Property Owners Protest Site Of Public Housing

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Location of non-white public housing units was protested last night by about 70 citizens who appeared before the Public Housing Authority.

It was a rather stormy session which saw most of the property owners walk out as the authority attempted to show film of public housing units in nearby cities.

This came near the end of the meeting. As city court room lights were dimmed to permit showing the slides, most of the group headed for the exits.

The meeting also saw Sidney Higgs Skinner, who has appeared frequently before various city bodies in recent months, declared out of order by Chairman Charles Ho[illegible].

Skinner was attempting to discuss the white site, which had been tentatively chosen for an area bounded by Line Ave. Chestnut St. Boyd Ave. and Farmville Blvd.

Chairman Howard announced that all work on this area had ceased and for that reason only the non-white site would be discussed.

The non-white site is located adjacent to South Greenville Negro Elementary School property and about 450 feet back from Hooker Road.

"It is not our intention at any time to make a site selection that will in any manner injure property as a whole," Howard told the gathering.

He said the group was there to discuss reasons why the Authority should or should not choose the location. He assured the audience that the decisions made by the Authority had not been arrived at lightly.

"We made an intensive survey of the entire community in all directions and we felt this was the most logical choice." Howard had distributed mimeographed sheets listing criteria for location of the housing sites and said that the Authority would be glad to consider any suggested sites which meet the criteria.

Among areas suggested were the Elm St. section, various areas along Memorial Drive, on the Stantonsburg Rd., near the hospital, areas adjacent to Greenfield Terrace and other sections north of the river.

Lack of public transportation, shopping facilities, schools and other items disqualified most of these areas, the group was told.

Skinner was declared out of order after he had presented various maps and petitions to the Authority and had been asked to present a specific question by Chairman Howard. Skinner then referred to the white site.

"You're out of order," Chairman Howard stated.

"Mr. Howard, I think you all have been out of order," Skinner replied. This drew applause from the audience. As the chairman rapped his gavel for order, Skinner shouted, "Boom".

As he returned to his seat he said, "I know a run around when I hear it."

Skinner has appeared frequently before the City Council and other commissioners to protest phases of the public housing and urban renewal programs.

Following this exchange, a Carolina Heights property owner asked what the public housing would do to property values.

Howard said the Authority had made a survey of this. Executive Director William I Cochran read statements from directors of public housing in Goldsboro and Rocky Mount, saying that property values in surrounding areas had increased or had not suffered.

He also read replies from newspapers in Kinston, Raleigh, Greensboro, Asheville and Fayetteville, which he said he had written concerning this question. All reported no complaints, values had not suffered or property values had increased around public housing sites.

Property owners from the Carolina Heights, Tucker Circle and Hillsdale sections contended that values have already dropped. They said owners would spend no money on improvements until the public housing location is resolved.

Marvin Buck of 404 Hooker Rd., said he owns four lots with his house on two of them. He said he planned to build later on the other two lots but would not do so if the housing project is completed.

Chairman Howard pointed out that the project is located 435 feet back from Hooker Rd. and it was felt this area would develop commercially, thus providing a buffer zone.

The discussion at times strayed to the merits of public housing. Howard pointed out that the issue had been voted upon in a referendum and passed.

"There will be a site selected," he said. "The problem now is where to put it so that it will be most acceptable to the majority of Greenville."

After the discussion had been underway for nearly an hour and a half, Howard called for showing the pictures of public housing units. He said discussion would be resumed afterwards.

As the lights were dimmed there was shuffling of feet as most of the group walked out. After the pictures had been shown, only a dozen or so persons were left in the court room.

"I'm indeed very sorry that the other citizens who came here tonight didn't have enough interest to see these other areas," Howard said.

Education Board Hires Supervisor

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Negro supervisor and a guidance worker for Negro schools were hired by the Pitt County Board of Education in regular session yesterday.

Mrs. Carrie Payton Bell, head librarian at Elizabeth City State Teachers College, was elected to fill the position of Negro supervisor of county schools. The board selected Miss Mary Elizabeth Hawkins, who has served as librarian for one of two county bookmobiles, as its guidance worker.

"We feel that these are well trained people and they will bring improved programs of instruction to the schools," Superintendent D. H. Conley said this morning.

Mrs. Bell is the daughter of Mrs. Fannie J. Payton of Greenville, and lists her permanent home as 1229 Battle St., Greenville. She graduated from South Ayden High School.

She obtained her B.S. degree, with a major in French and minor in English, from Agricultural and Technical College of Greensboro and later received the master's degree in library science from North Carolina College in Duham. In 1961 Mrs. Bell completed requirements for the master's degree in education at Queens College in Flushing, N. Y.

She taught French, English and was librarian for eight years at Pitt County Training School in Grimesland and was children's librarian from 1954 until 1957 in the Brooklyn Public Library, New York. She then served three years as elementary librarian for West Babylon Schols, New York, and also did curricular planning. Mrs. Bell has been librarian at Elizabeth City State Teachers College for a year.

She has had supervisory experience as a librarian and has taught almost every grade in the public schools.

Mrs. Bell will assume her duties in mid-August for the supervisor's position, a 10-month job. She replaces F. D. Sledge.

Miss Hawkins, native of Grimesland and familiar to the public through her work with the N. C. Joint Council on Health and Citizenship, will be responsible for work in guidance, health education and related fields.

She is assistant secretary and historian of the N. C. Joint Council and also a member of the Scholarship Committee.

A graduate of North Carolina College in Durham, she received the B.S. degree and the master's degree and is trained for public health work. Miss Hawkins graduated from Pitt County Training School in Grimesland as valedictorian of her high school class.

Following her college graduation, she returned to Pitt County Training School and taught seventh grade, biology and health education for three years. Later she was awarded a study grant by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare towards completion of her master's degree requirements.

Miss Hawkins was selected in January of 1961 to serve as the first librarian for Pitt County's new bookmobile, primarily because of her training in community organization.

The daughter of Mrs. Dena B Hawkins, she resides with her mother at Rt. 1, Grimesland.

The Pitt County Board of Education yesterday ordered a small tract of land owned by the county schools and located in Pactolus, adjoining the Baptist Church, sold at public auction.

The property had been a part of the Pactolus elementary school tract which was divided

Second Primary Set In Grifton

Marion Knowles, Jr., of Grifton has notified the Board of Elections that he will run in a run-off primary for Grifton constable against H. H. Adams.

In the May 26 primary Adams gained 215 votes and Knowles picked up 148. A third candidate, Willie Faulkner had 55 votes.

Knowles notified D. S. Spain, Board of Elections chairman, of his run-off plans Monday which was the final date for a decision.

The only other run-off in the county was announced Friday when W. A. Forbes who challenged incumbent F. M. Wooten for Pitt County's lone house seat. Wooten is a three-term veteran to the legislature.

The second primary will be held on June 23, but the registration books will not be opened prior to this election. However, they will be opened before the general election in November.

Farmville's New Recreation Park Dedicated

FARMVILLE — A large crowd turned out here yesterday for the formal dedication ceremonies of the James Y. Monk Recreation Park even though rainy weather altered the plans somewhat.

The incliment weather forced the group to gather under a picnic shelter at the park for the festivities.

Joe D. Joyner, chairman of the dedication and master of ceremonies welcomed the people to the park and introduced Walter Jones, former town commissioner, mayor, and legislator.

Jones expressed appreciation to Monk and his wife for his outstanding service to the young people of the community.

Another former commissioner and mayor, Charles Edwards was also introduced by Joyner. Edwards informed the group that it was he and the previous board of commissioners who had dedicated the park in the honor of Monk.

He expressed the appreciation of the people of Farmville to the Monks for contributing so much to the young people of the area. He presented the Farmville Library with a book in appreciation of Monk's efforts.

The former mayor also presented the Monks with a gift from the mayor and board of commissioners, both past and present.

Present Mayor O. G. Spell also welcomed the group to the park and expressed appreciation for the work of Monk.

Joyner recognized the presence of the Little League children in uniform, the junior league, boy scouts, and girl scouts to whom he said Monk had contributed so much.

At the end of the program Monk expressed his appreciation.

Possibility Of Increasing Hospital Tax Levy Raised At Commission Meeting

By GEORGE BRYANT
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Commissioners yesterday heard a report from Hospital Director C. D. Ward and Chairman of the Board Jesse Moye in which they mentioned the possibility of having to raise the present hospital tax levy.

Moye said, "We should be thinking about the possibility of going to the legislature to ask for permission to raise the levy." The legislature would have to give its approval before the commissioners could call for a vote of the people on the matter.

The levy which is for the operation, maintenance and support of Pitt Memorial Hospital is now five cents per hundred dollar assessed valuation. It now brings in about $43,000 according to County Auditor Reginald Gray.

Moye also said that the hospital is having some difficulty with collections and that much of this is due to the fact that some insurance companies take a while to fill their claims and many individuals are slow to pay.

The board chairman noted the building program is now complete and the final payment from the federal government has been received.

Moye also requested the interest obtained on money from the hospital bond election be turned over to the institution for capital improvements. The amount is $6,928.08 and the commissioners approved the transaction after a move by Robert G. Little.

In other business yesterday Louis Spaulding, director of the industrial school, was introduced to the commissioners by Assistant School Supt. Arthur S. Alford. Spaulding has been working on the school for about one month.

The school head reminded the group that the county has a responsibility to pay for part of the school's operating expenses and the state and federal government will also take care of some.

Spaulding requested that the governing body include a special section in the county school budget for the next fiscal year for the training school. He noted that special classes were under consideration before the school opens in areas where there are facilities.

The vocational office in Raleigh has already proposed a partial budget for the school which totals $34,276. Spaulding said he hopes the school will be ready for operation by September, 1963. The preliminary plans have already been drawn and it is hoped that the final plans will be completed in the next 30 days.

Joe Allen of the North Carolina Forestry Service presented a report to the commissioners on the department's activities in the area.

Allen said that 24 fires were recorded in the county in May and that 355 acres burned. The largest fire was May 26 near Black Jack. It burned 106.4 acres before it was halted. Of undetermined origin, the fire burned land owned by the North Carolina Pulp and Paper Company.

In other business:

—Dennis Johnson of the State Highway Department reported on the road maintenance in the area.

—Tax Collector J. S. Moye presented two tax notices for release. Chairman B. Alton Gardner released an automobile that was said to have been owned by Wiley Tripp Jr., of Grimesland, from the 1961 tax list and relieved Sam C. Tucker of Winterville of 1955 poll taxes as Tucker was in the service at the time.

—Moye's monthly tax report was observed with $31,952.30 collected in May of which $26,253.99 were 1961 taxes and the rest dating back as far as 1952. Collections are running $60,599.43 above the same date last year.

