Soviets Step Up Their Spying On Nuclear Tests

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Soviet Union has sent a fourth ship bristling with scientific instruments to spy on U.S. nuclear tests in the Pacific. This addition to the Russian snooper patrol was disclosed today as the United States prepared for a second try at firing a nuclear device at a high altitude over Johnston Island. Informed sources indicated the shot—biggest of the U.S. test series—is likely late this week. The Federal Aviation Agency said Monday the shot more than 500 miles over the Johnson Island test area is expected to blot out instantly all high frequency radio communications in the Pacific. Some of the disruption will last 32 hours or longer, the FAA said. The first high-altitude test shot ended disastrously June 4 when a Thor missile carrying the warhead aloft was purposely destroyed after the rocket tracking system developed trouble. The presence of three Soviet instrument ships within 10 to 15 miles of the Pacific test area was announced by the Defense Department 18 days ago. It said they were obviously on a large-scale military intelligence collection mission. It appeared the Soviet research ships may have collected data from Sunday's plane-dropped nuclear device which exploded over Christmas Island and released the equivalent of from one to several million tons of TNT. This was the 17th—and one of the biggest—announced shots in the current U.S. test series. The new Soviet ship was identified as the A. I. Voyevkov, a sister ship of the Shokalskiy, the largest of the three research vessels which took up stations during May. This means the Voyevkov displaces about 3,600 tons and is equipped with extensive scientific instrumentation. Although the Pentagon gave no details, it was obvious the Navy has been keeping a watchful eye on the Soviet snooper fleet. Because the Russians are in international waters, there is nothing this country can do to shoo them away. Since the Pentagon knows the name of the fourth vessel, it was apparent that American patrol planes must have flown rather close to it. Normally, in an operation of this sort, the Navy assigns at least one ship to shadow Soviet craft. Sometimes it is a destroyer, sometimes a submarine. No effort is made to hide from the Russians, officials said. Among other things, the Voyevkov is understood to be fitted with a pad for launching meteorological rockets to study the effects of nuclear explosions on the upper atmosphere. The Defense Department has said radio-chemical analysis by the Shokalskiy's 16 laboratories could provide information on bomb design, yield, and similar data "which have significant military implications." Indications are the Soviet fleet will have another shot to monitor before the big atmospheric blast. Joint Task Force 3 on Monday ordered the danger area around Christmas Island closed to pilots and navigators.

Three Prisoners Escape Alcatraz

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Three bank robber convicts broke out of their Alcatraz cells during the night. Acting Warden Arthur M. Dollison said today they are believed to have escaped from the rock island prison in San Francisco Bay on a driftwood raft. None of the 20 convicts previously attempting escape from "The Rock" succeeded since the island became a federal prison in 1934. Two vanished in an escape effort in 1937 and were presumed to have drowned. Alcatraz lies two and a half miles inside the Golden Gate strait, the chill tidal currents of the bay. Dollison reported evidence indicated the three shoved off on driftwood or an improvised raft from the north shore of Alcatraz. But it remained possible that the men still were hiding on "The Rock." A thorough search was under way. He said they had cut away a portion of the back of their cells with a sharpened spoon. They gained access to a utility pipe tunnel through which they climbed to the roof of the cell block. They removed bars protecting a skylight. From the roof they dropped down a pipe to the ground. Then they made their way to the rear of the island to the water's edge. Dollison said.

Dollison identified the three as John W. Anglin, 32, and Clarence Anglin, 28, brothers from Montgomery, Ala., and Frank A. Morris, 35, of New Orleans, La. Dollison said San Francisco police, the FBI, and the Coast Guard were carrying out a sweeping search of the bay for the missing men. He said it was presumed the men would have used their raft or driftwood to try to reach Angel Island or the mainland. Angel Island lies to the north of Alcatraz. Prison officers said the Anglin brothers were transferred to Alcatraz after an escape from Leavenworth federal prison in Kansas. The Alcatraz escape was discovered by prison guards making a regular 6 a.m. cell check. The three had arranged their beds to look occupied. Prison officials said the three had cut their way through the wall of the utility pipe tunnel running between the two back to back rows of cells in cell block A. The cell blocks all are enclosed under a single roof behind the bleak walls of Alcatraz. The nearest land to Alcatraz is the Marina Green of San Francisco's northern edge, 1 1/4 miles south of the rock. Angel Island is 1 1/2 miles to the north of Alcatraz. The tides sweeping in and out of the Golden Gate, 2 1/2 miles to the west, surge with strong force around the rock island.

Estes Wanted To Testify In Murder Probe

FRANKLIN, Tex. (AP)—Grand jurors probing the fatal shooting a year ago of Henry H. Marshall want West Texas financier Billie Sol Estes to answer questions Wednesday. Sheriff A. B. Nail of Pecos, Tex., said he served Billie Sol Estes with a subpoena to appear before the Robertson County grand jury. The Robertson County grand jury reopened the Marshall case three weeks ago. Marshall's body, pierced by five bullets, was found on his ranch near here June 3, 1961. The inquest verdict was suicide. A bolt action rifle was found near the body. Marshall, 52, was state chief of production adjustments for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. At the time of his death he had been looking into cotton acreage allotments held by Estes. Estes since has been indicted on fraud and theft charges. The Agriculture Department, holding he obtained cotton allotments illegally, recently levied a $554,172 penalty against him. Judge John M. Barron, who called the grand jury investigation, has said Marshall was trying to stop manipulation of acreage allotments by Estes. But Will Wilson, state attorney general, says an Agriculture Department report on Estes' dealings indicates Marshall helped Estes on agreements for leasing land to which cotton allotments had been transferred. A pathologist who performed an autopsy on Marshall's exhumed body, Dr. J. A. Hachmczyk, has expressed the opinion that Marshall probably was murdered.

Bulletin

A total budget of $1,017,928.57 and a tax rate of $1.62 per $100 evaluation was approved by the City Council today.

Mayor Charles M. King announced the figures and the approval of the tentative budget after the called meeting was concluded.

He said the budget provides for general fund expenditures of $939,329.82 and debt service expenditures of $78,598.75.

The tax rate represents a 24 cents increase since last year's rate was $1.38.

Mayor King said only himself and two councilmen were present for the meeting. Dr. Ralph Brimley and Dr. M. W. Aldridge are both out of town. Councilmen attending were James Lee and Ford McGowan.

The mayor said the meeting was set for 12:30 and the tentative budget was approved around 1:30.

In the budget $1.44 of the tax will go for the general fund and 18 cents will go for debt service.

Negro Students In Summer Session

Negro students have been admitted to East Carolina College for the first session of summer school, it was learned today. Dr. John Horne, college registrar, said this morning that several Negro students have been admitted on a provisional basis. Some, he said, will be taking work for the full six-weeks summer school session while others are entering in two-week workshops. This latter group are taking work on the campus for the second summer. They attended such workshops last summer. Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, college president, said, "East Carolina College for the second year has admitted qualified Negro students. The students admitted thus far have been pursuing special instruction for certificate renewal. "Historically East Carolina's charter established the college for white students. This charter was superceded by the 1957 legislature at which time this restriction was removed and the Board of Higher Education was created. The Board of Trustees of the college voted in 1961 to admit all qualified students regardless of race or religion. We have been pursuing this policy since that time." Dr. Horne said seven or eight Negroes had made application for summer work. He said he knew more than this number were on hand for yesterday's registration. Most of the Negro students are registering for graduate work, he said. They will be on a provisional basis until they take the graduate examination this afternoon to determine if they qualify. The registrar said he could not determine the names of the Negro students since their registration was handled the same as all other students. Horne and other college officials said all are day students to their knowledge. Day students furnish their own rooms in town or commute and do not require dormitory space. College dean, Dr. Robert L. Holt, said work to be taken by the students includes library science, business, science and reading workshops. Admission of Negro students to East Carolina follows by several years the admission of Negroes to the University of North Carolina and N. C. State College. Recently Duke University and Wake Forest College boards of trustees have approved a policy of admitting students without regard to race, creed or color. Only yesterday an education study group which announced the locations of 14 new community colleges, said admission would be without regard to race or creed.

Bladen Officials Will Be Heard On Proposal

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Terry Sanford said today he has promised Bladen County officials their say regarding establishment of an Air Force practice bombing range at Bladen Lake State Forest. But he said the state has an obligation to help the Air Force acquire a range. "I am sure you agree that we cannot turn out backs on the national defense needs and I am convinced that a practice range in North Carolina is essential," he said in a telegram Sunday to county leaders. "We have an obligation to help the Air Force in its training program. Sanford added, "The Air Force makes out a good case that its activities will not endanger people, birds, animals or forests. "We are carefully examining all factors and will make no final contract until all questions have been answered satisfactorily." In Washington, Rep. Alton A. Lennon, whose 7th District include Bladen County, said he hoped the state would give citizens a chance to be heard before it implements the offer of Bladen Lake Forest. In his wire, Sanford said the request is for a practice range where the bombs would have an explosive charge about equal to a shotgun shell. Sanford told the officials, "We will be glad to answer any additional questions or assist in obtaining answers from the Air Force and I am grateful for your interest." Lennon said Monday, "I was shocked to read a statement by State Sen. Chatham Clark of Bladen County that to his knowledge no one in the area had been contacted by the governor about this offer." Lennon said he had received protests from citizens in Bladen and Cumberland counties. He said he advised them to document objections and to present them to the governor and the State Board of Conservation and Development. The Air Force says it is hard pressed for a bombing range for its big bombers at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base at Goldsboro.

Panama's Chief Executive Visits

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roberto Chiari of Panama was welcomed to Washington by President Kennedy today for a two-day visit. The Panamanian chief executive landed at National Airport at 11:00 a.m. in a U.S. Air Force plane which brought him here from Williamsburg, Va., where he spent Monday night. Kennedy greeted Chiari warmly as the Panamanian walked down the ramp. Then the two stood together on a red-carpeted platform while full military honors were rendered. On the schedule for today were a White House luncheon and a conference with Kennedy this afternoon at which the Panama Canal is sure to be a major subject. In greetings at the airport Kennedy pledged to discuss with Chiari in "the closest harmony and understanding" affairs of mutual interest to maintain the friendly relationship between the two nations. Chiari, responding, said, "I am glad to have this opportunity to come here and to talk frankly with you. I believe this frankness is the only way two friendly nations should adopt in attempts to solve their problems." Secretary of State Dean Rusk and other State Department officials; the president of the Council of the Organization of American States, Colombia's OAS Ambassador Zuleta Angel, and other Latin American dignitaries were at the airport for the ceremony.

Won't Give Up His Fight With Gov't

ELDRIDGE, N.D. (AP)—Fay Heasley is a husky, balding man who might often be found these days gazing fondly at the lush land just across the road from where he lives near Eldridge. The 59-year-old Heasley is possibly the most stubborn man who ever collided with the federal government. The land Heasley regards with longing once belonged to him—or to his family, if you accept his version. Anyway, it was part of 4,000 acres the government confiscated and sold for unpaid income taxes. Heasley is determined to get it back, even if he has to fight through every court in the country — an aim on which he has made a pretty fair start. Over the last 12 years this red-faced farmer has been imprisoned, fined, evicted, restrained, ordered and denied by every judicial authority from the U.S. Supreme Court on down. And still he won't give up trying to get back his land. Heasley's troubles began in 1950, when internal revenue service agents began poking around in his tax records. He was convicted in 1954 of evading taxes totaling $54,902 for 1946-48 and was sentenced to three years in prison. "I never owed those taxes in the first place," he says with a sad smile. "They made an example of me to scare the other farmers." Heasley and his wife, Selma, moved into a house trailer and quonset hut on a farm operated by their son, Paul, about four miles from what they still call "the home place." From there, the family unleashed a barrage of court actions that hasn't ended yet.

Driver Cleared In Traffic Death

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP)—A teenage driver was absolved here Monday in the traffic death of a 6-year-old child on June 2. Judge Jack White found no probable cause for Thomas Edward Bowen, 19, of Clover, S.C. He left in tears after hearing the judge's decision. Testimony indicated that Bowen was driving on a street when Donna Renna Fite pulled away from her baby sitter and ran into the side of Bowen's car.

Amateur Rocket Fans On Notice

WASHINGTON (AP)—As a safety move, the Federal Aviation Agency wants advance notice when amateur rocketeers plan to hurl their spacecraft skyward. It has proposed a regulation which would require not only 24 to 48 hours advance notice of such firings but also would ban night launchings and rocket firings within five miles of an airport. The proposed regulation, however, won't apply to toy and model rockets weighing less than a pound and having less than five ounces of propellant.

Eleven Tunnel To West Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—Eleven East Germans, including three children and a 4-month-old baby, escaped through a tunnel to West Berlin Sunday, usually reliable informants said today. The informants said they received a first-hand account of the flight from one of the participants. They said all had relatives in West Berlin and had taken refuge with them. A tight curtain of secrecy was drawn around the location and other details of the tunnel flight.

Beck Likely To Go To Prison

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Although the government is ready to pass up a retrial of charges that Dave Beck, former Teamsters Union president, evaded $240,000 in personal income taxes, he may go to prison for falsifying union tax returns. Charles S. Burdell, Beck's attorney, conceded that Monday after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review Beck's conviction on two counts of filing false returns for 1950 and 1952. Beck, who is 67, faces five years in federal prison and a $20,000 fine in the tax case. In addition, last month the high court upheld Beck's conviction on state charges of embezzling $1,900 from sale of a Cadillac owned by the union. The sentence was up to 1 1/2 years in the state prison. Beck couldn't be reached for comment, but his attorney said Beck very probably may have to go to prison shortly. "I just don't know what recourse there can be," Burdell said. He said Beck would be free until records reach U.S. District Court in Tacoma, Wash. Burdell said the returns filed for the union weren't seen nor signed by Beck and were information returns which don't require payment of taxes. The government said Beck had control and direction over the returns. The decision which the Supreme Court refused to review was the action of the U.S. Court of Appeals which upheld the conviction on the tax return counts.

Senior Status Is Proposed For 2-Year Colleges

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Senior status for present two-year community colleges at Charlotte and Wilmington has been proposed by study committees. The recommendations drafted here Monday must be approved by the Governor's Commission on Education Beyond the High School, and enacted by the 1963 legislature, before becoming effective. Asheville-Biltmore Community College would be eligible for expansion to a four-year institution when its enrollment reached 700.

Italy's Christian Democrats Set Back In Municipal Voting

ROME (AP)—Italy's ruling Christian Democratic party lost ground today in returns from municipal elections that provided the first major vote test of Premier Amintore Fanfani's "turn to the left." Fanfani had appealed for victory as an endorsement of his center-left national government formed three months ago. But final results from the 34 largest cities and towns in the election—representing 2,467,099 of the total 3 million votes cast—gave the four allied parties 49.3 per cent of the vote. The fascists on the extreme right made only slight gains despite their most intensive political

Compromise Bid Over 'Medicare'

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy's lieutenants and his legislative supporters are off on a new and crucial quest—a compromise version of his health care plan which the House Ways and Means Committee might accept. As the committee renewed consideration of the proposal the White House showed signs Monday of giving ground. Secretary of Welfare Abraham Ribicoff's proposals to the panel in a closed session apparently signaled administration acceptance of two propositions: 1. Unless it is substantially changed, the proposal has no chance of obtaining approval by the powerful tax-writing committee which has had it on the table more than a year. 2. Unless the committee approves it, the measure has only a minute chance of enactment before Congress adjourns and the congressional election campaigns begin. Asking not to be quoted directly, committee supporters of the bill said in interviews that Ribicoff's comments left no doubt the administration earnestly wants a bill this year. It was understood Ribicoff told the committee Kennedy would have no part of a measure which did not contain Social Security financing for his health program for the aged. Everything else, so these sources were given to believe, is negotiable. At a news conference House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana took note of the administration's maneuvering and characterized it as a sign of defeat. "I say they haven't got the votes to get this bill out of the House," Halleck said. "There is a growing awareness that this bill is not good." The original administration proposal was for a schedule of hospital, nursing home and outpatient benefits — not including ordinary doctor bills — to be available to aged persons retired under Social Security and to be paid for by an increase in the payroll tax on employers and employees.

Possible areas of compromise would include the scale of benefits to be offered and the corresponding cost; provisions to take care of persons not covered by Social Security, which, according to estimates, could involve an outlay of as much as $150 million a year from the general fund of the Treasury, and devices to reassure hospitals which would fear federal domination from the contract provisions of the original bill. Regarded as a sort of last line of retreat by the administration would be a proposal, earnestly backed by some Republicans, for an optional system of benefits. Under this plan, a retiree who preferred private insurance to government-paid health benefits could elect to take a cash contribution to be paid to a commercial or group plan.

