By JOHN RODERICK
TOKYO (AP)—Red China today brushed off President Kennedy's call for a mutual renunciation of force in the Formosa Strait after defiantly firing its most powerful display of artillery power in 13 years within sight of the Nationalist off-shore island of Quemoy.

The official New China news agency, which speaks for the Peiping regime, described Kennedy's call for renouncing force as a desire "to see the Chinese people renounce their right to liberate their own territory of Taiwan (Formosa)."

Red China has repeatedly rejected a no-force agreement, first proffered by President Eisenhower. The Communists claim that the question of Formosa is an internal affair and that they cannot be restrained by an international agreement from taking steps against President Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist regime.

The Communist news agency made plain this position has not changed. It said the Peiping press reported Kennedy's statements at his news conference Wednesday "under headline pointing out that this reveals anew the cunning and craftiness of U.S. imperialism."

At his news conference, Kennedy directed words of warning at Peiping while commenting on the Red Chinese military buildup opposite the Nationalist off-shore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

"The United States will take the action necessary to assure the defense of Formosa and the Pescadores," Kennedy declared. But he also said a 1954 agreement binding the Nationalists not to move against Red China without U. S. agreement is still in force.

"I have indicated that our interest in this area is defensive, and we would like to have a renunciation of the use of force," Kennedy said. The United States also reportedly told Chiang's government that it flatly opposes its threats of attacks on the Communists.

The Peiping press, however, emphasized what it called Kennedy's intimidating tone and reports of the departure of several U. S. warships from Japan for the Formosa Strait "at the very time the Chiang Kai-shek gang is feverishly preparing to invade the mainland."

Marshal Chu Teh, creator of the Red army and one of Red China's top four leaders, warned Friday night that "the entire armed forces and people of our country are keeping a close watch on the enemy's moves. Any military adventure of the enemy is sure to meet with complete failure."

As Chu Teh spoke, Communist troops in Fukien Province opposite Quemoy were engaged in their biggest artillery practice since the Reds won the mainland from the Nationalists in 1949. The Nationalist Defense Ministry in reporting the firing said no shells fell on Quemoy.

Morris had been an assistant to former Asst. Secretary of Agriculture James T. Ralph, also fired because of his connections with the gift-giving Texas promoter.

In his appearance before the subcommittee Ralph had disclosed that he and Morris each received two $100 money orders from Estes. He said they turned the money over to the Democratic Party.

There were also allegations that Morris had a list of persons who received similar money orders from Estes, including several Congressmen and a member of the administration.

In the Senate hearing Friday, a controversy swirled about a letter Charles S. Murphy, Freeman's undersecretary, wrote to the subcommittee April 20. In it Murphy declared he knew of no "substantial evidence that Estes was guilty of a criminal offense" in connection with transfers of cotton acreage allotments.

The House subcommittee headed by Rep. L. H. Fountain, D-N.C., kept its questioning of Morris a mystery.

The subcommittee refused to give any hint about the nature of Morris' testimony at a closed session Friday.

James Naughton, subcommittee counsel, also declined to say whether transcripts of Morris' testimony would be made public, or whether Morris would testify at a public hearing.

Freeman fired Morris last April 16 for refusing to answer questions about his relationships with Estes.

Pitt Soaked By 4.35-Inch Rain; Farmers' Crop Concern Grows

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

Farmers didn't need the deluge of rain which poured down on their tobacco, corn and other crops yesterday and through the night, farm agents said this morning.

Though the heavy accumulation of rain—4.35 inches in Greenville—caused problems for highway and utilities maintenance crews, the farmers were the ones who suffered the real damage.

County Agent S. C. Winchester, who has been out to look at crops today, said that tobacco was blown over and leaves were broken by the wind. "I talked to several growers this morning and they are quite concerned about it," Winchester said.

Tobacco Specialist S. J. Weeks stated that "We would think there would be some drowned tobacco" in fields where drainage is poor. "How serious this would be depends on the length of the rain and how soon we have a bright, sunny day following the rain," he noted.

"I think we would have been better off if we had not had it,"

Weeks said of the rain, in connection with the tobacco crop.

Other crops affected by the rain include corn, peanuts, cotton and sweet potatoes. "They would be the crops that would be mainly affected by the heavy rain," in addition to this, the wind has blown the corn crop quite badly," Winchester said.

However, he pointed out that the corn crop is still young and could straighten itself out.

"The damage to most of these crops, other than tobacco, would be a temporary damage unless there is considerable water standing on the land for several hours. Then it would drown, like the tobacco," Winchester said.

Farmers may face two problems with their tobacco: straightening it back up, and difficulty in the harvesting. Some farmers had already begun priming the tobacco.

Highway maintenance crews in Pitt County were having their troubles this morning, too. Dirt roads were reported in bad shape and water had crossed highways in various sections.

Harold Ross reported that water was crossing N. C. Highway 43 south of Greenville near the city limits and N. C. 53 near Bell Forks. Evans Street Extension was also bothered with high water about a half mile beyond the city limits.

Signs warning of high water on the roads will be placed where needed and there will be maintenance crews to direct traffic if needed.

In the Greenville city limits, there were fewer problems. The rain had caused a few washouts and wind had blown tree limbs, but the street department crews said no serious difficulties had arisen. Storm sewers absorbed the rain "pretty well," a spokesman said.

L. P. Bloxam, director of the Greenville Utilities Plant, said the utilities department "got by very well" during the night. Heavy winds after 1 a.m. knocked some of the lines out on the Bell Arthur Road, Falkland Highway and on the Black Jack Road off N. C. Highway 43, but few people were affected and power was restored in a short time, Bloxam said.

The Tar River was at a 6.5-foot level today, rising.

Temperatures have been cool, with the high for yesterday at 69 degrees. The low recorded during the night was 64 degrees.

The 4.35 inches of rain occurred between yesterday morning and 9 a.m. today, as recorded at the Greenville Utilities Plant. Highest winds were reported in gusts at 40 miles per hour about 4 a.m. At 8 a.m., winds were gusting between 25 and 32 miles per hour, John Buck said.

Continue Query Ousted Official

By G. MILTON KELLY

WASHINGTON (AP)—William E. Morris, ousted Agriculture Department official, faced more questioning behind closed doors today about his friendship and dealings with Billie Sol Estes.

Morris' recall by a House Government Operations subcommittee shifted the spotlight from recessed Senate public hearings on the Estes case marked Friday by peppy exchanges between Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman and his questioners.

Freeman denied Republican senators' charges that Estes had received favored treatment from the department and that Freeman's administration had been slow to crack down on Estes' get-rich-quick schemes under farm aid programs.

The House subcommittee headed by Rep. L. H. Fountain, D-N.C., kept its questioning of Morris a mystery.

The subcommittee refused to give any hint about the nature of Morris' testimony at a closed session Friday.

James Naughton, subcommittee counsel, also declined to say whether transcripts of Morris' testimony would be made public, or whether Morris would testify at a public hearing.

Ill Attorney Delays Trial

RALEIGH (AP)—The illness of a defense attorney brought an early weekend recess Friday for the drawn-out Wake Superior Court trial of influence peddling charges.

Jesse Jones of Kinston, one of four lawyers for Kidd Brewer, was taken to Rex Hospital when he complained of nausea and a severe headache.

The hospital reported Jones, in his late 60s, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and remained in critical condition today.

The trial has consumed four weeks, and the end is not in sight. At issue is whether Robert A. Burch, former state highway engineer, was influenced to rig highway sign specifications to favor companies represented by Brewer.

In addition to Brewer and Burch, defendants are: Robert M. Burch, son of the former engineer; two Newark, N. J., sign companies, Pfaff & Kendall, and Traffic and Street Sign Co.; and three men who served as executives of the companies, George Masfield, Martin Hamilton and Walter Schoenfeldt.

Testimony Friday dealt with operations of Interstate Services Inc., set up by Brewer to act as agent for sign companies selling their products in North Carolina.

Mayo Criticizes Gov't Attitude

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP)—A renowned surgeon criticized the federal government's attitude toward the medical profession in a speech here Friday night.

Dr. Charles W. Mayo of the famed Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., told the National Press Photographers Association that the government has made his profession "A whipping boy."

He said "Those who would like to get their foot in the doors of the hospitals in which we work have done their best to paint a public image of the physician that is far from flattering."

"There can be no doubt," added Dr. Mayo, "that under our present system of medical practice it has been possible to develop a nation whose collective health is second to none."

Dr. Mayo spoke at the NPPA's annual Sprague Awards banquet—the latest event of the organization's 17th annual convention.

In concluding business, Jim Bennett, of KLTZ-TV, Denver, Colo., was elected president of the NPPA for a two-year term. He succeeds Don Swenson of the Rochester, Minn., Post-Bulletin.

Charles Higgins of the Philadelphia Bulletin replaced Bennett as treasurer.

LONDON (AP)—Britain agreed Friday night to grant its African colony of Uganda independence by Oct. 9.

The agreement was announced after Colonial Secretary Reginald Maudling had patched up a territorial quarrel between two rival kingdoms in the colony—Buganda, biggest of Uganda's four kingdoms, and neighboring Bunyoro.

Bipartisan Plan Promises Social Security Medicare

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bipartisan plan for giving health care to the aged through Social Security financing has been unveiled in the Senate and appears to have a good chance of passing.

Good Democratic whip Hubert H. Humphrey predicted that there was a possibility it would clear the House this year, too.

