

U.S., Soviet Clash In Security Council Debate

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The United States and the Soviet Union clashed in a heated two-hour debate on the Pueblo crisis Saturday in the United Nations Security Council which then adjourned until Monday afternoon to give delegates time to confer privately on ways out of the crisis. Both nations quoted from newspaper clippings in their argument about just where the U.S. spy ship was at the time it was boarded by armed North Koreans. Soviet delegate Planton D. Morozov recalled the 1960 U2 incident in which U.S. pilot Francis Gary Powers was shot down in his spy plane over the Soviet Union. Morozov said Washington published false coordinates on where the U2 plane was in that case.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg renewed his charge that the Soviet Union was operating spy ships and said the Soviet ship Gidrog was now trailing the U.S. nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise off the Korean coast.

"Such ships of the Soviet navy in the Sea of Japan frequently sail much closer than 12 miles to the shores of neighboring states in the area," Goldberg said.

Both delegates quoted—and misquoted—a newspaper dispatch on U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk's testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington.

Morozov read the dispatch in English, "North Korea claims a 20-mile territorial sea."

Goldberg quickly corrected him, saying the report actually referred to a 12-mile North Korean territorial sea. But the American diplomat stumbled in reading the dispatch, too, quoting Rusk as saying "the ship was in territorial waters at all times."

Rusk was actually quoted as saying the ship was "in international waters at all times."

Naval Force Heads For Korea

SEOUL (UPI)—A powerful new U.S. Navy task force was reported steaming early Sunday toward Korean waters to underscore President Johnson's warning that North Korea's seizure of the intelligence ship, USS Pueblo "cannot be accepted."

South Korean newspapers, including the government-owned Seoul Shinmun, reported the fleet movements even as North Korea declared it would refuse to recognize any United Nations resolution regarding the hijacking of the Pueblo and its 83-man crew.

The reports coincided with a U.N. Command disclosure that U.N. troops had engaged North Korean infiltrators in six new firefights along and south of the demarcation line separating North and South Korea.

In Seoul, Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel III, commander of the U.N. Command in Korea, said his forces were capable of and "fully determined" to meet whatever action North Korea might be planning.

The Seoul morning newspaper Chosun Ilbo said Sunday morning a new Navy task force, composed of one aircraft carrier, at least one destroyer and six submarines was moving into the tense area off Korea where the giant carrier Enterprise already was in position with a group of escorting warships.

A similar report was carried Saturday by the newspaper Seoul Shinmun which said the Pacific Fleet ships were ready to join the nuclear-powered Enterprise, last reported near the North Korean port of Wonsan.

Both newspapers gave South Korean military authorities as their sources. American authorities in Seoul refused to comment on the reports.

In Washington, the U.S. Navy said it was freezing "until further notice" requests for discharge by the 133,000 reservists serving in drill units. The Navy has already called up 600 air reservists. It said Saturday that such air reservists now in college would be allowed to finish their present school terms and those in high school would not be called up until they finish school providing they maintain their grades.

North To Free Pilots, But Breaks Tet Truce

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnam announced Saturday it will release three captured American pilots to mark the Vietnamese lunar new year holiday. But North Vietnamese troops violated the Communists' self-declared new year's ceasefire by pouring rocket and mortar fire into the threatened U.S. Khe Sanh garrison.

North Vietnam also was reported to have moved an armored column into South Vietnam's northwestern corner near Khe Sanh to back up a feared Communist offensive which U.S. military officials said could come at any time.

The official North Vietnamese News Agency said in a broadcast the Hanoi regime had decided to set free three American pilots captured in Vietnam in keeping with its "humanitarian and lenient policy."

"These pilots had shown a repentant attitude during the period of detention," the Hanoi broadcast said.

The broadcast did not identify the pilots selected for release or give any further information on them. U.S. spokesmen have said there are more than 220 American pilots believed held in North Vietnam.

In Da Nang, a military spokesman said South Vietnam will release 33 disabled Communist soldiers in the northern sector of South Vietnam during the allies' own lunar new year (Tet) cease-fire starting Monday. He said 21 of the prisoners were Viet Cong suffering from war wounds and 12 North Vietnamese, expected to be repatriated through the International Red Cross.

In war action, North Vietnam mese sources shelled the U.S. Marine base at Khe Sanh with more mortar and rockets despite the Viet Cong Tet truce which went into effect early Saturday. The Allies' truce begins Monday evening and lasts 36 hours.

Military spokesman said 48 rounds of rocket and artillery shells hit Khe Sanh Friday night and Saturday.

At least 20 Marines were reported wounded in the bombardment.

"As far as observing the truce, we've seen the rounds hit," said Col. David Lownds of Plantation, Fla., commander of the threatened Marine outpost facing up to 20,000 North Vietnamese troops massed in the heavily jungled hills around the northwestern base.

"There is no question in my mind that they are not observing their truce," Lownds told UPI correspondent William V. Reilly.

Lownds declared he fully intends to defend his threatened outpost against the largest Communist troop buildup of the Vietnam war.

"We're here," he said. "We intend to stay. And we are going to serve our country in the way we know how." Lownds' Marines have been ordered to dig in deeper and deeper each day to brace for the expected North Vietnamese attack.

In the air war, U.S. Military headquarters announced the loss of a U.S. Navy A4 Skyhawk over North Vietnam. The carrier-based aircraft was shot down during a two-hour gunbattle between two allied destroyers and North Vietnamese shore batteries.

East Carolina University formally dedicated yesterday its new indoor sports arena, Minges Coliseum, in honor of a leading Eastern North Carolina family.

Dedication ceremonies were held at half-time of the ECU - West Virginia University basketball game, played before a capacity crowd of 6,500 and a region television audience in five states.

Sen. Robert B. Morgan, as chairman of the ECU trustees, was the dedicatory speaker. He praised the Minges family as one of the best friends of the University and Eastern North Carolina.

Also taking part in the ceremony were ECU President Leo W. Jenkins, a men's octet from the university's School of Music and Rev. Richard R. Gammon of Greenville's First Presbyterian Church.

Members of the honored family are the mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Minges of Greenville, and the daughter and five sons, Martha Minges Bass of Farmville, Forrest E. Minges of New Bern, Hoyt A. Minges of Kinston, John F. (Jack) Minges of Greenville and Dr. Ray D. Minges of Greenville.

The family owns and operates some of the world's most successful Pepsi-Cola bottling firms at Greenville, Kinston and New Bern. Jack is president of the Greenville company, Hoyt heads the Kinston firm and Forrest the New Bern company.

As part of the dedicatory ceremony, Morgan announced another Minges gift to the university, a $5,000 organ already installed in the main arena of the coliseum. Morgan said that continuing support by the Minges' has been largely responsible for much of East Carolina's success in strengthening its sports program.

"This great facility bearing this great family name," he said, "will be both encouraging and inspiring to all who come here as athletes and spectators. This will be a constant reminder of the great values this university and this state derive from unfailing support such as that given by the Minges family."

President Jenkins recently said, "It is altogether fitting that we pay tribute to this fine family. I know of no family whose members are more sincere in their desire to help us enhance and enrich East Carolina University. And I know of no family whose continuing support has meant more to the development of our program of athletics."

Minges Coliseum, constructed at a cost of about $2.5 million, was opened last fall. Located at the west end of Ficklen Stadium, it has some 108,000 square feet of inside space, including offices, classrooms, locker rooms and other facilities.

During construction, the 500-foot-long complex attracted wide attention as engineers built the massive steel roof at the ground level and then jacked it into place. That unusual design feature gives the basketball arena a clear unobstructed span of 200 feet. Designers of the coliseum are F. Carter Williams, architects; H. L. Buffalo, mechanical engineers; and Kahn Furbush, structural engineers; all of Raleigh.

This spring the connecting natatorium at the rear of the coliseum will be the site of the AAU national men's indoor swimming and diving championships.

Join Search For Missing Israeli Sub

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI)—A U.S. Navy destroyer and airplanes Saturday joined the search for the Israeli submarine Dakar missing for two days off the coast of Cyprus with 69 officers and sailors on board.

There was a growing fear the 25-year-old submarine had gone deeper than its maximum operating depth of 400 feet where water pressure would crush its steel sides. The Mediterranean is more than a mile deep in the area the Dakar was last heard from.

Israelis at home were already beginning to mourn the men as lost.

An Israeli military spokesman said Saturday there was "no suspicion" that the submarine had fallen victim to either Soviet or Egyptian warships.

American, British and Greek ships and planes joined Israeli search operations for the Dakar. The submarine was en route home to Israel from Britain where it had been refitted in Portsmouth.

The Dakar, which means shark in Hebrew, was last reported about 75 miles west of the southern tip of Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean. The last message from the ship, about noon Thursday, gave no indication that anything was wrong.

Robert Scott Opposed To Open Housing

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP)—Lt. Gov. Bob Scott, Democratic candidate for governor, said Saturday night he is "opposed to open housing because I think the North Carolina way has worked and will continue to do so."

"Of course, if it came to a choice between a statewide law requiring open housing and a permissive law allowing local governments to handle the situation, I would prefer the latter," Scott declared.

He made the comment during a prepared talk to the Alamance County Young Democratic Club.

Scott noted that "at least one candidate in this race is in favor of open housing. I want to make it clear that I am not that candidate."

Dr. Reginald Hawkins, Charlotte Negro dentist who recently announced he will seek the Democratic nomination for governor, said he favors open housing.

Scott called for stronger vocational education programs, consideration for higher pay for teachers and strengthening local governments.

Following his talk, Scott installed new Alamance County YDC officers.

Broughton Says ECU Needs Med. Center

RALEIGH (AP)—Democratic candidate for governor Mel Broughton Jr. said Saturday medical centers are needed at Asheville and East Carolina University to help alleviate the shortage of doctors in those regions.

"By serving as training stations for medical school graduates," Broughton said, "the centers would bring many doctors to the east and far west who would otherwise settle elsewhere."

He added that "while many of the doctors at the centers would be specialists, their presence together would benefit a wide area."

Broughton, a Raleigh attorney said in a prepared statement that "if there ever is to be a medical school in either region, the best way to begin is with medical centers now."

He said two 500-bed medical centers would cost roughly $50 million. He added, "that is a large investment for any state, but it is one North Carolina can not afford to pass by."

Broughton said the immediate task "is not one of creating more medical schools. It is one of putting more students in the schools we have and dispersing the graduates throughout all North Carolina, and not just the cities."

He noted "it might prove practical to provide at the centers the last two years of a medical school to those students planning to become family doctors. But first we must have the centers."

"A medical center at Greenville, and one at Asheville, Broughton stated, "can begin to supply the care eastern and western North Carolina so badly need. With a system of coordinated clinics, managed by doctors who band together for efficiency and aided by the state the centers can do much more than that."

He said it has been estimated that 15 years and $100 million would be required to graduate the first doctor from a medical school at East Carolina.

Eighteen Lost In Avalanche

ZURICH (UPI)—A rare mid-winter warmup set off the worst avalanches in Switzerland in 17 years Saturday, killing 18 persons and leaving others missing.

Police said nine persons were killed at the ski resort of Davos in eastern Switzerland. Nine others were reported dead in the central area of Uri.

One man in Uri lost his wife and five children when an avalanche buried his house. Another man was killed when the snows crushed a factory which had only recently been rebuilt after being destroyed last year in a fire.

Police said the avalanches were the worst since 1951. Officials warned that huge piles of snow might collapse and trigger more avalanches.

'No Armageddon'

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—Vice President Hubert Humphrey delivered a 90-minute down the line defense of the Johnson administration record Saturday, telling his audience, "if you want a peaceful world, you have to pay the price."

Humphrey, speaking at a six-state conference of Democratic party leaders here, said, "We do not want an Armageddon on the installment plan."

"We can get it," he said, "if we do not stand firm. We learned a long time ago the nibbling process of the aggressor."

"It's the commitment of the U. S. to her treaties that keeps what little peace there is in the world today," he said.

"President Johnson hasn't signed one new treaty since he took office except for the test ban treaty. We're just keeping our contracts. We haven't faltered and I'm proud of it."

"Some people say we need more National Guardsmen to keep the country's streets safe," the vice president said.

State News

RALEIGH (AP) — The 1968 North Carolina General Assembly will be asked by a group of lawmakers to prohibit the sale of the State Motor Vehicle Department's legislation lists to "junk mailers."

Rep. Jim Beatty, D-Mecklenburg, said in a letter released Friday that he and 15 other legislators intend to introduce a measure to outlaw sales of the motor vehicle registration lists to mail order firms. The lists are re-sold to mail order firms and mail advertisers.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ralph Howland sent a reply to Beatty, but carefully avoided making any reference to the proposed legislation.

However, Howland turned down a second request submitted by the lawmakers that the Motor Vehicles Department refuse to make registration lists available this year to mail order firms and mail advertisers.

He pointed out that an agreement has already been made to furnish the lists.

"We do not see how we can follow any other procedure other than our present policy under the existing statutes," Howland said.

The North Carolina registration lists have been sold to R. L. Polk & Co. of Cincinnati for more than 25 years. In 1967, the firm paid $36,000 for the lists at a rate of $8 per thousand.

Some citizens contend that selling the information constitutes an invasion of privacy and results in unsolicited "junk mail."

The 15 other legislators who signed the letter were: Sens. Robert Morgan, D-Harnett; Harry Bagnal, R-Forsyth; Mrs. Mary Faye Brumby, D-Cherokee; Charles Maxwell, D-Mecklenburg; and Herman Moore, D-Mecklenburg.

Also Reps. W. A. (Red) Forbes, D-Pitt; Archie Burrus, D-Dare; Hugh Merritt, D-Surry; Bill Culpepper Jr., D-Pasquotank; I. H. O'Hanlon, D-Cumberland.

"We agree with the citizens of our state," Beatty said in the letter, "that though this (practice) is permitted by law, that law should be amended to incorporate some kind of restrictive clause."

In Case Of Fire Emblems To Aid Invalids

Under the sponsorship of Home Life Department of the Greenville Junior Woman's Club, the Fire Department has started a campaign to place special emblems on both the front door and near the bedroom windows of persons who would be unable to leave their home quickly in case of fire or other emergency. The red, black and white stickers are rubber saturated, weather and scuff resistant, they may be sighted quickly in the spotlight of the fire trucks.

J. L. Jones, chief of the Greenville Fire Department, said the markers will be invaluable to both the occupant and the Fire Department as they will immediately alert the firefighters answering the alarm. The emblems will be placed at the home of Greenville residents who are blind, retarded or invalids.

Faster rescue will be possible when these emblems are spotted, Chief Jones said. These emblems will also give the handicapped and aged persons a sense of security in knowing that someone will watch out for them in an emergency.

Chief Jones said the emblems would be placed at no cost to the occupants of the homes since they are provided by the Junior Woman's Club as a public service. The stickers will be attached to the homes by uniformed firefighters, the chief said.

"If you have or if you know anyone who is a temporary or permanent invalid," Chief Jones said, "you should contact the fire department so that we can put that person's name in our files.

As an added precaution against the emblems being removed, a list of the invalids will be kept on file in the dispatcher's office at the Central fire station to inform firemen enroute to a fire of the location of invalids and special handling.

Mrs. Philip E. Carroll is chairman of the Home Life Department of the Junior Woman's Club.

RECOGNITION DECAL . . . is shown to Miss Shirley Pickelsimer, seated, and Mrs. Philip E. Carroll by J. L. Jones, chief of the Greenville Fire Department.

Stickley Predicts Trouble

RALEIGH (AP)—Republican gubernatorial hopeful Jack Stickley says he foresees trouble from both white and Negro extremists if the next governor of North Carolina "speaks soft on violence."

Stickley, 65-year-old Charlotte yarn broker, made the statement Friday in accusing his opponent for the GOP nomination, Congressman Jim Gardner, of attempting to sweep the Ku Klux Klan issue under the rug.

"If we mean to uphold law and order," said Stickley, "the next governor must be heard from loud and clear."

Gardner was quoted in Greensboro as saying: "As long as the Klan or any other organization is legally chartered and is abiding by the law, I don't think any governor should try to single it out and try to run it out of North Carolina."

Gardner said it is the state attorney general's job to investigate the activities of the Klan and other groups.

Stickley commented by saying, "I think my Republican opponent is mistaken in attempting to sweep the matter under the rug by saying it's a matter for some other department and not the governor."

He added, "These are times that try men's souls. These are also times that call for vigorous, forthright leadership."

Stickley said that "if we do not eliminate terrorism, in effect we will be issuing an open invitation to agitators and extremists of the left to come to North Carolina next summer and set fire to our cities . . . Violence must cease and agitators from the North must be told to stay home. I know of no more critical matter before the state."

In a speech to the Raleigh Kiwanis Club, Stickley said North Carolina and the nation need "less government in business and more business in government."

He said North Carolina "can get more mileage" out of its tax dollars.

Stickley also expressed concern about the ability of the United States to survive, saying: "Last week, we saw the final nail driven in the coffin of the once great British empire. We saw it reduced to a second class, perhaps a third class, nation. And I believe it could open to the United States."

Hoover Talks Crime Rate

GOLDSBORO, N. C. (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover says the increasing crime rate is almost more than law enforcement officers can cope with.

It can be curtailed only through the wholehearted cooperation of all citizens, he said in a telegram Friday to a Law Enforcement Appreciation Day banquet sponsored by civic and fraternal organizations of Wayne County.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., said recent Supreme Court decisions have placed unjustified handicaps on law officers and the courts.

He added in a speech that the decisions have resulted in the freeing of many persons "of undoubted guilt."

'UFO' Over Carolina

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An unidentified flying object flashed through North Carolina skies early Saturday, prompting a rash of telephone calls from concerned and curious citizens to official government agencies and the news media.

Airlines also reported seeing the brilliant body streak through the heavens for about one-third of the horizon.

But the U. S. Weather Bureau quickly dispelled any thoughts of Martians or Venusians landing in the Tar Heel State.

The weathermen said the UFO wasn't unidentified at all. It was a meteor with an exceptionally long tail and was visible over most of North Carolina shortly after 4 a.m. Saturday.

Calls Incident 'Routine'

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Soviet Premier Alexi Kossygin Saturday described the North Korean seizure of the USS Pueblo as a "routine matter, which should be 'sorted out' by the parties concerned, informed sources said.

Kossygin was said to have made the remarks to Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, with whom he discussed the international situation in a 75-minute meeting.

Mrs. Gandhi was to meet again Monday with Kossygin, who is visiting India during independence celebrations.

Kossygin and his party left by special train Saturday night for Hardwar in Uttar Pradesh state to tour a heavy electrical equipment plant and an antibiotics factory built with Soviet aid.

Predicts pace Spectacular

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James E. Webb, chief of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA predicted Saturday that Russia will launch cosmonauts into space for a major spectacular before the end of the year.

At the same news conference, a deputy to the space agency head said America's first opportunity to fly to the moon might be during the third Apollo spaceflight of 1969. He said, however, this would require great success in all coming phases of the moonflight program.

At Kennedy Center

Kennedy Visits Bragg; No Comment On Pueblo Affair

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — "I'm not going to describe how we can get the Pueblo back," Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., jokingly told newsmen at Ft. Bragg Saturday. His remark underscored the non-political nature of a quick-paced tour the senator made of the John F. Kennedy Center for Special Warfare, named in honor of his brother. Kennedy did describe as erroneous a recent report that he may be reconsidering his decision against challenging President Lyndon Johnson this year.

"I have no plans for running this year," he said. As for 1972, he added, "I'm not looking five years ahead. Would you do that?" After a tour of the Green Beret center commanded by Brig. Gen. Albert E. Milloy, Kennedy made brief off-the-cuff remarks to a luncheon held in his honor by the Decade Club, composed of soldiers with at least 10 years of service with the Special Forces. The senator's brother, the late President John F. Kennedy, sanctioned the wearing of the Green Beret not long after he took office. While the Green Berets had a "special relationship" with President Kennedy, the senator told the luncheon meeting that "I think the Army did generally." The President felt, Kennedy said, that if the nation was to preserve its freedom and remain secure in the world, the Army had to be strengthened. Steps were taken to that end in 1961-62, Kennedy said. Kennedy said there will be "dark times ahead over a period of the next few decades" and that this would require the kind of courage and determination exhibited by the Army. "I come here to pay tribute to all of you and to all you have done," Kennedy said. Retired Maj. Herbert Brucker, president of the Decade Club of which Kennedy is an honorary member, presented the New York senator with a plaque during the luncheon attended by about 200 people. Kennedy arrived at Simmons Army Airfield shortly after 10 a.m. Saturday, some 40 minutes behind schedule. Lt. Gen. Robert H. York, commander of the 18th Airborne Corps and Ft. Bragg, and Gen. Milloy welcomed Kennedy to the post. Kennedy was briefed on the JFK Center's operations by Gen. Milloy before taking a tour of the center's facilities. Kennedy viewed without comment a bust of his brother in the lobby of the center's main building. He shook hands with several children at the site of the center's still incomplete memorial to Special Forces troops slain in the Vietnam war. Included in the tour was a high altitude, low opening parachute jump. Kennedy returned to Washington early Saturday afternoon. He did not, as planned earlier, bring any of his children with him. It was Sen. Kennedy's first visit to the Special Warfare Center since 1965, when he attended the dedication of Kennedy Hall, the center's headquarters.

Establish New School At ECU

East Carolina University has moved its home economic department up to school status, giving North Carolina its second university School of Home Economics offering bachelor's and master's degrees.

Dr. Miriam B. Moore, chairman of the East Carolina home economics program since mid-1962, becomes dean of the new school, the seventh member of ECU's growing family of professional schools and the second to be added within a week. The University of North Carolina at Greensboro also has a home economics school.

East Carolina established its School of Allied Health Professions last Thursday. The University also has professional Schools of Art, Business, Education, Music and Nursing and the Graduate School, all established since 1960.

Dr. Moore's new school inherits from the former department about 260 home economics majors and a faculty of 14 which, one authority said recently, "excels that of any undergraduate program in the South."

Dean Moore has organized the school into five departments—Child Development and Family Relations, Housing and Home Management, Clothing and Textiles, Food and Nutrition, and Home Economics Education.

The new school will offer a program leading to the Master of Science degree in home economics, recently authorized at ECU by the N. C. Board of Higher Education.

The new MS degree program, according to Dr. Moore, is an important addition because: "We can now achieve a greater degree of service and offer broader opportunities to the home economists of North Carolina."

ECU Offering Prize For Art

East Carolina University announced Saturday it is offering a $500 first prize, a $200 second prize and several possible purchase awards to student artists throughout the nation who submit the best paintings of athletic subjects before June 1.

The sports picture competition, announced by ECU president Leo W. Jenkins, is open to any American student artist. Entries after judging and the awarding of prizes, will adorn the halls, rooms and foyers of Minges Coliseum, the University's new indoor sports complex which was formally dedicated Saturday afternoon.

Although the competition is limited to students, Dr. Jenkins invited professional artists to participate, too. "We will gladly accept the work of any professional," he said, "as a contribution to creating a closer relationship between athletics and the arts."

Dr. Jenkins said the sports gallery idea is intended as an enduring reminder that athletics and art are related. "The Roman and Greek artists were very much involved with athletics," he said. "We want this collection in Minges Coliseum to be an inspiration to our young people and a reminder that the artist and his work very definitely have a place in athletics."

Following is a summary of contest rules:

Each competing artist may enter one painting. Each entry must be five feet square, must be done in oil or polymer media on canvas or masonite, and must be framed for hanging.

Entries become the property of the University. They may be delivered in person or sent pre-paid to Minges Coliseum, East Carolina University, Greenville, N. C.

A qualified juror will judge all entries and award the prizes, $500 first place and $200 for second. He may also choose several other works for purchase at artists' prices.

U. N. Debate

The Soviet Union has backed Pyongyang's claim that the seizure occurred 7.6 miles off its coast within North Korea's waters.

Canadian Ambassador George Ignatieff proposed the council adjourn until Monday afternoon to explore possible ways to resolve the crisis. Ignatieff said Friday the council should "arrange for an intermediary" to try to effect a solution to the crisis.

Another suggestion was put forward by Endalkache Makonnen of Ethiopia that the council invite North Korea to come to the United Nations and participate in a full investigation of the incident.

North Korea is not a member of the United Nations.

Hungarian Ambassador Karoly Csatorday said the council should not limit its debate to the Pueblo's seizure alone, but the "whole provocative policy of the United States against North Korea."

"As we sit here, war preparations are being made," Csatorday said. The Hungarian echoed Morozov's charges that the United States "is holding out ultimatums" to North Korea.

Historically, Unity Was A Rarity

We tend to forget— But American colonists were badly divided over the war with Britain in 1776. A very large percentage remained loyal to the mother country, and a reluctance to fight was closer to becoming a "rule" than an exception.

Then in 1812 there was another big wave of opposition to going to war . . . and once in it, to fighting.

In 1846 the disinterest in the war with Mexico was pretty general.

The Civil War had its share of critics and objectors in the North; marked by riots and obstructionism that make today's dissenters look rather tame.

The Spanish-American War involved only a small percentage of the people whose passions had been inflamed by a few strident voices.

Looking back, it's hard to realize that in some sections of the country Americans were divided as to which side they were supporting in World War I. But the voters made it pretty clear they wanted no part of that war, peace being a very popular subject. We became involved anyway.

Pearl Harbor brought Americans together in a conflict as they had never been united before. Still, in the years preceding December 7, 1941, we had some great admirers of the Hitlerian system in our country who could fill big convention halls for their rallies.

There was a lot of grumbling over Korea; and critics carped long and loud over every aspect of the war.

Down through the years there were campaigns against Indians, against revolutionaries in the Philippines, against a "bandit-hero" with an army along the Mexican border and against pirates of Tripoli . . . all waged by a relative handful of men carrying out the decisions of their government in Washington.

All this should remind us that through our history wars have not been a popular pastime and that "unity" in these conflicts has been an elusive quality.

We should not be surprised at dissent today. It's part of our makeup.

Suspense Built Up By Sanford

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
Reflector Raleigh Bureau
RALEIGH — Intentionally or unintentionally, former Gov. Terry Sanford has spun a web of suspense which is dominating the state's political scene.

No matter who announces, what contests develop nor what issues are raised, it is all subordinate right now to the question of whether Sanford is going to challenge Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr. for the U.S. Senate in the May 4 primaries.

This certainly is the prime, burning political question across the state at the moment — one likely to be answered within a week. Sanford is making up his mind, enjoying the role, and probably is going to say yes or no within a few days. Until then almost everything else has to wait.

May Create Confusion
If Sanford's answer is yes, the contest which develops may well overshadow all others this Spring — even the three way Democratic primary contest and two way Republican contest for the gubernatorial nominations.

WILLIAM A. SHIRES

If no, many already-announced political candidates and their committed supporters would be relieved.

The fact is that a Sanford versus Ervin primary contest would throw the state's already massively proportioned 1966 political picture into greater turmoil and confusion. The names themselves are dominant and the office surely is an important one.

Everything already taken for granted in certain other political races would have to be re-assessed and loyalties and support reexamined.

Political Pull
For one thing, the re-entry of Terry Sanford into an active role as a political candidate would have tremendous pull and effect across the state.

Simultaneously, so would the fact that the senior senator, Ervin, faces major opposition politically for the first time in his U. S. Senate career bring forth a legion of Ervin's friends and admirers. This has never been necessary since Ervin has never been forced into a major contest to retain his seat in Washington.

Reaction to such a challenge is what Sanford has been attempting to gauge in recent months. He has made no secret of his ambition and wish to serve in the Senate, nor of the fact that he knows opposing Ervin will be a formidable and perhaps insurmountable challenge. Nevertheless, Sanford is eager — and perhaps willing — to make a stab at it.

One consideration must be whether a resounding defeat by Ervin in 1968 would spell the end of Sanford's political career. Very likely — having further political aspirations— Sanford is not willing to risk this. He has said as much. He won't run unless he has substantial assurances that he can win.

Equally Divided
Right now, the guessing in political circles is almost equally divided. A few weeks ago the scales were tipped in favor of Sanford running against Ervin. But this has changed. More and more insiders say Sanford will choose to wait.

Certainly if Sanford does not oppose Ervin it will simplify matters in the camps of the already announced candidates for governor, for Congress and other offices because there would be no question of divided loyalty and support in another major race.

No 'Deals'
But it might raise the question of political intrigue and behind-the-scenes agreements.

It can be reported reliably that there have been no "deals" on the part of any of the candidates already announced about appointments or promises of appointment. In private, confidential talks (Continued On Page 5)

Opportunity Wasted By Opposition Voices

Had the Republican members of Congress offered one sound, qualified criticism; one plausible alternative to present policy of the administration; or just one serious thought to the time they were squandering, their party may have made great gains in its new bid for wide public support.

As it was, Tuesday night's hour-long tirade in the form of brief harangues by various house and senate minority members was just that — time squandered.

The GOP's one articulate spokesman of the evening, Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois, was far too brief, far too weak, and far too shortsighted.

These are hazardous times, we were warned by former President Eisenhower at the beginning of the program. A new administration take the helm to sail this country through the seas of crisis, to paraphrase Rep. Gerald Ford., whose analogy of the Johnson administration as a ship at sea was more than ridiculous.

A major television network donated one hour of prime evening time in order that the opposition could be heard. That hour of time cost the network thousands of dollars.

And in that hour of time, the Republicans somehow managed to put considerably less than their two cents worth.

Clark Clifford An LBJ Asset

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)— It was no secret, when President Johnson announced he had picked him to be the new secretary of defense, that Clark Clifford was a hard-liner on the Vietnamese war.

He made that clear Thursday, without exaggerating it or offering more information than he was asked, when he testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee, which then unanimously approved his appointment.

Clifford, 61, is a Washington attorney whose firm's clients include some of the biggest corporations. But he has also been an adviser to Presidents Harry S. Truman, John F. Kennedy and Johnson.

Strength For Today

REASON NOT ENOUGH
"Throughout the whole of my adult life, rationalism failed me at every point. It was not until I came to see that religion is something vastly more than reason that I began to get somewhere spiritually."