Child's Life Was Saved By Greenville Man

AYDEN—Details of a life-saving act, involving a year-old Ayden girl who came close to drowning at her Third St. home May 27, were brought to light today. Young Judy James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby James of 309 Third St. here, fell into a small fish pool at the rear of her home about 10 a.m. of the time she was discovered, she had turned blue from lack of oxygen. A passing motorist, Charles McGowan of 403 East Eighth St., Greenville, heard screams and stopped. After finding the child "blue" and "about gone," he gave artificial respiration until she began breathing of her own accord once more. Ayden doctors who attended young Judy commended McGowan's action. She was hospitalized in Greenville for two days following the near fatal mishap but is reported to be doing fine now.

Here's How

A Pattern Can Add Space While Creating Camouflage

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Pattern can make a room look larger, though the old-fashioned decorating idea always has been to the contrary.

Interior designer John Sheehan of New York used pattern everywhere in a small room, 8 feet by 9 feet, and the effect was to make the room seem larger.

"You forget about the physical dimensions of the room, as psychologically your thoughts are diverted to the pleasant sensation of pattern," he points out.

His original reasons for putting the pattern on the ceiling, walls, chests and even the window shade in the child's room where even more practical.

"I wanted to offset the architectural drawbacks—haphazard beams, off-center windows and an air conditioner that jutted into the room. Pattern is useful where you want to conceal structural impediments.

"But as it turned out the room looks larger, and we were able to use even more furniture than usual in a small room without making it look crowded," he says.

The pattern he used is the time-tested "onion" Meissen china pattern that he had color coordinated in a collection of wallpapers and fabrics. The window shades of vinyl impregnated cotton carry the same tangerine and yellow pattern on white. A pair of unpainted chests are covered with the easily scrubbed vinyl. Bases and legs of the chests are painted orange to tie in with the carpet of orange, yellow and wood-tone tweed, also designed by Sheehan. The carpet is wall-to-wall, offering cushion privileges to toddlers, but it is bound so that it can be removed for cleaning.

"The furniture sort of fell into place. It didn't look boxy as it might have if it had been painted a solid color and used in such a small room. Children like to look at patterns, and everyone is growing tired of the sterile all-white nursery of pink and blue," Sheehan explains.

There are wood contrasts in the room which offer traditional softening effects. Maple and pine are found in an Early American drop-leaf table, Early American high chair and Boston rocker.

An abstract collage on the wall is a melange of sunny daffodil yellows, warm tangerine tones and beiges.

Another good point about this little nursery is that it can be used by girl or boy, so that it can be planned in advance of the event. It can be used too for many years, unlike many rooms that are planned strictly for babies.

Churchgoers Sing The Praise Of Mother's Lemon Cake Pie

This is another in a series of articles by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney on her life and culinary adventures.

By MARY WHITNEY
Women's News Service

After thoroughly enjoying and digesting Mother's Sunday surprises and the Sunday comic sections, the family all went off to church.

But Mother and Father went their different ways.

Mother sang in the choir of one Episcopal church and Father was a vestryman in another. I don't remember the exact reason for this ecclesiastical cleavage, but family legend has it that Father was irked at an utterly innocent commentary on his fishing prowess by the minister of Mother's church.

We children, however, didn't play favorites. We registered at the Sunday Schools of both churches and alternated attendance every week, splitting up two and two.

Our graying Sunday festive board was usually graced by a galaxy of relatives—uncles, aunts, cousins, grandparents and in-laws—as well as a sprinkling of clergymen. The main course was chicken, varying only according to the season: broiled chicken in the spring, fried chicken in summer, chicken and dumplings in fall, roast chicken in winter. The piece de resistance was inevitably Mother's lip-smacking Lemon Cake Pie.

tory, but brave won squaw and they started light housekeeping in a tepee and raised a parcel of papooses.

I was 6 when the family took me to the Arrow Rock Inn. It was established circa 1830 and cluttered with all sorts of antiques and Indian relics, perhaps including that winning arrow.

At this hostelry I had my initial adventure with a four-poster bed. My tiny feet needed a ladder to climb up into its vast acreage, and I believe that first night I slept in left field.

But I slept as soundly as a frog on a log, dreaming of the wonderful dessert I'd had for supper. I've edited its recipe since then, retitled it and added some newfangled notions of my own.

FOUR-POSTER SHERBET RING
3 pints pineapple or lemon sherbet
1/2 cup creme de menthe
1 or 2 packages frozen strawberries

Put in bowl to soften, then stir. Add 1/2 cup creme de menthe. Put in ring mold in freezer for at least 24 hours. Unmold—fill center with frozen sweetened thawed strawberries.

One year we took a cabin in Colorado in Allen Park.

I can't help getting a reminiscent chuckle out of this each time I think of it. For it reminds me of one of Uncle Hermar's favorite quips—one he would spring on his four nieces every summer when we visited him in Oak Park, Ill.

"Abraham Lincoln," Uncle Hermar would tell us with a straight face, "was born in a log cabin in Kentucky which he built with his own hands." Then Uncle would let out a tremendous bellow at this bon mot, in which his little nieces would dutifully join.

We really roughed it, but not quite like Old Abe, in those Colorado days. It was a picturesque, woody setting in the mountains, lacking all modern conveniences. Poor Mother never worked so hard in all her life as she did over that primitive cook-stove. For a refrigerator, we used a pelucid mountain stream, everything tightly sealed in jars in the bed of the running, icy-cold water.

It was a bad year for fishing, but Father never admitted this to us. Each day, he'd come back

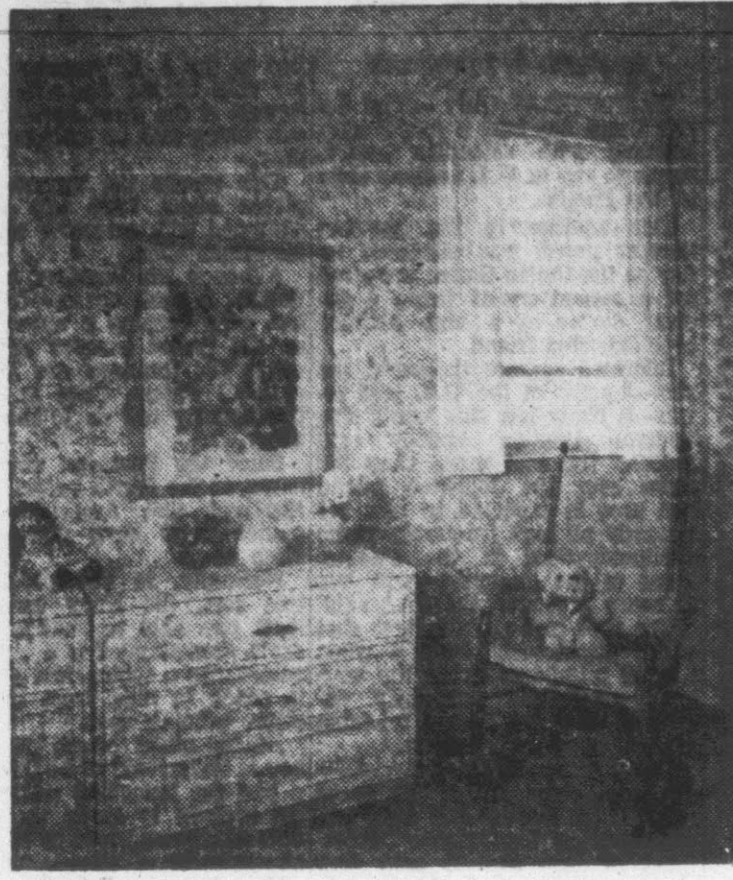

- 4 small trout
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup flour
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup fresh seedless grapes
- 1 lemon
- chopped parsley

Sprinkle trout with salt and pepper and dip in flour. Sauté in butter until delicate and brown. Sauté grapes in remaining butter with the juice of the lemon for 2 to 3 minutes, until steaming. Pour over fish and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Formerly a dusty Santa Fe trail town, Arrow Rock, Mo., derives its name from a bow-and-arrow contest of Indian braves to see who could shoot the farthest. Winner took all, including the hand of the chief's daughter and the dowry of wampum that came with her.

The winning brave's arrow landed high on the town's bluff. The exact distance is lost to history.

Mrs. Tyson Elected To Office

Mrs. Bert G. Tyson was elected vice-president of the North Carolina Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc. held during the weekend in Charlotte.

Mrs. Tyson has served as State Legislative chairman to complete an unexpired term, following which she served a full two-year term. She has also served as chairman of the State Elections Committee, and as State Parliamentarian. She has held all offices, except treasurer, in the Greenville club, serving that club as president for two terms. She was once chosen as "BPW Club Woman of the Year."

After attending Wake Forest and East Carolina Colleges, Mrs. Tyson taught school for several years, then became office clerk for the Pitt County Agricultural Department, now known as Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and later office manager and secretary in the County Home Agent's office. For the past four years she has been field consultant, North Carolina Division of the American Cancer Society. During the years she has completed extension courses from the University of North Carolina and East Carolina College.

New Housing Is Featured In May
New housing construction again led building in Greenville for May with 24 permits being issued for dwellings valued at $381,500.
This was the lion's share of the $419,400 in new construction for which permits were issued during the month.
There were permits for five residence additions valued at $11,950; one business addition, $4,500; one business alteration, $14,000; three garages, $1,450; two duplex apartments, $20,000. With 11 months of the fiscal year gone by, new construction to date totals $4,484,070.
Building inspector J. W. Wilson issued eight heating permits, 36 building permits and made 47 plumbing and sewer inspections during the month.
For the year there have been issued 24 heating permits, 287 building permits and 404 plumbing and sewer inspections have been made.
Fees turned over to the city clerk's office during the month amounted to $808 and for the year they total $5,887.

Area Reservists Begin Summer Training Duty
Greenville's Army Reserve unit left Greenville Sunday for Ft. Jackson, S. C., and its annual two-week summer encampment training program.
The local unit, headquarters detachment of the Twelfth U. S. Army Corps Reserve, carried a total of 75 men and officers, headed by Maj. Ralph Brimley, commanding officer.
Traveling by private car and bus, the local Reservists were scheduled to rendezvous with the three other detachments in the reception station. Other units are stationed at Wilson, Goldsboro and New Bern.
Numbering about 200 in all, the reception station is under the command of Maj. Roy A. Davis of Wilson. Maj. Brimley is the four-detachment station's executive officer.
During their two-week stay at the military installation near Columbia the Reservists will go through maneuvers to simulate active duty. The reception station acts as a service agency to receive and process incoming and outgoing military personnel.
The men are scheduled to break camp and return to their respective stations Saturday, June 23.
Regular Army advisor to the station is Lt. Col. Joel G. Dobson who does not attend the summer camp sessions.

More 'Made In N.C.' Labels Seen

It wasn't too many years ago that the list of items which carried the "Made in North Carolina" label was pitifully limited. There were many items for which the raw materials came from the Tar Heel state, but the finished products were made elsewhere and shipped back to this state for sale.

Fortunately the situation has changed. As North Carolina this week observes a special celebration in recognition of items manufactured in this state, the list is long indeed, and of particular significance is the manner in which it has grown even in the last decade.

Although agriculture is still predominant in North Carolina's economy, the state is no longer solely a farming state. It has a broadbase of diversified industry and its manufactured products represent almost every field in American industry. This production has added immeasurably to the wealth of North Carolina, not so much in the form of industrial empires and personal fortunes, but in terms of jobs and good livings for the people of the state.

But even as the state takes stock of the variety of items it manufactures, it is evident that North Carolina still produces much of the raw material that has to be shipped to other states for processing and manufacture.

Particularly is this true in connection with the vigorous agriculture of the state. North Carolina has only scratched the surface in an effort to establish its own food processing industry in keeping with the calibre of agricultural production it can achieve. For the most part the food products from farms of the state still carry the "processed elsewhere" label by the time they reach the counters of grocery stores and supermarkets.

The vast store of food products which comes from the state's coastal waters are transported for the most part to other states where they are processed and shipped back to North Carolina for

Food Processing Field Efforts

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

FOOD—It is the thinking of various experts that an effective way for a business to win the public's heart—and touch its pocketbook—is through the stomach. In the field of food processing.

This is a field which is being emphasized by North Carolina's industrial development planners and they think it's a sure thing.

All of the elements for success are readily available—food items, staples, delicacies, markets, transportation, ideas and know-how. North Carolina has made progress in this direction in the past few years, more than many realize, and the industry planners figure there is still room for further tremendous growth.

IMPETUS — Governor Terry Sanford listed some of the advantages the other day, in a speech in Asheville, he said North Carolina could become "the breadbasket of the nation."

He cited the state's geographic location, the nearness of the nation's great population centers and the agricultural resources, labor supply and know-how.

Actually, there is no accurate gauge of how well North Carolina's food-processing industry fares on a comparative basis except in the industry's own growth.

Food processing does, at present, stand third in output value in industrial categories in the state, exceeded only by textiles and tobacco.

This means it has exceeded furniture, if the figures obtained from official and semi-official sources are correct.

COMPARISON — The industrial development experts believe that North Carolina's standing among the states in food processing should climb a couple of notches higher the next time a manufacturing and industrial census is taken.

According to one yardstick, value added by manufacturing of food and kindred products, the state climbed one notch in the period between 1954 and 1958.

In 1954, North Carolina ranked 25th in the nation with $155,557,000 annually derived from food processing. By 1958, the dollar value climbed to $235,207,000 and the state ranked 24th among the then 48 states.

EMPLOYEES — Another yardstick is the number of employees engaged in food processing.

In 1954, there were 24,993 so employed in North Carolina and this was 24th in the nation. By 1958, the total had climbed by approximately 5,000—to 29,943—and North Carolina ranked 20th.

Figures obtained from sources other than those cited for 1954 and 1958 indicate a current estimated employment of 36,000 Tar Heels in food processing industries, and an annual value derived of $437,000,000.

POTENTIAL — Some of the potential for food production in North Carolina is indicated by further studies.

For example, approximately 50 per cent of the state's farm income is derived from only 10 per cent of the harvested crop land.

Sixteen per cent of North Carolina's potential crop land stands idle each year.

Of course, by far the greater proportion of the state's farm income comes from a non-food crop, tobacco—with the state producing two-thirds of the national flue-cured crop.

But there is a trend toward crop diversification. There are more commercial vegetables being grown. The state ranks near the top in commercial broiler production. Pork production is increasing. Beef cattle are becoming a bigger thing on many Tar Heel farms.

The state ranks second in production of peanuts and sweet potatoes, 10th in soybeans and corn and 12th in swine.

PLANTS — Some of the food processing plants and industries showing growth and with new facilities in the state process dairy products, seafood, meat products, poultry, pickles, refrigerated foods and snack foods.

sale to our people.

Many products manufactured from raw materials which come from our forests are made far from North Carolina and shipped back to Tar Heels as finished items bidding for the consumer dollar.

"Made in North Carolina Week" should serve to show not only the great achievements of the state in manufacturing progress, but likewise it should impress upon Tar Heels the vast opportunities which remain open for North Carolina to process and manufacture much more of what it produces in the way of raw materials.

$100 Contributions Went A Long Ways

The major questions in the minds of citizens following congressional investigation into the Billie Sol Estes case is: What did $100 buy in Washington?

Although the hearings are just beginning, it seems evident even now that the Texas fertilizer and cotton tycoon spread a number of $100 money orders around Washington. Some of them, according to testimony before the investigating committee, found their way into political party coffers. The route of others is yet to be determined. Also to be determined is the scope of favors passed out by Estes and the number of officials and employees of the federal government who might have been recipients of these favors.

Coupled with the money orders, there have come to light so far long distance telephone calls, charge accounts for clothes and other items.

Where will it all lead? Certainly the entire scope of the matter should be fully exposed to public view regardless of the party affiliation or position of those involved. Any attempt on the part of any official to cover up or minimize any part of the dealings between Estes and federal employees or officials will be in direct conflict with the public interest.

For the most part the favors Estes passed out to those connected with the government appear to be "small", but whether Estes' favors were large or small is immaterial. What is important is that they apparently were accepted. What is also important is what they sought in return for the Texas financier at the expense of the citizens and taxpayers of the nation. Equally important is the deterioration which may have resulted in the moral fiber of government officials and personnel.

