Armed Services Installations In N. C. Visited By Thousands

Armed Forces Day Observance Program Has Something For Everyone

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Thousands of civilian visitors were welcomed at North Carolina service installations today in observance of Armed Forces Day.

There was something for everyone at Ft. Bragg and neighboring Pope Air Force Base, which in addition to the usual display of armed might, offered a carnival-type atmosphere aimed at the youngsters.

A carnival-type midway, complete with free rides was set up to entertain the youthful guests. Two Army cranes were converted into merry-go-rounds.

There was something for everyone at Ft. Bragg and neighboring Pope Air Force Base, which in addition to the usual display of armed might, offered a carnival-type atmosphere aimed at the youngsters.

Stamina to withstand this rigorous schedule was provided by sample slices of bread - baked on the midway.

An underwater demolition team demonstrated its maneuvers in a portable tank and a 35-foot wooden tower was used to illustrate mountain warfare techniques.

Parachute troop and heavy equipment drops also were scheduled at Bragg and Pope, with more than 2,000 men taking part in a retreat parade and review.

At Seymour Johnson AFB, German shepherd dogs were put through their paces in two special 20-minute shows.

At Winston-Salem, open house was held by active and reserve installations, including the 810th Air Control and Warning Squadron.

Mixed Term Of Court To Open

Pitt County Superior Court opens a one-week mixed term here Monday with a slate of cases for trial including hearings of rape charges lodged in February against a former Pitt County Negro school official.

Nine cases will go to Monday's trial including charges growing out of a Feb. 25 incident involving a 15-year-old girl. At a subsequent hearing before Greenville Municipal Judge Charles H. Whedbee, Sledge was bound over for action by the Grand Jury which later returned an indictment. Trial is set for Tuesday.

On Monday's trial calendar, to be heard before Judge Joseph W. Parker of Windsor, are 13 cases. Twenty-one more are set for hearing during the remainder of the one-week term. Court convenes at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Whales Beached Selves To Die

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) - A school of 17 pilot whales came ashore to die Friday.

They ranged from 7 to 14 feet long. Some still were breathing hours after they beached themselves.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said there is no known reason for the action of the whales. Such mass beachings are reported from time to time.

Agriculture Dept. Agent's Death To Be Checked For Estes Tie-In

BRYAN, Tex. (AP) - A grand jury will look into the mysterious death of an Agriculture Department agent who had been investigating Billie Sol Estes' dealings in cotton allotments.

Dist. Atty. Bryan Russ ordered the probe Friday "to clear the cloud connecting this with the Billie Sol Estes case—if there is any connection."

The jury will meet at nearby Franklin, Tex., Monday.

Meanwhile, Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., disclosed in Washington that only five months ago he received suggestions of a move to draft Estes to run for governor of Texas. Yarborough said he discouraged the move.

And in Houston, Horace C. Harris, officer in charge of the city's immigration and naturalization office, said Friday night that airline and shipping companies are being notified they will be penalized if they give Estes passage out of the country.

In Washington, James L. Hennessy, executive assistant to the commissioner of immigration and naturalization, confirmed issuance of the notice to all ports in the nation for relay to transportation firms. He described the order as fairly routine under the McCarran-Walter immigration law, and said such action is frequently taken as a precaution while important investigations are under way.

Hennessy said he had no indication that Estes might be planning to leave the country.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman has been invited to "come down if he has any pertinent information to offer" at the grand jury probe in Franklin, Dist. Atty. Russ said. Freeman has had no comment.

The death was that of Henry Marshall, shot June 3, 1961, on his farm near Franklin. Local authorities said he died perhaps five hours after he fired five bullets into his abdomen from a .22 caliber, bolt-action rifle.

Marshall was chief of production adjustment for the state agricultural stabilization and conservation office.

Freeman said May 7 that much of the Estes case remains cloudy because many of the facts died with Marshall.

In another facet of the Estes case, Texas Atty. Gen. Will Wilson, noting President Kennedy's statement Thursday that the administration broke the case, reported: "It is true the federal government filed the first official charge of transporting a fraudulent mortgage across state lines and caused Estes' arrest. But I think they had no idea of the scope of Estes' operations."

"We were the first to get into Estes' records. We were the first into his grain storage operations. We were the first into the whole matter of Estes' relationship with the Department of Agriculture and the question of influence peddling in Washington," he said.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said he expects the Estes scandal to be "a real shaker" before it's over. He said he expects the affair to involve several more government officials. "You can't do the conniving Estes has done without help from people in very high places," Goldwater said.

Taxes Indicate Local Trade Is Sharply Up

Greenville commerce saw more flourishing last February than in February, 1962, if sales tax collection figures—inflated by exemptions lifted last July 1—are a good indicator.

Figures for Greenville and seven more Eastern North Carolina cities, published in a Greenville Merchants Association bulletin, show Greenville's tax collection increased from February to February by nearly 81 per cent.

The only other city in the group listed with a higher percentage increase was Roanoke Rapids with about 93 per cent.

The bulletin said collections in Greenville for last February totaled $85,418.36, an 81 per cent hike over the previous February's $47,804.50.

It is assumed that a considerable portion of the increase, however, was due to ending sales tax exemptions on food and other commodities by the 1961 General Assembly. The new tax law became effective July 1.

The same bulletin reported that gross retail sales for Pitt County took a stride upward between Februarys. Last February's total, it said, was posted as $6,198,720 compared with $4,819,961 the previous second month.

Cities with their collection figures (with February 1961 in parentheses) and percentage increases were: Greenville, $85,418.36 ($47,804.50), 81 per cent; Goldsboro, $119,884.06 ($79,234.28), 51 per cent; Kinston, $97,414.61 ($60,005.86), 62 per cent; New Bern, $73,805.27 ($48,609.70), 52 per cent; Rocky Mount, $118,686.51 ($75,382.72), 57 per cent; Wilson, $90,463.07 ($60,352.75), 50 per cent; Roanoke Rapids, $54,483.09 ($38,756.64), 93 per cent; Elizabeth City, $49,100.41 ($31,463.44), 58 per cent.

Titov 'Green' By U.S. Standards

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Officials of the U.S. astronaut program feel that Soviet cosmonaut Gherman Titov is "pretty green" by American standards of flight experience.

A spokesman for Project Mercury said this "relative inexperience" of Titov may have made him nervous during his flight and contributed strongly to the slight case of motion sickness he reported.

The spokesman, Lt. Col. John A. Powers, public information officer, volunteered these views when a reporter asked whether Navy Lt. Cmdr. M. Scott Carpenter had any history of motion sickness.

Powers said Carpenter had no such history and that it was deemed unlikely he would experience any in his projected three-orbit flight. He noted that Titov had reported that he had had only 350 hours of pilot flight time in aircraft before soaring into space.

This compares, said Powers, with at least 1,000 hours for each of the seven Mercury astronauts. He said some of the seven had much more than that.

"Titov never saw his space capsule until 60 days before he flew," he declared. "Whereas the astronauts have become familiar with their capsules over a period of three years."

He said Mercury officials think that a nervous reaction due to relative lack of flying experience, possibly had a strong contributory role in the mild but nauseous discomfort that Titov said he felt during the 6th of his 17 whirls around the planet.

Powers added that "relative lack of familiarity" with his space capsule may have made Titov less confident than he might otherwise have been, and that this also may have contributed to triggering a certain nervousness.

"There's a whole of a difference," he said, "between cramming in knowledge in a period of 60 days, as Titov did, and getting it by a process of osmosis over a period of three years like the astronauts."

Engineers Preparing 'Aurora 7' Parachute System Of Capsule Being Changed; Flight Set Tuesday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Engineers worked busily today to change the parachute system to return astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter safely from orbit.

And Carpenter—the man most concerned—can be expected to keep a sharp eye on the sudden engineering change which delayed his space ride until at least next Tuesday.

Carpenter, a Navy lieutenant commander, may also have a chance to visit with his blonde wife, Rene, who came here to watch her husband's great venture into space.

Mrs. Carpenter is the first wife to come to this space port area actually to witness a flight. The Carpenters' four children may also arrive, perhaps the day before the flight.

Whether it will zoom off on Tuesday depends partly on completion and checkout of the change in automatic controls designed to assure safe parachute landing when Carpenter's space craft slices back to earth.

The parachute system had worked perfectly on five returns of capsules until John H. Glenn's trip on Feb. 20. Glenn's small or drogue stabilizing chute popped out sooner than planned, at 27,000 feet rather than 21,000 feet. His real life saver, the 63-foot main parachute, did come out automatically as planned at about 10,000 feet.

But engineers and officials worried whether the same mishap could happen with the main parachute, said William B. Bland, an engineer of Project Mercury.

Tests to learn the cause of the Glenn incident continued to the last minute with indications that a stray electrical impulse might have triggered the premature release of the drogue. Bland told a news conference.

The engineering change decided upon after tests Thursday, calls for some rewiring and addition of another barostat, a device to measure atmospheric pressure.

Bland said "this added feature will buy us safety."

The change forced technicians to remove the escape tower from the capsule, but Bland said "chance are excellent we can get it all done" for a journey Tuesday. The escape tower is designed to pull the capsule away in case the booster rocket explodes or gets into trouble at or soon after launching.

Formally Given Medal Of Honor After 42 Years

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) - David E. Hayden, of Fresno formally accepted Friday the Medal of Honor—the nation's highest decoration for valor—42 years after he retrieved the medal in the mail.

Rear Adm. Frank Akers, commander fleet air, Alameda, at the order of the secretary of navy, placed it around Hayden's neck.

The medal usually is presented by the President or a high military official. Hayden, now 64, got his by registered mail in 1920.

Now a U.S. marshal, Hayden earned the decoration as a Navy medical corpsman in Thiaucourt, France, on Sept. 15, 1918, while attached to the Marine Corps' Second Battalion, 6th Regiment.

In battle, he ran into an area swept by machinegun fire and saved a Marine's life by dressing his wounds and carrying him to safety.

Two More Pitt Prison Escapees Caught; 3 To Go

Marvin Tew and Johnnie Cobb, both members of an 11-man escape party who saved their way through cell block bars to gain freedom from the Pitt County Prison Unit, May 7, became the seventh and eighth members of the group to be returned to custody.

Edgcombe County officers said no charges have been lodged against the two, identified as John W. Shealy and John T. McMurray, as yet. They plan to question them at Central Prison before any action is taken.

According to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, both Loyd Lave and Leroy Darden, have been charged with inter-state transportation of stolen car, a federal violation.

Officials said if all details of the case are completed, Lave and Darden will be tried on the charges during the next term of Federal Court in Charleston, which begins May 27.

The May 7 escape was discovered by Capt. L. F. Dall, superintendent of the local detention unit who was called by the Greenville Police Department about a truck reported stolen from the area near the Prison. Capt. Dall went to the prison to check and found the break.

He was immediately returned to jail at Central Prison in Raleigh, where the four other jail breakers found in North Carolina are now in custody.

Details of the Cobb capture were not available but according to the FBI, he had been arrested on a federal warrant charging him with unlawful flight to avoid confinement under the Federal Fugitive Felon Act.

The first two of the eight escapees returned to jail were located by lawmen in Pitt County on the day of the break. The same day, two of the fugitives were taken prisoner in South Carolina on a car stolen from Greenville.

The other two fugitives fell into the hands of the law May 11, one in Mooresville and the other in Durham.

Officers said clothes worn by these two fugitives when captured have been identified as merchandise taken from a Concoet store the night of May 9 or early morning May 10.

According to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, both Loyd Lave and Leroy Darden, have been charged with inter-state transportation of stolen car, a federal violation.

Officials said if all details of the case are completed, Lave and Darden will be tried on the charges during the next term of Federal Court in Charleston, which begins May 27.

The May 7 escape was discovered by Capt. L. F. Dall, superintendent of the local detention unit who was called by the Greenville Police Department about a truck reported stolen from the area near the Prison. Capt. Dall went to the prison to check and found the break.

Two guards on duty at the time were later discharged for "major custodial negligence."

The prisoners sawed through four metal bars making a 12 by 18-inch hole in one window of the cell block, then scaled a seven-foot high fence, topped with five strands of barbed wire.

The truck which led to the discovery of the break was later found abandoned near Norfolk.

Still at large are Woodrow Whitfield, 48 of Norfolk, Va.; James B. Wilson, 41 of Beckley, W. Va.; and Thomas Woodman, 21 of Lumberton.

All of the men returned to custody have been charged with escape by the Prison Department.

Carver Library Bids Due June 5

Bids will be taken on a new Carver Washington City Library building by the City Council June 5 at 2 p.m.

The city yesterday advertised for bids on general construction, electrical work, plumbing, and heating and air conditioning.

The council at its April meeting authorized architects for the building, Dudley and Shoe, to prepare for taking bids on the proposed $45,000 structure.