Thus spoke a man to me recently as he poured out passionately the story of a generation of failure crowned at last by triumph. He had grown up in a home where his parents and older brother believed that the mind of man is equal to any challenge. Think straight and you will live straight, was the family slogan. But this man came to see at last that, like Saint Paul, the good which he would do he could not do, and the evil which he abhorred, that he practiced. Reason was not enough.

If reason had been enough, the vast intellectual empire of Greece would never have gone bankrupt. If reason could solve all our problems then a college diploma would be an insurance policy against most of life's inclemencies. If the mind were everything, then the modern gadgets and inventions would be all we would need to make us happy. In fact, a formula could probably be worked out where by we could get health and happiness compounded in a single pill.

The prospect for such a happy state is not, however, entirely reassuring.

He approved the bombing of North Vietnam but he offered a way for starting peace talks if the North Vietnamese are willing to accept. There can be no question that Johnson thinks his judgment is good.

Otherwise he would hardly have had him as an adviser or picked him for the defense job. But Clifford has two other precious assets which should help Johnson in this presidential election year.

He will be new in the job and he is extremely well-liked in Congress where Robert S. McNamara, the retiring secretary of defense, had built up a lot of antagonisms.

But McNamara was also a handy target for the antiwar critics outside Congress. This was a condition he couldn't help since he has been secretary since 1961 and has been as closely identified with the war as Johnson.

In a way, he had become a symbol of the war.

If the war goes on long enough, and Clifford remains as secretary long enough, almost inevitably he will encounter the same kind of hostility that fell on McNamara.

If McNamara had continued as secretary through the presidential campaign, he would have been a target for a lot of criticism and abuse. This wouldn't have hurt Johnson's election chances if by some miracle — it couldn't happen — McNamara was somehow isolated and all the antiwar criticism was limited to the defense chief.

But Johnson, even more than McNamara, is the center of criticism on the war. And, since Johnson is responsible for what McNamara did, if McNamara remained Johnson would have no relief from the criticism.

With McNamara gone, some of the criticism of the war will have to be diluted, and this should be of some help to Johnson politically.

When Clifford takes over, there will be a difference for a while. Although he was a Johnson adviser, he can't be identified with the war as closely as McNamara. Therefore, it should be months before the abuse piles up on him.

Since he is a brilliant lawyer, and adroit in what he says and does, he might be able to last through the campaign before real trouble begins for him. The longer it (Continued on Page 5)

A Book And An Apology

Revelation of the number-addressed letter which John Biggs received from Terry Sanford brought a quick personal letter from the former governor.

"I want to apologize for sending you a letter addressed to a number, but at the same time express my appreciation for your good sense of humor," Sanford wrote. "I do not understand the mechanics of mass mailing, but the girls say this has something to do with the way the names are catalogued. In any event it was good for a laugh, and at least four or five such letters went out, so it was a good lesson for my people in being less careless."

Sanford went on, "Not long ago a telephone operator, when I was returning a call, asked for my name and number. I said, '484-1089,' and before I could say anything else she asked, 'Is that your name or number?' I told her I thought it was my name."

At any rate the number mix up won for Biggs a copy of Sanford's new book "Storm over the States" which, the former governor told Biggs, he was sending along.

The friendly philosopher dropped by the other day. He described the modern cowboy as one who rolls his own cigarettes — complete with charcoal filter, that is.

Greenville had its regular weekly winter storm last week with a somewhat surprising snowfall which crept in Wednesday night.

But Kefauver's stunning upset of Harry Truman in 1952 came against the backdrop of a weak, almost non-existent Democratic party organization. Kefauver filled a power vacuum by going directly to the voters, with little if any resistance from the regulars.

Now, however, the Democrats not only have the governorship and one U. S. Senator but are also organized. They are breaking down the state's 87,500 registered Democrats into 2,000 neighborhoods, with one coordinator for each. Every Democratic voter will be handed a pledge card, with a detachable blank addressed to the White House telling President Johnson why the voter will write in his name on March 12.

Campaign plans seldom live up to advance billing. But if Boutin, backed by Governor John King, does half as well as his blueprint, McCarthy will be facing a defeat close to annihilation.

Moreover, McCarthy's problems only start here. A confidential poll taken for the state organization by Oliver Quayle shows that, although 60 percent of the state's Democrats say they know who Senator McCarthy is, some of them are confusing him with the late Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin. These Democrats identify Gene McCarthy as a hawk on the war in Vietnam when, in fact, the main reason for his campaign against Mr. Johnson is his opposition to the President's firm stand in Vietnam.

Beyond this, McCarthy backers here are highly dubious about the Senator's style of campaigning, based on his chief appearance in Manchester last month just after he announced for the Presidency (but before he decided to enter the primary here).

Lyndon Ready In N.H.

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CONCORD, N. H. — The first surprise in the campaign for the March 12 Democratic Presidential primary is not the disorganized nature of Senator Eugene McCarthy's campaign but how the much-maligned regular party organization here is building a well oiled machine to support President Johnson.

On the eve of McCarthy's first campaign visit here for his battle against Mr. Johnson, the state of the Senator's campaign is easily depicted: not until this week did his campaign headquarters in Washington send a single advance man to survey New Hampshire and confer with McCarthy's original supporter and now the manager on the scene, Dartmouth College public affairs man David Hoeh.

In contrast, McCarthy, the only name on the ballot, faces what looks to be the most formidable and highly organized regular Democratic campaign ever fielded in state, prompting the write-in of Mr. Johnson's name against McCarthy. Headed by Nashua businessman and former Washington bureaucrat Bernard Boutin (who handled Senator Estes Kefauver's winning primary campaign in 1956 and John F. Kennedy's in 1960) the Johnson organization is developing a campaign concept based on careful organization wholly new to New Hampshire.

If successful it will undermine the habitual primary campaign approach of non-organization Democrats like Kefauver, who conducted hamlet-to-hamlet, handshaking tours that overwhelmed the voters.

But Kefauver's stunning upset of Harry Truman in 1952 came against the backdrop of a weak, almost non-existent Democratic party organization. Kefauver filled a power vacuum by going directly to the voters, with little if any resistance from the regulars.

Other Editors Saying Courts' Safety Role

(Raleigh, N. C., Times)
The State Highway Patrol is very properly aiming its biggest enforcement guns at the drinking driver and the speeding driver.

During December, there were 1,370 Patrol arrests for drunken driving, as compared with 984 for December of 1966. Speeding arrests for that month hadn't been totalled, but the number has been increasing every month during the latter part of 1967, reaching 11,090 during November.

This more intensive enforcement of these laws will be a real help to traffic safety. But, the real key to the value this campaign will have in making our highways safer is what happens to those cases in court.

So many of the convictions the Patrol obtains in the lower courts will be appealed to the Superior Courts. How soon will they be tried in the higher courts? Will there be speedy trials, or will those cases be allowed to languish months or even years on the dockets?

For example, a young man was convicted in Wake recorder's court recently of speeding more than 100 miles an hour. The court imposed heavy punishment, which the defendant immediately appealed to Superior Court. If this case should be allowed to remain on the docket untouched for a long, long period of time, any good safety effects of the arrest would be lost.

Then, there is the attitude so many jurors, and some judges, have toward traffic cases. That attitude is one of reluctance to convict in such cases. It may spring from the fact that the juror or judge realizes that he, himself, so often violates traffic laws. It may spring from the fact that the public generally just doesn't take traffic laws seriously.

Whatever the reason, the courts can play the key role in making effective the enforcement program of law enforcement officers or in almost completely negating the good effect of good law enforcement.

Business Feels An Uncertainty

By ELMER ROESSNER
Uncertainty permeates the business community. It is affecting planning for both the long term and the short term, the stock market and retail sales.

The uncertainty comes from the lack of answers to vital questions. At present, there seems to be more of these questions than at any other times in recent history.

The big puzzlers are:

Will Congress increase taxes?

Will it cut spending?

Will the war in Asia end suddenly or will it be escalated?

Will Congress curb travel?

How effective will be President Johnson's other plans to reduce the outflow of gold?

Will any effective steps be taken to half inflation?

In The Public Sector

What will the Federal Reserve do about interest rates?

Will consumers continue to increase spending, or will they be frightened into saving more?

Will the new minimum wage cut employment seriously?

How great will labor unrest be this year?

Ghetto unrest this summer?

To find out what kind of a forecaster you are, clip out those 11 questions, write your answers, and put both in your desk calendar for, say, Nov. 1. No prizes from me, because anyone guessing all the answers can make such a fortune this year that he can become the man who really has everything. Even one correct answer can be very profitable.

Meanwhile, the uncertainties, in tending to slow down decisions, will also tend to slow down business.

Other Look-Aheads

Here are other glimpses of things to come:

Cultured pearl prices are expected to rise. They are increasingly popular and Japanese production is down, due to a parasite that killed about a fourth of the pearl oysters last year.

The wave of mergers is spreading to hospitals. Some hospitals are finding it difficult to finance new equipment by themselves; others are so profitable they become takeover targets.

The Federal Trade Commission is about to crack down on claims for gasoline additives. It is now studying various claims for them.

LBJ's disapproval of travel to Europe may set off a travel boom to Alaska. The state has enlisted the help of the Cresap, McCormick and Paget management consulting firm and the U. S. Department of Commerce is contributing financial support.

Observations From Editorial Columns

EASE UP A LITTLE ON THE YOUNG

Foremost among our resolutions for the New Year is to take it a little easier on the young. So they wear their hair too long, their skirts too short, their opinions too proudly and their ignorance without shame or reservation. So what?

There is, in fact, just an awful lot they do not know and have not begun to suspect; and to make matters worse, they insist upon pursuing their education in this jungle in the hardest possible way.

In defense of this exasperating spectacle, we shall try from time to time to remember that there was never an era when it was so hard to be young. In required reading alone, the burden is staggering. And to make matters worse, there was never a period when so many graybeards stood about giving unsolicited and often specious testimonials on the virtues and rewards of growing old.

There are such rewards, but they are mostly compensatory; and it is no wonder the young listen with ill-concealed horror and suspicion. What age has to offer, they cannot escape. In the meantime, what they have is youthfulness, in the enjoyment of which they must be forgiven. — Charleston (W. Va.) Daily Mail

OLDER EMPLOYEES CAN TURN OUT WORK

We talk a great deal about the manpower shortage. No one wants to work, it's said. Factories are begging for workers. Offices need people for more and more paper work. Attend a trade convention and the number one topic is where to hire people.

Yet there is a vast pool of manpower going to waste in this country today. And what is more important the people in this pool want to work. We're referring to the 50 to 65 age people. It's extremely hard for these persons to find a job once they are enrolled among the unemployed. It's even fairly hard for a man or woman 40 years of age to find a job.

Dr. Irving S. Wright, of New York, speaking at the American Medical Association convention in Houston, scored the practice of companies putting out to pasture people who reach 65, or some other specific age. This notion, he says, is medically false and economically wasteful.

"Physicians in general understand that some individuals are sold at 40 and others are young at 75. They know it is not the chronological age but the biological age that is all important," he said. He recommended specific programs of profitable activity for older workers.

One of the reasons for companies not being willing to hire older workers is the higher rates that have to be paid on group insurance. Again the insurance companies are adding to the bad image they are creating by discriminating against older people, not only regarding automobile insurance, but in company group writing.

Congress has before it an anti-discrimination measure supposed to protect older workers, but putting teeth in the law is something else. Company personnel managers need to re-evaluate the assets of older workers. Some of them are even better workers, we're told, than young folks. Especially is this true in salesmanship. — Laurel (Miss.) Leader-Call

COLD ENOUGH FOR YOU?

We look with favor on the U. S. Army's formula for figuring out just how cold it is: first, the temperature is considered, then the wind velocity is measured. Part of one is then applied to the other and the result is the wind-chill equivalent. This is what was summed up as Minnesota's 79-below-zero reading Thursday, although the temperature itself was "only" 46 below.

Certainly how cold it is depends on how fast the cold hits you. We think the formula will be even more handy next summer when — as it occasionally does — Miami's temperature climbs to maybe 95. With our fresh prevailing breeze from the ocean we will be able to deduct some degrees and come up with something like 72.

This will only work in Florida, however. Due to climatic phenomena not understood but long observed, in California and Texas and other places the more wind blows the hotter it gets. Except in winter, of course, when it gets colder. — Miami (Fla.) Herald

Contest Between Freedom And Order Is Re-Raised

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Some time within the next few weeks or months, Dr. James Goddard will summon a press conference. We ink-stained wretches will turn out pencils poised.

"Gentlemen," Dr. Goddard will say, in effect, speaking to the American people, "from this moment hence forward, it will be unlawful for your family doctor to prescribe for you any one of 300 drugs you may have been taking in the past. You may imagine these drugs have been good for you. We know better. We have now ordered them off the shelf. Sorry 'bout that."

And thank you, Dr. Goddard. The "efficacy" provisions of the 1962 drug act will have come into full operation; and one more chapter will have been written in the ancient conflict between liberty and order. Our physicians will have a little less liberty; the country will have a little more order. The theory is that this is good for us. The law will be fulfilled.

How good is the theory? How sound is the law? I write obsessively about this conflict between liberty and order, and I do not mean to be a bore. But if the great dichotomy between liberty and compulsion is not comprehended, the whole thing is lost. These are not simple issues, capable of being reduced to crisp blacks and whites; they are fearfully complex issues. Color them dull grey.

The drug act of 1962 directed Dr. Goddard's Food and Drug Administration, for the first time, to make binding decisions as to the "effectiveness" of drugs. Up until that time, the FDA's sole obligation had been to pass on the "safety" of drugs, and there was no great quarrel about this. It has long been established, under the Commerce Clause, that Congress may prohibit interstate traffic in dangerous commodities — contaminated meat, infested grain, adulterated food. The regulation of public safety is unquestioned.

But "effectiveness"? The FDA is now engaged in an enormous undertaking. In June of 1966, Dr. Goddard's agency entered into a contract with the division of medical sciences of the National Academy of Sciences and the National Research Council. Twenty-nine panels, composed of 162 medical scientists, have been engaged. They are to review 3,637 drug preparations that were approved for marketing between 1938 and 1962. They are to consider every claim ever advanced for these preparations; and to classify the drugs as effective, probably effective, possibly effective, and ineffective.

Mind you, there will be no clinical tests. No country doctors will be summoned to testify. No patients will be called in to answer the ultimate question: Did the drug work for you? The experts will conduct not a single laboratory experiment. They will make their recommendations to Dr. Goddard, and Dr. Goddard, exercising the power vested in him by the 1962 act, will say:

"Those drugs that are found to be ineffective will be taken off the shelf—they cannot be marketed."

That was what Dr. Goddard said in a press conference on December 30, just after he addressed the American Association for the Advancement of Science in New York. He had been on his best behavior in his speech. He had dwelled upon the awful complexities of prescribing drugs for Americans generally. More and more, he said, a doctor must ask: What does the patient eat? Where does he live? Where does he work? What is his total chemical environment? Dr. Goddard's point was that patients are different.

But when he got to describing the efficacy study, these niceties went by the board. This was his concern: "How does the drug really work in the population as a whole"? Efficacy may be a relative matter.

The FDA's experts do not profess to be infallible. Nevertheless, compulsory orders will be issued on "the opinion of the Academy's eminent evaluators. And even though a 'generation of doctors' and their patients may attest the effectiveness of a particular medication, out it goes. The incredulous doctor, or the outraged patient, can "take it to the courts."

If the opinions of these eminent evaluators were merely advisory, or recommendatory, or cautionary, no objection could be taken. But these opinions are about to be written into binding rules and regulations, having the force and effect of law. A drug may have worked for you. Your doctor no longer can prescribe it. This is compulsion. Is it wise, is it wise, is it wise? I ask the question at the top of my lungs. Where should freedom end? Where should order begin?

V.C. Royster Wraps Up Selected Columns

By GEORGE BRYANT JR.

Special To The Reflector "A Pride of Prejudices" is a recently published book which is attracting a great deal of attention. In fact, many book stores have been unable to keep copies in stock.

The author is V. C. Royster, editor of the nationally circulated Wall Street Journal. The book is made up of a collection of Royster's columns covering a period of years. The pieces which make up the book reflect an independent and far ranging mind. They get into the problems of religion, fallacies of economic theories, foolishness of government, and just plain whimsy. It's the variety, plus the well sharpened words, that makes the book so interesting.

But, then, Royster, known as just plain Roy to friends and associates, is an interesting fellow. Many young men and women who are looking ahead, and many of the older folks who tend to look back, may benefit from the story of Roy's career. It shows how a good mind, sharpened by solid education, and an imagination backed by determination, can get things done.

Roy is one of North Carolina's distinguished sons. His growing up place was Raleigh. His father had been a teacher of Latin and Greek at the University of N.C. He was also a lawyer. He decided early that his young son should be grounded in the basics of education.

With his father as his teacher, Roy was well along in Latin shortly after the age of eight. In his early teens, he got Greek. Then he went to the "old fashioned" Webb School in Tennessee. There he got more Latin and Greek, as well as the other fundamentals of Education.

After Webb, Roy went to Chapel Hill. There he continued Latin and Greek as "crip courses," while he concentrated on other languages and history. His spare time he used in writing for the University publications. Many of his ideas were controversial and created problems for the then president, Dr. Frank Graham.

But Roy did his work well. He came out of Chapel Hill in the mid-1930s with a Phi Beta Kappa key. His aim was the big newspapers in New York. But when he got there, he found that the New York Times, the now dead Herald Tribune and the others of those days were not interested in young men. They were having a hard time protecting their old and tried hands.

So, Roy took what he could get. This wasn't much, but he had to eat. He worked for a spell with a bank, as a messenger. Then he got a break. He met William H. Grimes, then managing editor of the Wall Street Journal. Grimes had a nose for likely young men. He took Roy on. It wasn't long before Roy was sent down to The Journal's Washington Bureau.

But it didn't take this young man long to get going in Washington. His manner was brash, but still polite. He stood in no awe of the great and no-great. He knew how to report and write news stories. And when he had a dull moment, he would knock out an editorial, which usually found its way into print.

Service in the Navy interrupted his news work. In 1946, he followed me as chief of the Journal's Bureau. In 1949, he moved up to New York as associate editor and became editor in 1953 when Grimes retired.

Along the way, Roy had received some high honors. He got a Pulitzer prize in 1953 for distinguished editorial writing. He was president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in 1965-1966.

The book, "A Pride of Prejudices," reflects Roy's independent thinking on how people live and work. He can't be tagged with any of the popular labels, such as conservative or liberal. He's a scholar who draws on the past in looking at the present and on to the future. He's optimistic. He commented that the Dark Ages "only" lasted 500 years and then "things got better."

Roy's name merits some explanation. Behind the given name of Vermont comes the initial "C." That "C" is for Connecticut. Taken together, Vermont Connecticut hardly seems appropriate for a man who was raised in Raleigh and whose family had been in the South for years.

Roy's story is that many years back, two Royster brothers had a bit of a "falling out." One was strong in his feelings. He didn't want his children confused with those of his brother. So, he named them after states — Virginia, Carolina, Missouri, Iowa, and of course, Vermont, Connecticut. Subsequent generations have inherited these names.

What makes Royster's book so attractive to readers is that Roy, as an editor, has had full freedom to write what he pleases. The owners of the paper have never told him what to do. This is contrary to a rather popular conception that all editors are controlled, by owners, political or business interests.

The volume is light, as it trips from one subject to another. Some pieces are current, in that they deal with events and politicians of today. Others go back into history and recollect how this country came into being.

Shires

(Continued From Page 4) with the candidates and their managers it was learned that the idea of making "deals" in 1968 is frightening.

"It would kill us," says one campaign manager. Another says "deals" are out. "They've never been discussed. We are making no promises, and there won't be any alliances based on promises or understandings."

Still another political campaign figure says "if anybody makes a deal it would be disastrous. You can't do it in this day and time, and nobody even talks about it. The thought of making a deal is ridiculous."

The same sources abhor the idea of political alliances among supporters of various candidates. They doubt that there will be any appeal to vote "tickets" instead of individual candidates.

They feel any endorsement of a "ticket" other than under a party label intimates a political agreement of "deal." This year, apparently, "dealing" is out.

South Texas Town Flying Old Glory To Show Stand

EDNA, Tex. (AP) — This south Texas town of more than 5,000 persons endorses the American policy in Vietnam and flies about 100 flags each day to show it.

As the City Council said, the flags will fly "until an honorable peace has been secured."

The idea was conceived by Mayor A. D. Tinkler.

He told Kenneth Carter, Corpus Christi Caller-Times staff writer, that "I recently visited some of my children in California. On the campus of the University of California at Berkeley, I saw the hippies, the sit-ins and the demonstrations."

"I just got fed up with it." Tinkler is a retired Shell Oil Co. employee who operates a real estate business. He pondered what he might do to show that most Americans have a different view from the demonstrators.

He came up with the idea of Edna business and professional people and others flying the Stars and Stripes until an acceptable peace has been achieved.

Tinkler introduced the idea to the Edna City Council which went with him all the way.

Businessmen and workers in the courthouse backed the move, too, as did a number of persons who wanted to fly the flag at their residences.

As a result, about 80 flags go up each weekday morning in the business section and more than 20 fly at private homes.

"I have been complimented more for this than for any other action since I've been mayor," Tinkler said. "People who have never said anything (About the city government) came into my office to tell me how much they thought of it."

Flag holders were welded to alternate parking meters in the business district. Boy Scouts sold flags to merchants. Thirteen were sold at the courthouse. Merchants and others put up the flags and take them down in the evening.

The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars who share a building, fly a spotlighted flag 24 hours a day.

So does Simon McCloud of Lolita, who lost his toes by freezing in a Japanese prison camp. Tinkler has sufficient personal reasons to want the Vietnamese war ended.

His two sons have been in military service and one remains a Marine reserve pilot. One of his two sons-in-law was a doctor in the Army and the other is in Vietnam as a major in the 101st Airborne Division.

Tinkler's sentiments are summed up in a resolution passed by the City Council recently:

Marlow

If this reasoning is correct, then it would be no surprise to see Dean Rusk secretary of state, resign and be replaced before the political campaigns get feverish later this year.

Rusk has been even more of a punching bag for the war critics, in and out of Congress, than McNamara. With McNamara and Rusk both gone the critics would be deprived of a lot of talking points against the war.

The fewer the talking points, the better for Johnson politically.

"Be it known that inasmuch as our sons are risking their lives in a conflict in foreign soil; and knowing that draft card burning, protest marches and antiwar demonstrations tend to give aid and comfort to the enemy and prolong the war;

"Therefore, be it resolved that we the city fathers of the City of Edna condemn all such un-American activities, and, wishing to show our support of the government of these United States, do hereby decree that the flag of the United States of America be displayed along our streets until an honorable peace has been secured in Vietnam."

Evans-Novak

This is what disturbs McCarthy's own backers here more than anything else in his campaign. At a small closed-door meeting after that Manchester speech, a McCarthy volunteer named John Teague — a student, like so many of his supporters — eloquently informed McCarthy that he would not stand a chance in New Hampshire unless he took a hard offensive against the Johnson administration.

Teague argued that McCarthy must talk about his candidacy not in tones of half apology but with a fighting pledge to run hard for the Presidency. So far, this hasn't happened.

North Korea's Premier Pictured As Seeing War Inevitable

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

A former general in the Soviet Army, drilled by the Kremlin in how to communize North Korea, now occupies the spotlight in a tense crisis which conceivably could bring his Russian mentors into confrontation with the United States.

Kim Il Sung, premier of North Korea, is described by those who knew him in the old days as a man who never had an original thought. His thoughts today may not be original, but if a pro-Communist writer's reports about them are true, he is convinced that a new war with the United States is all but inevitable.

The writer is Wilfred Burchett, an Australian who for two decades has reported from Communist capitals and war-fronts and who often echoes the hardest of Communist lines. Burchett describes the views of Kim and other North Korean leaders in a book, "Again Korea," to be published by International Publishers of New York. It is written wholly from the Communist viewpoint and places on the United States all the blame for tension in the Korean peninsula.

The way Burchett puts it, the North Korean leaders are convinced that for 18-years the United States has been plotting war against them, and they fully expect another round of Korean conflict.

Premier Kim, a roly-poly man of 56 who has been a Communist since his boyhood, is pictured as gloomily emphasizing that "things may be destroyed again" in North Korea, 15 years after the end of the Korean conflict of 1950-53.

Kim's representative on the Military Armistice Commission,

Maj. Gen. Pak Chung Kook, is represented as feeling that there is "overwhelming evidence" that the United States is intent on launching a new war.

Burchett links rising tension to President Johnson's visit to South Korea in October 1966, comparing it with the 1950 visit by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, which the Communists insist was a prelude to carrying out plans for hostilities.

Burchett claims that American strategy "seems aimed at building up incidents" to a point where North Koreans take countermeasures. Thereupon, he says, both the United States and Japan would go to war against North Korea. Japan once ruled Korea.

Burchett more than once has been able to predict Communist actions. He visited Premier Kim and other North Korean leaders in 1967, and thus the indication is that they were thinking long ago in terms of the inevitability of a resumed Korean war.

One important question is this: is the present taunting of the American eagle Kim's own idea? Did inspiration or encouragement come from the outside, and if so, from what source?

Despite Kim's reputation for lack of originality, this phase of the tension perhaps can be attributed to North Korean initiative. The Communists there have been keeping the Red Chinese at arm's length, and not long ago also indicated some independence from Moscow. The North Korean leaders seemed to have been annoyed with Moscow for not showing more belligerency toward the Americans in Asia.

Kim Il Sung may have been happier in the Stalin era, when he cut his political teeth. He studied in Moscow before World War II, joined a North Korean unit fighting beside the Russians against the Germans, and emerged as a major general in the Soviet Army.

Intelligence sources in Korea long ago pegged Kim as hand-picked by Moscow to take over all Korea for communism. Under the protection of Soviet occupation troops, he was installed in Pyongyang in 1945, bearing the title of a North Korean marshal.

His real name is Kim Jung Su. Kim Il Sung is the name of a Korean hero-martyr who fought in the anti-Japanese underground and who, had he lived, would be close to 100 years old today.

After 7 Years Of Marriage

Princess Margaret And Husband Pass Test

By MARGARET SAVILLE
LONDON (UPI)—The photographs showed the Earl of Snowdon greeting actress Britt Ekland, wife of actor Peter Sellers, with a fine kiss. Just a friendly gesture since they both were yachting guests of the Aga Khan off Sardinia.

not amused. She doesn't care for her photographer-husband's habit of kissing lady friends and it became known the two of them had words about it. "Nothing serious, though," said a friend, "and what couple doesn't have an occasional squabble?"
By all present indications the Snowdons—who run London's liveliest and most contemporary establishment—have come safely through the "seven-year-test" of marital permanence. They were married May 6, 1960.

Little Publicity

In contrast to the days when her romances, as a single girl, were headlines around the world, the little five-foot princess does not consume much space in the British press at the moment. The last publicity flareup was that of a year ago when rumors of a rift between the Snowdons were so widespread that the couple had a spectacular and public reunion in New York and the Bahamas and denied anything was wrong.

Since then the Snowdons have been very much together, very much the center of a somewhat Bohemian crowd which gathers at their magnificent grace-and-favor (meaning no rent) apartment in Kensington Palace for the kind of parties Queen Elizabeth does not throw at Buckingham Palace.

The Margaret-Tony set likes pop music, buffet meals, informal clothing, social chitchat. At sister Queen Elizabeth's big house the gatherings are more sedate, the guests more dignified, the talk more general and much less personal.

Still Youthful Approaching 38 (March 7).

Puerto Ricans In All Fifty States

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI)—Most people believe that Puerto Ricans leaving the island go to New York, Chicago, Southern California and other large urban centers in the United States.

However the U.S. population census shows that there are more than 1 million Puerto Ricans distributed throughout all 50 states of the Union.

Snowdon still is boyishly good looking and as slender as he was at the time when—as freelance photographer Anthony Armstrong Jones—his surprise engagement to the sister of the Queen stunned the nation.

Margaret, who will be 38 in August, still is a handsome woman but, though she is not a big eater and smokes heavily, she is putting on weight—all over. She seems in this respect to take after Queen Mother Elizabeth who was a dainty little thing until she was in her '30's and then became plump very quickly.

The extra weight does not appear to worry Margaret who is not dieting, unless it's the drinking man's diet. She likes an occasional whiskey and bartenders are always trying to tempt her with new whiskey-based cocktails.

The transition from the carefree photographer Armstrong Jones to the Earl of Snowdon (Motto: What God wills will be) has not been a storybook affair of living happily ever after. Lord Snowdon is accepted by the British people but it isn't the usual love affair Britons have for their ruling family. He'll probably always be "on trail" of a sort with the public.

No State Functions

Snowdon takes no official part in state functions although he is present at some as his wife's escort. His public engagements are the kind he could do if he were not married to a princess—concerned mainly with photography, design, modern art, drama and the like.

Queen Elizabeth, to please her sister, appointed him Constable of Carnarvon Castle, the great ruined pile where Prince Charles, heir to the throne, will be invested as Prince of Wales in 1969. Snowdon had a Welsh father which enhanced his eligibility for the post.

At the actual ceremony then goes out with mutual friends. She likes discotheques, dancing, chatting with pop singers such as the Beatles and the Rolling Stones, film and show biz folk in general.
Good Performer
The princess is a pretty good entertainer herself and appears as a singer, dancer and pianist in some of the home movies on trips abroad, and Margaret

Heart Attack Taught Lesson

JACKSON, Tenn. (UPI)—"It took a heart attack for me to learn how to live," says Brooks Shaw.

Shaw was president of a food company. I later became president of a canned meat company. I later became president of a vacuum cleaner company.

So he began a new life concentrating on what had been only a hobby. His "Old Country Store" near Jackson—a crowded 40 feet by 170 feet—is the result.