"A good, big Senate vote would give it impetus in the House," said the Minnesota senator.

The administration's health care plan has been bottled up in the House Ways and Means Committee, a majority of whose members appear to be against any Social Security health plan.

Humphrey told a reporter he felt the proposal should get at least 54 votes in the Senate, a comfortable margin.

The new compromise picked up support of five Republicans as soon as it was explained to the Senate Friday by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M. He described it as the product of weeks of negotiations to gather bipartisan backing.

It contains the same benefits as the Kennedy measure but would MEBANE — In a high noon ceremony today, Miss Patience Crumpler and James Alexander Barnwell Jr. were married in the Mebane Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Sam Cappel, pastor, officiated. The bride, Miss Crumpler, was escorted by her father, Mr. James Alexander Barnwell, and Dr. William M. Baker, who were the officiating ministers.

Miss Crumpler is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Junius Allen Crumpler of Mebane and the granddaughter of Mrs. W. R. Smith of Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander Barnwell of Lakeview Farm, Burlington, are parents of the bridegroom. Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Donald W. Fambrough, organist, and William E. Kirkpatrick, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of light ivory peau de soie designed with a scoop neckline, bracelet sleeves and a fitted bodice. The top of the bodice was made of re-embroidered Alencon lace re-embroidered with pearls and beads. The skirt was full cut and accented in back by a square cut chapel train made of re-embroidered Alencon lace and re-embroidered of pearls and beads.

Her veil was a bouffant face veil of silk illusion, attached to an imported headpiece of hand-made flowers were forward. She carried gardenias fashioned in a spray.

Miss Susan Green Parker of Goldsboro was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Harry H. Kerrison of Philadelphia, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Brent D. Nash of Tarboro, and Mrs. John N. Landi of Mebane. The bridesmaids wore a modified cut skirt with deer hem. The back of the dresses were accented by a chiffon panel from neckline to hemline. They wore matching bouffant hats made of self material roses and carried bouquets of daisies and ivy.

Miss Denise Landi, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. Her dress was a copy of the attendants' dresses and she also carried daisies and ivy in a nosegay.

James Alexander Barnwell was best man for his son. Ushers were Jerry A. Rucker of Spindale, Dennis H. Howell of Roanoke, Va., and C. Jack Crutchfield of Siler City, fraternity brothers of the bridegroom. Junius Allen Crumpler Jr., brother of the bride; Dr. Horry H. Kerrison, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, of Philadelphia; John N. Landi of Mebane, and Brent D. Nash of Tarboro, brothers-in-law of the bride.

Mrs. Crumpler, the bride's mother, wore a light aqua dress of peau de soie and lace, hat of self material, long white gloves and a corsage of orchids of a light aqua shade.

The bridegroom's mother was dressed in a lace sheath of French beige with shirred chiffon cummerbund of the same French beige. Her hat was of self material and a white orchid corsage.

For a southern wedding trip he bride changed into a silk linen suit of two shades of pink with which she wore a hat of self material styled in the fashion of a rose and a gardenia corsage.

A reception was given immediately following the ceremony at the home of the bride.

The bride attended Greensboro and Elon College. She made her debut at the state ball in Raleigh in 1960. Mr. Barnwell graduated in June from the University of North Carolina with a B.S. degree in Business Administration.

The couple will reside in Burlington after July 14.

The junior bridesmaid was Miss Suzy Steen, also a sister of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom chose as his best man his father, William Joseph Steen. John Randolph Gresham and Joe Lane Gresham of Ayden, brothers of the bride, were ushers.

The bride received her education at East Carolina College, Greenville, N. C., and this past school year was a member of the Princess Anne County Schools in Virginia. The bridegroom is a graduate of Syracuse University where he was a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Social fraternity. He is attached to U.S.S. Observation Island, Port Canaveral, Fla.

All About Town With Anne Mattox

Alex and LaRue Evans of Winterville and their son, DeLyle, left Monday morning for an automobile trip through the West.

Points of interest they will visit are Churchill Downs, Chicago, Mt. Rushmore, Yellowstone, Glacier National Park, Vancouver, Canada, the World's Fair, Crater Lake, San Francisco, Yosemite, Sequoia, Los Angeles, Santa Fe, and Nashville.

They plan to return in time for the opening of school in August as LaRue is a Washington High School teacher.

Miss Judy Redfern, president of Gamma Beta chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma at East Carolina College and Mrs. Ray Minges, Greenville, alumna adviser for the chapter, left this weekend to attend the National Convention of Tri Sigma, being held June 29-July 3 at the Buena Vista Hotel, Biloxi, Mississippi.

Official delegates from the Sorority's 62 collegiate chapters and their advisers will meet with the Executive Council and national officers of Tri Sigma as will delegates from more than 120 alumnae chapters.

Sigma Sigma Sigma, a social sorority for college women, was founded at Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia in 1898. "Sigma Serves Children" has been the sorority's continuing theme throughout the years and collegiate and alumnae chapters are encouraged to do local philanthropic work in this area.

On the national level Tri Sigma, through its Robbie Page Memorial, is cooperating with the North Carolina Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill, where funds have been made available to build The Children's Room and an isolation area for infants. Plans will be formulated at Biloxi for future grants from the Memorial at this or other sites.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Steele of 104 Avon Lane Greenville have financially "adopted" Cho Yong Suk, a 15-year-old Korean girl, through Foster Parents' Plan, Inc.

The foster parents have promised to contribute $15 a month toward the child's support for at least one year. The plan has rehabilitated more than 76,000 children on a personal basis since its founding in 1937 and is now helping more than 27,000 youngsters in Greece, Italy, Korea, France, Viet Nam, Hong Kong and the Philippines.

Foster Parents' Plan is a non-sectarian, non-profit, non-propaganda, independent, government-approved relief organization which provides children who are orphaned, distressed, or otherwise made destitute with the care, education and moral support they need. The foster parent promises to contribute $15 monthly for at least one year; of this sum, the child receives $8 each month as an outright cash grant. The remainder is used for periodic food and new clothing packages, translations of letters, medical services and education.

To encourage a warm, personal relationship between the foster parent and child, the parent receives a history of the child and a photograph. Correspondence through the Plan office is translated both ways. This exchange bridges the gap between parent and child and gives the youngster the feeling of security and love he needs.

Yong Suk was born in a little farming village in the northern part of Kang-won-Do province which, when the 38th Parallel was established at the end of World War II, unhappily was placed on the north, or communist dominated, side of the line. Her father was captured by the Communists and shot for giving aid to the UN Forces. The mother fled with her three little girls behind the UN lines and arrived in Seoul in the Spring of 1951. Three days after their arrival the mother died of exhaustion, exposure and starvation. The situation was discovered by the Women's Police and the three little orphans were placed in the Cross Orphanage in Taegu. The orphanage and all its children were moved to Pusan in 1952. This has been their home ever since.

Mrs. Dorothy W. Johnson, fourth grade teacher at Third Street School, is among 32 persons from throughout the United States studying at Birmingham Southern College on grants from the National Science Foundation.

At the college with Mrs. Johnson is her daughter Ruth, a student at J. H. Rose High School.

Miss Kathryn Johnson has accepted a teaching position with the Army Overseas Dependents Schools. Miss Johnson will teach in an elementary school in Germany.

Formerly associated with the Greenville City School, Miss Johnson has taught at Elmhurst School for the past two years.

Leaving in August, she expects to remain in Europe for one year.

More Grave Than Mere 'Mistakes'

Some of the "mistakes" of the Department of Agriculture in dealing with cotton planter Estes, as outlined by Secretary Freeman, appear to us to be far too grave to be passed off as mere "mistakes in judgment."

The appointment of Estes to the President's Cotton Advisory Committee at the time he was already under investigation for overplanting his allotments seems more than just a "mistake in judgment". Indeed, it reflects very poor judgment on the part of Agriculture Department officials, if indeed it can be maintained they exercised any sound judgment at all in the matter. This assertion is further borne out by the fact that Estes was appointed to the important committee on the same day that the department cancelled some 3,000 acres of cotton allotment transferred to Estes.

It may be that poor communications between various divisions of the Department could have been a contributing cause to the blunder, but at best this represents only a feeble excuse for the action.

In the Estes case, it appears that a long series of "mistakes in judgment" made possible the building of the Estes financial empire at the expense of the people of the nation. All of these mistakes may not have been made under the administration of the Department of Secretary Freeman, but obviously some of them were. Once the pattern was established, it seemed to continue until the showdown came within the past few months.

If the matter had not broken wide open when it did, how much longer would these "mistakes in judgment" have continued to Estes' advantage?

While investigations are shedding new light daily on the actions within the Department of Agriculture which led to Estes' building his financial empire, it is important that steps be taken to assure that similar incidents are not permitted to occur in the future.

It is not enough that investigators determine how things happened in connection with the Estes case. Such information will serve a useful purpose in the long run only if decisive and positive action is taken to prevent their happening again.

Officials, being human, are subjects to mistakes in judgment from time to time, but in the Estes relation with the Department of Agriculture the mistakes became too much of a pattern to be glossed over as inconsequential.

Education Sees True Evolution

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

EVOLUTION — A true evolutionary process is at work in the field of public higher education in North Carolina.

If, as appears likely, the legislature next year approves four year status for Charlotte and Wilmington colleges, new four-year senior colleges will have evolved out of the two-year junior college concept of the Community College act of 1957.

