Harriman Finds Nothing 'Constructive'

Paris Negotiators Mapping Next Moves In Peace Talk

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent
PARIS (AP) — U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators mapped their next moves in the Paris peace talks today—and traded verbal punches from their headquarters on opposite sides of Paris.

Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, emerging from the U.S. Embassy after a morning of conferring with his advisers, said he had been going over the North Vietnamese statement at Monday's session with a "microscope" to see whether he could find anything constructive. He indicated he had not had any success so far.

At North Vietnamese headquarters across the Seine, on the Left Bank, a spokesman said his government did not intend to pay "ransom" to the United States to get it to stop the rest of the bombing of North Vietnam. That was his response to a question whether Hanoi would make a gesture of scaling down the war to encourage the United States to act.

The talks go into their second full session on Wednesday. Today's verbal punches did not appear to change the mood of what has been described as a businesslike start Monday. They did underscore the point that very hard bargaining lies ahead.

Other issues were staked out at Monday's opening session in a 4,000-word speech in Vietnamese by Xuan Thuy and an 1,800-word speech by Harriman. Thuy spoke first at Harriman's suggestion.

After three hours of speech-making and translations in the International Conference Center's grand salon, Harriman reluctantly agreed to the North Vietnamese proposal to skip a meeting today and hold the second session Wednesday morning.

Xuan Thuy said there should be time to consult with the governments back home. U.S. officials speculated that he wanted to give leaders in Hanoi time to study Harriman's statement and send new instructions if they thought it necessary.

Since North Vietnam's communications with Paris are assumed to be far less speedy than Washington's, there may be many such gaps in the future meeting program. But the blank days in the calendar will give opportunities for secret meetings and French go-between activities when needed.

Unpainted Plywood Shelters On Familiar Mall

Hundreds Of Shanties On Memorial Grounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of unpainted plywood shanties took shape in front of the Lincoln Memorial today as the Poor People's Campaign hammered together its temporary home away from home.

Just 10 hours after the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy drove a symbolic stake into the ground, 88 prefabricated, tent-shaped structures stretched in four even rows down the mile-long, tree-lined grassy Mall familiar to millions of tourists.

By midnight the site resembled an Army bivouac area. Curious couples strolled past reflecting pools whose rippling waters pictured the glow of flashlights and enough moonlight are going to do something about poverty and unemployment and underemployment . . .

Each blow from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference president's hammer was echoed by a shouted "Freedom!" from the audience, most of whom had marched and ridden with him on a five-day trek from Mississippi.

Finishing the shanties of "Resurrection City U.S.A." is the main item on today's agenda. The estimated 450 demonstrators on hand early today slept in church basements and recreation rooms Monday night, but many are scheduled to spend tonight in their new plywood quarters.

Chalked lines on the grass mark out sewer pipe trenches to be dug. Electric company crews installed equipment.

A second contingent of marchers from the Midwest is scheduled to arrive Thursday, following by an Eastern caravan Friday and a Southern caravan Sunday.

Children, Aged 9 And 10, Held In Man's Death

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Judge George A. Bowman Jr. gazed for a moment Monday at the four youngsters, aged 9 and 10, before declaring: "Charge, murder third degree."

The police report which Bowman read to the court said that, when Werhun appeared, the children "began to throw stones at him. He was struck by a large rock . . . which knocked him down. All continued to throw rocks."

Werhun died Saturday in a hospital, and death "was due to pneumonia and heart failure caused by being hospitalized for a leg fracture," suffered when he was knocked down, Bowman read.

"I don't know the answer," Bowman said later. "but I think this community, the parents of this community, better wake up to the responsibility of children. Maybe the death of an 86-year-old man will send out a message this court could never send."

During the hearing, social workers offered sketches of the youngsters' backgrounds. "The family life they had was in the street. That's where their real family is," one said.

Heart Transplant Condition Is Grave

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The condition of one of the world's five surviving heart transplant patients—earlier reported improving—has turned from serious to grave, and hospital personnel remained at his bedside today in Houston, Tex.

The other four heart recipients all were reported in good shape, although doctors gave little further information on the latest patient, a Dominican priest operated on Sunday in Paris. Clerical sources said the Rev. Charles Boulogne had been unable to work or write for the last year and had pleaded for a transplant.

Doctors at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston said the condition of John Stuckwisch, 62, of Alpine, Tex., became grave Monday afternoon.

The doctors have said Stuckwisch, a hospital administrator, was dying when he received last

Senators Vie Today In Nebraska Primary

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sens. Robert F. Kennedy and Eugene J. McCarthy faced their second head-on presidential primary test today in Nebraska—and competed with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey in West Virginia for convention delegates.

The Kennedy-McCarthy test comes a week after their first primary confrontation in Indiana and Kennedy said he'd have to win the Nebraska primary to get the Democratic presidential nomination.

But McCarthy said Nebraska alone is not crucial to his campaign. He said he will stay in the race regardless of the outcome there.

Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon appeared assured of victory. But his camp said write-in votes for New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and the presence of California Gov. Ronald Reagan's name on the ballot could cut heavily into Nixon's total.

The West Virginia primary has no presidential candidates but it will select 96 Democratic National Convention delegates and 14 GOP convention delegates.

Preferences voiced by the Democratic delegate candidates before the voting indicated a largely Humphrey-Kennedy contest.

Greenville will be host to an estimated 400 Optimists and wives this weekend. The Optimists are gathering for their 27th annual convention which is a statewide event.

Registration starts Thursday at six p.m. and will continue until midnight.

The four-day convention will be held at the Greenville Moose Lodge. Highlighting the meeting will be the speech of "Tar Heel Humorist" Edmund Harding at the Old Timers Breakfast Saturday morning. The keynote speaker at the convention will be Maurice F. Keathley Jr. who is on the Finance Committee of the Optimist International.

Friday night agenda contains a banquet honoring Governor of the N.C. Optimists, Grover C. Ritchie, which will followed by a ball.

The meeting will wind up with a ball at the Main Ball Room Saturday night.

This will be the first of the 27 conventions to be held east of Raleigh.

Whitener To Be Party Keynoter

NASHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — State Democratic Chairman Tim Valentini Jr. announced today that Rep. Basil Whitener, D-N.C., will keynote the party's state convention in Raleigh June 6.

Whitener, who faces Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., in his bid for re-election in the 10th District, has been in Concord since 1956.

Bumper Peach Crop Predicted

RALEIGH (AP) — A bumper 1968 peach crop for North Carolina has been predicted by the North Carolina Crop Reporting Service.

The service Monday forecast a crop of 89 million pounds, 49 million above last year's crop and 27.2 million pounds above the average.

The report said the "fruit set is above average" throughout most of the state and "thinning will be necessary in most orchards for proper sizing."

Plan Reduce Air Defense Jobs Total

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says it will abolish 6,000 jobs by devising a cheaper air defense system but on Capitol Hill indications are high defense spending will continue even if the Vietnam war ends.

The Department of Defense announced Monday a scaling-down of defense against bomber attacks which will produce a "smaller, more effective and less costly system."

The reshuffling will eliminate 4,719 military and 1,219 civilian jobs, the Pentagon said. It will involve a restructuring of the North American Air Defense Command—NORAD.

Twenty radar squadrons will be closed by Sept. 1, three F101 Interceptor squadrons will be disbanded and three F106 squadrons will move to new stations. The Federal Aviation Administration will take over 14 of the 20 radar sites.

Graham Might Endorse Politico

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham says he may endorse a presidential candidate this year because he believes the campaigns "may decide the very survival of this country."

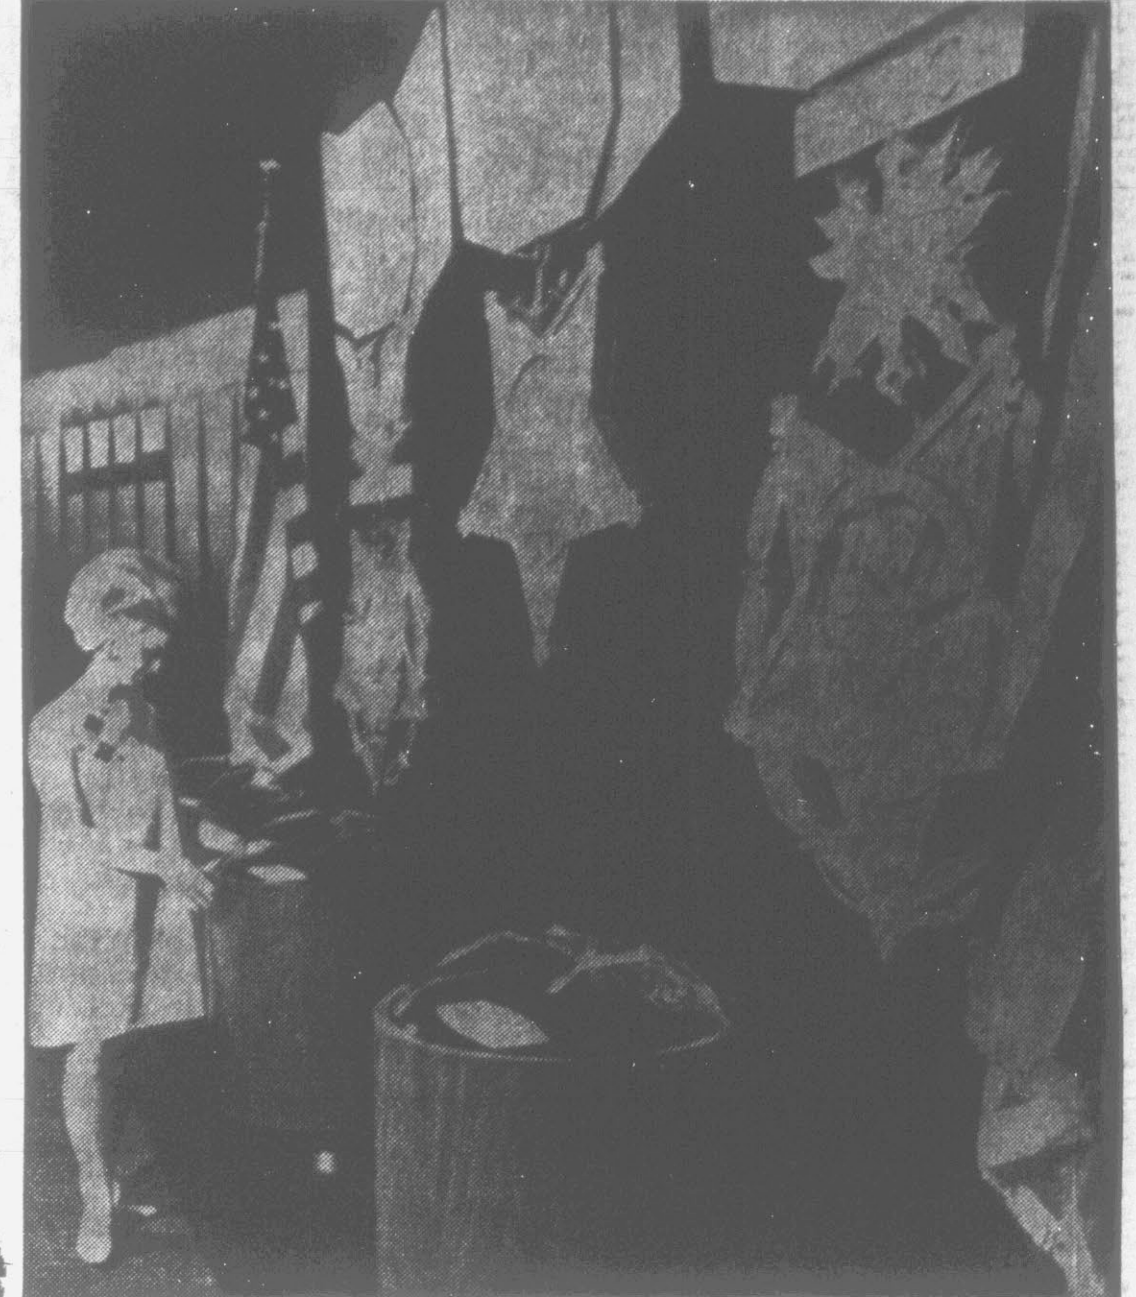

He told a news conference Monday. "I might find I will, I do believe I could influence a great number of people. This is one of the most interesting campaigns and yet I think it is the most crucial campaign this country has had."

