

Holiday Mood For Mexico City Awaiting Kennedy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico City took on a holiday mood today to greet President Kennedy at the start of a three-day visit aimed at shoring up the good neighbor policy.

Hundreds of thousands of Mexicans massed to pay tribute to the chief executive in the midst of the burgeoning cold war over Latin America.

Officials estimated more than a million spectators in this city of five million were trudging to points of vantage along the parade route from the airport to President Adolfo Lopez Mateos' official residence.

Portraits of Presidents Kennedy and Lopez Mateos, framed in gold and ready to be lighted at night, decorated the end of the route.

Accompanied by Mrs. Kennedy, the chief executive took off at 8:48 a.m. from Andrews Air Force Base, Md., after a helicopter flight from the White House.

The flight takes about four hours.

Kennedy went to the airfield direct from a White House conference with Secretary of State Dean Rusk, back only Thursday night from a fence-building tour of Europe.

The President and Rusk were still in animated conversation as they left the White House. Rusk made the helicopter flight to the airport to see the Kennedys off, but did not fly south.

Mexicans planned, a gigantic welcome. Schools were closing, government employees were being released and union members were instructed to turn out for the arrival at 11 a.m. Mexican time (1 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time).

Officials at Mexico City predicted one million persons would line the roads and pack the downtown streets and squares to cheer the motorcade bearing the Kennedys and Mexican President and Mrs. Adolfo Lopez Mateos. The officials also confidently forecast anti-U.S. elements would cause no trouble.

Some protests by placard were considered inevitable, but signs of friendship prevailed throughout the city in streamers and posters on building fronts.

President and Mrs. Lopez Mateos headed the welcoming party for a salute at the airport preceding the drive through the city to Los Pinos, official residence of the Mexican leader.

To get the visit off to a rousing start, 55 minutes were allowed for the procession along the route of less than 15 miles. That offered time for as many home folk as possible to glimpse the visiting chief executive and his wife.

They will appear and speak

Saturday at a housing project south of the city and later mingle with the U.S. colony at an advanced Fourth of July celebration in a big park north of the city. Before leaving on Sunday the first couple will attend Mass at Mexico's most famous shrine, the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe, where thousands are expected to assemble.

Kennedy confers twice with Lopez Mateos today, before receiving the keys to the city and attending a ballet with Mrs. Kennedy and Mexico's first family at the Palace of Fine Arts.

Only 3½ hours have been set aside through the 48-hour visit for private conversations between the chief executives, suggesting that their problems — while acute as between neighbors — are not as momentous as among great powers on other sides of the oceans.

As a demonstration of the U.S.-Mexican relationship, the World Bank, foreign aid agency and private banks have extended Mexico almost $300 million in credits over the last week. And Thursday the United States agreed to lend Mexico $20 million under the Alliance for Progress program.

As an indication of Kennedy's main purpose, the talks between the two leaders are expected to cover relationships among all nations of the hemisphere.

Watchful Waiting On Airport

Pitt-Greenville Officials Mark Time As Petitions, Applications Processed

Pitt-Greenville officials were maintaining an attitude of watchful-waiting today as its petitions and applications concerning a regional airport moved through federal channels.

The local officials have been notified by the Federal Aviation Authority that its application for matching funds has been directed to the FAA regional headquarters in Atlanta for processing.

The petition with the CAB calling for an air service investigation will probably not be acted on until after July 6. The CAB has notified other towns in this area that they have until that date to file answers to the Pitt-Greenville petition.

The petition includes a letter from Gov. Sanford endorsing the petition for an area airport investigation.

Yesterday the governor was asked at his press conference if he favored any specific location for a regional airport and he replied that he did not.

"That is a decision that can only be reached by the appropriate federal agencies," he commented.

This, however, is only what the governor said in his letter which was directed to CAB Chairman Alan S. Boyd. It discussed the "establishing of a regional airport centrally located in Eastern North Carolina."

Thus this was not interpreted here as indicating any change in the governor's thinking on the matter.

It was reported that the governor met again with Rocky Mount officials following the press conference.

Meanwhile the Rocky Mount Evening-Telegram reported that Gov. Sanford was to attend a dinner in Rocky Mount this evening. The paper said Jim Bufaloe and Leon Mosley would be co-hosts at the session which was termed a "friendly get-together." Some 800 persons were expected to attend the dinner to be held at Mosley's campsite just off the U.S. 301 by-pass.

Congressmen Harold D. Cooley and L. H. Fountain were expected to attend, along with state officials from Raleigh and leaders from a number of nearby areas.

Lots Of Mail To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court had a good idea Thursday what happens when hundreds of persons decide to write to Washington.

Hundreds of letters and stacks of telegrams have poured into the court building since Justice Hugo Black announced last Monday the decision barring use of official prayers in public schools.

The actual number of messages received could not be learned. But the outpouring from all corners of the country, was reported to be the largest in the tribunal's history.

Under court custom, contents of the messages remained a secret. Supreme Court justices, unlike their neighboring members of Congress, rarely answer fan mail.

Rusk Reports On Tour Of Europe; Saw Some Success

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk reported to President Kennedy today on his 10-day visit to five European capitals and said he found the President very pleased with the results of the trip.

Rusk is understood to have informed Kennedy that his mission succeeded in clearing up some Allied misunderstandings although serious difficulties and divisions continue within the ranks of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Rusk returned Thursday night and went to the White House early this morning.

After the White House talk he flew with Kennedy by helicopter to Andrews Air Force Base for the takeoff of the President and Mrs. Kennedy on their weekend trip to Mexico.

The two officials were still in brisk conversation as they made their way from the White House door to the helicopter on the lawn, and the flight itself gave them another 10 minutes before the goodby handshake at planeside.

Questioned about the 40-minute conference, Rusk told newsmen: "I gave him a full fill-in on the visit to each capital this morning. We're both very pleased with the results of the trip."

Rusk reportedly brought back a promise of French leaders to discuss at some future date the possibility of coordinating France's nuclear weapons strategy, including potential targets of attack, with that of the United States and Britain.

In turn, he is understood to have made clear to President Charles de Gaulle that the United States understands France's determination to go ahead with development of a nuclear striking force, even though Washington is opposed to the creation of such a national nuclear capability.

The last of the capitals Rusk visited was Lisbon, where Thursday he conferred for almost two hours with Premier Antonio Oliveira Salazar. Their principal topic is understood to have been the United States' desire to renew a lease on naval and air bases in Portugal's Azores Islands.

Press dispatches said Rusk was unsmiling when he left the conference with Salazar. These reports tended to bear out expectations here that the United States faces grave difficulties in arranging for continued use of the bases. Salazar had been extremely displeased with American policy toward Portugal's colonial possessions.

Diplomatic reports which preceded Rusk here described him as being convinced after his talks with European leaders that efforts to settle outstanding NATO problems must await a final decision on Britain's application for membership in the European Common Market.

Negotiations on the British role in the market are now under way and presently dominate allied politics in Europe. The United States strongly supports British membership as a move that should lead to greater political integration of the Western European allies.

On another point about which there has been some misunderstanding in Europe, according to U.S. officials, Rusk emphasized that Washington favors the closest possible link between France and West Germany within the Atlantic alliance. It does not seek to weaken or destroy French-German ties in any respect, he said.

Probably the most serious of the long-range problems which occupied him during his tour was the eventual development of some kind of new nuclear weapon partnership among the United States, Britain and France and provide a role for West Germany.

French leaders are understood to have told Rusk that French developments in the nuclear field have not yet reached the point where discussions in this field are practical; in summary, France is not yet a nuclear military power. When it has reached that position, French leaders have promised, France will be willing to talk about coordinating strategy. Thus while Rusk's discussion cleared the air somewhat on this issue, the basic problem of the nuclear future of the North Atlantic alliance remained.

Rusk's trip took him also to Bonn, the capital of West Germany, and to Berlin, as well as to Rome and London.

Kennedy Trade Bill Sees Approval In House Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy and his legislative leaders have scored a House victory with passage of the trade expansion bill. Now they're mapping Senate strategy to hold the ground gained.

The far-reaching bill, dynamo of Kennedy's drive to keep the dollar strong and weld a close economic partnership with Western Europe, was passed late Thursday by the House 298 to 125. The hard-pressed Democratic leaders had won a preliminary victory on a 253-171 tally rejecting a Republican-offered substitute which had been calculated to have maximum appeal.

There was a substantial bipartisan element in both votes, since trade legislation divides Congress on economic as well as party lines.

If the Senate agrees to it, the bill will replace the present trade law, expiring Saturday midnight. And, for the first time in the 78-year history of reciprocal trade legislation, there would be provision for keeping tariff cuts in effect even when individual businesses and their employees are hurt by imports. Loans, tax concessions and technical aid would be available to the firms hurt; adjustment payments during re-training to the workers.

The President would have authority to cut tariffs as much as 50 per cent. In dealings with the European Common Market on goods where the market countries and the United States provide the bulk of world exports, the duties could be cut to zero. They could be eliminated also in other special cases, such as non-competitive tropical products.

Kennedy, who had put the bill at the top of his legislative priority list, expressed gratification at the House action. He said it "reflects the national character of his legislation as well as its importance."

In a statement dictated to newsmen by Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, the President said he looks forward to early and successful consideration of the measure by the Senate.

"This matter serves the great national interest of the country," Kennedy said.

The bill is open to amendment in the Senate and several senators are expected to offer provisions to lessen injury to domestic industries. Observers predicted, however, that the bill will emerge much to the President's liking.

It stops first at the Senate Finance Committee. One member, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., predicted gentle treatment, but the chairman, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., said he is reserving judgment on the measure. He said the committee will have to have four or five weeks of hearings on the bill.

Administration leaders know they will face in the Senate efforts to make all the major changes in the legislation which were blocked in the House — and maybe more. These were considered certain to include efforts to eliminate the trade adjustment aid provisions, or at least to cut down the scale of payments to workers, which are higher than ordinary unemployment payments.

Sweden Pays Off Its Debt To U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The kingdom of Sweden Thursday paid in full its last remaining debt to the United States government. The payment was made 21 years ahead of schedule.

The Treasury announced that it received from Sweden a payment of $16,217,506.85, which liquidated loans advanced under the post-war Marshall Plan for European reconstruction and recovery.

The payment included $197,506.85 interest. Under the loan agreement Sweden did not have to pay off the debt in full until Dec. 31, 1983.

Greenville's Civitan Club Officers Are Installed

James E. Rodgers, Junius H. Rose High School's band instructor, was installed Thursday night as 1962-63 president of the Greenville Civitan Club in the club's annual officers' installation ceremony.

Rodgers, elected along with five other officers in May, formally assumed his one-year term in ceremonies conducted by Dr. George Douglas, member of the local club who has recently been elected Civitan Zone 14 governor for this Civitan year.

The new president succeeds Herbert Wilkerson who outlined the club's activities for the past year in a farewell address that included a list of recommendations for club improvements. Two of the officers installed last night—Vice President Joe Dudley and Treasurer Warren Whitehurst—were re-elected to their respective jobs.

Other officers installed included Secretary Norman Hopkins and board of directors members Bud Phillips, Gilbert Hopkins, C. T. Fleming and Leon Singleton.

Wilkerson announced that Dr. Douglas had been installed as zone governor and that another local Civitan, Dr. Kenneth Quiggins, had been honored as Civitan of the Year in Zone 14.

15-Year-Old Is Shotgun Victim

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

BETHEL — A 15-year-old boy was killed near here last night, the victim of a shotgun blast leveled at his head by his 17-year-old brother.

Vincent Westley Cherry, Negro, Route 1, Bethel, was the victim of the 9:35 p.m. shooting. Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey reported. His brother, Julius, Ronald, has been charged with manslaughter in the case.

Coroner Harvey quoted Julius as saying he and Vincent were watching television. They began playing with each other and chasing one another around the house. Vincent, he continued, returned to his seat in front of the TV.

Investigators said Julius then entered the room and picked up a shotgun which had been standing in a corner. Saying, "You look just like a rabbit . . . this is the way I shoot rabbits," Julius allegedly leveled the .12 gauge weapon at his brother and pulled the trigger.

The blast from the gun, which the youth said he thought was unloaded, tore into the left side of his brother's head, apparently killing the lad instantly.

Two sisters, one six and the second 13, were in the kitchen of the dwelling at the time, while the boys' father, Julius, was in the front yard. Their mother was away at work.