There will then be others in this development stage as well. Asheville-Biltmore college already is specifically earmarked for senior college status when its enrollment reaches 700. This will take a few more years. In the meantime, Asheville-Biltmore and other community colleges established under the 1957 act will become the older brothers of a system of additional community colleges. These also may come into being if the 1963 legislature approves the framework on which localities may act to establish them.

But Charlotte and Wilmington Colleges would become almost entirely new species.

DIFFERENCE — They will retain a few features of the community college, particularly in that they will be primarily local in nature with no dormitory facilities. But they are destined to become entirely state-supported, with strengthened curricula, more faculty, larger libraries and under the control of the State Board of Higher Education. The other community colleges would be under the State Board of Education and administered by 12-member boards of trustees appointed by the governor with the advice of the state board of education and also, to emphasize the local voice, with the advice of the boards of county commissioners and the county boards of education in the areas they are to serve.

With the plans for community colleges being hammered into shape for the 1963 legislature's action, the question arose as to the need for additional four-year colleges.

STUDY — North Carolina at present has 62 institutions of higher learning of all types, public and private, junior and senior. Seventeen are tax-supported—12 by the state and the five presently-established community colleges both by the state and by the county in which the college is located.

The three units of the Consolidated University of North Carolina carry an enrollment of approximately half of the 40,000 students in the tax-supported institutions. The five community colleges carry only six per cent of the enrollment load.

Five Negro colleges carry 15 per cent of the enrollment in the tax-supported schools and the other four senior colleges account for the other 30 per cent.

NEED — Two committees of the governor's commission on education beyond the high school, acting as a college survey committee, went into great detail on the question of need. It summarized its findings this way:

"The state needs additional four-year colleges for precisely the same reason that additional comprehensive two-year colleges are needed. If we need to make a two-year program rather widely available, we also need to extend, but on a much more restricted basis, the opportunity for our North Carolina youth to earn a college degree in a non-residential institution."

It said some 5,000 students are commuters to the 12 senior college and university campuses, most of them living at home and saving board and room for themselves and saving the state the expense of providing a home away from home.

Then the survey committee considered the question of locating the additional senior colleges where the need is greatest and where a proper start would be made. The three areas considered were Charlotte, Wilmington and Asheville, all with established community colleges.

SPECIFICS — Charlotte, the center of the most populous area in the state, would reach "commuter" students in Mecklenburg, Cabarrus, Gaston and parts of Iredell and Lincoln counties. This area, at present, has only Queens, Johnson C. Smith and Davidson colleges in Mecklenburg, Belmont Abbey and Sacred Heart in Gaston, Mitchell in Iredell and Barbara Scotia in Cabarrus — all, the committee noted, were relatively small and restricted enrollment.

The committee did not mention, presumably because they are just outside the perimeter, a number of private or church senior colleges, such as Catawba, Pfeiffer, Lenoir Rhyne and Gardner-Webb.

The study cited figures to indicate that, even so, within a 30 mile radius of Charlotte a four-year college could anticipate an enrollment of 3,000 by 1969-70. It said that establishment of such a non-resident senior college "would result in savings to the state and the student of several millions of dollars."

The committee noted that the metropolitan area of 100,000 people living within 30 miles of Wilmington presently is totally without a senior college.

It estimated that if a public senior college is established in Wilmington, enrollment at the present Wilmington College would grow to nearly 1,700 by 1968 after the full impact of the baby boom of 1947 is felt, and that on a computer-college basis, with no dormitories to be built, "the students, parents and the state would save several millions of dollars."

Safety Is Only Key To Happy July 4 Holiday

July 4th looms prominently in the middle of next week as a looked-forward-holiday of rest and relaxation for most Americans.

It likewise should loom as a prominent warning sign for motorists who are planning their family's outings during the coming week.

With the Fourth coming at mid-week, many families may decide that the one-day holiday is better fitted for lounging around home rather than taking a hurried trip to this place or that. Instead of joining the highway rush on that particular day, they have decided to do their "July Fourthing" either the weekend before or the weekend after the actual holiday.

In all probability the highways will be more crowded than usual during the next two weekends. The normal hazards of travel will be increased by the greater number of cars on the roads, and the greater number of people in a hurry to get wherever they are going.

It is a week in which every motorist should exercise extreme caution on the highways not just on the Fourth, but throughout the week.

It will be a happy holiday week only if it proves to be a safe holiday week.

Trade Bill Vote Pep-Up For JFK

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The thumping House vote for his trade expansion bill came like a tonic for President Kennedy, who had begun to talk like a frustrated man.

It's no sign, however, that other big, controversial measures on the Kennedy program will get through. The reciprocal trade policy, begun in 1934, has had both parties for years. President Eisenhower, for instance, was for lowering of trade barriers.

On other issues — his defeated farm bill for example — Kennedy has been learning the hard way the truth of a political maxim:

A presidential candidate's ability to promise is usually far greater than his ability to perform. Especially if he promises big innovations.

In the 1960 campaign, Kennedy pledged bold and novel programs which he argued were needed to "get this country going again."

This week he acknowledged, at a news conference, that he lacks a dependable working majority in Congress to get the job done. This despite the fact that the Democrats have big majorities in both chambers — 64 to 35 in the Senate and 263 to 174 in the House.

Kennedy said it was hard to get any big, controversial bill through because so many Democrats vote with the Republicans. But this has been going on for years.

In fact, the last president who could make sweeping promises of bold innovations, with any real hope of being able to perform, was Franklin D. Roosevelt in the 1932 campaign.

When he got elected, Congress really ate out of his hand for a while, passing bill after bill containing vast social and economic innovations. But that was because the country had been going through an economic cataclysm — the Great Depression. The mood of Congress, and the country, was anything but conservative.

But the New Deal ran out of steam after a while. A turning point might be said to have come in 1937. That year Roosevelt, angered because the Supreme Court had knocked down NRA and some of his other measures, proposed a bill which would have enabled him to enlarge and thereby pack the court. The bill was beaten.

Since the mood of Congress has largely been conservative. There have been no great innovations in domestic policy, barring of course the emergency measures of World War II.

If the Democratic party were a single unity, with a common viewpoint, Kennedy could count on a dependable majority. But the party has seldom been this. It's like a big tent, sheltering liberals and conservatives, to a degree, this also can be said of the Republican party.

In Congress the conservatives — Republican and Democratic — are the dominating force, and there's no sign on the horizon that this situation is likely to change any time soon.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

ALL OR NOTHING

Centuries ago missionaries went out from Rome to convert the wild tribesmen of Western Europe. It is said of these tribesmen that they were quite willing to be baptized provided their right arms were left unbaptized. With this arm they could smite their enemies and be as un-Christian as they wanted to be. They were perfectly willing that all of them be baptized, sanctified, provided one part of their body be left free to be used as they wanted to use it.

This idea of giving certain areas of our lives to the Lord and reserving other areas for ourselves is a common practice in the life of many of us. We are all, indeed, under the condemnation of guilt in this regard. Some may be guilty to such an extent that they might prefer the disagreeable term "hypocrite." Most people, however, are not hypocrites. They are just weak, indolent sinners who want to live partly in this world and partly in heaven; who want to give their hearts to God provided it will not involve too much personal sacrifice or the relinquishment of some deeply cherished weaknesses.

The Lord has no use for half of our lives. He has no more use for it than you and I would have for one half of a ten dollar bill. God is always ready to forgive us our sins, but He is never ready to allow us to commit part of our lives to Him and retain certain areas for ourselves.

If The Russians Had Their 'Druthers—

By REESE HART

Just 24 Years To Go

ROCKINGHAM, N. C. (AP) — Isaac Spencer, London, 76, turned from the typewriter in his small editorial office and said firmly:

"I've got a lot to do and just 24 years to do it."

Fifty-two years of newspapering haven't slowed him down. London looks more like a man of 60 and moves with the ambitious pace of a young reporter.

For 42 years he has been editor of the Rockingham Post-Dispatch, one of the most unusual weekly newspapers in America.

"I'm entirely unorthodox in running a newspaper," said London, dean of North Carolina editors.

"I don't care for pictures on the front page. I consider my space too valuable."

London disregards journalistic rules in style of writing and newspaper make-up. He carries many small items on his front page, often with a one-line heading over each item.

There is nothing fancy about his writing. The Post-Dispatch from page exudes friendliness, like a folksy letter from home.

"There's the way I want it," London explained. "I want the reader to feel that I'm writing to him personally. I consider the birth of a baby in Rockingham far more important than reporting any rowdy session of the United Nations."

When London began operating the Post-Dispatch in 1917, he started running on the front page under the heading, "Deaths," the names of persons who had died in the county in the last week. He still does this. Few obituaries, regardless of the person's prominence, appear on his front page.

"Everybody is exactly the same when they die," he remarked.

London uses jokes as fillers on the front page and throughout the paper. In 1942, the University of Missouri School of Journalism classed the Post-Dispatch the most unusual weekly in the nation.

Some years ago after the postmaster's job here became vacant, London wrote a speculative story in which he mentioned several possible candidates for the post. A few days later an elderly Negro man stopped him and asked, "Are we gonna have a colored postmaster?"

"No," he replied, "what makes you think so?"

"Well, I read in your paper that there were a couple of dark horses in the race for the job."

London is county historian chairman of the International Civitan essay contest for 1962, and has been chairman of the county draft board for 20 years. He is former chairman of the board of elections and the Rockingham school board.

