Weather Dubious For Mercury Flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Atlantic weather conditions were far from desirable today, but Project Mercury officials pushed ahead with plans to launch astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter into orbit on Saturday in his Aurora 7 craft.

terminated after one orbit. Continuation of this condition through Saturday would make observation of his parachute re-entry difficult. Partly cloudy skies were reported over the second orbit recovery zone 500 miles south of Bermuda, while weather was reported good in the third orbit drop zone near Grand Turk Island, 800 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral.

tion for his pioneering orbital flight last Feb. 20, Carpenter varies his conditioning. He favors a workout on the trampoline, a swim, or a session of weight lifting. A final dress rehearsal of the flight, which will follow Glenn's flight plan, was on schedule today with Carpenter in the Aurora 7 for a simulated flight from lift-off to recovery.

Bonner For Airport To Serve Area

Says Central, Trunkline Service Is Only Real Answer For East

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor Rep. Herbert C. Bonner expressed the hope that Eastern North Carolina cities "can get together and build an airport" at the Pierce Fellowship Dinner yesterday.

Marines Land, Head For Thailand Border Positions

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—U.S. Marines, carrying a bristling array of bazookas and other arms, moved up to Thailand's border with Communist-weakened Laos today.

Pitt Delegation At Demo Rally

RALEIGH (AP)—A platform calling for "fair representation in the General Assembly" and opposing any additional increase in state taxes was proposed to the State Democratic Convention today.

The Democrats assembled in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium at noon for their biennial convocation after delegates had met in 11 congressional caucuses.

They heard Rep. Harold D. Cooley, dean of the state's delegation in Congress, praise the leadership of President Kennedy and Gov. Terry Sanford and lambast Republicans in his keynote address.

Woodrow W. Wooten of Falkland, former Pitt County Commissioner, was elected president of the club, succeeding J. Beverly Congelton of Stokes. Wooten's election followed traditional policy of moving the vice presidency into the presidency the following year.

Political dignitaries attending the affair, in addition to Bonner and Woodard, included Speaker of the House Joe Hunt of Greensboro; Dr. Henry Jordan, former State Highway Commissioner; and brother of Sen. B. Everett Jordan; Roger Jackson, assistant highway commissioner; "Bruno" Mangum of the State ASCS organization in Raleigh; and Denny Moore, assistant State Budget Director.

Others included State Rep. Wayland Sermons of Beaufort County, Frank M. Wooten of Pitt; East Carolina College President Leo W. Jenkins, Sen. Sam Ervin's administrative assistant, Jack Spain; Bonner's aide, Henry Oglesby; Bill McIntyre, executive director of the N.C. Bakery Council, and Wayne

Mattamuskeet Range Is Dead Issue, Says Bonner

Use of the Lake Mattamuskeet area as an Air Force bombing range site is "dead as a do, do," Rep. Herbert C. Bonner said yesterday.

He was commenting on a Goldsboro News-Argus report that the 4th Tactical Fighter Wing could be moved from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base because it has been unable to locate a bombing range in Eastern North Carolina.

However, the Air Force said in Washington later in the day that it had no plans for moving the fighter wing from Seymour Johnson.

Floor Plans Of Civic Center Building Shown

Basic floor plans for a proposed $125,000 Greenville Civic Center were reviewed at a Tuesday night meeting by members of the project's steering committee.

With 14 of 18 members attending, representatives of the eight Greenville civic organizations participating in the project also signed a corporation charter prepared by James and Speight, Greenville legal firm.

W. C. Eagles, American Legion representative and chairman of the Building Committee, submitted the floor plan in blueprint form. He said the plan submitted was the result of combination of desirable features of at least 10 varying plans.

The plans were prepared after the Finance Committee engineered a campaign for securing appropriations from the eight organizations as a retainer fee of $1,000 for architectural services.

In commenting on Tuesday's meeting, Steering Committee Chairman Ed Rawl said: "The committee was very excited about progress of the finance and building committees. We hope that both complete plans will be available for public announcement in the near future."

Pitt Delegation At Demo Rally

RALEIGH—Pitt County's 42-vote delegation to the State Democratic Convention was on hand here today to hear a proposed party platform praising Gov. Sanford's quality education drive and calling for equal legislative representation in the General Assembly.

Pitt Chairman J. Henry Harrell headed the county delegation that met with Democrats from 14 other Eastern counties in a 10 a.m. caucus of the First Congressional District at Memorial Auditorium.

The Pitt delegates had been instructed by last Saturday's county convention to support candidates for membership on four committees who were elected from the convention floor on the strength of a resolution introduced by Hugh Winslow and unanimously approved.

Selected by the county convention for membership on the committees were: Congressional District Committee: C. D. Langston of Winterville and Hugh Winslow of Greenville.

Judicial District Committee: Robert D. Rouse Jr. of Farmville, Clifton W. Everett of Bethel and W. H. Watson of Greenville.

What Is Janet Jagan Really Like? Not Red In Youth; How About Now?

Janet Jagan, wife of British Guiana's Marxist premier, is the most powerful woman in the Caribbean. As a girl she liked sports and dates; she didn't care about politics. But was she a budding Communist? Is she one now? Betty Reef spent two days with this strange and curious woman, probing for the answer. Second of two articles.

By BETTY REEF
GEORGETOWN, British Guiana — (WNS)—What is Mrs. Janet Jagan, the controversial woman at the storm center of Guianese politics, really like?

Who is this 42-year-old former Chicagoan who's said to rule the roost—and call the political turns—of British Guiana's left-dealing Dr. Cheddi Jagan?

By her account, Janet Jagan is not the product of campus cadres of the Young Communist League—though this is the belief widely held.

"I didn't care about politics when I was young," she said. She sat at her grubby desk in the ramshackle wooden building which houses Guiana's ruling People's Progressive Party, the political organization which she runs as general secretary. This was the first personal interview she granted since last summer's hotly fought election made her husband premier.

Though her husband's socialist budget and stringent tax plan had provoked strikes, fires and riot, Mrs. Jagan was calm and chatty.

"At school," she said, "I went in for competitive swimming, ice skating, fencing, archery. I was once extremely thin—look at me now!" She joked with an abashed glance at her bulging midriff. (Guianese gossip has had her pregnant for at least two years.)

She giggled unexpectedly, the obsequious little laugh that punctuates her talk. "I used to be terribly athletic. You can't do the sports I like here. Did you see the coastline as you flew in? It's all mud."

I had seen the marshy coast along South America's northern rim from the window of the British West Indian Airways plane that connects B. G. with Britain's other soon-to-be-independent colonies in the Caribbean. From the air I had marveled at hundreds of miles of forest, tight and green as broccoli, lying largely unexplored behind the sugar-producing coastal marshes.

It was for this equatorial little known land that a middle-class American girl had abandoned U. S. citizenship, girlhood friends and family.

Is she a trained Communist agent? Did she marry a fledgling East Indian dentist so she could push him to leadership of the next Marxist state in America's backyard?

To hear her spout praises of Fidel and Cuba, one could believe so.

Yet her simple directness, her seeming insecurity, her penchant for indiscreet affairs of the heart, her dotting permissiveness with her children and her "normal" early life would belie it.

Janet Rosenberg was born in Chicago in 1920, the younger of two children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rosenberg. Her father, employed by a plumbing and heating business, earned enough to provide the usual amenities, including much-detested piano lessons for Janet.

As a teen-ager she spent most of her free time on sports, and though she enjoyed dating, it was limited because "my mother always wanted me home early." She was a sociable girl with little fondness for studies. She maintained only a C average until the family moved to Detroit.

As a freshman at the University of Detroit, she discovered a latent interest in chemistry and sciences. Suddenly she became an A student.

"I was the only Jewish person on the campus of a Jesuit college," she related, "and I felt ill at ease—a little out of thing, like all the other non-Catholics there."

In this atmosphere she associated herself with others in the same boat; a Chinese girl student and a Negro footballer. In pursuit of a better social life she transferred to Wayne University, then to Michigan State in Lansing. She dated one boy for a year.

"It's funny that now I can't even remember his name," she mused. "That's one of my big failings, remembering names. It might be a political handicap except that in the party we have the socialist custom of calling everybody Comrade. That saves me," she said, laughing. Her smile transforms her rather plain features and displays a perfect set of teeth, which have never required her dentist husband's care.

She left Michigan State to join the war effort as an Army nurse. She enrolled at Chicago's Cook County School of Nursing. A year later, in January, 1943, she met Cheddi Jagan at a WAC friend's farewell party. Slight, handsome, vivacious and charming, he was in his last year at dental school. His dark skin made him attractive to Janet, whose sympathies automatically go to anyone who suffers social ostracism.

By summer they were married, though her parents opposed the relationship. She kept the city hall wedding a secret for a while. Cheddi finished school and left for his native British Guiana while his bride took a job as a lab technician at the University of Chicago.

Around Christmas, she joined her husband in Georgetown. With his wife as his nurse-dental assistant, Dr. Jagan soon built up the best-paying practice in town. His low fees attracted other East Indian Guianese. "When my parents realized that I wasn't starving to death in a jungle, they accepted my marriage and grew to like Cheddi," Mrs. Jagan said. "My mother now adores him."

She described her mother as good-looking and well-groomed, with a lot of life and a love of travel.

Mrs. Jagan has inherited the energy and love of travel but not the clothes sense. Her appearance—big dangling earrings and a long pony tail—is the butt of B. G. jokes. "Her clothes always look as though some Indian seamstress cut them out with a buzz saw" is a typical comment. For reasons not clear, Mr. and Mrs. Rosenberg moved to California shortly after Janet went to B. G., and changed their name to Roberts. This happened long before the Julius and Ethel Rosenberg treason case, with which West Indians are wont to associate Janet Jagan. There is no evidence to bear out the popular Guianese rumor that Julius Rosenberg was her uncle.

Acquaintances say her parents ran into business difficulties and anti-Semitism, which accounts for the name change. This may also have accentuated her personal leaning toward sufferers from discrimination.

Cheddi's busy practice left him dissatisfied; dentistry did not offer the challenges of medicine. He found an outlet in politics, said his wife.

"About a year and a half after I came here, my husband got involved in a strike on Plantation Rose Hall. It's customary for professional people to be active in trade unions they don't belong to. The workers asked us to come up there. I saw the most horrifying conditions."

"Dr. Jagan and I became more and more involved with sugar workers' problems. I wrote little articles for weeklies here, mostly about housing and sanitation, because I didn't know much else then. We started a political action committee with Joxelyn Hubbard, now Ministry of Trade, and Ashton Chase, now president of the Senate. We issued a fortnightly paper. This was the nucleus of what became the People's Progressive Party."

In 1947 Mr. and Mrs. Jagan both ran for the legislature. She lost. He won. From 1947 to 1950, he built his political reputation as a "one-man opposition to the big shots."

She began to dress in sari and dhoti, visiting East Indians on sugar estate villages, attending their festivals, eating and sleeping in their homes, exhorting them to membership in the newly formed PPP to fight for the end of B. G.'s colonial status and for economic reforms. She and her husband and their party cohorts joined in strikes, called protest marches, became complete political dissidents. And they met success as people rallied round them.

Their economic policies were socialist, they said, and they considered themselves Marxists rather than communists. Yet Cheddi Jagan made Russia his example and model.

Janet worked hard, dashing off into wilderness or villages whenever the party required it, faithfully answering correspondence, composing notices, writing articles and memoranda.

While her flamboyant husband did most of the talking, she did most of the party work. As his dress grew more fastidious and elegant, hers grew more careless. They went almost nowhere together except on party business, and Dr. Jagan had little time for affectionate home life. His wife sought companionship and appreciation elsewhere from time to time, setting Georgetown, with its lack of other distractions, buzzing with talk.

She adapted herself to a rough life in the country villages, even got used to the spicy East Indian curries which once disgusted her so much that she would sneak off to a snack bar for a cheese sandwich or a tin of salmon so she wouldn't have to partake of the Jagan family dinners.

She won a Town Council seat for herself in 1951, was elected to the B. G. House of Assembly in 1953 and became deputy speaker. That same year she went to Denmark as delegate to the Congress of International Women's Organizations.

She was becoming a personage in her own right, and she enjoyed the sensation. The British colonial government arrested her later that year for holding an illegal meeting on a sugar plantation. She was fined $250 for breach of the emergency regulations clamped down on anti-colonial demonstrations. She was ordered not to leave Georgetown again, without permission and made to report twice a week to the police.

The Jagans' house was searched periodically until the police finally planned the goods on them—a copy of a secret police riot manual found (she says "planted") in Mrs. Jagan's desk, and copies of "Soviet News" (she insists, she said, on reading "all points of view").

Both the Jagans were found guilty of illegal anti-colonial activity. They were allowed to choose between a fine and three months' imprisonment. Dr. Jagan went to jail rather than pay the fine and on the day he came out, Janet Jagan went in.

"The party decided on jail instead of paying fines," she said. "To us, this was an important form of passive resistance." With evident pride, she showed a picture of her husband in rumpled white medical coat, standing defenselessly in a circle of police on the day of his arrest. There was no photograph of her in the same situation.

"I think I was the first respectable woman—if you want to call it that—she snickered, "ever to be in prison here."

"We all had separate cells but used a communal wash room. We were allowed only toothpaste and brush, soap, a mirror, and a comb. We wore dresses made of flour sacks, went barefoot, slept on canvas cots.

"But I enjoyed it. In a way, jail is nice. You get away from people and responsibilities. You

THE CRISIS THAT WASN'T

Today, there are many quick victories over disease. Each might be described as a crisis that didn't quite happen—thanks to today's superior medicinal agents.

Modern medicines prescribed by your physician score amazing triumphs over diseases which, only a decade ago, were almost certain to become dangerously serious.

Present-day pharmaceuticals, such as the antibiotics, require complex equipment, intricate controls and highly skilled technicians for production. Although somewhat higher in cost, they actually are an investment in economy. They effect an earlier cure and cut down expensive sick-bed time.

We are staffed and equipped to fill your doctor's prescriptions promptly at prices that are fair.

Moving Tip

On moving day, reserve an empty basket for last-minute packing of bathroom supplies—including soap, clean towels, brushes, and tissues.

Then make this the first basket you unpack in the new place, so the bathroom will be ready for use. As the moving day progresses, it's a great help to have towels and soap within easy reach for washing your hands.

Develop Drowsiness At Bedtime

It's exasperating to become so delightfully sleepy that your eyelids drop—and then find yourself wide awake by the time you are "ready for bed." To avoid this paradox, try to finish your grooming routine early in the evening.

After the dishes are washed and the tots are in bed, take your warm relaxing bath, brush your teeth, give yourself a soap-suds facial, and set your hair. Then, when that wonderful drowsy feeling develops, you'll be all ready to sleep!

Ladies Aid Has Meeting

Mrs. Ray Giles gave a program at the regular monthly meeting of the Mount Pleasant Ladies' Aid Society on Monday night. Her talk, "The Three R's of Motherhood," stressed the importance of mothers' roles in all phases of human lives. She based her talk on a passage from the book of Proverbs. She explained further the three r's, which were respect, responsibility and reeducation.

Mrs. Agnes Settle presided while Mrs. Roy Stancill, secretary, and Mrs. Billy Ross, treasurer, performed their respective duties. The members present sang "I Am Thine O Lord," after which Mrs. Burley Clark read devotions from Psalm 16:1-11.

The group decided to visit the county home once a month and welcomed a new member, Mrs. Jack Taylor.

After refreshments of miniature sandwiches, mixed nuts and soft drinks, Mrs. Bobby Harris and Mrs. Ben Thomas Jr. said goodbyes.

FAT OVERWEIGHT

Available to you without a doctor's prescription, our drug called ODRINEX. You must lose ugly fat in 7 days or your money back. # High Cost Doesn't Affect Needs

Greenville's need for recreation facilities have been vividly outlined in a master plan for development which was approved and endorsed this week by the city's Recreation Commission.

The tentative price tag on the proposed development of facilities—$638,000—was no doubt surprising to many citizens, including those who recognize the need for additional recreational facilities for Greenville.