Action was taken upon Dr. Ralph Brimley's recommendation. Councilman Brimley had been appointed by Mayor Charles M. King to work with the Carver Library board in getting the project moving.

Plans are to construct the "L" shaped building on a site presently owned by the city at Fleming St., and Boyd Ave.

Dr. Brimley reported that, while the building will cost $45,000, only $35,980 is available in bond issue funds for the project.

He suggested taking bids to determine how much money the council will have to place in next year's budget to complete the building.

Dr. Brimley proposed a plan which would provide stacks for 10,000 volumes. This, he said, could be stretched to 12,000 with additional books cases. In addition, the plan provides for future building expansion. The plans have the approval of the Carver board.

Presently Carver Library is located in a former dwelling on Sheppard St. The council has the right to reject any bids.

Wanted Man Is Located In Kinston Hospital

Aaron Dixon, Negro of Greenville, wanted by police in connection with the shooting of a nine-year-old Negro youth here Thursday, is in a Kinston hospital suffering from a shotgun wound in the stomach.

Greenville police said a warrant, charging Dixon with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, was signed by Jack Atkinson, Negro of 216 Boyd Ave., whom police charged with shooting the boy.

Officers quoted Atkinson as saying Dixon first shot at him. He was returning Dixon's fire and the shot struck Alvin Ray Daniel, Lenoir County Sheriff H. C. Broadway said this morning that Dixon is in serious condition and quoted doctors as saying he may not survive.

The sheriff noted Dixon apparently suffered the wounds in Greenville.

Local police are still investigating the case.

General Tours Thailand Buildup; Will Move Camp

UDON, Thailand (AP) - Gen. Paul D. Harkins flew on an inspection round of U.S. forces sent to bolster Thailand's defenses along the border of Communist-ruled Laos today and praised the speed with which the American Marines were digging in.

Heavy rains of the monsoon season lashed the rice paddy fields near the town 30 miles from the Laos border, and the general declared they must soon be moved.

"The local Thais here are very generous," he said, "but we've got to get the men to suitable high ground. Where they are now it floods too easily."

"There are lots of snakes in the area," he added.

The Marines are expected to move to a more permanent camp 22 miles east of Udun near Nong Lanan. The present site is about eight miles east of Udun.

Harkins, top commander of U.S. forces in Thailand and South Viet Nam, was accompanied on his rounds by Lt. Gen. James L. Richardson Jr., chief of the Thailand command.

Harkins said the Marines "are well settled and know what to do. They are professional soldiers and this makes all the difference."

Asked about reports the Marines now here were due to return home in mid-June, Harkins said:

"Sometimes plans get changed. They are in the service. They know. But if they go, they would be replaced by other Marines."

The commander took off early from Bangkok in a Beechcraft plane and inspected a unit of the Air Force's 60th Tactical Group and its F100 Super Sabre Jets at Ta Khl, 100 miles north of Thailand's capital.

At Phitsanuloke, 200 miles north of the capital, he conferred with Lt. Gen. Praphan, commander of Thailand's 3rd Army, and the 4th Division's commanding general, Samran Patakavij.

He then took an Air Force C118 to Udun where he boarded a helicopter for the hop to the Marine camp.

Torrential rains lashed the rice paddies where the bulk of the 1,800-man Maimae battle group in northeast Thailand is camped only 30 miles from the Mekong River border with Laos. The Marines plodded through deep mud this morning to clean up their impressive array of shooting iron.

Gen. Paul D. Harkins, overall commander of the U.S. force in Thailand, flew to northeast Laos today to inspect the situation, which Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev warned might explode into a shooting match like the Korean War.

Harkins, also head of the U.S. Military Assistance Command in South Viet Nam, declared that the American forces in Thailand are under hold-fire orders. But he warned that danger still lurks from pro-Communist forces in Laos whose recent offensive brought American troops rushing to Thailand to discourage any further Communist advances.

Lt. Gen. James L. Richardson and U.S. Ambassador Kenneth T. Young accompanied Harkins on the flight to Udun, 350 miles northeast of Bangkok. They arranged to drive to the town of Nong Han, where the Marines are camped.

Secret Terrorists Flee After Fight

ALGIERS (AP) - Secret Army Organization terrorists attacked mobile gendarmes stationed in the Summer Palace with mortar fire today, then fled before a determined counterattack.

The tough mobile gendarmes poured out of their headquarters and encircled the entire district after engaging the terrorists in an exchange of rifle and machinegun fire. The secret army commandos fled into a wooded heights area.

There were no reports of casualties on either side in the battle.

The Summer Palace once was the home of France's delegate-general to Algeria, but now houses detachments of the mobile gendarmes, a military-type police force.

The mortar shells were lobbed into the grounds of the palace and burst in the lush tropical gardens. No one was injured.

Before smoke cleared away a patrol of gendarmes in armored vehicles raced out into the street. Suddenly rifle and machine-gun fire broke out from embankments overlooking the street. The gendarmes returned heavy fire.

Other gendarme units were called into the area to throw a blockade around it as the palace unit and the secret army commandos exchanged fire.

The rattle of automatic weapons fire sent people in the area scurrying into hiding.

The Summer Palace, a splendid white-walled building in Moorish style and surrounded by a white wall, was long the symbol of French authority in Algeria.

It is not far from the heart of the city on a broad, palm-lined street that was once a pleasant strolling place.

In suburban Guyotville a half-dozen uniformed men showed up at a trade school, ostensibly to relieve the guard detail on duty. When the regular guards had departed, they blew up three small buildings.

Five bombs went off in Maison Carree, an industrial town a few miles from the city, damaging the fronts of homes and Moslem stores.

In Paris, the French government disclosed today that the number of French Algerians fleeing that strife-torn territory has increased from a trickle in January to a flood.

Federal Jury Indicts Jas. Hoffa On 2 Counts

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Teamster Union President James R. Hoffa was indicted by a federal court jury here Friday on charges of violating the Taft-Hartley Law and collecting some $1 million illegally.

The two-count indictment, which involved payment through an auto transport firm incorporated in Nashville, was revealed in Washington by Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy. The attorney general, along with his brother President Kennedy, then a senator, participated in an investigation of the firm by the McClellan committee looking into improper labor practices.

Hoffa, who pleaded innocent earlier Friday to a charge of assault pressed by a union aide, declined to discuss the new indictment with newsmen. But a teamster official in Chicago said Hoffa "shed no tears" when informed of it.

Hoffa, who flew to Chicago for two scheduled talks after his Washington court appearance, sent Harold Gibbons, executive vice president of the Teamsters, as a substitute at a scheduled Chicago press conference.

"If it (the indictment) is anything like other indictments against labor leaders in this country," Gibbons told newsmen, "The essence of it is anything but the truth."

The indictment charges Hoffa and the late Owen Brennan, former Teamster vice president, received $1,009,057 from Commercial Carriers through Test Fleet, the stock of which had been transferred by Commercial Carriers to Mrs. Hoffa and Mrs. Brennan under their maiden names.

The indictment added Hoffa and Brennan later changed the name of Test Fleet Corp. to Hobren Corp., a combination of their names, in an effort to conceal true ownership.

Dist. Judge William E. Miller set June 7 for Hoffa and representatives of Commercial Carriers to appear here for arraignment.

The assault case against Hoffa by Samuel Baron, 59-year-old field director of the Teamsters National Warehouse Division, was set for trial June 19. Hoffa's request for a jury trial was granted.

Baron, who exhibited a bruised and cut up face, said Hoffa attacked him in the union's plush Washington headquarters Thursday, climaxing a feud of long standing.

A new coat of arms, to be used for class rings, blazers and other items, was approved by the Board of Trustees of East Carolina College yesterday.

The college now uses a seal similar to a notary seal. Dr. James Tucker, dean of student affairs said, but the coat of arms will be used for class rings, stationary, blazers and such will be the official seal of the college.

New Coat Of Arms For ECC

A description of the seal is being withheld pending copyright proceedings.

It is hoped that the coat of arms will "establish something which has some tradition" for the college, Dr. Tucker said. It will also make the class ring more symbolic. Design of the coat of arms was coordinated by the Student Government Association.

At the conclusion of the Board of Trustees meeting, members visited the new stadium site.

ECC Commencement Program Plans Shape Up--May 26, 27

SYCAMORE CHAPE

All About Town

With Anne Mattox

Juniors at East Carolina College Jane Blue and Frank Trent met in geography class last summer. Jane was trying to get Frank a date with a friend of hers; but it didn't work out that way, instead she ended up dating him. Now they are planning an August wedding. Jane is a Sigma Sigma Sigma. The couple plan to live in Greenville and complete their education.

Mrs. B. Guy Taylor of Ayden will join friends in Wilmington today and will sail for an eight day cruise to Bermuda and Nassau.

The East Carolina College European Tour will be making the third trip abroad this summer under the direction of Mrs. Myrtle B. Clark.

Tour members this year are Louis Foxman Adler, Tarboro; Miss Judy Carol Blackwelder, Salisbury; William Gray Blount, Greenville; Roy Boyd, Jr., Charlotte; Ben Brown, Tarboro; James Henry Bundy, Farmville; Miss Elizabeth Daughtry, Faison; Miss Penny Ann Gerock, Salisbury; Miss Martha H. Johnson, Raleigh; Mrs. Bob Lang, Greenville; John McLeod, Mamas; H. S. Pittman, Jr., Rocky Mount; Miss Mary Neal Scott, Rocky Mount; Miss Margaret M. Swindell, Greenville; Mrs. Martha Ward, Williamston; Alan D. Watson, Rocky Mount; Mrs. J. Nat. Harrison, Greenville; Miss Agnes Fulllove, Greenville; Miss Claire Cannon, Virginia Beach, Va.; Mrs. and Mrs. W. H. Woolard, Jr., and Miss Sandra Woolard, Greenville; Mrs. Elizabeth Moye, Mount Pleasant and Mrs. J. Paul Tyndell, Jacksonville. Mrs. Tyndell is making the ECC Tour for the second time and will visit with her son in Germany.

The group will meet in New York for an orientation prior to leaving New York by jet on June 9. Departing at 7 p.m. at the Idlewild Airport they will arrive in London, England at 7 a.m. The group will be in London, Stratford June 10th-13th where they will see the Changing of the Guard at Buckingham Palace, Westminster Abbey, Houses of Parliament and Big Ben, 10 Downing Street, Scotland Yard, Whitehall, Trafalgar Square and Piccadilly Circus, The Tower of London and Crown Jewels, St. Paul's Cathedral, Fleet Street, Guildhall, Oxford Street, Hyde Park, and many other points of interest. On an excursion to Windsor they will visit Windsor Castle and Eton College and continue to Stratford-on-Avon where they will witness a performance in the Shakespeare Memorial Theater.

By motorcade and Channel steamer, the group proceed to the Netherlands and the fashionable seaside resort of Scheveningen. Excursions will be made to The Hague where the Peace Palace and the Dutch Parliament, the famed flower market as Aalsmeer, the cheese auction at Alkmaar, and the old city of Amsterdam will be seen. They will lunch in Amsterdam at the celebrated Five Flies Restaurant and a brief visit will also be made to Rotterdam.

Sightseeing in Brussels includes the old City Square, Mannekin Statue, St. Gudule's Cathedral, Royal Palace and Park, Palace of Justice and other points of interest. A brief sightseeing of Luxembourg City and visit to American Memorial Cemetery before continuing through the Mosel Valley to Coblenz at the confluence of the Mosel and the Rhine. Excursion up the Rhine by river steamer past colorful villages, vineyards and venerable castles.

In Munich, sightseeing includes the City Hall, Frauenkirche, St. Peter's, Statue of Bavaria and Oktoberfest Fairgrounds, and the Deutsches Museum, one of the greatest scientific museums in the world and the University of Munich. In Innsbruck the University, the Golden Roof and Old Town will be seen. Venice the city of canals and gondolas will be seen afloat and by gondola and from there the group goes to Florence the art center of the Renaissance.

A dramatic highlight of the Tour is a visit to Rome. Sightseeing will include the Vatican and St. Peter's, great Basilicas of St. Mary Major, St. John Lateran and St. Paul's Outside the Walls, Roman Forum, Colosseum, Appian Way and the Catacombs.

Heading northward the group will visit Pisa and its famed Leaning Tower and will have time to bask in the sun and swim in the Mediterranean on the Ligurian Riviera. In Switzerland, headquarters will be Lucerne on the Lake of the Four Forest Cantons from where they will make excursions. Motoring through the countryside the group will arrive at the "City of Light," Paris on July 8th where they will attend the famed Folies Bergere Revue.

Embarking at Le Havre on July 12th in the S.S. France, longest luxury liner ever built, the group will enjoy five days at sea before arriving in New York on the 17th of July.

This is only a part of the itinerary of the 25 going on the East Carolina College Tour.

Most Will Agree On Tax Plank

Although many North Carolina Democrats may find a few things in the state party platform not to their liking, most of them will agree with the plank opposing further state tax increases by the 1963 legislature.