"I had always worked hard," said Shaw. "I was a super salesman for a canned meat company. I later became president. I refused a vacation or even a break for a holiday."

Change Pattern
"After a bout in the hospital and explanations from my doctor, I realized I had to change my whole pattern of life. A friend gave me what I called 'three talents,' an old apple peeler, a meat grinder and a coffee mill."

"I started a collection which developed into a desire to preserve for future generations articles 50 or more years old that were rapidly disappearing."

The store's rustic appearance is suited to Shaw's collection. The ceilings have exposed beams of rough-hewn cypress logs from which are suspended the revolving fans that became a near trademark for early drug stores. Also present are the pot-bellied stoves that oldtimers used to gather round for conversation.

May Lunch
Though Shaw denies operating a restaurant, guests may eat lunch at the store, choosing from a menu that includes turrap greens, chicken and dumplings, corned beef and cabbage, country ham and gravy and cracklin' bread.

He also has a soda fountain purchased from a druggist at Okalona, Miss. The fountain is one of 75 that were made by Lippincott in Philadelphia. Only five are known to remain in existence. The other four are in museums.

"I don't draw a penny from the business," Shaw said. "I feel it is a good investment and I think someone should collect and care for these relics for future generations."

"I will keep my collection as long as I live," he added, "and hope my children will perpetuate it."

BROOKS SHAW . . . learned how to live the hard way: a heart attack taught the lesson. Now, he spends much of his time here, among the many things collected in his 'Old Country Store' as a hobby. (UPI)

Say Prompt Treatment Of Frostbite Is Essential

CHICAGO (UPI) — Prompt treatment of frostbite is essential to avoid serious damage, the American Medical Association (AMA) reports.

In true frostbite, crystals of ice form between the cells, freezing the tissue. A part of the body can become frostbitten even when the temperature isn't startingly low.

"Wind is important and the chilling effect of air at 20 degrees above zero moving at 45 miles an hour is the same as 40 below zero air on a still day," the AMA said.

One of the dangers of frostbite is that the victim often doesn't feel it. Someone else usually notices that an ear or nose is turning white.

the affected part as rapidly as possible, authorities say. Use hot compresses to warm. Apply gently. If no hot water is available, place the person in a sleeping bag or cover with coats and blankets. Feed hot liquids to the person.

See a doctor as soon as possible, it was suggested. He can determine the extent of injury and treat it.

Political Pollsters Must Rely On Chance

By GEORGE J. MARDER
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Political pollsters testing the popularity of President Johnson and those who would like to succeed him rely on the same laws of chance as an expert poker player.

This is true whether the pollster's name is George Gallup, Louis Harris or Archibald Crossley.

Many people have the idea that pollsters use some mystical scientific formula to select the areas they canvass and the people they interview to get an accurate picture of how the candidates would fare if the election were held at that moment.

Under this theory, the pollster interviews a predetermined number of Negroes and whites, rich and poor, farmers and workers, in an attempt to duplicate American voting in miniature.

It isn't that way at all.

Abandon System

"This 'quota system was abandoned in national polling years ago because it didn't work. For one thing, it gave the person conducting the interview too much leeway in selecting the person polled.

Random polling takes this power of selection away from the interviewer. Gallup, Harris and Crossley all agree the random system produces a representative sampling of the electorate within narrow margins of error which are predictable under the laws of probability.

Gallup says the more random the sampling, the more likely it is to be accurate.

"The important thing," he says, "is to see to it that every adult American has an equal chance of being interviewed."

In a separate interview, Harris said practically the same thing. "Every household," he said, "must have an equal chance of being drawn into the sample."

In other words, the pollsters have found that they cannot use a formula to find the typical, average American voter.

In each political poll, Gallup interviews 1,500 persons in approximately 320 election precincts. In a presidential election, the voter turnout exceeds 70 million from more than 200,000 precincts. At times, Gallup will double or triple his samplings to narrow the chances of error. Crossley says he uses about the same number of samplings in his polls.

Basic Unit

The basic Louis Harris polling unit is 1,600 people to be interviewed at 100 sampling

Diamond, Death Have Been Linked

Hope Diamond Is 'Jinxed Gem'

By DONALD FINLEY
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Grief killed Wilhelm Fals. Marie Antoinette lost her head to the guillotine. French trader Jean Baptiste Tavernier died insane. A revolutionary's blade felled Russian Prince Ivan Kanitovski. Catherine the Great died of apoplexy.

The common link in this 300-year trial of misery, misfortune and splendor gone sour is the Hope Diamond, 44.5 carats in weight and the world's largest deep blue diamond.

But disaster has not struck the staid Smithsonian Institution in the decade it has had the Hope under glass, and New York gem dealer Harry Winston, the donor, says he experienced no misfortune.

Unexplained Death

The recent puzzling death—of an unexplained malady—of 25-year-old Evalyn McLean at her ranch near Plano, Tex., raised the old specter.

She was one of seven grandchildren of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean, a Washington socialite, whose family suffered great personal tragedy during the 40 years she owned the Hope diamond.

Her marriage broke up; her husband later died in a mental institution; her oldest son was killed by a car; a daughter died from an overdose of sleeping pills.

Nonetheless, a stepsister, Mrs. Richard L. Jones of Dallas, said the family considered the legendary curse just so much "baloney."

The Smithsonian believes the Hope is part of the 112.5-carat "French Blue" Diamond that originated in the Kollur mines of India. According to legend, it was pried from the forehead of a Hindu idol by a Brahman priest who was later tortured to death.

The entire history of the diamond after this is not known, but enough is known to trace a long line of mishaps to its possessors.

It showed up in the hands of French diamond trader Jean Baptiste Tavernier, who smuggled it out of India in 1642 and sold it to French monarch Louis XIV. Tavernier later was killed by a pack of wild dogs on a trip to the Far East.

Loaned to Stone

Louis XIV had the stone cut to 67.5 carats. He loaned it to a French government official who was later executed by the king.

Louis died of an incurable disease.

A descendant, Princess de Labelle, wore the diamond and was killed by a mob in the French Revolution.

Revolutionaries stole the stone from inheritors King

Louis XVI and his queen, Marie Antoinette, who later died at the guillotine.

It was put in storage but stolen in 1792 by burglars and next appeared, several years later, in the hands of Wilhelm Fals, a Dutch diamond cutter who reduced it to its present size. He died heartbroken after his son, Hendrik, stole the diamond from him. The son committed suicide in 1830.

The next known owner, French broker Francois Beaulieu, destitute, sold the diamond for a fraction of its worth to an English broker who apparently escaped any ill luck.

He sold it for $90,000 to Henry Thomas Hope, an Irish banker and squire. The Hope family lent its name to the stone, sold it but came upon ill fortune. Within two generations, the family wealth had vanished.

The diamond also came into the possession of Jacques Celot, a French jeweler who went insane and died a suicide.

Russian Prince Ivan Kanitovski once gave it to Tollies Bergere dancer Lorenz Laduc and later was stabbed to death by revolutionaries. On the day after she accepted the gift, Miss Laduc was fatally stabbed.

Other Deaths

Catherine the Great of Russia, another one-time owner, died of apoplexy. A Spanish merchant owner of the bauble drowned in a shipwreck. A Turkish sultan stabbed his wife after giving her the diamond.

New York jeweler Jacques Cartier acquired the stone in 1909 and sold it to the McLeans in 1911 for $154,000. Cartier apparently escaped any misfortune.

Mrs. McLean had it put on a platinum necklace with 62 smaller diamonds.

The McLean estate sold the diamond to Winston with the stipulation the sale was canceled if there was a death in the family within six months. There wasn't. Seven years passed before the McLean's first son, Vincent, was killed in an auto accident.

Finally Attain Outside Power

TENNANT, Calif. (UPI)—Residents of this sparsely populated area near the Oregon-California border received a special Christmas present this year—their first outside electric service.

Since the 1930s the rural logging area of Siskiyou County has been served by a diesel generator.

The recent decision reversed a trial court award to the owner of a horse that ran into the guy wire of a power company pole and was injured. The court said the animal trespassing and the property was not to blame.

Dentist Trained Mrs. Mills In Duties Of Dental Assistant

By RUTH GWYNN

Reflector Woman's Worker

With the widespread interest in health careers, one of the most popular fields for young women who do not wish to go to college is that of the dental assistant. Mrs. Willard Mills, however, came into the field of dental assisting more or less by accident.

"With no training whatsoever, I called a Greenville dentist who needed an assistant. Somewhat to my surprise, I got the job. I was completely trained by the dentist in my duties."

Although there are schools for dental assistants, many dentists do prefer to train their own assistants. Most of the schools are two-year programs.

By training his own assistant, the dentist can be sure that she is familiar with his methods and techniques. "Once you have learned all the basics — the names of the instruments, when they are used, and what they are used for — it is not really hard to learn the methods of individual dentists. They really don't vary that much.

Teamwork Essential

"A certain amount of teamwork is essential and working with the dentist is the only way to acquire that sense of teamwork. You are soon able to almost read his mind and have the instruments ready before he asks for them. A trained assistant seldom needs to be told what instruments are needed," remarked Mrs. Mills.

As a chairside assistant, most of Mrs. Mills' time is spent on her feet by the dental chair. Her duties include not only having the instruments in readiness for the dentist, but also doing X-rays, applying stannous chloride to the teeth, keeping charts and records and doing work in the lab, such as models for dentures and crowns.

No license is required to be a dental assistant. They are not required to have health certificates from the state board, either.

Mrs. Mills taught herself how to take the full series of X-rays, which involves 16 individual X-rays. Some of the teeth are X-rayed individually. Only two or three teeth are ever shown on a single X-ray. X-rays of the teeth are taken to determine whether or not there are any cysts, bone loss, or other complications before extractions are made. X-rays also show whether or not the teeth are coming in properly.

Stannous fluoride, the widespread use of which has come into being during Mrs. Mills' career as a dental assistant, is applied to the teeth in a wax mold. "We apply the stannous fluoride every six months, after the teeth are cleaned. It is left on the teeth in the mold for four minutes. It hardens and protects the teeth, so we apply it to adults, whose teeth tend to become more sensitive with age, as well as to children," she added.

Cavity Rate

Mrs. Mills has been able to see the difference in the cavity rate of families who have had the regular protection of stannous fluoride and those who have not. "The ones who have had the protection of fluoride have far fewer cavities."

"Preparing the instruments for use involves their sterilization and also putting in the autoclave any instruments which go beneath the tissue. The autoclave, similar in principle to a pressure cooker, sterilizes through steam pressure," she said.

"The dentist instructs you about which instruments go in the autoclave. These instruments are not touched with the hands, but picked up with sterile tongs," Mrs. Mills continued.

The duties of a chair side assistant differ somewhat from those of a roving assistant. The roving assistant keeps the appointment book, keeps the rooms and instruments clean and can do work at the chair.

Mrs. Mills, who is the assistant of Dr. Donald Patrick, had no real interest in the field of medicine as a child, but now she loves her work. "I think in any job, the people you work with and for makes a big difference. I enjoy the contacts with the patients. Soon you find that you know the whole family. It is very rewarding work to me, because I think that nothing beats a clean mouth and a pretty smile."

Mrs. Mills has always lived in Pitt County. She attended Chicod High School and the Greenville School of Commerce. She has lived in Greenville for 13 years. She and her husband, William Earl Mills, have a 10-year old son, Wayne, who is in the fourth grade at Wahl-Coates School.

DEVELOPING X-RAYS . . . and trimming impressions are two of Mrs. Mills' duties while working in the laboratory.

RELAXING AT HOME . . . Mrs. Mills enjoys reading a good book after a busy day at the office of Dr. Donald Patrick, where she is a dental assistant.

MRS. WILLARD MILLS . . . is shown assisting Dr. Patrick in preparation of filling cavities for a patient.

By JEAN DONALD

St. Petersburg, Fla., Times

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Children should be seen and not heard.

Honor thy father and thy mother.

Do not speak unless spoken to.

These were the rules by which parents ruled the roost in a bygone era.

Thirty or 40 years ago the rights of the adult were clearly recognized. Children had no rights, just the privileges their parents granted them, says Wesley Jenkin, director of the Family and Children's Service here.

Since World War II, however, America's child-rear philosophy has changed. Now more often than not, children run the house.

"Today's family is child-centered. Parents' lives—particularly a mother's—are devoted to fulfilling the needs of the children. Children have been elevated to the position of supremacy," says Jenkin.

"But I think we're reaching a point now where parents are beginning to take a close look at the responsibilities of children and the rights of parents."

What are the rights of a parent, and the rights of a mother in particular? Pediatricians, psychologists and mothers themselves have their own ideas on the subject.

Jenkin and psychologist Dr.

Sidney J. Merin agree a mother has the right to her own time and privacy as long as it doesn't injure others. "A mother has the right to use a substitute kind of child care in order to get some kind of freedom from the family once in awhile," says Jenkin. "It should be perfectly acceptable for a mother to trade babysitting services with a neighbor."

She has the right to pursue her own skills and talents as long as it's not injurious to others. "If a mother is willing to recognize her rights—realize that she needn't stop growing and producing because she's a mother—and not be guilt-ridden by it, she and her children will be much happier," says Dr. Merin.

"A mother has the right to certain prerogatives just because she is a mother," Jenkin feels. "For example, if the youngsters have been watching TV all day and there's a program she wants to watch, she has the right to say, 'You've picked the programs all day. Now I would like to watch this one for an hour.'"

She has the right to expect at least moderate obedience and conformity.

She also has the right to seclusion with her husband and the right to have her husband discuss problems involving family alone.

Another should have the rights to limit children's play to those areas of the home designed for uninhibited activity.

One pediatrician feels "parents have certain rights and should demand certain considerations from their children. For example, a mother's bedroom should be her room and the children should have to have permission before they enter," he says.

"Parents should be left alone when sleeping. Children should be taught to stay in their own beds and not make a nuisance of themselves," the physician continued. "But mothers can't demand complete privacy. If parents want absolute privacy, they shouldn't have been parents."

Another pediatrician feels mothers should be able to have certain possessions, such as good furniture and the children should be taught not to damage it. "They should be kept occupied in another room," he says. "He doesn't feel telling a child he can't play in a certain room is psychologically damaging. "In fact, I think we need more of it."

According to Dr. Merin, mothers SHOULD pursue their rights, "or they may unconsciously resent their children if they feel the children consume all their time. Mothers who are intelligent, creative, gregarious, assertive, and who are productive, may find themselves feeling tied down by the responsibilities of motherhood and may resent their children. But if they pursue their own rights, they'll be happier—and so will the child."

By MALVINA STEPHENSON

WASHINGTON (WNS) — The original "Scrap Man" who is part dead car and part old stove has a First Lady for a fan. Lady Bird Johnson thinks he is just great!

Although this hunk of metal masculinity is no candidate for a muscle show or an art exhibit he cuts a fine figure in the national beautification movement. Mr. Scrapy can be seen in a unique "Sculptured mural" which decorates the outdoor fence of an Atlanta, Ga., firm.

Despite the squeeze of soaring freight rates and sagging market prices, the scrap metal industry is waging its own private war on ugliness. This "Green - Screen" drive works to beautify commercial sites exempt from the Highway Beautification Act.

While federal funds are used to help remove billboards and mask junkyards, the voluntary program of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel does not cost the government a penny. Individual companies, with state and local leaders, do the job.

Unightly Remains

The aesthetic-minded industry, which has taken a cue from Lady Bird's beautification, not only clears the countryside of unsightly remains but is prettifying up its own premises as well.

The Georgian metal mural, which stars the Scrap Man, also displays cast-off auto fan blades blossoming into flower petals. This typifies the originality and ingenuity of the institute's year-old pilot program whose success story is told in a green-backed brochure opening with a message from Lady Bird Johnson.

The First Lady declares, "The talents and thoughtfulness of a beauty-minded citizenry can improve any eyesore, anywhere. Their accomplishments are stepping-stones on which others can build, and I welcome the important example that these members of the scrap iron industry have set."

Besides support at state and local levels, the Green-Screen program has received technical advice from the American Society of Landscape Architects and the American association of Nurserymen. The ideas can also be applied to the properties of other industries.

"Some participants found their solution in cooperative efforts with civic organizations, highway departments and planning authorities," declares I. D. Shapiro of Baltimore, Md., national president of the Scrap Iron and Steel Institute. "Others assumed full responsibility for planning and carrying out their own beautification programs.

"In some instances, yards that had to be moved because of urban renewal or highway construction had an opportunity to start from scratch. But most of the case histories show how imagination and ingenuity were used to shield an existing plant."

Miss Mary Ann Kelly Weds

Miss Mary Ann Kelly, marked with white satin bows daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Tucker, and Walter Daniel Cleaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Cleaton of Ayden, were united in marriage Saturday at three o'clock in the afternoon at Eighth Street Christian Church.

The Rev. W. J. Hadden Jr., pastor of the bride, officiated using the double ring ceremony. In the choir loft was a fifteen semi-circle candelabra flanked with tall standards of greenery. In the background of the church were palms. Two pyramidal candelabra with waterfall arrangements of white gladioli. The bride and bridegroom took their vows and knelt facing the other for the closing prayer and benediction on a profile prie dieu placed at the altar. Pews were fastened to the shoulders bordered with wide lace over peau de soie.

Her headdress was a bouffant of three-tiered silk illusion attached to lace clustered petals encrusted with beaded pearls. She carried a formal bouquet of gardenias cascading down the front of the gown tied with moss green velvet.

Mrs. Raymond Wood of Dearing, Ga., aunt of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a full length formal gown of romance pink peau de soie with elbow length sleeves, round neck with A-line skirt. She wore a matching pillbox with an illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of purple statice pink mums and pink velvet bows with long streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Vickie Goodson and Mrs. Howard Burnes Jr. of Greenville, aunt of bride. Their gowns, headdresses, and bouquets were designed after the honor attendant's.

Junior bridesmaids were Miss Jane Strickland, Miss Donna Strickland of Wilson, cousins of bride, and Miss Llewellyn Tucker of Greenville, sister of bride.

They wore romance pink peau de soie skimmer gowns with elbow sleeves and round necklines. Their headdresses were tailored matching bows with illusion. They carried skimmer bouquets of purple statice and pink mums tied with pink velvet.

Mr. Cleaton served his son as best man. Ushers were Jim Booth, Monty Little, Ken and Mike Cleaton, brothers of bridegroom, all of Ayden.

Mrs. Tucker, the bride's mother, chose for her daughter's wedding, an aqua crepe dress with matching accessories.

Mrs. Cleaton wore an ice blue dress with matching accessories. Both mothers wore white cattleya orchid corsages.

Grandmothers, Mrs. J. C. Kelley of Wilson, Mrs. Walter E. Cleaton of Oak City and Mrs. W. Z. Strickland, of Wilson wore white carnation corsages.

The bridal couple, parents, maid of honor, bridesmaids, and junior bridesmaids received in the church after the ceremony. Mrs. Evelyn McGowan presided at the register.

Mrs. Cleaton received her education at Rose High School, Chowan College and Beauty School. She is presently employed at LeAnne Beauty Shop. The bridegroom graduated from Ayden High School, attended Chowan College and at present is taking business at Lenoir Community College.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, Mr. and Mrs. Cleaton will reside on Holly Street, Greenville.

For traveling, Mrs. Cleaton changed into a green wool dress with plaid matching coat and wore an orchid corsage.

After-Rehearsal Party

Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Tucker entertained the bridal party and out-of-town guests at an after-rehearsal party Friday night in the ladies parlor of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Tucker welcomed the guests. Mrs. Ollie Harrington invited guests to the refreshment table. Pink carnations and white snapdragons centered the table. Punch was poured by Mrs. Harry Cleaton. A three-tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Tucker, after the bridal couple cut the first slice.

Mrs. Evelyn McGowan, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Burns Jr., and Mrs. Velma Tucker entertained at a luncheon at the Silo Restaurant for the bridal party and out-of-town guests Saturday.

The tables were covered with white cloths and centered with arrangements of white carnations and yellow pom poms.

Papa Papa Arrested Because Of Letter

GRENOBLE, France (WNS)—The five daughters of Giuseppe Macaluso, 52, always called him "Papa" without knowing that that is his proper name. Now that the truth is out, Giuseppe has been arrested and will be extradited to Italy. In 1947, Giuseppe Papa was convicted of robbery in Sicily but escaped to France where he changed his name to Macaluso and began a new life. Police picked up his trail when he could not resist writing home to Sicily to ask about the health of his Aunt Anna.

Your Generous Present Goes Down The Drain

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I met this good looking girl who waits on tables in a place near where I work. She came on like a real sweet country kid who worked hard for a living and wouldn't let any guy get next to her, which I liked. Well, I took her home from work a couple of times, and all she'd give me was a good-night peck on the cheek at her door.

I asked her what she wanted for Christmas, and she gave me a list of clothes to buy and where to buy them. I went around and bought all the things she wanted, which set me back $300.

After I gave her these gifts, I asked her how about driving somewhere with me for the week-end. She said nothing doing—she wasn't that kind of a girl.

She's already wore the clothes I gave her, so what do I do now? Three hundred bucks ain't hay.

a very good answer in your column for a person who wrote in to complain because every time he turned around, the church was asking for money. He wanted to know what the church did with all their money. I would appreciate it if you could locate that item and print it again. Thank you kindly.

DES MOINES CLERGYMAN: DEAR CLERGYMAN: It was closer to EIGHT years ago, but I have located the letter, and here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: We are not overly religious people, but we do like to go to church once in a while. It seems to me that every time we turn around in church we are getting hit for money. I thought religion was free. I realize that churches have to have some money but I think it is getting to be a racket. Just what do churches do with all their money?"

CURIOUS: "DEAR CURIOUS: Even priests, ministers, and rabbis must eat. And since they work full time at their tasks, the churches must support them. Staff, professional choir members, and musicians must also be paid. Buildings must be maintained, heated, lighted, and beautified. (And, of course, first they must be built!) Custodial staff must eat and feed their families.

Most churches engage in philanthropic work (aid to needy, missions, and education); hence, they have their financial obligations. Even orchids, contrary to folklore, do not live on air. Churches can't live on air, either. Religion, like water, may be free, but when they pipe it to you, you've got to help pay for the piping. And the piping!

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of something new in our town. It's called the "COME AND GO SHOW-ER."

Here is how it works. The guests come, drop off their gifts, and then they go. They can't stay because so many people are invited there is no room for them to sit down anywhere. There is a punch bowl and cookies around and everyone helps themselves.

kind of shower if you can't kind of whover if you can't stay and watch the guest of honor unwrap her gifts. The last one I went to netted 103 gifts from neighbors, friends, and relatives. I lasted 10 hours, and people were coming and going with gifts all day long, I'm told. What is your opinion of showers like this?

"COME AND WENT" IN HARRISBURG

Full Schedule Occupies Church Women United Church Women United are occupied full with Operation Sunshine, UNICEF, World Day of Prayer, May Fellowship, Overseas Clothing Drive and the Migrant Ministry during 1968.

From 16 churches in Greenville, members of Church Women United met recently for a board meeting and heard reports by the president and five committee chairmen on the projects:

Mrs. Thomas Davis, president, gave the 1967-'68 annual report; Mrs. Patrick Dayson reported on the second Operation Sunshine Program and said the daily program and the camp were considered "very successful;" Mrs. Billy Laughinghouse was awarded the 1967 UNICEF Certificate of Appreciation, in the absence of chairman Mrs. Dave Whichard, and noted $747.57 was collected for the 1967 drive, the largest total collection ever;

Mrs. Robert Dasher, Christian World Missions chairman, said the 1968 World Day of Prayer has been set for March 1; Mrs. James Patty announced used clothing for the Overseas Clothing Drive will be sent in the spring; and Mrs. Davis stated May Fellowship will be conducted at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church on May 3.

In other business it was announced Miss Venetia Cox has resigned as Migrant Ministry chairman. The group recognized her long and faithful service in this field and expressed their love and appreciation to her.

DEAR CAME AND WENT: It's my opinion that anyone who would COME to a shower such as the one you describe, should GO and have her head examined. Showers are getting to be an out-and-out racket, but the "COME-AND-GO" shower beats them all.

What's In The Lunch Box?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Fresh fruit always has been the dessert mainstay of the lunch box—and it still is.

One of the best choices is the fresh and juicy pear. But when you want to surprise the lunch-box carrier, why not bake Pear Turnovers? Make a batch for the whole family and serve them piping-hot for dinner, but save one to pack into a lunch box for the next day. These flaky triangles of pastry with their delectable pear filling really are a special treat.

Yes, the pastry will be flaky if you follow this recipe. In some circles this particular formula—which calls for the addition of an egg and vinegar plus the usual ingredients—is called Foolproof Pastry. We think it deserves the name.

Please follow our advice about having the pastry rolled out and cut before you peel the pears, dice, sweeten and spice them. If you don't, the mixture may be too juicy.

And another caution. Bake these pear turnovers thoroughly. For best eating the pastry should be golden-brown and crisp.

Two varieties of pears—Anjou and Bosc—are available for winter turnovers. A third variety, the fragrant Comice is with us, too. But the Comice is chiefly used "as is" because of its delicate flavor and texture.

PEAR TURNOVERS

- 2 cups unsifted regular flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2-3rd cup solid white shortening
- 1 large egg
- 1 teaspoon cider vinegar
- 3 tablespoons ice water
- Fresh Pear Filling (see recipe)
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine

In a medium mixing bowl stir together the flour and salt. With a pastry blender, cut in the shortening until particles are fine.

In a small bowl beat together just enough to blend, the egg, vinegar and water; with a fork, stir into flour mixture. Turn out on transparent plastic wrap and form into a ball; wrap tightly and chill.

On a prepared pastry cloth, roll out chilled dough to an exact square 13½ by 13½ inches. Using a pastry wheel or a sharp knife, cut into nine 4 inch squares.

Now, and only now, prepare the Fresh Pear Filling. At once, without letting the filling stand, spoon it over half of each pastry square; dot with butter. Moisten edges of pastry squares with water; fold over and seal by pressing edges with the tines of a fork. Cut several slits in the top of each turnover.

Place turnover, a few inches apart, on a cookie sheet. Bake in a 425-degree oven until golden-brown—about 25 to 30 minutes. With a wide spatula remove at once from cookie sheet—a little juice may have leaked out.

Serve hot or warm, although some eaters prefer the turnovers cold.

Former Lady Parachutist Hardly Believes Record

By OLGA CURTIS

DENVER (WNS) — When you see Mrs. Robert Rogers baking bread in the spotless kitchen of her Denver home, it's hard to believe this pleasant-faced, matronly woman of 60 was once a world champion parachute jumper.

Mrs. Rogers, who keeps a cat because she's "deathly afraid of mice" just couldn't be the flying daredevil named Faye Lucille Cox who once held both the world's endurance and altitude record for women parachutists.

But she is, though she admits with a smile: "Looking at me now, nobody believes it. Sometimes I don't believe it myself—I'm so tame now." Thirty-odd years ago, when airplanes were novelties and the people who flew in them daredevils, Mrs. Rogers made 530 jumps. Her specialty was the delayed jump. She'd climb out on the wing of a rickety plane two miles up, step off into thin air, and then—as spectators below screamed—delay pulling the rip cord on her chute until she was only 1,000 feet above ground.

More Thrilling

"A kid out of high school thinks she can do anything," sighs Mrs. Rogers. "Parachute jumping seemed much more thrilling than typing then."

She became a parachute jumper in order to quit the typist's job she had in a garage in her native McCook, Neb. The jump business was hardly crowded then; Mrs. Rogers got her start with a one-plane circus because the previous girl had broken her back.

She did exactly what the pilot told her, made a successful first jump and earned $100—big money in those days. Before 1930 was over, she had both the world's altitude record and the world's endurance record for a woman: 18,256 feet and four jumps in three hours. Mrs. Rogers points out with a smile that in those days there were only four or five lady parachutists, and it took a one-engine plane half an hour to achieve the altitude modern jets reach in one swoosh.

For the next 10 years, Faye Lucille Cox barnstormed all over the country with various flying circuses. Merchants would sponsor the exhibitions, charging 25 cents—a car admission or sometimes just passing the hat to pay the fliers' expenses—and spectators were offered the chance to try that newfangled thrill, flying in an airplane. The fee for a plane ride, Mrs. Rogers recalls, was a penny a pound—the passenger paid what he weighed.

Chute Failed

She had some funny experiences—landing on top of cows, in trees, on houses, and in rivers. She also broke her right arm once, her right leg twice and her right foot three times. But she says the closest she came to death was over Oklahoma City, when her chute failed to open.

"I tugged and tugged at the cord but nothing happened. Finally I grabbed at a little piece of white silk in the emergency chute and it opened."

She was 400 feet above the ground at the time, landed with a bone-jarring crash, waved at the crowd, gathered up her parachute, and made a dignified exit to the hangar. Then she fainted.

World War II put an end to Mrs. Rogers' professional jumping days. As one of the few women licensed to pack chutes, she became a parachute rigger. After the war, she married and got a calm desk job as typist—bookkeeper for the state of Colorado.

"It's one of life's little ironies," she says, "that by that time I was glad to get back to the typewriter."

Conditions Are Appalling In Vietnamese Hospitals

By ANNE ALLEN

SAIGON (WNS) — Hearing that Vietnamese hospitals badly needed any help they could get, I visited Cho-Ray Municipal hospital, one of Saigon's largest, to see what I could do.

I came away appalled at what I saw and frustrated at discovering I could do nothing to improve things.

"If you were a team of a dozen, or even six, we might be able to find something useful for you to do," I was told. "But the problems here are so big that one volunteer would be swallowed up by them."

The explanation came from a dedicated and hard-working American nurse who was brought to Vietnam by USAID to train Vietnamese nurses. She is Patricia Kirby of Vallejo, Calif. She finished an 18-month tour in Vietnam in December—and very likely will return for a second one.

Nurse Kirby took me on a tour of Cho-Ray's wards. They contain 1,100 beds. Two patients in a bed were common, and on some wards I saw as many as three in a bed. The Vietnamese are small and two lay head to toe, with a third crossways at the foot. Blood-soaked bedding was common.