In spite of the tentative high cost that has been estimated for providing facilities called for in the overall plan, the program should not be labeled "unsound" or "impractical" without careful consideration by officials and citizens of this community.

For years Greenville has lagged behind other cities of comparable size in this section and throughout the state in its public recreation facilities as well as its city-sponsored recreation program. One reason for this, of course, is that Greenville has not matched with its expenditures for recreation the per capita amount of other communities of comparable size. In short, Greenville has not invested as much in either its recreation program or its recreational facilities as other communities.

If it is to catch up with what is being done in other communities, it must not only match their expenditures, but do more than that to compensate for the past years in which development of local facilities has lagged behind the pace set by other communities.

Greenville may not be able to undertake at one time the entire program as outlined by the master plan for recreation, but that should not eliminate consideration of the entire program. With careful study by the Recreation Commission and other officials, it should be possible to arrive at a capital improvements program — stretched over several years, if necessary—that will provide adequate recreation facilities for Greenville. A priority system might be set up for items recommended in the master plan, and the development program undertaken step-by-step.

Now that the recreational needs of the city have been coordinated into a master plan, steps should be taken immediately to begin implementation of that plan by the city in the most practical way.

Developments In Estes Case Call For Scrutiny

Dismissal of another government official in connection with the Billie Sol Estes case increases speculation about the scope of involvement of federal departments, employes and officials with the Estes operations.

It likewise raises the question of whether there has been widespread connection between federal officials in this or similar cases which have not yet come to light.

The dismissal of Dr. James T. Ralph from his post with the Department is said to be because he accepted favors of clothes and use of telephone credit cards from Estes. In the light of the great furor raised in recent years in the Sherman Adams case—in connection with officials accepting gifts—it is surprising to us that the same problem should crop up again.

It is also of concern to us that the problem might involve a number of officials in various departments within the federal government.

At the time the Adams case was widely discussed, official Washington supposedly set up strict rules concerning the attitude of federal officials and employes toward acceptance of gifts from individuals and firms doing business with the government. Already there have come to light instances in both the Department of Agriculture and in the Department of Labor where these guides obviously were disregarded by federal officials.

Has the attitude in Washington—at least unofficially—reverted to the former situation in which acceptance of gifts by officials was condoned, even though it was frowned upon?

Recent developments in the Estes case indicate there is a need for another careful look at both the official and unofficial attitude in Washington toward the acceptance of favors and gifts. The study should not be confined to the Estes case or to the Department of Agriculture, but should be all-inclusive in scope.

It's time to check the hound's teeth again to see just how clean they are.

Symbol Of The U. S. Difficulty

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Laos is a symbol of America's dilemma in trying to get right-wing leaders in impoverished countries to give their people some tangible reason for preferring the West to Communism.

In Southeast Asia's landlocked Laos about 80 per cent of the 2 to 3 million people, mostly farmers, are illiterate. Life expectancy is about 40 years. They have a pathological low standard of living.

Stories of Laos repeatedly tell two things about the people:

They're gentle and also indifferent about who wins the struggle between the pro-Communist Pathet-Lao forces of Prince Souphanouvong and the pro-Western and U.S.-backed forces of Prince Boun Oum.

There is also a middle, neutralist group led by Prince Souvanna Phouma.

It's no wonder the masses are indifferent. Being mostly illiterate, and never exposed to democracy or communism, they can know little about either.

To the West, communism may be an abomination. It can have no such meaning to the poverty-stricken Laotians, particularly if it promises a life better than the one they have, particularly since now they can expect to die young.

In short, there is a vast gulf between prince and peasant, between rich and poor. It is against this background that President Kennedy has to do business.

Getting American forces directly involved in Laos is undoubtedly the last thing he wants. It would be wretched country for war. Yet, in Communist hands Laos would have vital strategic value.

It borders on Red China, Viet Nam, Burma, Cambodia and Thailand. It's like a dagger, and in Communist hands would be in the stomach of Southeast Asia an area that the United States is anxious to preserve from communism.

Kennedy is sending American forces into friendly neighboring Thailand. The Communists can take this as a warning the Americans will move into Laos against them if they don't stop pushing there.

It's questionable he would send them in since Laos could then turn into another Korea, with Red China moving in from the north.

Kennedy's problem therefore is, as it has been since he took office, how to save Laos from being overrun by Communists and still avoid direct involvement.

He agreed with Premier Khrushchev last year to seek a middle ground: to set up a coalition government of the three princes representing the neutralists, the pro-Communists and the pro-Western groups.

But Kennedy ran into a rock in Prince Boun Oum, who would not join the coalition unless he could control the army and police in the new government. The others wouldn't go for it.

Boun Oum is said to fear that if there is a coalition government it will mean in the end complete victory for the Communists through gradual takeover of the whole government.

He's probably right. But it's certain the Communists will take over by direct force if he doesn't join the coalition — he can't stop them—unless the United States goes in to help him.

But, even though he had no place to go but out if he didn't join the coalition, he wouldn't budge. To try to budge him, the United States shut off economic help to him. He still stood pat.

Finally the pro-Communist Pathet-Lao struck again, breaking the truce bought about by Kennedy and Khrushchev.

If there is a coalition government eventually, and if then the Communists take over gradually, it will be an embarrassment for the United States.

But it wouldn't be quite as bad as if the United States just washed its hands of Laos altogether under Communist military pressure. The other pro-Western nations in Southeast Asia wouldn't then have much hope, either.

Judge's Opinion On Ham

Our self esteem rose somewhat this week when we received a clipping about Federal Appeals Judge Prettyman's opinion concerning food labeling, being that the clipping was mailed from a financial magazine.

After some study, we discovered we had a pretty ham-my story. In other words, Prettyman's opinion, described as unusual, is about ham.

The issue at hand was that the Secretary of Agriculture said a ham cured with water, or containing a certain weight, must be labeled imitation ham. Naturally, the people curing and selling the hams were unhappy to label their hams as imitation when they were for real. They took the case to court. And after some shuffling back and forth and several opinions, Judge Prettyman got the case.

He said that "Everybody knows that a ham made of the cured thigh of a hog and otherwise unaltered save by the addition of a bit of water is not an imitation of some product other than ham. . . It is a real ham, a ham by definition and by universal common acceptance."

And so on. But the plain fact is, the Judge was saying, that a real ham is a ham whether it has water added or not, and for the government to call it imitation is something else.

He said: "We are told that this policy of labeling 'imitation' any variation from unmodified purity runs all through the administration of the pure food and drug laws. If this were so, I for one would advocate that the whole enforcement machinery of these statutes be overhauled and made to conform to terms understandable to consumers. . ."

He also said the Government's stand bordered on the "fantastic."

And he said such a requirement would cause the company irreparable harm and cause them irrecoverable losses in profits.

Who said judges were stuffy?

Over there at East Carolina College, we hear the students have been testing—rating, in other words—their teachers.

One prof told his students he had milled over one answer all night. Finally, he resolved that the only logical meaning of the bafling answer was that the student thought the professor should stay at home.

Speaking of East Carolina College, they have a new annual out that is as big as the ones the big university of the Oold Well has. Almost.

The ladies went into church, high heels and dainty hats. They stood for the first hymn. Then, duty done, they removed their shoes from their feet and shoved them under the pew.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
HUMBLE ORIGIN OF GREAT GIFT

Some years ago Harold W. Dodds, then president of Princeton University, in a speech made at the commencement season, pressed upon his hearers the need of the University for a new gymnasium. At the close of his address, a boy in his early teens came forward and handed President Dodds seventy-five cents. In the coming and going of the crowd, the boy got away and Dr. Dodds was not able to learn his name.

A few years later the Dillon Gymnasium was formally dedicated. Certain rich donors had given lavish gifts, but it all started with the 75-cent contribution of the youngster who slipped these three quarters into the hand of President Dodds and disappeared in the crowd.

Our Lord on one occasion was sitting in the treasury watching the faithful worshippers who, as they passed by, deposited contributions in the treasury chest. The contributor who caught his eye and caused him to exclaim with admiration was a poor widow who cast in a few small coins. Our Lord declared that there was generosity indeed. Her gift was the most significant of all, for she had given not out of abundance but out of poverty.

The youngster who gave the 75-cent little realized what he was starting. It took millions of dollars to complete the gymnasium but it was the thoughtful sacrifice of this teenage boy which got the building project started.

Money, Faith, Stocks

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Nearly 16,000,000 Americans own the industrial, commercial and service out-put of the United States. There is undoubtedly some duplication in this figure, but that hardly affects the problem. Some of these Americans are institutions, such as colleges and universities or mutual funds that have invested their funds in these industries and therefore the number affected is larger indirectly.

It is ridiculous for the new-fangled economists to say that there is no relation between the stock market and the economy. When the market tumbles, the immediate effect is lack of confidence. So-called smart people become liquid, thus they sell their stocks and bonds and hold on to their cash, hoping to recoup by buying at lower prices. The rebound may be very slow. Those who buy on margin get telephone calls, asking them to cover and if they cannot, their losses may be so great that their private economic situation becomes hopeless. The very rich recoup more quickly by buying preferred European securities, or by purchasing real estate under certain circumstances, or jewels or works of art. Those who are not well off cannot do that. They must take their loss and suffer.

What is a share worth? There are as many opinions as there are buyers and sellers. Certainly no share of stock is worth 100 times the earnings of the company and those who purchase such a stock are speculators. An investor who buys in the hope that the enterprise will grow is on sounder ground or one who buys a stock that sells at about 10 times the earnings of a company is on less uncertain ground.

But when the buyer loses his money, there are no excuses that can be made to him. He translates his misfortune into an opposition to those who caused a general loss of confidence. And loss of confidence is the only reason why there is a general fall of stock prices. There is either loss of confidence in the economy, in the Administration or in international relations.

I have now asked over 100 persons, some of them economic majors, if they knew Gresham's Law. The answer for those under 30 is generally that they never heard of it. The significance of the reply is not that they do not know that bad money drives out good money; it is rather that they do not have a "feel" for money such as a small dealer must have if he is not to go out of business.

Money is a curious catalyst. Fed on confidence, it becomes like an acid which makes everything about it shrivel. The miser, for instance, lacks confidence in the catalytic powers of money and therefore does nothing with it. He holds on to it.

Some believe that the cause of the present loss of confidence started when the President quarrelled with the United States Steel Corporation. That is not so. It started much earlier, as a study of stock prices will show.

The method of collecting the income tax has become so brutal that men are discouraged by the invasion of their private lives and the unbearable amount of time consumed in answering wasteful and often stupid questionnaires. Because there are a comparatively small number of thieves who cheat, everybody has to be penalized by an indecent withholding tax which is a sign that a democratic government does not trust its own citizens to be truthful.

The American people are an honest people. Generally speaking, they do not cheat. They did not cheat before the withholding tax was instituted. Since then, those who wish to cheat have found ways of doing it. They have transferred their money to European and other countries. It is so easy to do. The fact that the Treasury is incompetent and does not find these manipulators is no reason for penalizing the whole American people and causing them to lose confidence.

President Kennedy would be wise to have an impartial body make a study of the causes of (Continued on Page 6)

Of Concern To All The State

By DR. LEO W. JENKINS
Pres. East Carolina College
Guest Columnist

I should like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Lynn Nisbet and to thank him for his long efforts over the years in behalf of higher education in North Carolina. Through his column many have seen for the first time the real issues associated with this tremendously important and expensive function of our government.

GROWTH—The rapid growth of East Carolina College during the postwar years has been often discussed. Writers and speakers refer to East Carolina as a sleeping giant, but its future has become the concern of all the state, not merely because its students come from 92 counties, but because the school's support comes from all the people.

East Carolina must grow with the growing demands of the youth of the state. Ill-considered attempts to curtail the operations of our schools could well initiate long-range disservice to the people themselves.

This college, historically, has always worked to serve those people who through taxation make its existence possible, but the purposes which it serves and its capacity to serve must necessarily change with a changing society.

We must not be misled by the unfounded fear that bigness leads to mediocrity. In North Carolina itself there is much evidence that colleges can, at the same time, grow in excellence as well as in size. East Carolina College is demonstrating today that it can greatly expand its facilities without sacrificing its cherished aims, and perhaps it is well to restate that the costs of operating our rapidly expanding physical plants must be considered always in relation to the inestimable dividends that come to our region and our state from the education of our youth.

But I feel we are correct in operating on the theory that all high school graduates do not automatically have a claim on higher education at the taxpayers' expense. Only those who have the tested ability to profit by advanced study, who have the desire to attain it, and who are willing to make the sacrifice to achieve it, can rightfully expect to be welcomed.

Every student in a state-supported school is to a degree the recipient of a scholarship given to him by the citizens of the state. This fact should be made known to all our youth and to their parents. They should be the first to understand that it is not the teachers and administrators alone who have a primary interest in and responsibility for admission policies. College facilities are owned, operated and controlled by our citizenry. The investment is large enough to inspire the gravest sense of administrative responsibility. The people have invested more than twenty million dollars in East Carolina College. Those of us employed by North Carolina have unending obligations to the people themselves.

The original functions allotted to East Carolina College have changed historically. They must and will change again in the future. However, we are confident that whenever basic changes do seem advisable the Legislature will bring them about as it has always done in the past, only after a realistic study of existing needs and a genuine desire to reflect the wishes of the people in the state. Illustrative of this is the program in nursing and the combining of our professional and liberal arts curricula which helps prepare our students not only in knowing how to make a living but in how to live.

Public Forum

TO THE EDITOR:

The Greenville JC's are to be commended for their current efforts to put Greenville and Pitt County in a more favorable position to obtain scheduled airline service.

When the recent CAB decision on air service to Eastern Carolina was announced, I found myself very hard put to see on which grounds the CAB's ruling could be justified. It is rather difficult to find basis for splitting air service several ways in this area, when by far the most logical means of providing scheduled service to an area such as ours would be through a consolidated area airport such as was proposed for Greenville. Indeed, as a quick look at the map and some elementary statistics will attest, Pitt County's western portions provide the best site for an area airport available in Eastern Carolina.

The site near Farmville that was recommended is more readily accessible to more people and more business than any of the air service centers presently being sanctioned by the CAB. Within 25 miles of this location one finds virtually every large center of population in Eastern Carolina including Greenville, Wilson, Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Goldsboro, and Kinston; hardly a stones throw further is Washington and New Bern. The area enclosed by these cities is the very heart of the Eastern part of the state, containing the majority of population, income, and industry found in Eastern Carolina, and boasting of its finest educational and cultural facilities. The needs of this area cannot possibly be served in an adequate manner by local, uncoordinated air service depots. None of the proposed airports set by the CAB is capable of generating enough passenger or freight traffic alone to justify the establishment of a first class air service for the Eastern Carolina area. A single area airport is the only possible practical means of obtaining the service we need, and this is the airport that Pitt County alone is capable of providing.

For accelerated economic progress in Eastern Carolina ADD YOUR NAME TO THE CURRENT JC CLUBS PETITIONS. Sincerely yours Lawrence Behr

Shed Light On Merger Reasons

By ELMER ROESSNER

Unintentionally, Arthur T. Roth, chairman of the Franklin National Bank of Long Island, may have thrown light on one reason for the wave of mergers that has been sweeping the country for a decade. Roth addressed a committee meeting of the American Banking Association in Washington last Tuesday.

His bank is one of the fastest-growing institutions in the country. It is unsparing in promoting and advertising itself; it is situated in one of the boomiest areas of the nation; it has branched and expanded to meet community needs and in the past 20 years has merged with 13 other banks.

In the course of these mergers, Franklin discovered an amazing raggedness in handling mortgages, one of the most important assets of country banks.

ESSENTIAL FACTS MISSING
Here are some of problems Roth said his bank encountered:

1. There was meager credit information on the borrower.
2. Credit applications, most cases incomplete, were filled in by the applicant in ink or pencil and in most cases were difficult to read.
3. Confirmation of any of the facts was not available; there was no credit report, confirmation of employment or payment experience.
4. A majority of loans had title abstracts from an attorney; Franklin requires title policies of a title company.
5. Only 10 percent of loans contained surveys of property to ascertain if there was an encroachment or even to indicate there was a house on the plot.
6. A majority of the appraisals were over five years old and in no way indicated what the property consisted of, or even indicated land size.
7. Many loans had matured.
8. Method of payments were quarterly, semiannually, and annually — with odd dates of payment.

