Saigon Will Talk In Few Days

Apollo 8 Crew Talks Moon Orbit Is Simple Mission Say Astronauts

By EDWARD K. DELONG
SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Discounting Russian fears about space radiation, America's Apollo 8 moonflight crew Saturday described their Christmas voyage in lunar orbit as a simple mission and said it will pave the way and lessen the risks for a U.S. moon landing next year.

main reason for flying the mission, Lovell said, is to check the ability of a spacecraft to navigate in lunar orbit. The astronauts said they were not upset about spending Christmas away from their families and that they would probably celebrate some time after the flight. The crew will track and photograph sites on the moon where other astronauts could land next year, probably in July on Apollo 11.

County Court Gives Way To Updated System In Pitt

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Judge Dink James closed a two-day term of Pitt County Records Court here Wednesday and in doing so, brought an end to one chapter in the history of justice in the county.

Members of the Bar presented the jurist with the gavel from his bench and a plaque expressing the appreciation of that group for his many years as judge.

"The new court will serve a useful purpose, although it will take time to get used to it. . ."

The county court was established in Pitt by an act of the General Assembly March 9, 1915 and Frank M. Wooten was the first Judge of the court.

The presentations were made by Pitt Bar president Fred T. Mattox.

Under the District Court system, all inferior courts including Justice of the Peace, mayors and recorders court will be done away with.

Following Wooten, Lewis G. Cooper, William A. Darden and W. L. Whedbee occupied the bench. Judge James was elected to the post in the 1932 elections and has served the court since 1933. The judge has run unopposed for the post since 1942.

Although retiring as judge (James did not seek election to one of the four district judgeships in this area) he will continue his private practice of law with the firm of James and Hite. Judge James, although serving as judge, has continued his private law practice in Greenville since 1925.

All actions will originate in the new District Courts.

Judge James, a Pitt County native who received his education in local schools and at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, was honored by members of the Pitt County Bar Association Tuesday night.

Commenting on the new system of courts, Judge James said "The system of courts established in 1915 were good for that time."

Magistrates, on a salary basis paid by the state, will issue warrants, be available for preliminary hearings, and try such small claims cases and accept guilty pleas and accept fines in such cases as the Chief District Judge may assign.

AT CIVITAN MEET . . . Governor Harry Newlin of Burlington, ECU president Dr. Leo Jenkins, and governor-elect Ernie Ford of Whiteville talk freedom.

Civitan's Meet Here; Dr. Jenkins Stresses Freedom

About 150 Civitan club members were on hand here Friday and yesterday for the North Carolina District East meeting of Civitan International. East Carolina University president Dr. Leo W. Jenkins spoke at the group's Saturday afternoon luncheon. He stressed the freedom enjoyed by Americans, "especially freedom of movement," and added that in the history of the world, there has never been a nation quite as wonderful as America.

The time has come, Dr. Jenkins emphasized, to remind students that they are in school as volunteers and that they have a strong obligation to the taxpayer. "To teach children how to combat these who would destroy our society, they must be taught to use the weapons of freedom and economics," Jenkins said. "We must assert leadership of the strongest type if we hope to have our children inherit an America as we know it." Also at the Saturday meeting.

activities, projects and programs of the North Carolina East District were reviewed and coordinated. The main areas of Civitan work are Boys Home at Lake Wacona and work with the mentally retarded. Civitans from throughout the district were present for the meeting, including Harvey R. Nellin of Burlington, governor of N. C. District East and approximately 35 members of the governor's cabinet and their wives. The Governor's cabinet meeting was held Friday night.

Five Charged In Drug Case Bound Over

Five young men, charged with possession of marijuana last week, were bound over to Pitt County Superior Court at a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Luther Moore Friday. Moore set a cash bond of $800 for each. They are scheduled to appear before the superior court December 9, 1968.

Many Charged In Protests

Several of the marchers were taken into custody as they skipped rope in the street, blocking traffic. Authorities said they booked and released the juveniles and filed charges against the older participants in the demonstration. Observing the demonstration were Charles Dunn, an aide to Gov. Dan Moore, and Dr. Aaron son, head of the North Carolina Good Neighbor Council. They arrived in Swan Quarter in midweek in an effort to resolve the dispute. During the day they met with several Negro parents, but declined to say later if they made progress.

Referendum Period On Quota Set

The period December 2 through December 6 has been set for the marketing quota referendum for the 1969 crop of upland cotton, Stacy J. Evans, office manager for the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, reminds farmers. The vote will be held by mail, as it has been done for the past two years. Notices of farm acreage allotments will be mailed to operators of cotton farms prior to the referendum. If quotas are approved by at least two-thirds of the upland cotton growers voting, the program under which payments are made to cooperators will be in effect, Evans said. While all program details of the upland cotton program will not be announced until after the crop report of the Agriculture Department has already been set at 65 per cent of the farm acreage allotment. Farmers who sign up early next spring to participate in the upland cotton program and who plant at least 90 per cent of their farm's domestic acreage allotment but not in excess of the permitted acreage for the farm will be eligible for price-crop and price-support payments based on the projected yield and the farm domestic allotment, Evans reported. Upland cotton projected yields — used to determine cotton program payments — vary by individual farms, based on county and state average yields. State yields are based on 1963-67 harvested yields, adjusted for abnormal weather conditions, for trends, and for changes in production practices. The state projected yields average out to the national yield of 545 pounds per acre. North Carolina's projected yield is 398 per acre.