At least in connection with the Estes case, $100 seems to have gone a long way.

Contributed To A Generation

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two men from Boston—William Stanley Braithwaite and Edward J. O'Brien—are now both dead. A lot of people still alive owe them a great debt.

It is a debt which hardly ever gets acknowledged by more than a reference in a footnote in literary history. Neither was a creative artist. They published anthologies of other people's writings.

This is an attempt, if only for one day and in a personal way, to do better than a footnote for Braithwaite who died over the weekend at 83 and O'Brien, who died in 1941 at 51.

Every year from 1913 to 1929 Braithwaite, a Negro largely self-educated, published a fat book called "Anthology of Magazine Verse." Every year from 1915 to 1949 O'Brien published what he called the best short stories of the year.

Two things made these books remarkable: the time and the attitude of the two men.

The time, from about 1912 to about 1929 was the most exciting literary period in 20th century America. It was a time of literary revolution, protest, experimentation, new form, new views.

This writer grew up on the West Side of New York where Irish, German and Italian immigrants had settled, raised sons and daughters as first-generation Americans, and many of them, still remained to see their grandchildren growing up.

This was not an intellectual environment. These people never had much time for schooling. They had to go to work young and they worked long hours. You would not sit around a living room in that neighborhood and hear about the new breath of life whistling through American literature.

But you could learn about it if you went to the neighborhood library. I didn't hear it from the librarian. They seemed too busy marking cards to read much. And I did not find new authors spread out on the shelves.

Later, as I grew older, I realized my experience must have been shared by many thousands of young people all over America. (Continued on page five)

But I was lucky. I found the anthologies of O'Brien and Braithwaite.

O'Brien always seemed to include in his anthologies a certain percentage of the usual, old-fashioned formula short story from the popular and conservative magazines. I sometimes felt he thought he had to do it to get his books into the libraries at all.

But in between he sandwiched the new writing, by men like Sherwood Anderson and Ernest Hemingway, and experimental writing, some of which wasn't good. These he reprinted from magazines I had never heard of although they were great forerunners in the new literature—the Little Review, the Dial, the Double-Dealer, Midland, Broom.

That branch library did not carry them. But once I learned of them from O'Brien's book, I could go to New York's main library, find them, and sit there and read them on Sunday nights, and there I would discover even more writers than O'Brien put into his books.

The same thing with Braithwaite. He was a traditionalist in poetry himself, but, like O'Brien, along with the sunset and flowers stuff, he carried the work of the imagists like Hilda Doolittle in England who were championed by Ezra Pound, which was long before he got into trouble: the work of Amy Lowell, Edgar Lee Masters, Carl Sandburg, and the work of Robert Frost who for long had been ignored in his own country.

Braithwaite, too, carried the names of poetry magazines I had never heard of but which I could also find in the main library.

All this would not mean much if it were just the experience of one young man in the early 1920's. I never thought about it much at the time. I guess, I was just happy to have found these books and get help from them.

Later, as I grew older, I realized my experience must have been shared by many thousands of young people all over America. (Continued on page five)

Greatest of Human Figures

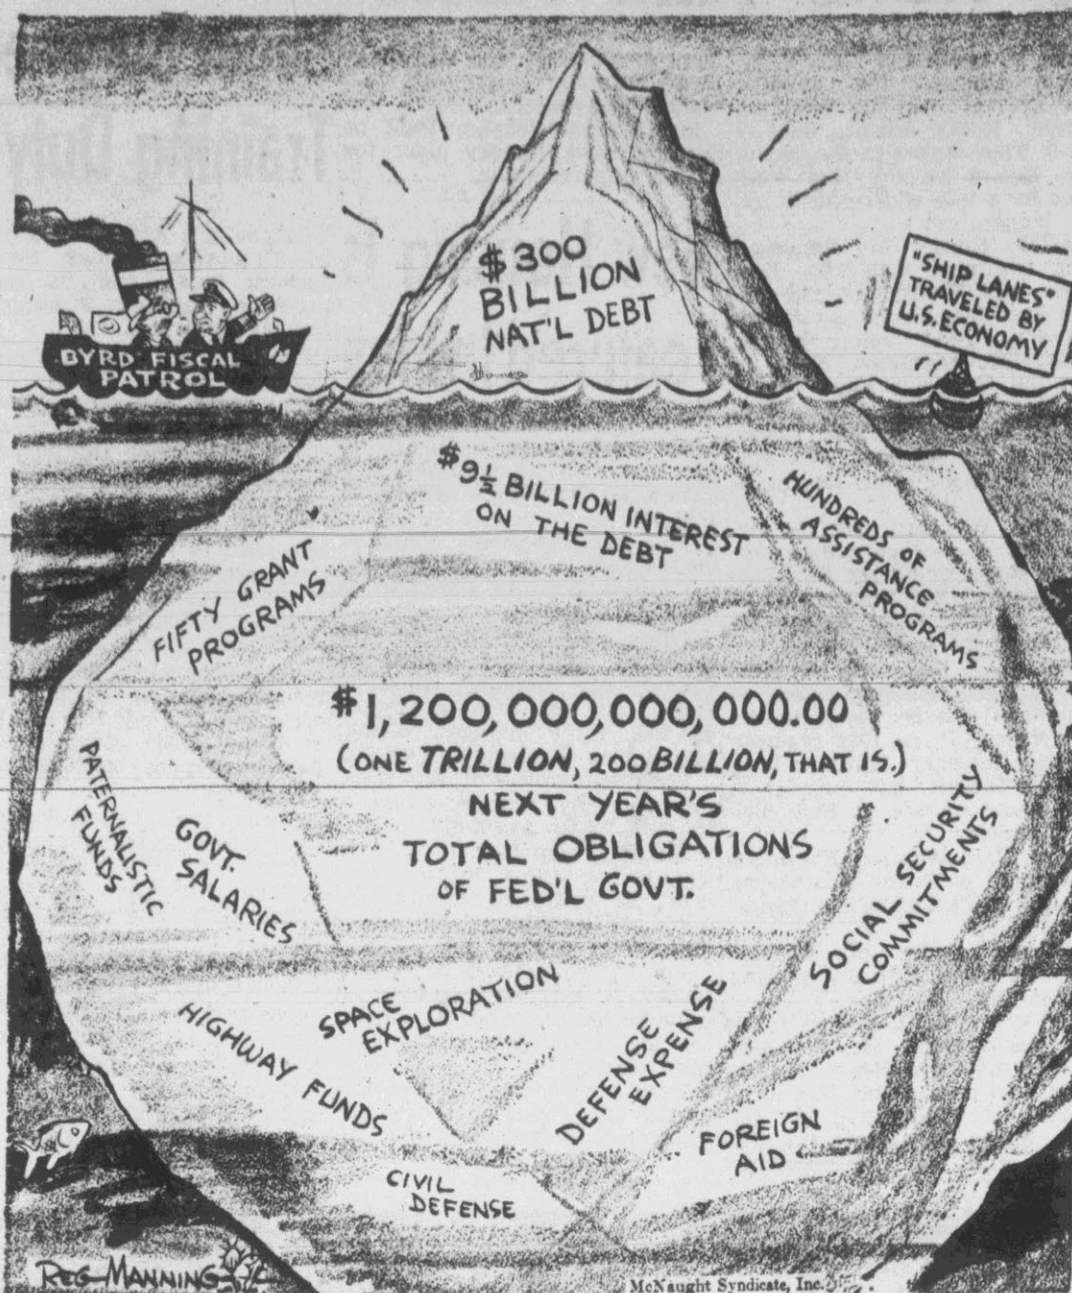

Who was the most influential human being that ever lived? We exclude Christ from this consideration, for although He was a human being, he was also, according to the belief of those of us who call ourselves Christians, the incarnation of God Himself. He was therefore something no one else has ever been or ever can be.

But of what we might call straight human beings, who was the most influential that ever lived? Why Moses, of course. He is the founder of one religion (Judaism), and an honored figure in two other religions (Christianity and Mohammedanism). Moses was, under God, the author of the Ten Commandments. Law of every variety goes back to him, from traffic regulations to international law. Whenever a contract is drawn up today, Moses sits at the table. When the United Nations meets, the presence of Moses hovers over the assembly. Kings, prime ministers, presidents, and legislative bodies exist and operate because this man Moses lived about 3,500 years ago. The influence of all the world's leaders combined is hardly worthy of notice compared with the influence of this man, long since dead, who has left upon humanity an indelible mark.

They found him in an ark of bulrushes in the river. They lifted him out. He had the best education the world could give anyone at that time. They took the world in his hands and moulded it. No one save Christ Himself, has ever influenced the human race as he did.

You Think That's Big?

By ALVIN TAYLOR

Now He's Ex-Bachelor

Sherrill Bryant and your bachelor columnist have often discussed through the years the rigors of a formal wedding. Being bachelors of long standing we wondered just how we'd stand up if we ever went through such a thing.

Well, Sherrill's number came up Saturday. Amid all the impressive beauty of a formal wedding, Sherrill took the lovely Alice Lee Edwards as his bride. This is to report that the former Greenville bachelor came through with flying colors. There was not a single flub to mar the ceremony as it progressed in Red Oak Christian Church.

As your columnist passed through the reception line later Sherrill wore that big relieved grin that only a just-married man can have.

"Well, Alvin, it wasn't so bad," he commented.

Another Greenville bachelor who has yet to take the big step got a little practice Friday evening.

Marvin Edens, a member of the Jaycees, was manning a booth in front of Brody's collecting signatures on the area airport petition.

Soon a lady came along carrying a babe in arms. Marvin dutifully asked her to sign the petition. The pretty young mother smiled and shifted the baby to one arm. Still she could not handle the pencil which Marvin proffered her.

"Here let me help you," the Jaycees offered.

"Thank you," said the young lady and handed the child to him. The youngster took to Marvin like a god-father. He cooed and grabbed at his face. The mother meanwhile signed the petition. Then she took her child back and was on her way.

Some Jaycees just go beyond the call of duty.

One parting shot at the bachelors.

I see where a Raleigh man got married over the weekend. The story says he is a past president of the Raleigh Bachelor's Club. Doesn't say whether he was immediate past.

Going to the other side of the fence, police received a report that a resident had found first a decapitated black cat, then a raccoon on his porch two separate mornings.

He called police. They investigated and blamed it on a daughter's mischievous boyfriend.

No jokes about "Car 54, Where Are You?" following the police car collision during the weekend with the fogging machine in the cloud which the machine emits.

Greenville police have a Car 54, but this wasn't it. Car 51 was involved.

Advise And Consent

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

I rarely go to see motion pictures, limiting myself to the Late Show on television. However, I did go to see "Advise and Consent," as much out of curiosity as for enjoyment. I was tremendously impressed because of the unerring correctness of its presentation of the United States Senate.

I understand that there has been some objection to the varieties of personality portrayed. But that is precisely what the Senate is. No two Senators are alike. There is no Senatorial type and never has been in our history. The men who make the grade in the different states and finally land on top are of all sorts of backgrounds, of various ancestries. For instance, in the present Senate, Mike Mansfield and Eugene McCarthy are violently different from Frank Lausche and Jacob Javits, just as the states they come from are different. This is not a homogeneous country.

Charles Laughton, in my opinion, carries off the lead. He plays the Southern Senator as a Southern Senator used to be. There are not many of that kind left in the Senate, but in a play, years and years ago, called "The Gentleman from Mississippi," precisely such a personality was portrayed by Tom Wise.

The Senate Majority Leader, played by Walter Pidgeon, indicated a profound portrait. Few grasp what a Majority Leader is and what he does. Actually, he is the most important personality in the legislative branch of government. When Lyndon Johnson was Majority Leader, he, a Democrat, often saved the Republican Administration of Dwight D. Eisenhower from falling on its face. Walter Pidgeon, I am sure, modelled himself on Lyndon Johnson.

I select these two from a large and notable cast because they make the Senate understandable. I am not at all concerned that the Producer, Otto Preminger, chose to make one Senator appear to be a homosexual and another a blabbermouth exhibitionist. There was such in the Senate, as there are fools and brilliant scholars, yappers and orators. This body is representative of a nation and our nation contains all kinds.

The homosexual case in New York seemed to me to be wasteful and unnecessary. It was dragged in for local color. Such places are to be found in Greenville Village and in the Upper West Side and on Lexington Avenue. Preminger might have had a more usual incident to explain the Senator's fears of exposure for a distant past deed. However, he chose this one which is plausible as a source for blackmail. It is for this reason that all such persons should be fired from all government agencies, particularly the State Department where they are always subject to blackmail.

I have not yet read the novel, "Advise and Consent," having more pressing engagements with the course of events, but the movie is excellent and the evening both enjoyable and informative to one whose life is full of Senators. Representatives and similar persons whose deeds make as much news as their words.

Our Congressional system is the savior of our form of government. Presidents are always pressed by the requirements of the moment. There are some who have been able to resist such pressures with greater ability than others, but there has been no president, not since the time of George Washington, who did not find the position harassing.

We are not a people who are respectful of authority. Few of us are willing even to assume that anyone who has devoted his entire life to the study of a subject may be expert in it. The modern scientists have developed a jargon which makes it increasingly difficult for the layman to discuss their subject with intelligence. But in the equally complex field of political science, everyone is an

Car Sales Going Full Throttle

By ELMER ROESSNER

Perhaps all auto dealers are becoming as good as the anonymous, but magnificent, salesman who could peddle refrigerators to Eskimos, sand to Egyptians and pineapple to Hawaiians.

Or, perhaps the investor, whose sporadic dealings are playing hob with the stock market, just doesn't read past the stock tables.

Because, somehow, the gears aren't meshing.

Americans seem to be putting on their dark glasses to take a dim view of the Nation's economy, the business outlook and everything in general. Then, as soon as the market closes, they whip off their dark glasses, slip on their rosies and go out and buy a car.

For the fact is that car sales are going along full throttle. During May, which was a difficult month for stocks, domestic car purchases totaled an estimated 656,837 units. This was the best month since way back the road in September, 1953. It was also the third consecutive month this year in which sales topped the 600,000 mark.

During the last nine selling days of May, sales averaged approximately 28,000 vehicles a day. This was just when the market was going down sharply and everyone should have been home refiguring their budgets and not down at the showroom kicking tires and slamming doors.

Not only are people buying more cars but they seem to be spending more for extras on those new cars.

Auto production in May was even better than sales—indicating high sales again in June. May output hummed along at 673,187 cars. A year ago the month's output was only 542,305.

Pessimistic investors might well look back and see if they well look back and see if there was ever a year that had both booming car sales and a recession.

ELECTRONIC COMPUTERS GETTING MORE AMBITIOUS
A new data processing technique to enable more accurate and reliable business decisions has been developed by Radio Corporation of America.

Programming the computer is based on a written expression of relationships derived from a company's accounting and financial system and from its policies. For example, by using such factors as estimates of market potentials ranging from optimistic to pessimistic, probable effects of plant operating costs and impact on marketing expenses and distribution, a whole range of alternatives in introducing a new product could be produced.

Another system, billed colorfully as a "People Machine" is designed to predict in detail the extent, depth and quality of coverage that a particular advertising campaign might achieve. The system has been developed by Simulistics Corp. Basically, a model of the U. S. population and its total media habits has been programmed. An advertising campaign is then run through the computer and it reports on exposure by age levels, economic levels, educational levels, overlapping of various mediums, relative ex-posure and efficiency of the campaign.

Does anyone have the feeling they're only an electronic impulse?

THREE NEW URBAN REGIONS FORECAST
In 20 years there will be three new huge urban regions to rival the Atlantic Seaboard, according to Dr. Jerome L. Pickard, research director for the Urban Land Institute.

If the prediction is correct, it means business should begin considering these areas, the markets they will become and the problems they will create.

The Atlantic Seaboard, according to Dr. Pickard, will have 51 million inhabitants by 1980. This area is generally considered to be between Portland, Me., and Washington, D. C. Its predicted area are pictured as the Great Lakes area from Green Bay, Wis., to Rochester, N. Y., with a 1980 population of 37 million; California from the Mexican border to San Francisco with 27 million people, and Florida up both coasts from Miami to Tampa and to St. Petersburg with 10 million people.

ECC Business Manager Tells Rotary Of Assembly Requests

F. D. Duncan, vice president and business manager of East Carolina College, outlined for Greenville Rotarians last night the needs of the college that will be presented to the legislature at its next session.