NOT ENOUGH INSURANCE

9. There was no provision for any penalty if payments were late, and many of the mortgages were constantly delinquent.
  10. Insurance was inadequate on over 40 percent of the loans and policies did not show the bank as mortgagee.
  11. There was no provision for payment of taxes and insurance by the bank, and no evidence was ever received or noted in the files as to the status of real estate taxes.
  12. Tax searches showed over 25 percent of the mortgages were one to two years delinquent.
  13. On commercial loans there were no copies of leases, no indication of lease terms, no assignments of rents in the event of default of the loan.
  14. There were no photographs of the properties.
- A "WHY" OF MERGERS
If their operations were as slovenly as that, there's little wonder that the 13 other banks were ripe for merger with the tough-minded Franklin.

And if banks, supposed to be paragons of careful business operations, do no better than the gone 13, how methodically operated are other businesses? It would seem to be a good guess that slipshod practices, which ripen banks for merging, are also ripening hundreds of other kinds of businesses for mergers, forced sales or foreclosures.

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES RUNNING 6 PERCENT AHEAD OF 1961

Although Wall Street seems nervous, Main Street is confident. Department store sales from January 1 through May 5 were 6 percent above sales for the same period in 1961, the Federal Reserve reports. In the week ended May 1, one in which the stock market did not do so well, sales were 15 percent above the corresponding 1961 week. Sales in the Dallas district— even with Billie Sol Estes out of the market— were 24 percent up

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market skidded lower under mounting selling pressure early this afternoon. Trading was slow. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was down 1.20 to 240.30 with industrials off 2.30, rails off .20 and utilities off .40.

The decline ate sharply into the gains racked up in the healthy recovery Monday and Tuesday. Brokers said traders who snapped up temporary bargains at the low point of the sell-off Monday morning were taking profits.

A new selling move was noted in stocks with high price-earnings ratios. Among these, IBM lost 10, Polaroid 8 and Xerox 7¾.

Losses of key issues spread from fractions to about 2 points. Steels, motors, rubbers, aircrafts, utilities, nonferrous metals, chemicals, rails, oils, tobaccos and drugs took losses. Mail order-retails and airlines were mixed.

General Motors was unchanged. Ford was off 1 7-8. Chrysler lost and a member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, where he serves as superintendent of the Junior Department and member of the Official Board. Dr. Clark and his wife, the former Ann Sprinkle of Henderson, have four children and reside at 1109 Hillside Dr.

A number of other Pitt County and nearby residents were appointed or elected to serve the Coastal Plain Heart Association in various capacities.

Hoyt Narron will serve vice president for the Greenville-Pitt County area; Marvin Bell Everett, Robersonville and Martin; and Mrs. Irvin Adler, Tarboro and Edgecombe.

Certificates were presented at the meeting to Mrs. Albert Bell of Pitt County and Jack Tyler of Greenville for service as fund raising chairmen for their areas.

G. C. Worsley of Greenville, Dr. Victor Ng of Robersonville, Mrs. Eugenia P. VanLandingham of Tarboro, Cecil Brown of Wiliamston and Dr. Ed Monroe of Greenville were among two-year directors named.

Among new one-year directors is Ralph Mobley of Robersonville.

Dr. Clark pointed out that an important activity of the Coastal Plain Heart Association is sponsorship of Dr. Isaac M. Taylor to conduct research on heart disease at the University of North Carolina. The association has given a two-year grant of $12,000 for such study for Dr. Taylor and his associates at Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

CARTER A. VAUGHAN'S Exciting Novel of Revolutionary Romance SCOUNDRELS' BRIGADE

CHAPTER 34

After a final skirmish with three British Dragoons, Hugh Spencer expected to see a troop of them appear at any moment, but he reached the farmhouse without further incident. Benji Flanery and the carriage close behind him.

A farmer was raking leaves in the front yard and looked out across the fence reproachfully. "You can't come here, Captain Spencer. If the British find you, the value of this place will be lost to the United States."

Hugh's voice was firm as he replied to one of Major Tallmadge's principal deputies. "I'm sorry, Major Edwards, but I have no choice. I completed my mission by raiding an enemy warship, and I'm carrying the counterfeit plates in my pocket."

The surprised "farmer" laughed.

"What's more," Hugh continued forcefully, "a civilian member of my unit has been hurt. Even if I could stay on the road and elude the enemy, he'll die unless he receives proper care."

"Why didn't you say so in the first place?" Edwards unclipped the gate, turned toward the house, and waved.

Seven or eight men hurried across the yard and, as soon as the carriage drew to a halt, August Dale was carried into the house. Two of the men stared at Katie Dale for a moment as she accompanied her father's bearers, but the group was too busy to study her at length.

Dragoon patrols would spend the night scouring the area, and Major Edwards was preparing for the inevitable inspection of the house and grounds with the thoroughness of a commander leading his troops into battle.

"Hitch that team to a plow in the south forty," he said. "Take the carriage to the old barn and shove it into a corner behind some farm farm equipment. Scrape off as much paint as you can, remove the left rear wheel, and smash one of the windows. You might smear some dirt on it, too."

His subordinates obeyed without question, and the Simpsons would have joined them, but Edwards halted them. "Anyone would know that you're brothers, so you'll have to go into hiding. Abel, take them to the dormitory. You can go with them," he added to Benji.

"I'm worried about the old man," Hugh said when they were alone.

"They're taking him to the secret room in the attic, Captain. There's some risk, of course, but the British have searched the house from top to bottom scores of times and haven't found it yet, so he should be reasonably safe there, and we'll give him every attention."

"Thank you, Major."

"I'm afraid you'll have to go to the dormitory too, whenever searching parties come here."

Hugh didn't relish the prospect of being banished to an airless underground chamber that had been dug beneath the cellar, but he knew there was no choice.

"The enemy might recognize my stallion, too," he said.

Edwards was lost in thought for a moment, then he beckoned to a man who was pruning bushes at one side of the house. "Nate, give Captain Spencer's horse a henna bath. Change him into a roan, and paint a white diamond patch between his eyes."

"Be careful," Hugh added. "He doesn't trust strangers."

The man grinned and led Toby toward the stables at the rear, speaking softly to the beast and trying to establish a rapport with him.

"That leaves only the girl," Edwards said. "She's the same one who stopped off here with you when you went into New York, of course. I recognized her hair—and so will the British. She'll have to change her appearance drastically."

"The old man is her father. I doubt if she'll leave him."

"She'll do what she's told, or all of us will hang," Edwards said curtly, and started toward the house.

"Let me handle her, then. She's even more temperamental than my stallion, if that's possible. Tell me what you want done, and I'll persuade her to follow instructions."

They climbed the stairs to the attic, and Edwards pushed a wall panel. Beyond it was a small chamber without windows or a hearth. Several candles were burning, and the newcomers saw a man bending over August, who was stretched out on a narrow cot. Katie was kneeling beside her father, dipping rags in a basin of water, wringing them out, and applying them gently to his forehead.

"Burnham was a pharmacist before the war," Major Edwards said.

The man was cleaning August's wound with swabs, and didn't look up. "This cut is deep, but I think I can get rid of the poisons so gangrene don't set in. Major, I reckon you'll have to keep watch over him all night."

Hugh saw that Katie was weeping and that the cosmetics she had been wearing had streaked her face. She resisted when he lifted her to her feet, but he forced her to accompany him to the outer attic. "Katie, listen to me," he ordered.

"Pa needs me." She tried to push him aside.

"You'll have to let others look after him tonight."

"No."

He caught hold of her shoulders and shook her. "All of us, your father included, may hang unless you follow orders. Major Edwards says that you're the most easily recognizable member of our party, and he's right. The British will be searching for a red-haired wench who looks like a trollop, so he plans to use you as a decoy."

Katie made an effort to pay attention to what he was saying. "The woman you met the first time we were here will give you some logwood dye that will turn your hair black. You can cut it or change the style drastically. We'll leave that detail to you. You'll scrub your face until it shines, you'll burn that harlot's dress, and you'll wear old linsley-woolsey clothes that will hide your figure."

She shook her head. "I won't leave Pa."

"Don't you understand that Dragoon patrols are probably hunting for us right at this very moment? When they come here, the major wants you to be sitting in the parlor, knitting. If the enemy should find August, you'll have to trust Edwards to protect him. You're being called on to play still another part, and you've got to remember that the future of the United States is more important than any one of us."

"If Pa dies because he doesn't get enough care—"

Hugh cut her short by taking the counterfeit engraving plates from his inner pocket and holding them before her dazed eyes. "If the British regain possession of these, your father's suffering will have been in vain."

"You're making me pay for my sins, aren't you?" she asked tremulously, looked past him, and stared silently at the unconscious

DeGaulle Quickly Fills 5 Vacancies

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle has quickly filled the jobs of five cabinet ministers who quit in protest against his policy on European unity.

The five—all members of the Catholic Popular Republican Party—walked out in anger after De Gaulle at a news conference denounced as dreamers those who seek a supranational integrated Europe. De Gaulle favors a loose confederation in which each nation would have a veto.

The cabinet vacancies were filled by bringing in one new member, an independent, and promoting lesser cabinet officials. Premier Georges Pompidou took over one post.

SALT FROM BULLITTS LICK

BULLITTS LICK, Ky. (AP)—Kentucky's first industry was a saltworks established at Bullitts Lick in 1779. Salt for the entire area west of the Alleghany Mountains came from the plant. Shipments were made as far up the Ohio River as Pittsburgh, Pa.

August for a moment. "He'd want me to do my duty," she said, and raised her head.

Major Edwards joined them. "Well?" he demanded impatiently.

"She agrees," Hugh replied. "Not completely," Katie declared angrily. "Even if the redcoats catch me and hang me, I refuse to cut my hair!"

Hugh concealed his smile of relief. Her display of temper convinced him that she would overcome her fatigue and her deep concern for her father. She would give another magnificent performance.

When Hugh meets his old friend, Major Ben Tallmadge, he won't like his new orders. Continue the story tomorrow.

Tobacco Fete Starting Today

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—A three-day celebration commemorating the 350th anniversary of the first tobacco crop in the new world began today at nearby Jamestown Festival Park.

Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges was to address the annual meeting of the Tobacco Institute, held here in conjunction with the anniversary of Capt. John Rolfe's first successful tobacco crop.

Hodges, a former governor, is the second prominent North Carolinian to address the group.

Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, came to the defense of the tobacco industry Wednesday in a speech calling tobacco the saviour of the English Colonies in America.

"Tobacco was the basis upon which was built the hope of staying on this shore, and in the truest sense the institutions and traditions which have risen upon it," said Daniels, former press secretary for President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In defending tobacco against health critics, Daniels said, "We know that any of the pleasures of man taken in excess may lead to danger and pain."

Daniels said the $3.1 billion in excise taxes paid annually by the tobacco industry was "a measure of tobacco's contribution to public service."

Cotton Textile Import Curbs Is Facing Senate

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate comes to grips today with a bill that would allow President Kennedy to limit or curb imports of cotton textiles.

Before the House-passed bill comes to a vote there are two amendments to be disposed of.

One, backed by Midwest Republicans, would extend the same protection against imports of livestock, poultry and dairy products that the administration is asking for cotton and textile producers.

The other, due to come to a vote first, simply would direct the President to limit imports of these commodities when in his judgment they would seriously affect domestic producers.

Then, under an agreement to limit debate, the Senate will vote on the bill itself.

The legislation, carrying the blessing of the State Department and other administration agencies, would let the President limit or even ban imports of cotton and cotton textiles from nations who are not members of an international cotton export-import agreement.

This agreement, now temporary but due to become long-term later this year, was worked out at Geneva by this country and 18 other nations which supply some 90 per cent of cotton and textiles for free world trade.

The hard-hit U.S. Textile industry obtained the limiting agreement and is pushing the additional measure as a safeguard against a flood of imports from other nations.

Sens. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., and Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., insist the same protection is needed against imports of livestock, meats and dairy and timber products.

Dr. James Poindexter of the Department of English at East Carolina College will serve as president of the college chapter of the American Association of University Professors for the next two years. With other new officers of the organization, he was elected by members May 15.

Other officers, who will serve with Dr. Poindexter, are Dr. Charles Price of the Social Studies Department, vice president; Dr. Francis Adams of the English Department, secretary; and Dr. Shepard Faber of the Science Department, treasurer.

Elected to the executive board were Ruby Ball of the Art Department and Dr. Jacob Mandel of the Psychology Department. Dr. Wellington Gray of the Art Department, as retiring president, also joined the executive board.

Dr. Poindexter is also president of the North Carolina Conference of the North Carolina Association of University Professors.

Janet Jagan... (Continued from page 2) have a lot of time to read. As a result of my stay there, I set up a library for prisoners. I also introduced greens into their diet of salt meat and fish.

In the next few years, British authorities restricted the Jagan's movements. Janet had her second child, Nadira, in 1955.

In 1957, Charles Roberts died of cancer in Beverly Hills. Janet flew home for his funeral, stayed around briefly to comfort her mother. When Princess Margaret made a state visit to Trinidad the following year, Janet invited her mother to come for the show.

There Mrs. Roberts basked in her adventurous offspring's position of influence, for now Janet was Minister of Labour, Health and Housing in her husband's cabinet, after winning a seat in the 1957 elections. She built health and maternity centers and a home economics school to train women in domestic service and sensible nutrition.

The restrictions on her movements had been lifted. She traveled — to political conferences at various points in the Caribbean and in 1960 in Cuba as a guest of the Castro government.

She came back extolling Fidel's regime. She became a frequent visitor to Cuba and an advocate of Fidelism. As recently as this past February she went to Cuba to attend anti-U.S. demonstrations there.

Though still general secretary of the PFP, Mrs. Jagan no longer holds public office. The B. G. scuttlebutt says her husband will no longer stand for her "great and good friendships" with certain party workers. Dr. Jagan simply says the party needs his wife more than his government does.

Both of them talk like representatives of a big nation, though B. G. is inhabited by only half a million people huddled along the coast.

In this blustering spirit, they have pledged their nation's support to Castro.

I asked her why, if the Castro regime is as benign as she says, so many Cubans have fled their country.

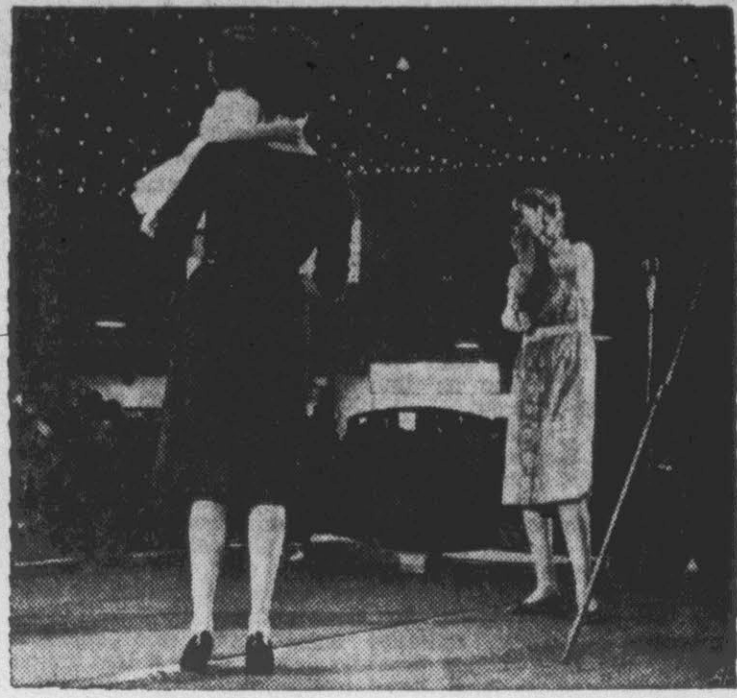

"If people want to leave, why shouldn't they?" she replied.

