architects and builders report no lessening of interest in the trend toward designs which enable home owners to enjoy outdoor living without leaving their own property.

Home improvement contractors say that a large percentage of alterations and additions under way and in the planning stage are concerned with the outdoors. Across the country, the open-air way of American life is reflected in more and more outdoor cooking and eating centers, patios, pools, gardens and game areas. Whether modest or elaborate, the outdoor living center requires proper lighting if it is to be enjoyed full time, day and night.

Functional outdoor lighting extends the living space of the home by turning outside areas into night-time recreation spots. Lighting also brings the beauty of the outdoors inside. Instead of becoming black mirrors after sundown, windows open up vistas of attractive lawn foliage, gardens, trellises and pathways.

Outdoor fixtures and equipment can be obtained in a wide variety of designs. Weather-proof connections, flexible underground cables and many other electrical items designed for the outdoors are readily available. For year-round use, outdoor fixtures may be permanently installed on exterior walls, under eaves or on posts. Available for seasonal use are portable fixtures, such as spiked yard lights which are easily moved from one spot to another, spotlights for placement in tree forks or under shrubbery, umbrella-type fixtures for picnic tables and even lily-pad fixtures for ponds.

Regardless of available outdoor living space or the amount of lighting, the American Home Lighting Institute suggests these

- basic principles to follow:
1. Avoid "whitewashing" the entire backyard or garden in imitation of daylight. Use contrasts of light and shade by accenting points of interest, such as a well-shaped tree, a rock garden or a piece of statuary.
 2. Use indirect light reflected from white exterior walls, fences or driveway to provide much of the general illumination.
 3. Conceal light sources so that the lighted object and not the source itself is seen. Use shades or hide fixtures behind shrubbery or reflectors.
 4. Use colored lighting sparingly but effectively. Vibrant colors are often effective in pools or fountains. Flower beds look best under white light. Green adds depth and enhances grass and foliage. Red lends a campfire quality. Blue light tones down warm colors but usually gives an unnatural light and is unsatisfactory. Yellow, insect-repellent bulbs are appropriate for porches, patios, terraces and at the cooking or eating area.

Receive Report On Convention

Greenville Optimists, at their meeting this week, heard a report from the local club's three-man delegation to the Optimist District 18 convention in Durham last weekend.

Foremost among announcements from the delegation was the formal election of Greenville Optimist Walter R. Whitehurst as one of nine lieutenant governors for North Carolina Optimist zones during 1962-63.

Whitehurst, nominated as Zone 9's choice at the zone meeting recently, will serve as chief executive for the zone which includes Optimist clubs in Greenville, Rocky Mount, Goldsboro and Wilson. New clubs expected chartered soon in Elizabeth City and Tarboro may be added to Whitehurst's zone.

The Greenville delegation, including Whitehurst, Greenville president-elect E. R. (Pete) Carraway and secretary-treasurer-elect Johnny May. Each of the three reported the convention valuable in instruction regarding administrative programs in the Optimist organization.

Prime business of the Durham meeting included election of Dr. David R. (Rocky) Stroud of Rocky Mount as District 18 governor. He succeeds T. Earl Yarbrough of Charlotte, governor during the Optimists' "Stay-in-School" program inaugurated with Gov. Sanford's endorsement a year ago to help curb high school drop-outs in North Carolina.

Another highlight of the convention was the appearance of Gov. Sanford to present a special award to a Charlotte news-writer for his origination of the "Stay-in-School" idea.

JCs Pay Share In Planning Cost For New Center

Jaycees last night appropriated $212.75 as its share of planning cost for a proposed community building planned for the Greene Springs Park area.

Jack Whichard explained that each participating civic club is being asked to provide $1.85 per member to provide funds for preliminary architectural work.

The money appropriated represented Greenville's share. Jimmy Smith III announced he was resigning from the club's board of directors since he must report for active army duty.

President Leon Moore said David Reid has been appointed to fill the year remaining of Smith's term.

F. A. Williams, Sr. Dies In Fayetteville

FAIRMONT—Fred A. Williams, Sr., 65, died at Veterans Hospital in Fayetteville Thursday morning following two years of illness.

Funeral services will be held at the Prevatte Funeral Chapel in Fairmont Saturday at 11 a.m. with the Rev. Robert Snell of Lumberton officiating, assisted by the Rev. Thomas L. Rich Jr. of Fairmont. Burial will be in Floyd Memorial Cemetery.