"It may sound like we are asking for a great deal," Duncan said, "but we would not be doing our duty to the college or the state if we did not accurately reflect the needs of East Carolina." He pointed out that the college is asking for some $10.4 million during the next biennium for capital improvements. He pointed out that the college at present is approximately four years behind in its capital improvements program. He said the additional facilities are needed if the college is to meet the demands being made upon it by students wanting to attend college.

In addition to expanding physical facilities, the college must likewise increase its staff and faculty to take care of a larger enrollment. Some 50 new people are being added to the faculty and staff this fall, he said, and more will be needed the following year.

The college, he said, is hard-pressed for classroom space and during the coming term will have to operate an unusually large number of late afternoon and evening classes in order to take care of the students who will be enrolled. Included in the capital improvements request are several classroom buildings.

Duncan said approximately 5,900 students are expected to be enrolled this fall, but because of lack of facilities the freshman class this year, particularly as it applies to women, will have to be held at a lower figure than during the school year which just ended.

Duncan was introduced by Dr. Sylvester Green who had charge of the program.

She uses the newly learned language to help persuade the Cubans to leave overburdened Miami for jobs elsewhere in the United States. They want to stay close to Cuba.

"The hardest part is making them realize they may not be able to return to their homeland for a long time," Christa explains.

But then she can sympathize. "I once thought it would be only a while before I would be returning to my home in Eastern Germany, and it was hard to convince myself otherwise."

Rusk To Receive Oxford Degree

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk will receive an honorary doctor's degree from England's Oxford University, diplomatic sources reported Monday.

Rusk will receive his honorary title when he visits Britain later this month on a 10-day tour of Western Europe. As a Rhodes scholar, he received a master's degree from Oxford's St. John's College.

The State Department would not confirm the report and said that such an announcement traditionally comes from the university awarding the degree.

PRODUCTION IS UP
LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Corn production in Kentucky has increased from 25 to 46 bushels per acre during the last 100 years. Wheat production jumped from 10 to 24.4 bushels per acre during the century.

When it comes to the Congress, however, that deliberative body through a series of committees, rules and blocking techniques delays action long enough so that things can be talked out. The Senate was correct in kicking Yugoslavia and Poland off the Foreign Aid list and even if the State Department got them to put these back—it is a temporary support of a Democratic President by a Democratic Congress. But the signal has been given and it will be heeded.

MIAMI (AP)—Cuban refugees swamping the Cuban Emergency Center here pour their hearts out to caseworker Christa Lazell.

She understands very well the terror of a flight to freedom, a refugee's difficulties in adjusting to a strange land, and his reluctance to face the fact that he may be a long time in going back home.

Christa knows because she is a displaced person herself. Born in Dresden, Germany, she spent a sheltered but sternly disciplined childhood there. Until the war her father operated a prosperous lace curtain factory. And then there were very bad days.

As the war was nearing its end, Christa recalls, she listened carefully to British broadcasts, marking on the map the announced positions of Russian army units.

"And when we saw they had almost encircled us," she says, "we made plans to move out."

While the Reds were closing in, several other Germans and she hitched together a bulldozer, a farm trailer and an old automobile and made their way over rugged snow covered hills and backroads until they reached the estate of a cousin, Prince Sachsen Coburg-Gotha. Christa remained there until American troops took over.

After working as a liaison officer with the International Refugee Center in Europe, Christa came to America as a displaced person. In this country work with the Presbyterian Resettlement Committee and the Church World Services brought her together with J. Arthur Lazell, who was also helping refugees. They were married and Christa accompanied her husband to Miami when he was made deputy director of the Cuban Refugee Emergency Center.

In helping her husband with the task of processing the nearly 2,000 refugees who arrive here each week, Christa has become

THE DARK RIDER

A Racing Novel of Suspense by GERALDINE THAYER

"I think I'll ride Big Blue for a while," Julie Pendleton told Mickey Stanhope.

The jockey laid down the brush with which he was polishing his boots to a gleaming shine. "I'd be very careful of him, Miss Julie. He near squeezed the life out of Vogel."

"Yes—I know. Oh, Mickey, have you seen Duke Vogel around here?"

"No—and I don't want to. The only thing he ever brought to a farm was trouble. Keep your guard up with Big Blue, though."

"I will. If Vogel should show up, tell me or Dad, will you? Don't send Vogel away, but keep an eye on him. We think he may try to harm Big Blue."

"I'll do that," Mickey promised.

She had the big stallion saddled and led out. Big Blue snorted at her and tossed his head, but accepted the sugar cube and the neck rubbing she gave him. It was clear the horse must also be feeling some of the excitement around the paddock today. He was frisky and ready for a run.

Julie swung into the saddle and took him out over the pasture land. She headed him toward the paddock fence and let him go sailing over it, cleanly and gracefully. It was a wonderful morning for a ride and Big Blue knew it, too.

Julie streaked across the fields and felt the morning sun on her skin, the warm air breezing back her hair. She thought what an idiot she would be to give up this kind of a life even for a man like Casey Jeffries. Without this green fields, the clean air, the horse flesh beneath her—she'd slowly die.

She was riding alongside the private road to the small training track when she saw the familiar cloud of dust churned up by an equally familiar ancient car. It put on a burst of speed and she saw Casey wave his arm.

She laughed and decided to give him a run for it. She spoke to Big Blue and the horse joined in the spirit of the thing. His long legs stretched and he flattened his neck and put on all the speed he could manage.

The old car dropped back for a short time and then picked up speed. She kept right on going, but there was power in that old relic of a car, for Casey was rapidly overtaking her.

She felt a wave of anger. She didn't really know why, because a few seconds before she'd been so happy to see him she almost rode the horse onto the road to stop him. Now he seemed to be a decided and potent threat to the way of life she had just been missing about.

Then the old car shot off the road and onto the pasture land and began cutting in ahead of her. She could have given him a chase he'd never forget; she knew where the ground was soft and where the old car was bound to get stuck up to its hubcaps. But she couldn't bring herself to do this with Casey even though she was angry at him.

She pulled up Big Blue and Casey changed the angle of the car and stopped some distance away, out of consideration for the nervous stallion.

Julie dismounted, threw the reins over the horse's head and let him graze. He bent his sleek bluish neck and nibbled at the grass, seemingly approving of the whole situation. He even lost his skittishness now that the car had stopped and the motor had been shut off.

"Hello," Casey shouted, and slung his long legs out of the car to walk toward Julie. The wide smile on his face faded somewhat when he noted the firm, aggressive slant to her jaw.

"Am I going to have to forbid you to come to this farm, Casey?" she demanded. "Frightening Big Blue like that—following me in your old wreck of a car—"

He glanced at the vehicle and smiled again. "She sure wouldn't win the Derby, but she's serviceable and she doesn't talk back to me. Most particularly, she isn't pleasant one day, unpleasant the next. How have you been, darling?"

"Take Boundbrook now," Casey said. "What would his stud fee be?"

"Nothing. Boundbrook was injured soon after his retirement. That's a tough break, Julie. What if he hadn't been injured?"

"For a live foal the fee would be ten thousand dollars. At least that much."

Casey whistled sharply. "Okay, it's big business. The race itself brings in a small fortune. I can see why you people get so hot up."

"That's also why we don't like strangers nosing around. And we especially dislike people who pass themselves off as someone we can trust."

"You can trust me," he said, his eyes squarely upon her. "I'm not sure about that."

"Now, Julie, what could I possibly do to harm you or your father?"

"You could work for some gambling combine trying to learn just how good Templar is. You could be trying to learn the difference between our entry and the others. The odds on the Derby can make a great deal of money if they're bet right, if there's someone with an inside track to get enough information to bring the odds in favor of the gamblers."

"Tomorrow I'll put down two dollars on Templar to win and yell as if I'd bet a million. I'm not a gambler, Julie. I like horses and racing people and the races themselves, but I don't care much for the money involved. Not the gambling money."

"Then, Casey," she said imploringly, "what does bring you here? What does interest you?"

"You," he said promptly.

"Oh, Casey, how many times must you be told that I'm going to marry Britt."

"No, you're not."

The earlier events of the day and his unreasonable attitude had a cumulative effect on her. "I'm tired of your presumptuousness," she said angrily. "Also, of your telling me I'm not going to marry Britt, because I am. You haven't any business on this farm. Will you please leave?"

He stepped close and his hands reached for hers and held them firmly, yet gently. He seemed not at all disturbed by what she had said. She doubted he'd even heard. He was too good-looking and she half hoped, half dreaded he might kiss her. If he did, she wasn't sure what she would do except probably make a silly fool of herself.

Tanganyika's Premier Defends Peace Corps

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanganyika (AP)—Prime Minister R. M. Kawawa defended the Peace Corps Monday night against a legislator's charges that the young Americans were stirring up trouble in Tanganyika.

The East African leader told Parliament he had challenged John Mwakangale to back up his charges with evidence but the national assemblyman could not do so.

Several other government ministers rose to the defense of the Peace Corps volunteers. One emphasized the Americans had been officially invited to the country.

Mwakangale had complained of the peace corps workers in his area that "Wherever they are, we always hear of trouble. You hear of people trying to overthrow the government. These people are not here for peace. They are here for trouble."

Kawawa accused Mwakangale of "irresponsible speech."

Ottawa's Mall Is Opened For Third Summer

OTTAWA (AP) — The Sparks Street Mall, three traffic-free blocks in the heart of a major shopping area in Canada's capital city, is open for business for the third summer.

One group of merchants says wiping traffic off the three blocks hurt business. Others point to economic surveys which say the mall has helped Sparks Street stores fight the competition of outlying shopping centers and discount houses. Ottawa's fire chief also was opposed but lanes have been left this year so fire apparatus can operate.

There are 76 stores along the mall.

The experiment was tried first in 1960 a year after a group of Ottawa business men, planners and political leaders surveyed a similar experiment in Toledo, Ohio.

This year, the Sparks Street Mall, just a block south of Parliament Hill, is lined with 71 trees—ash, linden, maple and poplar—set in large concrete pots. It is bedecked with flowers. Four outdoor restaurants are spotted on the three blocks and the pavement itself is painted in large black and white rectangles. Benches are spotted at frequent intervals. Abstract sculptures also have been placed. The Canadian Air Force has erected a large exhibit.

Ottawa papers dubbed it a "pedestrian's paradise," but Mayor Charlotte Whitton, cutting the ribbon at this year's opening ceremony, said she hoped it might become known as "the Grand Canyon of Canada."

Russell Boyce, president of the Sparks Street Development Association, urged a start on making the mall permanent, the year around. Closing date this year is Oct. 9. He said the time is ripe for the city council to take a hand in such a project; the mayor said she wasn't so sure.

Helicopter Pilot Shot By Reds

Officials refused to identify the pilot but said he was attached to the 8th Transportation Company.

Madame Chiang Helps Refugees

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — A total of $81,650 for refugees who escaped to Hong Kong from Communist China was raised Monday by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the president of the Republic of China, at a tea party she gave for 90 prominent Chinese women.

The largest donation was $10,000 pledged by Mrs. Chen Cheng, whose husband is vice president and premier.

The Chinese Nationalist government has offered to admit an unspecified number of refugees from the mainland to Formosa. So far no arrangements have been made for them, however.

Top Businessmen Agree Study Balance Of Payments

By LARRY OSIUS
WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of top ranking businessmen has agreed to examine the Kennedy administration's steps to halt the balance of payments deficit and to make recommendations on how to stop the resulting flow of U.S. gold abroad.

The businessmen, headed by U.S. Steel Corp. Chairman Roger M. Blough, conferred with President Kennedy for an hour Monday night. Afterward, White House Press secretary Pierre Salinger said they had agreed to make the balance of payments study.

The meeting followed Kennedy's appeal Monday in a Yale University commencement speech for cooperation between the government and all segments of the economy. Salinger said of the meeting: "The President feels that this kind of cooperation is most important and is the kind of cooperation that can be most helpful between business and the government."

In his speech earlier in the day Kennedy had declared: "The solid ground of mutual confidence is the necessary partnership of government with all sectors of our society in the steady quest for economic progress."

The President also said those who blame his administration for the sharp decline in stock prices are raising a false issue.

Two of his most frequent public critics—Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and House Minority Leader Charles Halleck of Indiana—hammered away again Monday on the state of the economy at a news conference.

"It has become clear that the Kennedy administration has got America moving again—but in the wrong direction," Dirksen said. "The stock market's crash has supplied the evidence."

Halleck said of Kennedy's proposal to cut income taxes next year: "Evidently this means that Mr. Kennedy intends to cut taxes and spend at the same time. We say the two are contradictory so far as promoting confidence is concerned—and can only produce intolerable deficits that will further depress the economy." Halleck said Republicans do favor an overhaul of the tax system to promote economic growth but "the first approach to real savings in tax dollars must be a serious effort to control federal spending."

The White House conference on Monday night was a late addition to the President's schedule, but had no emergency overtones. The business leaders met during the day with Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon and other Treasury officials. The session was scheduled some time ago.

Dillon stated last week that the balance of payments deficit, representing the amount which the United States spends, lends and gives away abroad, less similar payments to the United States by other nations, might be eliminated by the end of 1963.

The deficit enables foreign nations to use their surplus dollars to buy U.S. gold, reserves of which have dropped to a 22-year low of $16.4 billion.

The deficit in payments last year ran to $2.5 billion, but in the first three months of this year was down to an annual rate of $1.8 billion and, Dillon said last week, may since have declined to about $1.5 billion.

Some of the steps taken by Kennedy and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower to cut the deficit included programs to increase U.S. exports; to spur travel by foreigners in the United States; a ban on travel of U.S. military dependents to Europe, later rescinded; and encouraging other nations to shoulder a large share of foreign military defense costs.

Salinger said the White House meeting stemmed from a meeting between Blough and Kennedy on April 17. That was seven days after Blough had announced U.S. Steel would raise prices $6 a ton and four days after the increase was rescinded on the heels of vigorous opposition by the Kennedy administration.

Some Republican critics have contended Kennedy's opposition to the steel price increase and the resulting rollback shook businessmen's confidence in the administration and led to the stock market price slide.

Kennedy took issue with that in his Yale speech declaring: "This administration is not going to give way to general hostility to business merely because there has been a single temporary disagreement with an industry."

The committee which met with Kennedy. Also present for the White House meeting were Henry C. Alexander, chairman of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., New York; Crawford H. Greenwalt, president of the DuPont Company; Allan Sprout, former president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Thomas J. Watson Jr., president of International Business Machines Corp.

Graham Cites Power Of Prayer In Chicago Talk

CHICAGO (AP)—"A man on his knees is more powerful than a man behind a hydrogen bomb," evangelist Billy Graham said Monday night at the 13th rally in his "Crusade for Christ."

Graham said Christians must infiltrate the world and spread the gospel truth to all corners of the globe. "Prayer can give our nation great power," Graham declared.

But, he said although religion has become both respectable and popular, the average person does not know how to live a successful Christian life.

He said this is because self-denial and cross-bearing which Christ demanded are virtually unknown.

Graham spoke before a McCormick Place audience of 19,000, the second smallest of the 19-day crusade which ends Sunday with a rally in Soldier Field.

More than 370 persons at the rally came forward at the end of Graham's sermon to make what crusade officials term "their decisions for Christ."

Possible Church Merger Is Seen

BUCK HILL FALLS, Pa. (AP)—The General Synod of the Reformed Church of America has taken a major step toward possible merger with the Presbyterian Church, U.S. (Southern).

The 301 delegates unanimously approved Monday night a resolution to take specific action toward closer fraternal relations with the Southern Presbyterian Church.

The Presbyterian Church approved the same resolution, also unanimously, last month.

The Reformed Church had previously heard proposals that it considers merging with the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. but no action was taken to further this proposal.

The resolution approved by both churches had been prepared by committees of both, working together during the last year. The reformed church has 900 congregations; the Presbyterians about 5,000, mostly in the South.

The two churches voted to study areas of common concern such as doctrine, policy, liturgy, and Christian education.

Nigeria Voices Thanks To U.S. For Peace Corps

WASHINGTON (AP)—The top men of Nigeria's Parliament have thanked the United States for sending Peace Corps volunteers to their African nation—and asked for more.

Dennis Chuhude Osadebay, president of the Nigerian Senate, and Speaker of the House Ibrahim Jalo Waziri spoke at an African-American Institute Banquet Monday night.

Osadebay said that Nigeria is "grateful for the young men and women you have sent to us—send us more."