Greene and Dudley Streets, a car driven by Joseph Michael Simonwich, 200 Westwood Drive, struck a car driven by Clarence Harris Sr., Rt. 5. Harris had pulled out from Dudley Street when his car was struck by that of Simonwich. Damages to the Harris auto were estimated at $100, while the Simonwich damages were estimated at $200. City Ranks In Top 10 In Safety

The North Carolina State Motor Club has ranked Greenville among the top 10 safest cities in North Carolina. The motor club rankings are based on the registration death rate, that is the number of traffic deaths per 10,000 registration. Wilson ranked as the safest in the annual ratings of the state's 37 cities and towns with over 10,000 population. Wilson and five other cities, including Thomasville, Lumberton, Chapel Hill, Albemarle and Roanoke Rapids had no traffic deaths during 1967. Those municipalities were the top six in the ranking. Greenville ranked in ninth position with Jacksonville in seventh position, Shelby in eighth spot and Monroe tenth. One fatality was reported in Greenville during 1967 while 17,170 vehicles were registered in the city. Rankings of other cities included: Kinston, 15th; Goldsboro 17th; Charlotte 26th; Rocky Mount 30th and New Bern 33rd.

Court-Martial Sentence Reduced For Viet Vet

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (AP) — A Vietnam veteran from Maryland who overstayed a sick leave has had the court-martial sentence sharply reduced following criticism by his father. After reviewing the case of Pvt. Thomas Bodensick, 20, of Arnold, Md., Col. R. L. Lecomte, commander of the 82nd Airborne Artillery at Ft. Bragg, Friday sentenced him to 45 days registration to his unit area, a fine of $65 monthly for three months, and reduction in rank from Pvt. E2 to Pvt. E1. The court-martial sentence was six months at hard labor and reduction in rank. The new sentence is subject to review, at an unspecified time, by the staff judge advocate. Lecomte said Bodensick would be transferred to another artillery battalion at Ft. Bragg for "a fresh start." The action followed an appeal in the form of an open letter to the Baltimore Sun by Bodensick's father, Edward W. Bodensick of Arnold, Md. The father had asked for mercy and understanding for his son, who, he said, told him, "Dad, I couldn't take it anymore." The father said his son had volunteered for duty in Vietnam and, after returning to the United States, "couldn't take the simple routine of Army life, the life he used to laugh and joke about before he went over." Bodensick was wounded in the head and legs in Vietnam and was home on leave. The Army said he failed to return to Ft. Bragg until Oct. 23, or 10 days late. There was no word from him in the interval, the Army said. The Army said that Bodensick's earlier court-martial record had been considered. It occurred last January in Vietnam when, the Army said, he had been found guilty of failure to be at his post, disrespect to a noncommissioned officer, and willfully disobeying a lawful order.

Girl Attached To Chimp In Attempt To Save Life

ATLANTA (UPI) — A 3-year-old girl who underwent a rare operation involving a circulatory hookup with a chimpanzee in a desperate medical gamble to save her life held on to a "slightly improved" condition Saturday. The child's physician, Dr. Joseph Patterson, reported her condition as "status quo. There's been no remarkable change yet," he said. Doctors say the girl is fighting a losing battle against hepatitis, a virus infection of the liver. "There's always hope," Patterson said in response to a question about chances for the girl's recovery. "After all, the first patient this was tried on did not respond until after some 60 hours. We are now in our 30th hour (since the operation)," he said. Patterson said he was referring to a woman patient of Dr. Christian Barnard, pioneer heart transplant specialist, who responded following a similar operation involving a baboon in Capetown, South Africa. Dr. Barnard's patient eventually recovered. Patterson said the child was still unconscious. The girl, who was not identified, was operated on early Friday morning at Eggleston Children's Hospital, part of the Emory University Medical School complex. Patterson was the organizer of the surgeon team which performed the rare operation, believed to be the first involving a circulatory link between a human and a chimpanzee. The operation involved hooking up their circulatory systems and letting the chimp's liver do the work of the child's ailing liver. It was hoped that the child's liver would fight off the infection during the rest period. The hookup occurred for a six-hour period and afterwards Patterson said the girl was able to maintain the functions of her own system. The 68-pound chimpanzee, named Cassandra, was supplied by the Yerkes Regional Primate Center, operated by Emory University. She was chosen because her blood type was compatible with that of the patient. The chimp was knocked out with a tranquilizer before the operation. Her blood also was replaced with human blood of the same type.

Farmville Man Receives Honors

Paul Joseph Allen III, a senior history major from Farmville, is the recipient of East Carolina University's fifth annual history honors scholarship. As winner of the award, Allen has been assigned to an honors professor in the history department, Dr. Howard B. Clay, a specialist in early 19th century American history. Under Dr. Clay's supervision, Allen will undertake a program of intensive reading and research in American history of the 19th century, leading up to and including the Civil War, but with emphasis on the antebellum period. Dr. Herbert R. Paschal Jr., department chairman, said Allen was chosen "for his outstanding academic record, sterling character, interest in the field of history and potential to undertake graduate work in the future."

Department To Be Evaluated

Dr. Franklin L. Burdette, nationally known educator and civic leader, is scheduled to spend Monday at East Carolina University.

Dr. Burdette, Director of the Bureau of Governmental Research, University of Maryland since 1956, and National Director of Pi Sigma Alpha, a political science honor society, will spend Monday on a tour of ECU. His special concern is the Political Science Department of the University.

According to information from Dr. William F. Troutman, Jr., chairman of the Department of Political Science at ECU, Dr. Burdette has been asked to make this visit in order to evaluate the total program of the Political Science Department.