—Maternity leave for Home Agent Lillie Harper Hall was moved up and she will report back to work on July 19 instead of July 30.

Income Tax Rate Cut Considered

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon says the administration will propose a top-to-bottom reduction in income tax rates for enactment by Congress next year.

He told the New York Financial Writers Association at a dinner Monday night that the proposal will be part of "a fundamental restructuring of our income tax system, designed to promote the maximum long-term economic growth."

The cuts would be coupled with revenue-raising proposals to offset the resulting loss of government revenue "in whole or in part," Dillon said.

He said no decision has been made on how far to go in offsetting the lower tax rates by broadening the base of the tax structure and closing loopholes.

Dillon's statement was viewed as the most forceful declaration to date of the administration's tax plans for next year.

The tax plans of which he spoke would be part of the income tax reform bill the administration long has planned to hand Congress before it adjourns, with an eye towards legislative action early next year.

In Washington, Democratic congressional leaders told President Kennedy at their weekly breakfast conference today that a message from him recommending tax cuts would be welcome.

"Congress will always be receptive for any such proposition as that," Speaker John W. McCormack said with a broad smile.

Dillon said he welcomes growing talk of a tax cut but not as "a hasty, ill-considered reaction to the gyrations of the stock market."

He spoke of the dramatic price drop of May 28 as one in which "all vestiges of reason were temporarily pushed aside, and panic took control of the great New York Stock Exchange."

Dillon said he sees no economic factors underlying the market's performance. Rather, he said, the slump reflects a realization that inflation has been brought under control.

During 1961, he said, investors and speculators pushed stock prices to inflated levels in the belief that inflation was just around the corner.

He said the fact that this belief has been pretty well dispelled is the basic reason behind the decline in stock prices over the past few months.

Dillon said the economy has picked up steam and is moving ahead rapidly after a mid-winter pause. In a question-and-answer period after his speech, he said there is no reason to feel the recovery won't carry through despite the recent stock market weakness.

"The market has its effects," he said. "Certain people won't buy automobiles because of last week's weaknesses, but mass purchasing power is what counts and there is no indication that that was disturbed."

Dillon stressed administration efforts to improve business profits through proposals to grant a tax credit on new investments in more modern equipment. He said it plans to announce, within the next month, liberalized depreciation allowances.

Housewife Wins Mayoralty Race

RHODHISS, N.C. (AP) — Mrs. John Rhea Jr., attractive 33-year-old housewife making her first try for public office, was elected mayor of this Caldwell County community Monday, defeating two men.

She received 80 votes, against 67 for Earl Baumgarner, member of the town board of commissioners whose term expires this month, and 57 for Boyd Younce.

And her husband was elected to the board of commissioners.

The incumbent mayor, William Childers, did not seek re-election, but received 23 write-in votes.

Mrs. Rhea has been active in local Democratic politics. The mayoralty election was nonpartisan.

Common Market Retaliates

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—The European Common Market will increase duties as much as 100 per cent on five classes of American products July 17 in retaliation for similar U.S. tariff boosts on carpets and sheet glass.

The six-nation Common Market's Council of Ministers approved the unprecedented tariff boosts Monday at the request of Belgium, which charged that the U.S. duty increases threaten industries in Belgium that involve 6,000 workers and $26 million a year.

The Common Market action will double to about 40 per cent of their value the duties on American-produced polyester, polytehylene, artificial and synthetic textiles and raise from 16 to 19 per cent the duties on American varnishes and water colors.

Officials said U.S. exports of these products to Common Market nations—France, Belgium, West Germany, Luxembourg, The Netherlands and Italy—total $27 million yearly. They said the difference in duty would total $5 million a year.

Under the rules of the General Agreement on Tariff and Trade, the Common Market duties go into effect a month after the new U.S. tariff increases become effective June 17.

The new U.S. tariff rates will boost duties on wilton and velvet or tapestry carpet imports from 21 to 40 per cent. The increased duties on cylinder, crown and sheet glass will range from 1.3 cents to 3.5 cents. Belgium is the leading source of U.S. imports of wilton and velvet carpet and sheet glass.

President Kennedy announced last March that he was reluctantly ordering the increases because the U.S. carpet and glass industries had been hard hit by unemployment. Kennedy said that Belgian unemployment was half the U.S. level and that Belgium enjoyed a favorable balance of payments while the United States was losing gold.

Belgium charged that Washington had violated rules of the general agreement by announcing the increases without prior consultation. Common Market officials also were angered by what they called the incompatability between the tariff boosts and Kennedy's congressional appeal for a liberal U.S. trade policy.

Portugal meanwhile applied for membership in the Common Market.

Nixon Political Return At Stake

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's embattled return to the political arena topped an extra-long ballot in California's primary election today.

Two key questions awaited an answer in the former vice president's quest for the GOP nomination for governor against a hard-charging conservative candidate who calls his followers "the new breed of California Republicans."

1. Could the party's 1960 presidential candidate overcome the vigorous challenge by a political upstart, Assemblyman Joseph C. Shell; and if so, by what margin?

2. Could the winner solidify the ranks of the GOP—outnumbered 4 to 3 by Democrats in registration—for the November effort to oust Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown? Brown had no serious opposition in his own party primary.

Between 60 to 70 per cent of the seven million voters were expected to check into 31,212 precincts during balloting from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. (8 p.m. in San Francisco). Warm, sunny weather was in prospect.

County clerks looked for a slow count. The reason: a record number of candidates and issues. There were 1,400 state and local office-seekers in Los Angeles County alone. Six initiative measures, including $970 million in bond issues, also appeared on the ballot, and only San Francisco uses voting machines.

Visiting Former Ambassador Says He Had Planned To Teach

By MARTI MARTIN

"I studied to be a school teacher in college and ended up the American Ambassador to Saudi Arabia," said J. Rives Childs as he chatted yesterday at the home of a former school mate, Marvin K. Blount of Greenville.

"In preparing for this proposed teaching career, I went to school at Virginia Military Institute and received an AB degree from Randolph Macon College. In 1915 I obtained my MA degree at Harvard, where I studied Comparative Literature.

"My mother," said Childs as he told of his background, "was a school teacher and my father was in the insurance business. My father also had the distinction of being a special messenger for General Robert E. Lee from 1863-65.

"I had no idea that I would become an Ambassador, but in 1923 I decided to take the competitive foreign service exam and was appointed consul in Jerusalem, Palestine. Actually I had had little training as a member of the foreign service but I found that my studies in Comparative Literature at Harvard helped me perhaps more than anything else."

Childs served in the foreign service for about 30 years. After his appointment to Palestine, he was assigned as consul in Bucharest, Romania; second secretary of American Legation in Cairo, Egypt; second secretary of American Legation in Techran, Persia and was later sent back to Cairo.

"After my assignment in Cairo," said Childs, "I served four years with the Department of State and was later appointed charge d' affaires at the American Legation in Tangier, Morocco.

"Following this," he continued, "I was assigned as American Minister to Saudi Arabia and Yemen. Later I served as the American Ambassador to Saudi Arabia and American Ambassador to Ethiopia.

"The most valuable service I could have rendered to my country was unfortunately something that the United States didn't profit from," said the former Ambassador.

"I was in Morocco at that

Crafts Workshop To Be At ECC

The District Crafts Workshop of the Northeastern and Eastern districts of Home Demonstration Club women will be held June 12-14 at East Carolina College, it was announced today by Mrs. Mavis Johnson, assistant home agent.

Thirty-four counties will be represented at the workshop, with five women from each county. Those who attend will in turn, teach the crafts in their own counties.

In the past, the crafts workshop has been held each year, but it has been decided to hold it every other year instead, beginning this summer. Consequently, the Home Demonstration Club women will have a longer period of time in which to perfect the craft they have decided to learn.

Some of the crafts which will be offered this year include crewel embroidery, corn shuck mats, drawn work, feather hats, Italian hem stitching, hooked rugs, tied fringe, and wood carving.

The approximately 170 women who will attend the workshop will be given an exhibition tour of the East Carolina College Art Department. Several other programs will be held during the event.

Grandmother Heble Immortalized In Caramel Dumpling, Sauerkraut

This is another of a series of articles by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney. They contain unusual recipes from her world travels along with accounts of Mrs. Whitney's improbable family and her adventure-filled life.

By MARY WHITNEY
Women's News Service

My paternal grandmother was really a Grossmutter, for her genealogical chart reveals a pure German strain all the way down the line.

Born a Schlund, she changed her maiden name to Schroeder then to Hebel, via two successive marriages. A triple play as it were—Schlund to Schroeder to Hebel—Schroeder being my own maiden name, since Grandmother Hebel and her Mr. Schroeder produced a son who became my father. Are you still with me, or have I got you hanging up my family tree?

Grandmother Hebel was a completely lovely and feminine woman, whose ample hausfrau frame seemed to be contradicted by her aristocratic and delicately chiseled features. She embodied all the Victorian virtues, from piety to domesticity, and was a devout believer in the Bismarckian dictum of Kinder, Kirche, and Kuche.

And, oh, the Kuche of Grandmother Hebel—that heavenly aroma of her wienerschnitzel, and pot roast and potato pancakes—her mouth-watering apple dumpling and schnecken, fresh and hot out of the oven!

CARAMEL DUMPLING SYRUP

1½ cups sugar
2 cups boiling water
2 tablespoons butter
⅛ teaspoon salt

Caramelize ½ cup sugar. Add 2 cups boiling water, 2 tablespoons butter, ⅛ teaspoon salt, and 1 cup sugar. Cook ten minutes. Put in large casserole or baking dish.

CARAMEL DUMPLING BATTER

2 tablespoons butter
½ cup sugar
1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and sugar, sift flour with baking powder and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add vanilla, and drop by spoonfuls into syrup. Bake slowly in 350-degree oven for about 45 minutes, or until brown. Serve with cream.

A good part of many people's lives lies buried in some deep, dank cellar, smouldering among yellowed love letters and faded party dresses in some beat-up trunk.

I remember an uncle telling me he had packed away his old World War I uniform after his discharge from the service, as a prized memento to show off to some future progeny. Years later, when he opened his trunk, all he found left were the brass buttons of his tunic!

My memories of Grandmother Hebel's cellar are happier. Scrubbed daily stem to stern and as clean as the most modern of kitchens, you could literally eat off it, and we literally did, what with her numerous jars of jellies, jams, preserves, pickles, spices, relishes and best of all, her pickled crabapples. Each year, Granny trekked back to her native hearth in Germany's Black Forest, returning with recipes for the family.

I remember Grandmother Hebel fondly for a number of other things as well. My erect posture, on which many of my friends are kind enough to compliment me. I attribute to Grandmother's hard-hair mattresses.

Of far greater significance was the change in religion that she wrought in our family.

