Atlanta Mourns 121 Dead In Paris Airliner's Crash

PARIS (AP)—A chartered Air France liner faltered on its take-off from Orly Field for New York Sunday and skidded into a flaming crash that killed 130 persons. It was the worst single-plane disaster in aviation history. Only two persons, both airline hostesses, survived.

All the 121 passengers were Americans. Most were cultural leaders of Atlanta, members of the Atlanta Art Association heading back to the Georgia capital with happy memories and souvenirs of a three-week tour of European cultural sites and art galleries.

Others who died were eight crewmen and Air France's Atlanta agent. The plane, a four-engine Boeing 707, lifted only a few feet from the runway in clear, bright weather. Then it pancaked down and ripped through an airfield fence, thundered ahead for 300 yards toward the hamlet of Villeneuve le Roi.

The $6-million airliner, gushing flames, raced across a rolling, wooded slope to a halt at the doorsteps of homes in the hamlet. The fuel tanks exploded. The grieving mayor of Atlanta, Ivan Allen, arrived in Paris today to help identify the bodies of the victims—many of them his personal friends.

With tears in his eyes, the mayor told newsmen in an emotion-filled voice that he had come to France under "particularly tragic conditions." He said "the elite of Atlanta" had died in the accident. Allen said he had come to Paris on behalf of the residents of Atlanta to view the scene of the crash and to hear official reports on the accident.

He expressed thanks to everyone who had attempted to save the passengers. "I knew all of those who died Sunday," the mayor said. "We were of the same generation and many of them were childhood friends."

Allen said he would stay in Paris until all the bodies had been identified and their return to Atlanta assured. Pretty Francoise Authie, one of the hostesses, said: "It was so fast. So sudden. I didn't have time to realize what was going on."

Witnesses said Capt. Roland Hoche, one of Air France's most experienced pilots, apparently died frantically to halt the airliner after engine trouble developed as it roared down the runway, but the plane was going too fast.

Nuclear Warhead Plunges Into Ocean As Thor Rocket Explodes

HONOLULU (AP)—A nuclear warhead—intact or as debris—fell into 720 feet of water off Johnston Island today when a missile carrying it aloft was itself exploded less than two minutes before the bomb was to be detonated.

A Joint Task Force 8 spokesman said he did not know the condition of the warhead, intended as the first high altitude nuclear device to be exploded in the U.S. test series at Johnston Island.

The spokesman had no information on whether the device itself was destroyed when the big Thor intercontinental ballistic missile was deliberately exploded because of a malfunction in the tracking system.

He was unable to tell whether salt water corrosion could set off the warhead if it lies on Pacific Ocean bottom over an extensive period of time. Nor could he say whether the device would give off radioactivity.

Education Board Studies Industrial Center's Needs

By PATRICIA MOORE, Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Education stated today they would favor extension of the Greenville city water line to the Pitt County industrial education center, as long as the county's share of the cost doesn't exceed $5,000.

The board had discussed two methods of providing water for the school: extension of the city water line, or erection of a storage tank and installation of a pump and related necessities.

Cost of the tank pump and other items would be about $5,000.

Board member G. E. Treva- than of Fountain, voicing the opinion that the city water line might be more advantageous, made a motion that the board would favor extension of the city water line to the site with cost not to exceed $5,000.

The board left some leeway in the cost assessment to provide for property owners along the way who might not want to participate in cost and use at the present time.

Gifts Of Past War Dead Are Recalled In Memorial Rites

Americans are "not worthy" to participate in the great gifts that those who died in battle have given, the Rev. W. J. Hadden, Jr., pastor of Eighth St. Christian Church said at Memorial Day services yesterday.

Chairman of the board J. S. Moye emphasized that this project was approved in 1959 and that funds had been borrowed in the summer of 1959 from the State Literary Fund for two classrooms at Bethel School. Interest on the money is being paid back now.