Dr. Troutman noted: "Since 1956 the Political Science Department has grown in size and in experience. It has added a graduate program and an operational honors program. It has accumulated the confidence which comes through the experience of progress, and it now believes that it should apply for membership in Pi Sigma Alpha. Dr. Burdette has been asked to come and see at first hand that this university has left a 'teachers' college' image far behind."

To achieve a status within the colleges and universities of America which accords membership in the Pi Sigma Alpha, an educational institution must meet stringent standards. Only those institutions measuring up to those standards receive a chapter within the honor society.

Dr. Burdette will meet with Dean Robert Williams, Dean of Academic Affairs and Dean John M. Howell, Dean of College of Arts and Sciences for discussions on the ECU Political Science Department. During his stay at the college, he will be escorted by Dr. Jung-Gun Kim, Associate Professor in the Political Science Department.

From 1:30 until 3:00 p.m., Dr. Burdette will meet with students in the department. At 7:00 p.m. Dr. Burdette will address a special Departmental Assembly. His speech will be "The Roots of Politics." A reception will follow.

Dr. Burdette, a native of Huntington, West Virginia, has served in a number of prominent positions in the education and civic fields.

NATO To Warn Soviets Against Any New Military Adventures

By CARL HARTMAN Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS (AP) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization is preparing to warn the Soviet Union against conducting any new military adventure in the East or the West.

The foreign ministers of the 15 member nations today were reported revising a statement that is expected to discourage the Soviets from pursuing their "socialist commonwealth" doctrine.

Under this concept the Soviets could intervene militarily in a Communist country whenever they feel the interests of world communism are in danger, as they did last August in Czechoslovakia.

Secretary of State Den Rusk indicated the tone the statement might take Friday when he said the safety of the alliance, including the United States, would be affected if the Soviets move into Yugoslavia or Austria. Rusk also was reported to have said that a Soviet invasion of Romania would have graver consequences than the Czechoslovakia invasion.

Romania is a member of the Warsaw Pact, but has been taking an independent line recently.

Yugoslavia, though Communist for the past 20 years, has been independent of Moscow. Austria is neutral with its status guaranteed by the United States, Great Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

Some members took his remarks to mean Americans favor an extension of NATO protection to certain non-NATO states. But U.S. officials disputed such an interpretation. An unknown was how far Rusk can commit President-elect Richard Nixon.

Another unknown was the extent to which President de Gaulle's France will go along in issuing a warning to Moscow, although officials reported France has shown more interest in NATO affairs since the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

In his speech Friday French Foreign Minister Michel Debre put emphasis on continuing efforts to improve relations with the Soviets.

In France's kindest words about NATO so far, Debre described the alliance as an "expression of political solidarity" and an "element of equilibrium" in the world situation.

The statements came as NATO strategists worked on contingency plans for defending certain countries considered candidates for possible Soviet attack, highly qualified sources said.

Debre's conciliatory statements on NATO were coupled with reports French military officials and diplomats are showing a greater readiness to cooperate with NATO despite President Charles de Gaulle's severance of military links.

Informants said there is evidence the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia caused widespread dismay among French officials. It prompted some to discreetly ignore De Gaulle's strictures and resume their contacts with allied colleagues.

De Gaulle said two years ago French troops would no longer participate in the peacetime integration of NATO forces although he has repeatedly reaffirmed France's fidelity to the alliance and said French troops would fight alongside the allies in a war.

Bishops Offer Some Freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops have offered a measure of freedom to married couples to use artificial birth control, but little immediate help to dissident priests who clamored for them to take a stand.

In a 16,000-word compromise pastoral letter, the National Council of Catholic Bishops firmly defended Friday Pope Paul VI's continuing ban on all artificial contraception.

But, in the climax of a week of fierce debate, they said couples who break the ban will not be turned away from the church and communion.

The bishops suggested "circumstances may reduce moral guilt," although they did not go as far as listing any circumstances.

The pastoral letter, viewed as a compromise in the fierce church fight over birth control, was passed by an overwhelming 180-8 vote at the windup of a week-long conference.

The bishops' statement stirred one new dispute immediately—over the Vietnam war and the draft—and failed to silence another over priests punished for public dissent.

The Catholic hierarchy openly questioned the worth of the war and asked, "Has the conflict in Vietnam provoked inhuman dimensions of suffering?"

The bishops urged an end to the military draft in peacetime. And called for selective conscientious objection to military service for those who may feel only a specific war is unjust.

Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, 75-year-old director of the draft, said the church was encroaching on politics, not voicing a religious objection.

"They want it so the individual can pick his war, and that's a political question," Hershey said.

No Change In Quota

RALEIGH (AP) — Several spokesmen representing growers and warehousemen say there should be no change in the basic marketing quota for flue-cured tobacco for the 1969 season.

However, other speakers at an industrywide hearing Friday called for a cut in the quota. It has remained at 1,126½ million pounds each year since 1965.