On a desk top in her hot and grimy little office stands a small Cuban flag. Alongside it is the projected new flag, which Mrs. Jagan helped design, for an independent British Guiana. A few copies of "Soviet News" are still on hand. "Why shouldn't I read about all political systems?" she asked. "Isn't that freedom?"

CAMERA Angles

"CHILD PHOTOGRAPHY" demonstration by Yolla Niclas was one of the instructive features of the 1962 International Photo Fair as seen by our columnist.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Post-mortem thoughts after a photo gathering are in order now that New York City's 1962 International Photo Fair has become history.

Though it was rated successful, with an attendance of 60,000 people for the nine-day affair, many camera fans missed some of the most interesting or instructive events simply because they failed to study the detailed list of program. I stopped to chat with some persons wandering around the exhibits and discovered how few had taken the time to glance over the program which they got at the entrance. In many cases, a topic of specific interest could be going on while the attendee was drifting casually around.

It makes sense, therefore, for any camera fan attending any photo convention, regional meeting, seminar or exhibition to scrutinize the program first for items of personal interest. These should be circled and the time noted so as not to be overlooked or crowded out of the day's activities.

Knowing the time schedule in advance is helpful also in getting good seats at these events. By arriving some minutes early, there is usually a choice location for better visibility or audibility.

A photo gathering generally brings together a varied group of experts to talk about their specialties. Perhaps not enough camera fans think of bringing their pet problems or questions about lenses, slide mounting, home movies, color printing, etc., to these authorities while they're handy. It would be a good idea for a fan to jot down the things that puzzle him and to confront the qualified specialist. They are usually most generous with their time in an effort to help a fellow photographer.

Photo fans, like their cameras and equipment, come in different shapes, sizes, ability and points of origin. Among the unforgettable characters encountered at the photo fair were:

The gadget hound. He haunted the exhibit booths studying the new gadgets. He never took pictures or even looked at a camera but any accessory that was faster, sharper, automated or eliminated something else excited his attention.

The collector. He started with a give-away shopping bag and methodically picked up from each counter one sample of each available piece of free literature. Was he an inventor looking for ideas? An advertising salesman compiling a mailing list? Or just a voracious reader when he gets home? We'll never know—I didn't ask.

The 'cheesecake' snapper. He took pictures only when the models wore bathing suits and kept shooting just as fast as he could change flashbulbs even when the pose hadn't changed. A talented Japanese dancer in colorful Oriental costume seen earlier evoked no picture-taking impulse, however.

The 'head hunter.' This gentleman, on opening day, asked my daughter to pose. He came to the fair every day, studied people, asked many for permission to take their picture and was seldom refused. Just before the fair's end, I ran into him again and we chatted. Turned out that he specialized only in shooting three-dimensional, extreme close-ups of women and children exclusively. He carried a hand-viewer with him and we looked at some of the pictures he had taken that week. They were of excellent quality which he attributed to the combination of Kodachrome film and gas-filled SF flashbulbs. But instead of a series of portraits, the pictures looked like an anthropological study of the female species!

It all comes under the heading of photography!

Delta Sigma Pi Awards Presented At Banquet; Tributes Paid

At the recent annual banquet of Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity at East Carolina College, awards for outstanding achievement among members were made. President Timothy C. Ogburn of Garner, acting as master of ceremonies, has announced.

W. W. Howell and Dr. William H. Durham of the college School of Business, advisors to the Delta Zeta Chapter, were guests of honor at the banquet. John W. Garris of Clinton, editor of the 1962 Alumni Manual, paid tribute to Howell and Dr. Durham and announced the dedication of the publication to the two advisors. Frank Layne of Smithfield, social chairman, also presented them gifts as a token of appreciation.

William Leroy Sutton of Elizabethtown City was awarded the interfraternity scholarship. His academic average of above B exceeded that of any other member of the fraternity.

Walter C. Faulkner of Henderson was presented the annual "Deltasig of the Year" award by President Ogburn. This award is designated to the brother who has contributed the most outstanding service for the professional goals of the fraternity.

Baxter Powell of Raleigh was presented the "Ideal Pledge Award" for the Spring Quarter Pledge Period.

Following the banquet, the brothers and their dates were entertained at a dance in the fraternity's chapter room on the corner of Fifth and Cotanche Sts.

Hobby Became $200,000-A-Year Business

By BRYAN HANSLIP

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Aunt Sookie's cherry chest of drawers started Edgar Boone on a hobby that grew into a $200,000-a-year business.

Auctioneering is his calling. He followed his father and an uncle in mastering the selling spiel. Five months of the year, he chants on the tobacco market.

The chest got him into antiques in his spare time—so deeply, in fact, he now goes to England to buy stock for his "Trading Post" here.

From the outside, it's a rambling, nondescript building, worth no more than a glance from travelers passing on busy U.S. 301. Treasures in disarray await the antique fancier inside. Here is a silver bowl that was a golfing trophy in the 1890s. Gleaming brass candlesticks recall colonial times. Throughout, there is an unending display of furniture, from the sturdy maple and pine of country craftsmen to the finely detailed mahogany of English cabinetmakers.

Boone, who is 45 years old, pre-rides over the riches with a courteous, diffident air. Owners of antique shops in several states find the Trading Post a source of supply. Ordinary customers are welcomed, too, to browse or to buy.

The cherry chest which started it all was one of the pieces relatives gave Edgar and Sue Boone when they set up housekeeping in Lexington, Ky., some 24 years ago.

"We couldn't afford new things," Boone chuckled. "I refinished the old pieces. They looked so good, we began hunting for others."

Buying, selling and trading came naturally to Boone, as part of his auctioneer heritage. "Edgar's suited for his work," agreed Sue Boone, a woman of warm humor who understands her husband.

"At the start, he was impressed when a dealer offered him twice what he paid for a piece of furniture he refinished. But I think it was the lamp that really convinced him antiques could be good business."

The lamp was priced at $115. The dealer who had it was selling out. Boone thought the lamp too high, so he bought the entire stock.

In two weeks, he had sold all of it—except the lamp, and he had $300 profit besides. Although bitten by the bug, Boone considered antiques only a spare time hobby. Auctioneering was his occupation, as it still is.

His father, Edgar H. Boone (the son's middle initial is A.), is a livestock auctioneer in Kentucky. The senior Boone also has auctioned tobacco.

F. E. Boone, an uncle now deceased, gave national currency to the sing-song tobacco auctioneer's chant on radio advertising for cigarettes (Lucky Strike). Noted for high, stiff collars and an effortless spiel, F. E. Boone won in the trade the admiring label of "the auctioneer's auctioneer."

Young Edgar Boone learned auctioneering by doing it. Fresh out of college, he hitchhiked to Georgia and South Carolina. From town to town, he asked for work at the warehouses where the rows of baskets piled high with tobacco were being auctioned.

"Can you sell?" they would ask me. "Sure," I'd say. I had picked up a little from my father.

They'd let me try, but they would soon stop me. It was a long time before I could get to sell as much as two rows at one place."

After World War II service in the Air Force, Boone moved his family to Wilson to be nearer to tobacco markets.

He no longer sells in Georgia. He auctions on the fine-tuned tobacco market here, and goes to Kentucky for the burley tobacco market in December.

Tobacco auctioneering is seasonal, lasting no more than six months. That left time for the antiques sideline to grow.

Boone began making trips to Ohio and New England, bringing back trailer-loads of antiques and peddling to dealers. A small shop alongside a tobacco warehouse followed, where he sold antiques in the rough or refinished if the customer ordered.

The Trading Post keeps five men busy in a repair and refinishing shop. It's been a long time since Boone tried his hand. Buying keeps him occupied instead.

Bobby Langston, a youthful partner, minds the store while Boone is off on buying trips.

He made his first trip to England in February last year, returned in July, and recently came back from his third expedition. It produced a $38,000 shipment which will soon be added to the Trading Post stock.

The experience abroad showed Boone how the antiques market reflects economic trends. As symbols of status and affluence, antiques flow to nations flushed with prosperity; in leaner times, they flow out again.

Boone found Americans, long dominant in the market, in the minority to bustling buyers from newly prosperous West Germany and Italy.

The solid investment value of antiques should appeal to businessmen, Boone reflected. Instead, wives sometimes have to use all kinds of ruses to win approval of their purchases.

He told two stories to illustrate the economic soundness of antiques.

Fire swept through a woman's home. Water damage ruined the new furniture, and insurance wasn't enough to replace it. Several pieces of antique furniture survived the fire and, refinished with insurance money, were in better condition than at the start.

Another woman was left with a big houseful of furniture upon the death of her husband. A second-hand furniture dealer offered her a ridiculously low price for the lot. She called on Boone. He looked it over, and paid her several times that amount for two or three antiques.

Some unusual sale policies are dictated by the fact that antiques increase, rather than diminish, in value.

A customer can always trade a purchase in on something new, even though he has kept the item for some time.

In turn, Boone reported, he has yet to suffer a loss on credit extended to customers. "Merchants up to w'n find that hard to believe," he said.

"Wait a minute—there is one man owes me $1.15. He left his job, family and everything, and went away to another state. That's the only one I've lost on."

Remembering his own experience, Boone is pleased to see young couples shopping for their first furniture. "I try to give them a break on prices," he said.

It's good business. Tastes change with the years, and a happy customer is apt to return time and again. The dwindling supply of antiques is a worry. On his last trip to England, he said, individual dealers seemed to have less desirable merchandise than a year ago.

On each trip abroad, he spent about two weeks. "I could do better if I stayed longer, but I get homesick," he confessed.

If his wife had gone along, he had planned to explore the antiques markets in Amsterdam and Paris on the last trip.

"I had four good reasons to stay at home," said Mrs. Boone. The reasons are Betsy, a student at Lynchburg College in Virginia; Judy, 15; Tom, 13; and Douglas, 8.

So far, the children have shown no more than normal interest in their father's business.

"They are at the age," Boone explained, philosophically, "when they are interested mainly in other little boys and girls."

It is for the children that Boone worries when it becomes harder to find a stock of antiques.

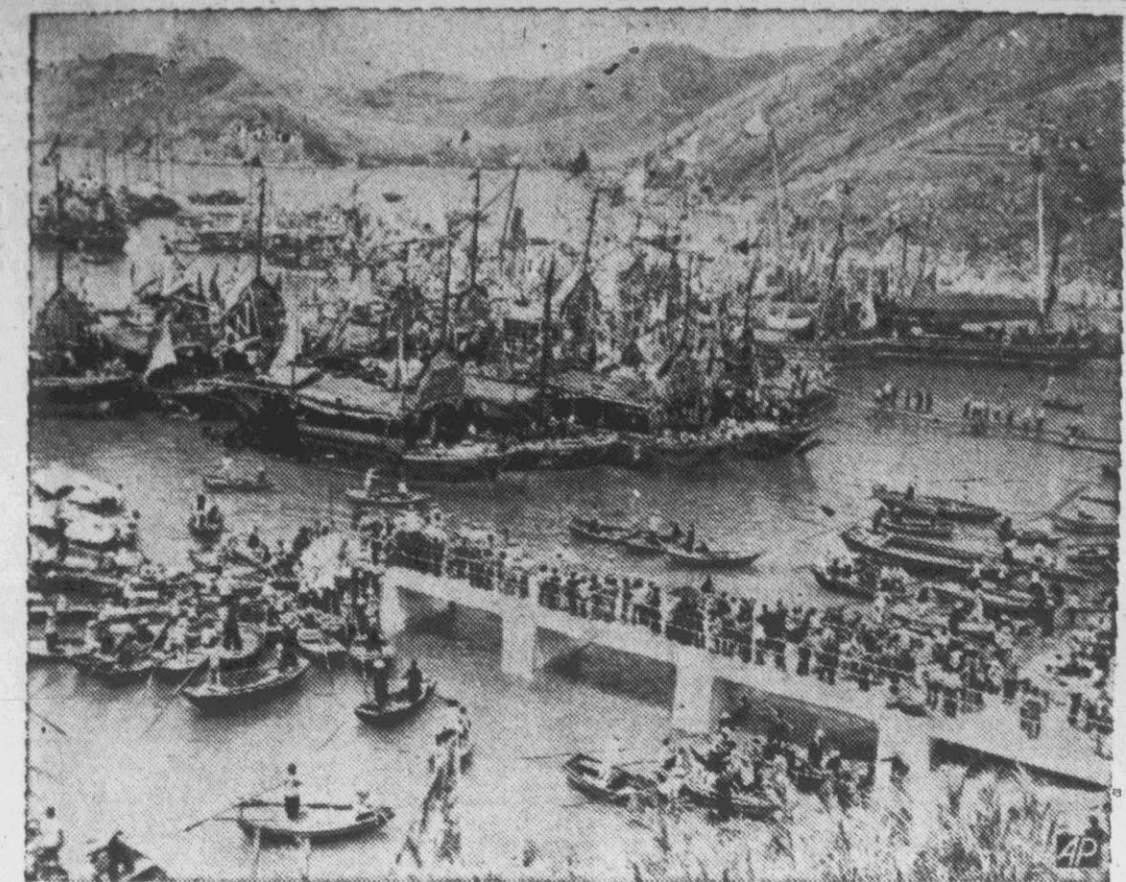

"I have tried to build this up for my sons, if they want it. At the rate it's going, by that time it may be no more than a second-hand store," he said.

Large Railroad Model Planned

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — The man in the dome will control what 12 men believe will be the largest portable model railroad in the world.

It will be 30 by 60 feet when completed and is made in sections.

Involved in the project, which is 75 percent completed, are a truck driver, an obstetrician, an architect, a machinist, a couple of taxi cab drivers, a printer and a gas station attendant.

Truck driver Charles N. Maynard, who works night, supervises the job days.

The group plans to send the railroad on a tour of states across the country when it is completed in August or September. Work was started last September.

The structure will contain 1,750 feet of track; a river (activated by a washing machine); 35 bridges; 400 trees, brush, grass, stone and gravel; 75 buildings, including model schoolhouses; 150 toy people; and a wide variety of freight and passenger trains.

The man in the dome will sit in the center of the structure to operate the trains. He may see viewers but they will be unable to see him.

Science At Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A storm that shook the earth, a new campaign to look at storms, and an antique crocodile are subjects for science at work:

STORMY WEATHER
The earth was shaken by a storm of tiny earth tremors on June 6 of last year—and a Columbia University scientist says they may have been caused by bad sea weather off the coast of Africa.

Extremely sensitive seismographs at Columbia's Lamont Geophysical Observatory picked up the seismic waves, feeble as they were. Other stations over the world recorded them too.

Dr. Jack E. Oliver says a favored guess as to what caused the earth tremors was a violent storm that lashed the west central coast of Africa in the South Atlantic. Only by coincidence the Columbia University research vessel, Vema, was in the storm area at the time. The storm tore a lifeboat away and smashed it against the Vema's charthouse. Dr. Oliver said that in some cases earlier waves striking the east coast of the United States had caused similar tremors recorded as far inland as St. Louis.

MORE STORM WEATHER
The U.S. Weather Bureau is at it again, taking a closer look at tornadoes, squalls and severe local storms.

This is the second season the Weather Bureau has made a special effort, with data from ground observing stations and special planes, to follow storm movements across sections of the nation.

Coming up—in the next few weeks—is the hottest part of the tornado season. The close-up coordinated surveillance by planes and ground station scientists to correlate the different data they get on storm turbulence and movement, and to learn more of the nature of the weather conditions which spawn storms.

WESTERN CROCODILE
Two University of Oregon scientists were scouting some fossil beds in north central Oregon to chart tours for some visiting scientists. Then they found it, a group of bones and teeth in rock that had once been clay. They took it to the university's museum of natural history for study, identified it as the skull and lower jaw of a prehistoric crocodile, the first fossil crocodile ever found west of the Rockies.

Its age was estimated between 45 and 60 million years. The scientists, Drs. Jane Gray and Kanichi Sohma, are experts in fossils of ancient vegetable life.