Peace Corps workers were threatened with expulsion from Nigeria last year because of a postcard written by an American girl who was a member of the group. The card was critical of life in Nigeria.

Waziri and Osadebay are here as leaders of a nine-man parliamentary delegation.

Petition For Pardon Sent Att'y General By Scales

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—A petition for pardon, accompanied by letters of endorsement from nine of the 12 jurors who convicted him, has been sent to Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy by Julius Irving Scales, 42, former Communist party boss in the Carolinas.

Scales, a member of a wealthy North Carolina family, started serving a 6-year sentence at Lewisburg Federal Prison in Pennsylvania last October after the Supreme Court upheld his conviction of violating the so-called knowing membership clause of the Smith Act.

The petition says, in part, "It is my understanding that I am the only person who has even been imprisoned for being a member of the Communist party. As an example for others, it seems in congruous that one who had left the party should be the only one still in prison, while others who remain in the party have had the indictments against them dismissed on motion of the government."

Scales joined the party in 1946 and broke with it in 1957 when he said he became disillusioned after the repression of the Hungarian Revolution. He will be eligible for parole in October of 1963.

His petition was filed with letters of endorsement by 33 persons. In a letter to the attorney general, Scales' attorney said, "The endorsements are by nine of the twelve jurors who convicted the petitioner, two of the present United States district judges in North Carolina, the senior partner of five of the leading law firms in Greensboro and in our state, the professors who teach constitutional law at the law schools of Duke University and the University of North Carolina and others."

Among those signing letters of endorsement were federal judges L. Richardson Preyer of Greensboro and J. Braxton Craven Jr. of Morganton.

"There may be others who have been disillusioned about membership in the Communist party, as I have been," the petition said.

Grads Told Of Modern Cruelty

MEMPHIS (AP)—"Various civilizations have cruelties all their own," Gen. Alfred Gruenther told a sweltering crowd of students at the recent Memphis State commencement.

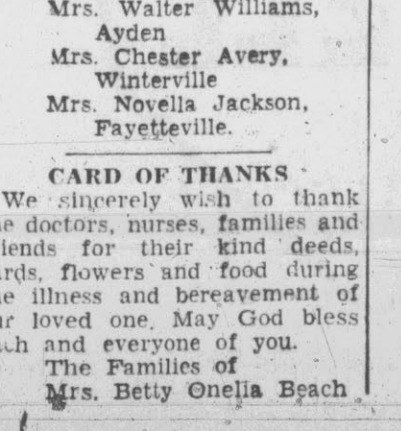

"The Eskimos put their old people on an ice floe to die. Some African tribes get rid of aged men and women by tying them up and leaving them in the jungle."

"One of our cruelties is the commencement exercise. You just have to live through it. You know the diplomas won't be given out until the end."

Pulled On Both Ends Of 7-Foot Pet Anaconda

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—College student Mike Krieger wanted to help a friend's snake work up an appetite, so he put the 7-foot anaconda in a bathtub of warm water in his apartment.

As frequently happens when someone is in the tub, the phone rang.

Krieger, 20, returned to find the anaconda—which crushes its prey like the boa constrictor—disappearing down the toilet. He grabbed its tail and started pulling.

In the next apartment, Bob Titsworth, a graduate student at California Institute of Technology where Krieger is an undergraduate, happened to look into his bathroom, unaware of the drama next door. The snake's head had appeared in his plumbing.

Still unaware of dual interest, each man bent to the task of saving the snake. Mike and two friends—not wanting neighbors to know of their pet—tugged at the tail. Bob enlisted two fire department units, several policemen and a Humane Society worker in a try to coax the snake out.

It took an hour and a half for the two factions to learn they were at odds over the ends.

The men then broke the plumbing and retrieved the snake, by now perhaps with an appetite but certainly with little stomach for further such adventures.

The Humane Society took custody.

Krieger explained that the warm water in the tub helped the snake—a cold-blooded tropical animal—raise its body temperature and thus feel more interested in eating.

Confer On Who Is To See Circus

DETROIT (AP)—A labor meeting was scheduled today to determine who will go to the circus—and get paid for it.

The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus paraded Monday to announce its opening today.

A less lively parade around Cobo Convention Arena, where the circus opens, was staged by pickets who belong to the Building Service Employees Union (AFL-CIO).

The picketers thought they, rather than members of the International Alliance of Theatrical and State Employees Union (AFL-CIO), should have been hired as ushers during the circus run.

The meeting today at the Detroit Building Trades Council was called to try to settle the argument.

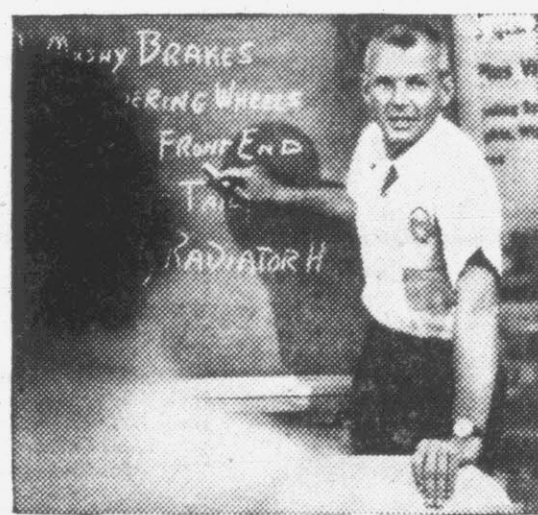

The industry-sponsored program of growing trees as crops under multiple-use forest management practices gained nearly a million acres in the first four months of 1962, according to American Forest Products Industries.

Instructor Billy Reynolds (turning front wheel) and Shell dealers check out a car at a Shell Training Center. By spotting trouble early, Shell dealers can often prevent big repair bills later on.

HOW TO SPOT TROUBLE:

Shell instructor Billy Reynolds reveals 10 trouble signals he tells Shell dealers to watch for. You should know about them too. They may help you spot trouble before it starts.

Shell instructor Billy Reynolds

More than 12,000 Shell dealers go to Shell's 123 mobile and permanent training centers every year. Classes cover the whole gamut of service station operation. But trouble-spotting gets special emphasis.

Here are 10 trouble signals that Billy Reynolds, one of Shell's chief instructors, always stresses. If you notice any of them in your own car, check with your Shell dealer. His advice may help you head off a big repair job later on.

These are just a few of the danger signs that Shell dealers learn about in Shell's 123 training centers. Any trained Shell dealer knows many more. Take full advantage of his experience. Ask him to give your car a bumper-to-bumper inspection next time you stop in for a Shelllubrication—or any service job.

One last tip: when you've got your car in top condition, keep it filled with the gasoline that's made for top performance—today's Super Shell with 9 ingredients. Take a moment now to read what those 9 ingredients do.

Here are the 9 ingredients in Super Shell—and what they do to give your car top performance

- #1 is TCP*—for power, mileage and longer spark plug life.
- #2 is Pentane mix—for fast warm-ups.
- #3 is anti-knock mix—to resist all kinds of knocks.
- #4 is Alkylate to help control "high-speed knock."
- #5 is Butane—for quick starts.
- #6 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—to help you get smooth, even power.
- #7 is an "anti-icer" (added in cold weather) to help check carburetor icing stalls.
- #8 is gum preventive—to help keep carburetors clean inside.
- #9 is Platformate for extra mileage.

HOW TO SPOT trouble before it starts" is the nub of Shell's dealer training program. Here are some of the most common trouble signs that Shell dealers learn to spot:

1. Mushy brakes. When your car is standing still, push your brake pedal down with a firm, steady pressure. If the pedal feels soft and sinks all the way to the floor board, you've got trouble that should be fixed right away. Could be a leaking wheel cylinder. Or, more likely, a leaky master brake cylinder.

This is a very important test, for it can reveal a dangerous condition that may not show up in normal braking.

But a leaking brake system can fail completely when you need it most. And that's really serious. A well-trained Shell dealer can track down brake troubles quickly.

2. Wandering wheels. If your front tires show more wear on one side of the tread than the other, your wheel alignment is probably at fault.

NOTE: an out-of-line wheel can increase tire wear by as much as 50 per cent.

On the road, you may notice that your car tends to wander and is hard to keep on a straight line. This is another danger sign that suggests the need of an expert wheel alignment. Be sure to discuss it with your Shell dealer.

3. Jiggly front end. Put your foot on either bumper, and shove down hard. If your car bobs up and down for a long time before coming to rest, ask your Shell service man to check your shock absorbers.

4. Decrepit tail pipe. Take a look at your tail pipe. If it's rusted through in spots, it should be replaced. Same thing for your muffler. A worn-out exhaust system can make your car roar like a wounded hippo. Worst of all, you run the danger of exhaust fumes seeping into the passenger compartment. Your Shell dealer can take care of the whole problem in short order.

5. "Bloated" radiator hose. Inspect all of the rubber hoses that interconnect your cooling system. If they are cracked, swollen or worn thin in spots, they can fail at any time and cause your engine to overheat. Replacing old or damaged hoses is a simple task for any Shell dealer. But it could save you serious engine trouble on the road.

6. Marred windshield. Feel the rubber blades on your windshield wipers. If they're hard or frayed, they can do more harm than good. A ragged blade leaves streaks. A hardened blade can scratch and scar.

Ask your Shell dealer to check the spring pressure on your wiper arms too. If the blades rest too lightly against the windshield, they can blow away from the glass and let the rain swamp your view.

7. Strange noises. Listen for squeals, squeaks, rattles and other mysterious noises. Strange noises are often warnings of trouble on the way. Violent vibrations in your car can loosen parts and cause trouble. So, don't be afraid to ask your Shell dealer about sounds you haven't heard before.

8. Under-the-hood clues. You can learn a lot just by looking at your engine. Be particularly alert for oil, fuel or water leaks. Even tiny leaks can lead to big trouble later on. You can also make a quick visual check of wiring and electrical connections. If wires are hanging loose—or insulation has worn away—see your Shell dealer.

9. Sluggish battery. If your engine turns over more slowly than usual when you start up, or if it simply balks at starting, an inspection of your electrical system is in order. A run-down battery is usually the cause of starting problems. But the real trouble may be elsewhere. Something as simple as a loose battery connection can do it. Or your voltage regulator may need a minor adjustment. Play safe and tell your Shell dealer.

10. Oil-streaked sidewalls. It may take a bit of back-bending, but it's worth the effort to check the sides of your tires you seldom see—the sides facing in. Look for signs of leaking fluid on the tire walls. A leaking brake cylinder, or faulty oil seals on the rear wheels could be causing the streaks. Both can be serious if not corrected at the first indication of trouble.

Ficklen Stadium Field Will Get Fine Treatment

By GEORGE BRYANT
 Reflector Sports Editor

The playing field of the James S. Ficklen Memorial Stadium at East Carolina College which is now under construction is supposed to get the very best treatment possible as far as the turf is concerned.

Work on the playing area began last week and the grass, Tift 328 Bermuda, was due to be sown Tuesday.

Floyd Hendrix, in charge of preparing the field and putting down the grass, said the treatment the field is getting is the first of its kind in the South.

Hendrix noted that the playing area has been fumigated with Methyl Bromide which kills most soil diseases, weed seeds and in otherwise sterilizes the soil.

"There are only three or four football fields in the nation that have been prepared by this method and they are in the Northern Midwest," Hendrix stated. His firm of Hendrix-Barnhill, which is doing the work, has used the method successfully on golf greens in the eastern part of the state for several years now.

Prior to sterilizing the soil, about 100 tons of sludge donated by the Greenville Utilities Department was put on the field along with some good commercial fertilizer.

The Tift 328, developed by the United States Department of Agriculture at Tifton, Ga., has been in use about 12 years, according to Hendrix, and has proven to be one of the toughest on the market.

The finest of Bermuda grasses, this type grown in Raleigh, is expected to provide a good cushion which is essential for the protection of the players. Ordinary Bermuda grass is usually used on football playing fields in the South and various kinds of Bluegrass in the North.

Hendrix said that Tift 328 comes in sprigs and is striped and broadcast across the field. "This type of sprigging provides coverage about every six inches," Hendrix said. The initial sprigs spread quickly to cover the entire field.

Following the broadcasting, a cultipacker will be run over the field to set the sprigs and then irrigation will be used for about six weeks until a good stand is growing.

"We hope to have a good turf in about six weeks," Hendrix said. He also noted that the field should be ready to play on by the time the stadium construction is completed. However, the field will have to be over-seeded lightly with rye in the late fall to protect it through the winter.

Hendrix said the college had been considering the possibility of using the same method on the old field before the new stadium became a reality. He also noted that the infield of the baseball diamond will receive the same treatment.

Prep Baseball Stars To Play Here This Weekend

High school baseball stars from across the state will take part in the third annual East-West All-Star series in Guy Smith Stadium Friday and Saturday nights.

Since the series started the West has been dominating it as they won the single game played the first year and two of the three games staged last season.

Coaches for this year's East team are Gilbert Ferrell of Wilson and Enid Drake of Middlesex. The two will be working hard to help the East catch up with the West as the series progresses.

The players will report to the East Carolina College gym Wednesday at 10 a.m. for registration and room assignments. Practice sessions will be held twice a day prior to the first game set for 7:45 p.m. Friday.

For practice the teams will alternate using the college field and Guy Smith so that both will have a chance to get used to the playing field.

Sponsored by the North Carolina High School Baseball Coaches Association and the Greenville Lions Club, the event

this year will consist of two nine-inning contests, one Friday night and one Saturday night.

Of the boys playing for the East this year, three of them are participating in the Greenville American Legion team. Those are James Braxton of Winterville, Bruce Biggs of Bath and Wayne Britton of Robersonville.

Braxton, a pitcher, had a 7-1 record this past season and was 18-3 during his four year high school career. Biggs, an outfielder, is a lefthander with a batting average of .512 during the 1962 season. Britton had a batting average of .535 during his senior season and is an outfielder on the legion squad.

Alan McArthur, Rose High School first baseman, selected to play for the East, will be unable to play, but Randy Pridgen, a pitcher, from Benvenue High School in Nash County has been selected to take his place. Pridgen has a 6-1 record his senior year in high school and is now playing his fourth season on the Rocky Mount legion team.

Other boys scheduled to play for the East are Wayne Vashaw of Durham with a batting average of .363, David Greene of Millbrook High in Raleigh with a 7-0 record on the mound this past season, Eddie Lemon who pitched for New Hanover High in Wilmington, and Kirby Williams of Middlesex High School who had a 7-1 record on the mound and hurled the Rocky Mount Legion team to a shut-out victory over Ahoskie last night. Vashaw, Greene and Lemon all play for American Legion teams in their respective areas.

New Bern's Donald Davis, a second baseman with a batting average of .323 and two years of semi-pro ball behind him will also be on hand to help the East. Beattie Leonard of Lillington with an 8-2 pitching record this year and 169 strikeouts in 15 innings is expected to be a lot of help.

Some of the rest of the players are Don Ferrell of Wilson; Wayne Dunn of Rocky Mount who is a utility man; Joe Dawson of Sanford, who is a catcher with a batting average of .340; John Ferguson of Southern Durham with a batting mark of .425 and two years experience on the Legion team; Tony Sauls of Garner with an average of .540; Bobby Shipp of New Hanover High in Wilmington who is a first baseman; and Bill Harris of Hamlet High who is a shortstop with a batting average of .449.

Also on the roster are Don Matthews, a catcher from Elizabeth City; Jimmy Raynor of Clinton and Monroe Stanley of Four Oaks High School.

Moose Nine Wins 9-1; Texaco Tops Optimist

TARHEEL

The Moose nine gained their second win of the season Monday when they defeated Exchange 9-1 in a Tar Heel League game on the Elm Street Park field.

The winning pitcher was Carl Abee who allowed one hit, struck out four and walked seven. Abee took over in the top of the second frame after the starting pitcher allowed three hits in the first.

Credited with the loss for Exchange was Gary Sumrell who allowed six hits, struck out three, and walked nine.

The Moose nine took an early lead in the contest picking up four runs in the bottom of the first. Abee walked and advanced to second when Russell Cayton got on with an error. H. T. Wainright singled to load the bases. Abee and Cayton both scored on walks by David Harrington and Randy Hodges. Wainright and Harrington both came in on passed balls.

Exchange gained one run in the top of the second when Bill Higgins was hit by the pitcher and was forced around the bases on walks by Gary Alford, Glenn Nichols and Mac McGowan.

The bottom of the second saw the Moose add two more runs aided by four walks, two singles and a fielder's choice.