When she moved from Illinois to Kansas City, Grandmother was a Catholic. But there was no means of transportation to the Catholic church. So canny Grandmother, calculating that it was the next best thing, decided to join the High Episcopalian church nearby. That is how my family happened to become Episcopalians.

GRANDMOTHER'S SAUERKRAUT

30 quarts shredded cabbage (pack lightly)
11 tablespoons salt

Use firm green heads of cabbage. They should be room temperature. Core, wash, and shred. Place alternate layers of cabbage and salt in a 6-gallon crock. Lay a clean cloth over the top of the cabbage. Place a large plate on top of the cloth. There should be room around the edge of the plate, so the plate should be a little narrower than the crock. Place a heavy weight on top of the plate — one heavy enough to bring the brine to the surface. (A large stone will do, or a large bottle filled with sand or water.) Store crock in basement, and allow to ferment from 8 to 14 days. Skim off the top scum daily. Begin tasting on the 7th day, and check daily until the taste is right. Remove kraut from crock to large kettle, add more salted water if needed to cover. Bring to boil, and can in quart jars. Makes about six quarts.

Attendents Entertained

On Saturday afternoon Miss Judy Evans, bride-elect of June 10, entertained her wedding attendants at her home on Eighth Street.

Guests were greeted at the door by Miss Evans and her mother, Mrs. Jim Evans.

Following a brief social hour, the guests were served punch, mints, and bridal cakes. A white silk cloth covered the serving table, which was complimented with a centerpiece of large white roses.

Housewives Climb To Newer Heights

SYDNEY, Australia—(WNS)—A rock climbing group organized by Sydney housewives has become one of the more popular diversions here.

"Women are good climbers because they have learned balance from walking in high-heeled shoes," explained Mrs. Noele Roots, mother of two, who just joined.

Women are every bit as good or better than men at it because in climbing you rely on balance, not strength," she said.

Mrs. Roots has a practice rock in her backyard, but she is considering taking it out. Her daughter Philippa, 3½, keeps trying to climb it.

Mrs. Dorothy Butler, who has four children, once climbed the 12,000-foot Mt. Cook in New Zealand. "I just seem to have been born without the ability to be scared," she explained.

Ports Require The Best-Qualified

The two deepwater ports of North Carolina experienced an increase of almost 50 per cent in export and import trade in the four years that the late D. Leon Williams served as executive director of the State Ports Authority.

With the death of Director Williams last week, the State Ports Authority faces the important task of finding a capable and qualified person to fill the position as its executive director.

As is the case in most similar situations, there is the feeling of urgency to fill the position even though a member of the Authority has been named as acting director. At the same time it is important to the state and to its two seaports that the best possible person available for the post is chosen to fill it. It may take time to find the right person who will give the necessary leadership to this important state undertaking to assure continued progress of the state's port facilities. The Ports Authority should weigh carefully the qualifications of those it might consider for the post, and name Williams' successor only when they are confident they have the best possible person for the job.

The two deepwater ports of the state are playing an increasingly important role in the development of North Carolina's economy. In spite of the great strides of progress made by the state's two ports in recent years, they are still overshadowed by the ports of our sister states to the north and to the south. If North Carolina's facilities are to gain the place they should occupy among the ports along the East coast, they must continue to develop at a pace considerably more rapid than port facilities in other states. It will take better than average leadership from the person who occupies the position as executive director of the Ports Authority to assue such a rate of progress.

The State Ports Authority and the people of North Carolina should not satisfy themselves with our ports merely holding their own in competition with port facilities of other states. They must continue to close the gap with their competition, and in order to do so office of executive director of the Authority must be filled by a capable, experienced and farsighted-individual.

Texas Politics Becomes Major Battleground

Results of the gubernatorial contest in the Texas Democratic primary have cast political shadows that stretch far beyond the sprawling borders of the second largest state of the Union.

Former Secretary of the Navy John Connally, who won the Democratic nomination by a slight margin with the blessings of President Kennedy and Vice President Johnson, represented the conservative rather than the liberal position in the Democratic contest in Texas. In the general election he must face the GOP gubernatorial nominee who will have the forceful support of Sen. John G. Tower, the first Republican senator from Texas since reconstruction days.

The election of Tower to the Senate was a severe blow to the administration and particularly to Vice President Johnson. For the state of Texas to elect in November a Republican governor, would be an even heavier blow not only to the vice president, but also to the administration. It could not help but have important political repercussions throughout the nation.

In view of this situation Texas is sure to be a major battleground for both the national parties in November.

It is significant, perhaps, that the administration, which is well stocked with liberal leaders and liberal viewpoints, chose to give its unofficial blessings to the more conservative of the two candidates in the Democratic runoff for the gubernatorial nomination. Perhaps it was part of the strategy to take advantage of the so-called conservative vote which swept Sen. Tower into office over Democratic opposition several months ago. But it could prove rough sledding for the Texas Democrats and the administration in the general elections in the Lone Star State..

Although the greatest emphasis generally in the nation in November will be on the congressional seats at stake, the Texas gubernatorial contest is certain to rank with that of California in having its bearing on future situations in the national political arena.

Too Early For A Trial Balloon

By WILLIAM A SHIRE

WINDS—Purposeful trial balloons for dapper Rep. A. Paul Kitchin of Wadesboro for governor in 1964 went up almost as soon as the primary returns were posted in the Eighth district congressional race last month.

There was barely a ripple from the political winds, simply because it was so early. In anything except politics it might have been called premature.

But Kitchin's victory over young, energetic and liberal John P. Kennedy of Charlotte was, in the eyes of the Democratic conservatives, impressive despite its closeness. Kitchin too has many of the background qualifications which favor him as the man who just might step from Congress to the governorship.

The tradition in North Carolina politics for many years has been to select gubernatorial timber from other than the Congressional ranks. Possibly what has brought about the thinking about Kitchin is that the Republicans may do it in 1964—the GOP is hopeful that Rep. Charles R. Jonas of Lincolnton might be the party standard-bearer for the governorship.

In Jonas' case, this could happen whether he retains or loses his seat in November in the forthcoming battle of conservatives — Democrat Kitchin and Republican Jonas. In Kitchin's case, a victory over Jonas this November would be an essential. If he should lose to Jonas the chances of Kitchin's getting the nomination for governor would be diminished greatly, if not wiped out.

On the other hand, a Kitchin victory in November would enhance his chances and give the old-line Democratic conservatives a popular hero.

The trial balloon — the mentioning of Kitchin as a gubernatorial possibility—while possibly premature and certainly dependent upon what happens in November, actually served another, more immediate purpose. That was to balance the scales in that while Jonas is being mentioned prominently as a possibly candidate for governor, a political asset in the Fall campaign, so the Democratic nominee also has been mentioned as a gubernatorial possibility. It is considered wise in politics not to let an opponent get any advantage implanted in the voters' minds without countering as quickly as possible.

CAMPAIGN—Kitchin's campaign for the primary nomination was against tough odds, and it actually appeared that until the final weeks before May 26 Kennedy was leading.

Kitchin, however, analyzed and assessed the situation and pulled out the stops in areas where from all indications the election hung in the balance.

He carried the rural areas and smaller towns, with appeal to the old line Democrats who know Kitchin's politics and the politics of his family, and to whom Kennedy was less well known.

This element too harbors some feeling against the redistricting which threw Jonas' Mecklenburg - Lincoln county strongholds into the Eighth district. These factors favored giving Kitchin a chance against Jonas, after all, since this was what the legislature obviously had in mind.

LIGHTS—The lights went out, literally, on election night in about the worst place it could have happened—election tabulation headquarters of the wire services in Raleigh.

Veterans of the nightlong task of collecting, posting and counting election returns could not remember such a thing having happened before. A heavy electrical storm hit Raleigh shortly after 11 p.m., with rain, winds and lightning that struck houses, trees and power lines in many sections of town.

Suddenly, at 11:32 p.m., a total power failure plunged the News and Observer-Raleigh Times building into darkness. It occurred in the midst of final, almost complete tabulations. It was in newsman's terminology about time for the clean-up.

Teletype printers, computers, tape perforators went dead. A hush fell across the place. The hum of electric motors stopped. Air conditioners stopped. Only the telephones kept ringing. The reporters answered the phones and with candles, flashlights and any other source of light continued to take down the returns. But the counting came to an almost complete standstill — at least for a little while. The power failure lasted for half an hour. It could have been worse.

Just about 15 minutes earlier, John P. Kennedy in Charlotte had conceded the Eighth district Congressional nomination to Paul Kitchin. Most of the other Congressional primary returns also were in by that time, too. And those still undecided were fairly clear.

It was such that with a few more returns reporters began their final wrapup stories by candlelight, or by balancing flaming cigarette lighters on their typewriters.

Results Of The 35-Hour Week

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suppose the nation suddenly switched overnight from the present 40-hour week to a 35-hour week — as organized labor is advocating. What would happen?

If the change came about without a cut in pay — that is, if the man now earning $100 a week for 40 hours work should continue getting $100 on a 35-hour week basis — labor costs would be increased by one-eighth, or over 12 per cent.

How would an employer meet this added cost? There are three ways. The boss could (a) increase prices, (b) reduce profits or (c) install new labor saving machines. He probably would do some of all three.

A sudden conversion to a 35-hour week, therefore, almost certainly would cause higher prices and thus inflation.

It is for this reason that President Kennedy, in trying to maintain a stable wage-price line, is discouraging any broad-scale changeover to a shorter work week.

Nor is any sudden general switch anticipated. Even economists for the AFL-CIO whose president, George Meany, is talking of a general union drive for the 35-hour week, don't think it is a quickly attainable goal.

One way to get the 35-hour week in one swoop would be to persuade Congress to cut the present 40-hour week specified in the Fair Labor Standards Act. The unions privately recognize they're in for a long haul here.

Work hours also can be reduced through labor contract negotiations, but as one top union strategist told this reporter: "This isn't going to be easy sailing, either. We can only get the 35-hour week as industries have the physical and financial ability to pay for it. The cost problem will have to work itself out."

Labor says it wants the shorter week to share jobs with 3.7 million unemployed. There is considerable doubt, however, that a quick change to a 35-hour week would provide many job openings. Why?

You would think offhand that cutting work hours by an eighth would create close to one million jobs, since there are about 70 million employed. The fact is that by far the bulk of the unemployed are unskilled. Only about 5 per cent of the skilled workers are unemployed.

Thus, if a job surplus was created by cutting weekly hours, there would be a shortage of men to take the extra jobs. The government has embarked on an ambitious program to train idle workers in new skills, but it anticipates providing only partial training to a maximum of 100,000 a year.

Many employers, faced with a shorter week requirement, simply would have to work their already employed workers beyond a new 35-hour week limit and pay them overtime, usually at 1½ times the regular pay rate.