It is a plank with which the Democratic organization in North Carolina and the Democratic administration of the state can live without sacrificing the calibre of service the people have come to expect from their state government.

It must be recognized, however, that without new state tax levies, increases in revenue will have to come from economic growth which will reflect larger collections from the present tax schedules.

The result probably will be a less ambitious program of improving and expanding state services than has taken place in the past two years. With the constitutional requirement for a balanced budget, the legislature will not be able to appropriate more funds to be spent than it anticipates revenue from tax sources.

There is no reason why this situation should impede the progress of the state. Revision of state tax levies during the last legislature, with the addition of a sales tax on food, was programmed to provide the state with increasing revenues over the years as progress is made in the state's economy.

The legislature probably will not be able to meet all the requests presented for additional expenditures, but it should be able to provide essential additional services without risking a deficit at the end of the next biennium.

The matter of determining where the additional revenues will be spent and what requested items will be excluded from the budget will naturally present a formidable problem to the members of the 1963 General Assembly.

By carefully evaluating the needs of the state and its citizens, however, the legislature should be able, by wise decisions, to assure continued progress which North Carolina must have.

Although the Democratic platform expressly opposes further tax increases, it obviously does not call for the party or for the state government to turn away from the path of progress which has been followed in recent years.

The platform recognizes that the state must continue to make progress but asserts that it should be able to do so within the scope of the tax schedules which already exist in North Carolina.

Bombing Range Need Re-Raised

By HENRY BELK
Editor, Goldsboro News-Argus
Guest Columnist

BOMBING RANGE — Need of the Air Force for a bombing range in Eastern North Carolina may again be in the news. Informed observers say that Governor Sanford may be called upon for advice and help in this matter of great importance to the State.

Suggestion by the N. C. Wildlife Commission that the Angolo Refuge in Pender County be considered as an alternate site for the range isn't bearing up under study. The Commission offered this alternative when the proposed to put the range in a remote area near Lake Mattamuskeet met unmovable objection.

Why can't the F-105 tactical bombers from Myrtle Beach and Seymour Johnson find an acceptable bombing range in the vast State-owned refuge in Pender County?

Regular flight patterns of no less than five commercial airlines would have to be changed before the Air Force could use the sky over the lonely land for bombing tests. That is the report from members of a special Goldsboro committee who have been investigating the subject. They feel almost hopeless that such a change could be worked out.

But the search will go on. Now authorities on swampy, practically deserted areas in the coastal region are pointing toward a vast undeveloped, swampy region south of beautiful Lake Waccamaw and extending almost to or into and beyond the South Carolina border.

Why does the Air Force require a bombing range for practice by its F-105's?

A specified number of bomb runs in simulated attacks are required for the bomber crews. Now there is no place near Myrtle Beach or Seymour Johnson where they can get such runs. Crews must move two thirds across the continent to a Far West Air Base to get in their practice. That is expensive, vastly expensive for the planes and men involved and it has the further handicap of morale questions when families are disrupted by moving the bombers off their regular bases for practice.

What upset the plane for a range in Hyde County?

The residents of the section were distressed over the idea of the bombers coming their way. Many of the people of the sparsely settled area make their living as guides for hunters and fishermen and in caring for parties which hunt waterfowl in the region. It is one of the most famous waterfowl grounds of the nation. The National Wildlife Service maintains in the region one of the largest and most important of its waterfowl refuges.

Though those pleading for a bombing range facility claim the project would not endanger or disrupt hunting, fishing, or the wildfowl refuge, the people of Hyde will insist otherwise.

The Air Force stressed that the bomb runs would be made with blanks, that there would be practically no danger from the "caps" causing fire. The excited natives argued otherwise.

State Senator Midette was one influential voice raised for the people in opposition to the idea. Representative Bonner, in whose district the area lies, responded eagerly and with his full influence to oppose a range.

Bonner won support from other North Carolina representatives against the proposed range. Interior Secretary Udahl and the National Wildlife Service joined in the opposition.

But why would Governor Sanford be asked to see what he could do to find a solution?

Because it is reported in informed sources that a switch of F-105 bomber units to bases where they could get practice nearby is being discussed.

Tactical Air Command, to which the F-105 bombers are attached, is a most important unit of the several commands based at Seymour Johnson Air Base, Goldsboro. If these were pulled out the giant Air Base, one of the most important on the Eastern Seaboard, might dwindle to a part of its present importance. A percentage of the hundreds of civilians working at the base and of the thousands of military personnel and families assigned there might be moved to other places. Probably near the Western base where a bombing range is available.

RAM NEUSE — It was only two or three months ago that thousands of Tar Heels were trekking to Kinston to gape at efforts to dig the Ram Neuse from the grip of Neuse River.

The iron clad was sunk by the Confederates 100 years ago to prevent her from falling into the hands of the Yankees advancing from New Bern. The original ship of its kind had been constructed at Whitehall, up river in Wayne County, and her iron shield was applied in Kinston.

Three friends, one interested in the history of the Ram Neuse since boyhood, spent weeks and weeks and all their money trying to float the ship. They seemed to have accomplished their purpose when high water blocked them. The city of Kinston and the county of Lenoir became interested and moved to help finance the project.

But the Neuse still stuck in the sands of the Neuse. Now the Smithsonian Institution is giving advice. The best thing is to get a ship construction outfit to help complete the removal of the Neuse from its watery grave.

Kinston and Lenoir are not giving up. You will hear more about this after the primary.

Green Tourist Dollars Should Be Cultivated

This is the season of the year when the flow of green tourist dollars begins to increase in North Carolina and build to the peak that is reached in mid-summer. It is the season of the year when the state should carefully evaluate the impressions its visitors will take back home with them.

North Carolina has a wealth of natural assets which makes it a natural tourist capital. This is attested to by the rapid increase which has taken place in the state's tourist business in the past decade. Most Tar Heels are confident visitors will remember with pleasure beautiful scenery of the mountains, wave-washed strands of white beaches and all the attractions which lie between.

But there is more to leaving a good impression in the mind of tourists than just the attractions a state has to offer.

A vacationer's pleasant memories of North Carolina's majestic mountains or placid coast may be overshadowed by a memory of what he feels was unfair treatment of him in a traffic court somewhere, or by an officer whom he feels was intent on "soaking the tourists". He may get an unfavorable impression at a motel, restaurant, in a store, or at a service station simply because some individual is impolite, discourteous or inconsiderate. Any one of these or many other things—the act of one individual—could give the tourist a bad impression of all of North Carolina. Instead of looking forward to another vacation in North Carolina, he and his family may in the future choose some other state for their holidays.

By and large, the people of North Carolina have a favorable reputation for their generous hospitality to visitors. As the tourist season moves toward its peak, all Tar Heels should keep in mind that visitors probably will be more impressed by how they are treated in North Carolina as they are by what they see and do during their trip in Variety Vacationland.

Sad Reminder France Is Weak

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the almost unreal exchange between John F. Kennedy and Charles de Gaulle the American President in effect has told the French president he has more muscle.

For almost 22 years — since the Germans smashed them in 1940 — the French have been an inadequate military force in the world.

After the big war for years they couldn't even crush the Communists in Indochina, fought a half-hearted war, wouldn't send their draftees there, and finally in mortifying defeat had to abandon the colony.

Now they haven't been able to establish peace in Algeria. And at no time since World War II, including now, have the French ever remotely been able to defend themselves from Russian attack, either with manpower or nuclear weapons, since they had no such weapons.

In these years the United States — with its bombers and nuclear power — has been for the French, as for the rest of Western Europe, the shield which deterred the Russians.

De Gaulle, who has always found it unbearable to think of France in a secondary or dependent condition, finds it unpalatable now even if it means abandoning reality and wrapping himself in the cocoon of dreams.

This week at a news conference, where the questions were prepared in advance, De Gaulle said the conditions under which France let the United States for years take responsibility for its protection are past.

De Gaulle, even though France along with the United States is part of Western Europe's NATO defense, envisioned a France relying primarily on her own defense with her own atomic weapons which she still must build.

This was like declaring France a third force in Europe where now there are only two forces: NATO and Russia.

There was unintended sadness in this De Gaulle talked, as he always has, like a man who considered himself the architect of the French future for generations to come, as if his policy would be the lasting policy.

But, at 71, time is running out on him. He seems unable to realize, or perhaps prefers to ignore, the possibility his successors, whoever they are, could and probably would change the French direction.

Thursday Kennedy, at his news conference, replied to De Gaulle in language deceptively soft. There was no visible harshness. But it was implicit in what he said:

1. He thinks it will be a long time before Western Europe can feel able to defend itself without American help and the presence of American forces there.

2. It would be regrettable to set up a third force and thus break the long-established, intricate and thoroughly interdependent NATO alliance which has been built up by so many men of good will.

3. The deterrence to Russia which NATO now has — meaning nuclear weapons in the hands of the United States — is enough for Western Europe's protection.

Then Kennedy said he does not believe in a number of countries having a nuclear deterrence because, as one country after another develops nuclear weapons, the danger of disaster increases.

It was in that No. 1 Kennedy statement — that American help to defend Europe will be needed for a long time — that the President implied that De Gaulle talks too big for having so little.

To top it off, Kennedy told a trade group Thursday night that so long as the United States carries the heaviest burden of Western defense it will continue to participate in "the great decisions affecting war and peace" in Europe.

The youngster next door is not completely useless. At least five mothers use him as a bad example. — Russell, (Kansas) News.

What's In A Name?

By HAL BOYLE

The Fading Tradition

NEW YORK (AP)—One of the mainstays of our past that seems slowly passing from the American scene is "the pop-and-mom store."

A pop-and-mom store is just what it sounds like it is.

It is a trade term for a small family owned business establishment in which a husband wife—and often their children—did most of the work in order to cut down the labor costs.

There was a time in America when most of the nation's business, in large cities, small towns and at rural crossroads, was transacted in pop-and-mom stores.

Some sold dry goods. Some sold candy and drugs. Some sold hardware, some sold groceries. But whatever they sold, they were small, they were family owned—and usually they had a hard time keeping going.

They represented the fulfillment of the American dream. In the days when the great American dream was to start even partly as your own—and grew up with the country.

Unfortunately, the pop-and-mom store too often was a marginal operation representing ambition rather than experience, and dominated more by hope and heart than by good business sense.

They failed obscurely by the hundreds of thousands, but they served as a wonderful training ground for many of today's most astute industrial leaders.

What really doomed most of them was a change in the nation's merchandising patterns. This resulted from such factors as the popularity of the automobile, the move to the suburbs, the spread of chain-store operations—the rise of supermarkets, discount houses, mail order firms, the switch to mass marketing in practically every field.

Big business simply took away the business from little business. But whoever worked as a youth in a small pop-and-mom store carries the thrill of those days indelibly in his memory.

You were a person yourself and the people you waited on were real people, not just two-legged buying units.

If the store happened to be an old-fashioned, sawdust-floored small grocery, the work was hard and the hours were long and the pay was small.

Few things came prepackaged, and you had to hand wrap and weigh everything from a pound of liverwurst — the working man's steak—to a sack of potatoes.

But there were compensations. You really got to know people as they are, and in time became an authority on the neighborhood and who lived in it.

But there were compensations. You really got to know people as they are, and in time became an authority on the neighborhood and who lived in it.

Your true role was to act more as a friendly neighborhood psychologist than as a hard-sell salesman.

The huge, impersonal, anti-septic shopping centers of today are far more efficient business operations, but nostalgia holds a warm remembrance for the pop-and-mom store that flourished of yore, when America was younger and in some ways kinder.

TEST OF CHRISTIAN BELIEF

What does it mean to be a Christian?

The New Testament states the requirements by saying that we must believe on Christ if we would be saved, and believe with such earnestness that we forsake one type of life and seek after another. But what does it mean to believe?

Jesus on one occasion spoke of his disciples as friends. "No longer do I call you servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends." To believe in Christ, therefore, means to accept his offer of friendship.

A humble Christian who had had a lifelong experience in spiritual things used to sum up all his Christian theology in these words: "Jesus and I are friends." And since friendship is not only a privilege but a responsibility, this human-divine relationship involves some solemn responsibility on the part of any who accepts and acknowledges it.

"Ye are my friends," said Jesus, "if ye do the things I have commanded you." So to be a Christian means to believe in Christ, and to believe in Christ means to be his friend, and to be his friend means to obey him. It all comes down, in the end, to a personal relationship with Christ which induces us to be obedient to his commands.

Christians are friends of Christ if they really follow him. The test of belief is one's willingness to follow.