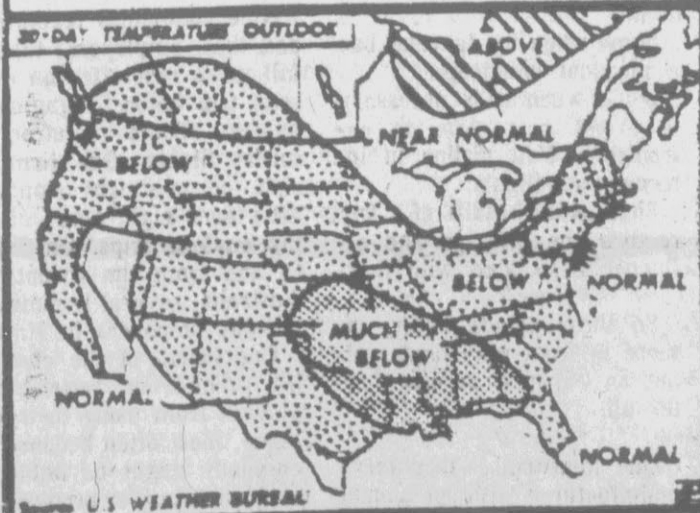

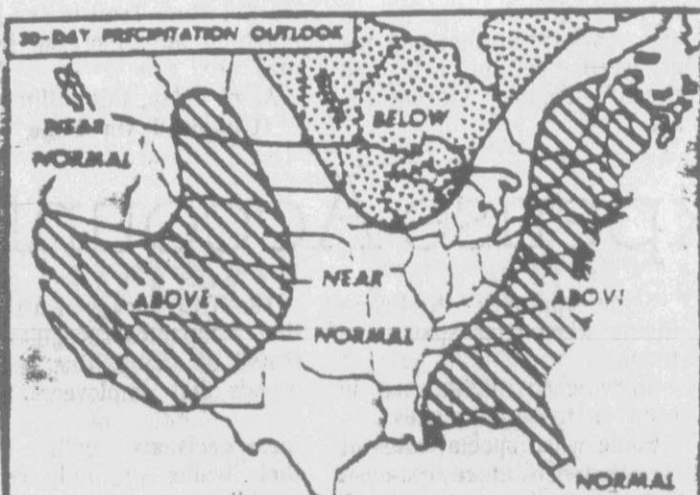

U.S. Department of Agriculture officials presented figures showing heavy stocks of flue-cured leaf on hand even though this year's crop of 991 million pounds was the smallest since 1957 and exports for the last two years have been unusually heavy.

They pointed out, however, that domestic consumption had dropped from 752 million pounds in 1965-66 to 687 million for each of the last two years.

The secretary of agriculture is expected to announce the national flue-cured quota, yield goal and acreage allotment by Dec. 1.

One of the USDA officials, Horace Godfrey, said that if the goal of reducing surplus stocks by 100 to 125 million pounds a year is to be reached, next year's quota would have to be cut by about 10 per cent.

Those arguing for no change in the quota included Fred Royter, managing director of the Bright Belt Warehouse Association; North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham; Bob Martin of the South Carolina Department of Agriculture; Roy B. Davis Jr. of the Virginia Department of Agriculture, and growers A. C. Lawrence of Apex and T. W. Allen of Creedmoor.

Best In A Special Classification

The City Council has properly acted to control the development of multi-family apartments in Greenville. Councilmen last week redefined "residential zoning" to mean that only one- and two-family dwellings may be constructed in areas so zoned. Multi-family apartment developments will now be in a special classification and each such plan must be submitted to the Planning and Zoning Commission or joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission for consideration. It is obvious that some control over the development of apartments in Greenville and the surrounding area has been needed. Too many apartment buildings have been constructed on sites that were not of adequate size and with lack of planning.

On the other hand there are several complexes of luxury apartments around the city that have been well planned and they are a credit to the city. The two Planning and Zoning Commissions should guard against adopting policies so restrictive that development of desirable apartment areas might become stifled.

That there is clearly a demand for luxury apartments in Greenville is demonstrated by the interest of developers in constructing them here.

It is likely that with the growth of East Carolina University and other potential developments here, more apartments are going to be needed in the future. The city planners should realize that developers are not going to build the type complexes of which Greenville can be proud if they are relegated to the city dump area. The people who will pay the high rents necessary for luxury apartments want the same things that home owners desire; that is nearby schools, shopping centers and other conveniences.

What is needed is broad planning in Greenville's rapidly developing residential areas so that apartment developments and subdivision developments will not clash with one another. The council has taken a positive step in this direction. However, it is going to take much wisdom on the part of the Planning and Zoning Commissions to work out a system that is of benefit to all the city.

'Showboat' Is A Money-Maker

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES RALEIGH — The "Showboat," once a mighty weapon of destruction, has become a money-maker. Not only has the "Showboat," the battleship U.S.S. North Carolina, become one of the state's leading travel and tourist attractions, it is paying its own way in revenue from admissions and concessions and showing a tidy profit to boot.

to be stabilized and buttressed. Parking lot areas had to be paved. The entire area of the battleship memorial had to be landscaped. In a relatively short time, however, the battleship commission had a balance of $55,000 and today has an annual operating budget of $170,000.

This includes approximately $37,000 a year to stage a "Sound and Light" spectacular during the seasonal months. This show, depicting the history of the battleship and its role in Pacific battles, attracts some 10,000 to 15,000 per month. It is one of very few such shows operating in the United States although "sound and lights" have proved highly successful in Europe, in Egypt and on Acropolis hill in Greece.

Still Navy Property Although decommissioned and at peace for nearly 25 years, the battleship remains in a state of repair and readiness which meets strict Navy specifications. This was part of the agreement under which the state obtained the ship and maintenance costs approximately $125,000 a year.

Various maintenance costs add up to the biggest total in the overall operating budget. There is a separate budget for the "Sound and Lights" show.

The fact is that it needed by the Navy, the U.S.S. North Carolina could be returned to active service within a few weeks.

"She's seaworthy and it would be a fairly simple matter to nump some mud away and get her going," says a battleship commission spokesman. He scoffed at reports that the ship is so mired in Cape Fear river mud now that it would be impossible to move her. "Dredges could do it rather easily," he said.