This would not mean more jobs for others, or more leisure for those already employed. It would simply be disguised pay increase. This seems to have been the effect of the 25-hour week negotiated earlier this year by New York electricians.

Few experts doubt that the gradual reduction in work hours will continue. In every decade from 1880 to 1940 three to five hours were shaved off the work week. Since then, more holidays and vacations have further re-

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NEAR THE JUNGLE

There is still a lot of the primitive in all of us. Put almost anybody in a set of extreme circumstances which arouse his terror, or his anger, or his passion and he can — and frequently does — in the twinkling of an eye, become a primitive savage. He sloughs off centuries of culture and restraint in a few seconds and plummets down to a primitive level as rapidly as does the individual who steps off the roof of a ten-story building.

This is one of the reasons why we all need religious faith and the values and self-control which the sincere practice of religion produces. A man can even shed his religion in one of those crisis moments which results in a plunge downward. But he is less likely to shed his religion in such crises than he is to shed his education, his culture, his sense of responsibility to friends and loved ones.

Because we know this about ourselves, because we have observed that we, and the other members of the human race, always walk along the edge of a precipice, let us do at least two things. First, let us keep in mind that we live mighty close to the jungle all the time, and let us be on our guard lest we dart into the jungle or the jungle dart out and encompass us. In the second place, let us continually develop by quiet meditation, prayer, and practice of the presence of God those qualities within us which will steady us in the hour of danger.

Tomorrow we shall try to explain to ourselves the meaning of the term "practicing the presence of God."

Castro's Bitter Crop

By ALVIN TAYLOR

Tar Heels In The News

North Carolina's politicians may not always be right in the eyes of the country, but they have a way of making their mark nationally.

Everyone is aware by now that former governor — now Secretary of Commerce — Luther Hodges is embroiled in a controversy with some of his fellow cabinet members.

Sec. Hodges — Luther the Lionhearted he used to be tagged as governor — called for action by the administration to bolster the economy as the stock market plummeted last week.

Even as he was saying it last Tuesday, however, the market was in the midst of a sensational rise which culminated Friday with the losses being recouped.

All this sent national political observers to wondering from whenceforth Hodges spoke. Through it all, Pres. Kennedy ignored Hodges' advice for immediate reforms announcements and other actions, but at week's end there was no evidence that the North Carolinian had fallen in disfavor with the Man in the White House.

While Hodges was doing all this, a copy of Time magazine came out with a feature on Sen. Sam J. Ervin of North Carolina. Sunny Sam, they entitled it, and the magazine depicted Sen. Ervin as a man with little voice behind the scenes, but as a senator with less to worry about than anyone else.

Time pointed out that in the recent primary Ervin won nomination unopposed. There is practically no chance of the GOP candidate heading him off in November, the magazine indicated.

"The secret of Ervin's success is one of the sunniest dispositions in U. S. politics," Time says. It cited situations where Ervin cooled hot tempers in the Senate with a humorous story at the proper time.

Time also points out that it is ironical Ervin's reputation as a humorist has obscured his standing as one of Capitol Hill's most learned students of the U. S. Constitution.

Hardly had Time with Sunny Sam hit the newsstands, than Look magazine came out with an article and photos headed in bold letters: "Terry Sanford."

It was, of course, about North Carolina's now controversial governor, or as the smaller type said, "A young Southern governor who thrives on breaking the old rules of politics."

The article points out that Sanford led a pro-Kennedy block from his state in the 1960 Democratic conventions — this at the risk of losing many votes in the coming election.

The governor's education program is discussed and the article says, "Sanford regards the large Negro population as an economic asset and wholeheartedly backs industrial schools to retain Negroes as well as whites."

It points out that his needling for education isn't always effective. As evidence of this, the article refers to the bond issue defeat of last fall. Here, we must rank this as the biggest set-back of Sanford's career.

That Sanford has a political future can be learned from the article's closing line. "Terry came to our support on his own," says Attorney General Robert Kennedy. "I'm sure he actually lost votes by doing so. But he still won. He's going places."

Other Editors Saying . . . Not Paying Its Way

(Honolulu Star-Bulletin)

The Federal Government is short-changing the taxpayers of the city of Washington, D. C., by demanding more from them than it is willing to pay back.

Less than half the land in the District of Columbia is taxable. The rest is occupied by the Federal Government and by foreign governments and other tax-exempt groups.

This increases the burden on the Washington taxpayer—and the burden is getting heavier because the city cannot grow beyond its fixed boundaries, and the Federal Government is taking an increasingly large share of available property for its own tax-exempt purposes.

From the time Washington was established as the nation's capital, Congress has made an annual payment toward the cost of City operations. These are to compensate the City for tax losses resulting from federal use of land, municipal services rendered the Federal Government, and helping to make Washington the kind of metropolis the nation's citizens would want their capital to be.

The amounts appropriated as the federal share have varied widely. Until 1879 appropriations were voted on a hit-or-miss basis. From 1879 to 1921 the amount was fixed at one-half the City's budget. From 1921 to 1924 the ratio was set at 40 percent. Since 1924, Congress has simply appropriated a lump sum that has fluctuated from a high of 39.5 percent in 1924 to a low of 8.5 percent in 1954. It has averaged only slightly more than 12 percent since 1956. Last year it was 11.1 percent—$30 million in a $270.1 million budget.

Washington's citizens pay taxes on the same general basis as those paid by citizens in other states. In the past five years they have increased nearly $44 million, of which $14 million was added this year.

Its mission as a Federal City increases Washington's municipal costs.

Washington residents are asking Congress to adopt a formula for determining the amount of federal payments to the District each year. This year it would bring $40 million, although all the municipal government is asking is $36 million for its next budget.

The value of the formula is that it would make the annual payments automatic—and predictable, so that planners could depend on the amounts to be received.

This is no more than fair. The Federal Government hasn't been paying its way. It's high time it did.

Trading Stamps Reach A Peak

By ELMER ROESSNER

Any graduate of the Harvard Business School could tell you that "plaid" is a lousy name for a trading stamp. The design is bound to be confusing, it implies a racial bias, and it embarrasses housewives when they learn that the name is not pronounced "played."

But Plaid stamps have pushed trading stamps to a peak—some say saturation.

Trading stamps have been increasing in use since the war. Almost all of the big chains used them except A. & P. Then Elton F. MacDonald, of the E. F. MacDonald Co. of Dayton, Ohio, devised Plaid stamps and sold the biggest chain. And now every chain of importance gives some kind of stamps, and so do countless other stores, gas stations, service enterprises and even employment agencies. There's a report that one funeral home gives them, but I have not been able to identify it. If any reader can, please write me.

BEGINNING OF END?

Critics of trading stamps say that the capitulation of the A. & P. is the beginning of the end. Now that practically everybody gives stamps, there is no advantage to any merchant, and gradually they'll quit.

Trading stamp officials laugh. "As long as one big merchandising outfit gives stamps, all their competitors will have to. A. & P. learned that the hard way."

Nevertheless, there are two developments that indicate that stamps may be, at least, at their peak:

1. There are more and more swap groups. Neighbors, members of clubs, church groups and others get together and swap stamps. Then each housewife buys where she wills, with no inducement to keep trading at the same outlets.

2. More cash discounts appear. Customers making purchases say, "I don't save stamps. Give me the cash." More often, shoppers, say, they get it.

THE DISCOUNT VALUE

Merchants usually pay $3 for 1,200 stamps and give one for each 10 cents in purchase. Thus 10 stamps cost 2½ cents; 100 stamps cost 25 cents. A woman with a $10 grocery bill would get 100 stamps or, if she presses the point, may get 20 or 25 cents off her bill instead.

A New York state merchant once decided to give postage stamps instead of trading stamps. He gave 2 cents in stamps with every $1 purchase. But customers wanted other kinds of stamps.

Seven paragraphs back "critics of stamps" were mentioned. Who are they? They are the people, often allied with consumer groups or with other promotional media, who say stamps are a delusion.

Since stamps cost the merchant 2.5 per cent of his sales plus extra costs of handling and pilferage, the merchant must increase his prices by at least 2.5 per cent.

ALL FOOD PRICES PUSHED UP?

Until recently, the counter argument was that by increasing sales, stamps brought in so much more business that merchants could actually reduce prices and still make more money. But since A. & P. has made it almost unanimous, in the food field at least, no one chain can get an upsurge in business from stamps. It would appear, then, that all food prices would tend to be increased 2.5 per cent.

However, the stamps do have a purchasing value. One stamp company says its books give the collector $3 in purchasing power for stamps covering $120 in purchases — a clear 2.5 per cent. Other companies appear to give less and the premiums offered seem to be evaluated at list, rather than discount, prices.

Some critics say that customers pay $3 more for each $120 worth of purchases, then get premiums that cost the stamp company aound $1.50

Be that as it may, Premium Practice magazine estimated that merchants spent $618 million for trading stamps last year. With A. & P. and a lot of other companies in the game, this year's total may be $750 million.

Voters Decide For All

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Eight times, the Presidential Elections involved proposals which would be interpreted as involving what has come to be known as "welfare" legislation: four times for Roosevelt, once for Truman, twice for Eisenhower and once for Kennedy.

As a citizen of a representative republic, I must accept the results of an election as binding upon all persons. It is unfortunate that so many, without too much thought, are beginning to reject the consequences of an election as the same persons reject the authority of the Supreme Court.

In a representative republic, the citizen is bound by the decision of the electorate. In other words, the reason that democracies have only succeeded in villages is that standing around the forum and shouting, Aye and Nay, does not work. In a representative republic, the majority choose the personnel who are to govern, in our country, for a stated period.

If we assume that the Welfare State is altogether a result of the 1929 Depression, we are wrong. As far back as the Administration of Woodrow Wilson, welfare legislation was being passed. During World War I, the Hoover Food Administration was a welfare operation of the greatest magnitude. It is true that Franklin D. Roosevelt gave welfare a strong impetus. Mrs. Roosevelt was particularly interested in welfare legislation and she was a very powerful influence in those days.

The modern characteristics of a Welfare State developed during the Roosevelt Administration and continued through the Truman and Eisenhower Administrations unabated. This was the condition of our country when President Kennedy took over.

In 1932, those who opposed the Welfare State and recognized its potentialities spoke out. They were generally rejected. Instead, Roosevelt's popularity was so great that he was able to violate a long standing American tradition and was elected for a third and a fourth time.

What was the secret of Roosevelt's popularity: That is quite clear: He supported the concept of the Welfare State. He instituted various measures which make the federal government responsible for details of the lives of individuals. This became a pattern. It was socialistic more after the ideas of Ferdinand Lassalle than after the ideas of Karl Marx. It was socialistic in the sense that whereas in the past this was a nation in which the individual stood alone in his rights, the New Deal regarded society as more important than the individual. This view was upheld by Congress and the Supreme Court.