What does it mean to be a Christian? The New Testament states the requirements by saying that we must believe on Christ if we would be saved, and believe with such earnestness that we forsake one type of life and seek after another. But what does it mean to believe? Jesus on one occasion spoke of his disciples as friends. "No longer do I call you servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends." To believe in Christ, therefore, means to accept his offer of friendship. A humble Christian who had had a lifelong experience in spiritual things used to sum up all his Christian theology in these words: "Jesus and I are friends." And since friendship is not only a privilege but a responsibility, this human-divine relationship involves some solemn responsibility on the part of any who accepts and acknowledges it. "Ye are my friends," said Jesus, "if ye do the things I have commanded you." So to be a Christian means to believe in Christ, and to believe in Christ means to be his friend, and to be his friend means to obey him. It all comes down, in the end, to a personal relationship with Christ which induces us to be obedient to his commands. Christians are friends of Christ if they really follow him. The test of belief is one's willingness to follow. (Continued on Page 8)

Latin Export Trade

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

While economics do not finally determine the relations among countries, their trade is very important. Certain countries regard their international trade more seriously than others, but most countries are required by their economics to export varying quantities of products. A country which has a variety of goods to export is likely to be in a better economic condition than a single product country. According to the Congressional report entitled, "Economic Policies and Programs in South America," "In 1960 nearly 80 percent of Latin American exports were accounted for by 20 primary products. Petroleum leads the list. In 1957, 26.8 percent of all Latin American exports was accounted for by petroleum, mainly from Venezuela with smaller amounts from Colombia and Peru. Coffee, with Brazil and Colombia in the lead, was second with 19.7 percent; sugar third with 9.8 percent."

These exports are further examined to show: "Venezuela, for example, exports petroleum and little else. In most years, petroleum's share is in excess of 90 percent. As a percent of total exports, coffee accounts for 57 percent in Brazil, copper 69 percent in Chile, wool 55 percent in Uruguay. The most diversified country visited was Peru, which depends upon cotton and minerals for more than 40 percent of export earnings."

Further, the United States is the principal buyer in Latin America, having purchased about 45 percent in recent years. For instance: "The United States buys 67.1 percent of all Latin American coffee, 38.2 percent of the petroleum, 40 percent of the sugar, and 48.7 percent of the copper. Western Europe is the next most important purchaser, with about 30 percent of Latin American commodities being shipped there. The United Kingdom alone takes nearly 10 percent."

Because we are such important customers of Latin America, our every attitude becomes tremendously significant. For instance, were we to reject, let us say, Colombian coffee, we could wreck the economy of that country which would undoubtedly result in a revolution favorable to the Communists. As it is, Latin American exports have increased sufficiently in volume to help in raising the standards of living in Southern American countries.

If South American countries can find other than American markets on a large scale, it would be better for them and less of a problem for us. For instance, we dislike importing sugar, cotton, wool, tobacco, edible nuts, meat, linned oil, canned fish, wheat, hides and skins. The United States also protects its domestic minerals industry, particularly petroleum, lead, zinc and copper.

The best offset to the Russian invasion of Latin America would be a Common Market and a mutually protected currency. A country like Brazil is in bad shape politically because its currency is inflated beyond economic soundness and cannot be restored without assistance. The Brazilians flirt with Soviet Russia in the hope of finding a second important market for their products. Thus far, they have only succeeded in antagonizing the United States, to a degree.

Neither Great Britain nor the Common Market can afford to increase their imports from Latin America. If Soviet Russia imports more from Latin America, it will only be for political reasons and therefore is likely to end in trouble.

The Latin American Free-Trade Association, LAFTA, along with the Act of Bogota and the Alliance for Progress, can do much for the development of this area. Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru and Uruguay, have joined in the Latin American Free-Trade (Montevideo) Treaty. This will, in due course, include other countries and through the Alliance for Progress might establish a rational hemispheric economic relationship. Problems of credit and competition with such countries as Japan and the United States continue to make difficulties and the tensions to follow.

Other Editors Saying Bigger Than Texas

(Greensboro Daily News)

Revelation that Jerry Holleman, assistant secretary of labor, has resigned after receiving a $1,000 "personal gift" from Texas' fantastic — even by Texas standards — Billie Sol Estes is all the more reason for a thorough congressional investigation into the operations, connections and influence of a manipulator whose activities, if even partly as charged, will make beleaguered placeholders of the Truman and Eisenhower Administrations look like knights in shining armor.

Despite resigned Assistant Secretary Holleman's protestation of innocence, assurance that the Estes gift, needed to meet obligations which Holleman's $20,000 salary avowedly would not enable him to meet, came before he knew of other Billie Sol involvements and disavowal of any connection between this "personal matter" and "any of Mr. Estes' interests or my responsibilities," the new turn of events does show that the fabulous Texan has friends besides those connected with the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

What the American people want to know and the Congress in particular should find out, even the political consequences falling where they may, is just how far Billie Sol Estes' connections, friendships, influence and gains at public expense actually went while he was allegedly piling up millions of dollars before ultimately trying to duck out under bankruptcy proceedings. If any place-holders are wrongfully involved or violated any of the trust and responsibilities of office, they should be summarily dealt with.

Government operations must be above reproach. And the party which has poked and prodded at another party can ill-afford to duck the responsibility of turning on the light and cleaning up any mess which may have developed within its own household. Such a cleaning up, for that matter, is the only sure way to hold and strengthen public confidence and stop any corruption or abuses which may be a-borning. The bigger the government the greater are the boodie opportunities and the closer must be the watch from White House, Department of Justice and the Congress.

There is no place for or toleration of foot-dragging in nebulous Estes case and its growing ramifications. Nor do we think investigation or action should be left solely to back-home Texans. Strange as it may sound, the government of the United States and its operation in the strictly public interest and protection are supposed to be bigger even than Texas.

The flare-up in Southeast Asia has quick, penetrating effects on United States business. Not all of the probable impacts are yet clear but some of them are in sharp relief on the horizon.

For instance: Inventory build-ups. Since the steel strike wage settlement, total inventory holdings have been leveling off. But now that the industrial future is uncertain, industrial buyers will start building stockpiles, first steel and then other commodities, with special interest in those with military uses.

Speed-up of defense spending: Whether announced or not, the Defense Department will apply pressures on contracts to meet or beat deadlines. In some cases this will speed the flow of government spending. NO ARMY CHANGES: No cut in National Guard; This week's events do not make it a time for cutting National Guard strength. Congress simply will not stand for it. However, there is no immediate prospect for new call-ups. Furthermore, increases in draft levies will not be large at the present state of affairs.

Congressional speed-up: There will be a moderate tendency to clear up small, nagging legislation, to clear committees for emergency actions if the situation worsens.

No weakness over Berlin: The suspicion that the Kremlin uncorked trouble in Laos to divert attention from the Berlin situation is so widespread that the Western powers are being forced into a united front. Even Chancellor Adenauer of Germany will modify his suspicious attitude.

MORE GNP: Rise in gross national product: The GNP, the total national production of goods and services, has not been keeping up with government-prognostications. But the stimulus of a semi-Korea will increase it to a rate of around $565 billion in the third quarter and $575 billion in the fourth.

And prospects in other areas: More good-byes to small depositors: A New York bank is kicking out savers with less than $500 on deposit. It found that the costs of handling small accounts was greater than the profit. Now that the proposed 20 per cent withholding tax on savings dividends will increase banks' cost of handling accounts, many more will refuse small savings accounts. The $500 minimum is high for most banks; $100 may become a typical floor. Many banks will not kick out small depositors; they will simply refuse to accept new accounts under the minimum.

However, savings and loan associations, credit unions and other non-banking organizations will be eager to accept rejected accounts.

A treat: For the third time, it is predicted here that steel prices will go up this year.

OLD PROMOTER WOULD CURE COFFEE-CONTAINER TASTE: The Old Promoter had that I've-got-a-proposition gleam in his eye when he dropped in today. "What's it now?" we asked. "A hot dog with built-in mustard?" "Better than that!" he replied. "You know how awful some cardboard coffee containers taste? I have invented a container that's impregnated with cognac flavor, so, even poor people can enjoy a coffee royale. Now if you have a few thousand lying around..." We told him we didn't, but if we did we'd put it in tax-exempt bonds.

Winston-Salem Reynolds Takes State Track Meet

RALEIGH (AP) — Winston-Salem Reynolds is the new state high school track and field champion, thanks to a brilliant performance by Reid Warren. Reynolds scored 19 points Friday night to break Myers Park's four-year hold on the North Carolina High School Athletic Association meet.

Warren set a new record of 14.8 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles and tied the low hurdles mark in 19.8. He was third in the broad jump and second in the 100.

Greenville's only entry to place in the meet was William Allen who captured second place in the 440. First place was taken by Carroll Maxwell of Hendersonville.

Captain Don Bennett's Phantom track team had three men and a mile relay team taking part in the meet. The local team members that went to the state meet in addition to Allen were Jack Foley, Richard Taft, Fred Baker, Philip Savage, and Jimmy Newman.

David Dunaway scored all of his team's 14 points placing Jacksonville in the runner-up spot. He tied records in two events, running the 100 in 10.1 and the 220 in 21.6. He placed third in the high jump.

Rodney Stewart of Burlington won two events, the shot put and discus, and set a record by tossing the shot 53 feet, 8 1/2 inches.

Team points — Winston-Salem Reynolds 19, Jacksonville 14, Burlington 13, Greensboro Senior 9, Millbrook 8, Brevard 8, Myers Park 8, New Bern 7, Hendersonville 6, Kinston 5, Northwest Forsyth 5, Siler City 5, Salisbury 5, Charlotte Gardner 4, East Mecklenburg 4, Gastonia 3, Fayetteville 3, Raleigh 3, Greenville 3, Lee Ed-

Houston Cools Giants With 4-Hit 3-2 Win

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

The fluctuating career of knuckleball specialist Ken Johnson, resembling one of his best pitches, was back in the strike zone today. The Houston hand-me-down won his first game of the season with his first hit.

A victim of a low output offensive in losing five games, Johnson got the job done singlehandedly against National League leading San Francisco Friday night, cooling off the sizzling Giants with a four-hitter and driving in the winning run in the Colts 3-2, 10-inning victory.

Johnson, acquired by Houston from Cincinnati in the player draft that stocked the new club, baffled the Giants with his assortment of "junk" pitches until he got a chance to win it with a two-out single that scored Carl Warwick.

The Giants, however, maintained their three-game edge over the runner-up Los Angeles Dodgers, beaten by third-place St. Louis 3-3, Cincinnati's fourth-place Reds closed in as Bob Purkey brought his record to 7-0 with a 4-1 victory over Pittsburgh. Milwaukee's Warren Spahn held the New York Mets to three hits for a 5-2 decision, and Chicago's Cubs

KINSTON — Greenville's Rose High Phantoms lost the first game of the Northeastern Conference playoff here last night as Kinston's Red Devils picked up a 10-1 victory.

The two teams were scheduled to meet today at 3 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium for the second game of the two out of three series.

Kinston took an early lead in the opening contest when they picked up one run in the bottom of the second frame, Johnny Biddle connected for a single to start the inning. He advanced to second on a balk, stole third and scored on a single by Cecil Turner.

Coach Bud Phillips' Phantoms came back in the top of the third to tie the game when Denny Hardee got a base hit. He went to second on a walk by Kroehie Andresen. Hardee stole third when Kinston's pitcher, Turner, tried to throw Andresen out at first. Hardee scored on a right field fly by Alan McArthur to tie the ball game. However, the scoring ended here for Greenville as Rommie Brock flied out to centerfield to retire the side.

The Kinston Red Devils returned in the bottom of the third frame to tally two runs on a walk, two hits, and a sacrifice fly. Ralph Lyon led the frame off for the Red Devils by drawing a walk to gain first base. Lyon stole second on a wild pitch by Hardee and then came in to score on a single by Babe Hardison. Hardison also advanced to second on a wild pitch.

Charles Whitley, Kinston's next batter, connected to send a hard grounder to short and Greenville's Kroehie Andresen threw the ball away at first to score King. Lyon came in to score also as another error was made by Greenville's catcher, as he attempted to throw Hardison out at first. Hardison came in to tally the Red Devil's third run of the inning on an infield out.

The Phantoms found the scoring rough as they were unable to tally throughout the remainder of the ballgame. In the last four innings, Greenville sent only fourteen batters to the box as Kinston pitcher, Cecil Turner began to put the pressure on.

In the bottom of the sixth, Kinston collected four runs on two hits, a walk, and an error. Cecil Turner led the frame off with his second single of the day. He was followed by King who rapped a long single to score Turner. Greenville then walked Lyon to put Red Devil runners on first and second. The next batter, Hardison, was safe at first on an error and King came in to score his second run of the night.

Lyon later came in to tally on an infield out by Charles Whitley. Johnny Biddle followed with another infield hit to score Hardison and send the Red Devils in the lead by a score of 10-1.

Cecil Turner was the winning pitcher as he struck out 11 Greenville batters, walked three, and allowed one run on three hits. Hardee, the losing pitcher, struck out three, walked two, and gave up ten runs on seven hits.