1st Lady Human Interest

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 1962, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

It was suggested to me that I read an article on Jacqueline Kennedy, wife of the President, which appeared in "Esquire." This I did. And as I read it, written by Norman Mailer, I thought that I could not have been as brutal toward Eleanor Roosevelt in the days of the "New Deal" as this Mailer is toward Jacqueline Kennedy, whose bread he ate. I do not know Norman Mailer and bear him neither malice nor good-will.

I read the piece in "Esquire" and wondered why we subject our President's wives to the kind of nonsense which we call human interest. It seems that, having received a letter from Mrs. Kennedy, Norman Mailer felt like writing to her to say: "...that while I was now engaged in certain difficulties of writing about the present, I hoped on day when work was done to do a biography of the Marquis de Sade and the 'odd strange honor of the man.'"

He knew he was being wicked like a school-boy who writes a dirty word, for he says further in this piece:

"Now sociology has few virtues, but one of them is sanity. In writing such a letter to Mrs. Kennedy I was losing my sociology. The Catholic wife of a Catholic candidate for President was not likely to find de Sade as familiar as a tea cozy. I received no reply. I had smashed the limits of such letter-writing. In politics a break in sociology is as clean as a break in etiquette."

This article drools on and on in a similar vein of slight ridicule and colossal impudence, all done to give the impression of ridicule, as for instance:

"Since Jackie Kennedy was not visible during this time, there was an opportunity to listen to her voice. It produced a small continuing shock. At first, she seemed to be speaking from the set. I thought I was turned to the wrong station, because the voice was a quiet parody of the sort of voice one hears on the radio late at night, dropped softly into the ear by girls who sell soft mattresses, depilatories, or creams to brighten the skin."

After all, a person's voice is what it is. I never heard Norman Mailer's voice but whatever the Lord gave him, bari-tone or tenor, soprano or bass, it is what it is and he can thank the good Lord that he does not suffer from cerebral palsy or some such thing.

My good friend, Westbrook Pegler, could take this Mailer apart more competently than I can, for Pegler is a surgeon who knows how to cut vanity out of the human heart and bring the concealed down to their proper level. At such a sport, I, alas, am an amateur.

Nevertheless, I wonder why everyone with a typewriter, bought or borrowed, feels privileged to pillory a woman who happens, by the accidents of marriage, to be wife to a President or Governor, or even a Congressman. Marriage, being a sacrament, means that one takes the other for better or for worse, and surely the wife of a politician has a tough time. She is cut off from privacy, which is a woman's dearest prerogative and she becomes a prey to everyone who needs to sell an article to a magazine or who wants to cut a phrase. It is not customary in these days to respect human beings for what they are. Rather, we live in an era when there is joy in seeing a fat man slip on a banana peel.

So, Mailer dares to write: "Mrs. Kennedy moved like a wooden horse. A marvelous horse, perhaps even a live horse, its feet hobbled, its head unready to turn for fear of a flick from the crap. She had that intense wooden lack of rest, that lack of comprehension for each word offered up which one finds only in a few of those curious movie stars who are huge box office."

This is not good writing about the First Lady of the land who, in a period of intense national difficulty, serves the nation as well as she can. A little fair play is more mannerly than fanciful verbiage. The White House is a national sanctuary; those who are permitted within its portals have an obligation to maintain its dignity.

"Business will largely level off in July. But don't let any businessman complain to you. Tell him it's up to him to find a way to pry loose the cork that bottles up savings."

OLD PROMOTER SAYS

Twist Lifts Business's Face

"The twist has done a lot to improve business's image," the Old Promoter said on his visit today. "So?" I so-ed.

"For years I have been complaining that businessmen made asses of themselves by posing for pictures with highballs in their hands at trade conventions. These pictures, published in trade magazines, created the impression that conventions were drinking bouts for the business elite."

"But this season, businessmen and their wives are being photographed doing the twist at conventions. And no man is tycoon enough to hold a highball while twisting. The delegates may be looking more foolish, but they are also looking more sober."

Stabilization Praises House For Trade Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The Flu-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp. has commended the House for passing President Kennedy's trade bill, and urged the Senate to quickly follow suit.

The resolution was adopted Friday at the organization's 16th annual stockholders meeting after a top U.S. Agriculture Department official said the measure is needed for "increased flexibility and strength at the bargaining table."

Carl T. Hicks of Walstonburg, reelected president, proposed the resolution. Raymond A. Ioanes, director of the U.S. Foreign Agricultural Service, told the group there are indications the European Common Market will be willing to negotiate further reductions in tariff rates on U.S. tobacco.

"This puts the spotlight squarely on the next round of negotiations and the bargaining strength we can carry to the bargaining table," he asserted.

In addition to Hicks, the board of directors reelected L. T. Weeks as secretary-treasurer and general manager. Named vice presidents were: W. P. Langdale, Valdosta, Ga.; Roy B. Davis Jr., Paces, Va.; T. W. Williamson, Florence, S.C.; and Billy W. Hill, Jasper, Fla.

Weeks indicated there is a need to change grading and pricing standards to reflect market trends. For example, he said, 45 per cent of the co-op's present inventory of 351 million pounds consists of grades supported last year at 71 cents a pound, or more.

Stabilization handles tobacco purchased on auction floors under the government price support program. Its operations cover the five states of the flu-cured belt—Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia.

X15 Pilot Says Craft Cracked

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—X15 pilot John McKay, maneuvering the rocket plane in a heat test, says it "popped and cracked like an old hot stove" as he exceeded three times the speed of sound.

The noise, expected at speeds above 2,100 miles an hour, sounded as if "somebody had whacked the plane in the tail with a sledge hammer," McKay said.

He sat coolly inside the craft Friday as it zipped over the desert at temperatures hot enough to melt conventional planes.

Temperatures of about 1,000 degrees were recorded by 400 thermometers beneath the X15's nickel and steel skin.

The air friction blistered the plane's black paint and jabbed streaks of white through a special green thermal paint on sections of the fuselage.

McKay, making his first run in the X15 since installation of its 57,000-pound thrust engine, reported that rear speed brakes stuck briefly at an angle of 10 degrees during the flight. But he was able to unfreeze them, he said, by working hydraulic controls.

Main purpose of the flight was to determine which parts of the X15's surface became hottest—in information that will aid in design of future space craft.

During the flight, he hit 3,204 m.p.h. and 83,000 feet. The X15 has flown 4,159 m.p.h. and 250,000 feet in other tests.

Pitt Bond Sales Show Increase

Pitt County's cumulative sales of Series E and H Bonds for the year are $150,504, which is 25.4 per cent of the county's dollar goal for the year, according to R. W. Howard, County Volunteer Chairman.

May was the tenth consecutive month in which Series E Savings Bonds sales in North Carolina showed an increase over the corresponding month of the previous year. Series E Bonds sales of $3,606,384 during May were over six percent higher than sales in May 1961 and are the highest sales recorded for the month of May in seven years.

Total sales of Series E Bonds for the months of January-May totaled $18,814,626. This is an increase of 3.6 per cent over the same months a year ago.

Series H Bonds were off 17 per cent during May with sales totaling $295,000, but cumulative sales for this series is over nine per cent ahead of the January-May performance of last year.

Combined sales of Series E and H Bonds for the first five months of the year amounted to over $21,520,000 dollars, an increase of more than 41 per cent of North Carolina's annual goal for this year.

Forced Nazi Admission By Youthful Argentine

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Police held a 21-year-old youth today after he was seized and beaten by students and made to acknowledge he was a member of a pro-Nazi group that has been terrorizing the Jewish community here.

He also gave names of other members of the organization, implicating several military men and members of the federal police force.

The youth, Jorge Steffens Soler, was seized during a rally Friday night, of medical students protesting against recent antisemitic acts. They searched him, found a revolver, and then beat him and made him admit his membership by Israeli agents in 1960.

In his public statement, Soler listed names of fellow-members who allegedly kidnapped a 19-year-old Jewish girl and scratched a swastika on her breast, and who scratched swastikas on the cheek and forehead of a student with a Jewish mother.

Reports of antisemitic acts increased after the execution in Israel of Adolf Eichmann for the wartime murder of millions of Jews. Eichmann, ex-Gestapo colonel, was seized in Argentina made him admit his membership by Israeli agents in 1960.

Sir Winston Stronger After Lengthy Sleep

By TOM OCHILTREE

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill awakened today from a sound, strength-building sleep following an operation in which surgeons pinned together his fractured left thigh.

He began this bright summer day with an austere breakfast consisting only of a cup of coffee diluted with cold milk.

A medical bulletin issued at 11:00 o'clock (6 a.m. EDT) said: "Sir Winston Churchill has had a good night with natural sleep and he is comfortable. His condition is at present satisfactory."

The bulletin was signed by Lord Moran, Churchill's old friend and personal physician; and two other doctors.

It was issued shortly after Lady Churchill called on her husband. Physicians are counting on Churchill to retain the strong recuperative powers which have carried him through a long, active and often dangerous life.

"If all goes well, the 87-year-old former prime minister will be in Middlesex Hospital about two weeks and should be walking again within a month after his release."

Get well telegrams from the great and humble in all parts of the world were delivered to Churchill's flower-filled hospital room.

Churchill fell in a Monte Carlo hotel early Thursday and was flown to London Friday in a jet ambulance plane of the Royal Air Force.

Britons breathed a sigh of relief when he arrived safely back in this island kingdom which he defended so stoutly in World War II. They were further heartened by hospital announcements pronouncing operation a success and giving promise of an uncomplicated recovery.