Now we are in the middle of 1962 and there have been three decades of development of the Welfare State. Those of us who have consistently rejected this concept must note that we had the opportunity during eight years of the Eisenhower Administration to cancel out objectionable features, to say nothing of the entire pattern. But the fact is that the Eisenhower Administration in not an iota lessened the force of the Welfare State.

Even though we were overproducing during the Eisenhower Administration, nothing was done to cut down subsidies for agriculture or to lessen various types of aid even where it was obviously unnecessary as the Estes Investigation is disclosing.

The purpose of calling attention to the Eisenhower Administration is only to establish the fact that support of the Welfare State, with all its faults, has been continuous. It is continuous because there is no effective opposition to it. For instance, many who oppose price supports for farmers, favor pensions and hospitalization for veterans. Many who object to the very word, welfare, accept aid for rural housing. Most are willing to take their share but are antagonistic to others getting anything while the getting is good.

Therefore in 1962, the minority who oppose the concept of the Welfare State find that more and more elements enter into the picture, as, for instance, the educators of this

Offers Handy Guide On Raising A Crook

CHESTERFIELD, England (AP)—The Archdeacon of Chesterfield today gave his Church of England parishioners a handy guide on "How to turn your child into a crook."

Drawing a bead on indulgent parents, the Venerable Talbot Dilworth-Harrison listed these 12 rules in his parish magazine:

1. Begin from infancy to give the child everything he wants. In this way he will grow up to believe that the world owes him a living.

2. When he picks up bad words, laugh at him. It will encourage him to pick up "cuter phrases" that will blow the top of your head off later.

3. Never give him any spiritual training. Wait until he is 21, and then let him decide for himself.

4. Avoid the use of the word wrong. It may develop a guilt complex. This will condition him to believe later when he is arrested for stealing a car that society is against him and he is being persecuted.

5. Pick up everything he leaves lying around—books, shoes and clothes. Do everything for him so he will be experienced in throwing the responsibility on to others.

6. Let him read any printed matter he can get his hands on. Be careful the silverware and drinking glasses are sterilized but let his mind feed on garbage.

7. Quarrel frequently in the presence of the children. Then they won't be shocked when the home is broken up.

8. Give the child all the spending money he wants. Never let him earn his own. Why should he have things as tough as you had them?

9. Satisfy his every craving for food, drink and comfort. See that every desire is gratified. Denial may lead to harmful frustration.

Take his part against the neighbors, teachers and policemen. They are all prejudiced against your child.

11. When he gets into real trouble, apologize for yourself by saying, "I never could do anything with him."

12. Prepare for a life of grief—"You will have it."

Restrictions On Goodman Begin

SOCHI, Soviet Union (AP)—Benny Goodman, whose clarinet pleased Nikita Khrushchev in Moscow, ran into restrictions in the Soviet premier's favorite holiday spot.

As Goodman and his band played their second concert before an enthusiastic audience in this Black Sea resort town Monday night, Soviet officials:

1. Ordered RCA Victor officials to stop recording the concert.

2. Told Terrence F. Catherman, of Dearborn, Mich., cultural officer of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, to stop translating Goodman's remarks for the audience. A Soviet translator was put on the job.

3. Cracked down on the band members' practice of distributing Benny Goodman buttons to Soviet admirers.

Goodman and his band have been receiving a warm response from audiences since they opened their six-week tour in Moscow last week. The band leader asked Catherman to interpret for him because the official Soviet interpreter was not translating any of his informal remarks. She limited herself to announcing the numbers being played.

country are requiring more federal aid in various forms. The Medicare program for protective hospitalization will, if it passes, inevitably be followed by a measure favoring payments to physicians and surgeons.

Neither the Republican Party nor any other political group has made itself felt in a national election on this subject. Until that opposition manifests itself in an election, it has no meaning and politicians will ignore it, because votes are what count in a representative republic. The challenge to the Welfare State must come from a Republican candidate for President. Who is he?

Ready To Select Jury For 'Influence Case'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jury selection begins Wednesday for the trial of six men and two firms on charges of influence peddling in North Carolina Highway Department sign purchasing.

Judge Raymond Mallard paved the way for the start of the trial Monday when he turned down defense motions to dismiss the charges.

Mallard, in a brief pre-trial session in Wake Superior Court, also ordered officials to summon 150 additional jurors.

Defense lawyers can challenge 48 prospective jurors without reason and the state can challenge 32.

The defendants are charged in a 12-count indictment with violating a 1913 law forbidding anyone from offering a gift to an employe to influence his conduct in the performance of his work.

Conviction allows a maximum penalty of two years in prison on each count.

The charges grew out of an investigation into Highway Department sign purchasing.

Charged in the indictment were Raleigh businessman Kidd Brewer; former highway engineer Robert A. Burch who had beenin charge of sign specifications and procurement; Burch's son, Robert M. Burch; George Masefield and Martin J. Hamilton, both of Newark, N.J.; Walter Schoenfeldt of Westfield, N.J., and the sign firms Pfaff & Kendall and Traffic & Street Sign Co., both of Newark.

Masefield and Hamilton are officials of the firms and Schoenfeldt is a former executive of Traffic & Street Sign Co.

Jaycees Bow In Extra Inning

NORTH STATE

Coca Cola won their second contest of the season yesterday as they defeated the Jaycees 4-3 after going into an extra inning.

With two outs in the first inning, Coca Cola rallied to score two runs on an error and two hits. Ralph Vincent reached first safely as he hit a hard grounder to second base which was bobbled. William Moye followed with a long single to score Vincent. Bob Smith connected on the next pitch to single to centerfield and score Moye providing Coca Cola with a 2-0 lead.

The Jaycees fought back in the third frame to collect one run on a walk and two hits. Dew Forbes rapped a single to centerfield but was thrown out as he attempted to reach second on the play. Ronnie Leggett, the next Jaycee batter, walked to bring Cleve Branch to the plate. Branch replied by hitting a hard single to deep rightfield scoring Leggett.

In the top of the fifth, the Jaycees rallied again to produce a run and tie the ballgame at 2-2. Forbes led the frame off as he walked to put the tieing run on first. With two outs, Cleve Branch doubled to send Forbes in to score and tie the game at 2-2.

The Jaycees worked desperately to win the ballgame as they put the pressure on Coca Cola in the top of the sixth. Randy Briley, Ken Hite, and Ben James led the frame off for the Jaycees as they all walked to load the bases. With two outs, Leslie Davis singled to bring Hite across the plate to score and give the Jaycees a one run lead.

Coca Cola was not to give up easily as they returned to bat in the bottom of the sixth to tally one run and tie the score a 3-3. Vincent led the inning off for the home team by slamming a long single against the leftfield fence. Moye followed with a walk to bring Smith to the plate. Smith hit an infield grounder which forced Vincent out at third and advanced Moye to second.

The next batter, Trent Hill, rapped a grounder to second base. However, as the second baseman attempted to force Moye out at third, he threw the ball wild and it went into the Jaycees dugout. The Little League Rules state that if a ball is thrown into a dugout, each baserunner shall advance one base. This rule allowed Moye to score and once again tie the contest.

The Jaycees failed to tally in the top of the seventh, but Coca Cola rallied to gain one run and win the hard fought contest.

John Hunt led the frame off for Coca Cola as he walked to put the winning run on first. Dick Clark followed with a ground ball which forced Hunt out at second. Clark advanced to second on a wild pitch and moved to third when Kevin Price grounded out. Vincent, once again the hero, rapped another long single against the rightfield fence which scored Clark and gave Coca Cola the game 4-3.

Moye, Coca Cola's starting pitcher, was not in the decision as he left the mound when the contest was in a tie. Moye pitched five innings and struck out eleven, walked five, and allowed three runs on five hits. Moye also scored two runs in his teams winning effort.

The winning pitcher was Smith who came in to pitch in the top of sixth inning. Smith walked two batters and gave up no runs on one ht.

Randy Briley, the Jaycees starting pitcher, struck out five, walked one, and gave up two runs on four hits. Cleve Branch was charged with the loss as he came in to pitch in the bottom of the sixth with the Jaycees in the lead. Branch struck out two, walked two, and allowed two no runs on one hit.

In today's games, Coca Cola will meet the Optimist in the first game of a double-header. The game is scheduled to begin at 3:00. Kiwanis will play Texaco in the second contest which will begin immediately following the first contest.

TAR HEEL

The Elks won their fourth game of the season yesterday as they defeated the Moose 8-1. The winning pitcher was Kenny Beaman while Jimmy Hatton was charged with the loss.

The Moose opened the scoring in the top of the first inning as they tallied one run on three walks and a stolen base. Carl Abee walked for the Moose to start their scoring threat. John Lautares and Russell Cayton followed with base on balls to load the bases. Abee then stole home to put the Moose in the lead 1-0.

In the bottom of the second, the Elks collected three runs on two hits to take control of the contest. Louis Gaylord led the frame off for the Elks as he walked to put the tying run on first. Richard Jackson followed with a double. Gaylord was thrown out as he attempted to score on the play. Alex Speight connected to send another double into centerfield and score Jackson. Speight and Tim Foley later came in to tally on a single by Bobby Lee.

The Moose were unable to score during the remainder of the contest as they were allowed only one hit. Russell Cayton connected for a single in the third frame but was unable to score as Elk pitcher Beaman retired the next two batters and the side.

The Elks returned in the fourth inning to score five runs on a walk, a hit batter, and three hits. John James, Gaylord, and Harrison Gaskins all singled to help provide the Elks with their winning margin.

Beaman, the winning pitcher, struck out seven, walked eight, and allowed one run on one hit. The Moose's pitching staff struck out four, walked six, and gave up eight runs on eight hits.

Today's contest will be between Exchange and Greenville Tobacco Company. The game will begin at 5:00 in Guy Smith Park.

Builders Win Teener Opening

The Teen-er League officially started last night as Home Builders and College View met in the first game. Home Builders emerged the victors by a score of 2-1.

In the top of the first inning, College View opened the scoring as they tallied one run on two walks and a fielders choice. Bostic led the frame off as he walked and was followed by Williams who also walked. Bostic stole third and came home on a ground ball by Mullins.

Home Builders rallied in the bottom of the third to collect two runs on a walk and a homerun. Charles Gaskins led the frame off as he walked to bring Jeff Jenkins to the plate. Jenkins connected to send the ball out of the ballpark and claim the first homerun of the season.

Neither team was able to score during the remainder of the ballgame as Home Builders went on to win 2-1.

Malcolm Beaman, the winning pitcher, struck out eleven, walked ten, and gave up one run on three hits.