A native of Vanceboro, he had lived in Fairmont for the past seven years where he was connected with the tobacco market. He was a veteran of World War I and a member of the Scottish Rite of the New Bern District.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bertha Jenkins Williams; two sons, F. A. Williams Jr. of Rockaway, N. J. and Billy W. Williams of Jacksonville, Fla.; a daughter, Mrs. Frances Carr of Nashville, Tenn.; and two sisters, Mrs. Lucy Gatlin of Charlotte and Mrs. Emerson Worthington of Ayden.

ALGIERS (AP)—Even more Secret Army Organization slaying of Moslem women and girls was feared today following the throat slitting of a European mother and daughter.

European terrorists slaughtered 18 Moslem women and a young girl in Algeria Thursday after Moslems were blamed for the slaying of a pregnant European woman in Oras on Wednesday.

But Algerian Nationalist leaders still kept the Moslem masses under control, and as yet there was not outbreak from that side.

During the bloody European rampage, the bodies of Adrian Push, 45, and her 18-year-old daughter, Colette, were found with their throats cut in a villa across the street from government headquarters in Bida, outside Algiers. Their slayings were blamed on Moslems, and officials feared that this would incite the Secret Army to furious new attacks on Moslem women and girls.

Terrorist attacks took 55 lives—all but nine of them Moslem—in the North African territory Thursday. Another 28 persons, 23 of them Moslems, were wounded. Terrorist attacks were concentrated in the Oran and Algiers area, strongholds of the outlawed Secret Army's clandestine war to block Algerian independence and keep Algeria French.

French security forces continued their so-far futile efforts to check the terrorism.

Police said a two-day, house-to-house check of a neighborhood in Algiers resulted in 359 persons being taken in for questioning and the arrest of 12 Europeans. The police said they confiscated 233 assorted firearms.

Minuteman Is Again A Success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A Minuteman missile thundered out of an underground launching pit today and propelled its warhead 3,600 miles on a successful test flight.

The flight put the solid-fuel intercontinental range rocket back on the winning track. The last Minuteman fired here exploded because of first-stage engine malfunction shortly after clearing the silo.

That failure ended a string of seven straight successes for Minuteman.

The Air Force announced success of today's mission. It listed major objectives as over-all missile performance and operation of guidance, warhead and other systems.

The missile contained all elements except nuclear payload of the pushbutton weapon which will be assigned the first Minuteman wing at Malmstrom Air Force Base, Mont., next fall.

Hundreds of Minuteman missiles will be placed in protected silos like that used today. A control center miles away will be able to launch them on the push of a button in case of attack.

The first recorded selche was on Lake Geneva in 1730. It was noted by a Swiss engineer, Fatio de Duillier.

Church Buys Bus For Members

Grace Free Will Baptist Church has purchased a bus to be used for transporting members to Sunday School and church services.

The Rev. Rashie Kennedy said the bus will begin operating this Sunday and will run each Sunday thereafter.

Those desiring rides may call Frank Wagner, PL 8-1714 or Frank Smith, PL 2-7400.

Persons desiring rides to the revival next week should also call the minister said.

Rev. Kennedy said the vehicle is a regular school bus type and seats approximately 40.

Bids on equipment for Pitt Memorial Hospital will be reviewed by the Board of Trustees on Tuesday evening, Hospital Administrator C. D. Ward said today.

Bids were received by the hospital Executive Committee on Friday, May 4, at the Pitt County Courthouse.

ANOTHER BIG FIRST AT THE STATE!

These are the great performances that breathe fire and life into the human drama of "SPARTACUS"!

KIRK DOUGLAS
as SPARTACUS, as fierce in his dream of freedom as he was gentle in his love!

LAURENCE OLIVIER
the General, dedicated to master Rome, to destroy Spartacus and possess his woman!

JEAN SIMMONS
the woman whose love inspired a rebellion... whose arms were Spartacus' refuge!

CHARLES LAUGHTON
the Roman Senator, who ruled with wisdom and courage... bribery and blackmail!

PETER USTINOV
a man of many talents... who could train a gladiator, steal a woman... betray an Empire!

JOHN GAVIN
as Caesar... skilled in using friend against friend... to further his own ambitions!

TONY CURTIS
...as Antoninus, the rebel who turned his back on luxury to take up the sword!

SPARTACUS
A TRUE STORY... OF HUMAN DESIRES SO STRONG
THEY CHANGED THE COURSE OF HISTORY... OF A REBELLION THAT SHOOK A CIVILIZATION... AND OF A LOVE THAT DEFIED THE WORLD!...