In another matter concerning school construction, the board went back to a project approved in 1959. They approved the transfer of architectural plans for a Bethel school addition from the late James W. Griffith to the architectural firm of Dudley and Shoe.

There had been two hours of delays before launching of the planned sub-megaton blast. A megaton is equal to one million tons of TNT.

The failure followed two 24-hour postponements of the explosion—the first of three or four blasts in the current Pacific series. The postponements were not officially explained but reports in Honolulu blamed cloudy weather and possible technical difficulties.

Joint Task Force 8 had no word on when another shot will be attempted. "They want to analyze this one before they say anything further," a spokesman said.

Sencindiver told the commissioners that the guard service would be one of the few ways to provide local employment after the VOA gets into service. Most other employment would have to be brought in from outside the area due to the technical work involved.

Robert Lee Wooten, Negro of 1306 Factory Street, was at the pond with a group of five or six other youths at the time of the fatal mishap, Deputy Sheriff Ralph Tyson explained.

Members of the Greenville Rescue Unit, called to the scene at 11:30 a.m. quickly recovered the body, clad in swim trunks.

The pond is located at the end of Deck Street on the Evans Farm, investigators reported.

The death was the third farm-pond drowning for the county so far this year.

ing summer cover crops compared to 4,169 farms in 1961. This is a strong indication that more farmers are becoming aware of the benefits of putting a cover on their idle land during the summer months.

The number of farms planting a winter cover crop has doubled since 1955. These figures not only show an interest on the part of the farmer in better farming operations, but they also show that farmers are becoming more informed about our Agricultural Conservation Program.

In Pitt County we have not had a large participation in Forestry practices, but the North Carolina Annual Report shows a large increase in the number of farms in the state carrying out Forestry practices with ACP assistance. The number of farms has increased from 374 in 1955 to 2,719 in 1961.

In 1961, only 2 counties in North Carolina exceeded Pitt County in the number of Tile, Open Ditch and Pond practices carried out with ACP cost-share assistance. Pitt County farms completed 310 of the above practices in 1961.

In the state, livestock ponds have decreased from 1,084 in 1955 to 429 in 1961, but irrigation ponds in the same period have increased from 790 to 1,532. This reflects the changes in the farming methods in our state.

The summary for total participation in the state for 1961 shows that there were 102,198 farms participating in Agricultural Conservation Program, receiving $7,700,453 in cost-share assistance.

The four most popular ACP practices in North Carolina in 1961 were Winter Cover Crop (40,705 farms), Liming (23,500 farms), Improving Permanent Pasture (19,586 farms), and Permanent Pasture (15,239 farms).

ACP is definitely catching on as these comparisons have shown. We hope more farmers in Pitt County will consider their conservation needs and come to the Pitt County Office to discuss these needs and apply for cost-share assistance to help solve their problems.

In closing I would like to quote Secretary of Agriculture, Orville L. Freeman, as follows:

"The task of conserving and building our resources is a task for everyone — the farmer, the rancher, the woodland owner, the agriculture extension agent, the forester, the soil conservationist, the biologist, the hunter, the fisherman, the hiker, the industrialist, the city man—for all the millions of Americans who use our natural resources and who conscientiously accept the responsibility of leaving to their children a land better, richer, and more livable than they found it."

The 1961 Annual Report of the North Carolina ASCS, which has just been received in the Pitt County Office, is very interesting and informative. This report is a summary of the 1961 operations in North Carolina and provides a concise reference for ASCS personnel (state and county), representatives of all agricultural agencies, and other persons who are concerned with agriculture and its place in the economy of our nation.

A portion of the Foreword from this report is as follows: "Programs administered by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committees directly or indirectly affect each farmer and consumer in America by furnishing the framework for a sound and balanced agricultural economy and by providing assistance for the preservation of forest resources and the conservation of soil and water."

Part II of this report, which deals with the Agricultural Conservation Program, contains several important items which I would like to discuss with you and at the same time compare with some of the accomplishments of Pitt County ASCS.