Mantle Out At Least 2 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle, plagued all through his career by physical troubles, will be lost to the New York Yankees at least two weeks—and possibly more—with a muscular tear in his upper right thigh.

The slugging center fielder's latest mishap took place Friday night in the ninth inning of the Yankees game against the Minnesota Twins. He hit a sizzling grounder to short, raced for first base, but collapsed in a heap about 10 feet short of the bag.

He was helped off the field and rushed to a hospital for X-rays. "We may know in a day or two how long he'll be out," Dr. Sydney Gaynor, the club physician said early today. "The torn (adductor) muscle appears to be reasonably severe."

"We kept him in the hospital overnight." But sources close to the Yankees said he may be out until next month.

Mantle hit the ball so hard that

Minnesota shortstop Zollo Versalles was literally knocked back by the force of the ball.

"I saw him fumble the ball momentarily as I started to run for first," said Mantle. "So I tried to put on a little more speed, hoping I might beat it out."

"When I stepped off, I felt something pop in my right leg. I guess that was the tear. It knotted right up and I couldn't straighten out my leg."

"I reached down to grab it and try to loosen it up and that's when I fell."

Manager Ralph Houk said that Roger Maris, the other half of the M and M combination, would move to center field and Joe Peitone, a rookie would take over the right field post.

For his part, Maris suffered a groin injury in a game against Boston Wednesday and for the past two games had done only pinch-hitting chores.

Basically, the majors will guarantee 100 clubs. Instead of three classes, there will be only three—triple A, double A and A. It is likely that there will be 20 triple A teams, 20 double A and 60 Class A. The new classifications would eliminate B, C and D, which would be grouped in Class A while the present double A and A would become double A. There are 110 minors this year, not counting the Mexican League and rookie leagues.

Although Commissioner Ford Frick, a tireless worker on this plan, said no realignment was in prospect immediately, it is obvious that a vast upheaval in the structure of the minors is inevitable.

Eventually each of the 20 major league teams would operate five minors.

Frick said the four new clubs (New York Mets, Los Angeles Angels, Washington and Houston) would be given more time to assume their burden if they wanted it. Other clubs would take over six or seven clubs to account for the required 100.

Yanks Fate May Rest On Mantle

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The fate of the New York Yankees in the American League pennant race may rest on the oft-injured legs of Mickey Mantle, the Yanks' Mr. Indispensable.

The outfielder sustained a severe muscular tear and minor damage to his left knee on the last play of New York's 4-3 loss to Minnesota Friday night. He will be lost to the suddenly-struggling Yankees for at least two weeks, possibly longer.

Fleming Hurls First Shutout

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Greensboro righthander Tom Fleming made his Carolina League debut Friday night an auspicious one.

Fleming, who joined Greensboro from Augusta of the Sally League, blanked Burlington 4-0 on a three-hitter. He struck out eight, walked five and hurled hitless ball until the fifth.

Raleigh's Gary Waslewski also turned in a brilliant pitching performance. He faced only 30 batters as he hurled a two-hit 3-0 shutout over Kinston. Dale Benetch got both hits off him.

A three-run homer in the eighth by Sale Shuey gave Rocky Mount a 5-2 victory over Wilson. Rocky Mount tied the score at 2-all in the fourth when Bert Barth slammed a homer with one aboard.

The Durham Bulls handed top place Winston-Salem a 5-1 defeat behind the six-hit pitching of Don Arlich. Durham collected 11 hits, scoring two runs in the fourth and three in the fifth.

Tonight's games: Raleigh at Greensboro, Wilson at Durham, Winston-Salem at Rocky Mount and Burlington at Kinston.

Carolinas Wins Women's Golf Competition

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The Virginias' bid to pull all even with the Carolinas in their women's team golf series failed here Friday by a mere two points.

The 16-member Carolinas team, which had staked out a 14-10 lead after Thursday's first 18 holes of best-ball competition, fought off a Virginia rally and won the first 1962 match of the series, 25-23.

The Carolinas golfers, who had lost the two previous matches, now own a 4-2 advantage and will stay in front until next year at least. The teams meet for the second time this year at Pinehurst, N.C., Sept. 28-29.

Led by state champion Mary Patton Janssen and Mrs. H. N. Allen, who scored a 3-0 shutout over Louise Fike and Mrs. P. B. Gravelly in the No. 2 match, the Virginias outscored the Carolinas 13-11 Friday.

But they never quite caught up despite the comeback. Twice in the eight-match program they pulled to within two points of the Carolinas team, but each time fell further behind when they lost the next match.

Two 3-0 victories helped the Carolinas withstand the Virginias surge. They were score by Mrs. John Pfeiffer and Mrs. Charles Kernodle in the No. 1 foursome and by Annette Roddy and Mrs. M.C. Brown, playing No. 6 for the Carolinas.

Mrs. Allen had Friday's best medal score over the par 71 James River Country Club course with a 39-37-76.

Commissioner Issue Facing Carolinas Loop

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — The question of whether to engage a full-time commissioner occupied the spotlight at today's Carolinas Conference spring meeting.

Stemming from the desire of the school presidents that such a step be taken, a committee was set up to study the matter and make a recommendation today. The committee favors the plan and has a man for the job—H.C. (Joby) Hawn of Winston-Salem.

Hawn, supervisor of football officials serving both the Carolinas Conference and the Atlantic Coast Conference, is engaged in personnel and recreation work at Hanes Hosiery.

Minister Will Address Pupils

Baccalaureate services will be held for graduating eighth graders of Bruce-Falkland School Sunday at 3 p. m., at St. John's Baptist Church in Falkland.

The Rev. J. E. McCoy, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church and art instructor at A. & T. College in Greensboro, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon.

On Tuesday, May 29, graduation exercises will be held at 10 a. m., on the school campus, with highest ranking students making the major addresses.

These include Hazel Johnson, Lillian Sutton, Carolyn Dickens, William Monk and Johnny Wooten. Marshals from the seventh grade are James Evans, Mark Olds, Patricia Dickens, Beverly Monk and Cynthia Johnson. W. G. Monk is school principal and Miss B. E. Spearman and Miss V. Vines are class advisors.

The public is invited to commencement activities.

Draws Fine For Misusing Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state district court of appeal fined Eugene Tallaferro of San Pablo $1,000 Thursday for "gross misuse of the right of appeal."

The court said Tallaferro, 64, has managed to block a property settlement with his divorced wife for 19 years by filing one appeal after the other. Some half dozen of these are still pending in the same court.

Admitting the fine was a little discouraging, Tallaferro announced to reporters: "I'll appeal."

Skunk Given To Fire Company Officers Are Elected By AIB Chapter Last Night

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What's an appropriate gift for a fire commission president celebrating his 45th birthday anniversary?

A skunk, according to Chicago Fire Commissioner Bill Quinn. He sent one named Smokey, mascot of Chicago Engine Company 1044, to Fred W. Kline, commission head in Los Angeles.

"Just a gag, said Kline. 'It's no reflection on our department.' Smokey arrived by air express Wednesday at Fire Department headquarters here. Why the unusual gift?

"I skinned him so because I shipped him a 54-pound mountain lion last week," said Kline.

Arrest Boys On Break-In Count

Two teenagers have been arrested by Greenville Police following a Thursday night break-in at the West End Shoe Shop.

Investigators said the West Fifth St. firm was entered by prying loose a lock on the door.

About $2 in pennies and 15 candy bars were taken from the shop. Charged with breaking and entering and larceny in the case were William Henry Hart, Jr., 17, of 1308 Factory St. and James S. Walter Barnes, 16, of 711-A Fleming St. Both are Negroes.

Last Rites Sunday For Ollen Wooten

Mr. Ollen Wooten, 72, died at Pitt Memorial Hospital Friday at noon after many years of declining health. Funeral services will be conducted at the Wilkeson Chapel Sunday afternoon at 2:30 by his pastor, the Rev. Ola Porter. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Wooten was a member of the Winterville Pentecostal Holiness Church and a veteran of World War One. He lived in the Falkland and Fountain communities prior to moving to near Greenville in 1932.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sadie Langley Wooten; five daughters, Mrs. Lubie Harris, Mrs. Roy Harris, Mrs. H. B. Heath, Mrs. John E. Vandenberg, and Mrs. Gilbert Harris, all of near Greenville; 15 grandchildren; 7 great grandchildren; and a sister, Mrs. Tommie Jones of near Fountain.

Quarterly Conference A Called Session of Quarterly Conference will be held and the Official Board of Jarvis Memorial Church will meet in the Chapel immediately following the eleven o'clock Worship Service Sunday morning.

Officers Are Elected By AIB Chapter Last Night

Mrs. Kathryn Greene was re-elected president of the American Institute of Banking's Greenville Chapter as it held its 11th annual spring banquet last night.

Mrs. Greene served her first term as president during the past year. The bankers elected Miss Vivian Clark, vice president. Mrs. Mary Ruth Highsmith, secretary and Gus Manos treasurer.

The group was told by Clifford B. Beavers, "Banking education—in fact all education, I don't care what it is—is becoming more and more important in every part of our life."

Beavers is a member of the Executive Council of the AIB. He is assistant cashier, Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

He told the group that AIB is a big organization but "you're the ones who really make it up."

R. Wallace Howard, senior vice president of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., awarded certificates to individuals who have completed AIB courses during the last year.

Included were two pre-standard certificates which went to Gus Manos and Johnnie May both of Wachovia. The certificates signify that the two have completed five basic courses.

Certificates went to the following for completing the course: "Principles of Bank Operations" taught by Gus Manos:

Watershed Project Contracts Discussed At Thursday Meet

GRIFTON — Construction contracts for work on the Johnson's Mill Tail Watershed project underway in the Grifton area should be let during next winter, interested parties learned here Thursday night.

Meeting with a Soil Conservation Service Watershed Planning Party headed by Lacy Coates of Raleigh, officials of three canal companies involved in the project—Buckleberry Canal Co., Baxley Swamp Canal Co., and Shilo Canal Co.—heard an announcement by Elmer O. Graham, SCS assistant state conservationist for watersheds.

He said the watershed planning party would assemble the material in the required form and then request planning authority from Donald A. Williams, SCS administrator in the Nation's Capital.

Graham further indicated the project would receive his office's assistance in shaping the project's planning stage into final form to submit it for approval in time for local sponsors to let contracts next winter.

Canal company representatives asserted that their respective treasuries were prepared to jointly finance their share of construction and subsequent maintenance costs.

A basic plan that calls for construction work during the first calendar year of the project and implementing of conservation plans on the watershed's individual farms during a four-year project period.

E. P. Moore, SCS area conservationist, outlined the basic structure through which watershed protection and flood control projects receive federal assistance, in this case, through the Coastal Plain Soil & Water Conservation District.

Moore stressed the need for developing and implementing individual farm plans to maintain efficient and effective benefit of the overall plan.

Specific points on which agreement was reached at Wednesday's meeting included: — appointment of M. Brown Hodges as spokesman for the group during the planning stage of the project.

— decision to provide for shaping and seeding of the soil for erosion control and to provide access for maintenance after completion of construction.

Attending the Town Hall meeting, which required nearly two hours, were Arch J. Flanagan, L. W. Taylor, W. L. Johnson, H. P. Rasberry, W. B. Hodges, W. E. Hart, W. A. Gaskins, R. P. Moore, E. O. Graham, Lacy Coates, W. Connor Eagles and Roy Beck.

Bullfighter In Baggy Britches

MORRISON, Okla. (AP)—Buck LeGrand is a bullfighter in baggy britches.

LeGrand's brand of bullfighting scorns the red and gold finery of the classic matador for baggy, clownish clothes. He waves a hat instead of a cape — and he never faces the "moment of truth," the final sword-plunging kill of the traditional bull ring.

LeGrand works at rodeos and many in the audience would dismiss him as a clown.

But he is a bullfighter — and with a purpose. "My first duty is to protect the bull riders," he explains. "That doesn't give me much time to think about myself."

Buck takes over after the bull rider has been thrown or leaped off. His job is to keep the bull from goring its fallen rider.

He was severely injured when an explosive went off during a rodeo at Camdenton, Mo., last June 30. But now he is recovered and looking forward to a new season of bullfighting.

Buck started out as a bull and bronc rider. "But when I kept finding myself working at fighting bulls to get enough money to enter the events," he says, "I finally stopped competing and started bull fighting full time."

Sparks Set Fire To Saw Dust

Greenville firemen were called to Garris Evans Lumber Company at Ridgeway and Factory Sts. yesterday when sparks from the firm's boiler set fire to saw dust.

Fire officers said little damage resulted. They noted company employees were putting water on the fire when fire-fighting units arrived.

Box 321 at the intersection of Ridgeway and Factory Sts. was turned in for the 9:50 a. m. blaze.

Girl-Hater After Airplane Flight

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Eighty-five young Greek girls, all single, and one lone Greek bachelor arrived in Sydney today on a chartered immigrant flight from Athens.