About 156 Killed In C130's Crash

Nine Aircraft Downed By Reds In Fight For Camp

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese forces shot down four American planes and five helicopters during the attack in which they seized the Kham Duc Special Forces camp, military spokesmen said today.

Two of the planes were big four-engine C130 cargo transports evacuating South Vietnamese irregulars and their families.

About 150 South Vietnamese and six Americans are believed to have been killed in one of the C130s, U.S. sources said. This toll would be more than triple the worst previous crash of the Vietnam war and would also exceed the world's worst civilian aviation disaster, the collision of two airliners over New York City on Dec. 16, 1960, in which 134 persons were killed.

ABANDONED POST — Allied troops and civilians totaling nearly 1700 have been evacuated from Special Forces camp at Kham Duc (underlined). Pressure of about 5,000 North Vietnamese forced the step. (AP Wirephoto Map)

The second C130 lost was just landing to pick up government troops when it was hit by anti-aircraft fire. The six American crewmen aboard escaped but the plane was destroyed.

'Disgrace' Noted At Green Springs Park

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Greenville Recreation Commission last night approved sending a letter to the Greenville City Council asking that it study possible corrective measures to alleviate the "public display of college students and others" that goes on in Green Springs Park.

In the letter the commissioners termed the display at the park "disgraceful acts" and requested the council to "make a study of possible corrective actions that can legally be taken to eliminate the embarrassing . . . display from the eyes and observations of our citizens, both young and old."

The park has become known as a parking place for couples, according to recreation officials, who said they have been unable to cope with the problem.

Oral Cancer Detection Clinic Slated Sunday

A free Oral Cancer Detection Clinic will be conducted at the Pitt County Health Department this Sunday from one to five p.m.

This clinic is not intended to be a dental examination. It is a thorough examination of the head, face, neck, and oral cavity. The clinic is free to anyone who wishes to come for the examination.

Warning signals a person should watch for are:

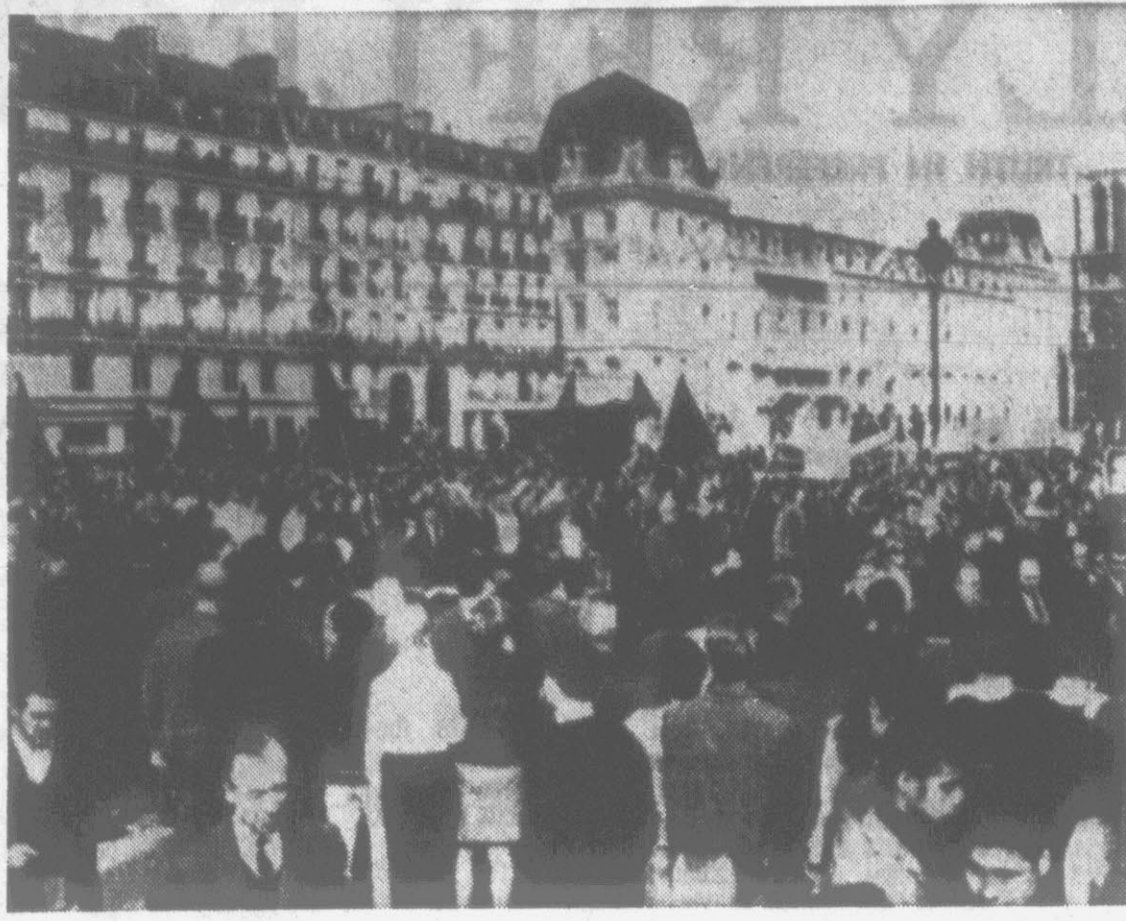

1. Sore spots or ulceration of lips, tongue, or areas inside the mouth that do not heal properly.
2. White, scaly areas inside the mouth.
3. Swelling of the lips, gums, or other areas inside the mouth, with or without pain.
4. Repeated bleeding in the mouth with no apparent cause.
5. Numbness or loss of feeling in any part of the mouth. If any of these signs are present, one should consult a dentist or physician immediately.

Today, only 36 per cent of those who develop oral cancer survive for five years or more after treatment. This survival rate could be improved by vigilance on the part of the individual, the dentist, and the physician.

The cancer detection clinic will be the first of a series of annual clinics sponsored by the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society in conjunction with the N.C. chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Pinkney Young is the clinic chairman. According to Dr. Young, approximately six dentists will be on hand to conduct the clinic. They are volunteering their services without pay.

UNC Trustees To Meet On Rules For Speakers

RALEIGH (AP) — Trustees of the consolidated University of North Carolina will meet at Chapel Hill May 27 to receive a report from its executive committee concerning rules for visiting speakers at the university's four campuses.

A subcommittee will be ready to report to the full board May 27, said secretary Arch T. Allen of Raleigh Monday after a meeting of the trustees' executive committee.

UNC President William C. Friday proposed a set of rules dealing with visiting speakers at a meeting of the full board Feb. 26. After a lengthy debate, the rules were adopted on an interim basis while the executive committee studied the matter. Friday made his recommendation one week after a federal court ruled the 1963 Speaker Ban Law unconstitutional.

The interim rules do not prohibit anyone from speaking on any campus. They merely lay down rules to be followed during the course of a speech.

Adoption of the interim rules came after Gov. Dan Moore called for "reasonable rules and regulations" which would carry out the basic intent of the Speaker Ban Law.

Moore said university facilities "should be used in such a manner as to serve the educational purposes of the institution and not the purposes of the enemies of our free society."

Candidate Hawkins Signed Pledge Of Party Loyalty

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite hints that he might back Republican Jim Gardner, for governor, Dr. Reginald H. Hawkins has already pledged to support Lt. Gov. Bob Scott, the Democratic nominee.

When Hawkins, a Charlotte Negro dentist, filed as a Democratic candidate for governor last February 21, he signed a pledge which said:

"I pledge to abide by the results of the primary and to support in the general election all candidates nominated by the Democratic Party."

State Elections Board Secretary Alex Brock confirmed Monday that Hawkins, who received 124,000 votes in the May 4 Democratic gubernatorial primary, had signed the pledge. Brock added, however, that no law exists to force compliance.

Last week, Hawkins said he plans to endorse either Scott or Gardner in the general election race.

"We'll be active in the elections campaign," Hawkins said, "but it will be for the candidate we think can do the most for the people, the poor people and the Negro people."

He added that any endorsement "will not be because of party label."

Brock said the party registration of a candidate who violated the pledge could be challenged by a member of his home precinct. This, said Brock, could conceivably set off a series of lengthy appeals through the elections boards or the courts.

"But as far as I know," he added, "it's never been tested."

Chowan School Board Defers Principal Choice

EDENTON, N. C. (AP) — The Chowan County Board of Education deferred action Monday night on naming a principal for the all-Negro D. F. Walker school, scene of student demonstrations since last Thursday.

A board member said after Monday night's emergency session of the board that action was delayed until further applications could be considered.

Some 150 students of the school have been demonstrating in protest to reports that James Kenion, a white teacher, would be promoted from assistant to principal of the school.

Classes were dismissed for the day Monday after an anonymous bomb threat was received at the school.

The new principal would succeed D. F. Walker, who has reached the mandatory retirement age.

Holding Wife In Dynamite Death

STATESVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Mrs. Margaret Ruth Horton, 42, was being held in lieu of $20,000 bond today on a conspiracy charge in the dynamite-slaying of her husband.

Mrs. Horton was indicted, arrested and charged late Monday, officers said. Trial was scheduled for the August 26 term of Iredell Superior Court.

Officers said no other arrests or charges had been made, but that other suspects were under surveillance.

Capt. Leroy Horton, a Statesville fireman, was killed Nov. 22 when several sticks of dynamite exploded as he attempted to start his pickup truck in front of the fire station.

Officers said Horton and his wife were estranged, with final divorce proceedings scheduled only days after the explosion.

Horton had been awarded custody of the couple's three young children.

Editor Resigns, Censorship Ends

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho State University Communications Board Monday lifted censorship of the student newspaper, The Bengal.

The move came after the board accepted the resignation of editor Frank Hissong, 24, a graduate student. Hissong submitted his resignation last week to protest censorship.

Censorship was invoked about a month ago after the board received complaints Hissong used too much space for editorials and national news, rather than campus news.

Chapel Hill Board Votes Open Housing Ordinance

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — By a vote of 4-0 with one member abstaining, the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen Monday night enacted North Carolina's first open housing ordinance.

The vote followed the board's action several weeks ago in giving tentative approval of the ordinance.