The percentage of participation based on number of farms in the state was 42 percent, while the percentage of participation in Pitt County was 57 percent. Pitt County's average payment per participating farm was $79.00 compared to a state average of $75.00.

A comparison of the different practices over a period of 7 years shows a large increase in certain practices. In 1955 there were 793 farms in North Carolina plant-

Chinese Food In His Truck Farm

FLEMINGTON, N. J. (AP) — In the heart of a rich farming area noted for its corn, wheat and oats, William Wing raises such unlikely crops as Chinese cabbage, Oriental melons, lo bok, bok choy, kohlrabi and Chinese radishes.

The American-born Wing thinks the fact that 70 per cent of all Chinese foods are vegetables is one reason Chinese food has been gaining in popularity.

"Today, there is a Chinese restaurant for every diner that you see. The food is especially popular among people who are calorie conscious."

While supplying vegetables to leading Chinese restaurants in New York and Philadelphia, Wing has some advice for housewives who like to try their hand at cooking Chinese food: "Please don't overcook them or the flavor will be lost."

Explorer Scouts Begin Flotilla Trip Thursday

Explorer Scout units in the area will take part in their first annual flotilla this coming week which will take about 13 posts and 110 boys on a trip down the Tar River and on to Morehead City.

The trip will be made on 23 rafts made by the boys and powered by outboard motors. The present plan is to depart from Old Sparta at 4 a. m. on Thursday, but depending on the water level of the river the departure point could be changed.

The rafts, which range in size from 29 feet to 15 feet long are eight feet wide and are made of drums.

The flotilla will begin Wednesday morning with inspections and trial runs of all the rafts and gear. Supper will be held and installation of officers for the trip before retiring for the night.

Thousands Get Degrees At N. C. Commencements

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke University graduates were told today that parents should stop a moment in the scramble to get their children into college, and consider that it may not be the right college.

The speaker at Duke's 110th commencement, Dr. Gaylor P. Harnwell, president of the University of Pennsylvania, said:

"In this stampede for the college gates, parents and children alike are more intent on getting in than they are on what goes on inside. It may be questioned whether the university whose growth is unexamined will be worth attending."

Wake Forest College also held its commencement exercises this forenoon, and the University of North Carolina will hold its tonight.

Other schools which held graduation exercises today included Lenoir Rhyne, Catawba, Pembroke, Guilford and Pfeiffer. Belmont Abbey will hold its commencement Tuesday, about bringing to a close the two-week round of graduations.

Degrees were awarded Sunday at Woman's College, North Carolina A&T, Bennett, North Carolina College, Fayetteville State Teachers, Lenoir, Western Carolina, Queens and Greensboro College.

Duke awarded degrees to 1,100 students.

The 400 Wake Forest seniors were told by Dr. Liston Pope, dean of the Yale Divinity School, to shun indifference, "which can itself become a kind of false religion. In that it becomes an object of positive loyalty and standard for regulation of conduct. ... Dr. Pope is a native of Thomasville, N. C.

"In many ways" this is the moment, the time of decision, when higher education in America will recapture authentic religious loyalties it has too often simulated or traduced, or else lapse for another generation into skepticism and cynicism deeper than before."

The 2,200 graduates at the university of North Carolina will be addressed at the 168th commencement tonight by Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution and winner of the Pulitzer Prize in 1958 for editorial writing.

Gov. Terry Sanford made the graduation address at Pfeiffer College.

Sometimes blue mold attacks tobacco in the field. This occurs when the temperature and moisture conditions are favorable for the spores, causing the disease to germinate. Field infestation of blue mold is usually worse in fields that are near tobacco plant beds. Therefore, it is very important that all tobacco plant beds be diseased as soon as replanting is complete.

There are very few fields that do not have the organism that causes southern stem rot. This fungus lives in the soil for long periods thriving on both living and dead plant material.