No Pajamas

I saw that hospital pajamas were nonexistent. Patients simply wore their street clothes in bed.

On some wards there were patients who could not find even a bed to share. They lay in the corridors on bamboo mats.

"These are the most sick patients," explained nurse Kirby. "They should be in an isolation ward but we have no such place for them. Really, they are just waiting here to die."

Cho-Ray hospital was built by the French in 1900. It looks and smells its age. It is moldy, musty, unkempt and dirty. There are few bathrooms. Some wards do not have running water.

Unlike an American hospital, which usually houses all its departments under one roof, or at most two or three, Cho-Ray's facilities are scattered among 35 separate buildings.

Searching around for something to cover shivering patients with high fevers, nurse Kirby discovered 2,000 blankets molding in a storehouse. A member of the Vietnamese hospital administration explained that the blankets could not be released to the patients because an administrative technicality prevented completion of the necessary paper work.

American Temper

Losing her American temper, nurse Kirby stormed the storehouse with some helpers and had them distribute the blankets to the wards.

American GIs send nurse Kirby a monthly check to buy whatever she thinks the hospital needs. "One month," she told me, "I bought and paid for a badly needed item—2,000 pillowcases. They were delivered to the hospital, all right. But then they disappeared. We have never seen a single pillowcase of the 2,000."

At Cho-Ray hospital there are many paradoxes. In the physical therapy department, a brand-new shiny American whirlpool machine sits idle because the water pressure is too low to operate it. Two new buildings are going up. But the hospital suffers from a critical shortage of a seemingly simple item—soap.

Nurse Kirby explained it to me this way: "The problem at Cho-Ray is not the Vietnamese nurses or the other Vietnamese workers. They all are willing to learn and do learn —from us Americans. The great need is for experience, administration and supply.

"No one here seems to know how to get things done. No one knows how to get supplies down to the ward level. No one knows how to stop the thievery."

The tragedy is that her comment applies to so much in Vietnam.

Dr. Capwell Gives Round Table Talk

Dr. Richard L. Capwell spoke on "What is a Classic?" at the meeting of the Round Table Book Club held Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Capwell is a member of the English faculty of East Carolina University.

Discarding the more obvious answers of popularity, plot or depth of meaning, Dr. Capwell suggested that the author's style is that one magical quality which makes his work a classic to be enjoyed again and again.

During the business meeting, a nominating committee was appointed with Mrs. R. B. Lee as chairman. Mrs. K. H. Mercer and Mrs. D. H. Conley will also serve on the committee.

Mrs. Capwell was a guest for the meeting.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. G. W. Everett, hostess, assisted by Mrs. H. G. Porter and Mrs. R. L. Holt.

Members of Bonae Artes Book Club viewed color slides taken by Harry Williams, who was in Vietnam as a Marine for a year.

Williams was stationed at Chu Lai and took many pictures there and at other villages and outposts in the area.

He gave comments about the various vehicles, customs, terrain, and life in general with the Marines.

Mrs. Jack Tyler, president, conducted a brief business meeting, during which Mrs. C. M. Respass read minutes of the previous meeting. Members had brought packages to be used as prizes for games played by patients at the Convalescent Home.

Books were exchanged and a social hour was held. Refreshments were served by Mrs. J. D. Wilson and Mrs. Respass, at whose home the meeting was held.

Col. Dubber Is Club Speaker

Col. A E Dubber was speaker at the meeting of the Semi Centennial Book Club held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. C. E. Fleming. Speaking on Urban Renewal and Redevelopment, Col. Dubber told of the work and progress which was being made in Greenville. He also gave an explanation on the human side of the subject.

Mrs. Herbert Wilkerson presided at the business session. A discussion was held on revising the club's constitution. An invitation to attend a demonstration using the blender by a home economist on Jan. 30 at 2:30 p.m. was read.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Birthday Dinner Too Surprising

DAMVIX, France (WNS)—The table was set for a birthday dinner when a stranger knocked at the front door and asked for a morsel of bread. "You must join our party," said Mrs. Marie Eugenie Masse and set an extra place at the table. The stranger, 60-year-old Eugene Babi, was so touched that he suffered a heart attack and died on the spot.

Silver Knit Is Now It

By YVETTE DE LA FONTAINE

PARIS (WNS) — Silver knit is IT. It's the season's hit. A Parisienne who does not own at least one silver turtleneck sweater in "gros cotes" (thick ribbing) is decidedly not "dans le vent" (with it).

No use trying to make do with a lame jersey, mind you. That sort of thing is ancient—it's very "last year." For the proper silver-sweater look, it has to be hand-knit, or at least look so; it has to be wide-ribbed or cable stitch or hand-crochet; it must be sporty in cut and styling, but knit of a metallic yarn so darkly elegant that it puts the satins and lames and sequins to shame. They are the choice of the most sophisticated young moderns for evening.

Number one success is the sleeveless, turtleneck evening sweater in dark silver or dark gold. More than sleeveless, some versions are shoulderless. It can be had with long, clinging sleeves, which is perhaps more practical. But it is less snob and therefore less desirable.

Velvet Knickers

What does one wear with a silver sweater? Anything but black velvet, or brown. Could be a skirt, long or short, or a culotte or pants or, more smartly, knickers.

One hit, the knit party dress has a turtleneck top with uncovered shoulders, widening slightly at the hem. Surprise touch is that the entire lower skirt is covered in stiff, curled feathers. This one is a passion in all the smartest shops on the rue de Sevres and the Faubourg St. Honore. Best color is bronze, with feathers bronzed to match.

Marie Martine, where starlets shop, and the first and smartest of the Sevres-Babylone cluster of chic boutiques, has any number of way-out numbers, hand-knit in dullish gold. They have a very casual sleeveless pull-over shown with an ankle-length knit skirt in burnished gold.

There is a "Ziegfeld girl" shift in gold ribbing with thin turquoise rhinestone shoulder straps. There is a marvelous little pant dress that is of Chinese inspiration with side slits.

COMING... THE NEW WPXY

in gold knit. And there are at least half a dozen different turtleneck cling sweaters, long-sleeved, or sleeveless, gold, silver, anthracite, bronze, pewter and platinum tones.

Hand-crochet looks sophisticated but sweet in silver or gold. Tiffany shows some little suits or two-piece dresses for big evenings in fancy stitch hand-crochet with scooped necks and skirts of ribbed knit. The entire jacket as well as the skirt hem, is edged in crochet scalloping, and even the little ball buttons are covered in metallic crochet.

Chez Gudule, at the request of their young mother-and-daughter customers, are redoing all of their pet crocheted dresses and panties in metallic yarns, and even possibly some coats, so the four-year-old set—like their 20-year-old mothers—can be comfy as well as chic, snob and glimmering at winter parties.

After you remove the skins from almonds be sure to dry the nuts on a kitchen towel.

Students returned to the regular routine of classes this past week with the thought of exams behind them. However, exams cannot be completely forgotten, since report cards are to be distributed on Tuesday, Jan. 30.

Congratulations are extended to Patti Kirk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kirk, who is Rose High School's Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow for 1968.

A written examination was administered to all interested senior girls and Patti had the highest score in Rose High. She received a distinctive award pin and is now eligible for state and national competition. Patti was one of 603,798 girls in 15,079 schools to take the test.

The state winner will be selected from the school winners and the national winner will be selected from the state winners. The Betty Crocker Search was initiated in 1954-55 by General Mills "to emphasize the importance of homemaking as a career."

Over A 30-Year Period Jaycees Lead, Serve, Produce

Dave W. Mosier was chapter president of the Greenville Jaycees in 1938. Julian Vainwright is president this year.

Greenville's Jaycee chapter had a modest beginning, a beginning which belied its quick and continuing effectiveness in the community.

A chapter membership of 34 elected Mosier in an old borrowed club building one evening in 1938.

A lot has happened in the 30 years since. From its first project in 1939 which led to construction of Guy Smith Stadium, to the detailed study of traffic conditions two years ago which led to new ordinances and policies on traffic control in the city, the Jaycees have produced.

And if one word can keynote the attitude of the organization through the years, it is that word 'produce'. The Jaycees have produced service and leadership, their major goal, in great abundance.

Last week, National Jaycee Week, was also proclaimed as Jaycee Week in Greenville by Major S. E. West in recognition of the efforts of Jaycees to produce.

A Jaycee, latest in a continuing line, was presented the 1968 Distinguished Service Award just Thursday night. Joseph O. Clark was recognized for his outstanding contributions to the community in 1967 through his work as a Jaycee and as a citizen.

Clark, the DSA winners before him, the Jaycee presidents, and the members of the organization have produced through the years.

Here are just some of the things they have produced:

The Jaycees sponsor programs in agriculture, athletics, community development, and traffic safety. They sponsor the annual Miss Pitt County Pageant, the DSA Award, the Outstanding Young Farmer Award, and the annual Boys Home Bowl Game, a project which has aided tremendously in the growth and development of the Lake Waccawma Boys Home.

Projects completed in 1967 alone include a junior golf tournament, a blood 'Pledge-A-Thon' which collected 703 pints of blood for the Red Cross, and the other annual programs including the light bulb sale for needy families.

Proposed 1968 undertakings include the initiation of an 'Outstanding Young Educator' project, an auction sale, a dogwood tree sale for city beautification (now getting under way), a Fourth of July military parade, a junior champion track and field event for children, and the co-sponsorship of a horse show with the local Saddle Club.

The list of other community projects supported by the Jaycees with manpower or money is long. The combined list of projects in which Jaycees take full or partial responsibility is probably about as long as its current membership list of 110 members. And every one of those members has or will have the opportunity to participate.

Form its inception, the Jaycees have served, have led, and have produced.

Dave Mosier says: "Fine participation by members of the Jaycees during the past 30 years is evident in every corner and every byway of the community in which we live.

"Further than that, the Jaycees and the community have been able to attract outstanding young businessmen who actively make continuing contributions to the life, welfare and development of their home town.

"The irrefutable value of this benefiting is easily recognized by the fact that the Jaycees of only a few years back are now the leaders of our community."

Julian Vainwright concurs: "I think what Dave has said is still true. I think the Jaycees have become more nationally oriented and in addition to local service and leadership have expanded quite a bit and encompass not only the projects and leadership training in our own community, but have undertaken projects of national and international value.

"Basically, I think leadership training of the individual and service to the community are still two of our most fundamental reasons for existence as Jaycees.

"I think all dedicated Jaycees have the welfare of local citizens at heart and all of our efforts either directly or indirectly are for the benefit of our community and its citizens."

The Jaycee Creed seems to bear this out:

We Believe

That faith in God gives a meaning and purpose to human life;

That the brotherhood of man transcends the sovereignty of nations;

That economic justice can best be won by free men through free enterprise;

That government should be of laws rather than of men;

That earth's great treasure lies in human personality;

And that service to humanity is the best work of life.

TWO PRESIDENTS . . . Julian Vainwright, right, current Jaycee President, and D. W. Mosier, Charter President, examine a copy of the organizations charter in Greenville. The Jaycees were chartered in 1938.

Some Youth Formula

BOSTON (AP) — Walter Jacobson, 71, who made a living for 53 years playing piano for strippers, divas and ballerinas, says his constant contact with young women has kept him young.

"When you're around young women like that all the time, well, it keeps you on your toes.

Jacobson is a "business piano player." Since 1914 he's played piano around Boston for anybody who wanted him—ballet schools, grand opera companies, hotels, burlesque.

One of his first jobs was in the pit at the Old Howard in Boston's seedy, tawdry Scollay Square, pounding out the music for the strippers' bumps and grinds.

"There was nothing wrong with burlesque," he says. "Nothing was shown that shouldn't be shown. The miniskirts are a darn sight more disgraceful than the old burlesque shows.

"The shows were always the same," he recalls. "First there would be the stripper, then the comic and the straight man, then the stripper and the comic again. They'd alternate between the two. And that was the show."

For the past 22 years his main job has been playing piano for Boston ballet schools. He also takes an occasional club date in

West Virginia Hands East Carolina 77-60 Loss

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

West Virginia's Mountaineers spoiled the dedication of Ming- es Coliseum yesterday by handing the Bucs a 77-60 defeat on a regionally televised Southern Conference game.

The victory kept West Virginia atop the Southern Conference standings with a 6-1 record, while the Pirates remain in eighth pending the outcome of other activity last night. East Carolina is now 3-5.

While the Bucs stayed with West Virginia from the floor, it was the foul shooting of the Mountaineers and the defensive play of highstepping Carey Bailey that spelled the difference.

West Virginia outit the Bucs by only four points from the floor, 50-46, but they cashed in on 27 of 35 foul shot attempts, while East Carolina made only 14 of 18.

Bailey was the star of the Mountaineer team. He blocked shot after shot, although once he was called for goal tending. Significantly, that shot was the one which almost brought the Pirates back in the game in the first half.

East Carolina grabbed the first lead in the game as Tom Miller hit from the corner for a 2-0 lead. That came with 16:35 left in the half as both teams were tight and unable to hit.

East Carolina was guilty of several violations in the early minutes and gave West Virginia a number of shots before the Bucs finally broke it open.

But once the scoring got started, it kept up. Ron Williams brought West Virginia into the scoring with a jumper with 16:14 left for a 2-2 tie. Then with 15:40 left, Charlie Alford was called for goaltending on a shot by Williams and West Virginia took the lead, never to lose it again, although the score was tied at one other point.

With Williams hitting from the floor, and all of the Mountaineers chipping in from the line, West Virginia stayed in command. After the Bucs cut the lead back to one, Bailey made the lead three at 6-3. A short time later, Williams stole the ball and rushed down court to boost the lead to 12-6 with 13:08 left.

East Carolina put on a rally, as Earl Thompson hit on a free throw and Alford and Miller hit from the floor to cut it back to 12-11 with 11:58 to play.

But West Virginia reeled off five straight points on a pair of free throws by Bailey, a bucket by Williams and another free throw, this one by Norman Holmes to gain a 17-11 lead with 10:55 left.

A few seconds later, two more free throws by Alford lifted the margin to seven, at 19-12, the biggest Mountaineer lead of the half.

The margin stayed roughly at that point until West Virginia held a 28-22 lead as Williams hit again. But the Southern Conference's high scorer was then called with his third foul and left the game for the rest of the half.

That seemed to fire up the Pirates who came back to tie it up. Thompson hit on a drive and Alford got a shot from underneath to cut the lead to two. Then with 4:28 left, Bailey pinned Alford's shot against the backboard and was called for goaltending, tying it at 28-28.

But the Mountaineers didn't like it being that close and pulled away again. Dave Reaser hit a free throw to give the Mountaineers a 29-28 lead and then hit from the floor for a 31-28 margin. Bob Hummell and Bailey both followed with baskets to push the lead out to seven and West Virginia finally gained as much as a nine-point lead before the half ended at 41-33.

In the second half, West Virginia spooked any hopes of the Pirates in pulling back in the game. Williams hit from the line to make the lead nine at 42-33, and then Reaser hit from the floor for an 11 point lead.

The Bucs cut it back to nine at 44-35 on a bucket by Alford, but the Mounties then went ahead by 12 on a shot by Reaser and a free throw by Hummell.

After that, the lead never fell below 11, and the Mounties were off and running. The lead gradually climbed to 19 points at 64-45 with 7:12 to play as was a high as 21 in the final three minutes of the contest.

Bailey, probably the key to the West Virginia win with his scoring and shot - blocking, hit for 18 points, and pulled down 12 rebounds, while Hummell had 14 points and 11 rebounds. Williams, averaging over 22 points, got only 13.

Alford led the East Carolina effort with 19 points. He was also the game's leading rebounder with 13. Richard Kier was the only other Buc in double figures, hitting 14. Thirteen of these came in the first half, and kept the Bucs in the contest then.

The Pirates will now travel to High Point on Wednesday to meet Coach Tom Quinn's former charges, the Panthers. They remain on the road, meeting Florida State on Saturday, then come home to face Richmond on Wednesday, Feb. 7.

Rose High Joining New 4-A Conference In 1969

GOLDSBORO — Rose High School will join the Eastern AA Conference beginning in September, 1969, it was announced today. North Carolina High School Athletic Association approval is expected to be automatic.

The Phantoms, currently a member of the Northeastern 3-A Conference, will resign at the conclusion of the spring, 1969 season, playing out the rest of this year and next.

Joining with the Phantoms in forming Division One of the new League will be present 4-A members, Goldsboro, Rocky Mount and Wilson, along with Northeastern 3-A members Kinston and New Bern.

The details of the merger were worked out Saturday morning at a meeting in Goldsboro between representatives of the 18 schools involved. Two other divisions will be formed in the league, one comprising schools in the Fayetteville - Wilmington area, and the other in the Raleigh - Durham area.

Plans for such a league have been discussed between members of the new league for several months, and appeared to have fallen through late last year when it was decided on a new 4-A setup, excluding some of the schools which will now join.

But since that time, several of the schools in the 4-A division reconsidered and decided that they would prefer another setup, leading to a fresh round of talks. The results led to yesterday's new formation of the league.

Boley Farley, athletic director of Rose High School, said the main discussion yesterday centered around the interdivisional play, whether all games with 4-A teams would count in the standings. It was finally agreed that only the five divisional games would be counted, but that each team would retain three games with league members outside their own division, which will not count in the standings.

Rose will thus play Rocky Mount, Goldsboro, Wilson, Kinston and New Bern in football in the fall of 1969 as conference games. They will also play Jacksonville, Raleigh Enloe and Raleigh Sanderson. Sanderson is a new school in the Capital City.

The school will add two other non - conference games to their schedule, probably with Washington and Tarboro, present Northeastern members. Farley said that games with these two schools had been profitable in the past and represented old rivalries which the schools wished to maintain.

Football schedules are to be worked out in a meeting of the athletic directors on February 12. It is expected that ground-work on basketball and other sports will also be laid then.

Rupp Gets Win; Pete Gets 52

BATON ROUGE La. (AP) — Ninth-ranked Kentucky handed Coach Adolph Rupp his 771st basketball victory Saturday, defeating Louisiana State 121-95 despite 52 points by LSU's Pete Hendrick who was the first of 128 Maravich.

Mike Casey with 31 points and Thad Jaracz with 24 led the rugged Wildcats to the Southeastern Conference victory, enabling Rupp to tie Phog Allen of Kansas with the most victories in college basketball.

The Wildcats also knocked the Tiers out of a tie for the SEC lead with the convincing victory.

'Life With Bucky,' A New TV Series?

By SONNY McLAWHORN
Reflector Sports Writer

"I wish we could make it a weekly serial," said West Virginia basketball coach Bucky Waters, referring to his team's 77-60 victory over East Carolina in a regionally televised conference game. It was the third TV win for the Mountaineers in as many attempts this year.

"I guess the boys have a little bit of 'ham' in them," said Waters.

In a more serious tone, the former N. C. State basketball player added, "Our defense was the difference. We missed our first nine shots at the baskets and still managed to get the lead at 4-2."

"Bailey was super," said Waters, referring to defensive standout Carey Bailey, who led all West Virginia scorers with 18 points.

"Bailey killed us," said Pirate coach Tom Quinn. "He was truly outstanding."

"We lacked effort in the second half," said Quinn, stating that the Bucs had played 16 minutes of good basketball in the first half.

"Our second half performance was lackluster," added Quinn. "We just couldn't seem to find the right combination."

It was the first time the Pirates had played in a regionally - televised contest.

Waters praised the Mountaineer offense, saying, "The boys executed well, and they were unselfish."

The West Virginia coach said Pirates Earl Thompson, Vince Colbert and Charlie Alford were among the finest in the Southern Conference.

"We're not big or strong," explained Waters, "So we have to be quick and aggressive."

Conditioning has paid off for the Mounties, according to Waters, because his team has to "exploit with quickness" rather than trying to "grind it out," as many teams with better height are able to do.

Coach Quinn pointed to his team's inability to get the fast break advantage when the opportunity arose. "We intended to run some," Quinn said, "But we couldn't score on the break."

"We got into foul trouble in the first half," Quinn explained. "And when the regulars got back into the game, they couldn't get started."

Casper Grabs One Stroke Lead In Los Angeles Open

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Billy Casper broke up a traffic jam in the third round of the 72-hole, $100,000 Los Angeles Open Saturday and emerged as the 54-hole leader with a one-stroke edge when he shot a 68 for a total of 205, eight under par.

Casper, 36, No. 3 money winner on the official PGA list with $129,423, had plenty of competition from younger pros, including John Schlee of Dallas, Tex., who shot a six-under-par 65 and had a total of 206 on the Brookside Golf Club course.

Also at 206 was Al Geiberger, the 1966 National PGA champion with rounds of 67-70-69.

After two rounds Thursday, Casper and Geiberger were involved in a five-way tie for first place. In the first round, there was a four-way tie for first.

Casper's earlier rounds were 70-67 while Schlee had 71-70.

A few sprinkles fell from leaden skies during the day and once-bumpy greens leveled off a bit, making a better putting surface. The temperature was a chilly 56 and there was a blustery wind.

There was a gap between Schlee and Geiberger in the 206 bracket all the way down to 209 where defending champion Arnold Palmer landed all alone. His rounds were 69-71-69.

At 210, three-under-par, there were five golfers, including Dave Stockton, another one who shared the lead after 36 holes. Stockton slipped to a two-over-par 73 in the third round.

George Archer, who was the fifth man in the 36-hole tie on rounds of 68-69, soared to a 75 for a 212 total, just one-under-par.

margin to 34-23. But Davidson quickly shot to a commanding lead when play resumed.

The Wildcats hit 57.1 per cent from the floor while Wake managed only 29.4 per cent.

Davidson of the Southern Conference improved its season record to 11-4. Wake Forest of the Atlantic Coast Conference is 4-11.

Davidson Slams Wake Forest

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Davidson sophomore Doug Cook scored three straight goals in a first-half spurt when Wake Forest had pulled within 18-15 and sparked the Wildcats to a 75-52 basketball victory Saturday night.

Cook topped the scoring with 27 points, his high of the season.

Field general Jerry Montgomery played only about half the game for Wake Forest because of a back injury.

With the score 18-15, the Wildcats called on Cook in the post, and his three goals in about a minute provided the impetus for 12 straight Davidson points.

Norwood Toddman, sharing Wake Forest's high scoring with flu-suffering Dickie Walker at 12 each, helped cut the halftime score to 29-23.

Tar Heels Slam Georgia Tech

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Sluggish North Carolina, back in action after a two-week exam layoff didn't come up with an A-plus effort, but had enough to wallop Georgia Tech's basketball team 82-54 Saturday night.

The third-ranked Tar Heels won their 10th straight game and 12th against one loss in a ragged and occasionally rough contest.

Larry Miller's 22 points, 11 from the foul line, and 20 by Rusty Clark spearheaded the North Carolina attack, which functioned at only 42.2 from the floor. But Tech shot a feeble 34.3 and never threatened after trailing at the half 38-23.

Charlie Scott's four points in the opening minute of the second half sent the Tar Heels off winging and they stretched their lead to 54-33 with nine minutes gone of the last period.

North Carolina whipped the Georgians on the boards 58-34 as Clark grabbed 13 rebounds and Miller and Scott nine each.

Dave Clark's 18 points and 14 by Ted Tomasovich were the top Tech efforts.

Lewis Leads In Blue Devil Win

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Sturdy Mike Lewis muscled his way to 34 points and 22 rebounds and Dave Golden added 26 points to lead Duke to an 82-76 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over North Carolina State Saturday.

Duke, leading by 15 points early in the second half, went without a basket for the final four and one-half minutes, but hit nine of 10 free throws to survive a belated Wolfpack rally. The teams had been tied for second place in the ACC going into the regionally televised contest. The victory gave Duke sole possession of the runner-up spot at 4-1 behind leader North Carolina, winner of four straight.

Duke celebrated Coach Vic Bibbs' 41st birthday a day early by winning its 10th game in 12 starts. The Blue Devils, with Lewis and Golden leading the way, had a 15-point lead late in the first half, but N.C. State cut it to 36-31, only to have Lewis and Golden score in the final minute for a 40-31 Duke inter- mission lead.

Sophomore Nelson Isley scored 12 of his 16 points in the last half to spark the Wolfpack late charge. Dick Braucher was high man for the Wolfpack with 18 points.

Duke, playing its first game in two weeks after the midway exam layoff, was outshot from the floor, 50.9 per cent to 45.9, but, with the 6-foot-7, 225-pound Lewis in charge, controlled the boards 51-28 and that was the difference.

State cuts the lead to 73-70 with 3:35 to play, but could get no closer as Duke's freethrows widened the gap.

No. 2 Draft May Start Inking War

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — George Hendrick, an 18-year-old outfielder from Los Angeles, was the first pick in baseball's winter free agent draft Saturday, but a second-round selection, Ken Stabler, became the center of a possible signing war between baseball and football.

Stabler, Alabama quarterback who led the Crimson Tide into the Cotton Bowl, was picked by the Houston Astros for their Triple A farm club at Oklahoma City early in the second round.

Stabler, a left-handed pitcher in baseball, almost certainly will be a high choice in the pro football draft next Tuesday.

Commenting on the Astros' selection of Stabler, General Manager Spec Richardson said, "The club understands Stabler has not made up his mind whether to play professional football or professional baseball. We're hoping, of course, he chooses baseball."

Stabler, from Foley, Ala., is 22 years old, 6-foot-3 and weighs 95 pounds.

"I will just wait and see how things go in the football draft before deciding what to do," he said from his home.

Hendrick, 18, 6-2 and 195, was selected by the Oakland Athletics, who had first choice because of their last-place finish in 1967.

In the regular phase of the draft, the teams selected by the inverse order of their finish last season. A special draw determined the order for the special phase which involved players who had been drafted before but who hadn't signed contracts.

Hendrick was the first of 128 players taken in the regular phase. Eric Soderholm, 19-year-old shortstop from Miami Beach, Fla., was the first of 162 players claimed in the special phase.

Pirates Second In Swim Meet

MONMOUTH, N. J. — Bethany College captured a three-way swimming meet over East Carolina and Monmouth College here Friday.

Bethany collected 69 points to edge out the Bucs who finished with 61. Monmouth was third with 53.

Three Pirate claimed firsts in the event, Dick Tobin in the three-meter diving; Owen Paris is the 200-yard butterfly and Mike Tomberlin in the 200-yard backstroke.

The Pirates were to meet Southern Connecticut Saturday, then meet West Virginia on Monday and Virginia Tech on Tuesday.

Missed Foul Shots Lift Tarboro Over Phantoms

Perry Not Sure Spitter Is Out

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Gaylord Perry, a San Francisco pitcher who has been accused of throwing a damp ball now and then, isn't sure the new rules are going to wipe out the spit ball.

He took a good natured riding about it from Lou Brock and Rusty Staub who hit against him all year.

Perry, Brock and Staub were in town Friday as runners up to Carl Yastrzemski for the Van Husen Outstanding Achievement Award. Yaz wasn't able to make it because of illness but the three also-rans did.

"When they took that action down in Mexico they did away with several pitchers' habits," said Perry with a grin. "Our pitching coach (Larry Jansen) called me and said I had better start working on a new decoy."

Brock, the St. Louis Cardinals' speedster, kept the gag moving when he commented, "I've seen a few wet decoys come up there to the plate. Maybe that's why I think I got about four hits off Perry in four years."

Staub of the Houston Astros carried the ball after Brock. "Even though the rules committee got together to take away his pitch, I am sure Gaylord will find a way to do the job."

Perry's big achievement of the 1967 season was a string of 40 consecutive scoreless innings, not far short of Carl Hubbell's National League record of 46 1-3 innings.

Speaking after the ceremonies, Perry said he never threw the spitter but did use the threat as a decoy.

"I should imagine they (pitchers) still will try to go to the back of the neck or swear, now that they are not permitted to go to the mouth," he said. "You'll hear more about the vaseline ball, the sweat ball and all that sort of stuff."

Reminded that Cal Koonce of the New York Mets was the only pitcher to admit he threw the spitter, Perry grimaced.

"What a thing to do," was his comment.

GEIBERGER OVERCOMES TREE TROUBLE — Al Geiberger was almost stymied by this young tree when he pushed his tee shot off the 14th hole into the rough during Friday's second round in the Los Angeles Open in Pasadena, Calif. He managed to pitch the ball to the green to save a par 4 and went on to card a one-under-par 71, giving him a share of the half way lead at 137. (AP Wirephoto)

Tarboro Rallies To Get 57-48 Victory Over Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

TARBORO — The Rose High School Phantoms failed to capitalize on the foul line Friday night and fell to Tarboro, 57-48.

The Phants, who were unable to control the boards, had ample opportunity to make good from the line, however, but poor shooting threw cost them the game.

The Phantoms hit on only eight of 25 attempts from the line for a horrendous 31 percent. Tarboro, which made only one more field goal than the Phants, made good on 15 of 28 and that made the real difference in the game.

Even then, Tarboro had to rally from as much as seven points down to get the job done.

The loss dropped Rose to a 3-7 overall record in the North-eastern Conference, while Tarboro boosted its mark to 3-6, a half-game ahead of the Phants.

The Phants grabbed the lead at the start as Ricky Tonn hit from the corner to make it 2-0. Buddy Turnage then made it 4-0 before Tarboro got on the scoreboard with a free throw by David Norris. Mike Harrington hit for the Phants for a 6-1 lead, but Tarboro came back on a bucket by Jerome Dickens and a free throw by Norris to take the lead back at 6-4. Harrington hit again and Turnage connected to push the lead back out to six with 4:05 left at 10-4.

But Tarboro climbed back and after trailing by three, pulled into a tie on a three-point play by Bo Robinson at 12-12. Bo Simmons hit on a rebound after that to give Tarboro the lead at 14-12.

But Rose tied it up on a shot by Mike Aldridge, then regained the lead on a free throw by Mike Joyner at 15-14 with 27 seconds left. Billy Taylor hit on another free throw with three seconds left to make it 16-14 at the end of the frame.