"I don't know how it happened that I was the only man on the plane," said George Gnessolis, 29.

"It was a bachelor's nightmare — 3 days 21 hours 40 minutes. Like any bachelor I like girls. But 85 of them was just too much.

"I only had to look thirsty and six of them ran to get me a drink. After we left Bangkok I almost asked the captain for a parachute."

George said he would stay with his brother in Sydney and "I don't want to see another woman for at least a month — and then she'd better not be Greek."

Local Pianists To Appear In Auditions Test

CHAPEL HILL—Anna Louise White, 16, and Jimmy Buck, 15, both of Greenville, are among young pianists scheduled to appear May 26 at preliminary auditions for future junior soloists with the North Carolina Symphony.

Eleven musicians will appear at the preliminary auditions at that time. Winners will be chosen as finalists for the fall competitions to select those who will be awarded public appearances with the symphony during its 1963 statewide tour which begins next January.

On the adjudication panel for auditions, to be held at the University of North Carolina in Hill Hall, are Mrs. James W. Hanson, Mrs. Alexander Heard and Mrs. John Calmeyer, all of Chapel Hill.

Poindexter Gives Club Program

Dr. James E. Poindexter, professor of English at East Carolina College, presented a program on poems at last night's meeting of the Greenville Exchange Club.

Opening with a quote from Mark Van Doren, that he hated poetry but loved poems, Dr. Poindexter read a group of poems ranging from the early 18th century to modern times.

The guest speaker was introduced by the Rev. Richard Ottaway.

Exchange Club members were urged to attend the outing to be held at the E. B. Ficklen Tobacco Co. Camp at Bath on Wednesday, May 23, when steak dinners will be served.

President John Behr presided at the meeting.

(Continued from page four) dency of some Latin American countries—to encourage Americans to invest in enterprises which are subsequently seized and expropriated discourages capital investments.

In a word, to develop credit facilities, these countries need to establish orderly political arrangements to gain respect.

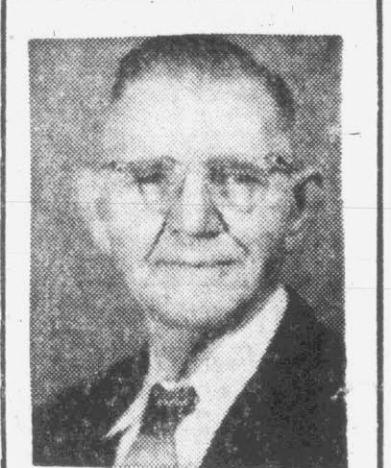

With profitable investments possible throughout the world, money is likely to flow where there is an assumption of safety and stay away from countries where political conditions make the investment too great a risk. This must be recognized if Latin American countries are to attract more American capital. Nevertheless, it is sound for the United States to cultivate Latin American countries and to help raise the standards of Latin American peoples.

Plantation True To Old Heritage

AUTHOR'S ENFIELD HOME . . . Ovid Pierce, ECC faculty member, is shown alongside house.

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

Last Saturday, we went to "Plantation" to see Ovid Pierce. This cool day in mid-May was ideal for such a trip. The trip over the roads to Enfield and then up to his place, a little above the town, was pleasant and eye-filling.

When we turned off on the gravel road at the schoolhouse, we had the feeling of leaving the noisy present behind, while we took a ride back to when life wore smaller and quieter shoes.

Then it was up through the lane of multiflora roses to the parking place by the big oak.

The House

Mr. Pierce showed us through the house. The telling of what we saw there must be left to another pen; for it was the outdoors that concerns our story. But we got the impression from the world of books, the rare old prints, the antique furniture and bits of beauty that this was a house well lived in and loved.

The Landscape Picture

Mr. Pierce has used the vigorous, thick walls of the multiflora rose to advantage. It is used as hedge, screen and baffle. The informality of the plant lends itself well to the landscape picture.

On the main drive up to the front of the house, the rose has been planted on the field-side while on the hot-side small pines will in time build a screen. The drive then enters into a circle through an opening in the multiflora hedge. This circle in front of the house has an inner circle of roses planted on the inside with red and white azaleas.

The brick-walk leading up to the house is lined with boxwood—off the step area two osmarthus fortuncii accent the entrance. Native hollies are planted in groups on both sides of the walk. The old oaks that shade the yard areas are ringed with iris—their flags stirring in the slight wind. The sun shines on new green growth of the East Palatka hollies and walks on the unshaded spots among newly planted dogwoods. Over in a corner by the split-railed fence, a colony of day lilies wait their turn to speak out in color. Nearby is planted vegetation that appeals to the quail.

speaks of Old South Everything that grows there speaks of the Old South. The golden bell that cried out so loud with gold in springtime now talks in the green hush of its summer season. Daffodils have dropped their shiny coins and stand green stalked—building for another spring.

The minnosa, crabapple and the gray split-railed fence speak also with a drawl. Around the dinner bell on its pole are ring Hosta, marigolds, snapdragons and azaleas.

The easy chairs and the table speak also of rest and quietness. It is a place that is alien to town and city.

Across the Fence

The small orchard stands beyond the fence, and farther yet the pond—domain of the geese. Geese that go their unruffled way—one moment a statue and then another, the frenzied motion of their kind—adding to their population without any worry of losing out to pot or market. And the guinea fowl, strutting around, small slate gray, white speckled bundles of energy—as indifferent to your presence as the leaf on the oak tree.

Steve

There could be no story about "Plantation" without a word or two about Steve. He is the handyman of the place. He tends the flowers, plants the trees and keeps the grass cut. He has a way of doing things that seems to be his alone. He has a deep faith in his ability to get a plant started right and to keep it in a growing way. He proudly shows you pictures of himself taken a time back, and you take the hint and use your last film to take a snapshot of him standing proudly behind his lawn mower. You promise to send him one if it turns out.

Time To Leave

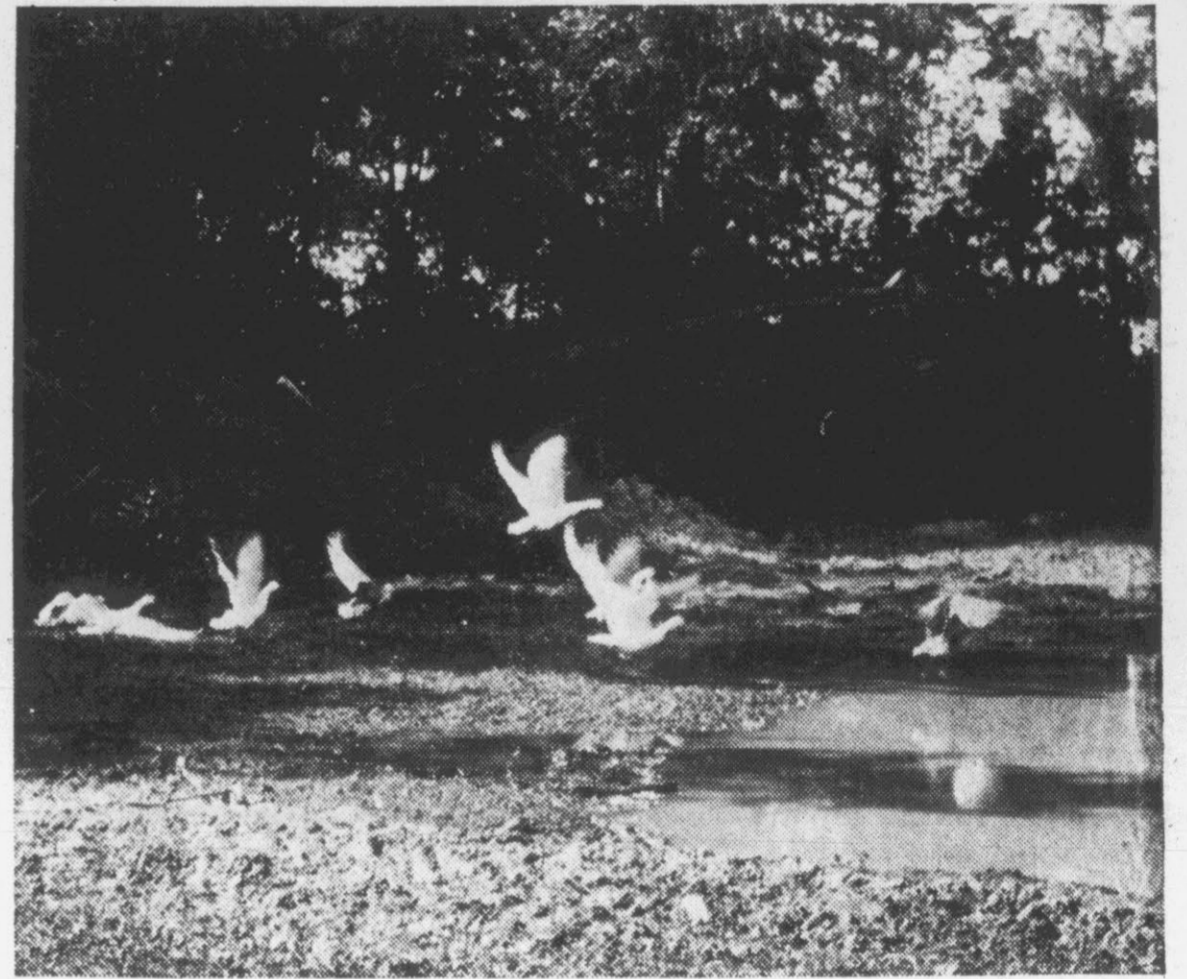

Time spent in such a place and in such a setting passes quickly and soon it's time to leave. Maybe you have to see a house, its landscape and its people at each season of the year to get a complete picture. And maybe you'll be asked again to visit "Plantation" when the maples are burning red and the fall winds say frost; or when winter sits on everything, bare and brown. Or in summer when the green tides roll out across the fields up to the skyline of the trees.

But if you add up what you have seen, you conclude that this is an ideal place for a man who builds a book, breathes life into a character with pen and ink or tells with words how the shadow of an oak falls across the side of a white, green shuttered house.

And you remember, too, Steve planting Shasta Daisies beside the split-railed fence, the geese near the pond, the guinea fowl hunting in the grass and the newly planted fields waiting on summertime.

AT "PLANTATION" . . . water fowl make a graceful landing at beautiful estate.

Atlantic 'Graveyard' Is Hiding Ancient Monitor

By CHARLES STAFFORD

CAPE HATTERAS, N. C. (AP)—A theory gathering dust may one day lead to the resurrection of the Monitor, the Civil War fighting ship that changed the course of naval history.

Efforts to test the theory during the lifetime of the man who devised it were thwarted by the ocean, full of malice off this storm-kissed cape. That man was Ben Dixon MacNeill, author-in-residence and first citizen of Cape Hatteras until his death in 1960.

But one man who made the attempt, William J. Kaland of New York, hopes to try again. "I happen to believe in the theory," he says. "And I think the Monitor should be brought up."

The Monitor sank off Cape Hatteras in a gale on Dec. 31, 1862—10 months after March 9, 1862—date of its only battle, the historic stalemate with the Confederate ironclad, Virginia. Official records say the ship was lost thousands of yards off the cape at the point where it was last seen. MacNeill, who lived the last 23 of his 71 years on a knoll overlooking the lighthouse, believed the ship drifted well inshore before sinking.

A crusty man who boasted that "the only real estate I own is under my fingernails," MacNeill was sent here on an assignment by the Raleigh News and Observer in 1937. He stayed to write a book, "The Hatterasman," and to immerse himself in local history.

He liked to talk about the Monitor. From a study of the log of the USS Rhode Island, which accompanied the Monitor on its final voyage, the testimony of survivors, and wind and tide reports, MacNeill theorized the ship sank about 1,000 yards northeast of Hatteras lighthouse.

"He claimed that on several occasions when conditions were just right he saw it from an airplane," says William Dillon, a Hatteras motel keeper.

In June 1955, two young skin-divers who had talked with MacNeill tried to locate the hulk. "They were taken out in an outboard skiff and made some dives," says Dillon, "but they didn't find anything."

Kaland led an expedition sponsored by Westinghouse Broadcasting Company in September 1958. "I talked at length with the old man," says Kaland. "He was quite an old world gentleman. We used his charts."

"He would say, 'Now I don't say this is the Monitor, but I have a theory that this is the Monitor. I worked out this theory and then tested it, and there is a hulk out there.'"

Kaland—who often mixes his hobby, Civil War history, with his profession, radio-TV programming—says the search lasted two weeks. But for the entire-time the waters off the cape were a dirty brown.

"This ocean is fantastic," says Dillon, who lives close beside it. "In rough seas, the tide will unseat a wreck and move it. It has a nasty habit of depositing treasures on the shore and taking them back with the next tide."

Had the Monitor gone down anywhere else, it might have been possible to use sounding equipment to locate the hulk, says Lt. Cmdr. James F. Toner, commander of the Navy facility here. But they call these shoal waters "the graveyard of the Atlantic."