The winners went on to increase the margin in the bottom of the fourth gaining three additional runs. R. Cayton and Wainright both got on with an error by the third baseman. A walk by Harrington loaded the bases and Cayton scored on a fielder's choice by Hodges. Wainright and Hodges both came in on a double by Jimmy Hatton.

With two outs, Jerry Jones also was safe at first on an error. Bruce Jackson and Ken Bradbury followed with back to back singles scoring Roberts and Jones. Jackson and Bradbury later came in to score on errors and tie the game at 4-4.

Texaco collected two hits in the bottom of the seventh as they went on to win 5-4. Bobby Hardy led the frame off with a single. Leon Peardon, the next batter, rapped a double to center to score Hardy and end the contest.

In today's games, the Jaycees will meet the Lions in Guy Smith Park at 5:00.

Jack Musten To Coach Westerns

Coach Jack Musten, who will coach the West team in the third annual East-West All-Star baseball game, is one of the winningest coaches in Northwest North Carolina.

In the past four years, Musten's teams have won 80 games while losing only eight. At one stretch his teams won 28 consecutive games, one of the best streaks in county baseball history.

For three years in a row his teams won the Forsyth County championship and this year his young team finished second.

Musten is a graduate of Wingate and Elon Colleges. He is a native of Kernersville, one of Glenn's arch rivals in the county baseball conference. He has coached baseball and basketball at Glenn for seven years.

The Glenn coach picked up valuable coaching experience before his high school career as coach of a semi-professional baseball team in Virginia.

One Glenn High School player will be participating in this year's games. He is Sandy Gann, a highly-rated shortstop who has drawn raves from many major league scouts.

Previously, Glenn has had two boys to play in the all-star contests—David Snow and Wayne Carlisle.

Little Second In Money

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP)—Gene Littler, who will defend his title this week in the U.S. Open, has moved into a strong second position among professional golfing's top money winners.

The $25,000 Littler won last weekend in the $100,000 tournament at Clifton, N.J., gave him total winnings for the year of $53,704, according to Professional Golfers' Association headquarters.

Arnold Palmer still is in first place with a total of $60,311, even though he won only $460 in the New Jersey tournament. Bill Casper Jr., won $950 to give him a total of $42,158 and third place among the top 10.

Texaco scored one run in the bottom of the seventh yesterday to defeat the Optimist by a score of 5-4. The win was Texaco's fourth of the season.

In the bottom of the third, Texaco opened the scoring by fallying four runs on three hits. Tom Jamieson, Herbie Bunting, and Randy Warren all walked for the home team to load the bases. Joe West followed with a single to score Jamieson. Bobby Hardy connected with the next pitch to single and drive in Bunting. Both Warren and West came in to score later in the frame on a single by Jeff Hardee.

Support Is Mushrooming For Gene Littler Today

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Back Sunday (the $100,000 Golf Classic at Clinton, where Littler nailed the $25,000 first prize), he can do it."

Support was mushrooming today for golf's quiet man in the wake of Littler's brilliant play this year and more over for tournament favorite Arnold Palmer, who severely gashed a finger on his right hand in a freak accident just when he was confident he had shaken a cold that kept him sub par physically for nearly two weeks.

"Littler's my pick," said two-time former Open champion Gary Middlecott as he and the other early arrivals relaxed after a practice round at the 6,894-yard Oakmont Country Club course where the 62nd U.S. Open championship begins on Thursday.

"You don't have to be a big hitter to score on this course," said the Memphis dentist. "You have to be able to drive straight and putt well on these slick greens. Littler's playing beautifully, has been all year. Unless he has a big letdown after winning that big one in New Jersey gave in the trunk of his car late Sunday night at the nearby Latrobe, Pa., airport. The gash went all the way to the bone alongside the knuckle.

"It didn't hurt much," the Masters champion said after a practice round late Monday. Palmer seemed considerably relieved that he could hit so well despite the heavy bandage.

"If it doesn't hurt any more than this," he said, "it won't be bad at all. We experimented with a couple different kinds of bandages and found one that lets me get the right feel of the club."

Philadelphia Tops St. Louis

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Down on paper as a soft touch, Philadelphia's spoiler Phillies have ripped up the form sheet by throwing another roadblock at one of the National League's pennant hopefuls and adding this entry to their streak-snapping log:

June 11—Beat St. Louis 8-5, snapping Cardinals seven-game winning streak.

Monday night's entry was the fourth in a series.

On May 17—The third-place Cincinnati Reds had a six-game victory streak. The Phils won 6-5.

On May 31—The first-place San Francisco Giants had a seven-game string. The Phils won 5-2.

On June 2—The Los Angeles Dodgers, tied for first place, had a 13-game skid. The Phils won 7-0.

That's the way it's been for the Phils, who don't seem to be going places in that NL pennant scramble could have quite a bit to say about who does.

The victory over the Cardinals dropped St. Louis into fifth place behind the Pittsburgh Pirates, who moved up with a 6-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. In the only other game played, the New York Mets defeated Houston 3-1. San Francisco and Cincinnati were rained out.

In the American League, Idle Minnesota took over first place when Baltimore knocked New York back with a 5-3 decision over the Yankees. Cleveland moved into a tie for second with the Yanks, a half-game back, by whipping Boston 10-0 in the only other game scheduled.

Managers Do Some Slugging, Too

Baltimore Defeats Yanks 5-3

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Who, me? That was the general tone of the comment Monday night after the incidents that took place during the fourth inning of Baltimore's 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees and precipitated a free-for-all which Yankee Manager Ralph Houk tried to swing at Orioles' field boss Billy Hitchcock.

Mantle & Maris Being Hounded

NEW YORK (AP)—Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle are being hounded by the same hoodoo that handcuffed all previous 50-homer hitters with the exception of the one and only Babe Ruth.

Prior to 1961, when Maris socked 61 home runs and his Yankee teammates, Mickey Mantle, hit 54, just eight sluggers whacked 50 or more homers in a single season.

Maris has hit only 10 home runs in his team's first 52 games this year. He had 18 through the same number of games last year. At this pace, he will wind up with 31. Mantle, sidelined for the past three weeks with a leg injury, has hit only seven home runs.

Leading off the fourth, Orioles' rookie outfielder John (Boog) Powell was hit in the head by a Bud Daley fast ball, slumped to the ground, but remained conscious. He was carried off the field on a stretcher and taken to a hospital where his injury was diagnosed as contusions of the head.

There wasn't much reaction until the first pitch from Baltimore starter Robin Roberts in the last half of the inning sailed over Roger Maris' head. The Yankee slugger started toward the mound, bat in hand and a fierce look on his face.

Maris was restrained by Orioles' catcher Hobie Landrith as players from both teams raced onto the field. Houk and Hitchcock wound up in a heated argument that ended with umpire Charley Berry holding Houk as the Yanks' skipper attempted to go after Hitchcock.

"The Yanks have been throwing at my men all during the series," said Hitchcock.

"I know my man," said Houk. "He didn't throw at Powell."

"Did Hitchcock order Roberts to throw at Maris?"

"How could I," asked Hitchcock. "I was in the clubhouse with my man who was hit in the head. I didn't even speak to Roberts."

Said Roberts: "I'll talk about anything else. But don't ask me about that." Daley had nothing to say. He left before the game was over.

New Interracial League Started

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A new interracial baseball league for boys 8 to 11 has been formed here after the son of a Negro graduate student at the University of North Carolina was barred from the old city league.

The new league was officially formed Monday night by a unanimous vote of directors of the town's Sandlot Baseball Program.

Leo Wagoner, commissioner of the disbanded league and chairman of the board of directors of the new program said the new league will be open "to every boy, regardless of race or ability." He said he did not know how many Negroes would be playing.

Last week, Tom Seism, coach of a team in the disbanded league, was asked to resign when he said 9-year-old Michael (Jerry) Gardner, a Negro third grader would play. Young Gardner's father is studying for a doctorate in physics at the University of North Carolina.

When it was over, the Yankees were in a tie for second place with the Cleveland Indians, who moved up by belting Boston 10-0 in the only other game played. The Yankee loss permitted idle Minnesota to move into the top spot, a half-game ahead of the runners-up.

In the National League, Philadelphia snapped St. Louis' seven-game winning streak by beating the Cardinals 8-5. Pittsburgh walked the Chicago Cubs 6-1 and the New York Mets defeated Houston 3-1. The other scheduled game—San Francisco at Cincinnati—was rained out.

When Powell was hit the Orioles already had built a 3-0 lead on a two-run first inning in which Jim Gentile and Jackie Brandt drove in the runs, and a second inning homer by Landrith. Yogi Berra homered for the Yankees in the last of the fourth before Gentile hit a two-run homer in the fifth to put it out of reach. It was Gentile's 16th, putting him into the league lead.

The victory for Roberts (1-2), cut by the Yankees earlier in the year, was his first in more than a year—since he last won for Philadelphia's National League Phillies, June 8, 1961—and his first ever as an American League. He allowed seven hits and three run in 7-1-3 innings before Steve Barber and Hoyt Wilhelm finished up. Daley (2-1) was the loser.

Willie Kirkland tagged a three-run homer for the Indians in the fourth inning and put them ahead to stay. He later added a two-run double in the seventh for five runs batted in. Bubba Phillips also connected for the winners in support of Jim Perry (5-3), who limited the Red Sox to seven hits. Earl Wilson (3-2) lost it.

The Indians-Red Sox game did not pass without an incident.

Before Kirkland connected for his homer, Wilson was charged with a balk that forced in a run. The Red Sox claimed Cleveland's Tito Francona, running at first base, hollered "Hold it Earl," causing the pitcher to stumble on the mound.

Baseball's rules state such deceptive talk is illegal. But umpires John Flaherty and Ed Runge said they had not heard it.

Builders And Pepsi Win In Teen-er Loop

In last night's doubleheader action, Home Builders defeated Planters Bank 9-2 while Pepsi-Cola dropped College View 7-5.

In the first game, Home Builders opened the scoring in the bottom of the first as they tallied two runs on a single and a homerun. With one out, Vincent singled and was followed by a homerun off the bat of Tommy Smith. Gaskins and Hardy produced two runs in the bottom of the second for Home Builders increasing their lead to 4-0.

In the bottom of the fourth, Beaman, Singleton, and Wilkerson all homered for the Builders to advance their lead to 8-0. The home team also added one run in the fifth to set the score at 9-0.

Planters Bank rallied in the top of the seventh to score two runs on three hits. Morton and Reagan both singled, and later came in to score on a single by Fuller. However, this was not enough as Home Builders went on to win 9-2.

In the second game, Pepsi-Cola staved off a sixth inning surge by College View to win 7-5. Crawford was the winning pitcher

High Bid

NEW YORK (AP)—The Teleprompter Corp. Monday night made a bid of $1,700,000—the highest in history—for the ancillary rights of the Floyd Patterson-Sonny Liston world heavyweight championship bout Sept. 22 in Chicago.

Promoter Tom Bolan said two other companies had made bids that did not match Teleprompter's. The company also handled the third Patterson-Ingemar Jonasson bout. The price for that one was $800,000.

Bolan, president of Championship Sports, the promoters, said there was a possibility his group might handle the ancillary rights themselves. The rights include radio, television and movies.

Rollins Doing Well At Plate

NEW YORK (AP)—At the start of the 1962 spring training baseball season, the Minnesota Twins had five candidates for the third base job. Harmon Killebrew, George Banks, Johnny Goryl, Bill Tuttle and Rich Rollins.

Rollins hit at a .500 clip last week, collecting 14 hits in 28 times at bat and lifting his mark 21 points to .356. He took over the top spot from Kansas City's Manny Jimenez, who slumped 21 points to .341. Al Kaline of Detroit, out with a broken collarbone, is third with .336.

In the National League, Felipe Alou of San Francisco jumped into the lead on the strength of an eight point pickup to .348 while Stan Musial, veteran St. Louis star, zoomed into the runner-up position at .347. Musial has hit safely in his last 12 games during which he has collected 20 hits in 44 times at bat and increased his average 47 points.

Willie Mays of San Francisco continues to set the National League pace in homers with 21 while Tommy Davis of the Los Angeles Dodgers has the most runs batted in, 64. The figures include Sunday's games.

Jim Gentile of Baltimore leads the American League in homers with 16. Norm Cash of Detroit and Leon Wagner, Los Angeles Angels, have 15. Floyd Robinson of the Chicago White Sox and Wagner share the RBI lead with 44.

U.S. Military Forces To Stay In Thailand

By SPENCER DAVIS
 WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States will keep military forces in Thailand for the time being despite the agreement of neighboring Laos' three political princes to form a coalition government.

High U.S. officials, in disclosing this today, said they believe the threat of a Communist-dominated Laos has been averted, at least for the present.

However, the new Laotian government is expected to be too weak at the outset to halt the threat of Red infiltration from neighboring North Viet Nam.

U.S. troops in Thailand, which now number about 4,800, are being retained there as a protection against Communist infiltration into that U.S.-allied country.

The United States is concerned, too, about the infiltration of Communist guerrillas into pro-Western South Viet Nam via a corridor through southern Laos. This flow is expected to continue.

U.S. officials are hopeful that the 14-nation Geneva conference on Laos can meet by the first week of July, or possibly sooner, to put into effect the agreements which will naturalize Laos and remove it from the cold war arena.

Prince Souvanna Phouma, premier-designate of the new coalition government, is expected to head the Laotian delegation at Geneva.

There is still a blank spot in the Geneva agreement which remains to be negotiated. This is a declaration by Laos of the neutrality it expects to maintain under its new government of national union.

American authorities are now going on the assumption that the military dispute that divided the little Southeast Asian kingdom can be shifted to the political arena.

With the progress made thus far toward setting up a coalition government, the United States can resume its financial assistance to the royal government and will be ready to continue aid to the new Souvanna Phouma government once it has taken the reins of power.

The United States has held up budgetary assistance amounting to $3 million a month since February.

One of the difficult problems ahead is the need to pay the royal troops who have been engaged in the Laotian civil war.

Once the Geneva agreement has been adopted, the new government will demobilize most of the fighting forces and integrate the remaining troops into a national police force. Officials of the State and Defense departments and the Agency for International Development met Monday to consider the question of costs before demobilization is effected.

Presumably the Communist bloc will continue to provide for the salaries of pro-Communist Pathet Lao troops and an estimated 10,000 North Vietnamese now in the country.

The Geneva agreement will require the withdrawal of all foreign forces, including the 10,000 Vietnamese and less than 1,000 American military advisers and technicians in the country.

Three Die As Car Is Crushed

KEARNY, N.J. (AP)—Three state troopers were crushed to death when a bus rammed their patrol car and plowed over them on the New Jersey Turnpike Monday in an accident involving four vehicles.

The driver of the bus, Raymond E. Peters Jr., 35, Easton, Pa., told police investigators that his brakes failed. The big Royal Blue Coach Inc. vehicle struck a passenger car, careened into the police car and sent it smashing into a dump truck, then rode over the police cruiser and settled atop it.

The bus underwent a thorough check by investigators from the state police, the Public Utility Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The dead were troopers Joseph De Prino, 25, Lyndhurst, who was driving the cruiser, Milan Simcak, 36, Paramus, and Arthur J. Abagnale Jr., 26, Cliffside Park.

Five persons were injured—Peters, the two passengers in the bus, a rider in the private car and the driver of the dump truck.

Would Cooperate On Lines JFK Emissions

By SAM DAWSON
 AP Business News Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP)—In his Yale speech President Kennedy makes it plain government wants to cooperate with business—but along the lines of a new economy he envisions.

And in their reaction to the government-business clashes this spring most businessmen have made it plain they think government-business cooperation is essential—but that the old rules should still apply.

In its own reaction the stock market also has stuck close to the old rules—prices go down when uncertainties pile up and hold the possibility of a decline in profits and business activity—no matter who's to blame, government, business, or stock traders themselves.

The Yale speech seems to put the differences between government and business into clearer focus if only because of the flat statement that the government will continue its "watchful concern for our economic health" and insist that business and labor live up to their responsibilities to the public interest, as the government interprets it.

The President says in effect his administration is anxious to allay businessmen's fears that it is against them.

But the President calls upon his business critics to give ground—to abandon what he calls their stubborn allegiance to old myths and slogans—to move into what he sees as a new era in the nation's economy.

His chances of getting this concession by many businessmen immediately would seem pretty slim.