Philip H. Newman, senior orthopaedic consultant at the Middlesex Hospital and one of the men who performed the operation, answered the question the world was asking when he left for home Friday night.

"The old man is all right," he said.

Britons also took comfort from the fact that although a room was reported prepared at the hospital for Lady Churchill to be near her husband, she spent the night at their home in Hyde Park Gate.

The wartime prime minister was reported to have fallen into a sound natural sleep after the 90-minute operation. Steel pins were run through the fractured ends of the bone, near the left hip, to hold them together.

A bulletin said the operation was successful and Churchill's condition was "satisfactory."

Churchill broke his thigh-bone in a fall in his hotel room at Monte Carlo Thursday morning shortly after he arrived on the Riviera for a vacation. He was taken to the Princess Grace Hospital there and was flown home to London Friday.

Churchill is a private patient and is paying $112 a week for his room. He is not being treated under Britain's national health scheme, which provides free treatment for all.

He is being cared for by a nursing staff of eight.

One advantage of the planning operation that Sir Winston underwent is that it enables the patient to be out of bed fairly soon. This helps to counter the risk of hypostatic pneumonia, which sometimes affects elderly people confined to bed for long periods.

Big Boats On River Remain Wistful Memory Along Tar

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

Will the big boats ever come again to the river? Will commerce flow down the Tar as it did in years past? Or does the river and the steamboats belong only to the yesterdays? Perhaps time can give the answer.

Twenty-Two Years Ago
On May 17, 1940, James L. Whitfield wrote to the News and Observer, "The river, dredged some time ago, is expected to be opened to traffic during the ensuing summer (1940)." This dredging action then taking place on the Tar was the result of the Carolina Shippers Association which organized in 1925. It had its first headquarters in Wilson. It was a voluntary organization and was supported by membership dues. In September, 1933, it moved to Greenville. Paramount in purpose was the promotion of the Tar River Project. The late Robert L. Wright, then president of East Carolina Teachers College, headed the association. A resolution calling for a further survey and consideration by Army engineers was put forth. A hearing on the matter was set for April 26, 1934. During that week Dr. Wright died.

Stumbling Blocks

But there were many stumbling blocks in the path of the operations taking place on the Tar that May day in 1940. After many conferences at Wilmington and Greenville reports by Army Engineer offices were unfavorable.

Another appeal was filed with the Board for Rivers and Harbors. The hearing was set for May, 1935, in Washington. Thirty people from Greenville attended and presented statements. The Board referred the matter to the Division Engineer in Richmond. The case seemed hopeless but it appeared as if the Division Engineer was in sympathy with it. But even after a physical survey of the river, the District Engineer reported unfavorably.

At Last

On November 12, 1936, Col. Borwn had a meeting in his office in Richmond. Twelve Greenville men attended. Col. Brown wrote a favorable report, but even then it seemed that all efforts would be in vain again. But further efforts on the part of men such as Messers Picklen, Hogshire, VanNortwick, J. H. Blount, B. B. Moseley, and Mr. Dave Whichard got the thing approved.

News that the boats would once more swim the river brought back memories of the old boats of the Tar. Some remembered by the hearing about the "Cotton Plant", one time tender to the ram Albermarle, and floating battery at the battle of Plymouth. After the war the boat took up freight hauling on the Tar. This boat was based up river somewhere near old Sparta. Others remembered the "Greenville" and "Myers".

But it was the first trip on the "Tarboro" that left perhaps one of the most vivid impressions on folks along the river. They say when she first blew her whistle, people thought the world was about to end. It was a shrill thing, and frightening to those at work in the field, and in the woods. Workers fled both plow and saw. Many fell on their knees and started praying. Others got to their homes and hid under beds. Others hid in pack houses and barns. This shrill blast of the "Tarboro's" whistle was taken as the work of Gabriel, and a lot of them weren't taking any chances.

Hardee's Creek

The new landing place was at Hardee's Creek where the boat had a turning place. It was known as Port Terminal. The Greenville waterway had a depth of 12 to 14 feet and a base of 100 feet. An annual appropriation of $47,000 was provided for keeping the river in working shape.

Sugar Boat

On Saturday, October 12, 1940, a local newspaper carried the announcement by the T. B. Kittrell Company of the arrival at Port Terminal of a boat load of sugar. The coming of boats again to the area looked as if the efforts on the part of those in the area had borne fruit. The river was being put to paying use again.

But it wasn't long before war came and the years found the Tar shoaling up again. The last boats used the Tar in 1950.

Try Again

Efforts for dredging out the channel and bringing back to life the Port Terminal were tried again in the late 1950's.

But those bore no fruit. This project would have opened the channel from Port Terminal to Washington. This was the last attempt to make a part of the river deep enough to allow boats to ply its waters.

Future

It looks as if the river will slowly return to the condition of the time of the Indian. True pleasure boats will use it and fishermen will search it for fish. But the day of the big boat on the Tar seems to have passed on into history. And with its passing a chapter in history has been laid away forever. The present had only a modern, brief look at what one was. And even the boats that came back for awhile never had the appeal of the old stern and side wheelers. For their's was a day that never would fit into this day and time.

Their patient plodding pace would be lost in our fast moving conception of time. So put them between the pages of a book and let the years own them. For it is to the years that they belong—the old Cotton Plant, the Meyers, the Tarboro, and the Greenville. And the others too that had their day on the river. Only a small handful remember them. Even the river has forgotten them for the water that bore them has long gone out to sea and been born countless times into cloud and rain drops. Maybe the river banks and a few old trees haven't forgotten. Perhaps they recall the cry of the whistle, the feel of wheel pushed water, and the black smoke floating out and upward.

But it seems safe to assume that the Tar will never again be an artery of commerce.

For there are too many things against it being so. Once it was the railroads that killed it off.

Now man has added other wheels and other ways of carrying his goods.

A return to river traffic in commerce for this area is almost as unthinkable as hauling tobacco to market with mule and cart.

TODAY . . . pleasure boats use large pilings commercial craft once used, tie up to the dock here.

State Highway Patrol Sees 33rd Anniversary

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer
The North Carolina State Highway Patrol will observe its 33rd anniversary tomorrow as the state's primary law enforcement agency.

Organized in 1929, the original group was composed of 10 officers and 27 troopers. They were commissioned at ceremonies on the steps of the Capitol July 1. The group has just returned from a statewide motorcade to show citizens "what a highway patrolman looked like."

"Such has changed in the past 33 years. Troopers, rather than dressing in gray cavalry type uniforms, leather leggings and crushed caps now wear gray tailored uniforms and striking campaign hats.

The patrolmen's vehicles in the early days of the Patrol were motor bikes, while the officers drove wire wheeled Ford coups. Not so today. In this age the lawmen operate sleek silver and black interceptors, with a number of unmarked vehicles thrown in to add a question mark in the thoughts of violators.

The patrol's first commanding officer, Captain Charles D. Farmer, served until 1937 and was communications officer at the time of his death in 1950.

The early day highway patrolman personified the rugged individualist. He spent long hours on routine patrol of the highways, with no protection from the elements, no radio communications and little contact with his superiors. Veteran troopers recall patrolling areas singly which are now policed by entire patrol districts.

The original group was under the State Highway and Public Works Commission where it underwent various reorganizations and changes as manpower increased. Later operations were switched to the Revenue Department.

Old timers with the organization recall that many off duty hours were spent collecting bad checks involved in state business transactions and inspecting retail gas outlets.

Fewer than a half million cars were registered when the patrol began doing business. Last year in North Carolina, motor-vehicle registration totaled 1,907,988 vehicles.

Its ranks were doubled in 1931 and promotions to sergeant came for the charter members. One of those donning three stripes at the time was David T. Lambert, now colonel and in command of the 622-member present day patrol.

The patrol weathered hard times and increased in numbers and efficiency as the nation endured the depression years. Annual salaries of $1,800 were cut 35 per cent in the early 30s by a back-to-the-wall legislature. Two years before there had been 1,800 applications for the original 37 available jobs.

A radio communications branch was established in 1937. The first station went on the air at Williamston. Now the patrol operates a net of 10 FM broadcasting stations, one of which is located atop Mt. Mitchell, the highest radio transmitter in Eastern America.