The ordinance forbids discrimination in public sale or rental of property on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin. It became effective on passage.

Town attorney Emory Denny noted that although the ordinance generally forbids discrimination, it recognizes that the community itself is not necessarily involved in all private transactions. When buyers are sought publicly, however, the ordinance applies.

The ordinance recognizes the right of an individual to rent out part of his home to another individual of his choice. When he increases the number of tenants in his home to four or more, however, his home then becomes a rooming house under the law and the opening housing ordinance would apply.

Those voting for the ordinance included Alderman Robert Varley, who said he did so with "reservations and concern."

"I believe that the heart and philosophy of people must change rather than the enactment of more laws," he said.

No question was raised Monday night on the authority of the board to pass the ordinance.

Denny told the board in April, however, that the state attorney general's office was of the opinion that a municipality does not have the authority to pass an open housing ordinance.

Idaho Advertis Its Lowest Wages

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — In an effort to attract new industry, the Idaho Commerce and Development Department advertises the wages are lower in Idaho than neighboring states.

Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy said Monday that "Idaho is not proud of the low income of its citizens." He said the state feels that if the advertising draws new industry, the per capita income will go up.

THEY'RE ILLEGAL PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — A Pawtucket law bans animals from Slater Park—the home of the city dog pound and the zoo. The law was passed in 1916 and was uncovered when the City Council was briefed on Pawtucket dog laws.

Charge Assault, Intent To Kill

Fate Reddick, 62-year-old Negro of Rt. 2, Ayden, has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported today.

Reddick is accused of assaulting Joe Bella Scott, Rt. 2, Ayden with a board. She received laceration on the head and was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Reddick told officers the Scott woman had threatened him with a butcher knife.

The incident took place at Cannon's Cross Roads last night. Reddick is in Pitt County Jail under $500 bond.

Demonstrators Plan Resume Duke U. Vigil

DURHAM (AP) — Non-academic workers and Duke University students supporting them planned to resume a campus vigil for higher wages and union representation this afternoon.

Bob Creamer, a spokesman for the students, said Monday the vigil was being resumed after a three-week moratorium in response to a statement issued Saturday by a special trustee-administration committee.

The statement said plans under consideration include establishment of an employ council of elected representatives and an employ relations advisory committee comprised of faculty members, administrators and non-academic workers.

Creamer said the report "clearly indicates that no progress is being made toward the employees' chief demand, collective bargaining rights."

The committee also said it will meet again Wednesday with faculty and student leaders and non-academic workers.

Creamer said the resumed vigil will not involve a boycott of classes or dining halls, as was done in earlier demonstrations which involved as many as 1,500 students and lasted for several days.

He said demonstrators would remain on the quadrangle in front of Duke Chapel day and night, or until a statement from the trustees following Wednesday's meeting.

After the statement, Creamer said, the students would re-evaluate their strategy.

Non-academic employes began a 13-day strike April 9, and returned to work only when higher wages were promised.

The minimum wage for the employes was boosted from $1.15 to $1.45 per hour, with an increase to $1.60 per hour scheduled for July 1, 1969.

Students dropped their own demands that Duke president Douglas Knight drop his membership in a segregated country club and sign a newspaper advertisement pressing for open housing in Durham.

Knight was hospitalized with hepatitis about the time of the demonstration and has been granted a leave of absence.

Let Her Decide If She Can Afford The Expense

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon, and am now planning my wedding. My fiancée has a 29-year-old sister who lives about 800 miles from here. She is married and has two children. Should I ask her to be a bridesmaid?

They are not very well off financially, and I am afraid the cost of the trip plus the gown might be a strain on them. But then, if I don't ask her, maybe she will be hurt.

I can't very well ask her if she can afford to come and be a bridesmaid because even if she can't, she might be ashamed to admit it, and borrow the money or something. I have never discussed this with her as I hardly know her. My fiancée is as confused as I am and we have no one else to ask. Also, is a 29-year-old woman too old to be a bridesmaid?

WORRIED DEAR WORRIED: Rather than risk hurting her feelings, ask her, and let her decide whether she is able to accept. Bridesmaids are usually very close friends of the bride. Matron of honor (if you have no one closer to honor) would be a more appropriate role for your husband's 29-year-old married sister, should she be in the wedding party.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever we need a baby-sitter, I ask a 16-year-old girl who lives in our block. My problem is the way she acts around my husband. Abby, this girl is big for her age and she is just as developed (physically) as I am. She likes to run her fingers thru his hair and wrestle with him. I have told my husband that I don't think he ought to let her get so familiar with him as it only encourages the child.

If I get another sitter, my husband will get mad because cause, crazy as it sounds, I think he is flattered by her attentions. So what is your advice?

UPSET DEAR UPSET: Getting another sitter won't help because she is only half your problem. The other half is your husband. First, tell the "child" in a motherly way that it isn't nice for young ladies to engage in horseplay with men, so please to keep her hands off your mister. Then tell your mister to see to it that she does.

DEAR ABBY: What kind of a husband would encourage his wife to line herself up with dates with other men while he is out of town?

NOSY DEAR NOSY: One with a guilty conscience.

Unemployment Isn't The Big Issue

North Carolina's paradox of being leader in some fields and lagging far behind the pace-setters in others should be of concern to all its citizens. This state, according to the latest figures available, continues to lead the Southeastern states in the number of manufacturing jobs available to its people. Notwithstanding this position of leadership, North Carolina continues to lag far behind the national and that of all but a few states in its per capita income.

At the end of 1967, there were some 665,300 people in this state employed in manufacturing jobs. There were almost a million other North Carolinians employed in other non-agricultural jobs. Together they represented a growth of almost four per cent over the number employed in similar jobs in the previous year — twice the national growth average of 1.8 per cent in the same period.

North Carolina continues to enjoy economic growth and its per capita income inches up. It should be evident, however, that the state needs to get a much faster pace of economic development if it hopes in the reasonably near future to catch up with the economic level of other sections of the nation.

The core of North Carolina's problem is not unemployment. There are some people who are unable to find or hold jobs. To be sure, but the focal point of North Carolina's problem is that too many of its people are under-employed, and their potential for employment is severely limited by their lack of training and their lack of opportunity. The state and its individual communities should reassess the programs they have for attracting industry and the programs they have for preparing people for the jobs new industries might bring to the state.

While the state may take some steps in this direction, much of what is needed must be done at the local level through development programs and through existing education facilities. Pitt County has the potential for undertaking such a two-fold program much more aggressively than it so far has done.

First Big Building For Shore Drive Area

News that construction of the new post office in downtown Greenville will begin within the month has been received with enthusiasm by local citizens.

There is always understandable impatience on the part of most people when they are looking forward to a new public facility. In the case of the new post office, it is a facility that is long overdue for Greenville, and one which is sorely needed.

In addition to providing more adequate space for local postal operations, the new post office will be the first major new building constructed in the Shore Drive Redevelopment area. It will mark the beginning of what should be an orderly reconstruction of the area into one of the most handsome in any community in this part of the state.

Hopefully, the area in time will be the location of a number of public buildings and in addition to public facilities, there will be a number of other business buildings in the area.

The Redevelopment program in the Shore Drive area has seemed painfully slow at times during recent years. It now is reaching the stage where the area will begin to take on the new attractiveness that was envisioned in the initial planning several years ago.

YOUR MONEY WHERE HIS MOUTH IS!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Lausche, The Maverick

Back in mid-April, when the newspaper editors were having their annual consistory out at the Shoreham, I ran into Ohio's Senator Frank Lausche and asked him how he was doing. He rolled those expressive eyes to heaven and crossed his fingers for luck. I promised myself to write a piece about the old maverick, but other things got in the way. Now, dammit, it's too late. He went down to defeat in Tuesday's senatorial primary. His departure from the Washington scene will be a real loss to the Senate, and to the country, too.

Lausche was in a class by himself. Over the years, you came to expect most of the Southern Democrats to rack up a stostly Republican record, but the old warhorses from Dixie were secure in their saddles; no one paid much attention. By the same token, you knew about where Wayne Morse, the Oregon cactus, would sink his barbs. Lausche was different. He voted his convictions with reckless disdain for party labels. He was a conservative, but a rest- less conservative; he would not stand and be hitched. Great day, we will miss him next year! He came to the Senate in 1957, after serving five terms as Governor of Ohio. He had done a brilliant job in the statehouse. My own recollection of Lausche goes back to the fall of 1951, when the National Conference of Editorial Writers met in Cleveland. He held his tough audience spellbound for an hour, with a virtuoso performance on the problems and prospects of State government.

Come to think of it, he always had the air of a virtuoso. He looked like a solo pianist or a visiting guest conductor — swarthy, his hands always in motion, his mobile face urging a faster tempo. Over the years, his great shock of dark hair turned grey, the lines deepened around his eyes and mouth, but he never lost the vitality of 1951. In a chamber of lusty debaters, he hid his own with the best.

A good deal was made in the press of the Senator's age—he is 72—but it wasn't his age that beat him on Tuesday. It was a combination of Lausche's own stubbornness and organized labor's strength. The last time the Senator ran, in 1962, he won reelection by nearly 700,000 votes. He spent next to nothing in that campaign, and he adamantly refused to spend much of anything this spring. The people knew where he stood — or they ought to know. He had voted for the open housing bill, but he also had sponsored (with Strom Thurmond) a tough amendment to punish rioters. He was hard, in truth, on just about everything. There was mighty little softness in him.

It is especially ironic that Lausche should have been toppled by former Representative John J. Gilligan, for Gilligan was defeated two years ago by young Robert Taft. In the zoology of politics, Taft is a kitten and Lausche a catamount.

Labor Is The Power

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The smashing triumph of organized labor in Ohio's Democratic primary last May 7 adds even more significance to an April 26 telephone conversation between Sen. Stephen Young and Frank King, who doubles as state president of the AFL-CIO and Democratic floor leader of the Ohio state senate.

U. S. Sen. Young and state Sen. King at that moment were on opposite sides of the fence. Young was one of the few prominent Ohioans openly endorsing Sen. Robert F. Kennedy for President. King was following the national lead of the AFL-CIO and supporting Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey. This conflict over Democratic national politics was the very reason Young placed the call to King.

The 79-year-old Young told King he was "heart sick" over their difference of opinion. Young said he well remembered that labor and labor alone had supplied him men and money in his seemingly hopeless runs for the Senate in 1958 and 1964. When astronaut John Glenn challenged Young in the 1964 Democratic primary (partly at Kennedy's urging), only labor leaders such as Frank King stood by him.

Moreover, although Young didn't mention it over the phone, he was seeking over the role Col. Glenn was playing in the current Kennedy campaign. Forced out of the 1964 Senate race by health problems, Glenn never has been forgiven by Steve Young. Thus, Young was furious when Glenn addressed a Kennedy rally at Ohio State University in Columbus. Young's call to King came a few days later.

In that April 26 conversation, King confirmed to Young that labor was indeed solidly committed for Humphrey against Kennedy and that labor had indeed backed Young in years past. A few days later, Young withdrew his endorsement of Kennedy and announced he was uncommitted.

Young is no great political power in Ohio and may control no more votes than his own. But potent Ohio Democrats who control many more votes than their own are now similarly influenced by labor — particularly after the overwhelming primary defeat of Sen. Frank Lausche by John J. Gilligan, labor's handpicked candidate. That victory confirmed labor for the foreseeable future as supreme arbiter of Ohio's Democratic fortunes.