Pitt Sheriff Duke Andrews said the elder Cherry, hearing the blast, entered the home, then with the aid of Julius, placed Vincent in the rear of a pickup truck and proceeded toward the Bethel Clinic.

A short distance from the medical facility the vehicle crashed into the rear of a 1962 model car, causing heavy damage to the truck and an estimated $1,000 damage to the auto. Following the crash, a third vehicle pushed the disabled truck to its destination, but doctors pronounced Vincent dead on arrival.

Driver of the car involved in the crash was identified by officers as Major Manning of near Bethel.

Julius waived a preliminary hearing on the manslaughter charges this morning and will be bound over for trial in Pitt County Superior Court.

83-Year-Old Fought Off Four Attackers

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An agile, 83-year-old former gold prospector in the Klondike, Tony Lunsford, fought off attackers with a pistol at his mountain cabin 15 miles west of here Thursday night.

Two men later turned up wounded at hospitals, and two others were arrested and charged with armed robbery.

The attackers got no money and didn't get a chance to shoot. Lunsford, who said he always carried a pistol in his pocket when he answers a knock at his door, suffered only a bruise over one eye. Lunsford, a bachelor and a retired farmer, lives alone in the Leicester section.

Marvin L. Harris, 50, of Asheville, who was first admitted to Crowell Hospital in Lincolnton early today with a stomach wound, was transferred to a hospital in Rutherford.

Charles Henry Rhineheart, 21, of Maiden, was admitted to Gamble hospital in Lincolnton with a gunshot wound in the groin.

Arrested in Maiden early today were Donald Harris, 18, of Asheville, son of Marvin Harris, and Alvin Searcy, 26, of Maiden. They were taken to jail in Asheville, where they were charged with armed robbery and held in bond of $10,000 each.

A hearing date for them has not been set.

The wounded men said at the hospitals in Lincolnton that they had been shot in a poker game. A police alert had been out for a 1950 or 1951 black Ford car. A car answering the description was found in front of Searcy's home on North First Street in Maiden. Police said it belonged to the elder Harris, and had bloodstains on the front seat. They also said a rifle was found in it.

Donald Harris was first arrested in Maiden. He told police that his father had come and got him out of bed in Asheville Thursday night, told him he and another man had been shot in a poker game, and wanted him to drive them to Lincolnton.

At the Lunsford home after the shooting police had found a pistol belonging to the attackers, and a blue service station cap.

Searcy, a dark-haired, good-looking man, manages a service station in Maiden. Police went to his home and showed him the cap. He denied he was implicated, and said he was at his father's home in Spindale at the time of the attack. He was quoted as saying later that he had gone to Spindale with one of the Harrises and Rhineheart Thursday, and got a ride back to Maiden.

After further questioning, he admitted at about 3:45 a.m. today that he had been at the scene of the attack. He said he was drunk in the back seat of the car and couldn't remember much of what happened. He said he went into the house, but when the shooting started he ran into another room and hid out a window.

Searcy expressed concern for the old prospector. "Is the old fellow hurt?" he asked. Search is a diabetic and on the way back to Asheville he went into a diabetic coma. He was taken to Memorial Mission hospital, where he was revived after being given orange juice to bring up his blood sugar.

Searcy is a distant relation of the Harrises. He said that on the way to Leicester they had bought two pints of liquor in Newton.

The younger Harris, a slim blond, said "Daddy, Charles Rhineheart and I were down in Maiden earlier today. They took me back to Asheville to my house" about 7:30 p.m. He said that later his father and Rhineheart made him drive them to Lincolnton.

Advise Longer Business Hours

AYDEN — The Executive Board of the Ayden Chamber of Commerce recommended this week that Ayden stores which usually close at 7 p.m. extend their closing time to 9 p.m. on Saturdays during the tobacco harvesting season.

The board took the action at a special meeting. Weekday hours will remain unchanged, it was announced.

Local stores will be closed on July 4.

WILL BUY BONDS

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea will buy $400,000 worth of the United Nations bond issue, $20,000 more than it was asked to purchase, the Cabinet announced today.

here and face an uncertain future in France. But confronted with the prospect of living in a Moslem state, they chose what to them was the lesser of two evils — exodus.

Of Constantine's 300,000 inhabitants a year ago, more than 40,000 were Europeans and 20,000 of these were Jews. Constantine always was the most Moslem of Algeria's big cities, and its European population included by far the highest proportion of Jews.

French officials estimate that less than 8,000 Europeans are left. Of these, less than 1,000 are Jews. Ten of the city's 12 synagogues are closed and the other two may close soon. For the first time in three centuries, Constantine's ghetto is becoming a Moslem quarter.

On a vacant lot nearby, Arab traders have set up an improvised furniture market. Beds, refrigerators, children's cots and toys are scattered in the dust. They were the household belongings of Jewish families who sold everything in a hurry at laughable prices.

Nearly all of them were born

There were no takers except the Arab traders, and the refugees had to take what they could get. A Jewish factory owner stood on Place Negrier, unshaven and haggard.

"No, I'm not leaving," he said. "I can't wrap my factory into a bundle and take it away with me. And no one here would know how to run it, let alone buy it. So what can I do but stay?"

He spread his hands in a gesture of helpless despair.

"Things have always been as bad as they could possibly be for us Jews," he said. "It will be like that here. The Moslems hate us because we consider ourselves Frenchmen rather than Algerians."

A Catholic priest came to the airport to bid farewell to a group of his young parishioners. He had tears in his eyes as he chatted with them, probably for the last time.

Charles F. Gold Dies During Night

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Charles F. Gold, insurance commissioner of North Carolina since 1933, died Thursday night at his home here after a lengthy illness.

Gold, who was 50, had shown improvement earlier this week, a spokesman for the family said. However, he lapsed into a coma Thursday night and died a short time later. The nature of the illness was not disclosed, except that it was a respiratory ailment. He underwent a major operation several months ago.

Gov. Terry Sanford, informed of Gold's death, said the state had lost "an outstanding public leader and servant."

Gold became insurance commissioner in 1953 when the late Gov. William Umstead named him to fill an unexpired term. The post was an elective one, but he was never seriously challenged in either a short-term election in 1954, or in elections for full four-year terms in 1956 and 1960.

Before his appointment in 1953, he had a successful political record. After being graduated from Davidson College and the University of North Carolina Law School he became solicitor of the Rutherford County Recorder's Court in 1939, and was elevated to judge of the court in 1941.

When he was discharged in 1943, he became secretary of Rep. A. L. Bulwinkle, a job he held until 1950. The next year he was elected to the State Senate from the 27th district. From 1941-46 he was national committeeman of Young Democratic clubs in North Carolina.

Gold was a native of Ellenboro. His wife, the former Ernestine Bailey, survives. Also surviving are two daughters, Patsy and Elizabeth.

He was a member of the board of trustees of Western Carolina College.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday in St. Francis Episcopal Church in Rutherfordton. The rector, the Rev. William Edwards, will officiate.

Gov. Sanford issued a statement saying, "As commissioner of insurance, Charlie Gold constantly put the public interest first. The citizens of North Carolina returned that faith by demonstrating their overwhelming confidence in him in 1956 and again in 1960."

The governor ordered state flags flown at half mast today.

N.C. Secondary Roads Benefit From Allocation

RALEIGH (AP) — Highway surplus funds totaling over $1.7 million have gone for specific secondary road projects over the past seven months.

As the allocations were revealed Thursday, both Gov. Sanford and Secondary Roads Director Ben Roney disclaimed any intention of keeping them out of the news.

Sanford said he was unaware of any policy under which the governor's office announces secondary road allocations. "It has been general practice for the governor to announce allocations from highway surplus funds."

Roney said he hadn't felt the individual projects as they were allocated were large enough to have news value. "We had nothing to hide," he assured.

Algeria's Third Largest City Dying As Europeans Move Out

CONSTANTINE, Algeria (AP) — "This city is dying," the young Moslem Nationalist official said sadly. "We did not want our independence to come like this."

He pointed to a group of half-finished, 16-story apartment buildings overlooking Algeria's third largest city. All construction was halted weeks ago, and the Moslem workers are lounging unemployed at the street corners. Their tools are rusting on the abandoned building sites.

The secret army terrorists never got much of a foothold in Constantine. Yet throughout the European and Jewish quarters of the city, stores are closed and locked, apartments shuttered, the streets silent.

Most of the Europeans who remain are either planning to leave or face the future with fear. Every day as many as 10 special planes leave for France, all seats occupied by European refugees clutching their most precious belongings.

There were no takers except the Arab traders, and the refugees had to take what they could get. A Jewish factory owner stood on Place Negrier, unshaven and haggard.

"No, I'm not leaving," he said. "I can't wrap my factory into a bundle and take it away with me. And no one here would know how to run it, let alone buy it. So what can I do but stay?"

Halibut Platter Makes Summer Meal

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Acquaint yourself with the summer-style charm of fresh halibut, now in season, if you want a wonderfully convenient menu.

Poach halibut steaks, cook frozen mixed vegetables and refrigerate both. When you are ready to serve, arrange the fish on a platter; add the drained vegetables mixed with mayonnaise and spooned into lettuce cups. Mix up a quick extra sauce of sour cream and cucumbers. Add bread sticks or crusty rolls, fruit and cookies, and you'll have a great easy meal.

We like to do the preparation on Friday for Saturday lunch, or on Saturday morning to serve that evening for a cool supper. Try it!

POACHED HALIBUT, SUMMER STYLE

- 1 quart water
- 1 medium onion (sliced)
- 1 stalk celery (sliced)
- 1 carrot (sliced)
- 2 cloves garlic (bruised)
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon peppercorns

- 1 slice lemon
- 2 pounds halibut steaks
- Cucumber Sauce

Pour water into a large skillet or Dutch oven and add onion, celery, carrot, garlic, bay leaf, salt, peppercorns and lemon; bring to a boil and boil three minutes. Add halibut in one layer. Add more water, if necessary, to barely cover fish. Return to boil; then reduce heat, cover and simmer 5 to 8 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. With a pancake turner, carefully lift fish out of liquid; remove skin and place in a shallow dish. Strain cooking liquid; pour over fish, cover tightly and chill 3 hours or overnight. Remove fish from liquid and drain. Serve with Cucumber Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Cucumber Sauce: Shortly before serving cold poached halibut, mix together 1 cup commercial sour cream, 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish, 1/2 cup (or more) peeled minced cucumber, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped chives. Makes 1 1/2 cups sauce. Choose a thin firm cucumber with small seeds for this good sauce.

Brides-Elect Feted At Country Breakfast

Miss Grayson Waldrop, bride-elect, was entertained at a Country Breakfast yesterday morning at 9:30 in the back yard of the Lyman Ormond home on Fifth Street.

Hostesses were Mrs. Lyman Ormond Jr., Mrs. Paul Reinartz and Mrs. Lyman Ormond Sr.

Also honored were brides-elect Miss Nancy Brown and Miss Ray Lane. The brides were given corsages of various shades of pink roses which was in keeping with the color motif.

The first course, mellow balls, was served from the birdbath, after which guests served themselves from a buffet table. The centerpiece on the appointed table was pink garden flowers. Guests were seated at auxiliary tables on the lawn, which were overlaid with pink cloths and centerpieces of pink geraniums. After breakfast a bridal game was played with Miss Nancy Brown winning the prize, a begonia.

The brides-elect were remembered with gifts from the hostesses.

Debate Cropped

BONN, Germany—(WNS)—The Bundestag, West Germany's parliament, discussed for one hour a Socialist proposal to shorten the workday of apprentice barbers. Then Representative Duerr of the Free Democratic Party remarked, "At the rate men are losing their hair, this question should take care of itself within the next 200 years." The measure was defeated.

"It was the ugliest place I had ever seen," commented Miss Mary Hemphill Greene about her first ride up the hill along Fifth St. to the college in the summer of 1928.

"No paved walks, no paved roads, no lawn, little shrubbery—pretty barren."

With refreshing openness, Miss Greene, head of the News Bureau at East Carolina College and instructor in English, described the growth that she has seen since that first ride up Fifth St. Miss Greene has been teaching at the college 34 years—longer than any teacher there at the present.

Playwright Influences Future
How this Abbeville, S. C. native became involved in the history-making growth of East Carolina from a small girls' college to its present state involves a coincidence.