The plant is attacked by the causal fungus through the root system or at the base of the stalk. The roots decay and a light brown, dry rot develops at the base of the stalk, often extending a few inches above the soil line. During periods of wet weather, a white cottony-like growth appears at the base of the plant. Later small light brown bodies resembling mustard seed form on the outside of the decayed stalk. The leaves suddenly turn yellow, wilt, and die.

This disease is usually more prevalent in July and August at which time the tobacco is matured. However, southern stem rot has been observed in quite a few fields soon after the tobacco was transplanted in the field. In some fields, the loss it caused required much replanting.

Southern stem rot is a hot weather disease. Most damage occurs when the soil temperature ranges around 85 to 90 degrees F. Soil moisture is not an important factor in the development of the disease. Damage is caused during both dry and wet weather.

There is no known method that will completely control southern stem rot. Crop rotation is not too effective because the organism causing the disease attack many other crops grown in this farming area. Some of the crops which it attacks are: Peanuts, Soybeans, Pepper, Cucumber, Tomato, Watermelon, Potato and Velvet beans.

Usually this disease does not cause very serious damage because it usually does not affect more than five to ten percent of the plants.

of many students there is no better indicator of future business developments than stock prices. We are not of that opinion. Sometimes the market is correct; sometimes it is wrong. We believe that in the present instance the decline can be fully accounted for by other factors. In other words, we still think that the recovery has many months to go — more months than the stock market ever forecasts.

The basis for saying that we shall rally is that this is what must happen after a market break. Usually the rally is about one-half of the previous decline. Then comes another drop and testing of the previous low. If this low is not broken, it is usual to have a rise of some duration.

How does one know when a low has been established and we are ready for a rise? This is normally determined by what is called a selling climax. This means sufficient volume of trading to make the stock ticker fall behind floor transactions, and buying coming into the market to start prices on the uptrend during the lateness of the ticker.

But it must be emphasized that this simple rule of thumb frequently does not work. We had a major selling climax a few days ago, and the rally lasted only two days. None the less, before long a low will be established which holds, and the market will give us an appreciable rise. No one can tell when this will happen. In the meantime it is imperative that stocks be purchased only after a most thorough analysis, and because one is convinced that they are really worth the price paid.

On-Rushing Detroit Tigers Now One Game Off Pace

By JIM HACKLEMAN Associated Press Sports Writer

While the rest of the elite in the American League derby have been all but marking time on a two-week treadmill, Detroit's on-rushing Tigers have been making up ground like a stretch-running colt threading his way through a pack of tiring front-runners.

The Tigers gained another length Sunday, outlasting Cleveland 8-6 for the 12th victory in their last 15 starts—a profitable span that has enabled Detroit to pick up four full games and advance from seventh place to fourth, just one game off the pace.

The New York Yankees moved into a first-place tie with the Indians by beating Los Angeles 6-3 on some heavy hitting by Elston Howard, Minnesota further tightened things up with a 7-5 decision over Washington that left the Twins only 1/2 game behind the co-leaders.

Chicago got by Baltimore's skidding Orioles 2-0 in the day's only other action. The Boston Red Sox and the Athletics were rained out at Kansas City.

In the National League, San Francisco boosted its lead to 2 1/2 games, handing the New York Mets their 15th straight loss, 6-1, while Philadelphia was trimming second-place Los Angeles 7-5.

Houston took two from Pittsburgh 10-6 and Chicago stopped Cincinnati 6-3; and Milwaukee made it eight losses in a row for St. Louis, 6-4.

Detroit took a 6-0 lead behind Don Mossi but the left-hander needed a lot of help before his fourth straight victory was clinched. The Indians staged a four-run uprising in the eighth inning against Mossi, Ron Kline and Jerry Casse, making it 7-6, but rookie southpaw Ron Nischwitz struck out Willie Kirkland and Mike De La Hoz grounded into the third out, leaving two runners stranded.