"There are literally thousands of shipwrecks out there," Toner says.

First Armored Ship

The historic significance of the Monitor transcends its only battle. It was the first armored fighting ship.

The Navy ordered it built in 1861 after learning that the Confederate Navy planned to raise the USS Merrimac, which had been scuttled at Norfolk, and cover it with armor plate. The Monitor was launched the following January at Green Point, Long Island.

"The Yankee cheesebox on a raft" was 172 feet long. Its flat iron-plated deck was only a couple of feet above the water.

A round, revolving turret armed with two 11-inch guns stuck up amidship. After nearly foundering in rough seas, the Monitor reached Norfolk on March 8, 1862. It found the newly christened Virginia—the old Merrimac—mauling other federal vessels.

The next day, a Sunday, the two ironclads fought for four hours without seriously damaging each other.

When the Confederate forces withdrew from Norfolk a short time later, they scuttled the Virginia. The federals ordered the Monitor to South Carolina for action there.

The little vessel left Norfolk on Dec. 29, 1862, under tow by the Rhode Island. While rounding Cape Hatteras, pivotal point of the North Carolina coast, it ran into a gale.

"The sea . . . rolled over us as if our vessel were a rock in the ocean only a few inches above the water," eyewitness account. "The vessel was riding one huge wave, plunging through the next as if shooting straight for the bottom of the ocean, splashing down upon another with such force that her hull

Varied Roles In Welfare Work

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

Duties and activities of the Pitt County Welfare Department, according to the average man-on-the-street view, may consist almost wholly of dishing out tax money to those who say they have no other means of support.

But if that's the gist of public opinion, then it's far removed from fact, according to Woodrow W. Wooten of Falkland, current chairman of the Pitt Welfare Board.

And Wooten's claim is supported by figures compiled from day-to-day activities by welfare staffers. Statistics including last December and the first three months of 1962 show the welfare department devoted about 40 percent of its time to cases which involved assigning actual cash grants.

Other duties performed by welfare personnel, Wooten says, are varied indeed.

His checklist of welfare duties in addition to signing and issuing money grants includes: Pitt's sterilization program, ranked, Wooten says, among the five most active programs of its kind in the state. "And I think we're ranked number two," he says.

—compilation of various monthly and annual statistical reports required by the State and Federal governments which combine to furnish about 90 percent of public assistance grant money disbursed in the county. —investigation and screening of minors' applications to work and subsequent issuance of work permits to approved applicants.

—extensive work in juvenile delinquency problems which, in many cases, do not qualify for assistance under the Aid to Dependent Children program.

—interviewing and certifying applicants for Pitt County's surplus foods program which, during an average month, brings foods valued about $63,000 to the county's indigent.

—unceasing routine interviews with persons who apply for public assistance who are not qualified for grants.

—systematic response to questionnaires from out-of-state agencies who turn to the welfare department for information about migrants from Pitt County who are unemployed at their respective destinations.

These welfare activities, in addition to actual public-assistance work, keep the Pitt department's 25 staffers constantly on the go.

"We have a good staff," Wooten says. "It's not as large, perhaps, as it should be. Our district supervisor says we should have at least 31 people, according to State Board recommendations, but we feel that we're doing a real good job."

In reviewing the most recent reports compiled by the welfare department, Wooten points out the agency, which loses about $90,000 monthly in salaries and public assistance grants, reaches a surprisingly high percentage of Pitt Counties.

In addition to the department's non-assistance work, the department's current case file includes (as of May 1) a total of 1,566 public assistance cases of Old Age Assistance (698), Aid to Dependent Children (321 cases involving 1,384 persons), Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled (308), Aid to the Blind (150), general relief (44 financed entirely by county funds) and miscellaneous cases (25).

Wooten's statistics show that a total of 2,629 different persons in Pitt County's population of about 70,000—that is, one of every 25 Pitt Counties—receive cash grants for themselves or their children each month, based on the May 1 count.

The board chairman finds it difficult to estimate the number of persons contacted in addition to the 2,629. "We conducted a total of 1,009 interviews during April and a lot of them turned out to be cases which would not qualify," he says.

The Child Welfare Division,

Wooten points out, handled a total of 256 cases in April which resulted in actual grants for only 132.

The process of screening unworthy or unqualified cases from the preliminary interviews is the duty of Wooten's board, including Dr. Leo W. Jenkins of Greenville, East Carolina College president, and Roscoe Everett of Bethel.

Wooten, who faces mandatory retirement June 30 after six years on the board, calls his group together monthly to meet with Welfare Director J. S. Grimes to consider the cases developed during the previous month and to discuss whatever problems have arisen.

"We try to screen out the cases that are not entitled to the public's tax dollars," Wooten says. Board members and staffers alike are constantly working to reduce the welfare rolls, Wooten says, through encouraging the recipients of public money to seek employment if they are able. Wooten points out.

"What goes on within the structure of the welfare department," Wooten says thoughtfully, "but we try to operate our agency in such a way that it can be a genuine service to society."

JUST CAN'T SPELL?

MEMPHIS (AP) — Scholars do disagree at times, as witness answers given to a question on an eighth grade history exam: one young authority insisted Lee surrendered at Mathematics Courthouse while another was sure the name of the courthouse was Approximate.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

The reasoning behind the curious fact that there was no Pulitzer Prize for biography awarded with the other prizes the other day is finally becoming apparent.

According to the Nation, there were two biographies up for consideration by the selection committee—Schorer's "Sinclair Lewis" and Swannberg's "Citizen Hearst," a life of William Randolph Hearst.

Apparently the book about Hearst was chosen, but, at the last minute, the trustees of Columbia University, who actually make the awards, vetoed the choice.

To understand why, one must go back to the stipulations laid down by Joseph Pulitzer in setting up the award, one of which states that the work must be "a distinguished biography or autobiography teaching patriotic and unselfish services to the people, illumined by an eminent example."

The trouble, then, with Swannberg's book was the subject, though, ironically, Hearst probably considered himself to be a consummate patriot and a great teacher of patriotism in his publications.

Apparently the Columbia trustees have no high opinion of Sinclair Lewis as a man either, though Schorer's life is quite worthy of a prize if sound scholarship and good writing are to be rewarded.

The moral for biographers who want to win the Pulitzer Prize is that they should stick to subjects who are buried on the right side of the moral tracks—and so should the selection committee.

Third Reich

In Germany, William L. Shirer's "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich" is on the best-seller lists, as it has been here, in spite of its great bulk and prohibitive price. This is probably because no German historian or journalist has attempted a comparable job.

At the same time that Shirer is being widely read, he is stirring up lively controversy among German critics, many of whom are accusing him of bias and inaccuracies.

One of these critics is Paul

Sethe, whose review called "Shirer's Half-Truths" has been reprinted in Atlas. A main point in Sethe's attack is that Shirer is unreasonably biased against "German militarism" and the "General Staff," claiming that the latter group did not turn against Hitler until all hope of a German victory seemed lost. Sethe presents evidence to show that the contrary was true and that as early as the winter of 1939-40, and even after the smashing German victories of 1940, General Halder and others were actively planning the overthrow of Hitler and had made contact, through the Vatican, with the British government.

Most interesting is Sethe's feeling that Shirer's book oversimplifies the terrific complex of causes which created and maintained the Third Reich. He quotes with approval Golo Mann's judgment that "truly tragic situations are foreign to Shirer." Apparently this means that Sethe believes that the situation in Germany by 1933 was insoluble, and that a Greek tragedy of violence, if not of fate, had to work itself out before reason could reassert itself. Perhaps the closest American parallel to this sort of situation would be the Civil War, though the notion that any set of problems is insoluble is pretty foreign to American ways of thinking.

Wrong War

Gerald W. Johnson, writing in the New Republic, has come up with a generalization to the effect that no war in modern times has been decided with the weapons that the combatants expected to use. He believes that conventional atomic weapons are already outdated. According to him, the next war will probably be fought with biological weapons and "disintegration guns" employing a new theoretical technique of treating sunlight to make it obliterate whatever it strikes.

Johnson suggests that our insistence upon continuing to prepare for the final phase of the last war is largely motivated by the non-military consideration of keeping the economy going—a grand oversimplification of the actual problems facing Washington, Ing Washington, it seems.

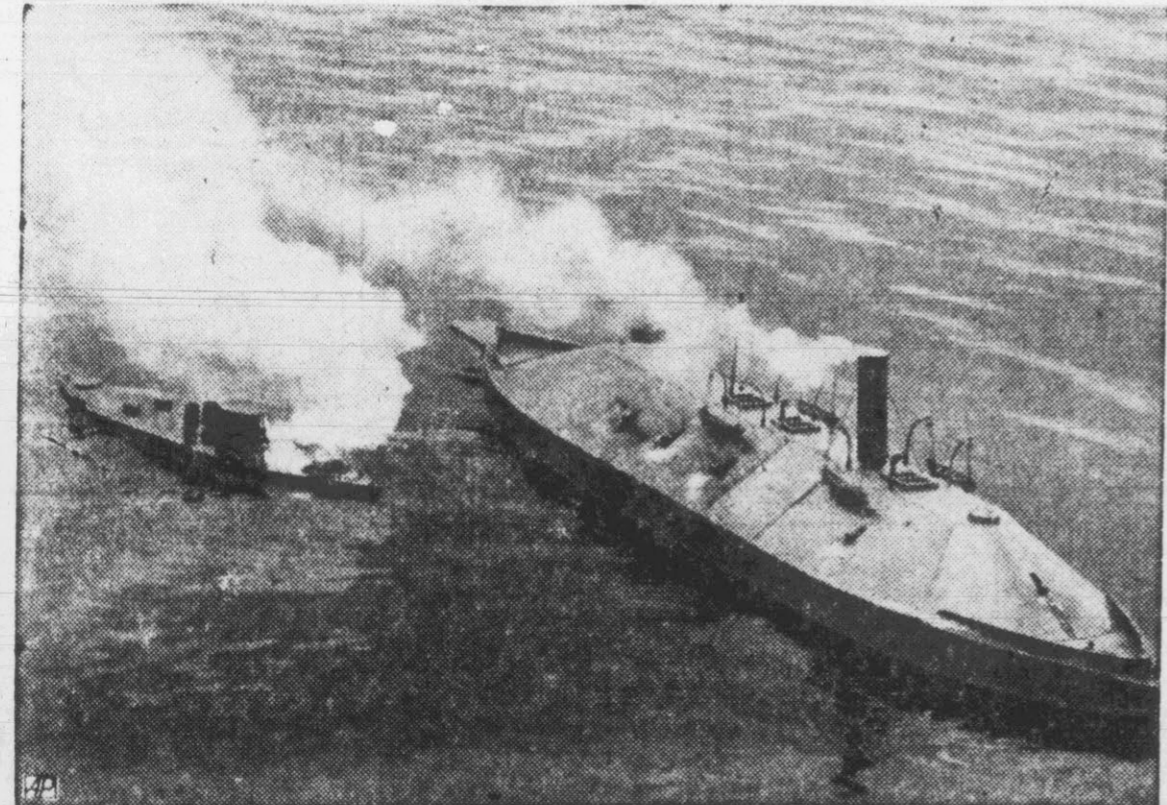

"A Long and Happy Life," by North Carolinian Reynolds Price, has, surprisingly, hit the best-seller list, having climbed from 15th to 14th in the last two weeks. Hollywood has also bought it.

Calendar

On May 23, Austin, 7:00, the Austrian movie, "The Last Ten Days," will be shown. This is a film which deals with the end of Hitler's life.

Sunday, the Art Center will hold an open house, 2-4 p.m., to open an exhibit of prints by James Walker of Flint, Michigan, formerly art supervisor in the Greenville schools. Walker is making a name for himself in the field of printmaking, and this exhibit should be an interesting event for his Greenville friends and the general public MODEL SHIPS GET UP STEAM—The first ironclad fighting ship built, the Monitor, model at left, and the Virginia (Merrimac) fought on March 9, 1862. The Monitor, which sank somewhere off stormy Cape Hatteras, N. C., the following December, may someday be raised. But just now, 100 years after the battle, even the Monitor's location is in the theory stage.

TIME AND TIED—Jerome, the donkey, won't go wandering as he is tied down for the time being to a parking meter in a San Rafael, Calif., street.