Moye, the losing pitcher, struck out eight, walked four, and gave up two runs on five hits.

In tonight's game, Planters Bank will play State Bank at 7:30.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Durham widened its hold on first place in the Carolina League by sweeping a doubleheader from Greensboro Monday night. Second place Winston-Salem won its game but dropped two games from the lead.

Winston-Salem won behind the five hit pitching of righthander Dave Busby who walked only one man and was in trouble only in the first inning.

Cellar- dwelling Rocky Mount scored the winning run on a single by Larry Helms and Bobby Martin's two-out double. Rocky Mount had scored four runs in the ninth to tie the score.

Wilson pitcher Jimmy Roland held Raleigh to five hits and struck out 14. Wilson fell one run off the pace, tied it in the seventh.

Greenville Legion Team Edges Roanoke Rapids By 1-0 Margin

Greenville's American Legion baseball team won their second contest of the season last night as they defeated Roanoke Rapids by a score of 1-0.

Both teams had difficulty in scoring as the game turned out to be a pitcher's duel. Together both pitchers allowed only six hits.

Jimmy Rogers, the winning pitcher, struck out three, walked one, and gave up no runs on two hits. Rogers scattered Roanoke Rapids hits as he pitched Post 39 to their first shutout victory.

Buck Dickens, the losing pitcher, struck out five, walked six, and allowed one run on four hits.

Greenville threatened in the fifth frame as they loaded the bases but were unable to score. Garland Little led the frame off as he reached first safely on an error. Jimmy Rogers followed with a sacrifice bunt to move Little to second and bring Bobby Hobgood to the plate. Hobgood singled to leftfield to send Little into third. With two outs, Wayne Britton walked to load the bases. However, Bruce Biggs flied out to first to retire the side.

In the top of the eighth inning, Greenville rallied to score one run on a walk and two singles. Wayne Britton received a base on balls to bring Biggs to the plate. Biggs sacrificed Britton to second. Rommie Brock followed with a single to advance Britton to third base. With two outs, Charles Forbes singled to leftfield to score Britton and give Greenville a one run advantage.

Greenville's pitcher Rogers faced only seven men in the final two innings to give Greenville their second win against one loss for the year.

Tomorrow night, Greenville will again play Roanoke Rapids but the game will be played here. The game is scheduled to begin at 7:45 in Guy Smith Stadium.

Seminoles Beat Wake Forest In NCAA Play

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The Florida State Seminoles, who went on the warpath after losing their first game to Florida in the NCAA District 3 baseball playoffs, beat Wake Forest twice Monday for the championship.

The Seminoles, piqued at their 1-0 loss to favored Florida in the opening game of the double elimination tournament last Thursday, won their next four games and will carry the district colors into the NCAA finals in Omaha next week.

Florida State went into Monday's action the numerical underdog, needing two victories to Wake Forest's one to take the district title. The championship was Florida State's first since 1957 although they have played in the district playoffs six times in the last seven years.

In the first game Florida State batters had a field day, getting 17 hits from three Deacon pitchers for a 10-8 victory to throw the playoffs into a tie.

The second game was tied 2-2 at the end of nine innings. The Seminoles' broke the tie in the bottom of the 11th with a single run to win 3-2.

Wake Forest righthander Don Roth had given up only six hits when Al Becaccio singled to open Florida State's half of the 11th. With two outs and two on Seminole third baseman Al Mangin hit a single to left and Becaccio beat the throw home with the winning run.

The Deacons took a 1-0 lead in the first when Billy Scripture hit a homer with none on. They scored their other run in the eighth with another solo homer by catcher Pat Williams.

The Seminoles tied it in the eighth when Mike Augustine doubled, went to third on Bob Madison's fly and scored on Becaccio's grounder.

Asks Franchise In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Formal application for a franchise in the American Football League was made Monday by New Orleans businessman David Dixon.

Dixon said he mailed a $25,000 check as a good faith deposit to AFL offices in Dallas after telegraphing the franchise request to Commissioner Joe Foss.

Dixon is the only backer of the venture whose name has been disclosed.

He said he believed that only one city would be added to the AFL, which begins its third year this fall, despite a statement over the weekend from Harry Wismer of the league's New York Titans that New Orleans, Atlanta, Washington and Cincinnati would join.

Russian Discus-Thrower Sets 202 Foot Record

MOSCOW (AP)—Vladimir Trusenev, who has done most of his throwing in the shadow of the Soviet's top musclemen, today held the world discus record—a mighty 202 feet, 2¾ inches.

Until a month ago, Trusenev, a 31-year-old Leningrad veteran, never had reached the 190-foot mark. Kim Bukhantsev and Algis Baltusnikas were winning most of the Soviet titles.

Monday in a city meet in his home town, according to Tass, the official Soviet news agency, Trusenev got off his record-breaking heave, erasing Al Oerter's 23-day old pending record of 200-5½. The listed record is 199-2½, held by Jay Silvester of Trementon, Utah.

Even the Russians were surprised at Trusenev's effort. He could do no better than 15th at the 1960 Olympics.

At his home in Babylon, N.Y., Oerter, the 25-year-old, two-time Olympic gold medal winner, said he was surprised that Trusenev broke the record.

"I've heard of him, but I didn't think he'd by the guy to break it," said Oerter. "I can't wait to meet him. Gosh, you can't throw them far enough these days."

Oerter and Trusenev probably will meet during the United States-Soviet Union track meet at Stanford University on July 22-23.

It was at the Coliseum relays in Los Angeles that Oerter became the first discus thrower to break the magic 200-foot barrier.

The Soviets never really have been top discus throwers. The Soviets didn't get to the 190-mark until last year when Baltusnikas set a national record of 190-½.

Just a month ago, Bukhantsev broke Baltusnikas' mark with a heave of 195-1½ at Lesclidze. Trusenev was second in that meet with a 190-3 flip.

Rollicking Graduation As Bob Hope Is Given Degree

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope, in cap and gown and smiling as slyly as a gate-crasher, swished grandly into Georgetown University's commencement exercises and remarked:

"I feel as out of place as President Kennedy at a meeting of the American Medical Association."

Thus, on the tree-shaded greensward of Georgetown, rapid Robert Hope — whose education was "straight from high school to dancing school and vaudeville"— became a honorary doctor of humane letters.

It was one of the most rollicking graduation ceremonies in memory.

The principal speaker, the Rev. Gustave Weigel, said "a commencement is hardly a hushed gathering around a dying friend."

Hope proved it. When he received the Latin citation of his degree, he quipped: "I can't wait until I get home and have my son read it to me." Roman Catholic Hope said of the Catholic University: "My getting a degree from Georgetown is the end, but then you do specialize in miracles, don't you?"

He called out to his son, Anthony, who was among the 1,066 receiving degrees: "Slump down, you make me feel like Alan Ladd."

As he posed for photographs in his gown, the comedian cracked, "This'll be a shock to some of the educators in Cleveland." That is where he went to school.

There was a serious side to the ceremony. The president of Georgetown, The Very Rev. Edward B. Bunn, S.J., said the degree was awarded "for your salutary gift of laughter to an often-troubled world." The citation also called attention to his many trips overseas to entertain servicemen.

"The most profitable kind of education is that which makes a man happy in the knowledge that he is of some use to others," Hope told the graduates.

"Give a little bit of yourself and it will come back in carloads. This is one of those comeback days for me."

In the machine-gun patter of his television shows, Hope gave a quick rundown on the economic situation:

"The price of steel was so low I hear President Kennedy is even buying some. And AT&T—I put a dime in a telephone this morning and a voice said 'God bless you.'"

Like all commencement speakers Hope had a few words of advice for the graduates.

Said Hope: "My advice to young people going into the world: Don't go."

Britons Smoking Filters Because They're Cheaper

By ANTHONY WHITE

LONDON (AP) — Britons are smoking more filter cigarettes today than ever.

Some think filters are safer for health, but a major reason is that the filter is cheaper.

A quarter of the cigarettes smoked in Britain, today are filters. This represents a startling change in smoking habits. Seven years ago barely two packs in a hundred bore the filter sign.

Jack Hendy, president of the National Union of Retail Tobacconists, is convinced that price is the dominatino factor. A pack of 20 filters costs 54 cents. An equivalent no-tip standard size costs 63.

Each time tobacco taxes have surged upwards too.

In mid-1961 the filter sale in Britain was 17 per cent. Then the government raised the tobacco duty. Almost overnight filter sales climbed to more than 22 per cent. In 1959, after a tax increase, filter sales bounded from 12 to 16 per cent.

The reason for the price gap is that the tobacco tax is levied on weight. Filter cigarettes contain less tobacco, so they are cheaper.

Last March the Royal College of physicians issued a report cataloging all the past statistical evidence on the connection between smoking and lung cancer. They argued that there was a definite link.

Cigarette sales took a dive.

"Lots of people got scared," Hendy said. "I estimate cigarette sales went down by 10 per cent. But people are coming back to smoking again as the shock of the report is dulled by time."

The doctors said it was possible that efficient filters might cushion harmful effects.

"I estimate that filter sales, in London anyway, have put on 1 or 2 per cent since the doctor's report," Hendy said.

Said a tobacco company spokesman:

"Not so long ago you would frequently hear someone apologizing for offering someone a filter. You never hear it now."

Britain still has a way to go before the filter is as fashionable as it is in South Africa, where 8 out of 10 packs are filters, or The United States where more than half the cigarettes have spats, as Englishmen still call them.

Soviet Orders Additional Fish

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government followed up its sharp price increases on meat and butter Monday with an order to fishermen to catch more fish for the Soviet population.

The Soviet news agency Tass announced that the Soviet Council of Ministers and the Communist party Central Committee ordered fish catches increased from 3.6 to 5 million tons by 1965.

The order appeared designed to take up the slack in the Soviet population's diet which recent meat price increases are expected to create.

CHAPTER 14

Matt Culpepper, whose father was one of the Kentucky Derby officials, came over to Julie Pendleton with a glass of punch. Julie shook her head and Matt placed it on a table.

"I'm glad Britt Fabian was called away," he said gallantly, "because he's been monopolizing you, Julie. Just because he's going to marry you is no reason he has to have every dance."

He caught her in his arms and led her onto the floor. She was too worried to be flattered with his attention or to know if she was dancing well.

She sensed something was wrong and wondered if he should follow Britt. Without giving it further thought, she left Matt in the middle of the floor and made her way quickly to the porch.

Britt was there and so was Casey Jeffries. Also, two of Britt's stablemen and both looked as if they'd been roughed up.

Casey, too, bore the marks of a scuffle—a torn sleeve, dishevveled hair and a slight bruise on his face, which didn't mar the smile he had for her.

"Why, Casey!" she exclaimed. "I didn't know you were coming."