After graduating from Agnes Scott in Georgia with a B. A. degree, Miss Greene went to Columbia University to get a M. A. degree. In between degrees she taught briefly in South Carolina.

She placed her credentials with the placement division of Columbia and Dr. Leon Meadows, head of the English Department at East Carolina at that time, who was studying at Columbia for his doctorate, called her in for an interview. During the interview with Dr. Meadows, Hatcher Hughs, a North Carolina playwright, Columbia professor, and friend of Dr. Meadows, came in. Miss Greene gives some credit for the fact that Dr. Meadows hired her to her acquaintance-ship with Hughs through his niece.

At the time Miss Greene came to the college, a two-year normal course for girls was offered. Miss Greene taught various English courses under Dr. Robert H. Wright, president of the college from 1909 until 1934. Among the faculty members who were at the college when she came are Mamie E. Jenkins; Moriah Graham; Kate Lewis, only living member of the original faculty; and Sallie Joyner Davis.

Until 1945 Miss Greene taught English full time. When Lois Grigsby left the News Bureau, Dr. Howard J. McGinnis, acting president of the college, asked if Miss Greene would try it.

"I was young and didn't mind trying," Miss Greene said with a laugh. Miss Greene traces her interest in working with the news service to her family's close association with newspapers. Her grandfather, mother, and father, were all editors of newspapers. Several aunts worked on her grandfather's paper and a great uncle edited some of the leading southern newspapers, including the Charleston, S. C. News and Courier and the Charlotte Observer.

Early Problems
One broken typewriter, a desk, and a student helper comprised the personnel and equipment that were allotted to Miss Greene for publicizing the college activities in 1945.

There were a number of problems in her early days with the news bureau.

"I had the worst time with the sports writers who would call up to ask about the games. Some of the games I didn't see. If I had gone to the game, I didn't know enough about sports to describe it."

Miss Greene also recalled the time when she was the only one who could take pictures for the bureau. There was hardly time for anything except running around and taking pictures.

"I have never learned to operate the new cameras we have now," she said with a sly gleam.

While Miss Greene continues to do almost all of the writing issued from the News Bureau, she now has two full-time stenographers, three student helpers and a student photographer to assist her. Files on the students and faculty in addition to a subject-matter file, a chronological file and a file of news clippings are a big help in keeping up with what is happening at the college.

The News Bureau's main purpose as described by Miss Greene is "trying through news releases to let those who support the college know what we are doing in the education of the people of North Carolina."

"One of the chief aims is to keep the hometown newspapers informed of activities of worthwhile nature of students on campus. We send news to all dailies, some non-dailies, radio and television stations in North Carolina, and to selected out-of-state papers."

The bureau also maintains contact with professional publications and alumnae bulletins.

She Likes To Teach

In addition to heading the work of the News Bureau, Miss Greene teaches a course in American literature or Shakespeare each quarter.

"I like to teach," Miss Greene stated simply and firmly. Through her teaching Miss Greene wants to help students improve themselves and to arouse interest in literature for its intellectual and artistic merit. She enjoys her association with the students, although her two jobs prevent this association from being as close as she would like it.

"I am expecting grandchildren (of former students) before long," Miss Greene said. She is no longer surprised when children of her former students appear in her classes.

Greenville is full of prominent men and women who were once students of Miss Greene. Several of her former students are now members of the college board of trustees.

Has Varied Interests

If there is a key to understanding how Miss Greene maintains such a zestful outlook, it lies in the variety of her interests. The owner of a home at 107 N. Woodlawn Ave., she likes gardening and has done considerable work on her yard. Miss Greene predicted that, considering her limited time, she will have a pretty yard in another 20-30 years.

Labeling herself as a back-window bird watcher, Miss Greene said that she keeps bird feeders all around her yard. She is a member of the North Carolina Bird Club. She spends a great deal of time reading material that is helpful in teaching, but also likes detective stories.

Playing bridge with the Faculty Duplicate Club is another of Miss Greene's interests.

"I play bridge a good deal—and sometimes I win," she said. Making a similar comment about her enjoyment of cooking, Miss Greene said that she is a great recipe-cutter—and "sometimes I try them."

When vacations come, Miss Greene returns to Abbeville, S. C. to visit with her family, a brother, William Pickney Greene Jr., who lives in the old home place which is over 100 years old. Her brother is a lawyer and has two children, William P. Greene III and Mrs. T. A. DuBose of Sumpter, S. C.

There was a definite twinkle in her eye when she said, "I'm not old enough to retire."

WOTM Chapter Installs Officers

New officers of Chapter 1308, Greenville Women of the Moose, were installed last night in the auditorium of the Moose Temple.

Ruby Presser will serve in the coming year as Senior Regent; Joann Proctor as Junior Regent; Donna Tabar as Chaplain; Ruth Sutton, Treasurer; Earline Coghill, Recorder; Margaret Cannon, Guide; Carolyn Morton, Assistant Guide; Peggy Sawyer, as Argus; Betty Flake as Sentinel; and Etta Bloom as Pianist for the Chapter. Outgoing Senior Regent Rachel Hobgood automatically moved into the Junior Graduate Regent's chair.

The installation was conducted by four members of the College of Regents, with Bonnie Singleton as Installation Chairman; others taking part were Lore Cox, Josephine Dees and Lillie Briley.

Mrs. Presser, who advanced from the office of Junior Regent, briefly addressed co-workers and friends, and expressed the hope the new year would be as successful as the closing year. "As each of us knows," she said, "there is no chapter which is a successful one without each and every member contributing her part." She promised her own best efforts for the year ahead.

The new Senior Regent announced her choice of committee chairmen as follows: Inez Wilson, Mooseheart; Dot Nichols, Library; Myrtle Roberson, Publicity; Dot Anderson, Social Service; Ellen Cox, Hospital; Louise Brocato, Moosehaven; Josephine Bynum, Membership; Irene Hart, Academy of Friendship; Love Cox, College of Regents; Peggy Jamieson, Child Care.

Outgoing Senior Regent Rachel Hobgood expressed her appreciation to the membership and officers for making the past year an outstanding one for the chapter. The year included admission of three members into the College of Regents, again claiming the N. C. Queen of Sponsors, and a chapter member serving as Deputy Grand Regent.

College of Regents pins were presented to Love Cox and Josephine Dees; and Robert Johnston presented the Graduate Regent pin for his mother, Emily Johnston, who was unable to be present.

A scrapbook depicting chapter activities of the past year was presented to the new Junior Graduate Regent Rachel Hobgood, as was a gift from the chapter.

Junior Governor Merrill Bynum spoke for the Greenville Moose Lodge in promising full cooperation of the Lodge in the year ahead and thanked outgoing officers for their notable services in the past year.

Refreshments were served at the close of the installation.

Vocal numbers included in the ceremony were sung by Elbert Bennett, accompanied by Brenda Thigpen.

Church Music Workshop Ends

A Church Music Workshop held at East Carolina College this week, June 25-30, brought to the campus for a full program of study and activity a group of 29 musicians and others interested in various aspects of church music.

Dr. Carl T. Hjortsvang, Associate Professor in the Department of Music and Director of the Chapel Choir, organized and directed the workshop. The week's program focused attention on work in organ, piano, conducting, vocal solo and choral techniques, and the adult and children's choir.

Linden J. Lundstrom of Rockford, Illinois, specialist in the children's choir, acted as visiting instructor. A demonstration choir of local young people participated in his classes.

Dr. Clarence Dickinson of New York City, noted organist and formerly Director of the School of Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary, acted as consultant and on June 26 gave a recital of organ music in the Austin auditorium.

The workshop is the second to be presented at the college to meet the needs of those interested in music in the church.

Pitt County residents attending the workshop included: Rev. William H. Clifton, Greenville; Mrs. Troy T. Cox, Winterville; Mrs. W. A. Pollard, Farmville; Mrs. Bernice B. Turnage, Farmville; Hubert E. Walters, Greenville; Mrs. Henrietta M. Williamson, Farmville.

Newly United Lutheran Group Charting Course

DETROIT (AP)—A newly united denomination, the Lutheran Church in America, today began charting its course ahead, with one of the most influential leaders in world Protestantism at the helm.

The Rev. Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, of New York, was elected president of the new church, shortly after it was formed through the largest consolidation of Lutherans ever achieved on this continent.

Delegates gave him a minute-long, standing ovation.

In a brief response, he voiced hope that "we will manifest the unity for which this church was founded, and that we may do so with an abandon of devotion."

The church joins four separate bodies, with a total of 3,186,310 members. It dissolves old national lines of division dating back to colonial America.

Acclaim for the merger came from public officials and Christian notables in this country and abroad. President Kennedy, in a message, hailed it as "great historical importance."

"It will bring unity without losing the richness of the diverse background of each church," he said.

Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker, of Canada, also applauded the step, and Michigan's Gov. John B. Swainson said: "From this merger will come great good. It will mean the opportunity of greater service to God and man."

Dr. Fry, 61 said that despite "all the hesitations that are present and real," he accepted the office, "God helping me."

For 18 years, he has headed the 2,495,763-member United Lutheran Church, of German background. It is by far the largest of the four bodies merged into the new denomination.

Dr. Lundegren, who has headed the next largest body, the 629,547-member Augustana Lutheran Church, of Swedish origins, was elected secretary of the new denomination, after losing out for the presidency.

The other bodies involved in the merger are the smaller 36,000-member Finnish Evangelical Lutheran Church, and the 25,000-member American Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Danish roots.

No Surprise In Being Denounced

It shouldn't be surprising to Greenville citizens that spokesman in Rocky Mount, Kinston and perhaps other neighboring cities have denounced Greenville's petition to the Civil Aeronautics Board for a regional airport investigation in Eastern North Carolina.

From Rocky Mount has come the accusation that Greenville is trying "to block air service" in Eastern North Carolina. From the Kinston Daily Free Press has come the assertion that Greenville is merely "muddying the waters" of air service in this section of the state and it should desist.

Somehow they have apparently overlooked the fact that the CAB's Bureau of Economic Regulation favors the start of such an investigation, and that fact that the CAB has asserted that it has not ruled out the possibility of such an investigation.

What apparently galls the spokesmen for these two cities is that the Federal Aeronautics Agency has said it will await a CAB decision on the new investigation before allocating federal funds for airport construction in Eastern North Carolina. In the case of Rocky Mount there is the matter of $562,000 in federal funds for which that city has applied for use in constructing a new airport. In the case of Kinston, there is an application before the FAA for $50,000 in federal funds with which to do repair work on the field of what was formerly Stallings Air Base.

The proposed investigation will in no way affect the air service that has been allotted and is now in operation in this section. Unless, of course, the investigation indicates that a regional air facility should be designated and service re-routed to that particular point. While the investigation is underway, the present air service would continue at Kinston, Rocky Mount and Goldsboro.

Certainly an investigation such as that asked for by Greenville and favored by the CAB's Bureau of Economic Regulation will in no way "block air service" or "muddy the waters" so far as this part of the state is concerned. Such an investigation would provide clarification by the CAB's own agency as to the soundness of a regional facility approach to air service in this section of the state.

If, however, other communities of the area fear that the findings of such an investigation will not support the positions they have taken, then there is perhaps an additional reason for them to hurl uncomplimentary epithets at Greenville. They have air service now in their own communities and obviously they are not interested in seeing it shifted to a new location not of their own choosing.

If they are successful in their efforts to prevent such an investigation, then they need not fear what findings might be revealed by it.

The request for the investigation is sound and should be pursued by the Civil Aeronautics Board as endorsed by its Bureau of Economic Regulation. The FAA has likewise taken a sound position in delaying allocation of construction funds for this area until a decision is made on the investigation.

Soblen Shouldn't Be Allowed To Get Away

The United States should spare no effort in seeking the return of convicted spy Dr. Robert A. Soblen who jumped bail and fled the country the day before he was to have begun serving a life sentence for his crimes.

Dr. Soblen is now under arrest in Israel where he was taken into custody by police on charges of entering the country with false papers.

The fact that Dr. Soblen is a sick man, suffering from leukemia, should not cause officials of the United States to lessen their efforts to obtain his return. For American officials to take such an attitude would be an open invitation for others convicted of similar crimes against the United States to flee in the hope of avoiding the sentences imposed upon them. For Israel to refuse the return of Dr. Soblen to the United States could give that nation the reputation of a refuge for Soviet spies convicted of espionage against other nations of the free world.