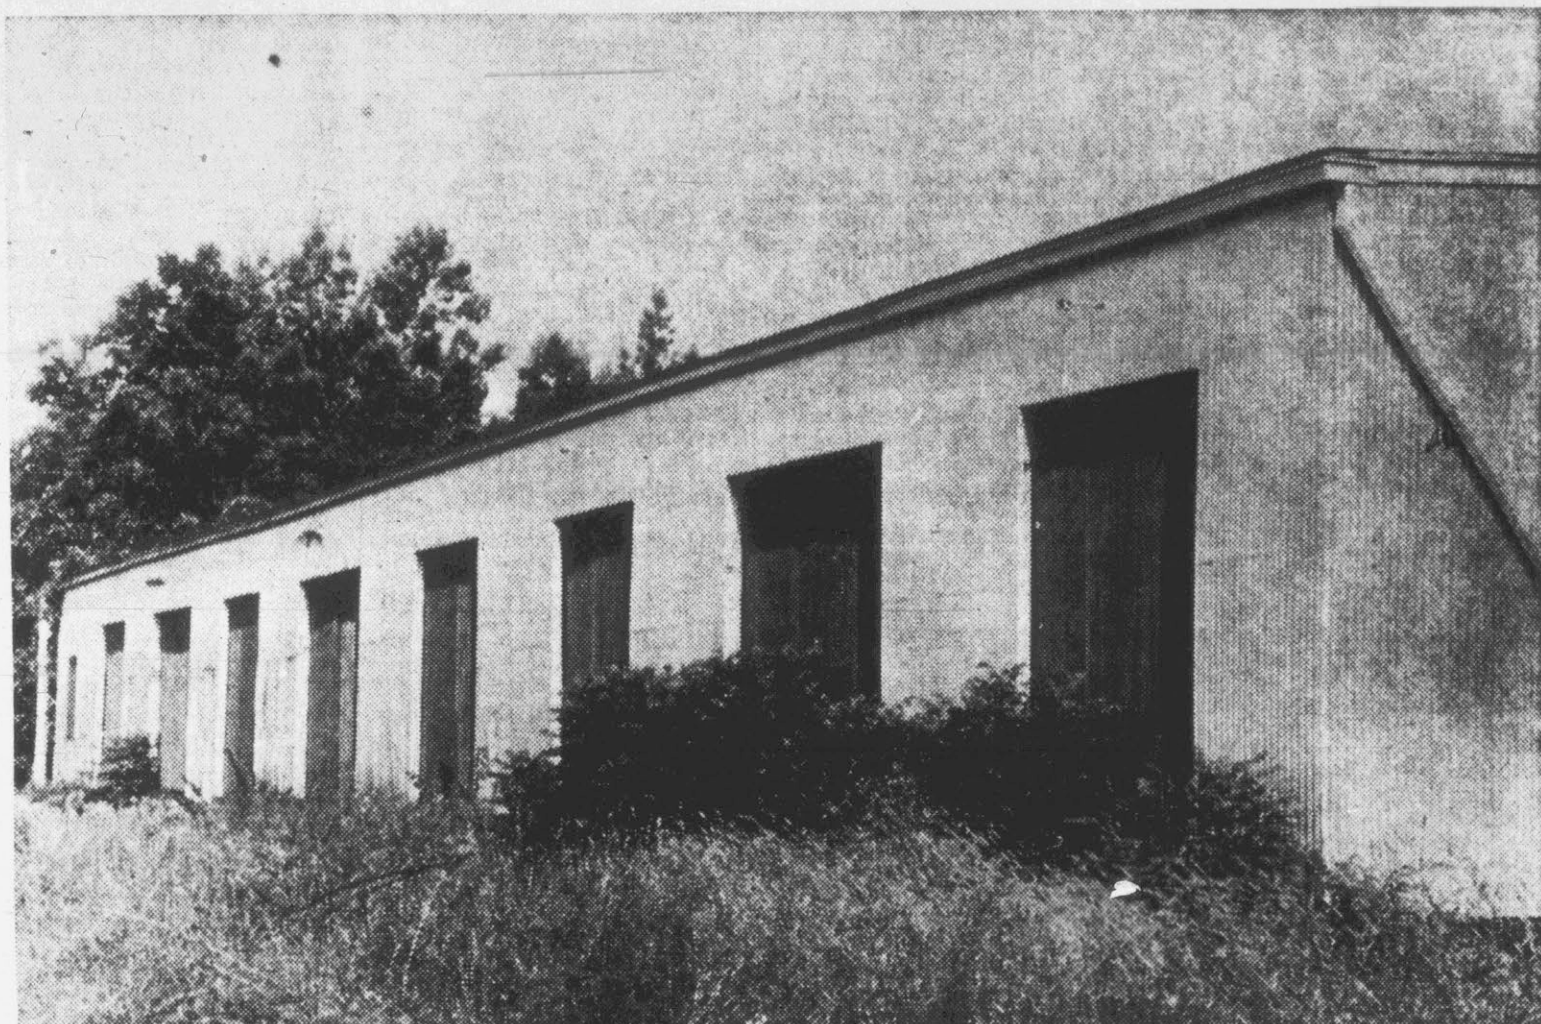

Troop A, with headquarters in Greenville, boasts three of the 10 manned radio facilities at Williamston, New Bern and Elizabeth City. The troop, largest in area with 24 Eastern North Carolina Counties, also has three repeater stations which automatically relay messages sent out by the patrol's radios. These are at Comfort in Jones County, Englehardt in Hyde County and one at Rocky Mount.

Violence came to the ranks as the 30s were closing. Near Asheville, Patrolman George Penn was ambushed and slain by a pair of desperados who had terrorized much of the state with armed holdups.

Penn, who was conducting a routine checking station, detected the badmen—Wash Turner and Bill Payne—as they tried to elude the check point. He gave chase and was cut down by a rifle slug as he stepped from his car to arrest them at the (Continued on Page 8)

VETERANS . . . Capt. S. H. Mitchell, one of the five original Highway Patrolmen still active in the law enforcement body talks with T-Sgt. J. B. Boyd, another veteran officer who joined the patrol in 1931, two years after it was organized.

ONCE BUSY . . . the Port Terminal building is now empty and surrounded by weeds.

Once In Public Health—Stayed

By PATRICIA MOORE

Public health was a field Goldie Hemingway sort of drifted into, but once there, she stayed eighteen and a half years.

On July 1, Mrs. Hemingway officially resigns from the Pitt County Health Department and nursing.

She doesn't know exactly what drew her into her long career. She went into training in Florence, S. C., about the age of 18, when an older cousin did, which may have influenced her somewhat. In her family are a sister and two cousins who are nurses.

She admits that "My heart goes out to people. I wanted to help people." Mrs. Hemingway can't recall a single unpleasant incident during her public health work.

Though she began nursing following completion of her training, Mrs. Hemingway didn't enter the field of public health until many years later. She remained in her native state of South Carolina for two years, then went to Rocky Mount where she and a friend held nursing positions. After a brief job in New York, Mrs. Hemingway and the friend returned to former jobs.

It was after she moved to Bethel that she met her late husband, Dr. Jasper D. Hemingway, undoubtedly through their mutual interest in medicine. Marriage brought a 20-year break in her career, during which time Mrs. Hemingway devoted her time to her husband and family except for brief duties for friends. Her husband died in 1952.

War emergency work gradually drew her into the public health field. She had done volunteer work with the Pitt County Health Department, about once a week, when she decided to accept a full time position in 1945.

Enjoyed Volunteer Work

"I had gotten to know the nurses and liked them. I had enjoyed my volunteer work and had worked with clinics," she recalls. When she first began working with the health department, she had no idea she would stay so long. "I just stayed," she said.

Her enjoyment of public health work and of wanting to help people are probably two of the more obvious reasons why Mrs. Hemingway became associated with the health department. A public health nurse must be a registered nurse and fulfill a varied realm of duties. These include home visiting, the school health program, maternity, post-partum, infant and orthopedic clinics as well as other clinics and work. Primarily, Mrs. Hemingway has worked in the Bethel area and in Stokes, Pactolus, Farmville and Fountain.

Over the years she has become a familiar figure, making her rounds as a public health nurse. She says when she first started her work, "I didn't know very much about the area, but later I learned every little path."

"In those years, Mrs. Hemingway has rendered a very good service to the county," Dr. John Futrell, Pitt health director, says.

Since she began nursing, Mrs. Hemingway has seen many changes. "Everything's progressed. There is more immunization, there are more clinics, larger crowds, time has progressed," she says. Roads have progressed, too. She can remember the time when her duties took her on more than a few dirt roads, which now are paved. Now Mrs. Hemingway plans to devote her time to leisure and some gardening.

She has three children and two stepchildren. Her sons Edward and Frank Hemingway and their families live in the Bethel area, and a third son, John D. Hemingway, lives in Corapeake. Her step-daughter, Mrs. Walter C. Clayton, lives in Bethel, and a stepson, Jack Hemingway, resides in Dunn.

LEISURE DAYS . . . are ahead for Mrs. Goldie Hemingway, public health nurse who resigns from the Pitt County Health Department on Sunday, after eighteen and a half years of service. (Reflector Staff Photo.)

Observatory Plans For A Telescope In Orbit

By GORDON R. PETERSON

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—"Twin-kie, twinkle, little star. . . but how much?"

What is the sun made of? What does Earth look like from outer space?

At the Kitt Peak National Observatory, the world's largest observatory, answers to these questions and others like them are the daily goal of director Dr. Nicholas U. Mayall and his staff of scientists.

The observatory, atop 6,875-foot Kitt Peak on the Papago Indian reservation some 45 miles southwest of Tucson, was the first in the world to use television to measure a star's twinkling.

Test Largest Telescope

This summer, the scientists in one of the nation's sunniest spots will take a $5 million look at old Sol. It will be the first test of the world's largest solar telescope.

Another project of the newest of the world's major observatories, dedicated in 1960, is a close-up look at Venus and Mars, the mystery planets of our solar system.

A huge cloud cover hovering over Venus has prevented study of that planet from Earth, while studies of the red planet have brought many conflicting reports.

Men on Mars?

But the Kitt Peak astronomers hope to solve many of the problems by putting a telescope some 22,000 miles out in space for a closer study of the planets and a possible answer to the question of whether life exists other than on Earth.

Eventually, the observatory may be able to probe within a few miles of the various planets, or even land on them. In the meantime, orbiting telescopes will be "far beyond" earth's distorting atmosphere, giving us pictures of unparalleled clearness and accuracy.