The Tigers nipped Pedro Ramos for a run in the first, then routed him with a five-run second. Chico Fernandez led off the inning with a homer. Two walks and Billy Bruton's single loaded the bases. Mossi and the fleet Jake Wood both scored on Charlie Maxwell's 410-foot sacrifice fly. Norm Cash capped the inning with his 14th homer, off Barry Eastman.

Fernandez singled home what stood up as the winner in the fifth, and Wood's single and stolen base, plus another single by Bruton produced another Detroit run in the eighth. Latman and Willie Tasby homered for Cleveland.

Howard belted a pair of two-run homers in teaming with John Blanchard to spark the Yankee offense. The Yankee catcher connected off loser Eli Grba in the second and against Art Fowler in the eighth, both times following singles by Blanchard. Blanchard knocked in the two other runs with a third-inning single.

Roland Sheldon faced only 21 batters through the first seven innings, allowing two Los Angeles singles but being helped out by two double plays. The Angels got to the youthful right-hander in the eighth for their three runs in a rally highlighted by doubles by Bob Rodgers and Earl Averill. Reliever Marshall Bridges prevented further damage.

Minnesota cashed in five runs after two were out in the sixth inning for its victory against the Senators. After a double by Bob Allison and a walk, southpaw Jack Krallik singled in the first run. Lennie Green chased in two more with a single, another scored on an error and Vic Power delivered the fifth with his third hit of the day. Rich Rollins homered with one on for a 2-1 Twins lead in the third off Bennie Daniels, who has lost seven straight since winning on opening day.

Local Legion Nine Crushes Raleigh

By CHARLES VAUGHAN Reflector Sports Writer

The Greenville American Legion baseball team won their first game of the season Saturday night as they downed Raleigh by a score of 13-1.

Raleigh opened the scoring in the top of the third as they collected one run on a hit batter, two wild pitches, and an error. Rocky White led the frame off for Raleigh as he reached first safely after being hit by a wild pitch. While went on to advance to third on two successive wild pitches by Greenville pitcher James Braxton, Mack Kelley brought White in to score as he hit an infield grounder which was slobbered by the second sacker.

Greenville rallied in the bottom of the fourth to get back into the ballgame by scoring three runs on a walk, two errors, and a single. Charles Forbes, Greenville's first batter, reached first safely on a Raleigh error to bring Billy Smith to the plate. Smith walked to put Greenville runners on first and second. Braxton followed with an infield grounder which forced Smith out at second and advanced Forbes to third.

With two outs, Bobby Hobgood connected to send a line drive single to leftfield. Forres came in to score on the hit while Braxton advanced to third. The Raleigh leftfielder made a throw to the plate in an effort to catch Forbes scoring. The Raleigh catcher then tried to pick off Hobgood who was going to second on the play. However, the throw was wild and went deep into centerfield to allow Braxton and Hobgood to score.

Raleigh found the going rough as they were unable to tally another run during the rest of the contest. They were able to pick up three hits, but these were scattered. Greenville returned to bat in the sixth inning to collect three runs on one hit, two walks and an error. Smith once again started the rally as he picked up his second walk of the night. Braxton followed by reaching first safely on an error. Jimmy Rogers followed with a sacrifice bunt to move Smith to third and advance Braxton to second. Hobgood walked to load the bases and bring Billy James to the plate. James connected with his second hit of the night as he tripled to deep rightfield. Smith, Braxton, and Hobgood all scored on the triple to advance Greenville's lead to 6-1.

In the bottom of the seventh, Greenville's Post 39 tallied seven additional runs to insure their lead over Raleigh.

Braxton, the winning pitcher, struck out thirteen Raleigh batters, walked none, and allowed one run on four hits. Raleigh's pitching staff struck out four, walked seven, and gave up thirteen runs on seven hits.

The American Legion will play their next homegame here Wednesday night at 7:45 in Guy Smith Stadium. Greenville will meet Roanoke Rapids.