To fully appreciate this, it is necessary to go back to the days immediately following the disastrous Democratic defeat here in 1966. State Democratic chairman Morton Neipp, a wealthy Toledo lawyer and party leader, quickly decided the party's only hope for salvation was an alliance with labor of an intimacy never before seen in this state.

Labor agreed, and the new Democratic-labor coalition under Neipp's direction set about its first task: purging right-wing Democrat Lausche. Had it failed, labor's — and Humphrey's — weight in Ohio would have been diminished. (Continued On Page 5)

Mecklenburg's Additional Sum

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

Reflector Raleigh Bureau RALEIGH — A rather significant sum, $426,408, was listed in a otherwise routine report issued recently by State Revenue Commissioner L. L. Clayton on last month's state tax collections.

The sum, less than half a million dollars, is not very impressive in a report dealing with more than $80.2 million collected in a single month. But it had special significance and commanded attention and extra comment in the report and in state and local governmental circles.

WILLIAM SHIRES

It is the amount which will be refunded to one of the state's 100 counties, Mecklenburg, which has voted to increase its sales and use tax by one per cent — one penny on the dollar — for local purposes. Now almost all of the other 99 counties are looking at Mecklenburg and asking — can they do it too?

Mecklenburg Pioneered There is no question that Mecklenburg, the state's most populous and possibly richest county, pioneered in a method of local taxation which politicians doubted was possible.

Many legislators in the 1967 General Assembly scoffed at the idea that any county would vote for additional sales taxes.

The lawmakers shouted down bills which would permit state-wide local option on the question but Mecklenburg's delegation refused to give.

They pressed the issue in a local bill, applying only to one county and calling for a county referendum — and won its approval.

Skeptics said it would never pass and predicted this would be the end of such local tax legislation introduced in Raleigh. But Mecklenburg voted for the added one per cent sales tax and collections began in March. Now everyone is taking another look.

Statewide Application The executive director of the N. C. Association of County Commissioners, John Morrissey, says at least 75 other counties are ready to go on the one per cent sales tax proposition.

He feels certain that legislation to permit such a local levy — collected and refunded by the state under the present sales and use tax set-up — will be introduced in the next legislature. This would be similar to bills introduced in 1967 which, ironically, the county commissioners failed to take a stand. Without support of the county commissioners and other groups, the bills failed. Mecklenburg County then resorted to local option legislation affecting only Mecklenburg County. All other counties — some of them in far greater need of additional revenue than Mecklenburg — stood on the sidelines and waited.

There were doubts among the politicians whether the (Continued On Page 5)

Medical Group On The Scene

By JEAN HELLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A young mother awoke at 2 a.m. to find her infant son violently ill. Outside her home, soldiers with fixed bayonets patrolled the streets and she was afraid to try to get through to a hospital.

Around the corner from the 12th Precinct, two men jumped a soldier from behind, knocked him to the ground and kicked him in the throat. He couldn't breathe. His heart stopped. In a matter of minutes, he would be beyond saving.

In both instances during last month's civil disorder here, disaster was averted by doctors who belong to the Medical Committee for Human Rights, a volunteer organization which has staffed emergency medical centers in riot areas across the nation.

A call from the frightened mother to the committee brought a pediatrician to her home within minutes to treat her son for an ear infection. A team of volunteer doctors who had been treating minor injuries in the 12th Precinct jail rushed to the injured soldier, applied heart massage and saved his life.

"We started this committee in 1964 to provide emergency medical care at times and in places where ordinary medical care is, at best, inadequate and, at worst, nonexistent," said Dr. George Wilson, national president of the committee, in an interview from Philadelphia where he teaches at Temple University.

"Doctors and nurses responded to pleas from Selma, Ala., that year, pleas from organizations working on voter registration.

"When it was over, we found that we weren't satisfied with just stitching up our heads. We decided we should be doing something to keep heads intact in the first place."

In 1965, the Medical Committee for Human Rights became a full-fledged national organization, incorporated in New York City. It claims a national membership of 4,000. Since then, its members have found themselves ministering to the sick and injured in Bogalusa, La., marching with James Meredith down U. S. 51 in June, 1966 and in the midst of the Chicago, Detroit and Washington civil upheavals.

They have lobbied on Capitol Hill for strong medicare and Social Security laws; worked with the Office of Economic Opportunity to provide improved medical care for children in the Head Start program and studied the health problems of city jails.

May 15, 1928 City Schools Operetta Is Huge Success

Before the largest crowd ever assembled in Eastern North Carolina for a school entertainment 500 children of the elementary grades of the Greenville city schools last night presented the beautiful and tuneful operetta entitled "The Forest Court." It was staged in the Campus Building of the East Carolina Teachers College and this huge building was unable to take care of the vast throng of people numbering approximately 2,500. The production was staged under the direction of Miss Lotta Veazey, supervisor of the public school music of the Greenville Schools, assisted by Miss Evt Hodges at the piano and all supervisors, principals and teachers of the local schools... There was a permanent chorus of more than 400 children and in the rendition of all numbers it was noticeable that no child was off key at any time. The theme of the operetta had to do with that of a thoughtless boy who had been unmindful of the feelings of plants and animals. . .

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS WATCH OUT!

Two of the most devastating of personal weaknesses is the disposition to be jealous and the impulse (sometimes almost a compulsion) to gamble. The person of jealous spirit is unfortunate indeed. He looks upon what others have, compares this with his own meagre resources, and is bitter. He sees others advanced and he is passed over on the day of promotion, and he is furious. The desirable boy seems to like some other girl better, and the desirable girl seems to like some other boy better. Jealousy burns like a vehement flame, and we would do well to keep out of its way and to quench it with a firm hand. The desire to gamble seems to be inborn in some people. They will take a chance on anything. One of the most able men I ever knew lost a quarter of a million dollars on one throw of dice. All his erudition and resourcefulness came to naught because of that one passion.

Jealousy and the disposition to gamble — these can ruin any life. Each individual has to find out how best to handle such weaknesses. Jealousy can tear a life apart if we allow it to do so. Gambling can bring the gambler to poverty and death. Neither of these passions arises from naturally endowed appetites but are like weeds that grow up amid flowers and fruitful plants. Jealousy is a moral disease. Gambling is an attempt to get something for nothing. The wise make a commonsense appraisal of these weaknesses and act accordingly.

Other Editors Saying Let Checkbook Decide?

(Raleigh, N. C., Times)

Mrs. Rose Kennedy is completely frank in how she feels about big spending by rich candidates in election campaigns. She thinks it's okay.

Women's Wear Daily, in an interview with Mrs. Kennedy, quotes her as saying that her son, Bobby, and his family have the right to spend as much money as they wish trying to get him elected president. The magazine quotes her as saying:

"It's our own money and we're free to spend it any way we please. It's part of this campaign business. If you have money, you spend it to win. And the more you can afford, the more you'll spend. The Rockefeller are like us. We both have lots of money to spend on our campaigns. It's something that is not regulated. Therefore, it's not unethical."

Kennedy recently led in the presidential preference primary in Indiana and on election night, estimated the cost of his campaign at $500,000 to $600,000.

Well, maybe this lavish spending isn't regulated and isn't unethical. But, there is a real warning in all this to the American people: Don't let your politics get to the point where the biggest checkbook is inevitably the winner.

If Mrs. Kennedy's frank discussion of the financial status of the Kennedys and the Rockefeller were carried to its logical conclusion, there wouldn't be any reason to have an election at all. Just add up the checkbook stubs of the two families and award the presidency to the one with the biggest balance.

America will continue to be in good shape as long as elections are decided on issues and as long as issues are freely discussed in elections. But, if elections are to be decided by checkbooks, we're in trouble.

This is a very timely warning for North Carolina. We're heading into a tough general election campaign. Undoubtedly, a great deal of money will be spent, not in Kennedy or Rockefeller totals, but still a lot of money. We can't afford to let this North Carolina election go to the candidate who can buy the most gimmicks, or the most advertising or the most cars to haul voters to the polls.

We must insist that all our candidates talk about the issues, then we must make our decisions on that basis — not on a checkbook basis.

Effects Of The Increased Taxes

By ELMER ROESSNER

The federal income tax increase, now jettisoned toward us, will have many effects on the economy. Among them will be:

Inflation will be slowed down. The government will be financed less by borrowing, more by tax income. The tax rise will not, however, halt or reverse inflation. Nothing can do that as long as the dollar is only a chit, not based on gold or any other tangible, irredemable except in taxes.

Retail sales will be slowed down. Withholding taxes will be increased; those whose taxes are not withheld must increase payments on their estimated tax. With less to spend, consumers will be unable to buy as much as they have been.

Consumer credit, now at a new peak of $98 billion (that's billion, bub) will rise until consumers adjust to the fact that they have less to spend. After adjustment, consumer credit will rise at a lower rate, perhaps level off.

Labor Gimmies

Union demands for pay increases will stiffen. The old cry of "No reduction in take-home pay" may be raised again. Regardless of the slogan, the demands will be almost universal for increases to compensate for larger withholdings.

ELMER ROESSNER

These demands will not be confined to organized workers, of course. Executives will also seek compensating increases and, because their tax increases will be larger, their demands will be greater. Americans, long accustomed to the affluent society, will resist giving up some spending power, even to save the dollar. The wealthy will scamper to get more of their assets into tax shelters. Higher income taxes will make tax-free state and municipal bonds more profitable. Investments that involve oil and mineral depletion allowance will increase in attractiveness. stock market investors will be much more intent on capital situations than in quick profits.

Competition For Tax Revenue

Competition between the federal government and lesser taxing bodies will be intensified. The argument has already been advanced that increases in state and city income taxes don't matter much because taxed individuals and corporations thereupon get larger federal deductions.

Prices will go up or, at least, producers will make efforts to increase them. Managements will seek higher prices to meet demands for high wages and to maintain after-tax profits. However, many attempts to raise prices will fail. With less spendable income, consumers will resist price increases and will join organized or unorganized boycotts.

In addition, there may be many upsets at the polls as voters tend to blame incumbent Congressmen for higher taxes and for the mess they have let the economy slide into. The doves will get increasing support as voters realized that it costs in taxes to win wars. Most will not realize that it can cost many times as much to lose wars.

An Irishman Challenges The U.S. Post Office

By RALPH MARSH
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Thomas M. Murray is a compact little sandy-haired Irishman who grew up in County Sligo wanting to run the four-minute mile and move to America.

He failed in the four-minute mile, but he made it to America. And, with the assurance common to the Irish, he has taken on the U.S. Postal Department while insisting he isn't taking them on at all.

Murray is the driving force behind Independent Postal Systems if America and has been since he heard the idea of competitive postal systems dropped by a friend over morning coffee in November of 1967.

Murray works in a bare office in a warehouse-type building in Oklahoma City. The company took over third-class mail had a fleet of trucks and a payroll approaching $8,000 a week and he said it showed nearly a $500 profit for April.

The firm's first delivery contract was for 60,000 pieces of advertising. Deliveries for the first month, February, hit 300,000. It hit one million in March, and Murray says it will be three million for April. A contract with a single customer already calls for 700,000 in June. Murray says the firm now is dealing with about 50 companies.