Dr. A. Keith Pierce, director of the observatory's solar telescope project, predicted. Wherever the sky-bound instruments go, they will represent the work of scientists throughout the nation. The Association of Universities for Research in Astronomy (AURA), with headquarters in Tucson, cooperates to allow astronomers and other scientists in member universities to pool their know-how for the advancement of their common cause—learning the secrets of the Universe.

Among Earth-bound instruments, Kitt Peak's 84-inch stellar scopes are considered some of the finest. The 70-ton instruments are so delicately mounted (Continued on Page 8)

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

Dublin has at last officially recognized the pre-eminence of James Joyce, one of the greatest of all her writers, though a voluntary exile much of his life. On June 16, the city celebrated the centenary (so named after the central character in Joyce's "Ulysses") by dedicating the "lower near the city where Joyce lived" for him.

Poindexter

which also figures in "Ulysses"—as a memorial to him. The date was chosen not because of any biographical relationship with Joyce but, because the action in "Ulysses" took place on June 16, 1904. And so a great experimental work finally conquers prejudice and the genuine bafflement which its innovations caused when it was published in 1922.

O. Henry
In the Greensboro paper the other day there was speculation about the origin of "O. Henry" as W. S. Porter's pen name. No one can be sure of the answer to this question about one of North Carolina's most famous writers, concerning whose life there is still so much that is hazy.

Among Interesting People
Just published is an autobiography by Corinna Smith, "Interesting People." This simple title is certainly well chosen, since Mrs. Smith seems to have known all the important writers of the last half-century. Many of them were clients of her father, George H. Putnam, the publisher.

In her book Mrs. Smith tells of her friendship with O. Henry. On one occasion he came by the Putnam home in New York to find the family gone for the summer. A crew of men was there moving out articles which O. Henry understood were to be forwarded to the family. So he pitched in and helped, only to discover later that the men

Both culprits were later put to death in the electric chair. They were caught by a party of officers led by Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward Scheidt, then a special agent of the FBI.

The Penn shooting was more than matched in viciousness the evening of November 5, 1957, when troopers J. T. Brown of Sanford and W. L. Reese, Rockingham, were gunned down as they sought to stop a speeding automobile driven by Frank Wetzel, an ex-convict from New York. Wetzel was tried for both slayings and is serving a life sentence under maximum security in the state prison.

In 1944 the highway patrol was brought under the jurisdiction of the newly created Department of Motor Vehicles to continue its regularly assigned task of "patrolling the roads and safeguarding lives and property."

At that time its strength had grown to 213 men and it operated unchanged at that level throughout the war years. Patrol command was taken over in 1950 by a career officer, appointed from the ranks. He was former Col. James R. Smith, now retired. Smith directed the patrol for ten years except for a brief interval when he was relieved by patrol Major W. B. Lentz, who also rose through every patrol grade to the top post.

Smith retired from the ranks in 1960 and was succeeded by the present commanding officer, Col. Lambert.

Of the original 37 only five are still on active duty. One of the five is Captain S. H. Mitchell, Commanding Officer of Troop A, Greenville. Mitchell assumed his duties as commander of the troop in May 1960 after rising through the ranks.

The other four "originals" are Lambert, Major W. B. Lentz, director of communications and transportation; Captain A. W. Welch, Troop D, Greensboro; and T-Sgt. W. W. Stone of Greensboro.

whom he had helped were thieves.

Generosity

The new Harper's contains some fine articles. One is by Sir Charles Snow "On Magnanimity." In it Sir Charles cites some classical cases of magnanimity, the most remarkable being that of Isaac Barrow, who resigned his professorship of mathematics at Cambridge in 1669 in favor of a student of his who, Barrow decided, was a better mathematician than he. The student was Sir Isaac Newton, then 27.

Barrow, incidentally, was a man with several strings to his bow, being also a classicist and a theologian. He was best known, however, for the length of the sermons which he preached. On one occasion he preached so long in Westminster Abbey that the congregation got the organ to play in order to blow him down.

Another Case

Snow also tells the story of the Cambridge mathematician, G. H. Hardy, who showed his generosity by personally undertaking the education of Srinivasa Ramanujan, a native mathematical genius. As a poor clerk in India, Ramanujan had astonished Hardy by sending him some examples of his mathematical thinking through the post. Ultimately, the student outstripped the teacher, according to Hardy's own generous testimony.

Casting Out Demons

Another work to add to the list of publications by ECC faculty members is Dr. Corinne Rickert's "The Case of John Darrell, Minister and Exorcist." This work, one of a series of monographs from the University of Florida, is a careful, scholarly exploration of a little-known corner of the Elizabethan world.

John Darrell, by modern standards, at least, had a bizarre way of helping people. In an age that believed that one could be physically possessed by demons, Darrell discovered that he could effect "dispossession," and he exercised this power, apparently in perfectly good faith.

However, Darrell somehow ran afoul of his ecclesiastical superiors (largely because he was a Puritan, Dr. Rickert thinks), was convicted of fraud, and was languishing in prison as he faded out of history, still bravely convinced of the righteousness of his deeds.

In addition to giving a glimpse of a man of integrity, Dr. Rickert's work throws interesting light upon Elizabethan superstitions and the scandals of its judicial processes, not to mention the religious tensions of the age.

Dr. Rickert is to be complimented for the skillful way she has worked out her evidence and written it up in this monograph, a most interesting little book.

Fine Arts Series

Just released by the Entertainment Committee of the College is a schedule for the Fine Arts Series next school year.

It is good to be able to report that the quality of the artists who will be brought to town will be high — such people as William Warfield and Judith Anderson being on the list. Tickets will be made available to the general public at a time to be announced soon.

ECC Professors At Convention

Dr. Douglas R. Jones, director of the East Carolina College Education Department, and Dr. Frank G. Fuller, professor of education, are now in Denver, Colo., for sessions of the National Education Association convention.

Dr. Jones, chairman of the Student NEA in North Carolina, has also been in attendance this week at sessions of the seventeenth annual national conference on Teacher Education and Professional Standards held at Colorado State University in Fort Collins. He has been present for the 1962 Student NEA Leadership Conference, also held at Fort Collins, continuing from June 22 through July 5.

Dr. Fuller is vice president of the North Carolina Education Association and is one of the official representatives from this professional organization attending the national meet in Denver.

NEITHER WILD NOR WEST

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP)—It is quite evident that this city lacks something in Wild West performance. The Opequon Saddle Club had eight contestants in the calf roping contest at its horse show. The calves were too fast and tricky and there was no winner of the contest.

Observatory . . .

The big telescopes, incidentally, have given the astronomers the name of "long eyes" among their Papago Indian landlords.

The Indians themselves take an occasional tour of the observatory on the land rented from them, just to see what the pale faces are up to.

But the tours usually end with trail leaders shaking their heads and making some comment about not understanding why the "long eyes" go to so much trouble just to see the stars which any Indian sees every night.

Many Actions Handled In Pitt Superior Court

Judge Joseph W. Parker of Windsor, in Pitt County Superior Court this week, heard the following 25 actions:

Clarence Henry Evans, 33-year-old Negro of Apt. 5 on Legion Street, Greenville, pleaded guilty to drunken driving charges and was given a six-month sentence suspended upon payment of $100 and court costs.

Wiley Herbert Swann, 22, Negro, of Baltimore, had judgement continued permanently on charge of possession of burglary tools after Judge Parker ruled a "substantial sentence" in Edgecombe County Superior Court was sufficient. Swann was convicted in Pitt earlier but prayer for judgement was continued.

Judge Parker suspended a 12-month road sentence for Algeria West, Negro, after West had pleaded guilty to possession of non-tax-paid whiskey. Conditions of the suspension included payment of $100 and cost and that Webb not hinder any peace officer from searching his premises for three years. West had been charged with possession, possession for sale and transporting the illegal liquor.

A 60-day sentence was suspended for Johnnie Gaynor Jr., Negro, upon payment of costs after Gaynor had pleaded guilty to possession of illegal liquor for purpose of sale.

He had been charged also with transporting the non-tax-paid whiskey.

Cleo Cannon, Route 5, Greenville Negro, pleaded guilty to possession of illegal liquor for sale and transporting non-tax-paid whiskey and was fined $300 and taxed with costs as conditions for suspension of a 12-month sentence.

An Oak City man, 35-year-old Paul Beverly Woodworth, was taxed with costs after he pleaded guilty to a speeding charge.

Hosea Gardner, 36-year-old Route 1, Grifton, Negro, was convicted by jury of public drunkenness and resisting arrest. Judge Parker sentenced Gardner to a total of seven months on the roads but suspended both sentences upon payment of $50 and cost and upon the condition that Gardner not violate any state or federal law for three years.

An action against Donald Gray Tripp, Route 2, Vanceboro, for false pretense was not prosecuted.

Ronald Allen Lassiter, 34, of Route 2, Box 513, Ayden, answered charges of speeding in excess of 100 m.p.h. in a 60 m.p.h. zone by pleading guilty to speeding in excess of 75 m.p.h. Judge Parker imposed a sentence of 60 days but suspended the term upon payment of $200 and cost and upon the condition Lassiter surrender his driver's license for 90 days.

Edgar Smith, Route 2, Ayden, pleaded guilty to possession of non-tax-paid whiskey and was fined $150 and cost as conditions for suspension of a 12-month road term. Another condition of the suspending of the sentence stipulated Smith must

Other actions continued until a later term included charges of careless and reckless driving and speeding against Floyd Murphy Jr. and assault charges lodged against Daniel Hopkins, 37, Negro, 810 S. Main St., Farmville.