Future Administration Future administration of the battleship memorial remains in doubt. At one time, long range plans called for placing it under the division of state parks. It was argued, however, that under parks control revenues would go into the parks operating funds and that money for capital improvements would have to be appropriated by the legislature possibly on a piecemeal basis. Two subsequent legislative decisions decided it would be better to allow the 16 member battleship commission operate as a separate agency until various capital improvements projects were completed and the battleship memorial was paying its own way—as it finally is.

We Need More Such Multi-Lane Highways

This newspaper has frequently criticized the State Highway Commission for its failure to grasp the highway needs of this area.

However, while the criticism still is valid, we must compliment the Highway Commission on the manner in which it has moved along with the four laning of N. C. 11 between Greenville and Kinston.

The four lane route is already constructed from Kinston to the Dupont plant. Work is underway on the section from Dupont past Grifton. And now bids are being requested on the final segment which will bring the dual lane to Greenville, with bypasses around Grifton, Ayden and Winterville.

Here at Greenville the multi-lane highway will tie in with the already dual laned Memorial Drive. It will also connect with Greenville Boulevard which is currently being four laned.

When all the work is completed we should have an excellent route from Greenville to Kinston and on through the two cities.

Combine Effort For Continuity

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson and Richard M. Nixon are breaking historic new ground with their agreement for advance consultation on any major foreign policy moves before Nixon's Jan. 20 inauguration. They probably will have to decide as they go along exactly how the arrangement will work.

Nixon's designation of veteran diplomat Robert D. Murphy as his personal representative in the foreign affairs field is expected to make the arrangement smooth and efficient.

Nixon told a news conference Monday, after a meeting with President Johnson, that can speak in the next two months on foreign affairs with the full authority of the incoming administration.

At a news conference in New York Thursday he said Johnson had agreed to consult him before making any significant moves. But Nixon also said that for the United States to speak to other countries with a single voice it would be necessary for the President-elect to agree to a course of action.

This seemed to indicate Nixon was reserving the right to withhold his agreement. The White House was unexpectedly brief in its reaction to the Nixon statement. A spokesman said only the President's power had not been "diluted."

This seemed to indicate the President was reserving the right to take any action he considers necessary. Commenting on the prospect of disagreement, Nixon said he and Johnson "did not discuss that precisely."

One evident result of the agreement is to increase Johnson's effective power in the conduct of foreign relations during the next two months. Otherwise, he would be limited substantially to commitments that he could fulfill in the time remaining to him as president.

Another result which Nixon apparently hopes for may well be to speed up the Vietnam peace negotiations as compared with the pace they would probably follow if there was no assured continuity of U.S. policy.

Nixon made clear in campaign speeches he considered settlement of the war—or at least de-Americanization of the conflict—a priority objective for the next administration.

His emphasis on seeking to rebuild unity in this country and on shifting the focus of foreign affairs from Asia to Europe suggests that if President Johnson does have a chance to conclude a peace settlement in the next two months Nixon will do everything he can to assist.

Nixon is represented as confident that President Johnson will not make a major foreign policy move which he does not approve.

At the White House, Press Secretary George Christian said in response to a direct question that "nothing has diluted presidential authority"—a statement of the constitutional fact that until the moment of Nixon's inauguration the full legal powers of the presidency can be exercised only by Johnson.

Christian reported that Nixon had informed Johnson by telephone in advance that he was designating Murphy to be his representative in the State Department. Christian added that Murphy "of course is well known to this administration."

State Department officials said that as a top ranking foreign service officer, ambassador and undersecretary of state until his retirement several years ago, Murphy would present no problem of security clearance and require no briefing on how the decision-making process and the administration of foreign affairs work.

Sunday Morning Notes

Greenville's young people took over as mayor, councilmen, city manager, police and fire chiefs and other administrative offices Thursday.

"I wonder what would have happened if the kids had refused to give back the offices," someone in The Daily Reflector news room thought out loud.

"Might be an improvement," an office wise guy shot back.

Well, that's nonsense. Our city officials are dedicated hard working men. In fact we all feel that they do every bit as good a job as the kids did.

"60 Minutes" is a pretty good news magazine format on CBS this fall.

Just like the news magazines it even has letters. One fan wrote, "60 Minutes is wonderful. Does that mean it will be dropped in a few weeks?"

The commentators chuckled at this. Of course the show was off for two weeks running prior to last week. But then there was the campaign and the election to cover. And it did come back on last Tuesday. Does this mean the show will be on the air for good? Well, no. It's preempted again next week for a special.

Hanoi Defers Dream

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Despite partial violations by Hanoi of its agreement to respect the demilitarized zone (DMZ), evidence now available from captured documents and other intelligence sources hints that Communist military de-escalation may go much faster than seemed possible last spring after the limited bomb-barrage took effect.

In fact, there are strong indications that the military reverses suffered by both North Vietnamese troops and the Communist Vietcong have pushed the enemy into a new phase of protracted warfare.

That puts Hanoi's goal of victory several years away instead of several months, and the realization of this is already having a severe morale effect on both the Vietcong military units in the South and on the Communist political structure in the countryside.

For example, in the southernmost part of South Vietnam, the oldest stronghold of the Communists, one battalion of Vietcong troops has recently been disbanded. The surprising explanation (made available to U. S. intelligence by a captured document): the war is going to be temporarily phased out; sell your property and "take a long trip."