"It's not just a theory any more," he said, again pointing to the operation in April's profit. Also, "we delivered 160,000 pieces for an Oklahoma firm," he said, "with 100 per cent delivery and we saved them $18 per thousand pieces."

The operation now is primarily devoted to Oklahoma City, but another branch is operating in Ardmore, Okla., and Murray says there are plans to open offices in Tulsa, Okla., and Dallas, Tex., by June 1, Denver, Colo., and Salt Lake City Utah, July 1, and Canada by August 1. Murray said that as the system expands, deliveries of privately mailed items can be sent from city to city.

"We are proving right now that free enterprise can do a better job than any government in business," he said.

Murray says $11 billion is spent annually in distribution of bulk mail and "there's only one guy in that business. That's the U.S. Post Office.

"He's doing a lousy job because he doesn't have any competition. "Do you know of any other individual who could sustain a 34 per cent increase in rates? It's unjust.

"That's what comes from a monopoly. America wasn't designed for that."

1950 and went to work in Detroit as a bellboy, although he had a college degree in hotel management and experience at Dublin's Gresham Hotel. He soon was managing a hotel, however, and then formed a hotel management chain and moved to Oklahoma City.

Darrell Hinshaw who says he originated the post office idea and had nursed it for a long time compiled many figures on its feasibility.

He turned the figures over to Murray who locked himself in his room. He emerged from his home after a week with the name of the company, a working plan, and the names of potential investors.

"Murray just flew with it," said Hinshaw, who is administrative vice president of IPSA. Murray has the title of executive vice president. Cart Thetford of Sulphur, Okla., is president.

Murray employs 142 men, who start at $1.60 an hour. Following a 30-day training period the workers are raised to $80 a week, with extra money paid to men working larger routes.

In addition, the firm provides a paid-up hospitalization program and allots 10 per cent of its profits for pension and retirement benefits.

The U.S. Post Office starts its regular employees at $2.80 an hour.

Murray's system is uncomplicated. Sixteen trucks are assigned daily routes for pickup and delivery. The mail is picked up throughout the day, taken to the main office where it is sorted and packaged for delivery the same day.

The trucks then make their delivery runs with the workers hanging the mail in plastic bags on the door knobs of the recipient.

is. The Gilligan victory, then, is a body blow to Kennedy. With the notable exception of United Auto Workers chieftain Ray Ross, Ohio's union leaders want Humphrey and lead Kennedy.

In fact, a secret poll today of Ohio's 115 delegate votes would likely turn up 70 or more for Humphrey (which runs counter to unrealistic estimates by national Kennedy strategists). Accordingly, anti-Kennedy forces — led by Bert Porter, the Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) Democratic chairman — are pressing for a quick caucus of the Ohio delegation, putting it on record for Humphrey.

Actually, Porter and other Cleveland regulars were most unhappy in 1966 when Humphrey supported Negro Carl Stokes's successful campaign for Mayor of Cleveland against the Porter organization. But this irritation pales when compared with Porter's memory of bitter struggles over Federal patronage with the Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Ohio. During his single term in the House (1965-66), Gilligan rated a neat 100 per cent in the scorecards of the AFL-CIO. By contrast, his rating from the conservative Americans for Constitutional Action was a feeble 7. Gilligan also benefited in Cleveland from the help of Negro leaders identified with Mayor Carl Stokes.

In November, Gilligan will be pitted against the Republican senatorial nominee, Ohio's Attorney General William B. Saxbe. Conservatives who are dismayed by the loss of Lausche may be consoled, to some extent, by the lively hope of seeing Saxbe elected. Saxbe is known as a pragmatist, a savvy campaigner, a competent middle-of-the-roader with broad appeal across the Republican spectrum. The House elections of 1966 demonstrated a Republican trend in Ohio; if the momentum can be sustained in November, Saxbe should win.

But with deference to the gentleman, he won't bring to the Senate the color, the verve, and the bare-knuckled spirit of Ohio's little giant. In the lovely, hurly-burly of the Hill, Lausche has fought the good fight. It's a pity to see him knocked out.

people would respond and approve such an additional tax. There are still doubts. But Mecklenburg voters did a good figure of $426,408 collected from sales in March looms very large. Multiplied, it means Mecklenburg can expect approximately 35 to $6 million in additional local revenue in an average year.

In Charlotte, the Mecklenburg County finance office called it "gravy." It is money which has not been budgeted. Officials agreed, however, it is badly needed and can be put to good use.

Annual Exposition Of NCIAA At Gastonia

GASTONIA — The North Carolina Industrial Arts Association held its annual Spring Exposition at Wray Junior High School in Gastonia on Friday and Saturday.

The purpose of the exposition was to bring together those projects which have been produced by students enrolled in industrial arts classes in the junior and senior high schools throughout North Carolina to be judged.

Dr. Earl Weber, Chairman of Industrial Arts Education at Millersville State College, Millersville, Pennsylvania brought the main address at the luncheon on Saturday.

Dr. Weber spoke on "Industrial Arts Concerns All."

In his address he said, "The discipline of industrial arts is important, but the major concern should be with human beings. The machine should be used by man to relieve him for his more important task, the task of thinking."

"Industrial Arts should be the study about the machine and how it can make a better life for us as well as to develop human beings as human beings."

At the banquet on Friday night a banner for the NCIAA, designed by Thomas Latimer of the Department of Industrial and Technical Education at East Carolina University, was presented to Bill Scarborough, president of the Association by Latimer.

A display, designed and constructed by Bob Tate of the INDT Department at ECU, was used at the Exposition to depict the areas of study in the Department through a series of slides taken by Dr. W.R. Hoots, also of the Department.

Other ECU faculty members attending the Exposition were Dr. Thomas J. Haigwood, department chairman, Dr. Kenneth L. Bing, Fred Broadhurst, Clarence Kelsey, Robert Leith, Blundy Scott, and Paul Waldrop.

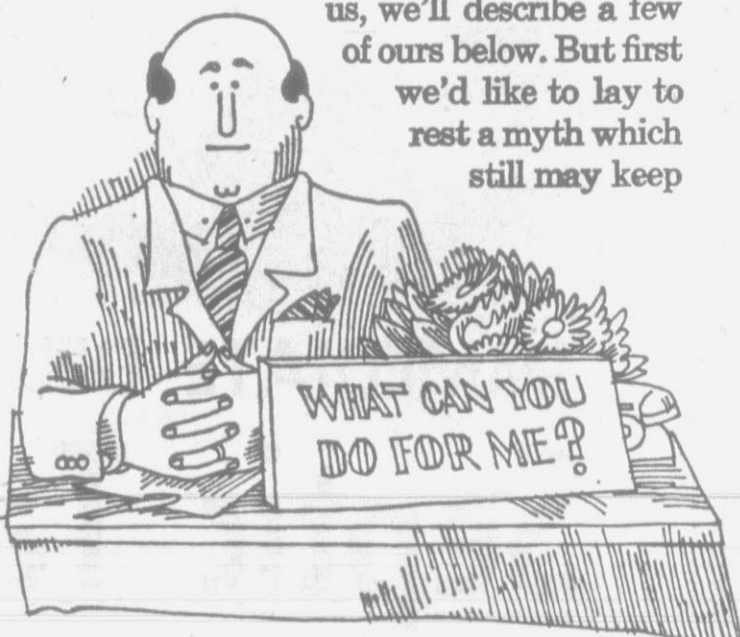

Students attending the Exposition were Earl Bunch, President of the Industrial and Technical Education Club at ECU, Larry Ivey, Thomas Knox, and Ed Pittman.

How to take advantage of a bank.

Just about everybody has occasion to do business with a bank. Most people, for example, open a Checking Account at one time or another. But for some people—too many, it seems to us—that's about it.

Which is unfortunate. Because banks offer a multitude of services—many of them free—which could save them a lot of time and effort. Not to mention money.

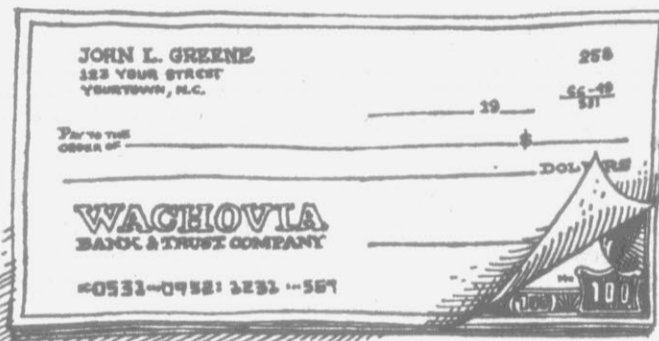

So why don't they use these services? One reason may be that they don't know about them. And if you'll bear with us, we'll describe a few of ours below. But first we'd like to lay to rest a myth which still may keep some people from taking full advantage of all a bank has to offer. Namely: that a bank is a big, impersonal machine and that bankers are therefore not really interested in individual needs. Or problems.

Not true. Banks get big by fulfilling individual needs. And by helping solve individual problems. And bankers never forget this.

The fact is that bankers hate to say no. And if you find this hard to believe, try to remember the last time a salesman told you not to buy his product. A banker sells services. And you are his customer.

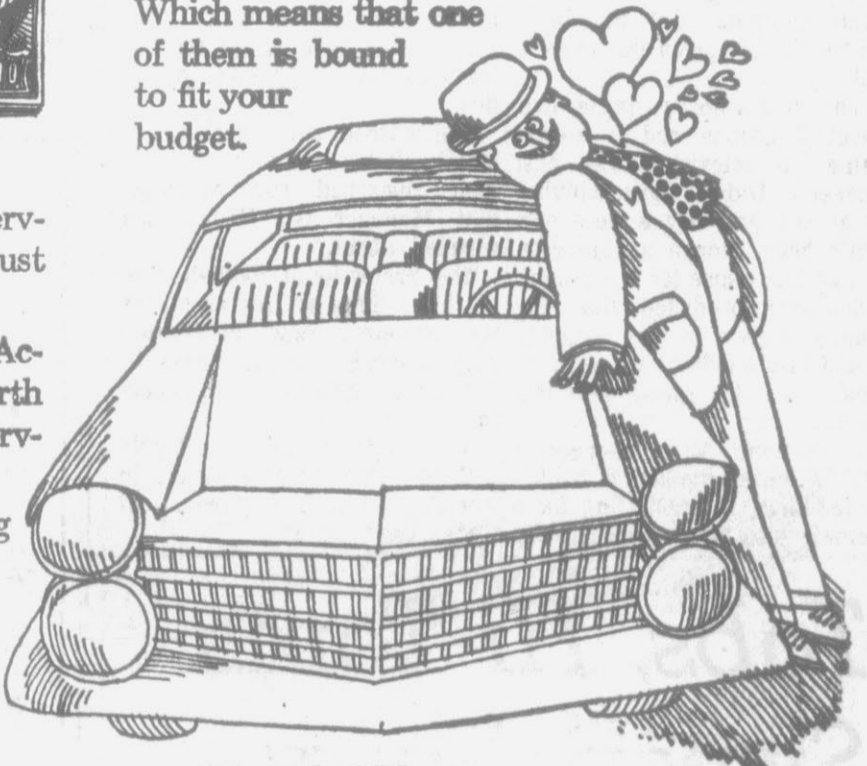

Which brings us to some of the services we offer at Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Like all banks, we offer Checking Accounts. Unlike any other bank in North Carolina, we also offer Ready Reserve Account.