Planning Meet On Watershed

GRIFTON—A state planning party is scheduled to meet with leaders in development of the Johnson's Mill Tail Watershed Project at 7:30 p.m. this evening in the Town Hall here.

Lacy Coates of Raleigh, leader of the Soil Conservation Service Watershed Planning Party, will head the Raleigh-based planning group that has scheduled a session with local cooperators.

A. C. Edwards of Hookerton, chairman of the Coastal Plain Soil & Water Conservation District, and Arch J. Flanagan of Pamlico, district secretary, will head the local group that also includes representatives of three southern Pitt County canal companies.

J. L. Quinerly, president, and M. Brown Hodges, secretary, will represent the Buckleberry Canal Co. Representing the Baxley Swamp Canal Co. will be its president and secretary H.P. Rasberry and Bruce E. Garris. W. L. Johnson, president, and L.W. Taylor, secretary, will represent the Shilo Canal Co.

Attorney Sam O. Worthington of Greenville is legal representative for the three canal companies. Plans of the project include extension of canal outfall through Grindle Slough and to deepen all existing drainage channels in the watershed area.

Coates and his party will spearhead planning of steps to be taken in completion of the Johnson's Mill Tail project. Preliminary planning of the project has already been completed.

Resumption Of Aid To Laos Is Again Talked

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States is considering resuming monthly $3-million payments to Laos if the Boun Oum government acts promptly to promote negotiation for a new coalition regime pledged to cold war neutrality.

This may mean a shakeup in the government at Vientiane centered on the present strong man, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan. Kennedy administration officials from the President down are reported to have lost confidence in Phoumi.

Associates say that President Kennedy holds the general, who controls several government ministries, responsible for the military crisis in Laos during the past two weeks. He further feels that Phoumi blocked successful negotiations in the past for a government of national union embracing pro-Western and pro-Communist leaders under a neutralist prime minister.

Until last February the United States had paid Laos about $3 million a month for several years, the funds being designed for payment of salaries for troops and police. Phoumi controls the security forces as minister of defense and minister of the interior. He also holds the post of deputy prime minister under Prince Boun Oum.

The payments were stopped in February as a means of putting pressure on Phoumi to drop certain conditions which he had imposed for an agreement to the proposed coalition regime.

In the last few days Phoumi has told U.S. representatives, according to reports to Washington, that he was prepared to see the defense and interior posts go to a neutralist. The feeling of officials here, however, is that he still wants in effect to exercise a veto right over the choice and that this may impede prospective negotiations.

Business Leaders In West Take Rough Going Calmly

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Business has been taking some lumps—from government and the stock market. But many business and financial leaders in the West are taking this more calmly—or so they say—than some of their colleagues back East.

Here they think business will go right along setting records for some time yet and making a profit doing it.

And most of those interviewed here think it's much too early to say that a real antibusiness trend by government has set in. Many of them think business will find ways to live with seemingly new policies that startled them at first. These included setting up guidelines for their dealings with labor, for setting prices, for profit goals. They don't like it but they aren't panicky about it.

"The pendulum will swing back," says a leader in a basic industry, referring to recent government crackdowns—the steel price hike failure, antitrust suits, bans on mergers—which made others see a strong antibusiness, antibusiness swing setting in.

"Today's attitude in Washington isn't anywhere near as strong as the antibusiness drive of the 1930s," says a leading banker.

"There are plenty of signs that the administration wants us to prosper," says a manufacturer.

"Stock prices have dropped before and the nation has survived," says a utility executive. Utility stock prices are more stable than some. "It's harder to shake our confidence out here. Our growth outlook is too good."

But for all their confidence—and as far as California's future is concerned it might almost be called cockiness—all those interviewed share one belief:

The government is sticking its nose into private business a lot more than it should—even if business isn't going to curl up its toes because of it, as the pessimists have been predicting.

They called this trend dangerous if carried too far. Most hope it won't be. With one voice they say they could do better in the public interest if left alone and regulated less.

Many protest increasing competitution from government getting into business on its own in some fields and becoming a more dominant partner with private business in others.

And all express a common fear. Increasingly they have to be careful what they do, what they say, or some regulatory or investigating agency will be swooping down to look for violations of the fine print in the government rules for conducting a business—and the rules seem to multiply.

Population Tops 186,160,311

WASHINGTON (AP)—For 11 seconds Wednesday you could have had an acre of National Forest all to yourself—theoretically. But that's all over now.

The big moments came at about 4:30 p.m. The Commerce Department's population clock showed there were 186,160,311 Americans. That's the exact number of acres in the nation's National Forests.

The clock showed an increase of one citizen 11 seconds later. So someone would have had to share his acre—or everyone would have lost a little bit of land.

U.S. Commander In Thailand Is Expert On Guerrilla Tactics

By ROBERT MYERS
HONOLULU (AP)—Lt. Gen. James L. Richardson Jr., the new U.S. field commander in Thailand, has the reputation as a "quiet, scholarly soldier and a gentleman down to his fingertips."
He also is regarded as an expert on jungle guerrilla warfare where little attention is paid to fingerprints. Richardson learned his guerrilla lessons 17 years ago in another part of Southeast Asia—the Philippines.
The Nebraskan, 52, moves to his new job from what is becoming the Army's maid-in-waiting assignment. However, he will continue to wear his old hat—that of deputy chief of U.S. Army forces in the Pacific. The Army gave no reason for his holding on to the command except, perhaps, there has not been time to name a successor.

"He got the word from the Pentagon only 15 hours before he left," one of his staff officers explained. "He packed his bag, kissed his wife, held a couple of quick conferences and took off."
Richardson will lead a joint task force consisting of air, sea and ground units in Thailand. He'll work directly under an old boss and longtime comrade, Gen. Paul

D. Harkins. It was Richardson who replaced Harkins when the latter was tapped for the U.S. military assistance command job last February.

Richardson and Harkins have had parallel careers the past two years. Both arrived in Hawaii the same month, August, 1960, with Harkins taking the deputy Army post and Richardson the dual command of the 25th Division and U.S. Army Hawaii.

When Harkins was promoted to chief of the military assistance force in Viet Nam, it seemed only logical his successor would be Richardson. Only three months later, when Harkins' responsibility was expanded as part of the shift of emphasis to protect Thailand, the first high-ranking officer called was Richardson.

While heading the 25th Division, Richardson developed the unit's guerrilla warfare ability in the hills of Hawaii. War games raged across the jagged peaks of Oahu and the island of Hawaii. A guerrilla training compound was set up behind Schofield Barracks, headquarters of the 25th. Some 2,000 of these 25th Division troops will be with Richardson in Thailand. They know what their old leader demands and he knows what they can produce.

Laos Not Rich, But Conqueror Can Use It As Bridge To Fertile Fields

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Laos, the cold war's current flash point, offers a conqueror few riches. But to food-short Communists of China and North Viet Nam, the Kansas-sized jungle kingdom is a bridge to the fertile rice fields of Southeast Asia.

Romantically labeled "land of the million elephants and the white parasol," Laos is slightly more than 90,000 square miles of landlocked jungle and mountains from which its 2 million to 3 million inhabitants draw a meager existence.

But for the Chinese and North Vietnamese Communists, control of Laos could open the road to the rice of Burma, Thailand, Cambodia, and South Viet Nam, which share Laos' borders.

Son Recovered After Abduction

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—A Canadian Embassy employe reported Wednesday his teen-age son was bound, gagged and left on a rooftop by two would-be kidnapers who demanded $56,000 ransom.

The boy, Gordon Wallace, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Wallace of Vancouver, was found safe on the roof of Wallace's apartment building Monday.

Newspapers reported police had arrested the building superintendent.

The boy's father said two men grabbed his son as he was walking down stairs, hid him on the roof and left a note at his apartment door demanding the ransom money be put in the elevator. Wallace said that he called the police who found the youth a short time later.

Pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels already control Laos' eastern border with South Viet Nam, and North Vietnamese Communists have been pouring across it to wage war on the pro-Western Saigon government. The United States fears the Reds have similar plans along the eastern border.

But for a few Western innovations, not all welcomed, Laos is unchanged from centuries ago. There are no railroads and only 3,500 miles of roads. Most travel is by plane, which few Laotians can afford, or by the Mekong River, which meanders along the western edge of the kingdom.

Industry is negligible. Educational facilities, other than Buddhist schools, are in pathetically short supply. What wealth is accumulated is usually lavished on religious festivals. While the United States was pumping $25 million in economic aid into Laos in 1960, the government spent $500,000 on cremation ceremonies for King Sisavang Vong, who died 18 months before.

Most Laotians are farmers, usually rice growers, who seek from their toil only enough to subsist on with a little extra for bartering. They are gentle and courteous and lead a slow-paced life that on the average does not exceed 40 years. More than 80 per cent are illiterate. They practice a form of Buddhism widely mixed with spirit worship.

For centuries, the Laotian have been the pawns of bigger powers. France got the area, a group of feudal kingdoms, from Thailand late in the last century. Japan occupied it during World War II. The French returned but by 1949 recognized Laos as an independent sovereign state.

The pro-Communist Pathet Lao faction rejected the Vientiane government, however, contending it was still a vassal of France. Pathet Lao guerrillas were scoring successes in northeastern Laos before fighting subsided with the 1954 Geneva agreement partitioning French Indochina. The French withdrew, and Communist China recognized Laos as an independent state.

Political rivalries among rightists, neutralists and pro-Communists kept the country in turmoil, encouraged by China and North Viet Nam, the Pathet Lao renewed their bid to take the country by force. The rebels broke a year-old cease-fire last week, and now occupy two-thirds of the country.

Little Leagues Get Underway

FIRST PITCH . . . Mayor Charles King hurls first ball to get Little League season underway Wednesday afternoon. (Reflector Staff Photo)

By GEORGE BRYANT
Reflector Sports Editor
Greenville Little League action officially got underway yesterday when Mayor Charles King threw out the first ball at Elm Street Park as the Elks prepared to meet the Exchange team.

Prior to demonstrating his pitching ability Mayor King told the players and fans that he wished them one of the best seasons ever.

At the Guy Smith Little League field the Lions and Texaco teams of the North State League also opened the new season.

As is the case on most opening days there was a certain amount of confusion, but the Little League leaders were able to overcome the mild troubles and last minute problems which arose and the season got off to a good start.

Shortly before game time one of the officials called and said he would be unable to call the game he was assigned to. However, this problem was quickly corrected by supervisor W. C. James.

All of the players appeared very excited before the game and this led to some flag raising problems. The custom at Little League games is to raise the American flag and the Little League flag before the game begins and play the Star Spangled Banner. Following this the teams repeat the Little League Pledge before the game starts.

However, on opening day the excited boys had some trouble getting the flags up in the right order and then they apparently did not tie them right because shortly after the first pitch was hurled they fell. However, a watchful parent was quickly on the scene to remedy the situation.

Loud speaker trouble or record player trouble also hindered the Star Spangled Banner record somewhat, but this is a minor thing and was probably corrected before game time today.

Taking everything into consideration the opening day was a success with plenty of parents and brothers and sisters of players on hand to watch the activity.

There was one slight difference in this opening day from those of the past and that was the annual Little League supper. It is usually held on opening day, but this year the date was moved up a week to help avoid some of the confusion. It will be held Wednesday following the games across from Elm Street Park.

Harriette White Captures Club Golf Championship

Harriette White won the championship flight of the Greenville Golf and Country Club women's match play tournament Tuesday when she shot a 72 on 16 holes to defeat Jane Sauve who shot a 75.

Mrs. White was one up at the end of the first nine with a 40 and at the end of the 16th hole she was three up which ended the play.

On the tenth hole the two golfers both shot three leaving Mrs. White still out in front by one. However, on the next hole she pulled ahead when she shot a four and Mrs. Sauve shot five.

Both Mrs. White and Mrs. Sauve shot fives on the 12th hole and on the 13th Mrs. Sauve narrowed the margin by one when she shot a six and her opponent had a seven.

Mrs. Sauve had a chance to knock off another stroke on the 14th hole, but she missed a short putt giving both golfers a four on the hole. On the last two holes Mrs. White was one point under her opponent both times giving her the victory.

In the first flight Bonnie Raul was the winner when she defeated Edna Fisher. The second flight winner is Mrs. R. H. Evans who defeated Mrs. Sam Underwood.

The third flight is not yet completed, but Myra Hodges will play Mrs. Clarence Tugwell for the championship. The fourth flight winner was Virginia Minges who downed Francis Dudley and Margaret Sutton topped Mrs. Badger Clark to win the fifth flight.

Lions Top Texaco Nine, Elks Defeat Exchange

NORTH STATE

In North State Little League action yesterday the Lions staged an eleven run rally in the bottom of the third to aid in their 12-4 romp over Texaco.

The Lions opened the scoring in the bottom of the third as they tallied eleven runs on seven hits, two walks, and four errors. Phil Dorroll and Allan Ramsau led the inning off for the Lions as they both reached base safely on errors.

Dorroll put the Lions in front as he scored their first run on a wild pitch. Charles Register then doubled to put runners on second and third. The next batter, Al Gurganus doubled to drive in two runs and set the score at 3-0. The Lions continued their scoring ways as they went on to an 11-0 lead.

Texaco made a futile effort to get back in the game in the top of the fourth frame as they scored two runs on three walks, one error, and one hit. Leon Peardon led Texaco off in the frame as he collected his first hit of the day, a single off of pitcher Jeff Wilson.

Lion pitcher Wilson then walked two of the next three batters to load the bases with one out. Warren, a pinchhitter, came to the plate and walked to force Peardon across the plate for Texaco's first run. Tom Jamieson later came in to score to set the score at 11-2.

Texaco went on to add two more runs to their total as the contest continued, however, Texaco could not overcome the deficit as the Lions went on to win. The winning pitcher was Jeff Wilson who struck out, walked five, and gave up eight runs on five hits.

The losing pitcher was Scott Hardy who struck out three, walked two, and gave up eight runs on five hits.

Today, in the North State League, Coca Cola was scheduled to meet the Jaycees in their first game of the season. The game was set for 4:30 p.m. in Guy Smith Little League Park. Texaco . . . . . 001 211- 4 4 9

TAR HEEL

In opening day Tar Heel Little League action Wednesday the Elks was Kenneth Beaman and on the Elm Street Park field.

The winning pitcher for the Elks was Kenneth Beaman and the losing pitcher for Exchange was Mike White. Beaman allowed one hit, struck out 10 and walked none. White allowed seven hits, struck out six and walked four.

The Elks opened up the scoring in the bottom of the second inning when Louis Gaylord connected for a double and advanced to third on an error. The run was scored on a passed ball.

Exchange tied the game in the top of the fourth when pitcher White got on on an error by the third baseman. He advanced to second on an error by the left fielder and came home on an error by the shortstop.

However, the tie did not last long as the Elks came back in the bottom of the fourth to take the lead when they managed to score three more runs giving them the victory.

The first batter, Gaylord, hit a single and managed to score after an error and a single by teammate Alex Speight. After Harrison Gaskins flied out to second Tim Foley walked advancing Speight to second.

The big batter of the inning was Russell Smith who hit a double scoring Speight and Foley came in on a single by Bobby Lee before Smith was thrown out to retire the side.

In one Tar Heel League today Security Life was scheduled to play the Moose team on the Elm Street field at 4:30.

Palmer, Player In Asheville

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Arnold Palmer, golf's leading money winner of the year, and Gary Player were to meet here today in their second exhibition match in the state in two days.

Palmer, former Masters champion, fired a six-under par 65 at Raleigh on Wednesday to defeat Palmer, who posted a 69 over the 6,171-yard Carolina Country Club course.

The two stars held a clinic prior to their Raleigh match which drew a crowd of more than 2,000. Net proceeds will go to the Buddy Worsham Memorial Scholarship Fund. Worsham, a golfing teammate of Palmer at Wake Forest College, was killed in an auto accident in 1950.

The National AAU outdoor track championships will be held June 23-24 at Mt. San Antonio, Calif.

Virginia Captures ACC Lead; Top Terps 2-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who would have figured Virginia had a chance to win the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball title?