For one thing, they believe sincerely that economic laws don't change that easily, if at all. For another, many sincerely distrust the administration's vision of what would make the nation's economy grow at a faster pace.

And still others note with some alarm a growing campaign to credit Europe's striking recovery from war damage as due to abandoning old fears of deficit financing.

The U.S. Treasury will close its fiscal books June 30 with a deficit. And if new spending proposed to pep up the economy, and tax cuts envisioned for next year, take final form the chances for deficit financing in the next fiscal year are strong.

Many fear this will fire up another round of inflation. To the ordinary citizen this means that the cost of living goes up because the market place value of the dollar goes down.

Others, including many of the President's close advisers, insist that the deficit spending will so pep up the economy that in following years there will be Treas-

The idea is only part of the administration's feeling that the government can't stand aside when the growth of the U.S. economy is at stake.

Pay Phone Chimes Head For Oblivion

NEW YORK (AP)—One more familiar sound of modern living is headed for oblivion.

In place of the chime that sounds when you drop a coin into the pay telephone will be silence on the caller's end of the line, at least.

The disappearance of chimes will take place over a period of several years. A new model of the pay phone is being tested in the Norfolk, Va. vicinity. When tests are complete and changes made, the new phones will begin to appear across the country.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. expects to use the new models in replacing worn or damaged phones and also in new installations. The nationwide Bell System accounts for about 83 per cent of the nation's 75 million phones.

For over 50 years telephone operators have been checking up on pay telephone callers through the chimes, and gongs, telling exactly how much money you've put in the slot.

No chimes or bongs at all for the new model. An electric tone, similar to a beep, is transmitted to the operator, enabling her to tell how much you've put in. You don't hear it.

The new model is the first major overhaul of the coin box phone an AT&T spokesman said.

Western Electric, the AT&T manufacturing arm, estimates that production will jump from 50 sets this year to 60,000 in 1963. After that they will be able to turn out 120,000 a year.

At first the new model will be a two-tone gray with chrome finishings. Instead of separate slots for nickels, dimes and quarters, there will be only one in the upper left hand corner of the instrument. A lever instead of a push-button will release bent coins.

The handset will be mounted in the center above the dialing apparatus. Now it is attached to the side of the coin box.

The new model also will include several internal improvements which Western Electric said "offer maximum protection against fraudulent dialing of calls."

Dublin's Mayor Lost His Voice

DUBLIN (AP)—Dublin's lord mayor, Robert Briscoe, came back from a three-months tour of the United States Monday, looking tired and minus his voice.

"I'm fine, boys, but I've lost my voice," he whispered to newsmen at the airport.

He blamed it on overstrain, too much talk, and a throat operation in New York last Thursday.

Briscoe said President Kennedy had assured him he would visit Ireland some time during his presidency.

Rockefeller Looms Large In Republican 1964 Plans

By JACK BELL
SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — The quiet assumption among most Republicans attending national committee meetings here appears to be that Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York will be their 1964 presidential nominee.

Behind all the hoopla of optimistic declarations that their party is going to win control of the House and add several governorships in the November election, there is soft-pedaled hotel room talk about the choice of the next man to oppose President Kennedy.

In this talk there is a strong disagreement on whether former Vice President Richard M. Nixon can or can't be counted out of the 1964 running if he wins the governorship of California.

There is a lively interest in what will happen if George Romney wins the governorship of Michigan. There is talk that William Scranton would make an attractive presidential candidate if he can take over the statehouse in Pennsylvania.

Scranton, now a congressman, will oppose Democrat Richardson Dilworth, former mayor of Philadelphia, in the November election. Scranton is a 44-year-old millionaire.

There is solid support for the idea that Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona deserves at least second place on the 1964 ticket as spokesman for the party's conservatives.

All of this seems to shake down to the belief that, at this stage, Rockefeller is the man most likely to arrive at the top of the ticket—providing he does not stumble over some now unforeseen obstacles in his bid for reelection with a resounding majority.

In these circumstances National Committeeman George L. Hinman of New York is playing it cool, firm by other key committee members—that he is asking no commitments for his candidate.

"All I am doing is trying to find out what the situation is in individual states," he said. "We want to know more about what is going on than we did in 1959."

Rockefeller made an abortive bid to oppose Nixon for the 1960 nomination but quit late in 1959 when he found the GOP cards were stacked for Nixon.

If Rockefeller wins re-election—and Hinman thinks he will by a big margin—things will be different in 1963. Republicans then are likely to see a duplicate of the drive Sen. John F. Kennedy put on for the Democratic nomination in 1958 and 1959. This went down to grass roots, state-by-state organization for delegates.

In any such endeavor, Rockefeller has several advantages over possible opponents. Contributors probably will be reluctant to put their money on the line to finance pre-convention expenditures for any Republican hopeful in view of the prevailing opinion that Kennedy is likely to get a second term.

Rockefeller doesn't have to go outside his own purse to finance such a campaign.

The New York governor will not be tied by tradition or promises to completing a second term in Albany. He has his job and record in hand in a way no newly elected Republican governor—including Nixon—could expect to duplicate.

All of these factors contribute to what Bernard M. Shanley, New Jersey committeeman, said he had found to be a general recognition among his colleagues that "there is only one candidate at this time and that's Rockefeller."

Shanley, who remains close to former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, said he thinks Romney in Michigan and Scranton in Pennsylvania might be "good prospects for 1968 but they've got to get elected first and have time to prove themselves on the job."

He said he isn't ruling out Nixon but believes the former vice president will be tightly bound to promises to serve a four-year term as governor of California.

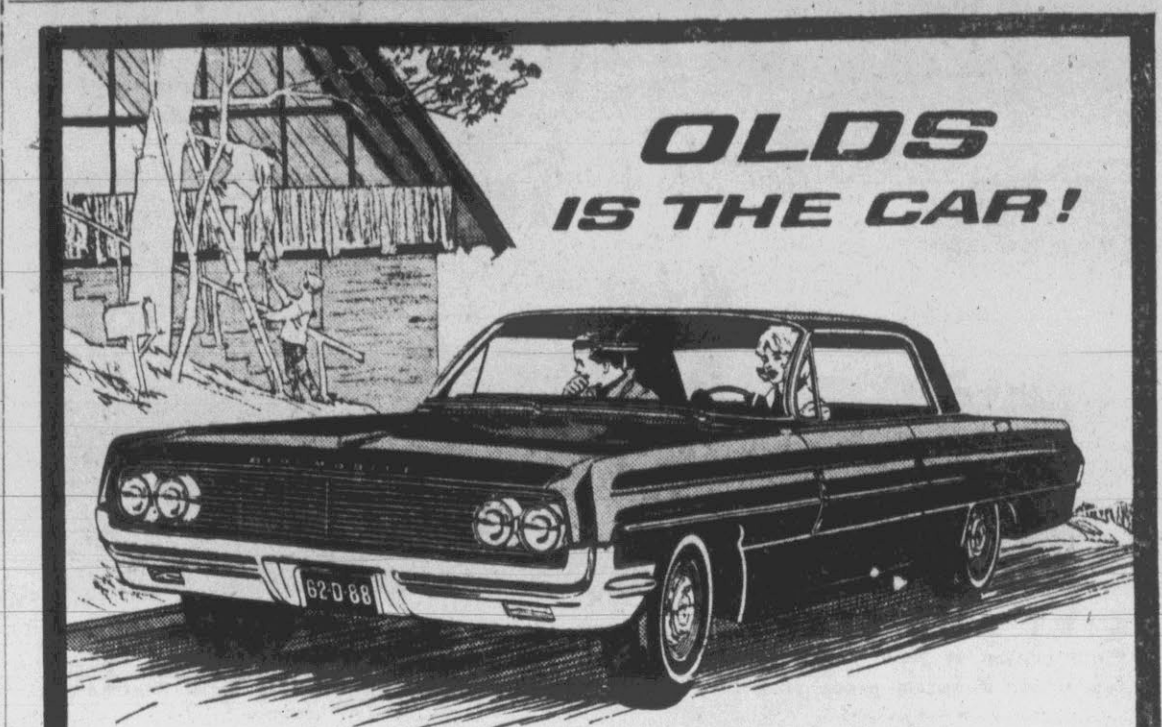

Shanley said he thinks Goldwater might well be the vice presidential nominee in 1964.

A veteran member of the committee who didn't want to be quoted by name said he had found a strong undercurrent of belief among members that Nixon would be drafted for the presidential nomination if he wins in California.

But Robert R. Snodgrass, Georgia committeeman, said he thinks in that event Nixon's political motives would come under such strong attack from Democrats it would damage his chances of beating Kennedy.

Snodgrass said, "It looks like Rockefeller now." He said he believes the New York governor would do about as well as any Republican candidate in the South despite Rockefeller's strong stand for civil rights.

Mrs. C. Wayland Brooks, Illinois national committeewoman, said that while she is not committed to any potential 1964 candidate, she is interested in Romney, former head of American

Two Flights To Deliver Vaccine

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Navy jet pilot on a mission of mercy had to make two flights between New York and Charlotte before a vaccine could be delivered early this morning to a two-year-old Gastonia boy.

Lt. Cmdr. Warren G. Schulden left New York the first time at 9:23 p.m. Monday night in an F4B Fury jet fighter carrying vaccine for John Wilson, son of Mrs. Wilma Wilson. John had accidentally become infected on the head and eye from his sister's smallpox vaccination.

As Cmdr. Schulden was approaching Charlotte he discovered engine trouble which prevented him from landing. He returned to New York for another aircraft.

Schulden, piloting a second Fury jet bearing the vaccine landed here at 12:30 a.m. A Highway Patrol car rushed the drug to Gastonia where a doctor was waiting to administer it.

The doctor, who asked that his name not be used, said the vaccine was hyperimmune vaccinia gamma globulin, available only at a few places in the nation. He said the boy's eye could be seriously affected.

Goldberg Opens Exercise Room

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a one-two attack on a punching bag, a spin on an exercise bicycle, Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg has inaugurated a new exercise room for his department's employees.

"We're going to be the most physically fit department in this administration," Goldberg said Monday.

"I want to counter the canard that I am not in sympathy with the President's physical fitness program," he said with a smile.

"When your frustrations begin to get the best of you, working over the punching bag is great medicine."

Department employees contributed money to pay for the equipment.

Showdown Today For S.C. Political Giants

COLUMBIA (AP) — The battle between South Carolina's political giants reached the ballot box stage today with Democratic primary voters choosing between incumbent Olin D. Johnston and challenger Gov. Ernest F. Hollings for the U.S. Senate.

Primary voters are also in effect electing a governor from among five candidates, and deciding contests for five other lesser state offices. Few political experts were willing to predict the outcome of the Senate and governor races.

Republicans are not holding a primary, but in convention nominated W. D. Workman Jr., Columbia syndicated newspaper columnist, for the U.S. Senate; and a former Democrat, State Rep. Floyd Spence of Lexington, for Congress from the Second District.

The Hollings-Johnston campaign was a bruising affair, with the 40-year-old governor carrying the fight to his 65-year-old opponent. Johnston, a veteran of 18 years in the Senate, largely campaigned on his record and labeled as "mud slinging" the Hollings charges.

Hollings demanded that Johnston tell the voters why he co-authored with Sen. William Langer, R-N.D., a 1955 bill to block the deportation of dope-peddler Nicola Impositato of Kansas City, Mo.

Johnston replied by citing a Senate Judiciary Committee resolution stating that he and Langer "acted with justification" in sponsoring the bill, quashed by the committee after an investigation. But the senator ignored Hollings' challenge to name the "several persons" in whose behalf Johnston once said the bill had been introduced.

Johnston did not attack Hollings personally. But the senator's supporters accused the governor of spending too much money running the governor's mansion and of paying fancy salaries to convicts employed by the governor's office.

Hollings accused Johnston of voting for disarmament in supporting a bill to set up, under the State Department, an agency to study procedures for disarmament. Johnston replied that disarmament was not the issue under the bill, and cited his votes in support of defense measures.

The governor also charged Johnston with using his influence as chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee for political purposes. "New post office buildings broke out like measles right after I offered for election," Hollings declared.

Donald Russell, a former assistant U.S. secretary of state under James F. Byrnes, and Lt. Gov. Burnet R. Maybank, son of the late governor and U.S. Sen. Burnet Maybank, were regarded as the strongest candidates in the five-way race for governor.

The contest also included State Rep. A. W. (Red) Bethea of Dillon and two political newcomers—Dero Cook of Conway, who wants drinks across the bar and horse race betting legalized; and prohibitionist Milton Dukes, North Charleston Baptist minister and used car dealer.

Bethea implied that Maybank was "trying to inherit the office" and running on the reputation of his father; and that Russell, a wealthy man, was "trying to buy the election."

Maybank cited his record in the Legislature and as lieutenant governor for four years. Russell said his administrative experience in business and his background as president of the University of South Carolina for six years qualified him for the post.

There was opposition in the Democratic primary for two of the state's six congressmen—Rep. Robert T. Ashmore of the Fourth District and Rep. John L. McMillan of the Sixth. Five Democrats sought to be nominated to the Second District seat, to be vacated in January by the widow of Rep. John J. Riley.

Marion Tyus, Greenville businessman, and James W. Workman of Union, opposed Ashmore.

Studio Scraps Film After Firing Marilyn Monroe

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood's star system came in for sharp criticism today following 20th Century-Fox's decision to give up on "Something's Got to Give."

Executive Vice President Peter Levathes announced cancellation of the film Monday night. The development was preceded by the sacking of Marilyn Monroe on Friday and co-star Dean Martin's subsequent refusal to work without her.

Levathes was terse in his announcement, saying only that the move was reluctantly made.

But the boss of another studio commented: "The star system has got way out of hand. We've let the inmates run the asylum and they've practically destroyed it."

Members of the crew assigned to the Monroe-Martin vehicle said they hoped to run an ad in the trade papers headed: "Thanks, Dean and Marilyn, for putting us out of work."

Miss Monroe was fired for absenteeism. The studio said she showed up only five working days in seven weeks of shooting. The star blamed illness for her absences. On film, however, was her much-publicized nude bathing scene.

All told, 20th Century-Fox lost $2 million worth of film by scrapping the picture.

But one studio source summed it up this way: "If we had continued at the rate we were going with Marilyn, we would have had an American 'Cleopatra.' It's better to shut down and lose $2 million than keep on and maybe lose $10 million or $12 million."

"There was nothing we could do but scuttle it."

After Marilyn was fired, she was replaced by Lee Remick. Then co-star Dean Martin departed, saying he'd work with no one but Monroe.

The studio could replace Marilyn easily because she wasn't on much film, but Martin was in nearly every scene director George Cukor shot while waiting for Marilyn to return to the set.

Miss Remick would say only, "I'm not mad at anybody."

Martin said of the shutdown, "Gee, that's a shame. I'm really sorry. If they'd kept Marilyn in the east I think we could have made a very fine picture. But she was too sick to go ahead with it. So that's it."

It was a day of decisions for Levathes.

He also decided to suspend Walter Wanger as producer of "Cleopatra," at $30 million the most costly film in history.

It, too, has been plagued by absenteeism by its star, Elizabeth Taylor.

Surgeons Labor Save Children

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Leading Argentine surgeons labored today to save many youngsters gravely injured when a commuter train rammed a school bus jammed with more than 100 school children Monday.

Two among the injured died Monday night, raising the death toll in the crash at a fog-shrouded railroad crossing to 43. Eighty-one persons, most of them children under 10, were on the injured list.

Some of the mangled youngsters died when plasma and blood transfusion supplies ran out at the four hospitals to which the injured were taken from the crash scene in the marshy shantytown area of Buenos Aires.

Emergency calls for blood transfusions brought 1,500 responses within two hours, police reported. Some of Argentina's leading surgeons were among the 250 doctors who rushed to help.

Police arrested the grade crossing attendant and held the train's engineer and a fireman for questioning. The attendant told police he had lifted the crossing barriers for a truck and, believing the track was still clear, motioned the bus across.

The train roared out of the fog and hit the bus squarely, scattering bodies, seats and books 30 feet up the track. The bus driver and a teacher were among the dead.

LET ASCS HELP YOU WITH YOUR STORAGE PROBLEM FOR 1962.

With the harvest season for small grains at hand and the harvest season for corn and grain sorghums almost here, a matter which should be of great concern to farmers in this area is the storage of their grain crops. Many farmers when harvesting their grain crops this year will find that they could have increased their income considerably by being able to store their grain on the farm at harvest time. This condition exists because of usually depressed local prices at harvest time and the requirement that farmers be able to store their grain either commercially or on the farm in order to take part in the price support program. It's just good business for farmers to build the grain storage facilities can be paid for through the increased income made possible because the farmer is in a position to hold his grains for orderly marketing and to take advantage of the ASCS price support program.