It backs up your regular Checking Account with a cash reserve of from $500 to $5,000. Which means that when you need money—for any reason—you can borrow it simply by writing a check. It doesn't cost a nickel till you use it. And it comes with the convenience of a Wachovia Check Guarantee Card, plus the economy of no-service-charge checking.

If you want to make money, we offer a number of ways to do it by lending us yours. (Which is what you're doing when you open a Savings Account.) For example, we don't limit you to one or two kinds of Certificates of Deposit. We tailor them to fit your needs. And on all Savings Accounts we pay the highest interest allowed by law. Every day. On every dollar. And we compound it every month, so that short-term savers get the same benefits as long-term savers.

If you want to borrow money, we'll lend it to you for anything from a new boat to a new home to a new business. At bank rates. And the variety of plans we offer would fill this page with small type. Which means that one of them is bound to fit your budget.

What else? Plenty. We'll keep your valuables for you, vault-protected from fire and theft, for only pennies a day.

One of our career Trust Officers will counsel you on how best to handle your estate and protect your family's future.

If you're a farmer, we offer many specialized services, from crop loans to free advice about money crops. If you're self-employed, you'll want to look into our tax-sheltered retirement plan.

And those are only a few. We have over 100 ways to help you manage your money. All in one place. All at one time. So why not come in and take advantage of them? And us.

Because, after all, who knows more about money than a banker?

Kiwanis Get 13-0 Win Over Optimists

The Kiwanis rolled to a 13-0 victory over the Optimists yesterday as Grif Garner pitched the first shutout of the year in the North State Little League.

The victory left the Kiwanis a half-game back of leading Coca-Cola and the Lions, both 2-0, while the Kiwanis are 2-1. The Optimists are 1-2, while R. C. Cola and the Jaycees are 0-2.

Garner, in hurling his shutout, gave up just three hits, while striking out 12 and walking three. His teammates gave him perfect defense, giving up no errors.

Meanwhile, the Kiwanis put together 12 hits to score 13 runs.

In the first inning, four runs came across. Kelly Heath walked and stole second. Al Heath and Garner walked, loading the bases. Jon West reached on an error, scoring the Heath brothers, and a double by Jim Rodgers brought Garner and West in.

In the second, two more Kiwanis runs scored. Kelly Heath singled and advanced on a passed ball. Al Heath doubled, and scored Kelly. West then singled to score Al.

The Kiwanis added four more runs in the fourth for a 10-0 lead. Bob Boles got a double and West singled. Rodgers walked, loading the bases. James Mayo walked, forcing in Boles. A double by Billy Brookshire brought in West and Rodgers, and Mayo scored on a fielder's choice by Kelly Heath.

The scoring was closed out in the fifth with three more Kiwanis runs. Boles doubled again and West reached on an error. Chris Manning singled to load them up and Jim Rodgers doubled in Boles and West. Kelly Heath singled in Manning with the final run.

Exchange Rolls To 16-4 Victory

The Exchange rolled to a 16-4 victory over the Moose yesterday in North State Little League action.

Greenville Tobacco continues to lead the league with a 2-0 record, while the Exchange is 2-1. Next come the Elks and Pepsi-Cola with 1-1 marks, followed by the Moose at 1-2 and Security Life at 0-2.

The Exchange started the scoring in the first inning, getting four runs. Dean Nunn led off, reaching on an error. Randy Alford singled and Ed Clark singled. Robert Brinkley hit a sacrifice fly to score Nunn and Richie Puryear singled in Alford and Clark. Billy Nunn reached on an error and when Louis Clark's grounder was misplayed, Puryear scored with the fourth run.

Another Exchange runner crossed the plate in the second. Alford singled and moved up on a passed ball. He scored on Brinkley's single.

In the third, the Moose came up with their first run, cutting the lead to 5-1. Terry Glisson doubled and scored on a single by Ray Warren.

But the Exchange put together 11 big runs in the bottom of the third to close out any Moose hopes of a rally. Louis Clark led off with a home run. Doug Paschal reached on a fielder's choice and Nunn was safe on an error. Alford also reached on an error and Ed Clark walked to force in Paschal. A walk to Brinkley brought in Nunn, and another free trip, to Billy Wilson, brought in Alford. Louis Clark singled in Ed Clark and Brinkley and Mike Arnold was hit by a pitch. Paschal reached on an error, scoring Wilson, and Nunn reached on an error to score Clark and Arnold. Alford also reached on an error, allowing Paschal to score, and then Nunn stole home with the 11th run of the inning.

The Moose picked up three more in the fourth, but it was only a token, as they trailed by the final 16-4 margin. Marvin Aldridge reached on a fielder's choice and Keith Jones was safe on an error. Jack Jones singled in Aldridge, and a double by Warren brought in the Jones' boys.

Laughing: Drug Can't Cure Colt

By BEN OLAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Laughing at Sports:

That drug Butazolidin has been used for gout and other human ailments. But maybe it shouldn't be given to cure a colt.

They had a hockey game, four baseball games and a soccer game on television the past weekend. Didn't know whether to go out and buy a new car, drink beer, smoke a cigarette, . . . or just pause for a moment.

Someone predicted that big league soccer in this country would last another two seasons. Yeah . . . this spring and this summer.

A Portland, Maine recreation official, citing the lack of athletic facilities, is negotiating for a cemetery to be used as a baseball field. He's leaving no stone unturned.

Jimmy Brown, holder of the NFL's rushing record with 2,312 yards, signed to co-star in a movie with Raquel Welch. The script must have called for the leads to have impressive statistics.

The earned run averages of Mets' pitchers are great. It's their unearned run averages that Manager Gil Hodges is worried about.

The professional football people have three options as far as the proposed new conversion rule is concerned . . . pass it, kick it out or run it as an experiment.

Jim Hunter of the A's actually retired 54 consecutive batters in pitching his perfect game . . . 27 Twins.

Tobs, Hi-Toms Sweep Pairs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS for its triumph in the nightcap.

Wilson and High Point-Thomsville swept Carolina League doubleheaders Monday night.

Wilson defeated Peninsula 6-0 in the first game and then subdued the Greys 1-0 in the 12-inning finale.

The Hi-Toms whipped Burlington 8-3 in their first game, and took the second 8-2.

In the first game, the Hi-Toms went into the final inning trailing 3-2, but a wal and Tom Ragland's double tied the score before Steven Hertz homered for the winning run.

Righthander Jack Van Vleck was given a 4-0 first inning lead in the nightcap and protected it by allowing Burlington only four hits, including Dick Baldwin's two-run homer.

Pitchers Chuck Murray and Carl Frinacrok each went the distance as Wilson shutout the Greys a total of 19 innings. Murray got a big assist from Steve Waters, who hit a grand slam homer in the first game. Wilson scored an unearned run

Hearing Continues On Derby Disqualification

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Dancer's Image's owner Peter Fuller and trainer Lou Cavalari have left Louisville. But the hearing in the disqualification of the gray colt as Kentucky Derby winner continues at Churchill Downs today.

Today, however, the two were to supervise a workout for Dancer's Image, now in training for the Preakness this Saturday.

At the first day of the hearing, which lasted 1½ hours, eight or more witnesses offered testimony or evidence. However, no one divulged what transpired at the closed session, which was cloaked by tight security.

The hearing is intended to determine who is to blame for the appearance of phenylbutazone in the colt's system after the running of the Derby May 4.

Cavalari's reputation is at stake, plus he could be suspended from handling Fuller's string. In addition, Fuller says he won't run Dancer's Image in the Preakness if Cavalari can't saddle him.

Fuller already has lost the $122,500 Derby purse because of the drug incident. The money presumably will be awarded to Calumet Farm's Forward Pass. However, any distribution of the purse awaits an order from the stewards, which will be issued only after completion of the hearing.

Besides Fuller, trainer Cavalari and two members of Fuller's stable staff gave testimony. Also before the stewards Monday were Dr. Alex Hartill, in whose barn Dancer's Image was quartered before the Derby; Doug Davis, who had his racing string in the next barn, and two representatives of the drug testing firm that found phenylbutazone in the colt's urine.

Turbine Crew Suffers Setback

By PAUL PETROTTA
Associated Press Sports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Car owner Andy Granatelli has suffered still another setback in his 22-year-old quest for victory in the Indianapolis 500-mile race.

One of the four Grand Prix drivers Granatelli hired to drive his stable of six turbine-powered cars was sidelined Monday for at least three weeks with a hair-line fracture on the right wrist. Jackie Stewart suffered the injury when the steering wheel lashed back during practice for a Formula Two race in Spain.

Two of the drivers—Jim Clark of Scotland and Mike Spence of England—were killed in racing accidents. Clark died April 7 at Hockenheim, Germany, and Spence was injured fatally a month later at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, practicing for the 500.

American driver Parnelli

Jones, also signed to drive for Granatelli, withdrew, saying the turbocar which nearly won the Memorial Day Indianapolis race last year no longer was competitive with piston-engine cars because of revisions ordered by the U.S. Auto Club.

The turbocar was retired permanently Sunday when it spun and slapped the wall here. Granatelli said the car was not worth repairing because a USAC rule change effective next year will not permit engines to extend beyond the inside edge of the wheel.

Granatelli's turbine stable has been reduced to three cars and one Grand Prix driver—Graham Hill, who won the 1966 Indianapolis race.

Dave Blackmer, six-year member of the Granatelli team, says Granatelli "goes to the end of the road and overcomes obstacles where others would give up."

Bunning Hurls Fine Game, But Loses To Cards, 1-0

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
If the Pittsburgh Pirates ever get Jim Bunning a few runs they'll be dangerous. If the St. Louis Cardinals get anybody a few more runs they'll be unstoppable.

The Cardinals widened their National League lead to four games Monday night by nipping luckless Bunning and the surprisingly punchless Pirates 1-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Nelson Briles.

St. Louis has scored just 12 runs in its last six starts . . . and won four of them.

The Pirates have totaled 11 runs in splitting their last six games. Bunting is 3-3 on the season . . . with a pair of 1-0 setbacks in the last two weeks. The 36-year-old right-hander, acquired by Pittsburgh in a winter trade, lost five 1-0 decisions with Philadelphia last year.

In other National League night games—the only other action in the majors—the Chicago Cubs whipped Los Angeles 5-1 and Atlanta shaded Philadelphia 4-2.

Curt Flood's double and Roger Maris' run-scoring single in the first inning gave Briles all the support he needed in winging to his fifth victory against two losses.

Briles, tagged for a single by Bill Mazerowski and a double by Willie Stargell in the first inning, pitched out of the jam and then shackled the Pirates, whose team batting average dipped to .226.

After giving up the first inning run, Bunning allowed only one more St. Louis runner to reach second base until the eighth, when he left for a pinch hitter.

Ernie Banks cracked a two-run homer for the Cubs, who spotted Los Angeles a 1-0 first inning lead before moving ahead to stay in the fourth, on singles by Don Kessinger, Glen Beckert and Billy Williams plus a sacrifice fly by Ron Santo.

Santo singled home another run in the sixth before Banks unloaded his fifth 1968 homer . . . and the 47th of his career.