Along the same lines, sons of Vietcong political agents are again being sent north to Hanoi for training. The implication: they won't be needed in the South for a long time.

The basic reason for this is the agreement between Hanoi and President Johnson to get down to serious negotiations in Paris. The word that Hanoi has agreed with Washington not to shell large cities and not to use the DMZ as a springboard for military attacks on the South (violated this week) means to the embattled Vietcong far in the south that Hanoi really does want a long breathing spell.

Whether the Vietcong now feels it is being sold out, even if only temporarily, or whether it understands that North Vietnam has no other choice, the inevitable result is a loss of morale.

Although the statistics gathered by overzealous U. S. officials in Vietnam have always been somewhat suspect, there is reason today to believe that this loss of morale accounts for the unprecedented numbers of Vietcong now claimed by the U. S. to be giving themselves up in the field. Last month, for example, 2,350 South Vietnamese under the control of the Communists voluntarily turned themselves in. In the same period, more than 1,000 political operatives within the Communist hamlet and village apparatus were either killed, captured, or gave themselves up.

These figures are the highest since the summer of 1967, but no one here will draw the obvious conclusion until Hanoi has proved it will live up to the spirit of its agreement with President Johnson. That means watching enemy infiltration of regular North Vietnamese army units down the Ho Chi Minh Trail to see how much, if any, increase there may be.

Other Editors Say Need Another Coltrane

(Kinston Free Press)

School difficulties arising from racial issues in Orange and Hyde counties makes it mandatory that Governor Dan Moore and Goerner-Elect Bob Scott expedite the appointment of a full-time leader to replace the late Dave Coltrane who died October 31.

The work done by Coltrane as chairman of the State Good Neighbor Council paved the way for much racial progress in this State. It never reached the point where such progress could be taken for granted or left to chance. That may be many years away, but his absence in recent days has magnified the urgent need for a competent successor to him as chairman of the Council.

Naming of the council vice-chairman, Dr. James T. Taylor, a Negro educator as acting chairman will help. However, a permanent chairman should be designated as soon as possible.

Several students have been expelled from a high school at Hillsborough because of racial disorder. The problem at Swan Quarter in Hyde County is even more aggravated. It stems from a boycott directed by Golden Frinks, who demands instantment of the Freedom of Choice plan for school desegregation. That plan was abandoned when a federal cutoff of funds was threatened. The new plan calls for a new will require several months to child. In the meantime the boycott goes on and was intensified when welfare authorities threatened a reduction in checks unless the children are returned to school.

In each instance the matter of communications is all important. A good Neighbor Council trouble shooter should be able to reduce tensions and bring about a stronger line of communications in Hyde and Orange counties. But there are other urgent problems, including the matter of employment of qualified minority group applicants who could benefit from the full-time efforts of a permanent chairman.

This matter ought not to be allowed to drift any longer. The time for constructive action is now at hand.

Luxury Not All Expense Account

By ELMER ROESSNER

When you travel air coach, you might assume that those cats sipping champagne in the luxury compartment ahead are traveling on expense accounts.

But don't be too sure. A survey by the National Industrial Conference Board, reported by Lewis W. Forman and James K. Brown in the board's November Record, shows that of 177 manufacturing companies, 80 per cent specify the use of air coach, tourist class or some other type of economy accommodations for business trips.

There are exceptions, of course. About half the companies approve of first class air travel if cheaper accommodations are not available or if waiting for economy accommodations would be impractical.

Other findings: Companies okay first class when two or more employees must work together during a flight.

if the trip is long, from 1 1/2 to 10 hours. One firm considers anything under 4,000 miles a short trip. Another, located in California, considers anything beyond the 50 states, Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands to be a long trip.

A fourth of the companies permit higher ranking executives to travel first class, in some cases down to department heads.

Some approve first-class flights when trips span meal times.

Some when flights are in prop or turbo-jet planes.

Some when special rates or circumstances make first-class flights as cheap as coach flights.

Some when the traveler has a physical handicap.

Some when it is necessary to travel first class to patronize a U.S. airline in international flights.

Some when results of a trip require the prestige and affluence associated with first-class air travel.

The NICB survey also shows that companies recognize air travel as tiring. One recommends that employees "minimize activities involving business decisions until after their bodies are fully recovered."

Nine companies recommended that employees take a full day's rest after an overseas trip before engaging in business. Some insist on Saturday flights. One firm insists on overnight stopovers after each eight hours of flying on long trips. On flights to and from the Orient and Australia, several recommend one-day stopovers in Hawaii.

One fourth of the companies prohibit or restrict employees from using their own plane, most often because the company might be liable for personal injury or property damage, and because blanket insurance policies usually do not cover employees in personal planes.

Observations From Editorial Columns

RAY'S PRE-TRIAL PUBLICITY

The question of who and what are covered by the pre-trial publicity ban of the judge in the James Earl Ray case comes up again with publication of a magazine article today. Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle has held four men in contempt of court. One is Ray's attorney, another a private detective, and two are Memphis newsmen. A fifth man, with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, might have to show cause why he should not be included under the publicity ban if he comes to Memphis to testify.

There is now the question about what effect the court edict has on author William Bradford Huie, whose first in a series of "inside" articles on Ray's life and times is published today in Look magazine. Huie is paying Ray for information. Ray's attorney is the courier for the questions and answers.

Today's first installment makes several flat statements as to what Ray did or did not do in the year or so before the murder of Martin Luther King Jr. in Memphis. Writer Huie spends a good part of his prose on character analysis, based on interviews with people who had known Ray, some of them named and some anonymous.