As an American citizen who spied against his own nation for a foreign power which seeks to dominate the United States, Dr. Soblen should not escape the punishment which has been meted out to him by the courts.

Problems Built In Bureaucracy

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talk about conducting a safari into a jungle!

Listen to the saga of a Senate investigator who was given what looked like a simple assignment. He was told to drop over to the Agriculture Department and pick up all documents there on Billie Sol Estes, the flimsy fertilizer financier.

Emerging weeks later from the air-conditioned bureaucratic jungle, investigator Paul E. Kammerick reported that it was quite an ordeal.

Not that the natives didn't cooperate, he told the Senate Investigations subcommittee Wednesday. Trouble was that the records were not all in one place. He and his Agriculture Department guides had to hack their way through the undergrowth to 16 different offices in order to collect the papers.

The investigator reported what looked to him like a breakdown of communications in the jungle muck — one agency didn't rightly know what the other was doing, he said.

Department officials disputed him, calling their system a well-knit one, no dim jungle. There are critics who say, however, that a certain murkiness is inevitable in a government so big. And there have been various efforts, mostly unsuccessful, to stunt the government's growth.

During House debate on the farm bill last week Rep. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., proposed with straight face an amendment to forbid the number of Agriculture Department employees to rise over the number of farmers in America. This was defeated.

A newsman called the Agriculture Department Wednesday and asked how many farmers there are in America. An official said he did not have an up-to-date statistic on that, but said there are 3,629,000 farms. Asked how many employees the department has, he said 21,872 full-time and 16,663 part-time. Asked if this included people like county committee-men, he double-checked and said no. There are 16,000 full-time employees like that, plus an indeterminate number of part-time people who did "8,000 man years" of work last year.

Trying to get an idea of the growth rate of the total federal bureaucracy, the reporter called Sen. Harry F. Byrd's Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-essential Federal Expenditures. "How many employees did George Washington have under him when he became President?" an aide was asked.

The aide said he didn't have that statistic but that in 1816, the number of federal employees was 4,837, not counting the armed forces. Now the number is 2,471,061. This is a 500-fold increase.

In 1816 the population of the country was about 8.5 million. Now it is 126.5 million. This is only a 22-fold increase. The trend cannot continue indefinitely. Otherwise everybody will be on the federal payroll drawing tax money to govern, regulate, police and confer other benefits on each other.

Friday's veto on the Kashmir resolution helps to maintain turmoil in Kashmir. India already occupies the territory. If she succeeds in enforcing her regime, Russia wins because Krishna Menon will have expanded his power at the expense of Pakistan, a country friendly to the U.S. If India fails, new opportunities for cultivating chaos will be sought.

In 1947 when the British Indian territories were to achieve home rule, the plan was that the Moslem areas were to be separately established as Pakistan, while the Hindu areas were to be part of India. The Hindus and Moslems could not get along with each other; they sensibly agreed to separate, even though it meant that Pakistan became two separate enclaves. But Kashmir was a mixed matter. The people were Moslem, but the maharaja was a Hindu whose ancestors bought the territory from the British in 1846. Smarting under Hindu laws, the Moslems prepared to revolt against the maharaja in 1947 when it looked as though he would cast with India. The maharaja promptly ceded the territory to India in return for India's army. In the revolt, 200,000 Moslems were killed or fled. Pakistan threw its troops into the fray. India eased the maharaja out and attempted to integrate the territory into Indian administration.

The invasion of Goa should have caused no surprise to the West, because India has defied peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute for 15 years. In 1947 she agreed to grant a plebiscite in Kashmir, "when Pakistan withdrew." India refused to agree to synchronized withdrawals of both countries troops. In 1948 the Security Council passed a resolution calling for a plebiscite. In 1949 it passed another. India agreed to UN arbitration. Fourteen times Pakistan made concessions to the UN committee. India refused even to discuss the matter. Even today Mr. Nehru says, "There is no need of any plebiscite in Kashmir, as the people of the State have already unequivocally expressed their wish."

Russia's Mr. Morozov is anxious to keep things as they are. Unrest is always a handy thing to have around until it is time for Soviet pacification. The UN cannot accomplish anything constructive when nations are not united in common purpose. For those who think that the UN will build a bridge to co-existence, Russia has the answer: No, and a hundred times no.

What Good Is Progress?

NEW YORK (AP) — Are three banks worth 18 restaurants?

What good is progress if it ruins what you like? These are questions I ponder every time I look out the window where I work.

Many people never know when they become a fuddy-duddy and an old fogey. A fuddy-duddy and an old fogey is a person who prefers things as they were rather than as they will be. He fights change.

Well, every time I hear the riveter's hammer echo in the new 40-plus-story building going up across the street, I consciously become more of a fuddy-duddy and an old fogey.

There seems to be a noisy conspiracy afoot to turn mid-Manhattan, one of the world's favorite playgrounds, into another paper clip forest — an uptown Wall Street.

Down come the fine old apartments, the beautifully ugly brownstones. Up go the new aseptic aluminum and glass business foundries full of offices with neatly lettered doors.

Midtown used to be full of people on a lark. Now it is thronged with vice presidents full of grim purpose. It is getting harder and harder for a human being to find elbow room among the junior executives.

For nearly a quarter of a century I have hung my hat and exercised my typewriter in one of the pioneer outposts of Rockefeller Center.

When I first moved in, I could look out the window and see Old Lady Vanderbilt's society mansion anchoring one end of the street across the way. At the other end of the street was a two-bit bar with a second-hand bookstore upstairs.

Over the years since then you could get your hair dyed in that single block, have a violin repaired, join a bridge club, rent a hotel room, or wine and dine in 18 restaurants and taverns.

In the good old summertime there were two outdoor cafes where you could sit and sip bourbon or iced tea and watch the world and the girls go by. The chattering Rockettes from the Radio City Music Hall used to come across the street with their painted faces and rest their lovely long limbs there between shows.

Well, what happened "to it all?" They tore down the old hotel. Old Lady Vanderbilt died, and they tore down the landmark she lived in where the champagne bubbled.

One by one they tore down the old brownstones, the beer-perfumed taverns, the restaurants of many languages.

Now the street across from the window I look from is inhabited by giant office buildings, full of eager beavers eager to go home to the suburbs, and three stone banks.

Banks are wonderful for depositing money, but hardly a place to deposit a life — and certainly they do serve a lousy beef stew.

But only a fuddy-duddy complains against progress. I'm that fuddy-duddy.

"Reapportionment restated in the language of the minstrel show (Supreme Court to state legislatures): Gentlemen, be re-seated." — Atlanta Constitution.

"Bartender in Milwaukee was fined for keeping rat poison in an old whiskey bottle. Some of his customers didn't even notice." — Wichita Eagle.

not add his mother's hot dog relish to his wienies, he cannot engage in any related business, nor can he even repair his driveway without the licensor's approval.

However, the book does contain a mass of information a prospect might well consider before he decides whether to buy a franchise to manufacture soft drinks, run a health farm or peddle frozen desserts.

RING DEALER NOT STUFF IF JUNE ROMANCE ENDS A number of credit jewelers have been taken off the hook.

In a new decision (Rev. Rul. 62-91), the Internal Revenue Service says that where a retailer sells a diamond ring on credit and pays the applicable retailers' excise tax but subsequently repurchases the ring because of the purchaser's failure to make any payment, the retailer may be allowed a credit or refund of the tax.

Presumably, the decision would apply to other taxable articles sold on credit.

Good & Bad Times

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

President Kennedy cannot ignore the unseemly economy of the United States. It is true that prices in the Stock Exchange have been too high. To use a rule of thumb which a very successful financier has used, it is unwise to buy at the bottom of the market; it is unwise to sell at what looks like the top. Practically, when a stock sells for more than 15 or 20 times its earnings, its price is inflated by emotional factors, including public relations gimmicks.

But the stock market is not to be taken as a yardstick of the economy. It is a place, here as well as in other countries, where men gamble on probabilities and possibilities and the gamblers can upset all economic laws if they deal in large enough volume. Short selling should be prohibited by law, as a gambler's device.

The stock market does not cause a recession or a depression. Both are normal characteristics of adjustment in the economic system. Every device conceived in capitalistic or communist countries to avoid or avert "hills and valleys" has failed, because in certain periods, "good times," man tends to over-produce until a period of saturation sets in. These may be called "bad times."

It has been assumed by optimistic politicians and statisticians that as there are vast backward areas of the world, it ought to be possible by a pump-priming trick, "foreign aid," not only to achieve a political goal but to raise the standard of living of a people so swiftly that they would immediately consume the surpluses of the countries which are over-produced. This has not happened. Instead, those countries that stockpiled to maintain high prices and high wages are stuck with their stockpiles and, in 1962, the entire world is suffering from milk to severe economic disturbances. The United States could break the back of the economies of many nations and guarantee a universal depression of major dimensions by dumping its stockpile at bargain-counter prices.

This problem goes back to Joseph in Egypt, if my readers recall the story in the Bible. Joseph invented the stockpiles as he did the ever-normal granary. He erected vast storages to hold the grain, so that in years of famine there would be food. The granaries became very costly and Egypt undertook enormous public works based on a slave system.

When the slaves revolted, Egypt's economy went to pieces. The leading country in the world at one moment in history, Egypt never recovered from this curious economic experimentation.

This technique has, since the end of World War II, been used throughout the world in the hope of maintaining a war-expanded economy. It has not worked.

Take the example of Canada. Viewing the history of the Canadian dollar from 1846 to today, it has generally stood in relationship to the U. S. dollar in the vicinity of 90. This was advantageous to Canada which is dependent upon British and U. S. capital for its development. After all, Canada is a country of 3,621,616 square miles with a population of 17,000,000. It could hold a population of 50,000,000 to 100,000,000. But it cannot swiftly develop capital to finance the provision of work without assistance of other countries and without creating conditions favorable to exports.

The history of Canada has been a history of the export of raw materials and the import of manufactured goods and capital. It paralleled the history of the United States. Actually the two countries were one economically, except that the United States, having a more favorable climate, attracted more immigrants. As a result, the United States developed more rapidly than Canada and some of Canada's population overflowed freely into Canada.

Up to Prohibition, this freedom of economic movement continued. Immense amounts of American capital flowed into

TRUE TOLERANCE

John Bunyan, who wrote "Pilgrim's Progress," spent a great many years in prison. He was put in prison for preaching the gospel — or rather a variety of the gospel which did not need the approval of the church leaders of his day. It was while he was in prison that Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress." It would be hard to find in the whole range of English literature more effective and beautiful prose than this poor, badgered man wrote while in bonds.

Bunyan's life teaches us that difficulties make no real difference to the valiant of soul. They could put Bunyan in jail, stop his life so that he could not speak, but the idea appeared not to have occurred to them that they also needed to keep him from setting writing materials and carrying on a ministry through his pen. People have been reading "Pilgrim's Progress" for centuries finding inspiration therein, admiring its literary value, and reflecting on the spirit of a man for whom prison bars were as if they did not exist.

Let us be truly tolerant of other people's religion. The pages of history are marked by accounts of how honest but bigoted men tried to silence those with whom they differed. The person whose ideas we consider fantastic may indeed be loved of God. In fact, God may be using him to a great end as He used John Bunyan.

Tolerance is a rare and precious virtue.

Franchise Business Is Booming

By ELMER ROESSNER

Franchising is booming. About 300 companies are now in the business of licensing small businessmen to use their systems, supplies, trademarks and names. An enterpriser can now do business under the names of Hertz, Dorothy Lamour, Sonotone and Mr. Donut. He can engage in car washing, selling frozen desserts, running hamburger palaces, operating fried chicken joint joints, motels, employment agencies and hundreds of other kinds of businesses.

Appropriate to the times, therefore, is a new book, "The Franchise Boom," by Harry Kursh (Prentice-Hall, 273 pages, $3.95). Kursh is the author of other books, including "How to Get Land from Uncle Sam."

SEES FRANCHISING AS GOOD THING

Kursh is a bit on the bullish side on franchising. He says that it is the way a creator of a new kind of shop or service can expand with a minimum capital, it is a way by which others with limited capital and often limited experience can get into a tested business.

"While he describes franchising generally in rosy terms, Kursh is not completely carried away by optimism. One chapter alerts readers to various hazards and another, 'How to Investigate Before You Invest' raises some cherry-red warning signals.