Turnage struck again early in the second period to boost the Rose lead back to four, and after it had been cut to three,

Aldridge made good to make the lead five. Turnage again hit, this time moving the lead to its largest point, seven at 24-17 with 4:22 left.

Rose took its back at 26-25 as Turnage hit, but lost it again as Vinson Bridges hit with just 18 seconds left. Turnage stole the ball with two seconds left to score on a layup to give the Phants a 28-27 lead at the half.

After inching back to a two-point lead, the Phants saw Tarboro tie it up at 29-29 and 31-31 before moving out again on a free throw by Aldridge. Turnage made the lead three at 32-31, but Tarboro refused to give in and fought back to within one at 38-37 on a shot by James Pearson.

Richard Regan tied it up and sent Tarboro ahead at 39-38 on a pair of free throws, and then Regan hit a bucket and another free throw to push the lead out to four. Taylor hit in the closing seconds to cut the margin to 40-42 at the end of the period.

But the Phants were running out of steam, and in the final period, they cut the lead to two on three occasions, the last at 49-47 with 3:55 to play. After that, however, it was all Tarboro. Norris hit to make the lead four, and after that, two buckets by Robinson and the other by Simmons and a free throw by Robinson and another by Regan moved the lead out to 10 at 57-47 with just 10 seconds left.

Turnage led the Rose effort with 20 points. Regan led Tarboro with 14 while Robinson had 12 and Simmons had 11.

In the junior varsity event, the Tarboro Tigercats rallied from nine down at the half to take a 56-49 victory over the Baby Phants. Foul line trouble was again the Phant downfall. Rose hit on 13 of 32 and that spelled the difference, as both teams scored 36 points from the floor.

Rose and Tarboro battled to a 10-10 tie at the end of the first period, but Rose pulled away to lead 27-18 at the half. In the third period, however, Rose hit only two field goals and got just one of eight free throws to fall behind, 37-32, and never caught up after that, although they did pull to within two at 49-47.

Joe West led the Baby Phants with 14 points, while Ray Peszko had 12. Melvin Braddy had 18 for Tarboro, while Farrar Martin had 15.

Rose plays host to Havelock at home on Tuesday.

Houston-UCLA Rematch Hoped

NEW YORK (UPI)—It may never take place. And even if it does happen, it's still two months away.

But it's already captured the imagination of the basketball fans across the country—the possibility of a Houston-UCLA rematch in the NCAA tournament in March.

It's become the most talked about thing in basketball: ever since Houston stumped UCLA 71-69 at the Astrodome a week ago Saturday night.

All of a sudden, UCLA wasn't "unbeatable" anymore.

Surprisingly, one person who seems not too concerned about the possibility is the UCLA coach, John Wooden.

The man who's never had a losing season in 32 seasons is always gracious in victory. And he's just as gracious in defeat. His team had a 47-game winning streak snapped by Houston but he is not a man burning for revenge. He doesn't even like the word.

In town for a pair of UCLA games this weekend at Madison Square Garden, Wooden said, "After the loss in Houston, all the writers there wanted to know if I was eager for a rematch so I could get revenge. "Well," he added, "when it gets down to the point that I want revenge, I'll get out of coaching."

Wooden also made no complaints about the strange setting at the Astrodome with the basketball court in the middle of the football field.

It Was "Wonderful!"

"I think the game in the Astrodome was wonderful for basketball," he said, "and I know I learned something from the loss."

If the clubs do meet again, it'll be on the same floor. The Los Angeles Sports Arena floor was packed and shipped to the Astrodome for the game and the semi-finals and finals of the NCAA tourney will be played in the Sports Arena on March 22-23.

Another factor which will be different next time is that Lew Alcindor's vision should be normal.

UCLA isn't the type of team which makes excuses, but Alcindor's vision problems obviously threw off his play as he made only four of 18 shots against Houston and wasn't aggressive on defense.

Turbine In Spotlight As Speed Week Opens

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Annual speed weeks open Monday at Daytona International Speedway with more prize money, bigger crowds and the official entry of a turbine car that is a smaller version of one which dominated the Indianapolis 500 last May only to suffer mechanical failure in the closing seconds.

The Howmet turbine was named a surprising official entry Friday and will compete for cash against Ferrari, Porsche and Alfa-Romeo sports cars in the 24-hour Daytona Race Feb. 3-4. Earlier it was entered on an experimental basis.

The race will mark the first time a turbine has been entered in an endurance test.

Another innovation in this race will be the Trans-America Division for Camaro, Mustang, Cougar, Dart and Javelin sedans.

The big Ferrari and even bigger Ford sports cars which have dominated the endurance race are out of the running this year. New international regulations which restrict prototype division engine sizes to 3 liters eliminated the bigger engines.

Large engines are permitted in the Grand Touring Division for production cars, but Ferrari and Ford have never made an sold enough of their 200-mile-an-hour racing machines to qualify them as production models.

A handful of 7-liter Chevrolet Corvettes in this division will have the top power, but the over-all winner of all classes is likely to be a German-made Porsche over the 3.81-mile asphalt course which combines 31-degree banks of the outer speedway and a flat, twisting infield road.

The Porsche factory has entered three new prototypes, their 2.2-liter engines and streamlined bodies slightly larger than the 2-liter models which consistently finish among the top in endurance races around the world.

A new Alfa-Romeo T33 model just under 2 liters has thrown down the challenge to Porsche and signed an international driving team including Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., and Lucien Bianchi of Belgium.

The 24-hour race starting at 3 p.m. Saturday carries a total purse of $75,000.

The new 1968 American stock cars are expected to reach speeds of 184 to 185 miles an hour on the high-banked outer track when they try Feb. 11 for pole positions in the Daytona 500.

A week later the Automobile Racing Club of America will run its annual 300-mile winter championship.

Speed weeks reaches a peak in a pair of 125-mile races Feb. 23 for positions in the Daytona 500; A 300-mile race for sportsman type stock cars Feb. 24 and by the Daytona 500 on Feb. 25 for $200,000 in prizes.

The 300-mile feature is expected to draw more than the 94,000 spectators who last year set a record for sports events in the Southeast.

Lew Goes Home To Big Night

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Holy Cross coach Jack Donohue got his first look at Lew Alcindor in about three years. So he looked. And looked. And then he sighed.

"He's too much," Donohue said after the 7-foot-1½ UCLA star led the Bruins to a 90-67 rout of his Crusaders in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

"But I wasn't surprised," said Donohue, who was Alcindor's high school coach at Power Memorial in Manhattan. "He's just bigger, stronger, has more moves. He's all I would have expected from the kid I had now that he's three years older."

It was Alcindor's first game before the home town folks since his high school days, and he responded with 33 points—16 in less than 10 minutes—22 rebounds, five blocked shots and a couple of assists.

And he's still bothered, just a little, by the eye injury that forced him to miss two games and contributed to a subpar performance in UCLA's upset loss to Houston a week ago.

"There's still a little blur," said big Lew, who was more concerned with the occasional boos he got from the crowd of 18,106, which included a large Holy Cross contingent.

"I was kind of puzzled," Alcindor said. "You know, this was kind of a home game for me. I wanted to look good, wanted to play well before my friends and family."

He did well enough.

The Bruins, now ranked No. 2 with a 14-1 record, spotted out-manned Holy Cross a 4-2 lead in the opening moments, then reeled off 13 straight points—six by Alcindor—and took a lead that stood up the rest of the way.

A 12-point burst later in the first half gave the Bruins a 36-16 lead and they coasted in. Alcindor had 16 points at that time, with 10:57 remaining in the first half.

Holy Cross, now 7-6, simply didn't have a chance. Ed Siudut was its biggest starter at 6-7 and the intimidating figure of Alcindor, lurking under the baskets, the top of his head almost brushing the strings, forced the Crusaders outside and they just weren't equal to it.

The 10th-ranked Utah Redskins, the only other team in The Associated Press Top Ten to see action, lost their third straight game. The Washington Huskies, led by Dave Carr's 27 points, upset the Redskins at Seattle 93-76. Marv Jackson led the Utes with 24.

Fairfield, which plays top-ranked Houston at Houston Monday night, downed Niagara 89-85 at New Haven. Calvin Murphy, Niagara's star soph, scored 28 points in his first college game in Connecticut since his days at Norwalk High School. Larry Cirina sparked Fairfield with 33.

Jim Eakins' 25 points paced Brigham Young to an 81-59 victory over University of Texas at El Paso, and Jim Tillman's 29 points led Chicago Loyola over Marquette 79-71 in a double-header at Chicago Stadium.

Wyoming beat its traditional rival, Colorado State U., 84-68 at Fort Collins, Colo. Hofstra took a 109-71 road drubbing from Florida State and Stetson, playing at home, lost to the Miami Hurricanes 72-67.

Washington State downed Montana 79-57 and California Santa Barbara whipped Redlands 86-65 in other games.

Japan Misses Skiing Upset

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Japan's unheralded cross-country skiers have barely missed a major upset over the powerful Soviet team in the Winter World Student Games.

The Japanese led for three legs in Friday's 40 kilometer—28.2 miles—cross country relay race before being overtaken by the favored Russians. Alexander Silaev made up a deficit of just under three minutes on the final lap to give the Soviets their seventh gold medal in the Games.

Russia's winning time was 3 hours, 12 minutes, 40.2 seconds. The Japanese quartet finished in 3:13:21.5, third-place Finland in 3:13:36.5.

Ned Gillette of Barre, Vt., Clark Matis and Mike Elliott, both of Durango, Colo., and Mike Gallagher of Killington, Vt., gave the U.S. team a seventh place finish in 3:24:08.4.

HOME TOWN PERFORMANCE — Lew Alcindor (33), 7-foot-1½ UCLA star, tries for a basket in the second period of Friday night's game with Holy Cross at Madison Square Garden. The coach for Holy Cross, Jack Donohue, was Alcindor's high school coach at Power Memorial in Manhattan. Other identifiable players are UCLA's Mike Lynn (35) and Gary Foley (32) of Holy Cross. Alcindor scored 33 points to lead UCLA to a 90-67 win. (AP Wirephoto)

Every Third Year Is Tops

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet educator has examined the careers of top athletes and found that most do their best every third year of their lives, says the official Soviet news agency Tass.

According to these findings reported Saturday, women excel during the years when their age is divisible by two.

Valentina Shaposhnikova, a master of pedagogical sciences in Leningrad, also said she was determined that sports successes are often made around birthdays.

"The conclusions I drew at first glance verge on mysticism and often cause a smile," she said, "but I am sure that all this has a quite real physiological basis. We have simply run into a field of a science in which much has to be clarified."

She said she thought the patterns she found are related to embryology.

Mrs. Shaposhnikova studied the lives of more than 200 European and world champions and record holders.

She said her statistics show that most future skiers are born in winter, trackmen in summer and Nordic combined events stars in the fall.

Often, she said, it was possible to trace a rhythm of ups and downs in performance from early childhood. She reported finding optimal periods within a year, a month and even a day.

Two Records Fall To Muir Heyman Leads Pittsburgh Win

KIMBERLEY, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's Karen Muir broke another pair of women's swimming world records—for 100 meters and 110 yards in one minute, 6.7 seconds.

The tall, 15-year-old sensation eclipsed her own world mark of 1:07.5 for 110 yards and the 100-meter standard of 1:07.1 set by Canada's Elaine Tanner at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, Canada, last July 30.

The distance of 100 meters is equal to 109 yards, one foot, so her time for 110 yards covers both the metric and yard records.

The night before she shattered the world records for 200 meters and 220 yards backstroke with a time of 2:24.1.

Miss Muir's times were set in winning titles in the Griqualand West Regional Championships.

Whether the leggy youngster will enter the Olympic Games in Mexico City next October will depend on whether South Africa is readmitted to the Games by the International Olympic Committee meeting this week in Grenoble, France.

There's an art to winning, and in the case of the Pittsburgh, Pa., art has a capital A.

Art Heyman capped Pittsburgh's winning spurt with four free throws, finishing with 31 points, as the Pipers beat Minnesota 115-107 Friday night and moved into a first-place tie with the Muskies in the American Basketball Association's Eastern Division.

A crowd of 12,223, largest ever to see a pro basketball game in Pittsburgh, watched the Muskies move ahead 98-93 with 5:30 left. But then the Pipers scored eight straight points, climaxed by Heyman's foul shooting, and went ahead to stay.

Connie Hawkins, with 28 points, and Jim Washington, with 20, helped Heyman with Pittsburgh's attack. Mel Daniels topped Minnesota with 20.

In other ABA games, Denver edged host New Orleans 104-97, Dallas blasted Houston 122-96 in Dallas and Kentucky nipped Anaheim 96-93 on the West Coast.

Denver, second by 1½ games to New Orleans in the Western Division, was led to its victory by Lonnie Wright, who came off the bench to score 11 points in the fourth quarter.

Larry Jones hit for 34 points for Denver.

Dallas built a 30-point lead and coasted to its victory. Charlie Beasley paced the winners with 26 points.

Kentucky withstood a couple of Anaheim spurts, which gave the Amigos brief leads, and clinched its victory on a pair of foul shots by Darrel Carrier with six seconds remaining. Randy Mahaffey ed the Colonels with 28 points.

In the National Basketball Association Philadelphia topped Cincinnati 123-113, Los Angeles upset Boston 118-112, St. Louis took New York 103-94 and Baltimore trounced San Francisco 125-110.

In the opener, Winterville moved out to a 9-4 lead in the first period and built up an 18-11 lead at the half.

Winterville tacked another point to make it 27-19, and then held off a Stokes rally to get the win.

Beamon Shooting For Record Broad Jump

By JIM CHURCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Bob Beamon plans to reach 28 feet in the long jump and then play professional basketball.

The 21-year-old sophomore at the University of Texas at El Paso won the long jump at only 26-10 at the Athens invitational indoor track and field meet Friday night at the arena.

"I was kind of depressed about my performance," said Beamon, who recorded 27-1 for an American indoor record last week. "I haven't reached my peak. Ralph Boston has been warning me against peaking too early before the Olympics. I can hit 28 feet; 27 is just a good jump."

The slim 6-2 Beamon says he will turn out for basketball next season at UTEP en route to a pro career.

Beamon, who shoots for his sixth straight indoor victory to night in Albuquerque, N. M., shared the Athens spotlight with several others before 6,742 fans.

Lee Evans of San Jose State overtook Ron Whitney of the Southern California Striders and won the 600 in 1:09.7, sevenths of a second off the indoor mark. He also anchored a team that won the mile relay in 3:19.6.

"He ran a terrific, tactical race," said Evans' coach, Bud Winter.

A sore hip kept former San Jose State star Tommie Smith from a scheduled appearance in the mile relay.

Tracy Smith, former Oregon State star now in the Army, passed Van Nelson of St. Cloud State when Nelson was struck by a falling pole at the vault pit, and won the three-mile in 13:24.9.

Nelson regained the lead but Smith sprinted away and won by 30 yards. Smith, hopes to run the 5,000 or 10,000 meters in the Olympics.

Grifton Defeats Belvoir, 68-50

GRIFTON — The Grifton Bulldogs pulled back into a first place tie with Ayden Friday night with a 68-50 victory over Belvoir-Falkland. But Belvoir's girls pulled a 25-22 upset win over Grifton.

In the girls contest, both teams fought to a 5-5 tie in the first period, but Belvoir outscored Grifton 6-3 in the second frame for an 11-8 lead.

Belvoir increased its lead in the third period to 19-11 with a five-point spurt, and then held off a Grifton rally in the final period to take the upset win.

Judy Scott led Belvoir with 14 points, while Marion McLawhorn had 10 to pace Grifton.

The Grifton boys battled off a stubborn Belvoir team in the first period for a 16-13 lead. Then in the second quarter, Grifton poured in 20 points to Belvoir's 11 to boost the lead to 36-24 by the half.

Grifton added two more points to its margin in the third period to lead 49-35, and then outscored Belvoir, 19-15, in the stretch, to insure the win.

Kelly Witherington led Belvoir with 21 points, while Buddy Teel had 14 points.

Lakers Take Sixth Straight NBA Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Los Angeles Lakers are on the move, but it's going to be a long trip.

Led by a hot second half from Elgin Baylor, the Lakers won their sixth straight National Basketball Association game Wednesday night, downing the Boston Celtics 118-112 in Boston.

Trouble is, the St. Louis Hawks, leaders of the Western Division, also won Friday, beating New York 103-94 in St. Louis and stayed 10 full games ahead of the Lakers, in third place.

In other NBA action, Philadelphia topped visiting Cincinnati 123-113 and Baltimore overcame San Francisco 125-110.

In the American Basketball Association, Pittsburgh beat Minnesota 115-107, Denver took New Orleans 104-94, Dallas downed Houston 122-96 and Kentucky nudged Anaheim 96-93.

Baylor scored 24 of his 35 points in the final half as the Lakers broke a 76-76 tie in the third period, outscoring the Celtics 9-2. Sam Jones led Boston with 27 points.

Cazzie Russell, for whom the hot hand is becoming a habit, scored 21 points in the final period—and 31 in the last half—but it was not enough to beat the Hawks. Zelmo Beaty led St. Louis with 25 points.

Hal Greer and Luke Jackson led a third-period surge for the 76ers. Greer finished with 36 points and Jackson had 21. Wilt Chamberlain had 22 points. 22 rebounds and 12 assists. Connie Dierking led the Royals with 33 points.

Baltimore overcame a 13-point halftime deficit as Earl Monroe dropped in 35 points on the West Coast. A 17-6 spurt at the start of the third period got the Bullets back in the ball game.

Against Licensing Of Lady Jockey

BALTIMORE (AP) — Judy Johnson, the only woman ever licensed as a professional jockey, says no female should be granted a license to ride thoroughbreds in flat races.

Judy, who rode during the World War II years when there was a shortage of steeplechase jockeys, contends the application by Kathy Kusner should be rejected by the Maryland Racing Commission.

"There's a lot of difference between galloping on a jumper and breaking out of the gate on a race horse," Judy said. "You don't get hit in the face with dirt, or have to judge distances and pace in the same way, or a number of other things. They really aren't the same at all."

Miss Kusner, a 27-year-old member of the U.S. equestrian team who has performed in the Olympics, is the new applicant. Kajny worked 4-year-old Rico's Spy at Pimlico Friday, but stewards would not comment on her performance which included a time of one minute, 16 seconds for six furlongs.

Veteran observers noted, however, that Miss Kusner used long stirrups and somewhat of a show ring style, rather than the short stirrups and hunched over style of most jockeys and exercise boys.

Miss Johnson, now a trainer, said if one woman gets a license for flat racing, "every chorus girl looking for a thrill and every pony club kid wanting excitement would be applying."

Miss Kusner was turned down last month when she said she wanted to retain her amateur standing, but was given a further chance by the racing commission after saying she would turn over any fees to charity.

Allen Leads Tornado Scoring With Big 20

By SONNY MCLAWHORN
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Ayden's Tornadoes relied on a strong shooting performance from Kent Allen to outscore Farmville Friday night, 45-39.

The Ayden lassies were winners in the opener, cruising to a 39-26 victory.

Although outscored in the first and fourth periods, the Lady Tornadoes rolled up enough points during the rest of the contest.

Farmville took an opening advantage in the girls' game, outpointing Ayden by 9-8.

In the second and third periods, the Lady Tornadoes compiled margins of 6-1 and 13-3, respectively.

Ayden got its biggest lead when Jackie Dail hit to make it 34-18 with 3:21 to play.

Miss Dail paced Ayden with 13 points, while Kay Kite had 11.

Baskets by Fred Sauls and Danny Griffin gave the Red Devils a 4-0 edge early in the boys' contest.

The Tornadoes struggled to gain the lead, and finally did on a bucket underneath by B. T. Chappell with 2:38 left in the quarter. Two long set shots by Allen, one with 1:40 to play and the other with 34 seconds left made it 11-8, Ayden.

Farmville regained the lead early in the second quarter, as Bill Hall hit a pair of free throws.

The Red Devils reeled off the first 10 points of the period, and went out to an 18-11 advantage with 3:20 left.

Ayden rallied, as a bucket by Allen cut the lead to one at 20-19. Then Dail McLawhorn hit a foul shot with eight seconds, but Jimmy Hilliard's long shot at the buzzer made the score 22-20.

The Tornadoes were in the lead to stay when McLawhorn scored at 6:40 to make it 24-22. Paul Miller, scoreless through the first half, hit a couple of buckets during the third quarter, as the Tornadoes managed an 11-3 margin.

An eight-point lead was chopped to six when Sauls hit a couple of foul shots with about five minutes remaining.

During the next three minutes Allen poured in three buckets, the last one making it 44-32 with just over a minute to play.

Then the Red Devils rallied. George Moore hit a foul shot. Jimmy Hilliard scored a field goal. Moore's three points in the final seconds cut it down to 45-39.

Hall and Moore led the Red Devils, scoring 10 points each. Allen got 20, 10 of them coming in the final stanza.

Farmville travels to North Lenoir Tuesday night, while the Tornadoes play host to Grifton.

Murfreesboro Edges Past Robersonville

MURFREESBORO — Murfreesboro held off a Robersonville rally Friday night to gain a 57-56 victory over the Rams.

In the opener, the Robersonville girls took a 31-39 win over Murfreesboro.

Robersonville inched into a 4-3 lead in the first period, and then held an 11-9 lead at the half.

In the third period, the two teams stayed close, as Robersonville held a 19-14 edge. Then in the final period, Robersonville outscored their hosts, 12-5, for the win.

In the boys game, however, Murfreesboro pushed out to a 15-10 lead in the first period, and then built up a 35-22 margin by the half.

In the third period, the Rams put on a rally and cut the lead to 45-41. In the last frame, Robersonville outscored Murfreesboro, 15-12, but fell a point short of finishing their rally.

Blaine Cargile led Robersonville with 17, while Phillip Stalls had 12 and Joe Goins had 10. Four Robersonville starters and one sub fouled out in the course of the game.

For Murfreesboro, Theodorakis had 18, Faison had 14 and Parker had 13.

Against Licensing Of Lady Jockey

BALTIMORE (AP) — Judy Johnson, the only woman ever licensed as a professional jockey, says no female should be granted a license to ride thoroughbreds in flat races.

Judy, who rode during the World War II years when there was a shortage of steeplechase jockeys, contends the application by Kathy Kusner should be rejected by the Maryland Racing Commission.

"There's a lot of difference between galloping on a jumper and breaking out of the gate on a race horse," Judy said. "You don't get hit in the face with dirt, or have to judge distances and pace in the same way, or a number of other things. They really aren't the same at all."

Eppes Gets Win Over Wilson Five

WILSON — Eppes High School gained a 55-48 victory over Wilson Darden Friday night. It was the second straight victory for the Bulldogs, who tripped Elizabeth City, 62-47, earlier in the week.

Both teams battled to a 12-12 tie in the first period, but Eppes outscored Wilson, 17-9, in the second period to gain a 29-21 lead at intermission.

During the third period, Darden put on a rally, closing the gap to 37-33, but Eppes outhit Wilson, 22-11, in the final period to pull away and win handily.

Thomas Perkins led Eppes with 23 points, while Atkinson had 18 to pace Darden. Eppes also captured the junior varsity game, 41-23.

Six-Wheeled Amphicat Joins List Of Those On The Market

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — The latest amphibian to hit the market is a somewhat weird-looking six-wheeled vehicle that moves across land at a top speed of 35 miles per hour but at a considerably slower rate when it takes to the water.

Called the amphicat, it weighs a little less than 400 pounds and has a carrying capacity of 480 pounds, with seats for two and a large cargo bin. It is 81 inches long, 53 inches wide and 34 inches tall.

The double-use vehicle is powered by a 16-horsepower air-cooled engine which drives six fat, low-pressure tubeless tires. The wheels, three on a side, act almost like tank treads, allowing the Amphicat to crawl over mud, sand and rough terrain.

In the water, low ridges on the tires act as a sort of paddlewheel, providing a speed of about two miles an hour. Provision is made for mounting an outboard aft and a five-horsepower motor, for example, will raise water speed to about five miles per hour.

So far, about 100 of the "cats" have been produced by Mobility Unlimited, a Royal Oak, Mich., firm headed by Andre Dubel, who will be showing his product at a number of boat shows around the country this year.

Right now, according to Dubel, its owners use it pretty much for sports such as fishing and skin-diving or as a dinghy for houseboats and cruisers.

"It's primarily a fun vehicle," says Dubel. "But we find some customers are using them in their work. For instance, a logging foreman uses one to check work sites and a telephone company has one for inspecting rural lines."

The controls consist of a hand throttle and two braking levers. A pull on the right lever brakes the three wheels on that side and the Amphicat turns right.

The left lever controls the left-hand brakes. Pull both levers and the vehicle stops. The two-piece body is constructed of an unsinkable molded ABS plastic called Cyclocac, developed by Borg-Warner's Marbon Chemical Division.

The first models were made of plastic but Dubel switched to Cyclocac on the grounds it is more durable and longer-lasting. The big difference between the Amphicat and others of its breed, of course, are the tires, which were developed by B.F. Goodrich and use only one pound of pressure. This inflates them to a circumference of 5 1/4 feet.

Pleasure Boating Has A Good Year

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pleasure boating enjoyed one of its most successful years in 1967.

More than one million new boats took to the water in 1967 and for the first time in its history the marine industry enjoyed a $3 billion retail year.

The new adherents to the sport brought to 41,375,000 the number of persons who used the national waterways last year, compared with 40,370,000 in 1966.

An Increase
The slightly over $3 billion spent during the year for boats, motors, equipment, fuel, insurance, services and club memberships represents an increase of $183.1 million over the $2.8 billion shelled out in 1966.

The figures are estimates and are contained in a report compiled jointly by the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers and the Boating Industry Association.

The report shows there are now 8.275 million boats on all waters of the United States, of which 4.237 million are registered under state and Coast Guard numbering systems. This compares with 8.074 million at the close of 1966.

The 1967 total breaks down to 591,000 inboard motor boats, 4.843 million outboard boats, 561,000 sailboats and 2,280 million rowboats, canoes, dinghies, prams and other miscellaneous craft.

Small Decline
The $3 billion sales figures for 1967 was reached despite a possible small decline in unit production from a year ago, according to compilers of the report. It pointed out that a slight increase in the prices of all types of craft, chiefly due to an enlarged list of "standard" items on most models, more than offset any drop in unit shipments last year.

"The public is choosing larger and more fully equipped boats," Joseph E. Choate, vice president of NAEBM, said in commenting on the report.

"This trend plus an expected rise in unit production reflects another bright business year in boating ahead."

Rod And Gun: 224 Different Fish Inhabit North Carolina Watershed

By ROD AMUNDSON

When you fish North Carolina's streams, your concern is usually trout, bass, robins, maybe catfish. It may be perhaps a little shocking to find out that the 26 watersheds of our state contain a total of 224 different species of fish.

Until recently, no one knew for sure how many different kinds of fish swim in the running waters of North Carolina. Back in 1960 the Wildlife Commission's Division of Inland Fisheries began sampling streams at strategic points.

Biologists used rotenone and cresol to stun fish in 100-foot or longer stretches of water, collecting fish in nets at the lower end of the sample area and putting them in jars of formalin for future identification.

This was an undertaking of ponderous proportions when you consider the state has thousands of miles of streams in 26 watersheds.

After the samples were taken the painstaking work of identifying the various species began. If you ever tried to identify a fish from what biologists refer to as a "key," you can appreciate the difficulty involved.

Naturally, most of the species on the check list of 224 species are of the nongame variety, ranging from eels to lampreys to anchovies to minnows.

It was during this project that Roanoke bass were first identified in North Carolina. Closely resembling rock bass (sometimes called redeyes), this particular species had been assumed to be rock bass.

You can establish yourself as something of an authority among your fishing friends by getting and studying a copy of this check list. It has both common and scientific names, and you can get it for free by writing to: Lotic Fishes, Box 2919, Raleigh 27602. You can even win bets on how many species of anchovies there are in our streams. Luke Guppy already has his copy, "on account of" he helped with the survey. Kids and loafers around Guppy's General Merchandise Emporium hold him in awe when he solemnly declares there are 36 species of shiners and only five species of minnows in our streams.

Speaking of Luke, he contends there must have been some very itchy Indians back in the old days, or they wouldn't have named so many of their lakes and swamps and streams with words that end with "echee," "oochee," "achee," and "ichee." But Elmo Cooter, predictably, says maybe they had hay fever and sneezed a good bit.

Ever stop to think how poetically beautiful many Indian names are, and how descriptive some of the translations are? Take Minnewashta. In the Sioux tongue "Minne" means water. Minnewashta means lapping water. Minnehaha — laughing water. Minnetonka — deep water. Minneapolis combines Sioux with Greek and the name means water city, there being several lakes within the city limits.

Arapahoe has a musical sound. So do Tallahassee, Shenandoah, Catahouchee, Croatan, Pottawatamee, and you can find a jillion more in an atlas.

I stopped by Guppy's store the other day, and as usual Luke and Elmo Cooter were arguing; this time about these heart transplants and the ethics involved. Elmo brought the debate to silence with this statement:

"Okay Luke, suppose you are in the hospital needing a new heart, and I get kilt in an accident and they transplant my heart into your carcass and you go on living. So now of Elmo is dead and gone, but his heart is still beating. Does that mean he ain't really dead and I'm supposed to not bury him?" Luke decided a pile of overalls on the counter needed sorting out.

Villagers Eke A Living In War's Midst

(Editor's note: Thousands of South Vietnam families, clinging to the land of their ancestors, live and work in the midst of gunfire and sometimes in the midst of battle. Not all of them know why there is war, or why the soldiers have come. In this dispatch a UPI correspondent describes what life is like in one typical hamlet.)

By THOMAS CORPORA

DUONG SON II, Vietnam (UPI)—By nine o'clock the night is already two hours old and Ngo Thi Thi has nothing more to do but tend the family altars.