Nothing in the article relates directly to Memphis events or to the King slaying, but the fact remains that much of what is printed amounts to direct quotations from Ray — something which no working newsman has been permitted to obtain. We find it interesting that a free lance writer willing to pay Ray for "telling his story" can find his way to individuals who say they have never heard from the FBI, and that he can publish what amounts to a personal interview with the accused when newsmen are chastised for speaking to Ray's attorney or any law-enforcement officers with knowledge of the case. — Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal.

A GOOD (AND TIMELY) TURN

"We have known all along that boys were interested in girls." And with that the executive council of the Boy Scouts of America voted to "be prepared" to admit girls to the Scouts' Explorer program (for older boys).

For Scouting, at the age of 58, it is rather late in the game to be getting around to something like this but — better late than never. We, for one, never doubted the readiness of Scouting to keep in step with changing times. Our only regret is it didn't happen 30 years ago. — Anniston (Ala.) Star

YOUNGSTERS ARE IN A-CHORD

Just when we are about ready to write off the human race, something always comes along to remind us that things can't be too hopeless as long as kids are still kids.

In Today's Education, the magazine of the National Education Association, a music teacher offers these gems some elementary school children came up with when asked to define musical terms:

"An encore is what audiences get if they are unruly."
"Refrain means don't do it! A refrain in music is the part you better not play."

"Music sung by two people at the same time is called a duet."
"Handel was half German, half Italian and half English. He was rather large."

REAL CARPET GOLF

Progress note: The world's first nine hole golf course with carpeted tees and greens has opened for business in Knoxville, Tennessee. The outdoor nylon carpeting is said to have all the bounce, reaction, roll and bite of bent grass and, according to the resident professional, puts better than any natural green. But there's a serpent (or two) in every paradise. It just means another hazard for weekend dufers to look out for — vacuum cleaners. And instead of green fees, there'll be carpet tax — Bristol (Va.) Herald-Courier.

LESSON IN MORALITY FOR YOUNG LADIES

Fifty students at the University of Colorado met to form an organization to be known as the "League of Sexual Honesty." The purpose was to protest "out-moded sex laws."

Only eight girls showed up. But there were 42 men. If this isn't a lesson in morality for the girls then there is no tea in China. — Anderson (S. C.) Independent rate (despite Richard Nixon's last-minute campaign charge) has not increased, and this is highly significant for the future. Without an immediate and substantial increase in infiltration, U. S. experts now estimate there can be no serious enemy offensive at the earliest until next spring.

Thus, the theory that the enemy wants to put the war in mothballs for a good long period looks better each day that goes by without large reinforcements moving from north to south. And each day that passes without this reinforcement is a further indication to the Vietcong in the South that Hanoi has in fact decided on a fairly swift de-escalation, thus deepening morale problems for the local Communist cadres.

It is against this backdrop that the refusal of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu to send a delegation to Paris must be assessed.

The real task of U.S. diplomacy now is to convince Thieu that a rapid deescalation, followed by withdrawal of U. S. troops, will not leave him exposed to later attack from the North, as he now fears, but instead will leave the Vietcong weak and demoralized, and possibly incapable of rejuvenation. This is the line that Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker is selling hard to Thieu, and Administration officials here believe it will help him change his mind soon.

A Conservative View

Cold Facts Dispelled Senator's Hot Air Statistics

By JAMES KILPATRICK

It was just a year ago that Russell Long of Louisiana was regaling the Senate with a plan to ease or to remove the burden of drug expenses for the nation's 19 million oldsters. It was prednisone in every pot and a wonderful political gimmick.

The Senator proposed to accomplish his prodigies in part through a system relying upon the use of generic drugs instead of brand-name drugs. For example, a drug user now pays roughly $7 for 100 tablets of the brand-name "Serpassil," when he can get substantially the same thing under the generic name of reserpine for $2.91. An asthma victim may pay $8.50 for brand-name "Inhalocort" when he can get 30 tablets of the generic prednisone for $2.58. By including doctors to prescribe generically, rather than by brand names the Senator saw the possibility of reducing drug expense for the elderly by at least $100 million a year.

Welfare Secretary John Gardner, to his lasting credit, was exceedingly skeptical of Long's full-blown projections. He urged the Congress to wait until a study of drug costs could be completed. In the end, his persuasion prevailed and the Long bill was put on the back of the stove.

Now the study is complete —it came from the Welfare Department last week—and it becomes possible to take a reasoned look at the whole proposition of expanding Medicare to cover prescription drugs. This broad question of public policy, of course is far more important than the lesser question of saving on generic drugs. Do the American people want to follow the path of Great Britain into one more field of medical care at public expense? Is the burden of drug costs so great upon sick individuals—especially oldsters—that it should be borne under some government plan?

I myself thing not; many readers will disagree. In any event, the facts are now at hand in the report of HEW's Task Force on Prescription Drugs.

Beyond question, the drug expense involved in prolonged treatment of chronic disease can be a terrible burden for the poor. In this narrow category, some social relief may be required. But the dimensions of the problem as a whole, it appears, are not nearly so vast as one might have inferred from the speeches of Senator Long. Of the 19 million Americans who are 65 or older, roughly 11.8 million are generally able to handle their medical costs without great hardships. They may have retirement income, plus Social Security, plus Medicare, plus health insurance.

What we are talking about, in terms of actual need, is the problem faced by some 7.5 million men and women over 65, whose meager incomes fall below the poverty line. Perhaps 1.5 million of them already get free drugs through existing welfare programs or through their physicians. We're really talking of only 6 million persons.