UCYM OFFICERS—These five Greenville teenagers will head the local United Christian Youth Movement organization's program for 1962-63. Included annually are at least five periodical meetings for various special youth observances, including the annual climactic event, Youth Week scheduled each year during Easter season. Elected recently were (from left) Anna Louise White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. White, 504 E. 9th St., vice president; Frances Harvey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Harvey Jr., 2407 E. 4th St., president; Brenda Lynn Thigpen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce E. Thigpen, Route 1, Box 256, secretary; Donna Whitley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Whitley, 1713 Trementon Drive, publicity chairman; and Chuck Bissette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Bissette, 106 Longmeadow Road, treasurer. (Reflector Staff Photo)

About 54 Positions Said Available At VOA Plant

Information received from the Employment Branch of the U.S. Information Agency in Washington, D. C., parent organization of Voice of America, has further explained job opportunities, existing vacancies and application procedure for civil service positions allocated to staff VOA's Greenville plant. According to the Greenville office, the information says about 54 transmitter and receiver operation and maintenance technician positions comprise the majority of the civil service jobs available. These jobs will be filled from a Civil Service register to be established from the result of a nationwide examination. Interested persons should write to the Board of Civil Service Examiners, USIA, Washington 25, D. C. There is one engineering draftsman vacancy, according to the Employment Branch, for which information is available by writing the Employment Branch, USIA, Washington 25, D. C. Four positions in the communications relay equipment operator category will be filled from a Civil Service register maintained by a board of Civil Service examiners at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Interested persons should apply for the examination by writing to the Ft. Bragg board. Two jobs for radio antenna and tower maintenance foremen and six rigger positions are available and will be filled from the Civil Service register compiled by the Fifth U.S. Civil Service Region Office, Federal Office Building, 275 Peachtree St., Atlanta 3, Ga. Inquiries concerning these positions should be directed to the Atlanta office. All other positions, including three general maintenance workers, five clerk typists, three general mechanics (diesel and air conditioning), one motor vehicle operator and two store-keeping clerks, will be filled from the Civil Service register maintained by the Civil Service examiners at the U.S. Marine Base at Cherry Point. Information about examinations for these jobs is available from the Cherry Point examiners. USIA officials have said that, in some cases, registers have already been established and no examination is open at the present time. Selection will be made from the applicants who rank highest on the respective registers, they have pointed out. A statement from the local VOA office said: "Since there are only a few positions available in each type of occupation (except transmitter and receiver operating maintenance technicians), applications are far exceeding the need. It should be emphasized that regulations governing Federal employment as promulgated by the Civil Service Commission require the Agency to select eligible candidates as certified by the Board of Examiners at Cherry Point and at other locations where registers are maintained."

Favors Attack Via TV On 'Economic Illiteracy'

The time seems propitious for an all-out attack through education on the "economic illiteracy" which is widespread in the nation. Dr. Dorothy Gregg of U.S. Steel Corporation told an audience of educators, businessmen, and representatives of radio and TV last night at a dinner meeting at East Carolina College. The audience represented an area from Winston-Salem, Charlotte, and Greensboro eastward. Dr. Gregg's talk dealt with a two-semester TV course, "The American Economy," which will be broadcast on a nation-wide basis on CBS' "College of the Air" series beginning in September. The course, planned by Learning Resources Institute and sponsored jointly by LRI, the American Economic Association, and the Joint Council on Economic Education, is designed to meet the challenge which "confronts all of us in economic education," she said. For the welfare and progress of the country, it is urgent, she indicated, that more and better training in economics should be available in educational institutions of the United States. "The opportunity for a great breakthrough is at hand," she declared. She placed particular emphasis on the fact that "The American Economy" will provide training for teachers, who in turn will train pupils on the public-school level. She also stressed the values of the course not only to business and industry but also to the layman, especially to the voter, who should be aware of principles of economics in casting his ballot intelligently. Dr. Gregg described in detail the course, which will present a large number of leading experts on economics in this country as lecturers. With Dr. James H. Stewart, Professor of Economics at East Carolina College, as moderator, a question-and-answer period following the talk indicated the interest of the audience in "The American Economy" and pointed up ways in which it might most successfully be presented for credit by colleges and universities.

Red Oak Christian Announcements

The largest budget in the history of Red Oak Christian Church was adopted last Sunday morning. At the annual business meeting the congregation accepted a total budget of $14,820.10. Worthy of note is the fact that the World Missions budget has been increased to $2,100 as compared with $1,400 for the year ending June 30, 1962. This is in cooperation with our National Brotherhood's "Decade of Decision" Program in a goal by 1970 of "As Much For Others As For Ourselves." New officers of the Red Oak Christian Women's Fellowship for the two-year period beginning July 1, 1962 are: president, Mrs. Charles C. Jackson; vice-president, Mrs. Charles Allen; treasurer, Mrs. Ed. Harris; worship chairman, Mrs. J. T. Manning Jr.; service chairman, Mrs. S. C. Winchester. Serving as Circle leaders will be: Mrs. Milton May, Mrs. James Bullock and Mrs. Jarvis Tripp Sr. A CWF Officers Training Workshop was held at Grifton Christian Church on Thursday, Mrs. Eleanor Smith, N. C. Executive Secretary for CWF, will install the new officers on June 17. The Rev. Howard James will preach on the topic "In Partnership With God!" at Sunday's 11 o'clock worship in observance of "Stewardship Sunday." During the morning service members will make their annual pledge to support the program of the church. Edgar Denton, Stewardship chairman, will preside for this part of the service. "All On The Altar" by McKinney will be the Sanctuary Choir anthem. Flowers will be provided by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Garrison and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Garrison in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Georgia Baker who will be 63 years old May 20. Sanctuary Choir rehearsal will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Boy Scout Troop 398 will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Daily Vacation Bible School will be held June 4-8 from 8:30-11:00 a.m., directed by the pastor.

Pink Limousine Is Now Black

CAMDEN, N. J. (AP)—The expensive pink limousine once used by Camden's finance commissioner is now black and transports the public works director. City Auditor Isidore Borstein ordered the repainting saying, "Black is a more appropriate color for city officials."

First Church of Christ, Scientist

More meaningful goals are attained through spiritual enlightenment. This is a theme of the Lesson-Sermon "Mortals and Immortals" which will be heard Sunday in Christian Science churches. Paul's admonition to the Corinthians (3) will be among the Scripture passages: "Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth." Correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will include (p. 256): "Advancing to a higher plane of action, thought rises from the material sense to the spiritual, from the scholastic to the inspirational, and from the mortal to the immortal." The Golden Text is from Romans (8): "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

First Presbyterian Announcements

"People of Privilege" is the title of the message that the Rev. Richard R. Gammon will bring Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian Church. A called meeting of the Board of Deacons will be held in the Church Parlor immediately following the worship service Sunday morning. Sunday evening at 6 o'clock, the graduating members of the Senior High Fellowship and their parents will be special guests at the annual banquet given for graduates. The members of the rising tenth grade will also be guests. The Pioneer Fellowship will meet on the lawn at the Presbyterian Student Center. Annie Cobb will lead the worship service, and each member is asked to bring a "bag" supper. The Church Council will meet Sunday evening at 7:30. The pre-Circle Bible Study will be held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. An important meeting of the Campus Christian Life Committee will be held at the Presbyterian Student Center, 7:30 p.m., Thursday, May 24. Vacation Church School at this church begins June 11 and will continue through June 15. Mrs. Morris McGahey will direct the school. Four people were hanged for complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln.

Monitor . . .

SCOUNDRELS' BRIGADE

CHAPTER 36

Hugh Spencer put his regrets out of his mind and concentrated on practical matters. Looking at Major Tallmadge, he said, "If you're giving me an expanded command, I'll need a junior officer to help me. I recommend that Sergeant Flaherty be granted a commission as an ensign."

Tallmadge made a note on a scrap of paper. "If he can find a tailor, he can order his uniform today."

"And I think the Simpsons have earned their right to wear sergeants' sashes."

"You're in charge of your unit, so you're entitled to name your own sergeants," Tallmadge picked up a sheaf of papers and glanced through them. "According to the report you wrote to me from Edwards' farm, August Dale and his daughter took great risks for our cause. What do you think we ought to do about them?"

"They're waiting outside," Hugh replied. "If you don't mind, Ben, I'd like them to hear what I have to say."

The major nodded to an orderly who stood at the entrance, and Katie was ushered into the tent. She held her head high as she curtseyed to the major, but avoided looking at Hugh. August, who followed her slowly, was unable to hide his fears, and his thin, pale face was grave. He smiled when Tallmadge shook hands with him and bowed to Katie, but remained apprehensive and alert. "I sent for you," Hugh said, "because we're going to discuss your future, and I want you to hear what we say. I intend to make certain recommendations, and if the major approves, I'll submit them to the commander-in-chief."

"I have full confidence in you, Captain Spencer," Tallmadge replied formally, "and so does General Washington. I know from my last discussion with him on the subject that he's prepared to accept any reasonable suggestion you care to make."

"Do you think," Hugh asked, "that the state of Rhode Island will feel the same way?"

"General Greene has been in correspondence with some of his friends there, at my request, and he's been assured that the state will agree to any disposition of the Dale case that General Washington cares to make. A formal court confirmation will be required, of course, but that's a technicality."

Hugh looked at Katie, whose face was expressionless, then turned to August, who grinned feebly. "Sir, I recommend a complete pardon for Mr. August Dale. He performed heroic services for the United States, he risked his life for our country, and he sustained a wound in battle as grievous as any suffered by a soldier in combat. In my opinion, sir, he has earned his freedom."

August brightened. "I knew I could rely on you, my dear lad," he said.

"You might change your mind when you hear the rest of my proposal," Hugh addressed himself to Tallmadge again. "Rhode Island suffered financial losses because of the counterfeit money that was made at Black Ox farm, and I know the governor and state treasurer would like to receive compensation."

The major nodded thoughtfully. "So I recommend, sir, that Mr. Dale be permitted to live at the farm until the end of the war, but that he be required to give the property to the state after we've won our final victory. The sale of the house and land should balance the books, justice will be served, and the state treasurer should be satisfied."

"Very fair," Tallmadge said. August wanted to protest, but was afraid to express himself too forcibly. "A drastic recommendation," he muttered.

Katie felt under no obligation to remain silent. "If you take Pa's property away from him, he'll starve in his old age," she cried furiously.

"I haven't finished," Hugh told her, braced himself, and said, "Major, in my considered judgment, it would be a serious mistake to grant a pardon to Katie Dale."

Katie stared at him, and August blinked incredulously. The major looked surprised but said nothing and waited for Hugh to continue.

"She has a violent temper, sir, and a dangerous tendency to act independently. For example," he added grimly, "she decided on her own initiative to engage in esspionage work in New York, and without telling me what she was doing, she induced various British officers to talk to her freely."

"We benefited from the information they gave me, and you know it!" Katie realized she was shouting, but didn't care.

Hugh paid no attention to the outburst. "Therefore, sir, I'm opposed to giving her freedom that she'll abuse."

Tallmadge and August heard an undertone that made them smile, but Katie was too angry to listen.

"In view of her services," the major declared, "it would be a miscarriage of justice to send her to prison."

"It would, sir, so I recommend that the present court order be extended indefinitely, and that she be placed in my custody permanently."

Katie stamped her foot so hard that she dislodged a small stone in the ground, and for an instant Hugh thought she would pick it up and throw it at him. "You think you're clever!" she said. "But you're not!"

Hugh turned to August and grinned. "You may not realize it, but you've retired. After the war, when Katie and I move to the Ohio Valley, you'll come with us."

"A splendid idea," August beamed and patted his hair. "I have no doubt that I can offer you valuable advice in selecting a suitable property, building a comfortable home, and settling down."

"Pat!" Katie looked stricken. "You aren't deserting me?"

"My dear child, I've been hoping for some time that I can enjoy my declining years surrounded by doting grandchildren."

Tallmadge took August by the arm. "Let's visit my private quarters, Mr. Dale. Our supplies are limited, but we captured a British wagon train two days ago, and the rum is tolerable." Paus- ing at the entrance, he glanced back at Hugh. "I believe in allowing my subordinate commanders to settle their own disciplinary problems," he said.

There was a brief silence when Hugh and Katie were alone, and when he took a step toward her, she retreated to the far side of the tent. "Don't come near me!"

He looked at her reproachfully. "As we were riding into camp I asked Benny to find a chaplain. We'll be married this evening after I've reported to General Washington."

"I won't marry you, as I've told you for weeks. And you don't really want to marry me!"

"Why are you so opposed to me, Katie?"

"If it weren't for me, you'd be living on your estate in England. That will always be a barrier between us."

"If it weren't for you," he said quietly, "I wouldn't have learned the meaning of liberty. You're responsible for the most important change in my life. I've become an American, and I'll always be grateful to you."

Katie wilted, and tears filled her eyes. "How can you respect me? I've let you make love to me, and I've lived with you like—like a strumpet!"

"No, like a wife!" He moved toward her purposefully, and she couldn't escape. "My next assignment is in Boston, so I'll escort you and your father to the farm in Rhode Island. You'll stay there until the end of the war, and I'll visit you whenever I'm granted a leave." He put his hands on her shoulders.

She made no attempt to draw away from him, but shook her head.

"Katie, look at me," He waited patiently until she raised her eyes. "Color rose in her face."

"It should be obvious that I love you. If it isn't let me offer you proof." He took her in his arms, and her surrender was complete.