Today was memory day for her husband. This morning, Ba (for Madame, or Mrs.) Thi put two new white candles on his altar in the big room of her two-room hut, and lay out a feast of orange soda-pop, cakes and hand-rolled cigarettes for his spirit's visit on this anniversary of his death.

Now Ba Thi lights a candle on her husband's altar, sets smoldering a few joss sticks for it and the altars of her children, her parents and those of her husband, and then she goes to bed. She has happily performed her sacred family duties and Ba Thi would sleep well except for the nightlong artillery.

Not A War Widow

Ba Thi is a 45-year-old peasant who lives on the sandy coastal plain about 20 miles south of Da Nang in the part of Vietnam once called Annam. She is a widow, but not a war widow, and she is the mother of a nine-year-old girl, Nguyen-Chi, the only one of her six children to survive.

The widow Thi stands on the short side of five feet and weighs perhaps 90 pounds. Her teeth are stained black from chewing betel nut and her hands and her feet are calloused, the skin abrasive and the nails broken from work. Her face is unwrinkled but leathery and she has an old scar shaped like a cross on the left side of her nose near her eye.

Ba Thi has a cough most of the time and it may be TB. She probably has any of several intestinal parasites, and regularly she is wracked by dysentery and fevers.

Her ancestral hamlet, Duong Son III, is an ungeometric sprawl of thatched huts and, for the rich, white-washed brick houses with tin roofs built in the shade of 40-foot-tall stands of bamboo and fruit trees.

Truck Gardens

The hamlet is immediately surrounded by small garden plots where Ba Thi and her neighbors grow tapioca, manioc, squash, yams, casava and Cam Le tobacco, a product famous in the region. Outside the circle of garden plots are the hamlet's paddies, bright green with young rice at this time of year.

Sixty-two families live in Duong Son III, about 350 persons, most of them women, young children and old men. The younger men and older boys have gone to Da Nang to work or are soldiers, either "national soldiers," as the villagers call the South Vietnamese, or "liberation soldiers" their name for the Viet Cong.

Neither name has much political significance for Ba Thi, since neither she nor her neighbors have much political awareness. She could recognize neither President Nguyen Van Thieu nor Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, and the name of the president of North Vietnam, Ho Chi Minh, she knew but didn't know who he was or what he did.

The U.S. Marines are up the road from Duong Son and down the road and across the paddies in almost any direction, but Ba Thi doesn't know why they are there.

"If you ask me about the house or what I do in the fields, I will tell you. But you ask things I don't know. The important people know. Ask them."

Ba Thi has lived in the hamlet all her life. Many of the people who live here are relatives. Her parents, who died when Ba Thi was three, came from this village, so did her husband. Her sister lives next door.

If Ba Thi and Vietnamese tradition have their way, her daughter Nguyen-Chi will marry a boy from the village and settle here. How else would Ba Thi's grave and the grave of her husband be looked after?

Ba Thi and Nguyen-Chi share a two-room thatched hut that has been "improved" with wood from U.S. 105 mm ammunition boxes and fiberboard 7-up shipping cartons, refuse from the Marine dump. The roof is made of rice straw and the floor is packed dirt.

Too Poor

Ba Thi is nominally a Buddhist, but she is too poor to pay for prayers in the pagoda at the neighboring hamlet, so she doesn't go. Her house, though, like most Vietnamese peasant homes, is half temple.

In the largest room, which measures 8 by 12 feet, Ba Thi has three altars to honor her relatives. The largest is for her and her husband's parents, the next for her husband, and the smallest for the five children who died.

The family's life revolves around these altars and the grave mounds and monuments of ancestors that surround the village in the gardens and paddies.

The altars sit on tables and to an outsider they are a reminder of the war and the half-million Americans on Vietnamese soil. On one, the children's altar, there are two liqueur bottles instead of candles. The candle-holders on the husband's altar are made from U.S. number 10

They Don't Know Why There Is War

cans, and a miniature artificial, fully decorated Christmas tree decorates the other. More Marine refuse.

Bottles And Trees

Ba Thi doesn't care about the origin of these objects. If they are pretty, as creme de menthe bottles and Christmas trees are, then they honor her relatives.

The altars share the main room with the bed—a wooden frame with a straw sleeping mat—and what has become increasingly important to the peasant household, the bomb shelter, whose entrance is at the head of the bed.

Last year, a Marine artillery round or bomb fell on the village—Ba Thi doesn't know why. She and a three-year-old daughter didn't get to the shelter in time. Shrapnel took off one of the child's legs and mangled the other one. The girl died later that day.

When the family was bigger, Ba Thi slept in the hard bed with her husband and some of her children. Others slept in a hammock strung from the two bamboo poles that support the roof. But now she and her daughter are only two and they would rather spend their nights in the homes of other people, even if it means crowding many into one bed.

"It is better to sleep with friends," she says.

The "harassment and interdiction" fire the Marine guns boom out all night long usually ends a little before dawn. Soon after the sounds drift away and before it is yet light, Ba Thi wakes and begins her day as she ended it, replacing the candles on the altar and burning incense.

The center of the family's activity in the morning is the second room in the house, a room about the size of a small pantry. It holds a table, stool and small bench and a cabinet for food and the few old, burned and battered cooking utensils she owns. The rice is stored in a U.S. 55 gallon oil drum between the rooms.

Outside this room and attached to the house is a low lean-to that shelters the stove, a shelf of tempered bamboo raised about three feet off the ground on which Ba Thi burns the wood she has gathered the day before.

By dawn, a small fire is burning on the heaped ashes in the fireplace and rice is cooking in a pot on an iron grill. Ba Thi has swept the dirt floor with a short-handled rice-straw broom and is off to the well 100 yards away with two metal buckets and carved carrying yoke.

When Ba Thi returns from the well she washes her hands, face and feet. In the warm season, she makes two trips a day to the well for a bath but in winter she bathes just twice a week.

Simple Fare

Breakfast is rice, a few minnows because the day's work will be hard, Nuoc Mam—a sauce made of fish oil that is the chief source of protein in the peasant diet—and weak tea made bitter by the bitter well water.

"Our food is poor," Ba Thi says.

Work begins after breakfast. Ba Thi rents a small piece of land but it produces only 400 kilots (not quite 900 pounds) of rice a year and that's not enough for her and Nguyen-Chi so she must sell her labor.

When it's planting time, Ba Thi rolls her black pajama-like trousers to the thigh, pushes the sleeves of her collarless green blouse above her elbows and stoops in the flooded paddies all day planting rice.

At harvest time, she cuts the rice and lays it out in flat baskets to dry. When she finishes her day labor, she takes care of her own paddy. She doesn't own a water buffalo and she must rent one for her field.

With the money she earns laboring and what she earns selling her tobacco and an occasional pig that she buys to fatten and sell in Da Nang at a small profit, Ba Thi makes between 9,000 and 10,000 piastres a year—about $85 at the legal exchange rate and $66 at the inflated blackmarket price.

Long Hours

She works in the fields from early morning until noon, then she stops to fix lunch for 9-year-old Nguyen-Chi, again rice, again Nuoc Mam, possibly with onions or carrots in it, and maybe squash. Then she takes a siesta and returns to the field at three, staying until after six o'clock.

At this time of the year the rice has already been planted and the young tobacco plants needed only a little water in the late afternoon so Ba Thi will spend her days gathering wood, working in her gardens or among the coconut, banana, guava and jackfruit trees that grow around the house. She may walk to market at nearby Le Son.

Nguyen-Chi will work too, but not much. For obvious reasons, the girl is a bit spoiled, but she will sweep the floor of the house, or feed the chickens.

No School

Nguyen-Chi went to school for awhile, but the teacher has been sick for a long time and there is no school now. Her exercise book and pen sit under the altar that honors her dead brothers and sisters. Still she has more education than her mother who can neither read nor write.

Nguyen-Chi is a pretty, dark-eyed vivacious little girl who wears black trousers torn at one knee, a pink sweater held together with a safety pin and two undershirts, one of them made from a castaway Marine jacket. Her white skull cap shows she is in mourning for her father. It sits tight over her shiny, straight-cut black hair.

The girl's health isn't good. She has a rasping cough and her teeth are already yellow and she has lost two on the left side of her mouth. But she's no less healthy than the other children and she plays as hard as the rest do at a king of Vietnamese hopscotch and a game played with coins that is similar to marbles.

The evening meal is like those at noon and in the morning, rice, nuoc mam, manioc or yams or squash, and maybe, on a good night, fish, chicken or pork.

After dinner there is little to do but visit and gossip. It is too dangerous to go outside the hamlet, which the military probably classifies as "contested." Few people have radios and no one has television.

Sometimes Nguyen Van Khe visits the family. He is a farmer and hamlet elder who once held a village office. With strange Americans in his hamlet who are neither soldiers nor government officials—the UPI reporting team—Nguyen Van Khe takes the opportunity to complain about the Americans.

"Vietnam is such a small and poor country," he says. "Why does your country come over here and fight?"

The old man is told that his government, the South Vietnamese government, has asked for help against Communists.

"But there are no Communists here," he says. "I've never seen any."

Then, as an artillery round cracks the night nearby, Nguyen Van Khe grimaces and sighs: "Oh, for just one night of peaceful sleep."

"It's sad," says Ba Thi "The noise all the time. Every time it goes off we don't know whether it will come in here or not. When we go to bed we do not know whether we will wake up in the morning."

They have other complaints. Nguyen Van Khe said one Marine compound was built over part of the hamlet's graveyard.

"Unless the graves are taken care of," says the old man, "the spirits wander around homeless. That's what makes it so sad, what makes things go so badly."

Then it is time to go. The spirit lamps in the houses don't throw much light outside and the night is pitch-black except when a shell bursts or a parachute flare drifts down over the Marine perimeter.

Ba Thi's friends go into the night and she once again lights the candle and starts the incense sticks burning on the altars.

Home life for Madame Ba Thi and her family centers around the three altars in her living room. Here, at left, Ba Thi lights a candle for her husband of memory day. The sacred duty done, she would sleep well except for the night-long artillery fire around her hamlet. At right farmers from the hamlet of Duong Son go to market. They grow tapioca, manioc, squash, yams, casava and tobacco, in addition to the staple rice, but not in great quantity. "Our food is poor," says Ba Thi. She makes about $85 a year at legal exchange rates.

Hepburn Plays Role Of Mother To Niece

Katharine and Katherine — Hepburn and Houghton — star together as mother and daughter. They are actually aunt and niece. Here, the two enjoy a carefree outing during shooting of "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner." (UPI)

By LYNN LANGWAY
NEW YORK (UPI)—In her first major movie she plays Katharine Hepburn's daughter; in fact, she is her niece; in person, Katherine Houghton seems the romantic young sister of her famous aunt.
A ginger mane surrounds a face whose jutting cheekbones, square jaw, and generous mouth are all Hepburn.
And, presiding over tea and cinnamon toast in Miss Hepburn's mid-Manhattan townhouse, the 23-year-old actress talked of something else she and her aunt share—warm memories of the late Spencer Tracy.
"I was terrified that Spencer wouldn't like me. I'd known him as a child, but working with him in Hollywood was an entirely different matter," said Miss Houghton, who was born and raised in Hartford, Conn., the only daughter of Katharine Hepburn's younger sister, Marion.

Wouldn't Hide Opinion
"I knew that if I didn't do well, he wouldn't hide his opinion with New England tact. He made no small talk, and where my aunt was the charming fairy godmother, I feared he'd be a stern God."
"But then he turned out to be so sweet and helpful, and so very warm," said the girl who made her Hollywood debut as Tracy and Hepburn's daughter in "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," finished just before the veteran actor's death last June.

To the young actress, Tracy resembled a lion. "You didn't want to cross him, because a paw would reach out and slap you down but he was so very gentle once you had his trust."
Tracy called her "the Baby," and "he loved to pretend to fuss that he only rated attention from my aunt when I was around."
But acting was as serious a matter for Tracy in his sixtieth feature film as for Miss Houghton in her first.
"He was so natural that you had to respond correctly, and learn without being conscious of it. He would really work himself into the soul of a character, more than the intellect. He'd get it so firmly that when he did a scene, he was being the character, not thinking about how the lights looked on him."
"It all seemed so easy, but he worked terribly hard."

Had Luster
"I felt like I was a witness to something very privileged, working with those two (Tracy and Hepburn). They had a kind of luster," she said.
"I played a schizophrenic girl for them, in what you might call an underground movie, although it was pretty comprehensible, I was fascinated by what film could convey."
After graduation from Sarah Lawrence College in 1967, Miss Houghton played summer stock and repertory, some television, and a part in Garson Kanin's "A Very Rich Woman."
A conversation—and a reading of both male and female parts—with director Stanley Kramer then led to her ingenue role in the "Dinner" movie with her aunt Tracy and Sidney Poitier.

'Kildare' Stars In London

By NADEANE WALKER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP)—Actor-Richard Chamberlain, a refugee from the Dr. Kildare television serial role which made him famous, is about to burst out on British television in a new identity.
The 31-year-old star is in London filming the Henry James novel, "Portrait of a Lady," in six parts for BBC Two.
Gone are the neat white coat and close-cut blond hair that made Chamberlain a school-girls' heart-throb. The actor has let his hair go back to its natural brown and grown to shaggy Beatle-length for his part of Ralph Touchett in the period costume drama.
This time, as a tubercular cousin of Isabel Archer, the Lady of the title role, he makes a neat switch from doctor to patient. Readers of the Henry James novel may remember that Touchett dies at the end of the story. The BBC is hoping it won't be snowed under with letters from fans protesting that they've killed Dr. Kildare.

Although Chamberlain doesn't have the leading role, and is not getting star treatment from high brow BBC Two, he doesn't care. "This is the most exciting thing that ever happened to me," he enthused at a rehearsal tea break.
"American television just doesn't do any dramatic serials like this, so I would never have had this opportunity except in England."
The only thing he wouldn't willingly take on, Chamberlain says, is another doctor role.
"I'm not ungrateful, but Dr. Kildare was a five-year project, and frankly, I was relieved when it wound up."
The actor has rented a bachelor flat off Baker Street, where he "scrambles up a little breakfast" for himself, and has taken to buying his clothes at Blades, one of London's top shops in sharp gents. He's anxious that nobody should think he's gone native. "This long hair is strictly for my new part; I didn't fancy wearing a wig. I like England, but I'm not knocking America. In fact, I'm feeling a bit homesick at the moment."

Chamberlain was on a visit here in November when his agent snared the BBC role for him. "Portrait of a Lady" is his first costume part single amateur dramatists in Pomona College. He cheerfully admits that his first effort to shake the Kildare image turned out to be a turkey. That was in "Breakfast at Tiffanys," which "played for a month in Philly and Boston, had four previews in New York, and then expired." He last acted in a movie, "Romanie," with Julie Christie, which is scheduled for Easter release in America.
David Conway, the young producer of the "Portrait" color series, which will later run in black and white on BBC One, says he hopes to sell it to American television, too. Richard Chamberlain isn't too hopeful about that, though he thinks that the several Americans in it "may make it more palatable to the Midwest."

The Dr. Kildare series was nearly as popular in England as in America, and Chamberlain is often recognized on the street here.
"But the British are more reticent about letting you know it," he says. "It's super for actors here, because the profession is more respected, and thought of more realistically."
He also has to work harder. "We put in much more rehearsal time here," he noted but he's all in favor of that. He hopes his next job will be in a movie in yet another kind of role, "where I can put more time and effort into it."

Carousel Weekend At ECU Opens On Friday

East Carolina University is packing next weekend full of cartoonist Al Capp, hypnotist Martin St. James and three singing groups, The Lettermen, The Buckingham and The Monzas.

The result is the first annual "Carousel Weekend" at the university, an event sponsored by the Student Government Association to rival other big weekends such as homecoming.

The Buckingham

Student leaders say they sense the need for another major weekend during the year. They hope "Carousel Weekend" is the answer, starting this year and continuing on an annual basis.
The busy schedule begins Thursday when the famous creator of "Li'l Abner" lectures at 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. Tickets are available to the public at $2 each.

Friday night the popular hypnotist - parapsychologist Martin St. James makes a return trip to the campus by popular demand. His performance is scheduled at 8:15 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. Tickets for the public are $2.
A full Saturday begins with a concert by The Lettermen, one of Capitol Records' hottest trios, at 2 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. Tickets for the public are $3.
Then Saturday night it's all free, a dance from 8 o'clock to midnight in Wright Auditorium. The Monzas have the stage from 8 to 10. Then The Buckingham will wind up the dance and the first "Carousel Weekend" with a performance from 10 to 12.
Al Capp, Martin St. James and The Lettermen tickets are available from the Central Ticket Office in Wright Auditorium, open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Reviews And Reflections

By FRANK ADAMS

By FRANK ADAMS

We got a tip recently that if we went to The Rathskeller on a Monday evening to hear Danny McCrary play his guitar, we would have a good time. We tested it. Turned out to be dead right.

Danny plays an electric guitar with both skill and taste, ranging from the most dulcet to the most intense. His "Greensleeves" soothes all imaginable care; his "Malaguena" tightens every muscle to the limit.

Give yourself a treat: go to The Rathskeller some Monday evening and hear Danny.

ADAMS

Support

Word reaches us that our granddaughter is starting to walk. However, since she isn't completely confident, she holds onto something—her dress.

Corridor Again

John Blair sends us a clipping from the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel about Rixie Hunter's "The Checkerboard Corridor." Seems the novel has more basis in fact than we had supposed. Indeed, before Blair would publish it, he had a former mayor of Winston-Salem read it in manuscript and sign a legal agreement not to sue.

We remind you: "The Checkerboard Corridor" is a completely absorbing book which you'll read with great interest and pleasure. And ever afterward you will be a better citizen of whatever town or city you live in.

Shift

We did not even think of protesting when one of our several bosses got the message to us that we could contribute most effectively to the University by our absence, because from ten years of performing an administrative job at the University of Maryland and eight years of being a department head at the U. S. Naval School of Hospital Administration, we KNOW that the administrative view is invariably the most inclusive and best informed.

Beginning with summer school this year, we will join our predecessor on Reviews and Reflections, Jim Poindexter, at Madison College in Harrisonburg, Virginia.

The ten years we have spent in Greenville have been singularly happy ones, for which we acknowledge a debt far beyond our ability to repay. The few remaining months are doubly dear to us.

Faculty Art Show

We can't give you much of an idea of the School of Art's Faculty Show: it displays one hundred and eleven items by thirty people. But we'll try to say a few things calculated to induce you to see the show, which is the biggest and best show the faculty has had.

Dean Gray's one exhibited work is called "After Albers" and does pay homage to the square, but more interestingly than Albers does.

Of Charles Chamberlain's ceramic works, we liked best his candlestick, a purple, campy, funny work—virtually a happening.

Warren Chamberlain shows three realistic paintings. We prefer the seascape in oil which concentrates on a wave hitting a cluster of rocks. It's called appropriately "Turmoil."

Wesley Crawley exhibits two pastels, distinguished by their fluid, natural poses, and three sculptures, each of which catches the enchantment of little girls.

Donald Durland's three drawings feature complex symbolism and need more reflection than we've given them.

Bob Edmiston uses one effective three-dimensional device in two works called "Vestige" and has an untitled relief in bronze which is marvelously understated. We liked Sara Edmiston's two woodcuts and a bronze container which looks like a Polynesian hut.

Emily Furnham exhibits two diverse works: a hard-edge abstract done on the inside of a hinged case and a somewhat simplified but essentially realistic portrait.

Janet Fischer has a sterling silver bracelet and a gold necklace, both of which would have pleased Cleopatra, and two pins, one of which, in silver and gold, strikes us as humorous, and the other, in silver with garnet, is Inca in feeling—and handsome.

Michael Flinn has two drawings which we suspect of having a close relationship with each other.

Marilyn Gordley's oil called "Evolution" is expressionistic and rewarding. Tran Gordley's impressionistic "Landscape" is a successful study of the essence of woods.

Bill Holley's "Upon Reflection," an abstract, vaguely winged sculpture, intrigued us at the Art Center some months ago. We still like it.

Ralph Jacobs' "Two Moons" is a crisp and stylish abstract—abstract, that is, except for the two moons.

Peter Jones's intaglio "Self Portrait" is beautifully executed, but it's meaning eludes us. The sub-title "2090 A. D." doesn't help.

Norman Keller does remarkable things in sculpture with familiar objects. Ray Minnis in ceramics perforce makes his own objects; we like best his vase with porcelain decoration.

John Moffitt shows two works laden with symbolism. We see their power but not yet the meaning of their symbols.

Of Francis Neel's works, we like best his Rothko-like "Design Maya." We like Betty Petteway's intaglio "Water Images," though we're unable to say why.

Elizabeth Ross's big oil "Bethel Manufacturing Co. No. 4" shows her ability to compose real objects and to capture the feel of the land.

Though John Satterfield's jewelry is uniformly beautiful, we liked best an inverted silver heart surrounding a huge jewel.

Donald Sexauer exhibits two intaglios which are up to his usual high standards.

Francis Speight shows two Manayunk landscapes and a portrait study. This last is our favorite of the whole show: luminous, clear, assured, affirmative, splendid.

Peter Freudenberg does something funny with a real traffic light. Michael Goins has three thoroughly thought out prints. Nancy Johnston has an abstract oil of extraordinary complexity and spirit.

Brenda Kay McLeod has two works of sculpture welded of found objects, of which one, "Tenuous Constructon," is curiously formal.

We have neglected several artists and a number of ceramic pieces and works of sculpture. The fault lies in our limitations, not theirs.

We urge you to go to see this show, which uses all the display space on the first and third floors of Rawl. Few cities the size of Greenville on the face of the earth could put on such a show of works by artists in residence. It is a privilege not to be wasted.

Works Of ECU Professor In Library Show

A one-man exhibit by John F. Moffitt, assistant professor of art at East Carolina University, opened in the Pender Gallery of the Edgecombe County Memorial Library in Tarboro last Wednesday, and will continue through Feb. 17.

The 33-piece exhibit by Dr. Moffitt is composed mainly of sketches of people done in a variety of media—charcoal, pencil, brush and ink, pen, and watercolor. Included are four oil paintings, one of which is an imaginary scene from nature titled "Carolina Swamp". Two interesting portraits, "Carolyn" and "Roy Seated", are also done in oil.

A native of San Francisco, Dr. Moffitt is now teaching art history and drawing at E. C. U. He holds degrees from the California College of Arts and Crafts and from San Francisco State College and received his Doctorate from the University of Madrid in Spain. He has lived in and traveled extensively through Europe.

The show will be on view during regular library hours from 9 a.m. to 6 a.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 6 a.m. Saturday. Any of the paintings on exhibit may be purchased.

'Tales Of Hoffmann' Rehearsal

The company rehearses scenes from 'Tales of Hoffmann', which will be presented at ECU.

For 80th Birthday

Lehmann Album Is Tribute

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Among the new classical albums by sopranos is "Opera Arias" by Lotte Lehmann on Seraphim.

The album, a tribute to her 80th birthday, is a treat both for those old enough personally to have heard her and for those who have heard her only on records.

Miss Lehmann was born Feb. 27, 1888, in Perleberg, Brandenburg. A friend of Strauss, she has written a book about singing his operas under his supervision. She made her Covent Garden debut in 1924, her Metropolitan Opera debut in 1934 and gave her last lieder recital in 1951. Today she is director of the Music Academy of the West in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Arias and two songs by Wagner, all in German, on this album were recorded between 1928 and 1933, years when many music critics considered her the greatest soprano.

First band on the album is the "Willow Song" from "Otello," an aria expectedly clear and pure. Miss Lehmann surprises those who don't know her voice right away. Instead of a "white" tone, her voice displays individuality and much character.

Her "Romance" from "The Tales of Hoffmann" vibrates with intensity. And she is, of course, entirely in her element with Strauss.

It sounds unusual to hear Tosca's "Vissi d'Arte" and "Mannon" sung in German, but Miss Lehmann's is such artistry that it really doesn't matter.

Montserrat Caballe, the soprano who opened the current Met season in "La Traviata," sings more from the same composer on a new RCA release, "Verdi Rarities."

Album notes point out that Verdi wrote more than 12 operas between 1840 and 1850, and only in 1851, after "Rigoletto," could he afford to slow down and stop grinding them out so fast. Arias have been selected from seven of his early operas which are never done, or even heard of, now, which is probably for the best.

In any event, there is a lot of enjoyable-to-hear musical fireworks here and singing that requires a great deal of flexibility. Miss Caballe handles both the fireworks and the flexibility with nonchalant ease. Her voice jumps up to high notes and holds them or jumps on again as lightly as a hummingbird darts around a flower garden.

Mirella Freni, an Italian soprano in her early 30s, as is the Spanish Miss Caballe, sounds much younger. Her forte has been "sweet young girl" roles and she has been a great success as Liu, Micaela, Mimi and Adima.

On the new Angel LP, "Puccini Arias," she is the perfect Mimi and Butterfly, singing with innocent delicacy and at the same time mature assurance. "But she is less successful with an aria from "La Rondine" and her "Vissi d'Arte" indicates that she is not really a Tosca.

The collecting of antiques and "objects d'art" is regarded by many as an interesting hobby which will bring many years of pleasure; therefore, the following books are for those who would surround themselves with attractive, useful and interesting objects.

"Antique Glass and China" by Geoffrey A. Godden is a guide for the beginner collector on the less expensive British china and glass wares that are more generally neglected in books dealing with more expensive objects. The author has confined his discussion to items that can be purchased on a small budget and can be found in fair numbers at the present time.

Both in its text and in its illustrations "English, Scottish and Irish Table Glass" by G. Bernard Hughes is the most complete account so far published of the table glass produced in England, Scotland and Ireland from the 16th century to 1820. A glossary of technical and semi-technical terms is included along with more than 300 illustrations.

Something for every taste and collecting interest will be found in "The Antiques Book" edited by Alice Winchester. While its natural emphasis is upon the major brackets of collecting—furniture, glass, silver, etc.—it has neglected none of the more obscure fields. Each of the thirty-five chapters appeared originally as an article in "Antiques Magazine."

Clearly and informally written, and illustrated with forty-seven pages containing over 200 photographs, "Antique Collecting for Everyone" by Katherine Morrison McClinton is a treasury and guidebook for both the beginner and experienced collector of inexpensive antiques. The author has excluded such costly items as furniture and jewelry and has concentrated in 24 categories of reasonably priced but charming and useful old pieces. "A Handbook of Popular Antiques" by the same author gives serious information on the collecting of small antiques.

Two books on antique furniture are "English Furniture" by Margaret Macdonald - Davis and "A Directory of Antique Furniture" by F. Lewis Hinchley. In the first of these, the author provides a fascinating picture of each of the various periods of furniture and describes their characteristics. The book is enhanced by the numerous line drawings and photographs. The second book is a lavishly illustrated encyclopedic volume which provides thoroughly reliable Register of Standards of Authentic Design for all types of furniture, European and American.

"The Art of Antique Restorers Handbook" by George Savage is a useful book that tells both amateur and professional restorers what substance to use on all sorts of art works including clocks, furniture, glass, paintings, pottery, porcelain and textiles. Processes described range from simple remedies to the newest uses of ultra-violet rays in detecting repairs.

Other useful books for those who are seeking the pleasures of collecting antiques are: "The Complete Book of Old Clocks" by H. Allen Lloyd, an authoritative survey of the whole field of clocks with 180 photographs of rare and unusual clocks; Earl F. Robacher's "Pennsylvania Dutch Stuff" covers in complete detail the collecting of Pennsylvania Dutch furnishings and crafts; "American Pewter" by J. B. Kerfoot is an account of every known American Pewterer with dates, types of work, scarcity factors and marks with illustrations of the most notable examples; "The American Heritage History of Colonial Antiques" describes America's taste in art, architecture, furniture, and what not with 600 drawings, paintings and photographs—nearly 100 in full color.

Demanding More Of French Art

By DANIEL GREGORY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — France's minister of culture, Andre Malraux, walked up to the speaker's rostrum in the National Assembly and laid it by the line. He wanted 17 per cent more than last year in the name of French culture.

The deputies listened and with relatively little squabbling gave Malraux what he wanted.

What will Malraux do with his record $108 million budget?

Reminding the legislators of the radical implications of industrialized life, Malraux outlined a future role of the state whereby culture would be made free to the public in the same way as primary education.

"Our civilization involves the most brutal rupture with the past the world has ever known. We are of the generation which will have seen the world transform in the course of one life-span," he said.

"Now, for the first time, this civilization does not know its reason d'etre."

In order to preserve former values, the ministry will continue its work of restoring and maintaining historical monuments with renewed vigor. Next year's allocation for this is $44 million, an increase of $600,000.

Repairs, at the Louvre Museum and at the palaces of Fontainebleau and Versailles will total $13.3 million. Other historical monuments, castles and palaces will receive $12.6 million for restoration and upkeep, while the allocation for national museums goes down by $3.2 million.

Art and special exhibitions, particularly those from abroad, are proving to be a continuing success. Last year's great attraction was the display of furniture, jewelry, statues and pure gold death-mask of Egyptian King Tutankhamen, which was seen by 1.3 million visitors.

An exposition of Russian art treasures at the Grand Palais off the Champs Elysses was an equal success.

The allocation for art exhibits, including those from overseas organized by the ministry of culture, again has been increased and will be $572,000 in 1968.

Malraux told the assembly he sought to increase the number of these exhibitions but stressed that organizational, maintenance and security costs increase proportionately.

Music On Campus

By JAMES HOULIK and EUGENE ISABELLE

The E. C. U. Opera Theater is now in the final stages of preparation for its forthcoming production of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann." Featured in prominent roles will be Dr. Charles Moore as Hoffmann, Jeanne Smith, Paul Aliapoulos, Daniel Butts, Gafford Pearce, John Goforth, Benjamin, Fincher, Jane Birmingham, Stephen Davis, Beth Marshburn - Bell, and Ann Schooley.

Previous opera theater productions have included Italian and German operas. In an effort to represent all three schools, the French opera "Tales of Hoffmann" was selected for presentation this year.