Nobody, that's who.

Just 10 days ago the Cavaliers were in fourth place with a 4-4 ACC record, 6-10 over-all, and going nowhere fast.

At the same time, Wake Forest had a 9-2 conference record and was 16-5 over-all.

So look who's on top today. The Cavaliers gained the lead—and a clear shot at the title—with their 2-0 victory over Maryland Wednesday, coupled with Wake Forest's 13-11 loss to N.C. State.

Virginia leads with an 8-4 ACC record, and can take the title by beating South Carolina in a pair of makeup games. Wake Forest has completed its season and stands 9-5. The Deacons can gain a tie if Virginia splits its games with South Carolina, and can win if Virginia loses both.

"It really feels good to hear Wake Forest got beat," said Virginia Coach Jim West when he heard the news. "I can't really believe it," he continued.

Referring to the South Carolina games he said beating any team twice is tough "but this will give the boys plenty of incentive. I believe we can do it."

Virginia's victory over Maryland—the fifth straight conference victory for the Cavaliers—was accomplished with just two hits.

The Cavaliers were held hitless by Maryland's Jerry Vezendy for five innings. They scored one in the sixth on a walk, a stolen base, a bunt single and a passed ball. In the seventh, they scored another on a walk, a sacrifice, a single and a sacrifice fly.

Virginia's Bill Spencer chalked up his fifth victory. He's lost two. Spencer gave up only five hits, walked only one and fanned six.

North Carolina State and Wake Forest were tied 5-5 going into the bottom of the sixth. The Wolfpack scored eight runs in the sixth, four of them on a grand-slam homer by shortstop Wayne Edwards.

There were 24 hits in the game, 16 of them for extra bases. There were 11 doubles, a triple and four home runs. Wake Forest's Roger Coon swatted two homers, a double and a single.

The loss was charged to Pat McDowell, his first of the season after five victories. Bob Connor picked up the victory, his sixth against three losses.

The date and site of the Virginia-South Carolina doubleheader hasn't been set. West said he was trying to work it out for next Monday. The games will be played at a neutral park.

North Carolina and N.C. State collide tonight in an exhibition game at Asheboro, N.C.

NBA Meeting Postponed

NEW YORK (AP)—The off-again, on-again annual meeting of the National Basketball Association is off again.

The league's board of directors was scheduled to meet today to resume deliberations over a proposed franchise shift to San Francisco, but the meeting was postponed to Wednesday, May 23.

No reason for the postponement was given, but there was some speculation it may have been done in order to give Philadelphia owner Eddie Gottlieb additional time to work out a plan to sell his franchise.

Gottlieb has a reported $850,000 offer for the Philadelphia franchise—including super star Wilt Chamberlain—from a group that wants to move it to San Francisco.

But the league directors, particularly those representing Syracuse, Boston and New York, so far have balked at the proposal.

Top AL Pitcher Is Rookie On The Last Place Team

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

In the helter-skelter scramble of the American League race it is not so surprising that the hottest pitcher of the moment is a rookie with the club stuck in last place—Dave Stenhouse of the Washington Senators.

The right-hander, 28, who waited eight seasons before his first big league start came along 11 days ago, scored impressively again Wednesday night with a four-hitter that cooled off the Chicago White Sox 3-1.

Washington has won but seven games and the unbeaten Stenhouse has accounted for three of them in his starting assignments. The New Englander was touched off by an unearned run by the White Sox in the first inning but checked them the rest of the way.

Cleveland protected its league lead by overcoming Kansas City 10-9 on John Romano's two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth. New York and Minnesota stayed a half game behind with victories, the Yankees rallying for a 9-8 decision over Boston and the Twins clubbing Detroit 8-4. Los Angeles stopped Baltimore 3-1 behind the neat pitching of Ken McBride, Jack Spring and Ryne Duren.

San Francisco rolled on in the National League, belting St. Louis 7-2; Los Angeles ran away from Houston 5-2; Cincinnati shaded Philadelphia 6-5; Pittsburgh routed Milwaukee 4-0; and New York outscored Chicago in 11 innings, 6-5.

Stenhouse, a graduate engineer from the University of Rhode Island, was a minor leaguer for seven seasons as a farmhand for the Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati Reds before the Reds dealt him to Washington this past winter.

The White Sox gained a tie in the first inning on Jim King's three-base error on Luis Aparicio's deep drive and a sacrifice fly. But the Senators pinned the loss on Early Wynn.

Romano connected for his homer against Kansas City reliever Diego Segui on a 3-2 pitch, with Don Dillard on second and two other runners on base. Woodie Held and Willie Kirkland also had two-run homers for the Indians, while Chuck Essegian hit one with none on.

Mike Fornieles had two strikes on Mickey Mantle with two out in the Yankee ninth at Boston but the Bombers, trailing 7-6, staved off their fourth straight loss. Mantle finally walked, Yogi Berra singled, then Elston Howard and Bill Skowron put the Yanks ahead with singles off Dick Radatz. Clete Boyer followed with a double against the Boston rookie, making it 9-7.

The Red Sox came back in their half of the inning with one run before Marshall Bridges stopped the threat.

The Twins, winning their fourth in a row and ninth in 12 games, peppered Detroit pitching for 15 hits.

McBride stifled the Orioles on three scratch hits but needed relief after putting two on with none out in the ninth. Spring was tagged for John Powell's two-out single, chasing in the Baltimore run, then Duren struck out pinch hitter Gus Triandos.

Leon Wagner powered in the first two Angels' runs with a double in the first and his 10th homer in the sixth, and Lee Thomas routed Chuck Estrada with another homer in the sixth.

Small attendance is a problem at some of the Carolina League parks, but not at Kinston.

The Kinston Eagles have been averaging about 2,000 fans per game thus far. A crowd of 2,889 turned out Wednesday night to see the Eagles pound out a 10-2 victory over Wilson.

Home runs by Jim Russin and Harry Kolbauch in a five-run third inning sparked Winston-Salem to a 7-5 victory over Greensboro.

The Raleigh Caps snapped a five-game losing streak, defeating Rocky Mount 9-6. John Schoenberger's bases-loaded triple in the eighth with two out provided the victory.

Burlington rallied for two runs in the eighth to defeat Durham 4-3 and halt the Bulls' victory string at nine.

Tonight's games: Greensboro at Burlington; Raleigh at Kinston; Rocky Mount at Wilson; Durham at Winston-Salem.

Cards' Manager Denies Offer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—St. Louis Cardinal Manager Johnny Keane denied today his club had made an offer to the Chicago Cubs for outfielder George Altman.

Reports in New York Wednesday indicated the Cards were prepared to trade right-handed pitcher Ernie Broglio and outfielder Charlie James for the hard-hitting Altman.

St. Louis is hard-pressed in the outfield because of the recent injury to Minnie Miñoso, who fractured his skull and wrist when he crashed into a wall last week.

Maris Injured Wednesday

BOSTON (AP)—The extent of home run slugger Roger Maris' injury won't be known until the New York Yankees take the field against the Boston Red Sox today.

Maris, who set the record of 61 homers for a 162-game schedule last season, was forced out of Wednesday night's game in the fifth inning because of a muscle pull on his upper left thigh. Maris apparently hurt himself leaping against the low bullpen wall in right field trying to pull down Carl Yastrzemski's home run.

Giants Continue Winning Streak

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Stan Musial got the big one. But Harvey Kuenn got THE big one. And that's the story of another victory for the sizzling San Francisco Giants, who continued their headlong rush over all opposition Wednesday by whipping the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 for their 17th victory in the last 20 games.

While the Cards were dropping into fourth place with their ninth defeat in 12 games, Musial, 41, snapped an 0-for-15 slump with a single in the sixth inning for the elusive hit that tied him with Honus Wagner for the most hits in National League history—3,430.

The left-handed swinger had previously set two league career records this season—runs scored and games played—and now holds or shares 40 NL records and 13 major league marks.

Kuenn's key hit won it for the Giants. The former American League batting king upped his average to a league-leading .380 with the single that drove in Ed Bailey with the tie-breaking run in the seventh.

Orlando Cepeda then hit a three-run homer, his 10th, as the Giants erupted for five runs to wrap it up. The triumph kept San Francisco's lead at four games over the second-place Los Angeles Dodgers, who won their seventh in eight games, 5-2 over Houston.

Cincinnati's defending champion Reds took over third place, 6 1/2 games back, by nipping Philadelphia 6-5. Al McBean and Diomedes Olivo combined for a five-hitter in Pittsburgh's 6-0 shut out of Milwaukee and the New York Mets beat Chicago's Cubs 6-5 in 11 innings.

In the American League, first-place Cleveland outlasted Kansas City 10-9. Minnesota belted Detroit 8-4, the New York Yankees edged Boston 9-8. Los Angeles Angels defeated Baltimore 3-1 and Washington topped the Chicago White Sox 3-1.

The Cards got single runs off Juan Marichal (7-2) in the second and sixth, but he slammed the door thereafter. The Giants tied it in the sixth when Cepeda singled and Felipe Alou homered, then came up with five in the seventh. Lindy McDaniel (1-3) was the loser.

The Dodgers stole five bases and converted four walks into runs to beat the Colts. Maury Wills scored one of two runs in the first on a wild pitch, then came across with the run that proved to be the winner in the third when he singled, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Wally Moon's single. Joe Moeller (2-3) won it with ninth inning relief help from Ed Roebuck. Dick Farrell (3-3) lost it.

Vada Pinson's double after a walk and Eddie Kasko's single knocked in the clincher for the streaking Reds, and made it five losses in a row for the Phils. Reliever Jim Brosnan (1-1) got the victory. Frank Sullivan (0-2) was the loser.

The Pirates put it away with five runs in the fourth including a homer by Smokey Burgess. The loser was Bob Hendley (2-3).

Felix Mantilla's bases-loaded single in the 11th after a pair of walks and a single by winner Jay Hook (3-2) gave the Mets their second straight extra-inning triumph over the last-place Cubs.

The New Yorkers had tied it in the eighth on Gil Hodges' inside-the-park homer. Glen Hobbie gave

The Raleigh Caps snapped a five-game losing streak, defeating Rocky Mount 9-6. John Schoenberger's bases-loaded triple in the eighth with two out provided the victory.

Play Day Held For Students

As a culmination of the year's physical fitness program, students of Agnes Fulllove School participated in Play Day Wednesday at Guy Smith Stadium.

The aim of the program has been to increase physical growth and efficiency, develop desirable emotional habits and attitudes and lead children to the selection and enjoyment of wholesome play.

A walk to the stadium and warm up calisthenics, participated in by all students, began the events. Student teachers directed the activities.

Then each grade group demonstrated selected stunts, games, relays or rhythmic and self testing activities in which they have participated during the year.

Concluding the program, two groups presented a humorous skit demonstrating physical fitness tests as they were performed before and after the year's work.

Mrs. Margaret Richardson was coordinator of the activities, assisted by teachers and student teachers.

Over 200 persons visited the facilities of the Greenville Police Department yesterday as the local law enforcement organization held open house.

Funeral Friday For Mrs. M. D. Beach

Mrs. Betty Smith Beach, 42, wife of Martin D. Beach of 404 Hillcrest Drive, died at Pitt Memorial Hospital Wednesday night at 6:35 after several days of critical illness.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Wilkerson Chapel Friday afternoon at three o'clock by her pastor, the Rev. Richard Davis. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Beach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Smith of Winterville, was born and reared in Winterville and was graduated from the Winterville High School in February, 1941, and had spent all her married life in Greenville, operating the B. & B. Dress Shop for the past 11 years. She was a member of the Winterville Baptist Church.

Surviving are her husband; her parents; two sisters, Mrs. John Worthington of Winterville and Mrs. Tyson James of Portsmouth, Va.; and a brother, Garland Smith of Greensboro.

Officers said 212 persons registered, but estimated that at least 75 other visitors failed to sign the guest book.

Simpson School Pupils Toured Tryon Palace

The open house was part of the department's observance of Police Week, set aside by a joint resolution of Congress last year.

All departments of the organization were opened to the public, with displays of firearms, electrical speed checking devices, and crime scene search and identification equipment being part of displayed equipment.

A memorial service, honoring deceased members of the department, was held at 4 p.m. in the city Court Room with the Rev. R. B. Crawford conducting the service.

Those honored at the service were Joseph Lawrence Nobles, George A. Clark, Horace Beaufort Drum, W. L. Brewer, Jesse Mills, S. Bowen Dorsey and Roy Harris.

It was noted that in all, the length of service of the officers totaled 152 years.

As part of the memorial service, Mrs. Geraldine Mills Sutton presented a plaque in memory of her father, policeman Jesse Mills, to the department.

Officer Mills was killed by robbers August 16, 1952, while checking his beat. He was 50-years-old.

In part, the plaque read, "His life was given that others might live in peace without fear."

Simpson School Pupils Toured Tryon Palace

SIMPSON — Thirty-nine students of Simpson School toured Tryon Palace in New Bern on Tuesday.

Those making the trip were Dorothy Greene, Michael Williams, Frank Anderson, Willie A. Moore, Waver L. Hardy, Brenda F. White, Peggy J. White, L'tange Greene, Anthony Rodgers, Thomas W. Brown, Delores Gardner, Daniel Clemons, Sandra L. Council.

Also, James C. White, Elbert R. Smith, Deborah Wilson, Doris Marie Greene, Willie Hawkins, Milton Hawkins, Faye Williams, David Gray, Samuel Smith, Linda Gallin, Verna Grimes, Gloria J. Greene, George Moore, Willie Burney, Jimmy Nelson, Margaret Williams, Sarah A. Parker, Joseph Stephenson.

Also, Cary L. Stephenson, James T. Baker, Joyce A. Greene, Ella M. White, Willie Moore, Evelyn Gardner, Dorothy M. Johnson and Jessie Station.

New Officers Of Grifton PTA Installed At Meet

GRIFTON — New officers of the Grifton P.T.A. were installed at a meeting Tuesday night, with Mrs. James Hudson assuming the duties of president.

Also installed were Ray Moye, vice president; Bud Lyerly, president-elect; Mrs. Floyd Harris, secretary; and John Glenn, treasurer. Sam Nelson, chairman of the local school board, installed the officers.

Dr. Ed Hasley, outgoing president, presided and presented a resume of the year's work. He noted that the outstanding accomplishment during the past year was an all-out effort in behalf of the bond issue for a wing at Grifton High School. In other notable accomplishments, the P.T.A. raised a record budget of $1,504 and applied it to betterment of the school and teachers, modification of the Teacher's Scholarship program to make it a more versatile instrument in the long-range improvement of the school.

Committees were headed by the following: Mrs. Dennis Hookway, legislative and planning; Mrs. R. G. Murnford, library; Mrs. Max-

McLaughlin, house and grounds; Mrs. Gilda Padgett, program; Bud Lyerly and Dave Bosley, ways and means.

Dr. Hasley said that credit for success of the past year's work was due to those who supported P.T.A. activities.

Following the business session, the Beginners' Band, Junior Band and High School Band presented a concert under the direction of Jerry VanDyke.

Principal E. B. Bright gave the invocation.

Falkland Fire Truck Due Today

FALKLAND — Falkland's volunteer fire department is scheduled to receive its long-awaited fire truck this afternoon.

Fire Chief J.P. Stancil said delivery of the mobile unit by C. W. Williams Co. of Rocky Mount late this afternoon.

Stancil said final arrangements for housing the truck have not yet been completed. Funds for the vehicle, he said, have been raised locally by various benefit dinners and other activities.

Anglo-Saxons occupied Nottingham, of Robin Hood fame, in the 6th Century. By 1086 the town had 120 inhabitants.

Strickland Enjoys Work As Pitt Commissioner

BRUCE STRICKLAND . . . member of the Pitt County Board of County Commissioners

COMMISSIONER . . . favors bond election on rest home proposal.

MUCH IS GAINED . . . from visiting and discussing problems in county offices.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

It is only right that tobacco, which has dominated the Pitt County scene for generations, is the business of Bruce Strickland, a member of the Board of County Commissioners.