"There is perhaps no business, no industry, no aspect of life that is entirely free of phonies, frauds, assorted swindlers, ingenious con men and borderline operators who walk and talk within the law. The franchise field is no exception," he wrote.

He recommends talking with other franchise holders, being wary of deals that offer incredible profits, watching out for promoters who insist contracts must be signed immediately, and avoiding those who will agree to any concession to close a deal.

"GET ADVICE!" Another warning: "Never, if at all possible, sign a contract without consulting professional counsel, an attorney or at least a certified public accountant who won't analyze the contract's legal aspects, of course, but who will recognize some faulty features of the profit margins."

Kursh might have stressed the importance of legal advice more, and he might have mentioned the vast amount of litigation that has arisen in this relatively new field.

Neither does he stress the amount of independence a franchise buyer must surrender on signing a contract, although specimen contracts in the book do disclose the servitude a signer enters.

He usually must buy all supplies from the franchise grantor or an approved supplier, he must conform to the grantor's standards without question, he may not alter his shop without approval, nor sell his business without consent.

The franchise probably cannot add his mother's hot dog relish to his wienies, he cannot engage in any related business, nor can he even repair his driveway without the licensor's approval.

Josiah became king of Judah when he was eight, the first good king for many years. He began his reforms by repairing the temple; there the high priest discovered the "book of the law," long missing and forgotten. —II Kings 22:1-8.

When it was read to Josiah, he "rent his clothes," for he saw how grievously his people had sinned, departing from God's laws. A prophetess told him that Jerusalem would still be punished, but not in his time. —II Kings 22:11-20.

The book was then read to the people, and Josiah proceeded to destroy all the pagan idols and altars of Judah and killed the preachers of corruption. For the first time in many years, Passover was celebrated. —II Kings 23:1-23.

When the Pharaoh Neco of Egypt started to take his armies through what Josiah considered holy land, on his way to battle the Babylonians, Josiah challenged him and was killed. —II Kings 23:28-30.

Josiah's Reforms

HOW THE COURAGE AND CONVICTION OF A YOUNG KING TRANSFORMED AN ENTIRE NATION

Scripture—II Kings 22, 23.

By N. SPEER JONES
WITH THIS lesson we begin the third quarter of the year's lessons, one devoted to "Later Hebrew History and Prophecy."

The passages assigned portray one of the most remarkable reigns in history, that of Josiah, king of Judah from 638 to 608 B.C.

Josiah was the son of King Amon and grandson of the infamous King Manasseh, who ruled some 55 years, filling the country with evil. He rebuilt the pagan temples which his father, Hezekiah, had destroyed; they encouraged all sorts of idolatry, sensuality and corruption in religion. He went so far as to burn his own son as an offering (II Kings 21:5-6).

Amon succeeded him, following in his father's evil ways to such an extent that his own servants murdered him in the by Moses (Deuteronomy 31:26), and later hidden for preservation. Thus began one of the greatest revivals in history. [For others in Biblical times, see Genesis 35:1-15 (Jacob's); II Chronicles 15:1-15 (King Asa's); II Chron. 23, 24 (Jehoiash's); II Chron. 29-31 (Hezekiah's); Jonah 3 (that in Nineveh); Ezra 5, 6 (Zerubbabel's); Nehemiah 8, 9; John 4:1-42; Acts 2, and Acts 19:1-20.]

Of the many idols and altars destroyed by Josiah, we may say briefly that the worship of Baal was the most widespread paganism of the ancients; that Asherah was a fertility goddess, whose worship involved immoral practices; that the "host of heaven" refers to star worship, including the Zodiac; that the "pillar" was a symbol in the worship of Astarte; that Tophet was a burning cauldron into which children were flung second year of his reign (II Kings 21:21-23). How Josiah emerged as such a righteous person from such a background is difficult to imagine. At any rate, the boy ascended the throne at eight, and apparently took over actual charge of this kingdom's affairs at 12.

It was probably in this year that he instituted a voluntary collection of funds from his people to rebuild the desecrated temple. It had been nearly 250 years since it had undergone major rejuvenation.

Six years later Josiah set his reconstruction program in motion. It was in the process of these temple repairs that the hidden "Book of the Law" was discovered by the high priest.

This Book of the Law was probably the Pentateuch, i.e., the first five books of the Bible; it was at least the so-called Book of the Covenant, the early chapters of Deuteronomy. It was probably the one placed beside the Ark of the Covenant.

Hold Experiment In Inter-Faith Dialogue

By JULES LOH
AP Staff Writer

In a small chapel near Albany, N.Y., a few weeks ago a Catholic priest stood at a special altar which had been set up so he could celebrate Mass facing the congregation, just the reverse of the customary arrangement.

In the pews out front, following the Mass attentively, were two dozen clergymen—none of them Catholics.

Some sat in respectful silence; most knelt and, according to one of the ministers, seemed to be following the priest's suggestion that the ceremony be regarded as common worship. To help make it so, a Protestant minister read aloud the English translations of the Latin Mass prayers.

This was the opening exercise each morning in a three-day experiment which some would consider a daring venture in inter-faith dialogue: A period of prayer and conversation conducted at the Glenmont Jesuit Retreat House for Protestant and Eastern Orthodox ministers.

All who took part agreed the experiment was a success. In fact, some similar endeavors are planned for the future, perhaps as often as four times a year.

"There was no one involved in the retreat," said the Rev. Dr. Carlyle Adams, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Albany, "who did not believe that God's grace was at work and that whatever was any of us had placed in it had been realized far beyond our most sanguine expectations."

Leader of the retreat was The Rev. Gustave Weigel, S. J., professor of ecclesiology at Woodstock College, Md., and a consultant to the Vatican Secretariat for Christian Unity.

The ministers who attended represented the American Baptist Convention, the United Church of Christ, the Protestant Episcopal Church, United Lutheran Church in America, Missouri Synod Lutheran Church, Methodist Church, United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., Reformed Church in America and the Greek and Syrian Orthodox Churches.

The idea originated last August when Dr. Adams discussed the possibility with The Rev. Philip B. Carroll, S. J., director of the retreat house.

Dr. Adams describes himself as "a very positive Protestant," but one whose friendship with Catholics dates back to his boyhood when an Xaverian Brother was his Boy Scout leader.

Dr. Adams said Father Weigel was selected as the retreat leader because of his efforts toward Christian unity and his thorough knowledge of Protestantism. "Father Weigel knows Protestant theology better than any man I know," said the Presbyterian churchman.

Father Weigel conducted a series of meditations for the clergymen based on the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuit order. Dr. Adams said the ministers took copious notes, and that "the meditations no doubt provided much material for sermons which will be preached in Protestant and Orthodox pulpits."

Each evening the clergymen assembled in the chapel for a Protestant minister led them in prayer—using selections from the writings of St. Augustine, St. Thomas More, St. Ignatius Loyola and St. Clement of Rome.

Bug Spray Was Green Paint

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A youth who was watching a movie at a drive-in theater with several other teen-agers reached for a can of insect spray in the car.

It didn't take long to discover he had picked up a can of spray paint instead. Green paint covered the interior of the car and several teen-agers.

Reflecting On SPORTS

By George Bryant

Legion Baseball

Post 39's local American Legion baseball team under the fine coaching of Ray Pennington has made an excellent showing so far this season and with just six more games to go the boys have their job cut out for them. Three of the remaining games on the American Legion schedule are with Rocky Mount, the defending champion.

Two of these contests will be played in Guy Smith Stadium Saturday night. The doubleheader consists of a makeup game and one which was originally scheduled. Both Greenville and Rocky Mount will be sporting 8-2 records when they meet at 6:30.

At the present time Greenville and Rocky Mount are tied for first place in the league standings and that makes the remainder of the season even more interesting. We must also recall the fact that Rocky Mount handed the local team their first defeat of the year when they downed Greenville 8-5 in their opening contest.

The boys making up the Greenville club come from as far away as Bath to play ball. Many of them work during the day, drive as far as 140 miles to play a game at night and then return home. Often times sleep is hard to come by in a situation like this, but these boys never seem to tire.

Members of the Greenville team include some of the best high school baseball players in the state. Three of them were of the East team of the All-Star game played here several weeks ago and they represented the area well.

Coach Pennington and the boys all deserve commendation for the job they have done so far this summer and regardless of what happens from here on out, Post 39 has been well rewarded for its efforts in fielding a team for 1962.

Safe Boating

Along with the many other weeks proclaimed during the year there is one for Safe Boating. This year National Safe Boating Week has been set as July 1-7. In recent years boating has increased in popularity and as a result so have the number of water accidents.

We in Eastern North Carolina should be especially concerned with safe boating because of our nearness to the water. It would be impossible to say just how many boats are owned by residents of this area, but riding down the highway and noticing the number being pulled on a Sunday afternoon or the number sitting in yards and garages along the way we are sure that there are many.

According to a report from the North Carolina Wildlife Department there were 18 boating accidents with 15 fatalities during the month of May. In May 1961 there were 25 accidents and 17 fatalities.

While this number seems small, any accidents or deaths are too much regardless of where they occur. Many of the accidents could have been avoided if boatmen had just used some common sense. Often we have been around the water on a summer weekend and viewed some of the foolishness that takes place in boats. No doubt there have been times when we also were part of the foolishness.

However, we hope that area boaters will think this summer before doing something they might later regret. The Fourth of July holiday will be here next Wednesday and the waters of eastern North Carolina will be crowded. Make this summer a safe one afloat.

Time Trials Set Saturday

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Time trials will be run Saturday in the fourth annual Firecracker 250 amid predictions that a record 150 miles per hour will win the pole position.

Defending champion David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., set the figure after a practice run yesterday when he was clocked at 160.400 m.p.h. for a lap.

Pearson drove a 1962 Pontiac and raced with Fred Lorenzen of Elmhurst, Ill., who drove a Ford Galaxie 500. Pearson and Lorenzen drafted each other.

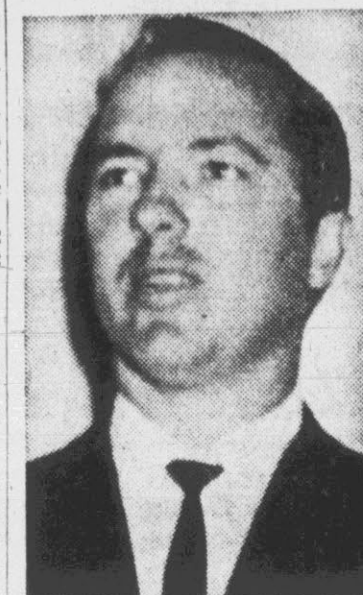

The stock cars travel faster when more than one car is on the track because of drafting. In time trials, however, they take turns running the two laps, one car at a time.

Pearson, who set a world record of 154.250 in winning last year, said it will take a 155 m.p.h. average for the 250 miles next Wednesday. Lorenzen agreed.

ECC Publicist Has Submitted Resignation

East Carolina College Athletic Director Dr. N. M. Jorgensen said today that a resignation is on file by Cecil Heath, director of sports publicity and athletic promotion at the college.

Dr. Jorgensen stated that Heath submitted the resignation to his office on May 8 and it will become effective on August 1.

CECIL HEATH

The athletic director also noted that nobody has been appointed to take Heath's place. However, Jorgensen said, "We have vaguely discussed the matter with a few prospects."

Heath said that he had no comment on the resignation at the present time. However, he noted "there is a possibility of a change in the effective date."

Prior to taking the ECC position on Nov. 1, 1960, Heath had been selling insurance in Charlotte and Wilmington. He served in the Air Force for 30 months before going into the insurance business.

The 30-year-old publicity director graduated from ECC in 1955 and he played basketball and baseball while in school.

Gerring To Play Wood In Finals

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Charles Wood of Winston-Salem and Jim Gerring of Union, S.C., a pair of youngsters who have shown their more experienced opponents some of the fine points of the game of golf, played today for the Carolinas Junior Golf Tournament championship.

Wood, a 15-year-old, 5-6, 130-pounder who will be a sophomore in high school next fall, ousted 17-year-old John Mann of Kinston, S.C., in Thursday's semifinals. The day before, Wood ousted medalist Joe Jelks Jr. of Greenville, S.C.

Industrial Softball

In Industrial Softball League action Thursday Carolina Dairy forfeited to the Moose team and Venters Motors forfeited to Cox Armature.