"Neither did anyone else," Britt said sternly. "It seems Mr. Jeffries came across the pastures and over the fence. He was caught prowling around the stables."

"I plead guilty," Casey said cheerfully. "I was caught, fair and square, though your men are a little rough, Mr. Fabian."

"They had orders to be, Jeffries. Now, would you like to explain?"

"It's quite simple. I wanted to come too your party and I had no invitation, so I crashed it."

"In a sneaky sort of way," Britt said.

"Well, yes, but I saw your men stop every car heading down the road to the farm, so I decided I wouldn't get very far unless I circumvented that road block. I'll leave peaceably. How are you, Julie? You look stunning."

"Casey, you shouldn't have done this. Just before the Derby when everyone's on edge is no time for a prank. A man doesn't sneak around a paddock—"

"I apologize. I can't do anything more."

"It's not for me to accept it. This is Britt's house."

Britt motioned for the two men to go back to the paddock. He touched Julie's chin, lifting her face up so he could look straight into it. "What's the verdict, darling? I leave it to you."

"I don't think Casey meant any harm. He just isn't used to our ways—"

"I thought of that," Britt said. He suddenly turned to Casey and thrust out his hand. "Welcome to Fabian Farms, Casey. You're a friend of Julie's and therefore I welcome you. Please stay and enjoy yourself."

"Thank you," Casey said, though Julie could see that he was puzzled at Britt's sudden change of attitude. They shook hands and then all three entered the house. Casey took Julie into his arms at once and swept her onto the dance floor.

"The gentleman told me to enjoy myself," he said with one of his impish grins, "and there's no other possible way I could. I told you before, you look stunning. I have to say it again, they shouldn't permit a girl as lovely as you to put on horsey clothing."

Julie had to smile, even if she was still angry with Casey. He was an expert dancer and she knew they were getting a great deal of attention.

She saw Lorne Fabian come downstairs to join the party. Britt spoke to him and they both nodded quick agreement to something.

"I don't blame you for liking this sort of life," Casey said. "You read about it and think it couldn't possibly exist, but it does. And it should. Any nation or regional division of a nation, should have tradition. It's enchanting, exciting, beautiful." His eyes studied her face intently. Then he nodded. "Yes, Julie," he said, "it's all those things because it's you."

"It's my life," she said. "I don't know any other and I wouldn't want to. Casey, why did you really sneak in tonight?"

"To see you."

"You could have phoned me, driven to the house—"

"Your father and I don't see eye to eye, sweet. Also, our last parting wasn't exactly cordial. Besides, there wouldn't be all this glamour and I wanted to see you at your most beautiful. The last time I saw you you'd fallen on your pretty face, remember?"

"You're a beast to remind me of it," she said. "I still wear some of the bruises."

"I'll tell you a small secret. When they made your father get out of the car at that road block, I was watching. That was when I made up my mind to circle around and come in the way I did. Tell me Julie, does everyone with a Derby entry act as mysterious and secret as the Fabians?"

"No .We don't like a lot of people coming around, but we never keep out close friends. This is just a quirk of Lorne Fabian's. He told me a short time ago that he absolutely had to win the Derby this year and he was taking no chances."

"A lot of people snooping around would make his horse nervous? Is that the reason?"

"Possibly, but mostly it's because Lorne simply doesn't want anybody to see his horse. At least, not close up."

"I know he ran the qualifying heats practically in private."

"Yes. I suppose he had a lot of money riding on Lysander and he doesn't want the odds to change. Lysander may be such an outstanding horse his very appearance would bring the odds way down. We racing people always have a substantial reason, Casey. I'm sure Lorne Fabian has, too."

"No doubt. Anyway, it was nice of his son to let me stay."

Lorne Fabian had mounted the small platform on which the seven-piece orchestra played and he waved his arms and asked for silence.

"My friends," he said, "this is an especially rare evening for me. That all of you are here is extremely important to me. My horse is going to win the Derby, which is also important to me. But an event far more vital than that concerns me tonight.

"Julie Pendleton and my son Britt have asked me to announce that they will be married as soon after the race as possible, with all due respect to the law and the preparations every Kentucky girl likes to make. I know all of you are as happy to hear this announcement as I am to make it."

Just before everyone closed in on Julie to offer best wishes, Casey touched her ear with his lips. His voice was a whisper, but it contained more bitterness than she knew he was capable of.

"Now I know why Britt wanted me to stay. Good-by, Julie. It's time to go now."

Offer Hypnosis Prior To Exams

CALGARY, Alta. (AP) — The Calgary Hypnosis Society has invited high school seniors to a hypnosis session it said should help them in their final exams.

"If the kids have learned the work, then that information is already in their subconscious," said Bill Brooks, a past president of the society. "We merely offer to relax them enough so they will be able to remember it when they are writing their exams."

School Supt. Robert Warren said he'd never heard of such a thing.

"If a parent asked my advice," he said, "I would definitely discourage it."

A long stretch of superhighway can almost hypnotize you. Shell's driving experts suggest ways to resist "highway hypnosis" (see #1 below).

Shell offers 12 tips to help you avoid getting drowsy on your next long trip

Today's freeways, thruways, and turnpikes can take a lot of the strain out of long trips. But sometimes, driving can be so effortless that you may not realize you're getting drowsy.

Shell test crews suggest 12 ways to help ward off driving fatigue—and have more fun, too.

1. Don't let the highway hypnotize you. If you let your eyes "settle" on the center line of the road, you're an A-1 candidate for "highway hypnosis." And this can be dangerous. Move your eyes frequently. Look into your rearview mirror occasionally. Vary your speed from time to time.

2. Take an "exercise break" several times a day. Pull into a rest or service area. Get out and stretch. Take a few deep breaths. Loosen up. It's remarkable what a minute or two of mild exercise can do for you.

AN INVITATION: Stop at any Shell station when you want to stretch your legs. You're always welcome—whether you fill up or not.

3. Try the "front seat shift" every time you stop for gasoline. Move the front seat forward or backward an inch or two. This can help ease the strain.

4. Loosen your shoelaces. And wear comfortable shoes. Many drivers choose moccasins or "loafers" when they're going a long distance. Not a bad idea.

5. Eat lightly. Go easy on the "heavy foods." Pick foods that are easy to digest. Fruits, juices, salads.

6. A 10-minute rest can work wonders. If you do get drowsy, don't fight it. Turn in at the next service or rest area and relax.

7. Call it a day if a short rest doesn't perk you up. A few more miles of steady driving may be too much.

NOTE: Shell's free Touring Service can help you plan your next trip. Ask your Shell dealer about a personalized Shell touring kit.

8. Don't set any heroic objectives—such as 600 miles by nightfall. And if you have passengers who drive, share the driving.

9. Use your sun glasses. Prolonged squinting into the sun can be tiring. You may not realize how much your eyes are resisting the sun until you slip on a pair of dark-colored glasses.

10. Keep the window ajar (even in cold weather). A steady stream of fresh air can help you avoid drowsiness.

It will also help eliminate the possibility of noxious fumes accumulating in the car.

11. Set the alarm—and start early. Start out before 8 a.m. if you can. This will help you get in a full day's driving before nightfall. Four o'clock in the afternoon is a good time to look for lodgings. It's usually easier to find good accommodations then.

To save time in the morning, when you're anxious to get going, fill up with gasoline on the preceding night.

NOTE: One of the 9 ingredients in today's Super Shell gasoline is especially helpful on long trips. It's a mileage booster called Platformate.

12. Talk with your passengers. A lively conversation will help you stay alert. If you're traveling alone, play the radio. Keep the volume fairly loud.

Safety Citation For N. Carolina

CHICAGO (AP)— North Carolina and five of its cities were cited today by the National Safety Council for outstanding accomplishments in traffic safety as reported in the Annual Traffic Inventory for 1961.

They were among 238 cities and towns, 30 states and Puerto Rico which received citations.

Charlotte was awarded three Certificates of Achievement. These were for traffic engineering—administration, control and planning for the safe and efficient movement of traffic; traffic safety education in the schools; and a program of public traffic safety education.

Burlington received a Certificate of Achievement for maintenance of accident records, which are necessary for any balanced program of accident prevention.

High Point and Shelby each received a certificate for maintaining a high level of performance in traffic engineering.

Laurinburg was awarded a certificate in special recognition for its perfect record in 1961 of no traffic fatalities and its progressive accident prevention program.

North Carolina received two certificates of Achievement. One was for maintenance of accident records and the other for school traffic safety education.

A total of 49 states, 1,224 U.S. cities and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico reported to the Council in the 1961 inventory.

Wausau, Wis., received the only award of honor, highest award of the program, made for 1961.

Vietnamese Kill 32 Guerrillas

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—President Ngo Dinh Diem's government today reported its forces killed 32 Communist guerrillas and captured 24 in the Plain of Reeds without losing a man.

The operation 90 miles southwest of Saigon was supported by troop-carrying U.S. helicopters. The government said a Viet Cong battalion was in the area trying to recruit reinforcements.

Cadillac

How to pay for a Cadillac—and not get one!

There are several ways that a man can pay the price of a new Cadillac car—and find himself in possession of an automobile of far less stature.

Because there are many motorists currently considering the purchase of their next car, we would like to enumerate these ways of going astray.

1. Assume that the purchase price of a new Cadillac car is higher than it actually is. (There are eleven models of other makes that this year cost more than the lowest-priced Cadillac model.)

2. Fail to appreciate that the basic price of a new Cadillac includes important things that are extra on many other cars. (Including automatic transmission, power steering and power braking.)

3. Neglect to find out from a Cadillac dealer what your present car is worth in trade. (He is especially anxious this spring to welcome new owners.)

And if you take one of these detours, think of all the unique pleasures you could be missing.

There is Cadillac's styling—so majestic that it attracts attention wherever it goes.

There is Cadillac's comfort—so wonderful that every journey becomes a brief vacation.

And there is Cadillac's performance—so great that it is without rival on the world's highways.

So we suggest that you play it safe—and get all the facts from your dealer soon.

You might be closer to a Cadillac than you think.

NEW YORK (AP)—In a dramatic turnabout, the stock market erased an initial sharp loss today and moved higher early this afternoon in heavy trading.

Key stocks converted some steep losses into substantial gains as the list turned from a slump to an advance.

With the ticker tape running late, the noon averages did not reflect the upturn, as prices were out of date.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .90 at 218.30 with industrials off .90, rails off .40 and utilities off .80.

It was a rough duplication in miniature of last Tuesday's historic session when the market at first plummeted and then soared in hectic trading, scoring the biggest one-day advance since 1929.

Gains of fractions to 2 or more points were shown by a wide range of key stocks.

AT&T was down more than 2 points at the start in heavy selling, wiped out the loss and showed a gain of more than 2.