The opera will be sung in English, translated from the French by opera theater director, Dr. Clyde Hiss.

This year's production will be the most elaborate ever presented in the school of music, including more than 70 original costumes which have been designed and executed by Mrs. Patricia Hiss. Guided by Dr. Hiss, the 34-member company will present a most original and stimulating evening, in this, its most ambitious undertaking.

The opera will be presented February 1 and 2 at 8:00 p.m. in the School of Music Recital Hall. The public is invited. No admission will be charged.

Soprano, Jeanne Smith, a graduate of East Carolina University School of Music, has won the District Metropolitan Opera auditions which were held in Spartanburg, S.C., on January 13.

She will now go to the regional auditions to be held in Atlanta, Ga., on the 9th of February.

Miss Smith now attends the Graduate School of Music at E. C. U. on a fellowship grant. While an undergraduate here, she appeared in several opera theatre productions and in 1967 was both concerto program winner and "Buccanear Queen." Miss Smith will appear as Nicklaus in the opera theatre production, "Tales of Hoffmann."

Tucker's Entire Career At Met

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Tucker, his dresser, the Metropolitan Opera's chief tailor and an interviewer were in the star's dressing room at the Met, simultaneously carrying on a costume fitting and an interview.

Tucker was completely at ease, completely at home, since after all, the Met is his house—his opera home. And he is its foremost American tenor.

His career has been at the Met—no going to Europe to get started, no equal loyalty to another house—in an unbroken line since Jan. 25, 1945.

Tucker, born in Brooklyn and a cantor at 20, obtained an audition with the Met's general manager, Edward Johnson, in 1944. He was hired—as a leading tenor—and made his debut in a major role, Enzo in "La Gioconda." He has been a leading tenor ever since.

On opening night of this season, Tucker sang Alfredo in "La Traviata," his sixth Met opening night.

"This is the opera in which I made my debut. In fact, it's the one and only opera that I sang before making my Met debut. It was at the old Al Jolson Wintergarden—the same spot where I have an apartment today—Seventh Avenue and 59th Street.

"Ever since then, I've matured as they say. I didn't like to say that I've grown into a repertoire, but most of the operas I do—36—I made my debut in

"I've sung over 500 performances with the Met. I think it's record since Caruso.

"I do a new one every year. This year it's "Luisa Miller" with Montserrat Caballe." The first performance of the opera will be Feb. 8, after an absence of 37 years from the Met repertoire.

Tucker introduces Joe Schmidt, the Met's chief tailor, and Johnny Casamassa. He's been my dresser for years. His father Angelo was before him. His father was here 44 years; he dressed Caruso.

PERFECT FAMILY HOUSE — The Orlando, of early American design, uses bricks, boards and battens for strong effect. The house offers a family room with fireplace and built-in book shelves.

'The Orlando', A Fun House For Whole Family

By GERRY BISHOP
A house with a minimum of steps and a maximum of fine house fun is The Orlando.

This week's Associated Architects' home design is 1,660 square feet of Early American one-floor living space.

From the moment you step through the big, well-protected double front doors into the foyer, you know this three-bedroom, house is zoned for an active family.

Mom and dad can entertain friends in the living room and, the youngsters have their own confab going in the family room, while off in a back bedroom, a baby sleeps undisturbed.

Yet both the adults and the youngsters have easy access to the kitchen snack area, and anyone coming the front door can go directly to either group without interrupting the other because of the foyer's link to each area.

This Early American design features brick, boards and battens on the outside, diamond light windows with shutters decorated with large black hinges. A wood fence with post lantern sets aside space for special planting. Inside, the living and dining rooms are separated by turned columns. The family room has a large fireplace. Built-in bookshelves and cabinets take up one whole wall.

Overhead, a beamed ceiling completes the Early American effect and wide glass sliding doors to the outdoor patio bring the beauty of the year's four seasons into the house.

Off to the left of family room is the built-in unitized U-shaped kitchen which opens directly into a large breakfast area which sits in a beautiful bay window. There's direct access to the entire back end of the house can be opened to the yard and the "upstairs" garage provides a huge basement rec area.

A local builder or architect can help modify the plans to suit any special needs.

The plans include an optional stairway to the basement from the laundry area. This would put the laundry room downstairs, and a side entry door opens onto the stair landing.

When The Orlando is built without a basement, the furnace and water heater go in closet between foyer and family room.

The foyer has a large coat closet of its own while the master bedroom, complete with its own shower bath, has two deep closets. The number two bedroom has a walk-in closet, while the third large bedroom has a closet that takes up half of its wall.

The full bath is placed just right to serve two bedrooms and guests.

There's more storage area in the large double garage that attaches to the front of the house and serves as a buffer against the noise and sights of the street.

A wide overhang helps shade the whole house from the sun in summer yet permits the winter sun to come through and help cut heating costs.

Overall, including the garage, The Orlando is 54 feet, 10 inches, by 52 feet, 10 inches.

Use Only The Colors You Like; It's Right

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Do colors frustrate you? Do you have the feeling that you'd like to paint your home a wild color or put offbeat colors on your wall or furniture?

If you are afraid to put your ideas into practice, you are like millions of other people who are perplexed by color, says Harold Schwartz, Pittsburgh-born designer of interior furnishings who has studied art, sculpture, architecture and interior design here and abroad.

"You can get over color fear by using only the colors you like, he explains.

"No one can ever go wrong, if he lets himself go in selecting colors that appeal to him—no matter how many. You go wrong only when you try to use colors that you think should be used.

"Sit down with swatches of colors and say I like this ...

this ... this ... as many as you like." Now—they should look good, he says, unless you are color-blind.

"One should never say, 'I like this color but it isn't fashionable.' Use it if you like it."

People are becoming braver about colors every day, he points out. Color combinations are accepted that one would have thought hideous a decade or so ago. Pink and red has become almost commonplace. Orange combined with shocking pink is a striking combination. Yellow, pink and orange are used together. Bright blues and vivid greens are popular. Brown and black are considered chic.

Schwartz has been surprised by color preferences in some areas of the world. In Paris, he was startled to find that home furnishings buyers prefer muddy colors.

He showed designs in rugs and matching bedspreads that he has made in Spain—vivid shocking pink and white in the striking design for which he is known. The Parisians chose bronzes, purples and other deep tones.

Further north, they could not get the colors too brilliant. Sweden often is associated with pastels but Stockholm buyers selected the brightest colors he had to offer.

"Countries that do not have much sunlight want to bring it into furnishings. They like all the color you can give them. Brussels and Amsterdam enjoy color and in Brussels they use rugs as table coverings, he explains.

Spain, unlike colorful travel posters advertising flamenco dancers and bullfighters, prefers pastel and other soft colors and 18th century design.

Schwartz has designed fabrics, lighting fixtures and is a well-known designer of furniture, credited with introducing the sculptured look, engineered storage and multipurpose furniture.

While on a sabbatical in Spain more than a decade ago, he became interested in Spanish design, concentrating on bedspreads and rugs made on the Jacquard loom. His new interest sparked a trend to the Mediterranean look in the United States. But that fad has had it in his opinion.

His new designs are inspired by periods ranging from early Coptic to space age avant-garde. Design tricks with the Jacquard loom give his spreads a sculptured-to-the-bed look. Schwartz worked on one design for more than two years.

He doesn't feel that he is going out on a limb with strong colors and bold designs. On the contrary, they are snapped up so fast that he has difficulty keeping the supply equal to the demand.

What's New?

By United Press International

Two new products help ease the care of floors that take to waxing. One is a self-contained applicator which eliminates the hands-and-knee waxing. And the other is a self-polishing wax to go with it. The new applicator, nonelectric, holds a 22-ounce bottle of wax, released by pressure on the applicator handle. A plastic foam pad spreads the wax on the floor, without splash or streak, the maker says. It has been designed to wax close to baseboards and walls.

(Bissell, Inc., Grand Rapids, Mich.)

A new dental water pick is non-electric and attaches to the water faucet. It is made of unbreakable plastic and comes with four color-coded picks for each member of the family.

(National Housewares Exhibit, 1130 Merchandise Mart, Chicago.)

A new window shade material permits a room's occupants to look out but keeps others from looking in. Called the "comfort" shade, it is a delicate white lattice open-weave with three-dimensional quality to give a sheer look at windows. The maker says the vinyl shade reduces solar heat, yet maintains visibility and air flow.

(Joanna Western Mills Co., 2141 S. Jefferson St., Chicago)

Now a man-made slate looking much like the quarried product is available. It is a plastic laminate with the cleft configuration of the natural product. The maker says it will not break or chip, is stain and mar resistant and warm to the touch. It is expected to have wide usage in fine furniture, display pieces and accent pieces.

(Nevamar, Enjay Fibers and Laminates Co., Odenton, Md.)

Another pest I have and that I believe is pretty general throughout the state is Florida or Chinese antichoke; also called Rattlesnake weed. It has long white underground runners with small tubers.

Where there is any possibility that the bottoms of the pipe legs might damage flooring materials, use special leg attachments or floor guards.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Question: The posts holding up our porch are beginning to rot. I am making plans to replace them, but need some advice on how to prevent rotting in the future. I intend to apply a wood preservative to the posts, especially at the places where they touch the ground.

Answer: This condition generally is caused by lack of sufficient ventilation underneath the porch. Remove some of the side enclosures and replace them with latticework or screening, being particularly careful to see that there is plenty of cross ventilation. Applying a wood preservative is fine, but it would be a good idea to place the new posts on some kind of masonry bases instead of setting them directly into the ground.

Question: Our plumbing system is sluggish. All my efforts to correct it with a plunger, drain cleaner and auger have accomplished nothing. It has been suggested that I open the cleanout plug in the basement and run the auger down into the soil pipe. Will this work?

Answer: There is no certain way to know whether the suggested method will work, but you would be foolish to take off the cleanout plug if you know nothing about it. You could easily wind up with a flooded basement and an unsanitary condition. You need a plumber if the stoppage is in the soil pipe. Also, if you have a cesspool or septic tank, the trouble may originate there. This would require a more complete treatment than running an auger into the soil pipe.

(You can get Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A simple but useful dining table can be built from a few pieces of lumber and four lengths of ordinary steel pipe.

You can make the table as wide and as long as you want. And you can use any kind of wood you desire. Your choice of wood will depend on whether the table is to be painted or given a clear finish and whether it is to be displayed as is or hidden with a tablecloth.

If you decide on a hardwood top, remember that it is more difficult to cut and work with than softwood. But this need not deter you, since you can get the wood cut to the exact size at a lumberyard.

The top is made by gluing together the edges of six pieces of two-inch lumber, each eight feet long and eight inches wide. Allowing for the fact that the natural width of the lumber is slightly less than the nominal dimensions, this will give you a top about 96-inches long and 45 inches wide, a most sizable dining table indeed. It can, of course, be made as narrow or as short as desired.

Purchase four pieces of 3/4-inch pipe, each threaded on one end, from a hardware store, lumber dealer or plumbing supply house. At the same time, buy four pipe flanges of the proper size. The pipe legs go into these flanges after they and the top have been finished as desired.

One of the transparent finishing materials or paint can be applied to the top after the upper surface, edges and ends are thoroughly sanded. If the legs are to be painted, use a rust inhibitor as an undercoat or use one of the special paints which contain a rust preventative. For a clear finish, a metal lacquer is suggested after the pipe is vigorously polished with steel wool or an abrasive cloth.

There are a number of variations to the procedure for constructing this table. The one described is the easiest for the amateur. One alternative you might want to consider, providing you purchase the pipe legs and flanges from a plumber or someone with the proper plumbing tools, is having the legs permanently attached to the flanges. This will insure connections that will not come loose no matter how often or how roughly the table is handled. Of course, on the minus side, the legs cannot be removed easily if you need to do so.

Accident Survivors Advise Other Drivers

By GUY DARST
BOSTON (UPI)—Want to avoid an automobile accident? Listen to persons who've had a few and lived to tell about it: "What gripes me is the old guy who can't see 10 feet in front of him and sits crunched over the wheel..." "It's the people that don't signal when they turn..." "Women are cutthroats (a woman said that)..." "It isn't bad in the daytime but when everybody is trying to get home after work you don't stand a chance..." "Just last night I was behind this fellow on a two-lane road. Every time a car came the other way, he put on his brakes..."

The grip session was under way in an annex of the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles next to Boston's North Station. It was 9:30 on a Saturday morning and everyone of the eight women and 16 men in the big drab room wanted to be somewhere else.

Given Choice
The state had given each the choice—com or face loss of your license.

What was going on was a unique program of remedial driver education. The registry's computer spit out their names—those with three accidents reported in the last 18 months, of which at least one was "chargeable," or the fault of the driver.

Under the 1966 Federal Highway Act, states are required to work toward improving their drivers or lose 10 percent of federal highway aid money.

States have gone off in different directions but Registrar Richard McLaughlin became the place to start was with accident repeaters.

The only similar program is in Washington, D.C., where motorists with repeated violations—not accident repeaters—must attend six hours of lectures. There are four two-hour sessions, given Saturday or the same night each week for four weeks.

First comes a test of vision—the familiar chest and checks of depth perception, color vision and peripheral vision.

Inspector Daniel Dunn, who tested eyes that Saturday morning, found that eight of the 24 had less than perfect vision. Following the eye tests, the class takes a 20-question, 5-minute test of the rules of the road and state motor vehicle laws. The tests are ungraded but used as a guide by the instructor.

Then comes the gripes. The instructor, Bernard Sullivan, deputy director of the program, begins by asking, "Why are you here?" and follows up by inquiring, "What causes accidents?"

The class that recent Saturday reached the consensus that "bad attitude" caused most accidents and agreed that just about all the examples cited by the students could come under that heading.

The Hostility
"This is where the hostility comes out—the 'Why am I here? The accidents weren't my fault' we hear so often. Actually, I don't know the circumstances of each case," Sullivan said.

The meat of the course comes after the griping.

The most common accident—rear-end collision—is discussed first. Film strips are preferred to films because they can be stopped and "What's wrong with this picture?" questions asked by the instructor.

Then come pedestrian accidents and accidents where a vehicle runs off the road.

Quizzes are given in the second and third sessions and a final exam in the last. Each student has to fill out an accident report on one of his accidents as a registry inspector would do, and tell how the accident could have been avoided.

"It's too early to tell what the results are from this program," said Deputy Registrar Eugene Jo Fanning. "But we'll be keeping an eye on these drivers to see if they're ever involved in the same type of accidents they've been having. If not, we think we'll have achieved something."

Then he gave his own favorite gripe: "High-speed lane switching. It's a wonder some of these guys aren't dead."

That Was Some Prize He Won

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—So a 13-year-old boy writes his name and address on a coupon from a model kit, sends it in and forgets about it. Time passes. Then back comes a 3,500-pound spacecraft, 19 feet long.

It's a full-scale mockup of a Gemini spacecraft and won't fly, so he has given it to the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry. Besides, young Robbie Hanshaw's home isn't big enough for it.

His consolation, also from winning the contest sponsored by the model manufacturer, consists of a guitar, an assortment of model kits—and a five-year supply of ice cream.

CO-STAR
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Italy's Ava Ninchi signed with Universal to star with George Peppard in "House of Cards," shooting in Rome.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR J. EDGAR HOOVER

Why are you in favor of more stringent gun laws?
—P. J. Neumann, Quincy, Ill.

● Because strong measures must be taken to protect the public. The use of firearms in crime is one of the most serious problems in our country today. In 1966 more citizens were killed or assaulted with guns in American streets and homes than were killed in battle during the entire Korean conflict.

FOR HANS GUDEGAST

of "The Rat Patrol"
I heard you entered show business in a most unusual manner. True?—B. M., Lancaster, Pa.

● During the summer of 1960, a fellow student at Montana State University and I conquered the "River of No Return," Idaho's Salmon River, covering the 420 miles both ways in a 15-foot aluminum boat powered by a 40-horsepower motor. It was the first time it was ever done. As a result, I went to Los Angeles to attend a press conference, settled there, and joined the Santa Monica Playhouse.

FOR PIERRE SALINGER

Are you a part owner of a pro-football team and a pro-basketball team?
—Elmer Starke, Petaluma, Calif.

● Yes. I hold interests in the San Diego Chargers of the American Football League and the Seattle Supersonics of the National Basketball Association.

FOR VIRGINIA GRAHAM

of "Girl Talk"
Are the topics for discussion on your show pre-arranged?—Mrs. Marcia H. Phillips, Gastonia, N.C.

● The guests have some idea of the subjects for discussion, but the actual conversation is unrehearsed.

FOR SEN. ROBERT F. KENNEDY

Are you upset by the many imitators of your speech and mannerisms?
—C. P. Miscavich, Los Angeles, Calif.

● No. I think many of them are quite funny. Besides, I learn new mannerisms.

FOR DON KLOSTERMAN,

Gen. Man., Houston Oilers
Why are there no Negro quarterbacks in pro football?—Clarence O. Hollis, Atlantic City, N.J.

● There have been a number of Negro quarterbacks—rookies Willie Thrower, Hank Washington, and Jim Kearney, for example—who have tried out with different pro teams. Unfortunately, none made the grade. Since these boys were drafted as quarterbacks, the clubs felt they had their chance to make the team in that position.

FOR CLAIRE BLOOM

How did you and your husband Rod Steiger meet, and was it love at first sight?—L. D., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● We met when posing for publicity pictures for "Rashomon," a play in which we costarred. It was hardly love at first sight, though—it was more like mutual indifference. During "Rashomon" I found Rod wasn't so bad. In fact, I began finding him a pretty nice fellow. We were married within the year.

FOR GILBERT HIGHET, author and professor of Greek and Latin, Columbia Univ.

What would you say to those who claim that Francis Bacon actually wrote the works attributed to Shakespeare?—Dorothea Kent, Cincinnati, Ohio

● Such people must be unable to read. Anyone who has read both Bacon and Shakespeare knows that Bacon was incapable of making the many foolish blunders in matters of learning that Shakespeare committed. He also was incapable of producing such marvelous flights of poetry and imagination.

FOR BOB NEWHART

You use the telephone for most of your comedy material. Do you personally use the telephone a lot?—J. M., Waco, Texas

● I do use the telephone constantly—but that's not the reason the telephone bits were created. I was part of a comedy team once, and when the team broke up, I needed a straight man. The telephone has turned out to be a great substitute, and it doesn't get half the salary.

WHAT ^{IN} THE WORLD!

Silent Movie Around Hollywood, they're saying that "The Silent Treatment" will be either the sensation of the year—or the biggest bomb. It's the first full-length silent film since the good old days. "I've got something Chaplin and Valentino didn't have, though," says its star, comic Marty Ingels. "I'm speechless in technicolor." For insurance, he also has 21 name stars, including Jerry Lewis, doing "bit" parts. "Some of the scenes are a little daring," Marty admits. "We may have to advertise it, 'For Adult Lip Readers Only!'"

Marty Ingels

Upstaged Though he's now a recording star, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen hasn't learned to keep show-business hours. He left a recent political gathering at 11:30 because it was past his bedtime. Perry Como, who was emceeding the entertainment, called out after the orator: "I wouldn't walk out on one of your albums!"

The First Flower Children Where do flower children come from? It's possible they were invented by author Beni Montessoro. In 1953 he published a children's book, "The Witches of Venice," all about two children born of a flowering plant. They had trouble with adults because they were "different." "Today's flower children are like that," says Montessoro. "They are young people who have to fight against being devoured by the Establishment." Beni's own flower children continue their adventures in "I Saw a Ship A-Sailing," the first psychedelic Mother Goose.

Psychedelic Mother Goose

Cost of Living A good loaf of bread now sells for about two cents an ounce, but if you look around the supermarket, you can find ready-mix fruit pie for less than one and a half cents an ounce. Maybe Marie Antoinette really had something when she said, "Let them eat cake!"

Down with Decay Phosphate may be the next chemical to enter the war on tooth decay. In Houston, Texas, 500 school children were given a breakfast cereal fortified with phosphate. At the end of two years, they had 30 percent fewer cavities.

Bonus Year The ladies can expect to live a year longer than they used to. The National Center for Health Statistics says their average life expectancy has risen to 74.7 years. Male longevity is up only about one-third of a year and is now put at 67.6 years. Sorry about that, men.

Will De Gaulle Use

He has been attacking the U.S. at every opportunity, and next month at Grenoble

IN THE NEXT few weeks, Charles de Gaulle is going to take advantage of a unique opportunity to stagger French and international public opinion and, once again, cause consternation in the diplomatic world.

This is a guess, but the situation is so predictable that statesmen already are uneasy. The occasion will arise when he opens the winter Olympics in Grenoble, France—the last Olympics over which he will preside as President of France.

To understand why this particular occasion is so dangerous, one must understand two themes, normally unrelated but now subtly intertwined.

One is de Gaulle's genius and growing relish for calculated indiscretion—his constant attacks on American foreign policy, for example. The other is the special circumstances surrounding France's part in the games themselves. Statesmen, both in Paris and abroad, have recognized how explosive the combination is, yet they can do nothing but wait.

Robert Aron, one of France's most distinguished historians, has said of de Gaulle: "He wears a mask, but it is to hide his lack of confidence. He has invented a manner for himself that makes him seem most self-confident when he feels it least. Since de Gaulle never moves in a straight line, one never knows what he is doing until he has finished."

This is one reason why General de Gaulle has such a passion for wildly enthusiastic audiences. He needs the reassurance and, to make them more enthusiastic still, he sometimes says the first thing that comes into his head. Nor is it anything new. His first and bloodiest blunder occurred in June, 1958, shortly after he came to power, and I was present to witness it.

It was in Mostaganem, Algeria, in the middle of the Algerian war. The Europeans there had a slogan which they repeated endlessly. "Algerie Française" or "French Algeria." It was daubed on walls, chanted, and even sounded on car klaxons by three short blasts and two long. It was a kind of declaration of faith.

Charles de Gaulle had been brought back to power with the hope that he could settle the Algerian war and keep Algeria as a part of France. His reception was hysterical, and there were thousands of Moslems as well as Europeans in the audience. They even uttered a new chant,

"Au pouvoir de Gaulle" ("de Gaulle to power"). De Gaulle loved every minute of it. "We are all Frenchmen here," he said, to thunderous cheers. At the end he cried, "Long live Algeria!" More cheers. "Long live France!" Greater cheers. It could and should have ended there, but then de Gaulle capped it with the ultimate, "Long live French Algeria," and there was pandemonium.

Foreign correspondents could not believe their ears. Unlike the crowds, they could see the situation with detachment and realized that de Gaulle had endorsed with his own name a blank check called French Algeria. Almost everyone agreed that he had not intended to utter that deadly slogan, but had been carried away by the crowd.

He never uttered the expression again, but the damage was done. The war went on for another six years, accumulating bitterness until de Gaulle declared Algeria independent. Then a million Europeans fled Algeria for France with hatred in their hearts for the man they believed had betrayed them in two words.

In the elections of 1965 and 1967, de Gaulle and the Gaullist party lost heavily. In the 1965 presidential election, de Gaulle had to endure the humiliation of running a second time because he did not get an absolute majority on the first ballot. In 1967 the Gaullist party kept its majority by an eyelash. Far from sobering the government of General de Gaulle and his prime minister, Georges Pompidou, the administration became more arrogant and is ruling by decree.

The result has been that there are no more cheering crowds in France to stir de Gaulle's blood. He makes fewer and fewer visits to French cities and keeps his public display for tv, on which his performances are masterful.

But the crowds reappear when he makes his trips abroad—and so he came to Quebec. Once more he saw the cheering mobs, and he shouted, "Long live free Quebec!" Such an untimely remark angered not only English-Canadians who died by the thousands at Vimy Ridge in World War I and at Dieppe in World War II for a free France but also French-Canadian intellectuals like Mayor Drapeau of Montreal, who understands that the remark did incalculable damage to relations between the English and the French in Canada.

It was summed up naively but neatly by the 14-year-old son of a French author, who was visiting the Expo and staying with the French-Canadian friends of his father. He wrote home: "Since General de Gaulle's visit, I have never in my life heard so much bad language." And he was not referring to the provincial French-Canadian accent!

No one really knows if de Gaulle said "Long live free Quebec" as a part of deliberate policy or in the heat of the moment, but since he said it, it has now become part of official French policy. De Gaulle thus has fiercely alienated himself and his government from the Canadians, as he already had done from the Americans, British, and Germans.

Le Monde, France's most influential newspaper, in a remarkably savage editorial, attacked de Gaulle's "senile glee" in stirring up excited crowds. Historian Aron, while praising de Gaulle, said, "He is a man who listens to himself when he writes but does not always listen to himself when he speaks." That was written before the lamentable Quebec incident.

What has all this got to do with the Grenoble Olympics? To answer that, one must, for the moment, embark on a complete change of subject and study the current position of France in the world of sport.

Athletically, France is a third-rate nation in a state of deep crisis, financial and moral. In her most important sport, soccer, she is rated one of the weakest countries in Europe, capable of beating very few opponents. In tennis, golf, and sailing, she goes nowhere. She has not had a world-class boxer since 1949, when Marcel Cerdan was killed in a plane crash.

Her much-vaunted athletes, such as the temperamental track star Michel Jazy and the excellent swimmer Kiki Caron failed lamentably in the Tokyo Olympics.

In track and swimming, which are the only summer Olympic contests that matter, the French did not win a single gold medal. Such was the poverty of France's Tokyo performance that the newspapers played up as a triumph France's single gold medal—for horse jumping.

France's rugby team is good, but the only important rugby countries are France, the British Isles, South Africa, New Zealand, and Australia. The rest of the world couldn't care less. Even in the one sport France should dominate, bicycle racing, she doesn't.

So the sporting pages make depressing reading. French sports fans want their teams to win as much as other people, and they suffer from a profound, potentially dangerous inferiority complex. They have, however, one bright spot—skiing expertise.

Here, the French are supreme. There are the two fabulous Goitschel sisters, Christine and Marielle, who are constant winners of international trophies and whose tomboy antics enchant the French public.

There is the extraordinary Jean-Claude Killy, whose practice of meditation as part of his training is widely copied. Daredevil slalom racer Guy Perillat is the idol of French youth. In 1967, for example, the world downhill racing championship was won by Killy, at an average speed of 64 miles an hour. Frenchmen also finished third, fourth, and fifth.

It is impossible to exaggerate how utterly the French bestride the snow slopes. Their names, their manner, their very uniforms—all lend to an air of French superiority.

But what has this to do with Charles de Gaulle's psychological problems?

Only this: that the man and the occasion are meeting. The politics of General de Gaulle from the beginning has been to present France in the most powerful light possible. Usually he has been forced to do it by his own personality and will power and at the expense of other nations, particularly the U.S., because, in terms of real power, France is weaker than West Germany, Japan, or Great Britain, let alone the superpowers.

But suddenly, as de Gaulle rises to speak, everything he loves will fuse together for the very first time in his eight-year reign. There will be huge crowds—French crowds, not French-Canadian or Polish crowds. The fact that they will be cheering for their skiing heroes rather than for de Gaulle will not matter. They will be assembling to celebrate and to praise the heroes of the one sport in which they are unrivaled in the world. At the same time, they will roar away the searing sense of inferiority they generally feel toward other countries in the world of sport.

There will be enthusiasm, power, and the taste of victory—French victory—in the air, and de Gaulle's nostrils are hypersensitive to such an atmosphere. He will not miss an opportunity like that. He also has come to know that Americans win every time he rises to address a volatile audience, and he enjoys the sensation.

No one has the slightest idea of what he will say. Most probably he does not know himself. Possibly he will not know until the moment he mounts the podium.

Of one thing, however, we can be fairly sure—we are not going to like it. ♦

ENTERTAINMENT

Whatever Happened to Vince Edwards?

Vince Edwards—the new James Bond?

FIVE YEARS ago, as the star of tv's popular "Ben Casey" series, Vince Edwards was at the top of his profession. He commanded a weekly audience of nearly 32 million viewers and a salary in excess of $250,000 a year.

But then the ratings slowly went downhill, and the show was cancelled. Almost overnight, the muscular, 36-year-old actor, all but dropped from sight.

Why? The answer is complex. First, most actors who make it big on tv rarely establish themselves in movies. Second, many top producers refuse to consider tv actors on the same level with movie actors. "When the series went off the air, I did receive some movie offers," Vince admits. "But all in inexpensive films."

Edwards feels he deserved a better break from producers since, before going into tv, he had made a number of movies, most slightly above "B" quality.

Vince began his acting career in a strange way. On a summer vacation from college (he attended on an athletic scholarship), he worked as a lifeguard at a mountain resort. Part of the job called for him to help in the presentation of the dinner show. The acting bug bit him.

After a stint at the University of Hawaii, Vince enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. "In those days," he says, "I wore the dirtiest T-shirt of all the dirty T-shirt actors. A gimmick? No, it was all I could afford."

His first show-business job came in the Broadway musical, "High Button Shoes." Movie producer Hal Wallis saw him and hired him.

Edwards now admits that he was hired not so much for his acting ability but as a threat to Burt Lancaster, with whom Wallis was having trouble. Finally he was fired and joined the army of Hollywood hopefuls.

Edwards was signed by Columbia in 1955, a period which he now calls "my low point. I had very little to do, and I just got by." Then came the break in tv.

When the show was dropped, Edwards was convinced that the movie people would be lining up at his door. He waited for the right roles, but all that was offered were roles he considered "beneath" him.

Unable to get choice film roles, Vince turned to the night-club circuit as a singer. He even got rid of the moody scowl, his "Ben Casey" trademark. "That was last year's bag," he confesses.

It took more than a year to land a role in an important movie, "The Devil's Brigade." But finally a real break came, producer Irwin Allen signed him to play Charles Hood, a Bogart-type character, in Columbia's "Hammerhead." Vince is the only "name" in the cast.

He is more relaxed—even smiling. He feels that the Charles Hood role will do for him what James Bond did for Sean Connery and what Matt Helm did for Dean Martin. Dean is Vince's idol. "I met my second wife (actress Linda Foster) at Dean's home." (Vince's first marriage to actress Kathy Kersh ended in divorce.)