Neither Venters or the Dairy team had enough players show up to make a team.

The World Amateur Team golf championship of the USGA will be held Oct. 10-13 at the Fuji Golf Course in Kawanu, Japan.

Bridges Took Mound For Yanks And Held Twins

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

When it comes to cutting the bad guys off at the pass, the New York Yankees call on Marshall (The Sheriff) Bridges, one of the fastest guns in the American League. He halted another uprising Thursday as the Yankees beat Minnesota 4-2 and leap-frogged into second place. The left-handed fireballer came in with the bases filled and two runs across in the eighth inning, fanned Don Mincher for the third out, then held the Twins in the ninth.

It was the 22nd appearance of the season for Bridges, 31, a short-stint specialist who has been a valuable replacement for the injured southpaw relief star, Luis Arroyo. Bridges' latest performance saved a victory for Bill Stafford, who was supported by homer help from Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle.

By winning, the Yankees took over the runnerup spot in a virtual deadlock with Minnesota and Los Angeles—all 1½ games behind Cleveland. New York has a three-percentage-point edge on the Angels, who in turn are three points ahead of the Twins.

The Angels bombed Boston 19-7. Baltimore completed a three-game sweep of Chicago on Steve Barber's shutout pitching, 6-0, and Kansas City outscored Washington 10-7 in other AL action. Cleveland and Detroit had the day off.

In the National League—Los Angeles nipped New York 5-4 in 13 innings and regained first place from San Francisco, a 7-2 loser to Philadelphia, and Chicago whipped St. Louis 7-2. Other clubs were not scheduled. Maris and Mantle homered in the fourth and the Yankees made it 3-2 against loser Jack Kralick in the seventh when Elston Howard doubled and eventually scored on an error.

After walking Bob Allison, Stafford was replaced by Tex Clevenger, and his walk to Earl Ewing filled the bases. Bridges came on to strike out Mincher, the Twins' first baseman.

The Angels sprayed 18 hits and collected 13 walks against five Red Sox pitchers. Los Angeles had a pair of five-run innings, in the fourth and seventh. Winning pitcher Eli Grba got two hits and four runs batted in. The loss went to 1961 rookie of the year, Don Schwall, whose record now is 2-9.

Barber gave up eight hits and seven walks in Baltimore's shutout over the White Sox. Brooks Robinson sent the Orioles ahead with a first-inning homer off Don Zanni and singled in another run in the third.

Manny Jimenez, the AL's top batter, teamed with the recently-acquired Billy Conso to pace the Athletics in the hitting match at Washington. Jimenez increased his average to .351 with a double and two singles, while Conso had three hits. All told, Kansas City collected 18 hits. The Senators had 13 in losing their fourth in a row. Jerry Walker was the winning pitcher and Don Rudolph the loser.

Sites Trouble With Some Women Golfers

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The trouble with women's golf is that some of the girls spend too much time on the practice tee and not enough in the beauty parlor, says the newest of the female touring pros, Peggy Wilson.

"We're not just athletes—we must be entertainers and showpieces as well," added the attractive, 27-year-old school marm from Austin, Tex., who is giving up the chalk and eraser bit for a 9-iron and brassie shot at Mickey Wright, Betsy Rawls and company.

Miss Wilson, a 5-foot-11, 135-pound brunette, was brought to New York Thursday to be unveiled by her new employers, a sporting goods company which is financing her fling at the ladies' tour.

Peggy is a rather unique addition to the female barnstorming troupe. She took up the game seven years ago as the result of a dream. Her competition has been confined to a few local tournaments. Her hobbies are sculpture, sailing and reading.

She was born in Vicksburg, Miss., attended Mississippi State College for Women, got a B.S. degree in physical education and started teaching in Mississippi and Texas schools. More recently, she's been at the University of Texas.

"I had a dream while I was in college," she recalled. "I was playing golf. There was a big gallery all around me. And I was very thrilled. I had never had a golf club in my hand. The next day I went out and bought every golf book I could find. Then I started taking lessons."

Miss Wilson said she thinks the women's tour needs new faces and a better overall image to lure the paying public.

"There are some very attractive girls on the tour," she added. "It's their duty to primp up and look their best. If fans want to see great golf shots, they go to see Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus. When they take in the women's tour, they want something extra—good golf shots and glamor as well."

"I think our business is not to worry all the time about whether our drives are hooking or our putts are spinning off but whether our hair looks nice and our mascara is on straight."

For the record, Miss Wilson's hair looks nice and everything is on straight.

Carolina Loop Stars Defeat Kinston 5-3

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Two unearned runs in the top of the ninth inning gave the All Stars a 5-3 margin over Kinston Thursday night in the Carolina League's mid-season classic.

Two men were out and two men on base when a ground ball by Buddy Booker of Burlington took a bad hop over Felix Santana, who was given an error. Caesar Tovar of Rocky Mount scored from third.

Rusty Staub of Durham scored the last run of the game on a delayed double steal.

The victory went to Wally Wolf of Durham, the league's top pitcher. He has a 13-1 record.

Kinston went ahead on runs in the first and third, but fell behind when the all stars pushed across three in the fourth inning. The Eagles tied the score in the eighth, but lost out to the All Stars rally in the ninth.

Few New, Interesting Women Stars For TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Television now has come to the end of another season remarkable for its lack of new, interesting women stars.

There have been, of course, many women performers, even stars on the home screens. But most of them played nice, normal upper middle class normal housewives with commuter husbands and carefully assorted children. Shirley Booth, the season's biggest feminine name, plays a maid. As series-guest stars, the ladies largely have appeared as alcoholics, narcotics addicts, or as victims of blackmail and murder threats.

Next year, things don't promise to be any better. Lucille Ball will be back—as a man-hunting widow, and Loretta Young (who cut quite an elegant figure when she had her anthology dramatic series) will return as a widow—with seven children.

Betty Furness, an actress who has done a lot of serious thinking about woman's place in television, is inclined to believe that the sad state of feminine employment in the medium is due to its preoccupation with average family life. "I think television needs a great infusion of glamour," said Betty briskly. "All the big women stars in the movies' golden days were glamorous and remote. I still turn around and stare, like a teen-age fan, if I see Greta Garbo walking down the street."

Canada, which Canada could not consume by usual economic processes. Canada thus became an exporter of capital as well as an importer and the Canadian dollar moved out of line. Economic nationalism led to the cartel system; Canada swallowed more than it could chew.

That is true of so many other countries. Thus, a universal recession has set in, which, if not dealt with without regard to sentiment, can produce a universal depression.

$3.5 Million Is Awarded Disc Jockey In Libel Suit

NEW YORK (AP)—Former disc-jockey John Henry Faulk was awarded $3.5 million libel damages Thursday night on his charge that linking him to a Communist conspiracy destroyed his broadcasting career.

After deliberating four hours after an 11-week trial the jury, by an 11 to 1 vote, found for Faulk against the publication Aware, Inc.; Vincent W. Hartnett, one of its directors; and the late Laurence A. Johnson, operator of a chain of supermarkets in Syracuse, N.Y.

Johnson, excused from attending the trial because of ill health, died Wednesday in a Bronx motel. The verdict was handed down on the Faulks' 14th wedding anniversary, prompting Mrs. Faulk to say: "It's the nicest present I could have got."

Faulk described the trial's outcome as "the most unbelievable thing I feel very excited at what this may mean to the country." During the trial, Faulk was described as the third or fourth leading disc jockey in the New York area. He conducted programs on radio and television for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Aware was incorporated in 1953 with the avowed aim of "combating the Communist conspiracy in entertainment communications."

Faulk charged that a booklet of Aware, published Feb. 10, 1956, falsely accused him of pre-Communist sympathies. He said Hartnett prepared the material and Johnson was instrumental in distributing it to broadcasting and advertising executives.

In his summation Faulk's attorney, Louis Nizer, described the defendants as vigilantes. "Let the word go out that this kind of thing must be stopped," Nizer said.

Testifying for Faulk, many persons in the entertainment world detailed a pattern of blacklisting in the industry during the 1950's. Until Thursday the jury was unaware of the death of Johnson, 73, whose pajama-clad body was found in bed. Positive identification was made by his son-in-law, Donald J. Giancola of Syracuse.

A medical examiner said the body bore no marks of violence. Johnson had a history of a heart ailment.

State Supreme Court Justice Abraham N. Geller first let the jury know of Johnson's death in his two-hour charge Thursday night. He cautioned the panel against letting the death emotionally affect their deliberations.

Just an hour before announcing its verdict the jury indicated it was leaning toward Faulk by handing a note to Justice Geller. "The jury would like to have a clarification on the subject of awards for punitive damages," the note said. "Is the jury allowed to award more than amounts requested by the plaintiff?"

Geller replied that the jury was not bound by the request but could not increase punitive damages against Aware or Hartnett because Johnson had died.

Although the jury vote was 11-1 in favor of the awards, a 10-2 vote was all that was required for a finding.

Had Mentalist In His Power

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—For a time it appeared that the magician had the mentalist in his power at a convention of prestidigitators Thursday.

Stuart Cramer of Cleveland was showing Dr. David Faust, a mentalist, a pair of handcuffs which escape artists use. Faust had the cuffs on when Cramer discovered that because of the size of Faust's wrists he could not escape.

Cramer did not have a key. After several phone calls and a search among the 800 meddlers in magic attending the convention, Cramer came up with the correct key.

NAM President Sees Harmony

NEW YORK (AP)—Donald J. Hardenbrook, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, predicts improvement between President Kennedy's administration and business.

Interviewed Thursday night on a television program (At The Source, CBS), Hardenbrook said he felt optimistic despite a poll which indicated that 75 per cent of the nation's businessmen feel the administration "is not friendly toward business."

The NAM head termed the nation's economy as basically sound, but he urged a much broader tax relief program than that proposed by the administration.

Science Sees Advance In Knowledge As To Problem Of The Alcoholic

By ALTON BLAKSLEE

Associated Press Science Writer

At 3 a.m., in a fuzzy voice, the young man telephoned a doctor he'd never met, asking for an appointment.

He burst into the office early in the morning, demanding "some of those pills to keep me from drinking. I've got to stay sober the next few days—very important."

Many a frantic wife has wished for a pill or powder she could surreptitiously drop into her husband's coffee, and thus magically stop his drinking.

There is an antidrinking drug, but it's no magic powder-in-the-coffee affair.

This drug is disulfiram (trade-name antabuse). It is completely harmless, until a person drinks any alcohol. Then he becomes violently ill.

It acts as a chemical fence reinforcing the alcoholic's determination not to drink. It must be prescribed and guided by a physician, for otherwise reactions could be disastrous. The alcoholic must know that he's taking it, and what it will do. It wasn't the easy answer for the young man, except so far as it marked a start toward real desire to stop drinking.

The road back from alcoholism is tortuous and difficult, but much can be done medically and psychologically, explains Dr. Ruth Fox, medical director of the National Council on Alcoholism.

A first step is restoration of good health and diet. The alcoholic often has liver, nerve or other damage.

He may need hospital care for a time. Tranquillizing drugs now can help him sleep, or handle mood swings and anxiety.

Psychotherapy, individually or through group treatment, is aimed at helping the alcoholic understand himself and his emotional problems, and how to handle them without drinking.

In Alcoholics Anonymous, the patient can find help available 24 hours a day. In AA, he or she also finds social, intellectual, cultural and spiritual interests long since abandoned in the dedication to drink, Dr. Fox continues.

Clergymen increasingly are helping alcoholics find and follow useful, sober new lives.

Hypnosis, in the hands of trained physicians, can assist alcoholics to relax and handle tensions, Dr. Fox says. Hypnotic suggestions to restore self-esteem can be useful for the alcoholic who is badgered by feelings of anger, jealousy, fear, bitterness or self pity.

Psychodrama is another aid. In this kind of stage play, alcoholics assume the roles of friends, family members, employers, for insights into social and personal attitudes and influences.

All treatments, the physician points out, have a common goal: Understanding and reinforcing the need for total abstinence, of life without drink.

The downfall of the alcoholic has been blamed on faulty or lazy glands, or lack of certain vitamins, and other biochemical upsets. But simply replacing the missing chemicals has proved disappointing in treating or preventing alcoholism, Dr. Fox says.

Some physicians find a hormone preparation helpful in combating the craving for alcohol and the jitters which can come along when the alcoholic has given up drinking.