THE DARK RIDER

A Racing Novel of Suspense by GERALDINE THAYER

CHAPTER 13

"Mr. Fabian, can you ever become friends again with my father?" Julie Pendleton asked. "I must know, Mr. Fabian. If I marry Britt, you and my father must be friends; otherwise there won't be much of a marriage between Britt and me. We'll each be torn by loyalties—"

Lorne Fabian walked over to Julie in front of Julie's chair. He reached down, took her hands and gently raised her to face him.

"Julie, after the Derby I'll seek out your father and shake his hand and tell him I'm sorry. I'll be able to do so gracefully because I'll go to him as the winner of the Derby. I'll be very glad to be his friend again."

"Then you put me in the difficult position of cheering against my father's entry, Mr. Fabian." "I suppose that's true. Believe me, it can't be helped."

Impulsively, she kissed him on the cheek. "Nobody can blame you for wanting to win. I hope you do. More than anything else I want you and Dad to be friends, even if Dad and I have to lose the Derby."

"We may become more than friends," she said with a conspiratorial smile. "Perhaps we'll be partners, in a way. If our farms are combined, we'll really be something, Julie. If I win the Derby, I can go to him as a competitive horse breeder and we can talk on equal terms. Now run along so I can get dressed." Britt waited at the foot of the stairs and he could tell by Julie's smile that things had gone right. Her hands reached up, clasped his head and she brought it down to touch her cheek to his. "It's all right, darling," she said. "He and Dad are going to be friends."

"Britt seemed to lose a few years. 'Am I glad to hear that! He can be stubborn at times.' 'Oh, there was a string attached. Britt. Your horse has to win the Derby.'"

"Then it's as good as done. Julie, would you mind if Dad made the announcement to-night?"

"I think it would be fine, Britt."

"As if anybody's going to be surprised," he said. "Tell you what—I'll run up and talk to Dad for a moment."

She nodded in approval and he went loping up the stairs like an excited boy. She felt certain her father wouldn't object, even though an authority on etiquette might shudder at such unorthodox procedure.

When she found herself near the wide open front door she stepped outside, thinking that she needed a breath of sweet air. She walked along the wide porch and carefully eyed the large, semi-circular parking space filled with gleaming cars.

The one she looked for especially had long since passed its days of gleaming and it should have been easy to pick out, so she was quite sure Casey Jeffries hadn't come to the party. She knew, of course, that he'd hardly be equipped with an invitation and therefore never have been permitted past the guards at the gate. Yet she had a feeling that if he wanted to come, he'd be here.

Julie walked down the steps onto the cement path that led toward the paddock. She could hear the restless movement of the horses and, now and then, soft voices of Lorne Fabian's men as they quietly patrolled the area.

There was in her the impish desire to slip down to the paddock and have a look at Lysander. After all, what difference did it make now? She actually wanted the horse to win the Derby because then the way to friendship between Britt's father and her would be that much smoother. If she was going to cheer for Lysander, she felt she ought to at least see him.

The path to the stables was lined with dogwood and redbud so closely grown as to form a tight hedge. When the man stepped out behind her and touched her arm, she cried out and turned swiftly. It was Britt and she breathed again.

"You scared the dickens out of me, Britt!"

"You shouldn't be wandering around at night," he said. "I looked for you in the house, but somebody said you'd gone out for some air. I figured you might go down this way."

"You figured right," she said. "I really was just getting some air."

"Sure—and if you happened to stroll by Lysander's stall, you wouldn't be above taking a look, would you?"

He said it with a laugh in his voice, and she was grateful for that because she had feared his anger. And yet, why should she? And why shouldn't he want to show off Lysander—at least to her?

Impulsively, she said, "Why not take me there now and show him to me?"

He was already leading her gently in the direction of the house. "Not on your life," he said. "I especially want you surprised. He's quite a lot of horse flesh, darling. Between him and Templar we'll likely win every race this season."

They were back on the porch before she knew it, but she felt