Vince is modeling his career after Dean's, too. He hopes to continue the night-club tours while making movies and to step up guest shots on tv variety shows. His first commitment after "Hammerhead" is a guest appearance on Martin's show.

Whatever happened to Vince Edwards? He has been away for a while—but he's back now.

HOW TO TURN YOUR CHILD INTO A CLASSROOM WIZARD

EUGENE M. SCHWARTZ AND HIS SON MICHAEL

When a father worries about the kind of education his son is getting in school—and when that father is also president of a publishing company that specializes in modern learning methods—then sparks really fly.

For the past eight years, Gene Schwartz has worked with some of the country's leading pioneers in deuto-learning, the modern science of learning how to learn. As writer, editor or publisher, he has been instrumental in bringing to the American public, books on Memory Improvement, Executive Training Techniques, High-Speed Learning, Creative Thinking, Problem-Solving, Time Organization and many more.

But why not adapt these incredibly powerful learning breakthroughs to the problems faced by children of all ages in their classrooms? This is the goal of this book! "The job was too important to leave to someone else," Mr. Schwartz says. "I couldn't rest till I did it."

Here at last is your chance to make such an overwhelming difference in your child's performance in school — in as little as five short minutes of your time every day — that the teacher may actually call you up to see what happened!

Let me explain! I don't care whether your child is six years old or twenty—boy or girl—in grade school, high school or college! It makes no difference how difficult it is for that child to concentrate today . . . how poor his memory may be . . . how much a prisoner he is of crippling mental habits . . . how terrified he may be of mathematics, or grammar, or social studies, or even the hardest science course!

I believe that your child's mind is working today at only HALF its true power—simply because he has never been taught the right way to make his subjects half-teach themselves!

Simply because he has never been shown the few simple secrets of Speed Reading, that are taught in almost every university in the country today—and that let him flash through the printed page TWICE AS FAST as he can read today—with absolute understanding of every word!

Simply because he doesn't know the right way to feed his mind mathematical problems—so clearly and logically that those problems HALF-SOLVE THEMSELVES before he even touches them!

Simply because he doesn't know the right way to prepare for his tests—so completely that he actually knows as many as FOUR OUT OF FIVE of the questions that his teacher must ask him on that test, RIGHT DOWN TO THE VERY WORDS THAT THE TEACHER WILL USE TO PHRASE THOSE QUESTIONS!

Power-Studying Is A Trick! Your Child Can Master It In 5 Minutes A Day!

Yes! Speed-reading is a trick! Problem solving is a trick! Burning facts, figures, whole lessons into your child's mind is a trick! And, above all, taking the sting out of tests and making them half-answer themselves IS A TRICK! Top grades can be made to order; your child doesn't have to be a genius to get them!

The real secret of coaxing top grades out of your child is as simple as teaching him to tie his shoelace! You can do it in five minutes a day, SIMPLY BY SHOWING HIM THE RIGHT STUDY TECHNIQUES! Study techniques perfected by private-school teachers, professional tutors, writers of speed-teaching adult-education courses all over America!

Study techniques that you and your child probably never dreamed existed! So powerful that I'll prove them to you, without your risking a penny. Here's how.

After A Single Night His Teacher May Marvel At His Improvement!

Let me send you—at my risk—one of the most fascinating books you have ever read. When this book arrives, set aside just a few minutes. Get ready to see the incredible performance your child can give you ONCE YOU GIVE HIM THE PROPER MENTAL TOOLS!

What you are going to do, in this very first weekend, is this. You are going to make three simple tests with your child, each one of which will show him such a thrilling spurt in his ability to learn, that he may actually cry out with joy!

First, turn to page 87. Read this page alone—nothing more. Then ask your child to read to himself one page in any of his books. Time him. And then, simply take an ordinary pencil and place it between his teeth as we show you! NOW ask him to read another page! Time him again! AND THRILL TO THE SUDDEN BURST OF SPEED YOU HAVE LIBERATED, AS HIS EYES FLASH OVER THAT PRINTED PAGE!

and uncertainty—make recitations sparkle—think instantly on his feet—build thought upon thought correctly and dramatically—reason logically—persuade others to his view—stand out head and shoulders above the rest of the class!

AND DOES HE FREEZE UP IN TESTS? FORGET MATERIAL HE KNEW PERFECTLY THE NIGHT BEFORE? RUN OUT OF TIME AND LEAVE HALF THE QUESTIONS UNANSWERED!

Then get ready for the revelation of your life starting on page 195! Just take one look at this complete armory of test-passing techniques—that remove all trace of nervousness and tension—that take all the trickery out of those double-meaning test questions—that practically pop right answers into his mind to even the hardest test questions, the instant he needs them!

Read It At My Risk!

What I've described to you on this page is only a small sampling of a revolutionary new book, HOW TO DOUBLE YOUR CHILD'S GRADES IN SCHOOL!

Here at last is a practical, easy-to-read book on improving your child's performance in class that really works! It is meant for every child—6 or 20—boy or girl!

It brings that child—overnight—Incredibly powerful new study techniques that he probably never even dreamed existed before! Study techniques perfected by private-school teachers, by professional tutors, by writers of speed-teaching adult-education courses all over America!

Yes! Rapid-study techniques, that produce twice as much homework, in half the time! Flash-reading techniques, that pick out the CORE of an assignment, as fast as your child's eyes flash over the page!

Word-building techniques, that can double your child's vocabulary in a few short weeks! Instant-problem-solving techniques, that give him the answer to "jaw-breaker" math problems as easy as 1-2-3.

And—above all—a complete armory of test-passing techniques—that can literally DOUBLE the grades of your child in every one of his classes in school! That can turn D's and C's into B's or even A's! That can turn 60's or 70's or 80's into 80's or 90's or even 100's! THAT CAN UNLOCK THE TRUE, NATURAL ABILITY OF YOUR CHILD, THAT IS BEING TRAGICALLY HALF-WASTED TODAY! AND PUT HIM ON THE ROAD TO THE COLLEGE AND FUTURE OF HIS CHOICE—TODAY!

The price of this revolutionary new book is only $5.98. But you prove it at our risk for thirty days! It must do everything we say—or simply return it for every cent of your money back immediately!

READ THESE THRILLING TESTIMONIALS:

From Reviews and Letters Received from Teachers and Private Tutors

"I am a retired teacher—who, after 35 years as a regular in Michigan, continues as a substitute and tutor . . . I like your book for selfish reasons primarily! It vindicates my 45 years of practice! Your ideas belong IN THE SCHOOLS.

This summer I tutored a boy who had failed in Math and earned a D (70 or less) in English in the eighth grade. He was accustomed to considering himself "stupid." This fall, he is not concerned with passing—he is going after A's! We have a new boy on the way, thanks to you."

S.R.W., Orlando, Florida
"I am an educator of thirty (30) years standing. I recently purchased a copy of your book. I found it excellent, with many fine suggestions for improving not only my child's learning, but my own as well. In fact I thought so highly of the book I gave my copy to a friend as a gift. May I order another copy to keep as a permanent reference on my desk."

Member of Board of Education of world's largest city.

"I'm convinced that any parent could take this book, and measurably improve his child's grades."

G. R. Benson, Jr., High School Art Teacher, Madjen, N.J.

"Mr. Schwartz has done an excellent job . . . His book is easy to read. He arranges our job systematically, and spells it out in detail. We race through the book saying "This is a good idea," or "Now there's an idea that will work."

"The author has told us exactly what the child must do to improve his grades. He pulls no punches . . . He has spelled out in plain English the techniques that will turn the trick in improving the pupil's grades. There's no doubt about it."

From SCHOLASTIC Magazine
"This book, lucidly and excitedly, because you feel a sense of optimism as you read, teaches the parents how to aid their children to achieve academic success by proper study, memory, and test-taking techniques.

"With early preparation in the areas of English and Mathematics, the child will be fully prepared to take the College Board Exams successfully and to move on toward his chosen career."

Bernard Halperin, Teacher-Counselor, Newark, N.J.

"Challenging in its concept and teaching methods. Well worth the small investment."

Private Tutor, Wareham, Massachusetts
I feel that the strongest part of the book is the art of intelligent listening. We have repeatedly emphasized the need of "active listening" in our program, but have not been able to employ as clear-cut rules as those presented by Mr. Schwartz. Personally, I am quite anxious to expose students to these steps, since I feel that grades in lecture courses should improve.

The reading and mathematical areas of our remedial set-up are handled by specially trained people. I have shared the book with as many as are available this summer, and they have agreed with me on its value. From our discussions has come a recommendation that several copies be purchased to supplement materials used in study improvement courses.

Head of Psychology of prominent business school in Boston

From Parents Like Yourself (and their children):

"No one has been able to really produce a concrete solution until now. My mother-in-law sent us this book. I only received it today and I have only read one third of it but it just sounds like the answer to a prayer. I am only sorry we did not have it years ago." A.P.S., Tampa, Florida

"It is well written, well thought out and beautifully organized . . . It is without question, the logical approach!"

Mrs. L.H.K. III, New York City
"It made me aware of how important school is. I had been a hard worker but I did not know what was important . . . This was the smartest thing I ever did. It looked like I was going to come in second every time—not any more."

Christopher W. (15 years old), Smithtown, New York
"Anyone can understand this book. I am delighted and will recommend it to all my friends. I only wish I could have read it ten years ago."

Mrs. R.D.S., Portland Oregon
"I got this book to improve myself in school and what I have read is worth every cent."

H.L., (16 years old), Detroit, Michigan
". . . well organized, fast reading, first book I've read which offers concrete ideas about improving the pupil's grades."

Mrs. C.W.W., Belleville, Michigan

FASHIONS

In the bend of a swaying palm, a Robby Len abstract print suit debuts in brilliant white and brown cotton. It features a mini-skirt coverup.

SWIMSUITS: PRINTS THAT GO POW!

By ROSALYN ABBREVAYA

With exposed skin an evident part of the American landscape, it's refreshing to report that the latest swimwear designs are covering women up! But lest girl watchers despair, a number of suits are taking the plunge in back.

Expected to make the resort and summer scenes: suits in bright, bold prints in styles including one-piece maillots (usually with low backs and halter-effect necklines), new tunic designs, and suits in two parts that sometimes sport coverups.

Because of improved print technology, you'll see new color combinations that are frankly eye-stopping (see cover) and a crisper approach to the monochromatic look of white paired with fashion's darlings, mocha or black. Prediction: if you've never worn a print swimsuit, on land or sea, this season's crop just may prove irresistible.

PHOTOGRAPHED IN JAMAICA BY WILLIAM BENEDICT Cover: Swimsuit by Gottex

The slimming tunic suit will make news this season. This one by Sea B is in a gay Banlon multi-print.

A stunningly etched print maillot, from Catalina, makes the scene at Dunn's River Falls in Ocho Rios.

Now—Developed by Over 1000 Arthritis Specialists and Doctors Working Together—a Needed and Medically-Approved Program to Overcome Arthritis!

Arthritis can be successfully treated. You can recover. Buoyant, pain-free living should be yours. A new 5-way practical plan of positive action causes pain and disability to go.

By William S. Kitay
Medical Science Reporter

If you've had Arthritis for years, have just had first twinges, are susceptible through heredity—or if you have a loved one who suffers from it, here's news.

Scientists have revised their viewpoint on Arthritis and what you can do about it. Science now knows that there is no universal sure-cure miracle pill or drug for Arthritis — and probably never will be.

The plain scientific truth is that you can recover from Arthritis with simpler means. Techniques now available can calm the pain, the activity of Arthritis, even lessen the damage.

What Researchers Discovered

A simple home treatment can get you back on your feet, give you new independence and return you to useful living.

It stops pain, reduces inflammation and swelling, gives greater use of your joints. Simply, it prevents or minimizes the misery and crippling of Arthritis.

It is a 5-Way method developed by over 1000 Arthritis specialists and general practitioners working together. It's surprisingly effective in even severe, complicated cases. Often it stops short pain and disability of NEW Arthritis sufferers—virtually as first symptoms begin.

ARTHRITIS DANGER QUIZ!

- Will the juice of one lemon in hot water before breakfast relieve Arthritis? Do special diets help? How does constipation affect Arthritis? Do laxatives help?
- How about Vitamin B-12, Vitamin C and orange juice, orange juice and cod liver oil, lemon juice and baking soda, honey, cream of tartar, multiple vitamins, vegetable juices, food supplements, mineral waters, and herb medicine? Does reducing help?
- Doctors and scientists of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation have investigated virtually any remedy obtainable. You get a full report with the 5-Way plan.
- Will oils be absorbed by your skin and help lubricate a stiff joint? Does iodine help? Are dry skin or scalp or ear symptoms indications of Arthritis? Does how you eat affect how your body builds bones with calcium? Does Vitamin D stimulate the Adrenal glands and ease Arthritis? Are linaments as effective as heat lamps?
- What about a no-meat diet—or meat 3 times daily? No smoking or 3 cigars daily, sleeping with windows open—or closed? Or sleeping on the floor? Do vibrating machines help? Or health belts?
- Does curling up comfortably in bed relax—or cripple? Will a pillow under your knees when asleep give needed rest—or endanger your ability to walk? When can a small pillow under your head help—and when HARM?
- Will climbing stairs strengthen knees, feet, hips affected—or harm them? Will sitting in one spot avoid using painful knee and save more pain and stiffness—or increase chance of deformity? Should you keep covers off feet? Are long automobile rides good for you? Each year countless people worsen their own Arthritis—unnecessarily. Many give themselves pain—some cripple themselves for life—simply because—they don't know—or tragically believe they are helping and relieving their Arthritis.
- You get a blunt report in 5-Way plan described here. The misinformation, confusion, claims and counter claims and ignorance about Arthritis are cleared up. You get the truth about, and how to recognize and avoid, quack cures, "sure cures" and fake remedies.

Why Suffer Needlessly

How often have you done your work with arthritic pain stealing your energy and dulling your efforts? Or has it progressed even further, and you've looked with sinking heart at your hot, swollen joints and twisted fingers—actually brushed tears from your eyes because you became so dependent on others' kindness?

A remarkable organization—endorsed to do the job—has banded together the greatest medical drive in Arthritic history—to find the truth about—and OVERCOME ARTHRITIS!

Virtually every conceivable method to treat Arthritis has been investigated. Folk remedies, fake cures, cure-alls, wild hopes of medical science for new drugs—anything promising even alleviating relief, however, unorthodox, has been studied. Over 1000 doctors and scientists joined in. If any method worked, it was retested.

The frauds, the fakes, the false hopes were shown up. Full facts on new medicine—side effects—disadvantages—withdrawal—effects in different situations were frankly faced. The work goes on—searching for the miracle not yet found.

The Simple Truth

But the quickest, surest, safest methods yet found—when again and again proven in different situations—have been included in the 5-Way plan to give you greater relief from aches and pain, greater use of joints, faster resumption of activities.

Whatever form of Arthritis, however complicated or intensive, whatever age and arthritic condition, the flexible 5-Way plan adapts to help.

Here are the most effective techniques in single areas, around knee joint, shoulder, ankle, back of neck—techniques to improve circulation in your entire body.

Feel the Improvement—and Say "Yes" to Life Again

See and feel at home your 5-Way plan. Start your body on the way to painfree, normal living. Feel tight joints rest, relax, free up. Feel muscles tied in knots become more supple. Feel body tension ease, aches and pains, soreness, muscle spasms be relieved. Feel muscle tendons soften and stretch. Feel your body's full breathing range permitted again. Feel strength of needed muscles increase.

As you return full motion and range to joints, you're preventing and reducing chance of crippling. You're saving corrective action later. Because you have found the full facts about Arthritis and what to do about it, you've been restoring motion, strength and power to stiffened, weakened joints, increasing the range of joints, helping prevent weakening and deterioration of essential muscles important for walking, climbing stairs and getting in and out of chairs.

You've gained surprising independence from disabilities and you're feeling better than you have in years. You say "YES" to life again!

5-Way Plan in Book Form

The entire plan is now published in one easy-to-refer-to volume. You just use the information you need. What kind of Arthritis do you have? Rheumatoid to Osteo Arthritis—they're here (covering 95% of Arthritis cases) including Rheumatic Fever, Infective Arthritis, Gouty Arthritis, Shoulder and Hand Syndrome and Traumatic Arthritis—PLUS—the RELATED DISORDERS of Rheumatism, Bursitis, Tendonitis, Psychogenic Rheumatism — even Fibrositis, Fascitis, Tensosyvititis, and Myositis.

Get the facts about the Arthritis that strikes 10 men for each woman—and another kind that strikes 10 women for each man—the Arthritis most past 40 eventually get to some degree—the kind that attacks rugged outdoor men—and another kind that attacks thin, tense, intellectual types—the Arthritis that's the most common cause of heart disease under 40 and often affects children, and how best to minimize heart damage from it—Arthritis a vigorous cough makes painfully worse—a kind involving the upper spine arriving with headache, earache, sore throat, neuritis pains in arms, or stiffness in neck.

And more! The most ignored warning signals of Arthritis and what to do when you first spot them. Facts you should know about aspirin, gold salts, prednisone, cortisone hydrocortisone.

What food disorders can do to Arthritis and what you can do about it. The truth about Arthritic corsets and spine braces. What almost every patient first suffering from chronic Arthritis does wrongly that can cause deformity—unnecessarily.

Amazing 6-Months Guarantee! Available To Anyone

Any doctor, any arthritis sufferer, anyone susceptible to Arthritis, any family member or friend who wants to help may accept the amazing offer below.

It is not a 24 hour miracle cure. There is none. It's a way to help yourself and your doctor to overcome Arthritis, stop Arthritis, relieve pain and misery, restore action to crippled limbs, and give back normal, pain free living.

Only if after looking over the book and 5-Way plan for 10 full days, you're convinced you can be helped, is there any cost. Otherwise, simply return within the ten days for no cost. And if you keep the book for its low cost—if at any time within six months thereafter you—or your doctor—have any doubts of what it has done for you—if in any way it does not do what reading this page has led you to expect, simply return for full refund. Could anything be fairer?

Microbombs: New Weapon in the War Against Cancer

By JAMES C. G. CONNIFF

THE 19-YEAR-OLD premedical student knew what was wrong: he had cancer.

X rays showed it had spread to six locations in his right lung. In time, the cancer would kill him.

Yet the day after he received a new kind of treatment with radioactive plastic microspheres only 15 microns in diameter (one micron is 1/25,000 of an inch), he went directly from the hospital to class.

Under local anesthesia, through a thin, flexible, hollow tube called a catheter, the surgeon had embedded the tiny beads in the student's lung blood-supply network, concentrating them carefully at each malignant site to deliver heavy radiation bombardment from within.

Ordinarily, such implants might mean a touch of radiation sickness in the form of nausea. But the young man's doctor reports he has had no such discomfort. Moreover, he has less trouble breathing now and enjoys a normal blood count.

Such unusually good results are not predictable as yet and are far from routine. But the lucky young man is by no means an isolated case.

Medical pioneers here and abroad have been surgically implanting these tiny yttrium-90 (an isotope of a rare earth) microspheres without fanfare for several years. The treatment has helped to relieve pain in an impressive number of cases by temporarily reversing tumor growth and destroying cancerous tissue—at no risk to healthy parts of the organ.

By painlessly anchoring the Y-90 microspheres in tumor blood-supply systems, the research surgeons have forestalled death from liver, brain, lung, and other cancers for up to three years.

The dramatic new approach is safer and cheaper than any other irradiation method and is every bit as effective.

But doctors stress that it is not a cure for cancer nor does it necessarily promise to become one. It is simply an ingenious form of holding action which has not been available before.

There never has been anything quite like Y-90 microbombs. A yttrium-90 isotope is permanently bonded to each tiny plastic sphere, and there is no danger of it breaking off and migrating along the blood stream to do harm in other regions of the body.

Y-90 microbombs have two advantages that cancer radiotherapy so far has lacked: 1) Unlike implants of radon needles and capsules, they are so minute that they bed down easily in the smallest links of the tumor's local blood supply (arterioles); 2) From that site the individual atmosphere has a radiation bombardment range of at most eight millimeters (about one-third of an inch).

For the first time, it has become possible to bomb just the cancer with no risk to the organ or surrounding tissue. Previously, the hazard to healthy tissue had put many cancers beyond the reach of radiotherapy. Y-90 gives off none of the gamma rays that make other anticancer isotopes dangerous and has a half-life of only 64 hours. It then becomes quite stable.

The effectiveness of microbombs was demonstrated recently in the case of a young woman, six months pregnant, who developed breast cancer. Since regular radiotherapy would endanger the unborn baby, doctors decided upon the Y-90 technique, and the malignancy quickly became smaller and harder. A month after normal delivery, she underwent surgical removal of the breast and is healthy today.

Leonard A. Walker of the Atomic Energy Company of Sweden sums it up when he says that as a means of holding cancer at bay until there is a cure, Y-90 "may find its most valuable clinical use as a routine prophylactic drug." ♦

Tests By Doctors Prove It Possible To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop The Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

A scientific research institute has discovered a medication which has the ability, in most cases—to actually shrink hemorrhoids and to promptly stop the burning itch and relieve pain.

In case after case, the sufferer first notices relief from itching and pain. Then painful swelling of the inflamed hemorrhoids is gently reduced.

Tests conducted on hundreds of patients by doctors in New York City, in Washington, D.C.

and at a Midwest Medical Center proved this so.

The secret is Preparation H®. There is no other formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids like Preparation H. In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids—Preparation H lubricates, soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection.

Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Preparation H Suppositories. No prescription is needed.

QUIPS AND QUOTES

One thing wrong with the younger generation is that a lot of us don't belong to it any more.

—Sam Ewing

"Darling," the husband groaned as he went over the monthly bills, "you promised you wouldn't buy any more dresses."

"I know, dear," the wife said. "But I just happened to be in this store, and I guess the devil tempted me."

"Then why didn't you simply say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan?'"

"Oh, I did," the wife replied. "And then he whispered over my shoulder, 'My dear, it fits beautifully in the back, too.'"

—Scott Keller

The professor exhibited a diagram to his class of future doctors. "The patient shown here limps," he told them. "One leg is shorter than the other." Then, turning to one of his students, he asked, "Now, Mr. Jones, what would you do in such a case?"

Young Jones thought earnestly for a moment.

"Well," he announced at last, "I think that, under the circumstances, I would limp, too."

—Frances Benson

Where there's smoke, there's usually somebody too excited to remember the phone number of the fire department.

—Dan Bennett

"Sorry about that dinner date, Fred."

How You May

Never Take a Laxative Again!

New Miracle Regulator Helps Relief Come Naturally

New York, N.Y. (Special)—Research has discovered a wonder-working substance that helps correct constipation without laxatives!

Doctors say most constipation occurs when waste loses moisture in the colon. To give relief, laxatives have to force action—flush, irritate or distend the intestine.

The new miracle substance works in a completely different way. It helps natural moisture in the colon work more effectively. Thus by working on the problem, not on you, it helps correct constipation as no laxative can.

This discovery is now available under the name REGUTOL. It is not habit-forming. No warning on the label—no prescription needed. Try REGUTOL—you may never take a laxative again!

TOOTSIE, COME SEE THIS ADORABLE LITTLE HAT

IT'S LOVELY... WHY DON'T YOU BUY IT?

I WOULD, BUT DAGWOOD WOULD BE FURIOUS

OF COURSE HE'LL BE FURIOUS, BUT LET HIM BE FURIOUS!

HE'LL HIT THE CEILING

IT'S STUNNING... GO AHEAD AND BUY IT, ANYWAY

TOOTSIE, YOU'RE TALKING ME INTO IT

MEN ARE ALL THE SAME... THEY DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT WOMEN'S HATS

DAGWOOD NEVER LIKES THE HATS I PICK OUT

BLONDIE, WHY ARE YOU TAKING SO LONG TO DRINK YOUR SODA?

BECAUSE I'M AFRAID TO GO HOME AND HEAR WHAT DAGWOOD WILL SAY

JUST LET HIM RANT AND RAVE AND YELL AND SCREAM... WHAT DO YOU CARE?

I KNOW HE'LL PUT ON A TERRIBLE ACT!

WELL, GOOD LUCK, BLONDIE

DON'T LEAVE ME, TOOTSIE... COME IN WITH ME, I'M AFRAID!

THAT'S THE PRETTIEST LITTLE HAT I'VE EVER SEEN

WE KNEW YOU'D SAY SOME SMART-ALECK THING LIKE THAT!

WHAT DID I DO THIS TIME?

PIGGY

CRIMESTOPPERS TEXTBOOK

CUFF DANGEROUS PRISONERS WITH HANDS BEHIND AND DOUBLE-LOCK HANDCUFFS. MANY TYPES OF CUFFS CAN BE "PICKED."

EIGHT ARTIFICIAL FINGER-NAILS REMOVED FROM THE FINGERS OF A MURDERED SPY, MARRG PLAINSMAN, JANUARY 7TH.---

--PLUS 2 MORE FOUND IMBEDDED IN THE TWEED JACKET OF THE LATE PIGGY BUTCHER SOLVE THAT MURDER.

THEN, FINALLY, AT THE HANDS OF THE CHIN CHILLARS, PIGGY PAID THE FULL PRICE FOR HIS LIFE OF CRIME.

ES, JUSTICE INVARIABLY FORGES CHAINS OF CIRCUMSTANCE THAT CANNOT BE DENIED.

AND IN SO DOING SAVES THE TAXPAYERS A BUNCH OF DOUGH.

AND THAT CALLS FOR A FRESH CIGARETTE.

MRS. CHIN CHILLAR LOST HER HUSBAND IN THE GUNFIGHT, BUT SHE GOT HER REVENGE ON PIGGY FIRST.

THE LAB TECHNICIANS TOLD US THAT THE STOLEN ATOMIC-LASER WEAPON THAT WRECKED SUCH HAVOC ALSO DESTROYED ITSELF.

HERDINS, THE LABORATORY DIRECTOR, INFORMS ME THAT THE GENUINE REMAINING WEAPON HAS BEEN PLACED UNDER DOUBLE SECURITY.

THE WHOLE KEY TO THIS CASE WAS THE INITIAL CAPTURE OF PIGGY, USING MOON MAID'S LASER POWER.

THANK YOU.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY HAROLD R. FOSTER

Our Story: THE FREED SLAVES, HAVING SATISFIED THEIR VENGEANCE ON THEIR MASTERS, TURN THEIR ATTENTION TO PLUNDERING THE BURNING CITY. MOST OF THEM HAVE NEVER POSSESSED ANYTHING OF THEIR OWN AND THEIR GREED IS COMPLETE. TWENTY CARAVANS COULD NOT CARRY THE LOOT ACROSS THE SUN-BAKED DESERT.

VAL TALKS TO THE PROUD CAMELMEN AND THEY AGREE TO TAKE THEIR ANIMALS BEYOND THE WALLS AND GUARD THEM FROM THE DESPERATE SLAVES.

SIR GAWAIN IS CAUGHT UP IN THE LOOTING FEVER: "THESE ARE BALDA HAN'S DANCING GIRLS. AS YOU SEE, VAL, THEY ARE TOO PRECIOUS TO LEAVE BEHIND."

ON THE PLAINS OUTSIDE THE CITY WALLS THE SLAVES SIT DUMBLY ON THEIR HEAPS OF PLUNDER. THEY CAN ACT ONLY ON ORDERS FROM A MASTER AND ARE COMPLETELY UNABLE TO THINK FOR THEMSELVES. VAL WONDERS IF HE WAS RIGHT IN SETTING THEM FREE. THOSE WHO SURVIVE THE DESERT CROSSING WILL AGAIN BECOME SLAVES, FOR THEY KNOW NOTHING ELSE.

SIR GAWAIN HAS COLLECTED MORE THAN DANCING GIRLS. HE HAS GATHERED TOGETHER ALL THOSE WHOSE SPIRIT HAS NOT BEEN CRUSHED, AND NOW HE HAS AN ARMED TROOP TO KEEP ORDER.

THERE IS NOTHING LEFT TO EAT IN THE CHARRED CITY. THE DESERT CROSSING MUST BEGIN. THE GOVERNOR IS DRAGGED FROM HIS HIDING PLACE TO LEAD THE CARAVAN. ONLY HE KNOWS THE LANDMARKS THAT LEAD TO THE OASES. THERE ARE NO PATHS, FOR THE HOT WINDS EVER BLOW AND FILL THE TRACKS WITH SAND.

YOU'RE SURE, DOCTOR MASK?

A TUB WHICH LOOKS VERY MUCH LIKE LARRIKIN'S IS ANCHORED IN THE LAGOON RIGHT NOW, COLONEL VERDE.

BLAST HIM... SHOW COLONEL LEE AROUND THE FACILITY, WILL YOU, MASK? SOMETHING TO ATTEND TO.

SEE YOU BOTH AT DINNER.

BLESS ME! COLONEL VERDE WILL BE GLAD TO GET HIS WIFE AND HIMSELF AWAY FROM HERE. IT HAS BEEN A PROBLEM, LEE.

HE SAID SOMETHING ABOUT A "PROBLEM." PERSONAL, I GATHER.

VERY! MRS. VERDE IS A CHARMING VIVACIOUS LADY. PUNTER'S PRIDE ISN'T VERY SOCIAL. AFRAID OUR ENDLESS TECHNICAL CHATTER MUST BE VERY DULL FOR THE ONLY WOMAN PRESENT.

WHEN LARRIKIN TURNED UP—WELL! I SUPPOSE ANY WOMAN WOULD FIND A MAN LIKE HIM INTRIGUING UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

SUSPECT I SHOULD ASK WHO, OR WHAT, IS LARRIKIN.

HE'S AN AUSTRALIAN CIVILIAN, SORT OF A DRIFTER, SEEMS TO MAINTAIN HIMSELF BY OCCASIONAL PEARLING TRIPS ABOARD HIS TUB. ALL VERY GLAMOROUS.