The hormone, ace or adrenal cortical extract, is given by injection, and is relatively expensive. Its use is based on evidence that in alcoholics the cortex or outer covering of the adrenal gland is not producing normal amounts of hormones.

Much of current research is stressing a hunt for specific biochemical differences between the alcoholic and the normal drinker, and some authorities are optimistic that clues will be turned up to pinpoint causes and improved treatment.

There are indications that the alcoholic metabolizes or utilizes alcohol differently from the normal drinker. But as yet there are no tests or methods of predicting who is in danger of becoming an alcoholic.

May's Traffic Deaths Increase

CHICAGO (AP)—Deaths in automobile traffic rose in May, the National Safety Council reported Thursday, but the increase matched the rise in travel volume.

Deaths totaled 3,160, a 1 per cent increase over the 3,130 in May 1961. May was the seventh month in a row to show a rise or no change from the corresponding month a year earlier.

For the first five months of 1962 there were 14,320 traffic deaths, up 5 per cent from 13,630 in the comparable months of last year.

Although deaths increased 5 per cent, the amount of travel rose by an identical percentage. The resulting death rate for the period was 4.8 fatalities for each 100 million miles traveled. This was unchanged from the rate at the end of May 1961.

LAST CHANCE VALLEY

BY WILLIAM HEUMAN

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

After eleven days of mounting ordeal, Thorpe McAfee was resigned to the prospect of dying in the desert. He and Jim Varney had been double-crossed by their two partners in working a claim in the foothills of the Funeral Range. The pair had gone off with the gold dust and the horses, leaving Thorpe and Jim to die.

When Thorpe's feverish eyes fell upon a beautiful girl who came out of a canteen, he could only think this was a mirage. But the girl and the water were real, and Thorpe and Jim were taken to a cabin by the girl, Fern O'Hara, whose late father had staked a borax claim nearby. She was determined to raise money to work the find.

Sleeping with Varney in an outbuilding that night, Thorpe was roused by the attempt of two armed bushwhackers to draw Fern from her cabin. Thorpe killed one, and Fern shot the other.

CHAPTERS

At three o'clock the next afternoon they saw the huge borax outfit crawling across the valley floor and headed toward Piedmont. Ten teams of mules pulled the big double-wagon and water tank.

Fern O'Hara said from the shade of the house, "They keep pretty good schedules out at Ajax. This rig's right on time."

Jim Varney was saying softly, "Twenty mules pulling that rig, Thorpe? What do you think of that?"

"I think it's time we got down there," Thorpe McAfee told him. "To make sure he doesn't pass us up." He rubbed his hands on his pants and said to Fern, "Reckon we'll see you at Piedmont now and then, Miss O'Hara?"

"I drive in for supplies," Fern replied.

"You might see us around," Thorpe told her, "if you have a mind."

The girl just shrugged, and the two men started out across the salt marsh toward the road and the approaching borax outfit.

They could hear the beat of the mules' hoofs on the hard ground as they drew near. The driver sat up on the box of the lead wagon, and his swamper rode on top of the load on the second wagon.

Varney said, "She's big, Thorpe, real big."

The driver of the rig stared at them hard as they stood beside the road. "What do you boys want?"

"Like a lift into Piedmont," Thorpe told him. "We came out of the Funerals yesterday, dying of thirst, and Miss O'Hara over at the house brought us in."

"Case O'Hara an' his daughter have been doin' that for the past ten years." The driver chuckled. "Hop up on the back wagon, gents. You kin ride with Len. He ain't much company fer me, either." Then he laughed uproariously as if at a huge joke.

When Thorpe and Jim Varney climbed up on top of the load, they quickly discovered the reason for the driver's mirth. Len was a rather youngish man, not more than nineteen or twenty, light-haired, blue-eyed, good-natured, and a mute.

Len smiled at them and nodded. He held in his hands some round, smooth stones which he used to throw at the mules up ahead to keep them moving. This was apparently one of his jobs, along with working the brake on the tandem and hooking on the mules each morning.

They got under way again. Jim Varney and Thorpe sat up on the box of the trailer and watched Len happily hurling stones at different mules in the string up ahead. When his stones whizzed close by the driver's head, the bearded man turned and cursed him out soundly.

From a distance they could see Fern O'Hara watching the rig from the door of her house. Then they moved around a sand dune, and girl and house were out of sight.

Ahead lay Death Valley again, grim, silent, deadly, rimmed on either side with purplish mountains shimmering in the hot afternoon sun.

Up ahead the twenty mules hauled the rig across a bed of broken salt crystals which had been pounded down to make a roadway.

It had been a comparatively easy task to run a road over the flat valley floor, except in places where the land was too soft or broken up as it was in this salt bed. For most of the run they seemed to be moving over hard, level ground which needed only to be cleared of cactus and occasional mesquite.

After they'd been riding an hour or so, Len, the mute, handed them a canteen which he kept under the sacks of borax, and both men drank from it.

Thorpe called to the driver, "When is your next stop, mister?"

"Red Rock Station," the driver informed him. "Another nine miles. We'll hole up there to night an' get an early start in the mornin'."

It was nearly dusk when the rig rolled into the Red Rock Station, which was no more than a stone corral, a stone hut, and a water tank which had been hauled out and rolled in among the mesquites near the hut.

The driver explained as he hopped down from the box, "Empty wagons come out this way from Piedmont, bringin' water. We keep the tanks filled all the time. Without water you die out here. Reckon you boys know how much a mule kin drink after pullin' all day."

A single station keeper kept up Red Rock Station, a gruff, uncommunicative, flat-nosed man with squint eyes. His job was to prepare a meal for the incoming drivers, and when he saw the passengers with the rig, he scowled as he banged his pots and pans about.

"Jake don't like muleskinners," the driver laughed. "He don't like swamper, an' he don't like mules. Especially, he don't like extra riders with the rigs."

"We'll pay for our meal," Thorpe told him. He stepped into the hut where Jake was starting supper and placed a few coins on the table near the stove.

The station keeper looked at the coins for a moment, and some of his sourness vanished as he stuffed the money into his pocket. "Heck of a place," he said. "Man's as good as dead out here."

"Why don't you leave?" Thorpe asked him.

"Pay's high," Jake growled, "but you sweat for it, mister. You sweat just sittin' here doin' nothin', waitin' fer the blasted rigs to come in."

Thorpe and Varney watched the swamper unhook the ten teams of mules and walk them into the corral. They noticed that he left the harness of each mule on the ground exactly where the teams had stepped from the traces.

The driver said as he came over, "You watch them mules in the mornin', mister. The teams will walk out o' that corral an' step into their places. All Len has to do is throw on the harness an' we'll be ready to go. Reckon mules are a sight smarter than people. How do you figure that out, mister?"

"Smarter than a good many people I know," Thorpe told him. The driver said as he sat down on the low wall of the corral, "You boys hit anything up there in the Funerals?"

"Took out some dust," Thorpe told him. "Our partners skipped out with it. Left us back in the hills without food."

"Heck of a note," the driver said.

Jim Varney said thoughtfully, "Any strangers show up in Piedmont the last month or so, pretty well heeled?"

The driver thought for a moment, and then he said, "Come to think of it, two fellows did hit Piedmont four-five weeks ago. They bought out the Bird-cage Saloon and Gambling House. Paid for the whole business with cash, too. I hear."

"You wouldn't know their names?" Varney asked.

The driver scratched his head, and then he stepped over to the door of the hut where Jake, the keeper, was making sordough biscuits. He yelled inside, "Who bought the Birdcage, Jake?"

Thorpe heard Jake's voice through the open doorway: "Lacey and Hoagland."

The driver looked at him Varney and Thorpe. "That ain't them, is it?" he asked. "Ain't a chance in a million."

Varney's face had grown white under his tan. "Could be," Varney said slowly, "and then again, maybe not."

Downtown Areas Are Sprucing Themselves Up

By NATHAN WEGODSKY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Downtown shopping areas are sprucing themselves up to meet competition from suburban and neighborhood shopping centers and discount stores in North Carolina.

"The development of shopping centers in the suburbs has, I think, made our downtown merchants more aware of their responsibilities to their customers," says Jack Barfield, a realtor and president of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce.

"For instance, many merchants are taking the initiative in the development of more downtown parking lots, and are remodeling and shaping up their stores so they will be more attractive and convenient to buyers. We in Asheville are 40 years late in our city planning, particularly in the downtown area. We only got zoning 15 years ago, and we started a concentrated planning effort nine years ago. Planning is the key to progress here."

In Lenoir, downtown merchants are discussing staying open until 9 p.m. on Fridays. There are periodic sales promotions, several stores have remodeled, and the shoppers can park in two lots free for each purchase of $2 or more in member stores of the Park and Shop plan.

H. M. Peninger, president of the Concord Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, believes that as long as downtown shopping centers and discount houses will not make him suffer too much. "We've got to keep the downtown area popular, keep the store fronts modern, and provide ample parking," he says.

In Shelby, downtown merchants stay open until 8:30 p.m. on Friday. A parking lot is provided for store personnel, to leave more space for customer parking. And a downtown renovation program has been carried out, described by Shelby boosters as the most extensive of any town of comparable size in western North Carolina. Some merchants are stocking bargain basements with merchandise frankly advertised as seconds, and others stock clothing made in foreign countries.

The manager of a store in Greenville said, "The merchants should keep up the down own area and improve it, so that the shopping centers can't compete. Greenville's greatest potential population growth lies in the growth of the college (East Carolina College). The location of the college near the downtown area should help keep the business growth of the city in this area."

Greenville is planning a 78-acre urban renewal project adjacent to the business district. It is called the Shore Drive project, and would be developed for business and privately-owned apartment buildings. This would be in effect, an extension of the downtown business district. Opposition is still brisk, but the Shore Drive plan is due for its first public hearing this summer.

Most of the larger stores in Goldsboro have stepped up special promotions. A large downtown parking lot has been built within one block of the larger department stores. Stores are staying open Friday nights. They are changing their displays more frequently, and are stocking basic necessities and less expensive goods.

There are no major outlying shopping centers in Rocky Mount, although there have been rumors that a major shopping center is planned.

In Greensboro, a survey by Hammer and Associates of Atlanta, completed last year, showed that downtown merchants are getting a smaller share of the trading area market, although their sales are up.

Downtown Greensboro merchants, including Belk's, Woolworth's and Ellis-Stone, have opened outlying branches. W. T. Grant has moved from downtown to the suburbs. Montgomery Ward closed its Greensboro outlet altogether in 1959. The Hammer survey also showed that a noticeable shift of office facilities, particularly medical offices, out of the central business district is operating against downtown merchants.

The downtown proportionate share of retail sales, in the last figures fully computed, dropped from 38 per cent of the Greensboro area market in 1954 to 32 per cent in 1958. This means that while downtown sales have increased on a dollar basis, they have not gone up as much as other areas. The downtown has lost 15 per cent of its share of the market in these four years to merchants outside the central area. However, Greensboro also competes with shopping facilities in High Point, Burlington, and other cities.

C. L. Harris, manager of Woolworth's downtown store and president of the Greensboro Merchants Association, says that despite competition, the downtown area has held its own in recent years, although "I's high time the downtown merchants quit complaining about the situation and started doing something about it."

Many downtown Greensboro stores now stay open longer and offer more delivery service. Harris said he feels that downtown merchants need a "more favorable climate" from the city and county government. In recent talks he also has advocated the need for more parking, "freedom from ticket and fine aggravation," covered walkways, more modern facilities, uniform store hours, more downtown motels and apartments, and a good supermarket downtown.

A downtown improvement program is being studied by the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce.

In High Point, a major downtown development effort is under way, and money has been contributed for economic studies. There's more than an ordinary amount of remodeling going on. Recent years also have been substantial increases in off-street parking, including free parking in private lots for customers who get a stamp at a store where they make purchases. Downtown stores have beefed up their trade promotion schedule, and had 12 major cooperative promotions in 1961, many with giveaways, all with bargains.

Peanut Vendor Given New Stand

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — For 31 years, physically handicapped Cal Phares has been selling peanuts on a Miami street corner.

Policeman Ralph Martin noticed recently that the 59-year-old Phares' vending stand was getting rickety.

"Cal used to give free peanuts to kids who couldn't afford them," Martin said. "I figured it was about time to get him a new stand."

The officer was planning a collection when contractor Vernon Burt volunteered to handle the job.