In this connection, the following types of assistance that will be available through ASCS County Offices in helping farmers to meet their storage needs. Financial "loan" help is available to farmers which will provide up to 95 per cent of the cost of the new bins. The ASCS County Offices are also authorized to make loans up to 95 per cent of the cost to assist farmers in the purchase of drying equipment necessary to get their grain in condition for storage. Pitt County farmers who feel that they might need additional grain storage should visit the ASCS office and obtain full details on assistance that can be made available for the purchase of this equipment.

Don't be caught short of storage for your grains. If you come into the harvest season without sufficient storage, you'll just as surely come out without sufficient cash returns for your crops. We urge farmers to check into their storage situation and take necessary steps before it is too late.

Many thousands of dollars are lost each year due to inadequacy of grain storage facilities or through careless handling of grain while it is in storage. Storage is the real key to orderly marketing of grain. Without storage producers are forced to sell their grain at harvest time when the market may be flooded and prices are low.

Drying grain by means of artificial heat is one of the most rapidly expanding techniques of modern Agriculture. Its general adoption is being forced by weather conditions at harvest time. In order to keep grain perfectly in storage, without molding or fermenting, the moisture content must be brought down to a low figure. A farmer who has a drier can harvest earlier, thus avoiding most of the bad weather.

The first step in securing a loan through the ASCS Office is to visit some of the firms who sell grain bins and dryers and select the size and type which will suit your needs. Then obtain a statement of the cost and bring it to the ASCS Office and make your application for a loan.

Somebody Did Wrong By Our Julie And Carol

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Julie Andrews and Carol Burnett are two of the brightest, most endearing and talented entertainers in all of show business. As a team, they work beautifully together.

But somebody did them wrong with the material, direction and photography they were given in last night's CBS special, "Julie and Carol at Wearne Hall."

The concept was great: present the girls to an audience in Carnegie Hall and then proceed to have them satirize the usual type of entertainment seen at the venerable New York auditorium.

Thus we had them poking fun at Russian dance groups—these the Naustev Dancers and Swiss family singers, identifiably labeled the "Pratt Family Singers."

This idea was fine, and the music was perfect. But after gay, funny starts, the comedy plummeted to banana-peel level and the funny words just weren't there.

In efforts to show the white-tie audience out front, the cameras repeatedly photographed the stars from most unflattering rear angles. Often the orchestra was so loud one could not hear the words they were singing. And Carol, a brilliant comedienne who needs firm direction and a delicate rein, was allowed to overdo the clowning and mugging in bits that needed a more delicate touch. The show, largely because of the writing and production, was a sharp disappointment.

NBC played a dirty trick on Sunday viewers during its coverage of the $100,000 golf tournament from Upper Montclair, N.J. The announcer built up the suspense around Jack Nicklaus, repeatedly remarking that Nicklaus, a powerful hitter, had a chance to catch up with the front runners on the long 18th hole.

Nicklaus drove onto the green in two spectacular shots—but we didn't see them because NBC chose those dramatic moments to cut away from the match and relegate us with a whole clutch of commercials.

Recommended tonight: "Hitchcock Presents," NBC, 8:30-9 (ET)—Jeremy Slate and Robert Webber in "First Class Honeybees"; "Close-Up, ABC, 10-10:30"—"What's So Funny?" which is a scrutiny of contemporary humor with the help of a number of eminent comedians.

Pat Boone's Fans Will Have To Accept Changes

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Pat Boone fans will simply have to face the fact that their boy has changed.

Not in real life. He is still the same clean-living, clean-thinking lad of yore.

But his movies—that's something else again. Remember the sensation caused when Pat got his first kiss in a movie? Well, you should see him now.

Pat was just back from making "Main Attraction" in Austria and England for four and a half months. The role presents him in a light that his fans have never seen before. "I'll admit I'm worried about their reaction," he said. "But I had to do it. I must do what I think is right for me, regardless of the consequences."

"I've already been hearing from them. They've read that I smoke in the picture, that I have a love affair with an older woman played by Mai Zetterling, and another one with Nancy Kwan."

"They're even complaining about 'State Fair,' which I didn't think was offensive at all. Of course, I got drunk in it and played a love scene with my shirt off with Ann-Margret. But the character I played was still a nice boy.

"I wouldn't mind playing 100 roles as nice boys in Walt Disney pictures; I'd like it, in fact. But there just aren't that many good roles as nice boys. I've been playing Pat Boone in every picture I've done. I've got to give the public something different if I'm going to last."

"Main Attraction" offered him a downbeat role as a drifter who bumps around European circuits going from woman to woman. It had the saving grace of regeneration at the end through the love of a good girl.

"I thought that made it worth it," said Pat.

Downpour Left Many Homeless

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A torrential downpour of rain and hail pounded the resort town of Ixtapan de la Sal over the weekend and left at least 2,000 persons homeless and 35 injured, according to reports reaching here Monday.

Most of the homeless came from a shantytown area where makeshift shacks crumbled under the rain and hail. Ixtapan de la Sal is about 75 miles south of Mexico City.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newscasters

The demand for new homes is reasonably predictable. Housing authorities make periodic forecasts of the public's interest in new houses by taking into account a number of factors, not the least of which is the general economic condition of the country.

Far less predictable is the demand for existing homes. There are various theories on the relationship between the sales of new and old homes, but they do not always stand the test of reality.

It is interesting to note, for example, that the demand for new homes is about the same now as it was last year. Yet the demand for existing homes is on the upswing. According to a survey of realtors around the country, special interest is being shown in older, roomier houses in well-established neighborhoods.

If you were to make a chart on the preferences for old, large houses over the years, it would look like a series of hills and valleys. Every so often the public becomes aware, once again, of the advantages of a spacious house and a neighborhood whose character has remained unchanged for a long period of time.

Space is a valuable commodity when there is a growing family. And a well-established neighborhood makes it improbable that unsatisfactory changes will occur or that new assessments will be made.

The proponents of new houses say that old, large houses mean bigger maintenance costs. They maintain, too, that there are many advantages to newer neighborhoods. People starting out together, facing and solving similar problems, have common bonds which make for a friendlier, more interesting community.

This seeming difference of opinion about the relative merits of new or old houses is actually nothing more than a difference of needs. Choices should be made on the basis of what is best for the family rather than preconceived notions that a new house or an old house is always better.

Fortunately for the sellers of both types of homes, family needs vary enough so that a market always exists for all concerned.

President Plans No Press Meet

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy will not hold a news conference this week. In announcing this Monday White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said the President would have a rather busy schedule this week, including two days of conferences with President Roberto F. Chiari of Panama.

Cool Air Mass Over Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cool air spread into sections of the Midwest today but warm and humid weather clung to broad areas in the South and East.

The flow of cool air into the northern Midwest spread eastward and headed to the Atlantic Coast. Little change in temperatures was indicated in most other parts of the nation.

Thunderstorms and showers broke out across wide fronts from the Rockies to the Atlantic Seaboard Monday and Monday night. Heavy rain and hail fell in some areas. A tornado hit the Teapot Rock area 27 miles north of Casper, Wyo., injuring four persons and causing property damage.

A severe windstorm swept the area of Amesbury, Mass., uprooting trees, knocking out power lines and damaging some 50 automobiles. Observers estimated wind gusts reached 120 m.p.h. and power and telephone service was disrupted in the town of 11,000.

Temperatures dropped into the low 40s along the western shores of Lake Michigan and in northern Lower Michigan. But readings were in the 70s in most of the Southern states and from Massachusetts southward along Atlantic Coast. In the extreme South, 80 degrees or higher prevailed in the Florida Keys, southwestern Texas and in the Southwest desert region.

Deadline Nears On 1963 Wheat

June 30 is the deadline for eligible farmers to apply for new wheat allotments for the 1963 crop year. Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office manager, Livingston Roberts, has reminded.

In issuing his statement, Roberts listed the following eligibility requirements:—a farm owner or operator must not own or operate any other farm in 1963 with a wheat allotment.

—he must derive more than half his income in 1963 from farm sources.

—he must have adequate equipment and facilities for wheat production.

Roberts said acreage for new wheat allotments is "very limited." Applications, he said, must be submitted at the Pitt ASCS office where they will be considered by the ASC county committee.

Considerations of the committee, according to Roberts, include type of soil and topography of the farm as those characteristics relate to successful production of wheat. He said the committee also attempts to determine if wheat production would create an erosion hazard on the farm.

Family Of Nine Refugees Leave

HONG KONG (AP)—A family of nine Chinese refugees left Monday night for Washington, D.C., the largest group so far to be granted entry to the United States under President Kennedy's emergency program.

Chang Sin, 36, his wife, their six daughters and one son will join his mother, Anna Wang in Washington. She is a cook in a restaurant.

The family escaped to Macao four years ago aboard a smuggler motor junk. Another smuggler junk brought them to Hong Kong from the Portuguese colony.

A native of Shanghai, Chang worked for the U.S. Army advisory group in Nanking before the Communists conquered the mainland.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers steady, farm price 13 1/2. Some sales under contracts and agreements up to three fourths of a cent higher. Delivered plant price 14 1/4 to 14 1/2.

NEW YORK (AP) — A declining stock market accompanied by speculative strength in gold mining shares continued to be the pattern early this afternoon. The gold shares are not represented in the Associated Press average of 60 stocks and this indicator was down 1.80 to 218.10 at noon with industrials off 3.00, rails off .30 and utilities off 1.00.

Gold stocks are a refuge in times of a stock downturn. Extra attention was focused on the golds by President Kennedy's conference with business and government leaders on the question of the continuing U.S. gold outflow.

Among other key stocks, losses were mostly fractional, but pervaded most sections of the list. A few declines went to 1 or 2 points. The trend was mostly lower for steels, motors, oils, chemicals, electrical equipments, tobaccos, airlines, electronics and building materials.

Most gold stocks touched new highs. Homestake advanced about 2 points, McIntyre-Porcupine more than a point. AT&T and Du Pont fell more than 2 and Liggett & Myers nearly 2.

The "growth" stocks backed away more sharply, Polaroid losing more than 4 and IBM about 8. Among autos, Ford was down more than a point and General Motors slipped fractionally.

Xerox was another 2-point loser. Among steels, Jones & Laughlin slipped more than a point while the three top steelmakers held their declines to fractions. Oils were unchanged to slightly lower. The same pattern prevailed among rails.

Radio Corp. fell about 2. Sears, Roebuck declined a full point or more. The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 7.95 to 587.22. Prices on the American Stock Exchange were generally lower. Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were fractionally higher.

Complains Union Is Exploiting Women

WASHINGTON (AP)—Blonde and pretty Penny Singleton — Blonde of movie and television fame — bitterly accused paid officials of the American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA) today of conspiring with night club owners to degrade and exploit run-of-the-mine exotic dancers and other entertainers.

Miss Singleton, slim in a white-furred dress and wearing a perky straw hat, told Senate investigators of her own battles for reform in the AFL-CIO union.

The veteran actress charged that lesser lights of the entertainment world, many of them "strippers" and exotic dancers, are required to mingle with customers, hustle drinks, "or worse," as she put it, in order to get and hold a job in many night clubs in big towns.

She called this a blatant violation of the union's rules, and told the Senate Investigations subcommittee.

"The national press and the police records in cities throughout the United States contain records of AGVA members ranging from lewd and indecent public performance to the serious charge of prostitution.

"These facts have been brought to the attention of the national administrative secretary and the officers of AGVA. They know, or should know, of the circumstances which lead to these deplorable conditions. They have taken no steps to remedy or correct the situation.

"Rather, the union officials have permitted operators in the

Bigamist Struck Out In His Court

GASTONIA, N. C. (AP)—"You may be batting 1,000 for the Pittsburgh Pirates, but you just struck out in my court," Superior Court Judge George Patton said Monday to a convicted bigamist who had told his second wife he was a baseball player for Pittsburgh.

The second wife, Sylvia Brakefield Delis of nearby Mount Holly, whom Ronald Dis, 24, married last year, is not a baseball fan. Delis, who really works in a service station, already had a family. He married Doris Miles Delis in 1956. They have two children and she is expecting a third.

The judge gave Delis 2 1/2 years, suspended on payment of a $200 fine and court costs. The first wife said through tears she still loves and would take him back.

Police Report Arrests In May

Police Chief Guy C. Langston, in his monthly report for May reported 136 arrests were made by local officers.

Chief Langston said the arrests were made in the 371 complaints made to the local department and 194 cases known to police during the 31-day period.

Ten arrests were recorded for other authorities during the month and four cases were listed for other law agencies.

Departmental vehicles traveled a total of 18,343 miles while patrolling the city during the month. Included in the distribution of cases for May were 46 arrests involving violations of driving and motor vehicle laws and 48 cases of drunkenness. Five persons were arrested for driving while intoxicated.

In a breakdown of the traffic arrests, speeding accounted for the highest number of arrests, with a total of 12. Nonobservance of traffic lights and signs and improper registration accounted for five arrests each, while four motorists were charged with having improper lights or brakes. Three persons were arrested for reckless driving.

Included in the total arrests were 139 males, including 58 white and 81 Negro. Only 16 females were arrested during the period. Seven were white while nine were Negro.

Firemen Answer 57 Calls During Month Of May

Fifty-seven calls were answered during the month of May by members of the Greenville Fire Department, according to a report by Chief George W. Gardner.

Seven box alarms and 16 telephone calls to fires were received, while 34 rescue calls were answered.

Included in the fires were eight calls to residences, six auto fires and three false alarms. Fire inspections by the Department's Fire Prevention Bureau totaled 258, including 230 in the fire district and 28 in the outlying districts.

Family Ordeal In Boat Mishap

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. (AP)—A weekend boating trip turned into an overnight ordeal for the family of W. G. Gaither Jr. of Elizabeth City.

Gaither, his wife, Frances, and two small daughters, Robin, 8, and Leigh, 5, were out on Albemarle Sound in their 32-foot cabin cruiser, "Playmate," Sunday afternoon when the boat struck a submerged object.

Gaither was thrown to the deck and rolled into the water. By the time he got back aboard, the boat was rapidly sinking. There was only time to get on life jackets before it went down.

Since they had planned to stay overnight at Wachese, across the sound, they were not reported overdue until Monday afternoon. W.G. Gaither Sr. notified the Coast Guard.

Meanwhile, after nearly 24 hours in the water, Gaither had left his family clinging to the wreckage and swam an estimated three miles to shore. He called the Coast Guard from Point Harbor.

Coast Guard helicopters picked up the family. Mrs. Gaither and the girls, although suffering from exposure, appeared in good condition and were taken home. Gaither was admitted to the hospital for treatment of a possible broken collar bone.

Physicians Of Eastern Counties To Meet Here

At least 80 physicians from a dozen Eastern North Carolina counties are scheduled to convene at the Greenville Golf and Country Club Thursday for the annual meeting of the N. C. Medical Society's Second District.

Included on the program is an address by Dr. William J. Peete of the Duke University School of Medicine's department of surgery.

Dr. Peete's address—scheduled to highlight the doctor's evening scientific program—will "allow an appearance by president of the state medical organization, Dr. John R. Kernodle of Burlington.

A social hour is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. with a dinner following at 7:30. Following the dinner, Dr. Peete's discussion is set.

Greenville's Dr. S. L. Bartlett is president of the Second District and Dr. J. E. Clement of Greenville is secretary. Dr. Clement said about 80 of the 200 doctors in the district organization have confirmed their attendance.

Dr. Lynwood E. Williams of Kinston and Dr. Ernest W. Larkins of Washington are district counselors.

The eight local medical societies included in the Second District are Pitt, Pamlico, Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Hyde, Lenoir-Greene-Jones and Martin-Washington-Tyrrell.

Four People Die In Car Collision Near Bolivia

BOLIVIA, N. C. (AP)—Three men students at Campbell College, Bales Creek, N.C., and the wife of a Marine lieutenant were killed last night in the collision of two automobiles on U.S. 17 near here. The lieutenant was seriously injured.

The military couple was Mrs. Mary Joe Hutzler, 23, and 1st Lt. Karl H. Hutzler, 26, of Long Island, N.Y. Hutzler was taken to James Walker Memorial Hospital at Wilmington, 20 miles north of the wreck scene.