Strickland, a native Pitt Countyman from Bell Arthur, attended the Bell Arthur school and Greenville High School, then entered the tobacco business.

He is now assistant sales manager for a local warehouse and has been employed by the firm for the past 30 years. Also, he is a member of the sales department of a chemical company specializing in fertilizer used on tobacco and other crops in this area.

But that's not all. A farmer all of his life, Strickland has a 150 acre farm including 23 acres of the "golden weed," tobacco. Strickland's first venture into the political field was two years ago when he ran for the commissioner post, and was elected. He decided to seek the post because he thought, "maybe I could be of service to the county."

There is no one particular thing the elected official likes best about serving on the board, but enjoys "all of it very much."

Concrete Excuse For The Judge

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP)—One prospective juror had a concrete excuse to dodge his duty.

He explained to Circuit Judge Charles M. Phillips Jr., that he was employed on the often-delayed courthouse expansion project.

"We have a concrete pouring scheduled for this morning," he told the judge. "According to the specifications, work is supposed to stop if I'm not there when the pouring is made."

"You may be excused," said the judge. "Go, and don't stop along the way."

Nine Airmen Die In AF Plane

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The nine crewmen of a crashed U.S. Air Force plane, were found dead Wednesday, the Mexican Defense Ministry announced.

The victims included Airman 2. C. Edward L. Gurley of Goldsboro, N. C.

The plane, from Harlingen Air Force Base in Texas, crashed while searching for a missing private plane. The private plane was found undamaged, and its pilot safe.

Re-Elect

House of Representatives
From Pitt County

Democratic Primary, May 26
6 YEARS EXPERIENCE

TOBACCO . . . plays a big role in the life of Strickland as well as in County.

Seeing government in action and taking part in that action is very interesting, and having a part in helping Pitt County go forward is rewarding.

One of the things Strickland would like to see while in office is the establishment of a rest home or new county home.

"I'd like to see a rest home get going," he emphasized, "because it's needed."

"I think this," he added, "We should have a bond election for this project and if the people want it, let them have it."

Another project which the official is interested in is the industrial education center. With this, he says, Pitt will have a complete educational program from kindergarten, grade school and high school to college and industrial training.

It will mean much to the economy of the County and be a drawing card for industry.

Strickland is a member of the Bell Arthur Christian Church, a Mason, member of the White Shrine, Eastern Star and the Greenville Moose Lodge.

His hobbies include bird hunting and fishing.

Strickland married the former Virginia Dare Reel of Pamlico county. They have two children, Bruce, 26, who now lives in Richmond and Vivian, 17, a senior at Winterville High School.

Mrs. Strickland is a teacher in the Grimesland School.

New Reynolds Divorce Trial Motion Is Filed

DARIEN, Ga. (AP) — The third wife of Richard J. Reynolds says she was deeply disappointed over a jury verdict awarding the tobacco fortune her a divorce and denying her any alimony.

"But I am sure that justice will triumph in the end," said Muriel Marston Laurence Greenough.

Funeral Saturday For W. A. Braxton

FARMVILLE—William Alonzo ("Sam") Braxton, 65, died at his home early Thursday morning following a heart attack. Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Central Baptist Church in Farmville, with his pastor, the Rev. Don Bryant of Farmville, officiating. Interment will follow in the Hollywood Cemetery in Farmville. The body will be taken from the Farmville Funeral Home to the church one hour prior to the service. Mr. Braxton was a lifelong resident of the Farmville community. He was a member of the Central Baptist Church, Order of Redmen, and had worked with the Farmville Laundry for 14 years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lottie Baldree Braxton of the home; one daughter, Mrs. Tom Harris of Portsmouth, Va.; two step-daughters, Mrs. Robert Keeter of Columbia, S. C., Mrs. W. B. Braxton of Germany; three step-sons, James E. Boyce of Norfolk, Va., William D. Boyce of Baltimore, Md., Harold Boyce of Newark, Md.; four sisters, Mrs. Levi Tugwell of Farmville, Mrs. Milton Moye of Snow Hill, Mrs. Emmett Laster of Farmville and Mrs. Clay Braswell of Wilson; one brother, Eddie Braxton, Rt. 2, Farmville; 17 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Melford D. Walston Funeral On Friday

FARMVILLE—Melford Douglas Walston, 55, died at his home in Farmville Wednesday night of a heart attack.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 2:30 p.m. at the Farmville Funeral Home by his pastor, the Rev. Edward Miles of Walstonburg, assisted by the Rev. S. A. Smith of Beaufort. Interment will follow in the Walstonburg Cemetery in Walstonburg.

Mr. Walston had resided in the Farmville community for the past 15 years, was a carpenter and a member of Spring Branch Free Will Baptist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minnie Diddy Walston of the home; three daughters, Mrs. Wallace L. Whitley of Wilson, Mrs. William Thigpen of Albertson and Mrs. Joseph H. Smith of Goldsboro; one son, William D. Walston of Farmville; two sisters, Mrs. George Dail of Stan-tonburg and Mrs. Sam Walston of Greenville; four grandchildren.

Reynolds, 48. She showed no emotion when a jury returned the verdict Wednesday after deliberating six hours. Her attorneys immediately filed a motion for a new trial, starting the case on another appeal.

A decree granted the 56-year-old millionaire two years ago, but overturned by the Georgia Supreme Court, provided alimony of $1,042 a month for Mrs. Reynolds. She sought $200,000 a year or a settlement of $6 million.

The Supreme Court threw out the first decree on the ground numerous errors were committed by the trial court. That court also held the alimony was insufficient. The verdict in the second trial had the effect of clearing Reynolds of an adultery accusation made against him after his marriage to Annemarie Schmitt, 32, a German doctor, when he thought he had been divorced from Mrs. Reynolds.

Reynolds, whose wealth was stipulated at $25 million, was jubilant after jury foreman G. C. Rogers, a shrimp boat operator, read the verdict.

He said he planned to remarry Annemarie as soon as he is legally free. But attorneys in the case said his freedom will not come as long as appeals are pending. Reynolds charged his third wife with misconduct in the form of alleged cruelties. Among the cruelties, he said, was the wearing of a dagger at her waist and constant nagging over money. She testified she carried the knife to cut flowers.

Attends Nurses Ass'n Sessions

Dean Eva Warren of the School of Nursing at East Carolina College is in Detroit, Mich., this week attending the American Nurses Association Biennial Convention and Clinical Sessions. The meeting, scheduled May 14-18, will have among its chief attractions an address by Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Abraham A. Ribicoff.

Mrs. Warren is Chairman of the Finance Committee of the N. C. State Nurses' Association.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee" was written in 1831 by the Reverend Charles Francis Smith.

Rev. J. E. Sawyer Dies In Greensboro

AYDEN — The Rev. John E. Sawyer, former superintendent of the Ayden public schools for 10 years, died in the Cone Hospital in Greensboro Tuesday night.

For the past three months he had been visiting his daughter, Mrs. James S. Trivett in Greensboro and prior to that time had made his home in Arlington, Va. with his son, John W. Sawyer.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 10:30 a.m. at Lambeth Trotter Funeral Home in Greensboro. Graveside services will be held at 4 p.m. Friday in Ayden Cemetery.

The Rev. Mr. Sawyer graduated from Guilford College in 1910 and received his Master's Degree from the University of North Carolina in 1929.

He was head of the State Normal School for Indians in Pembroke and was a Baptist minister for 20 years prior to his retirement. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Sanford, member of Sanford Masonic Lodge and the Sanford Rotary Club.

Women of Great Britain have had the right to vote since 1918.

Entertainer To Enter Politics

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Song-writer-entertainer Gene Austin, saying "a lot of people are going to laugh at first," declares he will seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Nevada.

Austin told newsmen Wednesday that he will oppose Gov. Grant Sawyer.

He is the composer of such songs as "The Lonesome Road," "When My Sugar Walks Down The Street" and "How Come You Do Me Like You Do?" Austin, 61, said he had been a registered Democrat in Nevada since 1947.

"I have nothing against Sawyer's administration," he said. "I just think I can do better. I've got some good ideas."

load of Negro families to Hyannis Port, Mass., where President Kennedy has a summer home. George Singlemann, director of the Citizens Council of Greater New Orleans, which is financing the one-way trips, said he wants to fill a 40-passenger bus with families and send them to Hyannis Port.

Of the group that left Wednesday, 14 were on a bus that is due in New York at 9 a.m. Friday. The other three missed the bus and left later in the day. All but one were headed for New York.

The exception, Raymond Baptiste, 20, a porter, was bound for Philadelphia to look for a job. He said he had been out of work for months.

Power-Mower Dangers Cited; Many Mishaps

Dr. John Futrell, Pitt County health director, this week warned citizens of the dangers that power-driven lawn mowers can inflict.

Last year, approximately 100 accidents occurred in Pitt County involving lawn mowers. In the United States, some 75,000 such accidents occur annually, with more than half the injuries to feet and hands.

About one-third of the accidents involve different parts of the body when stones or pieces of metal are thrown by the mower blades.

Dr. Futrell pointed out that most injuries are due to carelessness or error on the part of the person using a mower.

He issued several suggestions to avoid such accidents. The person using the mower should remove stones, sticks and other objects from the lawn and check the mower to see that all bolts, nuts and screws are properly tightened. Fuel should be added before starting the engine, never while the engine is running.

A person using a power driven lawn mower should keep hands and feet away from the mower blades when starting and mowing and learn how to stop the mower's engine quickly.

Other advice is

—Children and pets should be at a safe distance from the mower, preferably inside the house.

—Stop engine before pushing the mower across gravel driveways, walks or roads.

—Be sure of footing when mowing slopes or when grass is wet.

—Never plug in an electric mower when it is raining.

—Mow away from yourself.

—Sit-down mowers can turn over on sloping ground.

—Disconnect the spark wire before checking or cleaning mower.

—Mowers with crank-type starters should not be in a charged position until ready for use.

—Keep fuel in marked, closed container in a safe place.

—At all times, stop the engine when the mower is left unattended and scan the path in advance of the mower for objects that might be thrown.

Its reliability is probably its greatest single asset

When you build a quality truck, the inclination is to run around asking users what they think of it. We do quite a bit of this.

It's a funny thing. You'd think people would talk mostly about the mechanical features of the vehicle—the good ride, its power, the double-wall construction, cab comfort, or tough tailgate.

These things get comment, of course, but they're consistently outnumbered by expressions of satisfaction with the dependability of a Chevrolet truck. Its greatest single asset seems to be the fact that it does its job well day after day without a lot of fuss or attention—and that's what impresses people the most.

Quality is the key to reliability. The next time you have to buy a truck, call your Chevrolet dealer and make your money go farther.

TV Economic Education Course To Be Discussed

Educators, businessmen, economists, and others from a wide area in Piedmont and Eastern North Carolina who are interested in increased economic education in the nation's schools and colleges will meet at East Carolina College Friday night, May 18, to discuss a new two-semester national education course to be launched on CBS's College of the Air in September.

Entitled "The American Economy," the course has been planned by Learning Resources Institute of New York City and will be offered for credit during the 1962-1963 academic year not only over the CBS Television Network but also over a number of educational TV stations.

It is jointly sponsored by LRI, the American Economic Association, and the Joint Council on Economic Education.

Dr. Dorothy Gregg, Assistant Staff Director of Educational Services for the U. S. Steel Corporation, will speak at a dinner at 6:30 p.m. in the South Dining Hall at the college. She will outline "The American Economy" course in detail and explain how it can be used most effectively by teachers in North Carolina.

Her talk will deal also with the importance of economic education and some of the things which are now being done in the field. Dr. Gregg has an impressive background as an economist, research worker, and writer. Before assuming her present duties with the U. S. Steel Corporation, she acted as researcher for the organization, as research consultant to various management consulting firms, and special research assistant or consultant in agencies of the Federal Government. She has taught at the School

Three Dead In Stunt Man Facing Shooting Spree Up To His Accident

EAST MEADOW, N.Y. (AP)—A former mental patient shot his aunt and uncle to death today, wounded their two small daughters and killed himself.

The slayer, Marvin Rosen, 29, set the family's $25,000 split-level home afire with bottles of gasoline.

Two explosions followed. A side of the house was blown out.

Slain by rifle shots were Albert Mittleman, 42, a lawyer; and his wife, Blanche, 39.

Their children—Lorraine, 14, and Michele, 13, wounded and dazed—were found stumbling in the yard as flames spread through the house.

The children were taken to Meadowbrook Hospital. There was no immediate report on how seriously they were wounded.

Neighbors rushed from their homes as they heard the explosions about 5 a. m. in the Mittleman home, where Rosen also had been living.

Police said they could not immediately determine Rosen's motive.

They said they smelled gasoline around the blazing house, and found bottles of gasoline in Rosen's car.

The bodies of Mittleman and his wife were found in the fire ruins.

Dr. Francis Moore, Nassau County assistant medical examiner, said Rosen had been under mental treatment at least twice in the past three years at Pilegrim State Hospital at Brentwood N.Y., east of here on Long Island.

Rosen's ailment was diagnosed as acute schizophrenia.

Audubon Once A Store-Owner

HENDERSON, Ky. (AP)—The famous naturalist, John James Audubon, was co-owner of a general store here in the early 19th Century.

He roamed the Kentucky hillsides sketching pictures of wild-life for several years, before bankruptcy caused him and his family to move.

In Baltimore, It's Flowers

BALTIMORE (AP)—"Look at those flares," a man said to a woman as they walked past John Goodspeed, columnist for the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Goodspeed has made quite a study of the local dialect he calls Baltimore, but it took him a minute before he realized they were talking about flowers.

Stunt Man Facing Up To His Accident

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—There is a special breed of brave men in movie making called stunt men. One of the most fearless was Bob Morgan.

Stunt men are legends in an era when most people face no greater hazard than highway traffic. These men will do anything from falling from a three-story building to leaping a horse off a cliff into a river.

They are paid well for it. Some can earn as much as $30,000 a year. They bargain with producers for individual stunts. A spectacular one can bring stunt men as much as $2,000.

But they can also get hurt. Bob Morgan had worked in most of the big action movies for 17 years. Danger came easily to him; he was a squadron commander in Navy aviation during the war.

Last month Morgan took a job to go on location in Arizona with "How the West Was Won." The assignment seemed like routine stuff—or as routine as a stunt man's work could be. They were shooting some action scenes on an old railroad train.

"Bob was aboard a flat car that was loaded with logs," said a colleague. "The logs were operated by hydraulic lifts and swung out on curves. Bob had finished the shot and looked back toward the camera train. One of the logs knocked him off the car.

"He fell between the tracks and three railroad cars passed over him. He wasn't run over by the wheels, but the clearance was so low that he was mangled."

Morgan was rushed to Good Samaritan Hospital in Phoenix, where his condition was grave. His wife, Yvonne DeCarlo, canceled her engagements to be at his side. The Stunt Men's Association issued an appeal for blood, which was badly needed in the fight to save Morgan's leg. The response from his fellow workers in the movie business was overwhelming.

Morgan developed a toxic condition, and doctors agreed the leg would have to be amputated to save his life. It was severed above the knee.

Now at 46 he is faced with the loss of his profession as well as the end of the vigorous life he had loved. His action?

"He has accepted it beautifully," his wife said. "He is eager to get in there and start working with an artificial leg as soon as he can."

Too Good To Be Prize-Winner

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Hal Helms' Science Fair entry was too good to win.

The 16-year-old junior at nearby Broken Arrow High School entered an exhibit on "Relativistic Theory of the Non-Symmetric Field," dealing with the fourth dimension to show a probable connection between electromagnetism and gravitation.

Judges of the Tulsa County Science Fair decided his theory was correct, but added that his calculations were so far advanced they found them difficult to understand or to check. They also felt it was unfair to judge his work in the same class with other youngsters, since he has had some university work.

So other young scientists got the top prizes—but Hal got a special award as first alternate for a Navy science cruise.

Hal's interest in mathematics developed early and his fifth grade teacher, J. M. Fisher, began giving him advanced problems to solve. Then Hal enrolled in a special electronics program in high school, read deeply in the theoretical mathematics and eventually took—and passed—college courses in trigonometry and integral and differential calculus.