During off hours Thursday, the contractor and his crew surprised Phares by moving in and building a sturdy new stand. With the stand, worth about $75, went a bill of sale specifying a price of three bags of peanuts.

With tears in his eyes, Phares paid off promptly.

Veteran Willed Savings To U.S.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A Spanish American war veteran, who willed his $14,000 savings to the federal government, was found dead Thursday in his trailer home.

"The government has been good to me, and I'm giving the money back," Marc Antony, 92, said when he made the request earlier this year. Antony explained he lived frugally and was able to save almost all the pension money he received as a veteran.

Draws Crowd In Anti-Red Speech

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. Fred C. Schwarz drew about 8,000 persons to Madison Square Garden Thursday night in his New York Anti-Communist crusade.

Demonstrators picketed and booted outside as Schwarz, an Australian psychiatrist, urged his listeners to arm themselves with the "basic weapon—a knowledge of communism and an awareness of their aims."

Admission to the rally ranged from one dollar to $250.

TEACHING JOHNNY TO SWIM

SERIES THREE

To float on his back, Johnny squats in waist-deep water until his shoulders are below the surface. With his head tilted back and arms in water so that he is looking straight up, he stretches his arms to his side with the palms up. He then lifts his hips as close to the surface as possible to put him in the back float position. To do the back glide, illustrated in this picture, he takes the squatting position to do the back float and pushes back hard.

(Mat No. 7)

The back kick glide, shown here, simply adds the "steam-boat" kick to the back glide. He should be able to move at least two body lengths before going on to the next step. Care must be taken to prevent him from kicking into deep water.

(Mat No. 8)

Now Johnny is ready for a back stroke, finning. From their position as in the back glide, his hands should be moved up along his body for a distance of two or three inches. Then have him turn them out so that the palms are facing toward the feet, and, without stopping, push them back into place. The movement should be continued without interruption. When he adds the kick to this movement he will be swimming on his back.

(Mat No. 9)

Tommy Kirk Wants To Be Thomas Kirk

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—For such a funny guy on the screen, Tommy Kirk can be a serious young man.

So serious that he wants to change his name to Thomas Kirk.

"I've outgrown Tommy and I hate it," reasons the 20-year-old.

"I hate Tom, too. It sounds as if it should go with 'Tom Swift and his Electric Vibrator.' Besides, Tom Kirk is too curt. Tom H.

Kirk might be better. No, I think it should be Thomas Kirk." No amount of reasoning can dissuade him. "It's Robert Taylor, not Bob," says he. But Bob Hope has done all right. "Yeah, but he's a comedian. I'm talking about actors. He doesn't have to face the decision until December, when he turns 21. As Tom, Tommy or Thomas, he looks assured of a sturdy career. He's had one already as Walt Disney's busiest actor.

Kirk may well be Disney's good luck piece; he has been in most of the studio's recent hits, excluding the animated features. You name it, he's done it—"Old Yeller," "The Shaggy Dog," (he was the boy-turned-dog), "Swiss Family Robinson," "The Absent-Minded Professor," "Babes in Toyland," "Moon Pilot" and "Bon Voyage." Now he's performing in Disney's first sequel, "Son of Flubber."

Kid actors have come and gone at Disney's, but Tommy remains under contract and busy. He has done nine pictures in six years, plus television segments. Kirk was born in Louisville, Ky., came to California at an early age.

Paid $10,500 For Old Penny

NEW YORK (AP)—A Long Island rare coin dealer Thursday night paid $10,500 for a 1799 U.S. copper penny—a price described as equalling the record high for a coin of that denomination.

Richard Picker of Albertson, N.Y., made the high bid at an auction of rare coins conducted by the New Netherlands Coin Co. The coin, described as in "near mint perfection," was cast with a 1798 die which had been altered to change the figure eight to a nine. As a consequence, the figure eight can be seen imprinted beneath the nine on the coin.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market resumed its rally in heavy early trading today.

Gains of key stocks went from fractions to about a point as the ticker tape lagged.

A large number of defense contracts awarded by the Pentagon in the last couple of days was one factor which helped confidence. Aerospace issues, however, made only moderate gains. North American Aviation was up about a point. Boeing, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, and General Dynamics added fractions.

Some stocks slipped away from highs reached at the opening. American Telephone erased a small gain and eased. Chrysler was off a fraction. General Motors kept a fractional gain.

International Business Machines showed a 1-point loss. Xerox converted a gain of more than a point to a loss of about a point.

Month rose 3-8 to 49 5-8 on 8,000 shares, showing limited response to news that its pay-as-you-go television was to receive a three-year test in Hartford, Conn.

Gains of about a point were held by United Air Lines, Alcoa, Polaroid, Texaco, Goodrich, and Sears, Roebuck.

Churchill Taken Back To London

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill returned to London by jet-powered flying ambulance today and flashed his fighting V-for-victory sign despite his broken thigh and his threat of major surgery.

The old battler, wearing green pajamas, smiled bravely as his stretcher was lowered from the Royal Air Force Comet that brought him home from his short-lived vacation on the Riviera.

A room was ready for him at the Middlesex Hospital near London's West End. There authorities said he may have to undergo an operation for his injury.

His left leg in a plaster cast after a fall in his Monte Carlo hotel room Thursday, Britain's 87-year-old wartime leader looked pale but as undefeated as ever.

Lady Churchill was the first to move toward the plane. She was accompanied by Lord Moran, Churchill's old friend and doctor; and Randolph Churchill, Sir Winston's only son.

Churchill was reported to have had a restful night at Princess Grace hospital in Monte Carlo. An ambulance brought Churchill from the hospital to Nice, a few minutes from Monte Carlo, and drove directly onto the airfield.

Churchill's secretary, Anthony Montague Browne, said the 87-year-old warrior had enjoyed a good breakfast and was in high spirits. Churchill appeared in such a mood when he was carried out of the hospital and put aboard the ambulance.

He gazed around at a horde of photographers and looked up at open hospital windows from which doctors and nurses were peering.

After blinking once or twice in the bright morning sunshine, Sir Winston flashed a wide grin. He kept his hands beneath his blankets, however, in spite of appeals from the photographers for his famous "V for victory" gesture.

Hospital attaches paid tribute to Churchill's iron constitution. One said a lesser man would not have been able to endure the flight back to England so soon after such an accident.

From his hospital bed before his departure, he sent a telegram to the House of Commons expressing thanks for messages of concern voiced in the House.

Doctors pronounced Churchill in good condition Thursday night after setting the fracture and applying a plaster cast from his left ankle to above the hip.

Churchill has been amazingly resilient, recovering from at least two heart attacks, a bout with pneumonia and another fall that fractured a small bone in his back.

Hospital sources said the doctors could allow the break to knit naturally or they could join the broken ends with metal pins or plates in an operation under general anesthesia.

Such an operation, one medical source said, might enable Churchill to get up sooner than if he were allowed to lie and mend gradually.

Churchill's accident ended a Riviera vacation only two days after he arrived to spend two weeks as the guest of Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

Receive Awards At Press Meet

CHAPEL HILL — Tom Duncan and Jimmy Jenkins of Greenville have received awards for sports writing and the "Green Lights" newspaper of Junius Rose High School received a third place prize for sports writing, it was announced. Awards were presented at the conclusion of the 21st annual meeting of the high school journalists at the University of North Carolina on Thursday.

The "Green Lights" was entered in the classification for high schools with over 750 students.

Judges for the institute included Eugene Price of the Goldsboro News-Argus, news; Bob Campbell and the editorial staff of the Winston-Salem Journal — Sentinel, editorials; Sted Rollins and the staff of the Durham Herald, makeup; Rose Post and Heath Thomas of the Salisbury Post, features; Whitney Kelly and the sports staff of the Charlotte Observer; sports; George Honeycutt and Jeep Hunter, Charlotte News photographers, photography.

Attending the institute from Greenville were Sandra Martin, associate editor of the "Green Lights," and Linda Dadds, business manager, accompanied by Mrs. Lucy M. Worsley, advisor. Esther Johnson served as editor-in-chief of the paper for the past year.

Brailowsky has been called the leading interpreter of Chopin's works today. He studied under Paderewski, who himself studied under Chopin.

World famous modern dancers, the Jose Limon group is nearer in spirit to the classic ballet than to anything else. "Life" featured their famous rendition in dance of Shakespeare's "Othello." In addition to an evening performance at the college, a master class in dance, taught by Jose Limon himself, has been arranged for the same afternoon.

Miss Anderson, the leading lady of TV's Emmy-winning "Macbeth," is acknowledged to be first lady of the dramatic stage today. She brings with her a small troupe (two actors and another actress) who will help her in presenting scenes from dramas, including "Macbeth" and her equally famous stage success, "Medea."

The appearance of the North Carolina Symphony, under the direction of Benjamin Swalin, has been timed to coincide, as nearly as possible, with Greenville's annual Fine Arts Festival.

Day Of Emphasis For Mission Work

Keeping things warm in Iceland is part of the special missions project of the Greenville Seventh-day Adventist church, according to W. H. Waters, sabbath school superintendent.

The Greenville church along with other Carolina Adventist churches will, as they do each quarter, have a special missions program on the last sabbath of the quarter emphasizing the projects supported during that period.

"Heating in Iceland, with its year-round average temperature of 41° degrees, becomes an expensive item," says Mr. Waters. "But beneath the ground in many places are hot springs, and the water can be piped into buildings for heating. This is the goal of the Adventist school in Iceland. Warm spots on the property indicate the water is there, ready for tapping."

Part of the special offering this Saturday will go for this "natural plumbing." It will also help to modernize the denomination's Empress Zauditi Memorial Hospital, which sits next to the palace in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Also to benefit from the offering is Newbold College in England, where a new dormitory for men is urgently needed.

Israel Studies Appeal For Return Of Soblen

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Fugitive Soviet spy Dr. Robert A. Soblen was under medical supervision in a prison hospital today while Israeli authorities studied a U.S. request for his return to New York to begin serving a life term.

The ailing, 62-year-old Soblen, seized here less than 60 hours after he jumped $100,000 bail in New York, was taken to the hospital in Ramleh Prison when he complained he did not feel well. A doctor testified at his trial last June that Soblen was incurably ill with leukemia—cancer of the blood—and then had 12 months to live.

A spokesman for Israel's justice ministry indicated his government would be sympathetic toward Washington's demand for Soblen's return. He said Israel does not want to become a refuge for persons convicted abroad.

The United States and Israel do not have an extradition treaty, but informants here said Israel could hand Soblen over anyhow. They reasoned that Soblen was convicted of a political crime, rather than a common criminal offense, and that such crimes as espionage are not within normal extradition treaty terms.

Soblen, former supervising psychiatrist at Rockland State Hospital in Orangeburg, N.Y., had been scheduled to show up in New York federal court Thursday to begin the life sentence for 20 years of spying. The U.S. Supreme Court refused last Monday to review the case, and Soblen then fled the country.

A U.S. District Judge in New

York ordered the $100,000 bail forfeited when Soblen failed to appear. Soblen's wife, a psychiatrist whose professional name is Dr. Dina Soblen, had posted $40,000 and the remaining $60,000, in U.S. government bonds, was put up by Helen Buttenwieser, a lawyer and niece of former Senator Herbert H. Lehman, D-N.Y.

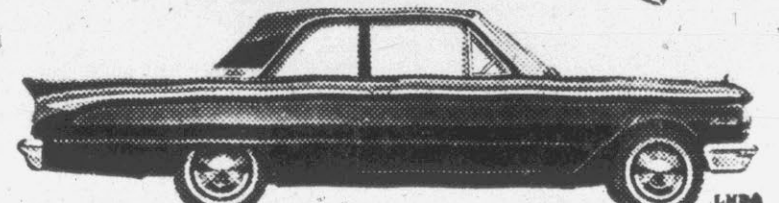

Mrs. Buttenwieser, a banker's wife, said she put up the money because of her interest in changing bail systems. She said present systems benefit either the rich or criminals able to raise bond.

Informed sources said Soblen made his trip to Israel on a Canadian passport issued to his brother, Bruce — or Beras — Sobel, who is dead. Arrested in a tourist hotel at noon Thursday, he was ordered held for investigation on a charge of illegal entry into Israel.

In New York, Soblen's own attorney, Ephraim S. London, called the flight "an indecent, dishonest thing for him to have done. I would do everything in my power to bring him back."