Southpaw Ken Holtzman was the winner with eighth inning relief help from former Dodger Phil Regan. Ken Boyer, making his Dodger debut, drove in the only run off Holtzman with the first of his two singles.

Knuckleballer Phil Niekro stopped Philadelphia on three hits and keyed the Braves' deciding two-run rally in the ninth with a bunt single. Reliever Dick Farrell walked pinch hitter Tito Francona with the bases jammed, forcing in the tie-breaking run, and Hank Aaron provided insurance with a sacrifice fly.

Aaron's brother Tommy got the Braves off to an early lead with a two-run homer but the Phils tied it in the fourth on a two-run single by Johnny Briggs.

Presbyterian, St. James Win

St. James Methodist and First Presbyterian picked up opening night victories in the Church Softball League last night.

St. James took a 5-3 victory over Grace Free Will Baptist, while Presbyterian devastated Meadowbrook, 48-0.

St. James took the lead in the open with a home run by Vincent in the second inning. Vincent made it 2-0 with another homer in the fourth.

Grace came up with three runs in the sixth inning to gain the lead, but St. James rallied for three of its own in the seventh to regain the lead and take the win.

The second game could hardly be called a contest. It was over before the first inning was completed, as Presbyterian completely leveled Meadowbrook.

In the first, Presbyterian pushed across 14 runs, including homers by Fleming and Wilson. In the second, 14 more crossed for a 28-0 edge. Homers in the second were hit by Fleming, B. Moore (2), Wilson and Summers.

Presbyterian added 11 more in the third, with only Lee hitting a homer. By the fourth, the Presbyterian were worn out, scoring only two runs, and after a scoreless fifth, they rebounded back to get seven more in the sixth to complete the rout.

As we complete the transplanting of the tobacco crop, it is not too early to begin planning the plant bed program for the 1969 crop. A well planned program, based on sound, proven practices, will greatly reduce the risk involved in producing a good supply of healthy tobacco plants.

If you are not satisfied with your present plant bed site, now is the time to choose one that is more suitable for good plant production. When selecting a plant bed site there are several factors that should be considered. It is best to select a deep, fertile, loamy soil that warms up quickly. The bed should be located near a convenient water supply, such as a home water supply, pond, or stream, so that it can be watered easily during dry periods. Cold and drying winds can cause serious damage to stands and earliness of plants; therefore, it is a good idea for all beds to have some type of windbreak on the north, northwest, and northeast sides. Plant beds that had good windbreaks this year generally produced a good supply of fairly early plants.

Once the plant bed site is selected, the soil should be managed properly through the summer months for best results. Whether an old or new plant bed site is used, good physical condition and high organic matter in the soil seems to be very helpful in getting a good stand and promoting growth. A summer cover crop of soybeans or cowpeas will not only help maintain good physical condition of the soil but will help keep weeds from growing and producing seed on the plant bed site. The cover crop should be disced in early in the fall so it will be decayed before time to treat the soil for weed and nematode control.

Plant production is a very important part of growing a tobacco crop. Let's begin now to carry out these proven practices in producing our plants for the 1969 crop.

N.C. Dentists Oppose Booklet's Endorsement

PINEHURST — A strong objection to the American Dental Association's endorsement of a booklet entitled "How to Protect Dental Health While Enjoying Candy" was voiced by the House of Delegates of the N.C. Dental Society at the annual meeting here this week.

At the urging of Dr. M. W. Aldridge of Greenville and Dr. James H. Lee of Goldsboro, the policy-making body of the 1,400-member society adopted a resolution requesting the House of Delegates of the ADA "to consider appropriate action to rescind the approval of the publication."

The booklet, published by the National Confectioners' Association, has been distributed to about 100,000 dentists in the U. S. with a statement from the ADA that information in the booklet on dental health "is considered to be in accord with current scientific knowledge."

Dr. Aldridge and Dr. Lee pointed out to Tar Heel dentists that the booklet completely evades the role that refined sweets (candy) play in causing tooth decay.

Continued distribution of the book, they said, "will certainly be extremely misleading."

The two dentists presented Clostridium tetani, microscopic inhabitant of soil and human and horse intestines, is the cause of tetanus in humans and domestic animals.

their plea to the dentists' annual meeting as representatives of the Fifth District Dental Society in eastern North Carolina.

If you don't want to pay the price of America's roomiest car try the second roomiest:

a new Chevrolet like this

If things like head, shoulder and leg room are important to you, take a close look at the new Chevrolet.

Automotive News did—and its 1968 Roominess Index shows Chevrolet is the second most spacious of all American sedans.

The roomiest? That distinction, we're not at all embarrassed to admit, goes to America's most popular luxury car.

Based on the Roominess Index, which totals seven key interior dimensions to the fraction of an inch, Chevrolet's 4-door sedan scored 290.7. A tenth of a point behind the 4-door luxury model.

A pretty good showing when you consider how much more the expensive model sells for. And some of the other cars Chevrolet topped carry just as impressive price tags.

But that's just a sample of the pluses you get at a Chevrolet price. You'll find a lot more of them in the fine things Chevrolet has designed around all that space.

Drop down to your dealer's and bring the family. This one's a real crowd-pleaser.

There's A Difference In Kennedy Campaign

EDITOR'S NOTE—AP political writer Jack Bell, who covered John F. Kennedy's 1960 campaigning, reports the differences and similarities in Robert F. Kennedy's 1968 drive for the Democratic presidential nomination.

By JACK BELL
AP Political Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Everything is different. But, somehow, everything seems the same.

The voice that comes out of the microphone mounted on the campaign sound truck has the same Harvard Yard twang. Often the quick, jerky gestures, the finger stabbing in the air for emphasis, are the same. But the 1968 version of a Kennedy on the campaign trail has many differences from the 1960 Kennedy who established the political mystique of the family name.

In its fundamentals, the theme of John F. Kennedy eight years ago was: "Let's get this nation moving." He held aloft the banner of a dream of American greatness, a pattern of movement after what he labeled the drowsy Eisenhower years.

Basically, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy is telling the campaign crowds as he crisscrosses the country that there is entirely too much wrong with America. He recites the ills of rioting, the hunger and the malignant idleness in the ghettos, the flaring threat of inflation, the bloody death toll in Vietnam.

These bad, bad things just cannot be permitted to continue, he says. Yet while he spells out his position on the issues in policy papers, his ultimate solution is simple: If the voters just elect him president, he will do something about them.

The physical differences in campaigning by the Kennedy of 1960 and the Kennedy of 1968 stand out sharply.

John F. Kennedy was always a cool customer, highly approachable in private but a trifle standoffish in his response to public demonstrations. At 6 feet 1 and packing about 185 pounds, he could walk through crowds without being manhandled by admirers.

The beaming ladies, young and old, jumped, danced and squealed and tried to touch him as he rode or walked by. It was hands as he grasps the podium. The 1968 candidate gradually is succeeding in shucking off the emotional intensity that marked his early campaigning. He is adopting a relaxed, rambling style geared to getting laughs and cheers by local references.

The New York senator seems to have inherited the fabled "trunkful of jokes" President Kennedy was supposed to have had on the luggage truck at all times. They just don't seem to have been adapted by his writers to fit the occasion quite as well as those that John F. Kennedy got off.

When he talks in farm communities, Sen. Kennedy's favorite line is to announce that he is the candidate who is doing most for the farmer. He cites as an example the 26 quarts of milk he says his family—with 10 children going on 11—consumes daily.

Behind this badinage, however, lies the familiar glinting steel of a solidly constructed political organization, built by Bob Kennedy for his brother in the 1960 primaries and general election and now reconstructed for his own use.

With Bob Kennedy it is different. At 5 feet 9 plus, weighing 165 soaking wet, he can get lost in the sea of those pressing about him. Tall Bill Barry, an ex-FBI man with the shoulders of a shotputter, breaks interference through the swarms of youthful admirers who persist in pressing close to touch Kennedy's clothing—if they can't reach the undulating hands he runs along the tips of the fingers stretching toward him.

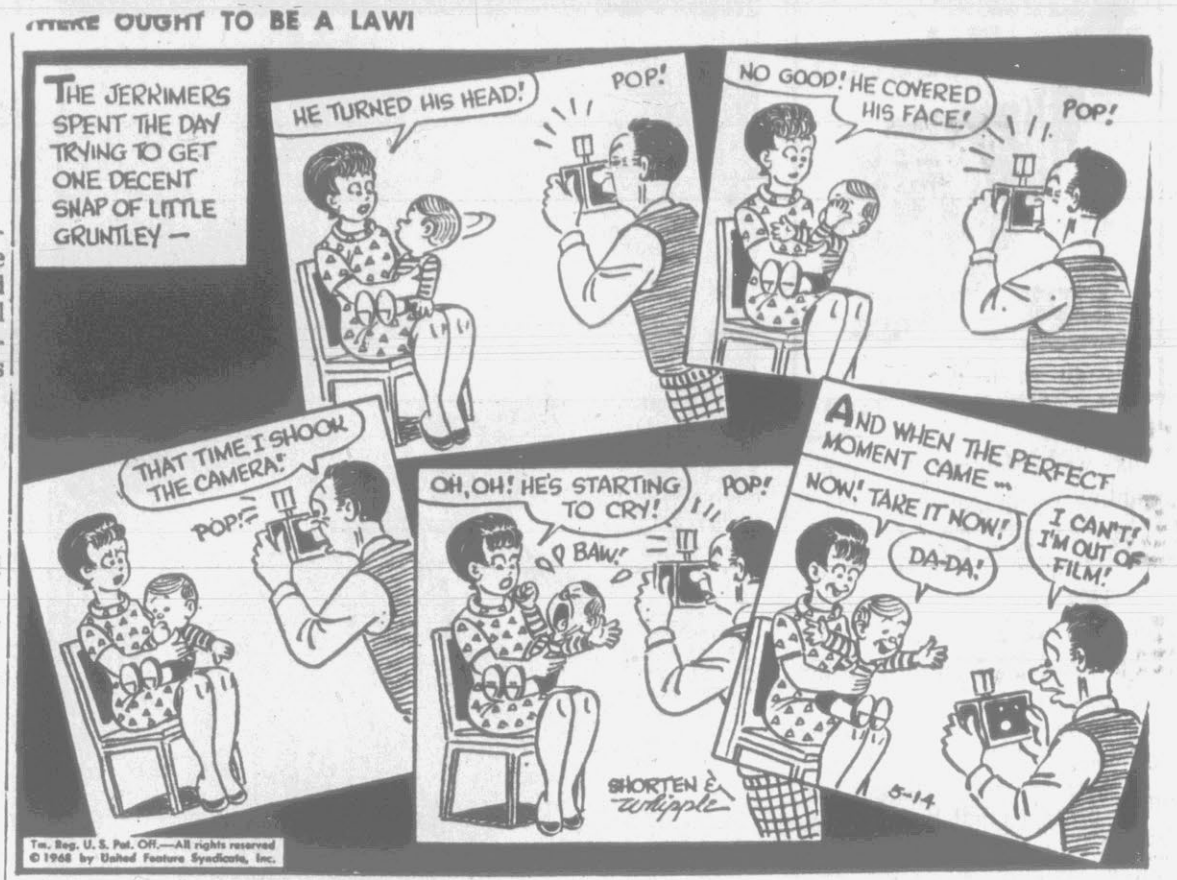

Once Barry lands him in the official car, the security man hangs around Kennedy's middle like a linebacker who has tackled a running back at the waistline. The crowd urge to rip off the New Yorker's cufflinks has become such an "in" thing that he now buys disposable ones by the gross.