James A. King, 49-year-old Greenville Negro of Clark and 11th Streets, was sentenced to 12 months on the roads after he pleaded not guilty and was convicted by jury on charges of possession of non-tax-paid whiskey.

Earl Anderson, 26, Negro, W. Third Street, Greenville, pleaded guilty to larceny charges and had a 60-day sentence suspended upon his payment of costs and $10 for restitution to Jefferson Florist.

Charlie Mills, Route 3, Box 369, Greenville, waived indictment and pleaded guilty to careless and reckless driving charges. A 90-day road term imposed on Mills was suspended upon payment of $50 and cost. An earlier charge of drunken driving against Mills was not prosecuted.

Herbert Walker, 1202-B Davenport St., Greenville, saw charges of disposing of mortgaged property not pressed.

A 30-day sentence was suspended for Jessie James Duncan, 50-year-old Greenville Negro of 518 Vance St., after he had pleaded guilty to speeding in answer to careless and reckless driving charges. Duncan was taxed with court costs.

James Linwood Hooker, 29-year-old Raleigh Negro barber, was convicted by jury of drunken driving charges; but Hooker appealed the finding to the N. C. Supreme Court. Judge Parker's judgement ordered the Raleigh man to pay $150 and cost and to obtain proper driver's license before again driving as conditions for suspending a 12-month prison sentence. Hooker, after giving notice of appeal, was required to post $100 appeal bond and $500 appearance bond pending his serving of the case on appeal within the 25-day limit. The State then has 10 days to file its case.

A 73-year-old Winterville man, James Thomas Braxton of Route 1, pleaded guilty to driving without an operator's license, and was taxed with court costs.

Elmer Stokes, Negro, pleaded not guilty to charges of failure to yield right of way. After the jury heard State's evidence ofer's license before again driving as conditions for suspending a 12-month prison sentence. Hooker, after giving notice of appeal, was required to post $100 appeal bond and $500 appearance bond pending his serving of the case on appeal within the 25-day limit. WONDERING what makes the daily newspaper the top advertising buy? It's the number and quality of the people the daily newspaper reaches, and their friendly reaction to newspaper advertising. When an advertiser invests in any medium, he's buying an audience for his sales message. The newspaper audience is large. Almost 100,000,000 people read a daily newspaper every day in the U.S.* And that audience remains very constant. There's no "summer slump" in newspapers, no peak listening or viewing hours, no special moment when you must nail down an audience or miss out completely. The daily newspaper sells around the clock. Readers can study it at their leisure...enjoy it...relax with it...clip it...buy from it. And they do.

LAST CHANCE VALLEY

BY WILLIAM HEUMAN

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

After eleven days of mounting ordeal, Thorpe McAfee was resigned to the prospect of dying in the desert. He and Jim Varney had been double-crossed by their two partners in working a claim in the foothills of the Funeral Range. The pair had gone off with the gold dust and the horses, leaving Thorpe and Jim to die.

When Thorpe's feverish eyes fell upon a beautiful girl who came out of the desert to offer water from a canteen, he could only think this was a mirage. But the girl and the water were real, and Thorpe and Jim were taken to a cabin by the girl, Fern O'Hara, whose late father had staked a borax claim nearby. She was determined to raise money to work the find, despite attempts to drive her out.

Hitching a ride to Piedmont on a borax wagon next day, Varney sought word of any well-heeled strangers in town and learned there were two who had paid cash for the Birdcage Saloon and Gambling House. They were Lacey and Hoagland, the two faithful partners.

CHAPTER 6

Jim Varney walked over toward the water tank and after a while Thorpe McAfee followed him. They watched Len, the mute, draw water for the mules. When Len moved off with two pails, Jim Varney said softly, "They made it, Thorpe. I'm going to kill them."

"Only one of them," Thorpe said gently. "The other one is mine."

"The dirty dogs," Varney whispered, his voice vibrant with hate. "I'll be they never even headed for Boulder City. They turned west and came straight out this way after leaving us. Now they have our money and they're set up with a big gambling hall in town, and they're wondering if anybody ever will find our bones back there in the hills."

"I know where theirs will be," Thorpe murmured. "Out on Boot Hill in the town of Piedmont."

"They were so sure we'd never come out alive," Varney said, "that they didn't even bother to change their names."

Jake called from the hut, "Come an' get it."

They stepped in out of the sun and sat down at a rude table, and Jake shoveled bacon, beans and biscuits at them. The four men ate ravenously, not saying anything for quite a while, and then Thorpe said to the driver, who went by the name of Charlie Moran: "Who runs this Ajax outfit?"

"Neil Farrington," Charlie told him. "He's makin' out, too, with this stuff from what I hear. Smart as a whip."

"And what about this claim Miss O'Hara has back there in the valley?" Thorpe asked him. "Farrington interested in that?"

"Why," Charlie Moran chuckled, "ain't a man in Piedmont ain't interested in Fern O'Hara's strike an' in Fern O'Hara, too, for that matter."

"She have a man?" Varney asked jokingly.

"Reckon that girl's good as two men," Moran laughed. "She takes care of herself out there. Been a few fellers tried to jump her claim, but they ain't got anywhere."

"Is it worth what she thinks it's worth?" Thorpe asked.

The driver stuffed a biscuit in his mouth and chewed on it for a moment, and then he said, "Heard Mr. Farrington say one time that the girl's claim was the biggest borax find in the whole blasted valley. That answer your question, mister?"

Thorpe nodded. "What about her father?" he asked.

"Good man, Case O'Hara," Charlie growled, "an' he got done in real dirty. Everybody knew him back in Piedmont. He got two bullets in the back from a couple of prospectors he pulled in out o' them hills. Reckon they figured old Case had plenty o' dust stored up at his shack. They didn't know all his money was in that salt marsh where he'd got his stakes set out."

They ate a while in silence, and then Charlie Moran said, "You boys figure on stayin' in Piedmont?"

"Have a little business to attend to," Thorpe told him. "We don't have any real plans after that."

"Town's boom'n'," Charlie stated. "All borax too. Everybody's chasin' around these hills lookin' for borax. When they come back in they're pretty dry."

Varney said softly, "Then you figure the Birdcage Saloon does pretty well?"

"Well?" Charlie laughed. "Them two boys are makin' a fortune there. Took some cash to buy the place, but they made a good move."

"It wasn't too good," Varney murmured.

The driver looked at him curiously. "How come?" he asked.

"Maybe it wasn't far enough," Jim Varney said slowly.

A little before dawn Len, the mute, led the mules out of the corral, and as Charlie Moran had predicted, each team moved to its appointed place without any urging by the young swamper. Each stood next to his harness, and all Len had to do was to throw the harness on, hook the teams to the chain, and they were ready to move.

Charlie said proudly, "The mule is the smartest animal in the world."

The morose Jake stood in the doorway and lifted a hand to them as they rolled out across the desert, heading toward Piedmont.

Moran had assured them that they would reach the town that night. It was an eighteen-mile haul from Red Rock Station to the town and the railroad.

When they were settled on top of the load again, Jim Varney stared off in the distance and said to Thorpe, "Tonight, Thorpe?"

"Why not?" Thorpe responded.

"I'll need a gun," Varney murmured. "That Lacey is pretty quick with his own hogleg."

"We'll get another gun," Thorpe said. "I want Hoagland for myself."

They said no more on the subject. It was dusk when they saw the lights of Piedmont, rolled down a grade and into the town.

At the noon stop Thorpe had had a word with Charlie Moran, the driver, asking him not to mention to Lacey or Hoagland the fact that they'd picked up two men back in the valley.

"We're old friends," He smiled grimly. "We'd like to surprise them, Charlie."

The twenty-mule team rolled through the long main street with its heat-dried false-front buildings, past a brick bank, past another building of brick which appeared to be the local jailhouse, and past at least fifteen saloons, the largest of which was the Birdcage. The Birdcage occupied a corner farther down along the west side of the street.

The Ajax yard was at the far end of town, and as they rolled in under the archway, Thorpe McAfee could see why Neil Farrington, owner of Ajax Borax, was making out.

The yard was big and spacious, with wagon sheds at one end, a huge corral with forty excellent mules inside, and an office building fronting on the street.

As Moran's rig rolled into the yard and then down toward the railroad siding at the far end, Thorpe saw a man come out of the rear door of the office to watch them and lift a hand to the driver as he went by.

Charlie said over his shoulder, "Mr. Farrington."

Neil Farrington was in his middle thirties, blond, a fairly big man, clean-cut, clean-shaven, coatless, but wearing a vest and a string tie.

Moran rolled his rig up to the siding and stepped from the box letting Len unhook the mules and turn them into the corral. Thorpe and Varney followed Moran as he headed back toward the office to make his report.

Neil Farrington was straddling a chair outside the rear door of the office, waiting for them, and he looked at Thorpe and Varney curiously. It was almost completely dark now, but Farrington sat in the light from the oil lamps inside, and they could see him clearly. When he smiled Thorpe saw the gold tooth along the row of top molars.

"Thirty minutes ahead of time, Charlie," Farrington said. "You must have been pushing along."

"Mules are in good shape," Moran said, and glanced at his two boys out near Fern O'Hara's place. She took 'em in out of the hills near death with thirst."

Farrington didn't get up from his chair. He nodded and smiled, and asked, "Doing some prospecting, boys?"

"We were back in the Funeral Range," Thorpe told him. "We made a pretty good strike, but we had a rough time getting back."