Hal doesn't want to finish high school, however. Instead of taking a senior year at Broken Arrow next year, he wants to enter the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Rep. Kitchin Spending More Than His Rival

RALEIGH (AP) Preliminary reports show Rep. A. Paul Kitchin of Wadesboro has spent more and received more contributions than his challenger, John Kennedy of Charlotte, in their Democratic congressional race in the 8th District.

Secretary of State Thad Eure received their campaign expense reports Wednesday along with those from several other candidates.

Kitchin reported he had spent $16,955 and had received contributions totaling $16,243. Kennedy listed contributions of $3,193 and expenses of $3,615.

Law requires that preliminary expense reports be filed with Eure's office 10 days before an election, and a final report 20 days after the voting.

Other candidates reporting included:

A. M. Snipes of Elkin seeking the Republican nomination for Congress in the 5th District, $994 expenses, no contributions.

A. G. Whitener of High Point, Democratic candidate for Congress in the 6th District, $199.50 in contributions, $1,536 in expenditures.

Richard S. Sapp of Winston-Salem, Republican candidate for Congress in the 5th District, $10 in contributions, $273.55 in expenses.

David Henderson of Wallace, seeking re-election to Congress in the third, $445 in contributions, $495 in expenses.

James T. Broyhill of Lenoir, candidate for the Republican nomination to Congress in the eighth, $435 in contributions, $215 in expenditures.

Steady TV Series Role Is Regarded No Acting Plum

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A regular role in a television series how ever attractive, is no plum for a performer who intends to spend his working life in the theater.

That is the conviction of a tall, red-haired actress named Jeanne Cooper, who as a freelance has performed in more than 200 different television roles and currently is a candidate for an "Emmy" award for her performance in an episode of ABC's "Ben Casey."

"That is particularly true for a woman," Miss Cooper continued earnestly. "Money can't compensate for experience when you are young."

"Some day you are going to reach 40, the lines will start to show—and after that it is ability that counts."

Miss Cooper's point about a television series being a performer's trap is this:

"You play one person over and over," she said.

"This is bad for the development of an actor—the only way to make native ability and talent grow is by stretching and exercising it."

Miss Cooper says she makes more money as a freelance performer than she would in a steady part. In addition, she can accept motion picture roles, almost impossible for series actors, and while in New York this week is looking into some Broadway projects for next season.

ABC has turned its Saturday evening 7:30-8:30 spot next fall over to Roy Rogers and Dale Evans for a Western-style variety hour. With the new Jackie Gleason show opposite on CBS, Jack Paar and Andy Williams coming onto NBC with variety shows and with Perry Como, Garry Moore, Mitch Miller, Dinah Shore and the Telephone Hour returning, it looks as if song, dance and comedy is scheduled to be next season's trend.

And now NBC will give us a half-hour Vic Damone program to replace "Hazel" for eight weeks in the late summer and early fall.

Recommended tonight: "Sing Along with Mitch," NBC, 10-11 (Eastern Daylight Time)—high-lighting songs of Scotland.

Train-Derailing Efforts Studied

BERLIN (AP)—West Berlin police said Wednesday they are investigating a series of attempts to derail elevated trains.

Concrete blocks, used for road-making, have been laid across the tracks several nights recently, police said.

In all cases the obstructions were knocked aside, but some trains were damaged.

The Berlin elevated is run by the Communist East German railroad authority. Most West Berliners have boycotted it since the Red wall was built last August.

'People Rack' Invention Lauded

NEW YORK (AP)—Using one-inch steel tubing, a Chicago designer has created a "people rack"—a sturdy device eight feet high that can be leaned on, sat on or tugged at by means of bustype overhead hand straps.

"Steel Facts," a publication of the American Iron and Steel Institute, suggests the rack for use at bus stops or cocktail parties and calls it "the most humanitarian invention of the year."

penses.
S. A. Chalk Jr. of Morehead City, opposing Henderson for the Democratic nomination in the 3rd District, $399 in contributions, $203 in expenditures.
Walter G. Green of Burlington, seeking the Republican nomination to Congress in the sixth, no contributions, $446 in expenditures.
Charles H. Babcock Jr. of Winston-Salem, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate, no contributions, $228 in expenses.
During the conflict with Israel, Egypt blocked the Suez canal with sunken vesels.

GOP Schism In California Is Being Closely Studied

By JOE LEWIS
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like seismologists studying California's San Andreas Fault, political geographers are probing the rift between moderates and ultraconservatives in California's Republican primary.

They're trying to learn whether the conservative revival is just another tremor or a major upheaval in California's ever-changing political landscape.

The depth of the Republican schism may be fathomed a bit easier after the June 5 primary, and the November general election will indicate whether it can be bridged.

Reverberations from California's GOP primary campaign, meanwhile, are being charted on political seismographs throughout the nation as politicians try to measure the magnitude and intensity of the far right.

Because of a traditional restlessness cross-bred with conservatism rooted in the bible belt and the Midwest, the Republican cleavage appears deepest in Southern California.

Southern California is home base for former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, running for governor as a middle-of-the-road Republican and staking his political future on the outcome. But Southern California also is a West Coast citadel for the far right, some of whose adherents are more fiercely anti-Nixon than the most partisan Democrats.

The GOP's conservative right-wingers are supporting Assemblyman Joseph C. Shell against Nixon in the gubernatorial primary. They are also opposing liberal Republican Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel. But Kuchel's primary opposition is split between two ultraconservatives—attorney Loyd Wright, former American Bar Association president, and Los Angeles businessman Howard Jarvis. The opposition to Nixon seems more vehement than against Kuchel, possibly because ultraconservatives once considered Nixon one of their own.

The hub of politically potent Southern California, ranging from the Tehachapi Mountains to the Mexican border and from the Pacific to the Colorado River, is Los Angeles County, which has 40 per cent of the state's registered voters. Democrats have 57.1 per cent of the county's 2,811,130 voters, the Republicans 39.7 per cent.

Until 1958, California Republicans, despite their minority party role, won most of the elections while the Democrats fought each other. Now the situation appears reversed—the Democrats are in and seem united, the Republicans out and divided. As the minority party, the Republicans can't afford the luxury of factionalism—and expect to win.

In Southern California, where Republicans need to win big, there are scores of right-wing and militantly anti-Communist clubs. Some take typically conservative positions (for lower taxes, against greater federal control) and the others are, as one young Republican leader put it, looking for Reds under the bed.

Their numerical strength is difficult to estimate—because many rightists belong to several organizations. Membership of The John Birch Society chapters in Southern California, for example, has been estimated at 2,500. The society itself does not give out membership figures.

Two Republican congressmen in Southern California — freshman John Roussetot, 35, and veteran Edgar Hiestand, 60—are avowed Birch Society members. Both face tough re-election fights in districts reapportioned by a Democratic-dominated legislature.

Right-wingers in the GOP were outraged recently when Nixon declared there is no place in the Republican party for Birch Society members. The "ultras" claim Nixon was pushed by Democrats into attacking the society. The rightists feel the Democrats are trying to use Birchism as a campaign issue the way Republicans exploited leftwing activity about 10 years ago.

"I think Nixon got bad advice," says Murray Chotiner, onetime campaign manager for Nixon and now managing Loyd Wright's campaign against Sen. Kuchel.

"You don't attack your friends, and that's just what Nixon did,"

Many of the Republican party's hard-core volunteer workers are Birch Society members. Of course, they resent any attempt to read them out of the party.

Who are the ultrarightists? It could be a widow living on a pension, attending anti-Communist seminars and fretting about inflation and "creeping socialism" in letters to congressmen. It could be a wealthy businessman who fears the Republican party is abandoning conservatism for welfare state programs. Or it could be a young couple, trying to keep ahead of bills on a fixed salary, and worrying about U.N. economic and social council influences (anathema to Southern California rightwingers) in their children's school books.

"The typical conservative isn't politically sophisticated in the egg-head sense," said a campaign worker for Roussetot. "But he has commonsense enough to realize he's not getting a clear-cut choice from either party."

The fear of many Republican professionals is that conservatives will sit out the election if their candidates lose in the primary.

One ultraconservative put it this way: "A lot of the rank-and-file is fed up with anything but out-and-out conservatism. Some of them would rather lose the election and hope to gain control of the party four years from now than see a liberal Republican get elected."

Chotiner, considered a canny politician by friend and foe alike, believes liberal Republicans are making a colossal mistake by attacking ultraconservatives within their ranks.

Many stay-at-home voters, Chotiner says, are conservative Democrats who would vote for a conservative Republican against a liberal Democrat—but not for a liberal Republican.

There are enough conservatives in the GOP, the Democratic party and among the independent voters, says Chotiner, to assure victory for a conservative Republican.

party needs Nixon and Kuchel to provide the GOP with a more progressive image which, they say, is essential to attract urban groups holding the political balance of power.

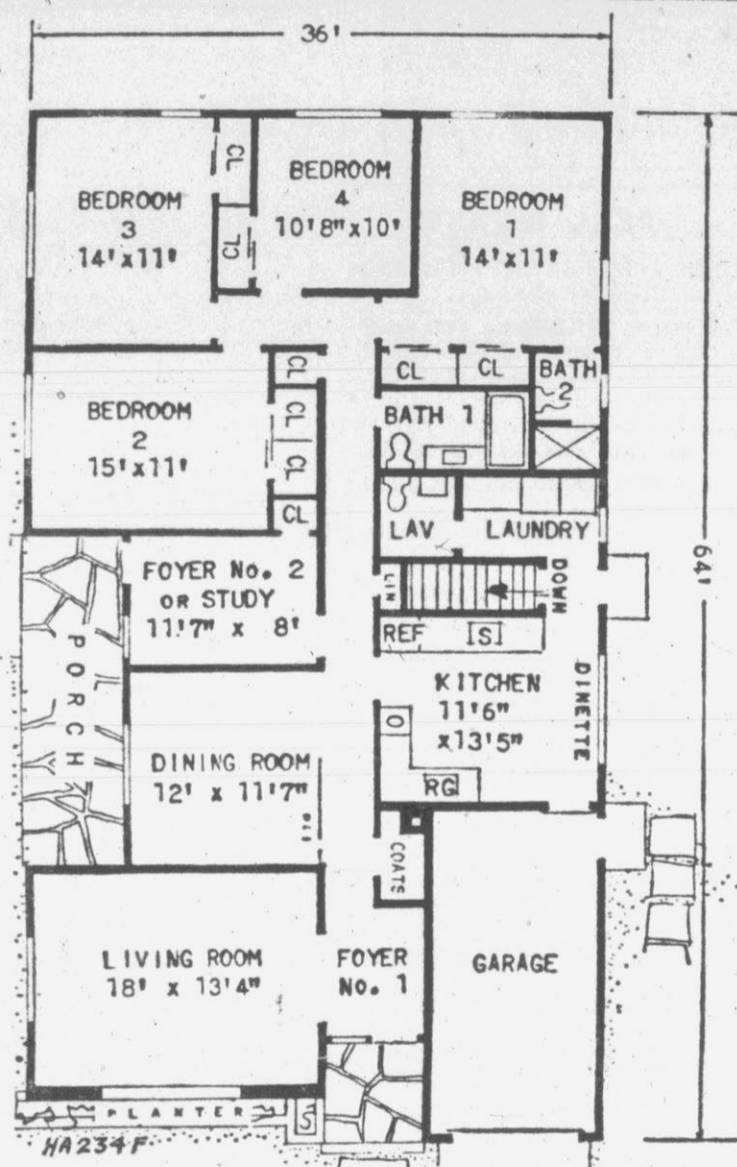

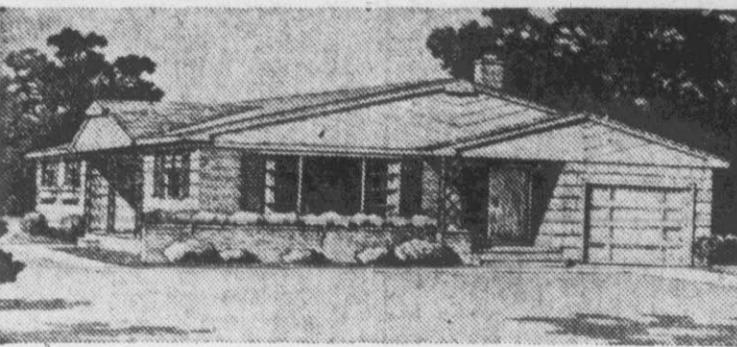

The polls say Nixon and Kuchel will win decisively in the primary. However, Shell, a personal campaigner and former football hero at the University of Southern California, has been making some headway with an aggressive campaign against Nixon. Shell, who owns an oil field equipment company, is not a member of The Birch Society but supports many of its precepts.

"Nobody who apologizes for being a conservative is going to win in California," says Shell.

About 1.5 million Republicans are expected to vote in the primary. If Shell gets a half-million votes, most observers contend, then Nixon has considerable fence-mending ahead if he expects to unseat Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

JFK Has Direct Line To Key Men

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy, by nature a fast man with a telephone call, already has direct lines to the leaders of Great Britain, France and West Germany.

Kennedy can pick up a phone and in seconds deliver orders via a global network linking the White House with key commands and top government officials, civilian and military.

In this age of emergency, he has recommended a system that could put him in immediate touch with Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The United States proposed at the Geneva disarmament conference that rapid and reliable communications be set up among heads of government and the U.N. secretary general. The proposal was aimed at cutting the risk of war by accident, miscalculation or surprise attack.

The plan wasn't specific, but there's no communication wrinkle the White House signal corps detachment hasn't considered at one time or another.

The "hot line" with outlets in Kennedy's office, living quarters and other undisclosed locations, is the crucial line through which he can issue crisis orders to military commands or take up urgent questions with Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. In case of attack, a word over this line could send nuclear-armed planes and missiles into action.

Much about the "hot line" is highly secret. It is known, however, that through control facilities at the Pentagon and elsewhere, Kennedy can ring the "gold phone" at the Strategic Air Command's underground headquarters in Omaha and other command posts, simultaneously or one at a time.

The box holding the green phone in Kennedy's office has 18 buttons for local and long distance calls.

The President also can use this phone to call abroad, if he wishes, but the private lines to Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, President Charles de Gaulle and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer are separate.

Each line is protected by its own security device to keep the conversations secret.

Heavy Supplies Needed For Troops In Thailand

By ELTON C. FAY
WASHINGTON (AP)—The 5,000-man U.S. military task force building up in Thailand will use about 50 tons of supplies a day, even if there is no combat.

If action should start against Communist forces across the Thai border in Laos, the tonnage could double with ammunition expenditure and increased consumption of automotive and aircraft fuel.

The jungle and plateau country in which the Army battle group, the Marine battalion and the air units are taking up positions is out at the far end of a 9,000-mile long supply line from the U.S. mainland.

But a large part of the food, tents, clothing, medical equipment, fuel and normal ammunition stocks needed in the initial phase is available from huge depots already operating in the Central Pacific, Far East and Southeast Asia. These depots are in Hawaii, Japan, Okinawa and the Philippines. To this may be added stocks and supply systems developed as part of the U.S. military assistance programs in Thailand and South Viet Nam.

The Army estimates that a reinforced battle group of 2,300 men—slightly larger than that in Thailand—uses an average of 29 tons of supplies per day under non-combat conditions. In combat, the consumption climbs to an estimated 58 tons.

An Army spokesman said today that U.S. Army troops and Marine forces in Thailand will draw supplies from Army stocks in the Pacific area.

The Army Transportation Corps arranges shipment through both the Military Sea Transport Service and the Military Air Transport System.

"Capabilities for both surface and air supply to the Bangkok area are excellent," the spokesman said. "Except for emergency resupply, it is expected normal supplying will be by ship to Bangkok."

But he added that because rail service to inland points is limited, the greater part of supplies for forces which move inland will go by air from Bangkok.

Transport planes, like the big C124s and C130s, can land without difficulty at two or three Thai air bases.

There are 106 inhabited islands among the Fiji group.