Where John Kennedy was nearly always collected and to the point in his campaign remarks, Robert Kennedy has yet to overcome fully a jittery nervousness in addressing crowds that is betrayed by trembling

The Kennedys never do anything by halves. They inundate their opponents with men and money. But their best asset still remains the name which President Kennedy raised to his glamorous heights.

State Auditor Raps Hospital Accounts

RALEIGH (AP)—State Auditor Henry L. Bridges has called for improved accounting procedures at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

In an audit report issued Monday, Bridges addressed his request to officials of the University of North Carolina. He said officials of the university-operated hospital have not complied with similar requests in the past.

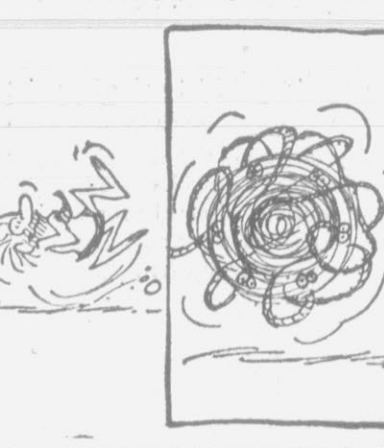

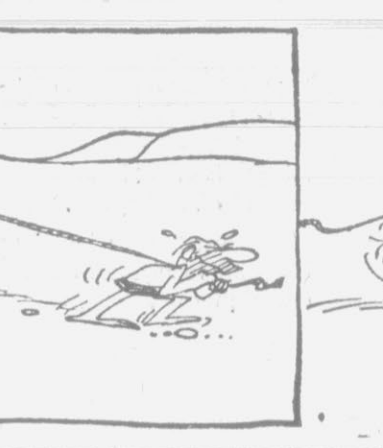

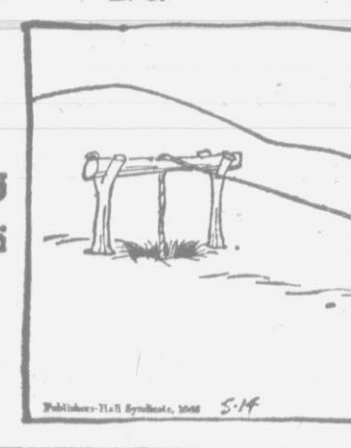

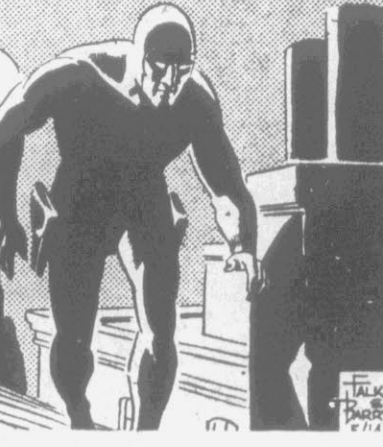

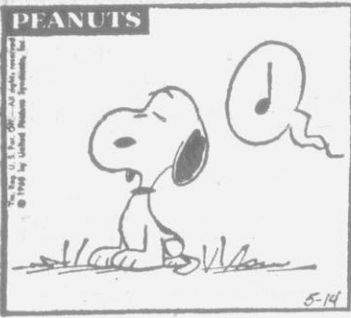

"The manner in which the hospital records are now maintained is not consistent with good accounting procedures and as a result we are unable to express an opinion as to the reliability or accuracy of the statements presented in our report," said Bridges in a report to the Advisory Budget Commission. The audit covered the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1967.

"There is a definite lack of proper administration of patient accounts," the report stated. "Patients are not rendered statements of their hospital bills upon being discharged, which definitely hinders collection efforts and increases the accounts receivable considerably."

The reports showed the hospital's uncollected accounts increased $1.1 million between March 1, 1967 and March 1, 1968.

Charges are put on patients' bills "several days, even weeks," after their discharge, he added.

"In a number of instances we found charges and credits on a patient's account which were not his. The causes of the errors were incorrect patient account numbers, improperly prepared departmental charge documents and illegible charge documents. These errors result in poor collections from patients, two billings to insurance carriers and angry patients."

Pfeiffer College Prexy Resigning

MISENHEIMER, N. C. (AP)—Dr. J. Lem Stokes II has resigned as Pfeiffer College president, effective Dec. 31.

Stokes, 59, announced his retirement Monday at a specially called faculty meeting. He has held the office for 15 years.

Prior to accepting the presidency of Pfeiffer, Stokes served at Nashville, Tenn., as secretary of religion in higher education for the Methodist Church's board of education.

He is an ordained Methodist minister, and was born in Seoul, Korea, the son of Methodist missionaries. At the faculty meeting Stokes said he felt the years ahead would be important, demanding years, "calling for, as president, a young person who possesses great energy, high ambition for the college and a fresh mental outlook."

When Stokes came to Pfeiffer in July 1953 it was a junior college with an enrollment of 200. The school became fully accredited for a four-year curriculum in 1957, and now has about 900 students.

Florida is in about the same latitude as Egypt, but its climate is more like that of Italy, since both are peninsulas surrounded by warm seas.

Computer Ass'n Unit Chartered

A group of student computer enthusiasts at East Carolina University have received their charter as a chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery (ACM).

The charter was delivered in person by ACM's national chairman on new chapters, Dr. Leiland H. Williams. He brought it straight to Greenville after it was validated at an ACM Council meeting in Atlantic City, N. J.

Dr. Williams, who is director of the computing center of Auburn University, also addressed the new ECU chapter at its charter banquet.

Twenty-one students are charter members of the new chapter. First officers are Francis Martins of Greenville, chairman; Willis Dixon of Greenville, vice chairman; Dennis Chestnut of Tabor City, secretary, and Jesse Oakley of Greenville, treasurer.

Mrs. Tennala A. Gross, acting director of the ECU Computing Center, and Mrs. Elizabeth P. Johnson, director of data processing for the ECU Regional Development Institute, are charter sponsors.

Students who are charter members of the new ACM chapter include:

- PITT COUNTY, Greenville — Willis Edward Dixon, whose guardian is Mrs. Nellie Corey, 301 14th St.; Claude Hendershot, son of Dr. Paul Hendershot; Francis Edward Martins, son of Mrs. Anibal Martins, 1900 S. Charles St.; Millie McGlohon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. McGlohon, 204 Hillcrest Dr.
- Winterville — Jesse R. Oakley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Oakley, Route 1.

OSU Landmark To Be Replaced

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — University Hall, a landmark at Ohio State University, will be torn down to be replaced by a $5-million structure. University trustees authorized razing of the building despite objections of many alumni.

It was completed in about 1875, and is now termed unsafe.

North's three club response to the opening two no trump bid is a conventional request for the opening bidder to show a major suit if he has one. The fact that North actually has clubs in the present instance is purely coincidental.

When South rebid three hearts, North's hand became worth 12 points in support—counting one for each doubleton—and he proceeded directly to six hearts inasmuch as the partnership was assured of having at least 33 points between them.

West opened the queen of diamonds and, with the appearance of the dummy, declarer relaxed, as if his chores were purely routine. It was his intention to draw trump and then play clubs—ruffing one in his hand if necessary, to establish the suit. The trick count was: four hearts, four clubs, one club ruff, two diamonds, and one spade.

After winning the opening lead, South cashed the ace of hearts and then led over to the king. When West showed out of trumps, the situation became exceedingly complicated. While South can still establish clubs by ruffing once in his hand, the heart suit becomes blocked in the process and he is unable to draw trump.

South decided to shift his attentions elsewhere. He led back to the king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in dummy. When the jack and ten appeared from the West hand, it established declarer's nine as a winner. The jack of hearts was cashed and the closed hand was reentered with the king of clubs, so that declarer could draw the last trump.

West had in the meantime discarded the three and seven of spades. When the nine of diamonds was led, however, his margin of safety was gone. He could not afford to part with a club or else the dummy's suit would become established, so West gave up the jack of spades—thereby blanking his king.

South tried to run the dummy's clubs. When the suit did not split, he led back to the ace of spades, refusing to finesse and felling West's king in the process. The queen of spades took the fulfilling trick.

South could have made matters much easier for himself by going after the club suit immediately. It was all right to cash one high trump from his hand early, but he must then switch to the king, ace, and a small club. When East shows out, declarer can safely ruff low to establish the suit. He now draws trump ending up in dummy and the club suit can be run to clinch 12 tricks on the deal.

The Worry Clinic Old Wives' Tales Not For Mothers-To-Be

Melba can discuss this age old bugaboo of pregnant wives. But there are other serious worries that should make expectant mothers very jittery if they are jeopardizing their unborn babies in the many ways cited below. So scrapebook this case or mail it to young couples who are expecting off spring.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.
CASE F-367: Melba G., aged 24, has a common worry. "Dr. Crane," she began, "we are expecting our first baby. "But I have had an insatiable hunger the past few weeks for dill pickles." "And my mother says I better eat them freely or I may mark my baby with a birthmark shaped like a pickle." "Is that true or just a superstition?"

This craving during pregnancy for some special food is called "pica" in medical language. And it may indicate a need for some vitamin or salt and acid craving of the woman's metabolism. But we know that these unusual food hungers, as well as fright due to seeing a house on fire or an auto collision, will not cause a mother to mark her unborn baby.

For there is no nerve bond between a pregnant woman and her unborn infant.

And the nerves are the physiological "wires" that convey our mental impressions, fears, desires, etc.

The umbilical cord that fastens the baby to the wall of its mother's womb contains no nerves at all!

Moreover, the mother's blood does not circulate in the baby's blood vessels and vice versa.

Each has its own separate heart, plus its individual arteries and veins.

"But, Dr. Crane," you may pretest, "aren't many babies born with birthmarks? So what causes them?"

Chemicals and toxins from germ or virus diseases are a common explanation.

For example, German measles in the expectant mother is regarded as zooming the likelihood of defects in her unborn baby.

Thalidomide was cited a few years ago as causing 4,000 defective babies in the U. S. A. in one year.

But there were 72,000 other defective infants born that same year to mothers who did not use thalidomide!

What caused them to be defective?

Well, we have a lot of medical evidence that a cigarette smoking pregnant woman will exert an unfavorable influence on her baby and also increase the likelihood of miscarriages. For there is a specific time sequence at which the various organs develop in the embryo.

In the laboratory, for example, we can make a tiny hole in the shell of an incubating hen egg.

Then, either with a tiny needle or a droplet of acid or an electric spark, if we touch the spot on the children embryo where the eye or a wing or a leg is starting to bud, we can then remove the needle and cover the hole in the shell.

Later, that chick will hatch but will have a deformed eye or be missing a wing or leg where that tiny injury occurred to the embryo.

You expectant mothers should thus beware about catching contagious diseases and also be careful about addiction to any drugs, such as tranquilizers and tobacco.

Remember, you are flirting with disaster to your unborn baby if you smoke cigarettes!

So send for my medical booklet "Facts About Pregnancy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents, and safeguard your developing infant baby!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in car of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)