IBM, a 5-point loser when it opened, canceled the loss and showed a net gain of about 14.

Once again, brokers said, it was chiefly a matter of prices reaching a level low enough to attract a new wave of buying from various sources—"bargain hunters," being the term usually applied.

As selling seemed to exhaust itself and buying increased, the ticker tape ran as much as 24 minutes behind transactions on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

Du Pont gyrated from an official loss of about 3 to a gain of the same amount.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 2.78 at 596.46.

All Big Three motors were up fractionally while American Motors and Studebaker-Packard were about unchanged.

Prices declined in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were mixed in light trading.

Sees Conflict In Two Viewpoints

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, says young southerners are faced with trying "to rationalize the Sermon on the Mount with the last press conference of political candidates at some of the South's state capitals."

McGill made the comment in the commencement address Monday night at the University of North Carolina.

A suddent thunderstorm struck in the midst of the exercise at Kenan Stadium, the university's football field. However, the ceremony continued without interruption.

McGill told the 2,200 graduates young southerners are in the main churchgoers. They "understand that what the minister and church school teacher say on Sunday often runs contrary to what some of his region's political leaders say on Monday."

McGill predicted the 1962 graduating classes would produce improved political leadership. "I like to think that the day of the demagogue is dying in the dawn of better educated, informed and more concerned people," he said.

Joining McGill in the commencement program were Gov. Sanford, Consolidated University President William C. Friday and University Chancellor William B. Aycock.

More Killings In Algeria Seen

ALGIERS (AP) — The Secret Army Organization ordered a new wave of terror today but only two killings were reported, French officials interpreted this as a further sign of deep rifts and indecision.

A Moslem was shot down not far from the center of the city and the body of another Moslem was found in the Bouzahreah suburb but calm reigned in most parts of Algiers.

During the night, a police station and two buildings owned by Moslems were set afire. This was still far short of recent terror activity.

The secret army warned Monday night in a pirate radio broadcast that it was ending the five-day truce in terrorism but that it hoped for further contacts with the Moslem nationalists.

French officials continued to hope for a "solution of reason and good sense." They believed the secret army was torn by indecision and deep ideological and leadership troubles. But no officials appeared to know exactly what was going on.

In contrast, fear began to sweep Algeria's European community anew. Most Europeans began to lose hope for a reasonable settlement that would safeguard their future in a Moslem-run Algeria.

Early this morning, crowds of Europeans besieged banks to withdraw their savings. Police stations and administrative buildings were crowded by men and women filling out repatriation documents and demanding passports. Long lines waited in front of shipping company offices.

time and had built up close relations with the French resident general, General Nogues. I knew him as well as any American gets to know a Frenchman.

"Despite that fact, the intimacy of our relations, the coordination of our military and diplomatic efforts in North Africa was so ineffectually organized that I was never consulted, although I was the principal American diplomatic representative in Morocco, as to how best approach the principal French authority, the General Nogues, in connection with our landings in 1942.

"As a result of these landings, there were 3,000 American and French casualties," said Childs. "General Nogues, as he informed me in recent years, told me if I had been authorized to approach him, there might not have been a shot fired."

Childs pointed out that he felt that it was a failure on the part of our military and civilian authorities in Washington, to take advantage of their trained personnel abroad.

Most Significant Thing

"Perhaps the most significant thing that I have done while serving in the foreign service, "Childs reflected," was being instrumental in negotiating the Dhahran Air Base Treaty in 1946. It was at that time the most important Air Base in the Middle East.

"While working abroad as a consul, I was concerned with local affairs, but with my appointment as Ambassador, I immediately became concerned with all the relations between my country and the government where I was serving.

"Meeting and negotiating with foreign powers gave me the opportunity to meet many foreign leaders. I was most impressed by the old king of Saudi Arabia, Abdul Aziz Ibn Saud, who was a great personality who united the warring tribes of Arabia into one nation.

"Another foreign leader whom I also respect a great deal," said Childs, "is the Emperor of Ethiopia, Hailie Selassie, who also united rival tribes of his country and brought them into one nation."

The former Ambassador has served under five presidents during his term in the foreign service. They are Harding, Coolidge, Hoover, F. D. Roosevelt, and Harry Truman.

"Of these five presidents," said Childs, "I admired Harry Truman above all. Of all Presidents, I admire and respect Woodrow Wilson above any other."

Besides being a diplomat Childs is also an author. He first wrote anonymously a geneology of the name Rives, in 1925.

In the 1930's he wrote what he calls a rather "unothodox" novel called "Before the Curtain Falls" which was a story of a dissillusioned youth, written at the height of the depression.

Has Written Books

Three years later he wrote "The Pagent of Persia" under the name of Henry Filmer. Also during the 1930's he wrote "The Escape To Cairo".

While in service during World War II, Childs wrote, using his real name, "Restif de la Brentonne" in the French language This book was an annotated bibliography of one of the most remarkable writers of the 18th century.

After he had retired in 1953, Childs wrote, again using his name, an annotated bibliography of Jack Casanoviana. Translations were made from these and enlarged upon in Italian and German.

"One book which I wrote titled the "History and Principles of German Cyphers" was published by the military intelligence in a limited edition. I have never seen the publcation," said the author, Childs.

"It seems a security conscious official discovered it and promptly ordered all copies to be recalled. I found it rather amusing that the government asked it published, then ordered it to be recalled."

Childs, 69, was married to Georgina de Brylkine in 1922 when he was working with the Hoover Relief Mission. His wife is a native of Lenningrad, Russia and was working in the American Legion Administration in Lenningrad when they met.

Childs attended school at Randolph Macon College with Marvin Blount of Greenville. There were many years that went by and the two school mates had lost touch. But last year in France, Blount looked up the former ambassador and invited him to visit him in Greenville.

When Childs came down last week to dedicate the Walter Heines Page Library at Randolph Macon College, Blount met him and his wife in Lynchburg, Va. and drove them down for a brief stay in Greenville.

Former Ambassador and Mrs. J. Rieves Childs left today for Lynchburg, Va. After a short stay there they plan to return to Nice, France where the Childs have made their permanent home.

Biggest Day

Avid reading fans yesterday broke all circulation records at Sheppard Memorial Library and checked out almost 1,000 books from the main desk.

Miss Elizabeth Copeland, librarian, reported it was "the biggest day in the history of the library." Children checked out 611 books and adults took about 388 books—totaling 999.

The librarian noted the record would have reached 1,000 but the library clientele kept her so busy she didn't have time to check out books for herself.

Varied Charges For Local Driver

Ray Jones, 28, of 611 Norris St., was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, having no operators license and failure to report an accident following a series of events last night.

Police stopped a car allegedly driven by Jones at the intersection of Grand and Dickinson Aves. about 11 p.m. Officers noted that the front right hand side of the vehicle he was operating was damaged, and at 11:05 p.m. they received a report that a car had struck a fire hydrant at the intersection of Halifax St. and Boyd Ave., some seven blocks away.

Further investigation showed red paint on the front of the stopped vehicle and glass was found at the accident scene matching broken glass from the vehicle's head light.

Officers then charged Jones with failing to report the collision.

In addition to Jones, Edward Harrington, 41, of Route 3, Greenville, the owner of the auto and a passenger in the vehicle, was arrested on charges of being drunk.

Damage to the vehicle was set at $150. No estimate of damage to the fire hydrant was given.

Hunting Suspect In Burglary Try

Greenville Polce are searching for a 20-year-old Negro today, identified as the person who entered an East Fifth St. home while the occupants were asleep and attempting to take a handbag from the dwelling.

Investigators said a complaint was received about 6:08 a.m. from Mrs. Ed Batchelor of 1407 East Fifth St., about the burglar.

She was quoted as saying when she awoke, she saw the Negro in her bedroom. When he realized she was awake, he ran from the home, dropping her handbag as he ran.

Police officials reported that Mrs. Batchelor has identified a picture of the suspect and a search is being conducted.

Some Consolation In Nuclear Shot's Failure

HONOLULU (AP)—Scientists at Johnston Island proved at least one thing when they deliberately destroyed a Thor missile and its nuclear warhead high above the Pacific:

A warhead can be blown apart at high altitude without causing a nuclear explosion.

Reports reaching Honolulu said Atomic Energy Commission workers at Johnston gained some consolation in the knowledge the rocket and its nuclear payload didn't get completely away from them.

The Thor, carrying the warhead aloft early Monday for the first high altitude nuclear detonation of the current Pacific series, was destroyed by a safety officer when the missile's tracking system developed a malfunction. Fragments of the Thor and the nuclear device fell into 720 feet of water "well within the established testing area."

The shot will be rescheduled as soon as possible, Joint Task Force 8 headquarters said Monday night. A spokesman indicated another firing date would be announced later today.

The AEC and the Defense Department said there was no possibility of a nuclear explosion resulting from the warhead's fragments. Statements by both agencies said, "it is not considered that they (the fragments) will cause hazardous levels of radioactivity in ocean water, or constitute a hazard to human life."

Left unanswered in the statements was the possibility that small fragments of the warhead might have remained aloft in the troposphere—up to 55,000 feet—or in or above the stratosphere. The heaviest pieces fell into the ocean almost immediately.

Scientists did not rule out the possibility of some fragments circulating miles above the earth. But they insisted there was no hazard to humans.

Fissionable material in the stratosphere might take between one and five years to fall to earth. It would circle the earth just like fallout from a nuclear bomb blast.

Safeguards have been built into nuclear devices to prevent accidental or unscheduled firings. A task force spokesman said the full power of a warhead could be detonated only on specific signal.

Nuclear weapons contain varying amounts of conventional high explosives to unite nuclear components in the "critical mass" of nuclear particles that causes the explosive chain reaction.

A small nuclear energy release might result from a misfire but the AEC asserted the effect would be negligible.

The test was to be the first of three or four to gauge the effects of nuclear explosions on the earth's magnetic field and the Van Allen radiation belts.

With the failure, the schedule for subsequent tests was disrupted. The blasts are planned at 10-day intervals and postponements or trouble automatically pushed back later detonations.

Safety Council Meets Thursday

Installation of officers and a program on water safety will highlight Thursday's meeting of the Pitt County Safety Council in Greenville.

Dr. Ray Martinez, East Carolina College swimming coach and operator of a summer swimming school will present a program centered around water safety, including safety in boats, ponds, pools and beaches.

Officers of the Council for the coming year will be installed. Included on the slate are Leonard P. Bloxam of Greenville, Chairman, Ivan Bissette of Grifton, Vice Chairman; and Polly Dail of Greenville, Secretary-treasurer.

Bloxan succeed Luther D. Moore as head of the county-wide organization.

The meeting will be held at Respess Brothers on North Greene St. at 12:30 p.m. All persons interested in safety are invited to attend.