How great is the burden of drug costs to them? The study indicates that average per capita outlays for prescription drugs amount to 80 cents a $41.40 per year—for those over 65. And how much might be saved if doctors were induced or required to prescribe certain drugs by their generic names? The answer is: remarkably little. The Task Force found that 409 drug products account for 88 per cent of all prescriptions among the elderly. Only 67 of the 409 present opportunities for significant savings. On these 67, gross savings in the magnitude of $41.5 million a year might be realized. This figures out to perhaps a nickel a week in terms of per capita annual costs. The burden on grandma, in brief, might drop from $41.40 a year, to $38.92. Big deal.

Moreover, the calculations of gross savings make no allowance for the heavy administrative expenses that would be required in any program that required generic prescribing. The figures rest upon the doubtful assumption that the generic, in every case, are therapeutically equivalent to the brand-name products. Equal quality also is assumed. And even with all these assumptions, the savings that might result from a radical invasion by government into private medical practice scarcely can be regarded a substantial. The Senator's statistics were hot air statistics. Washington is full of them; but its not often you see hot air dispelled so effectively by a cold front of facts.

DEADLY BOOBY-TRAP!

An Early Winter For Western Tar Heels

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

RALEIGH — It happened in North Carolina:

It was a cold, dreary day with leaden gray skies. In the afternoon the wind arose and later at dusk, it began to rain.

All too soon, a bright and colorful Indian summer was ending.

The wind increased and all evening the cold rain splashed and splattered against the panes. Brown, red and yellow leaves danced and flew in the gale, twirling and tumbling in sodden heaps on the lawns and sidewalks. Trees and bushes bent and groaned.

Already it was snowing in the mountains and there were reports of accumulation in the areas of Boone, West Jefferson and Plumbtree. It was sticking around Asheville, Hendersonville and Flat Rock.

A bit later, it began snowing heavily at Hickory and Morganton and Tryon and moderately in the areas of Statesville and Salisbury. Tree limbs began cracking and collapsing across roads, streets and power lines. Electric service failed in many areas and by morning four to six inches of snow had accumulated in the western half of North Carolina.

In Statesville, masses of fallen limbs and snapped power lines lay across the streets and sidewalks. Editor-publisher J. P. Huskins of the Statesville Record and Landmark was among those who sought refuge at a hotel after a power failure at his home.

In Burke County, a Morganton store rushed a big wood stove to a rest home which was without heat and light.

Also near Morganton, a power failure forced a family of seven to leave their home. While they were away, fire destroyed the house.

When the storm passed, skies cleared and most of the snow melted quickly. But accumulations remained in higher elevations.

Boone, which usually has snow throughout the winter months, reported a total of 14 inches to begin with.

It was, according to available records, one of the earliest snowstorms to strike North Carolina in nearly 100 years. Weather bureau records do not extend beyond 1887 and many of the early records are fragmentary.

However, there was plenty of documentation of the storm that struck this week. Clingman's Dome highest peak in the Great Smokies, measured 20 inches of snow. Newfound Gap had 18 inches of snow and recorded a temperature of 13 degrees.

The eastern half of the state experienced rain and winds which raged gale to hurricane force and high tides and flooding along the coast.

A candle shop recently opened near Raleigh offers candles with a fragrance of "new mown hay."

Also lemon, coconut, holly berry, bayberry and others. And it sells soaps.

Alvin Taylor reports that a young lady called the Greenville Daily Reflector the other day inquiring about how to publish an engagement announcement.

She was told she would have to come to the newspaper office in person and complete a form with the proper information.

"Oh well," she replied. "I'd better wait. I'm not real sure he is going to ask me."

Fifty years ago it seems that news of the Armistice ending World War I reached America at 3 o'clock in the morning.

At least according to the old newspaper files that's when Raleigh's fire chief, Charles Farmer awakened the city with the clanging of fire alarms and many thousands began an all-day celebration on the streets.

There were some 1918 vintage automobiles, some fire trucks, some cowbells and some bugles for noise makers. And probably some still rode in carriages.

Searchlights shone on a flag flying atop a bank building while cheering crowds surged along the downtown streets.

Some Compensation For Males After Turning 40

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Soon after a man passes his 40th birthday he begins asking himself wryly, "When does the fun begin?"

He feels afflicted with antiquity and premature enfeeblement. Like most people, he tends to regard middle age as a punishment or a plight rather than as a normal condition and part of a well-lived life.

But middle age, like any other period of existence, has its peculiar rewards as well as its perils.

"What rewards could middle age possible offer?" asks the skeptic.

Well, for example: Your feet feel so much better when you take your shoes off at the end of the day.

Yawning becomes one of your favorite forms of exercise. It is no longer necessary for you to break your bones skiing or playing touch football.

Your wife has probably obligingly quit bearing infants and you don't have to subsidize a diaper laundry. You can use the money thus saved to get your teeth fixed.

As you no longer waste much time writing love letters, you are free to write more constructive letters to your congressman on how to improve his conduct in office.

You don't have to look out the window in the morning to see what the weather is like. By the way your bones feel when you wake up, you know whether it's a nice day out or not.

It isn't so imperative for you to rush to buy the newest novel or see the latest play everyone's talking about. Your common sense tells you that no book or drama is going to reveal much about life to you that you don't already know or secretly suspect.

If you haven't caught up quired a chronic ailment of some kind to make your world more interesting, don't brood about it. You probably soon will.

If you haven't caught up with the Joneses, you decide you don't really like their style of living—so why try to keep up with them?

You no longer are tempted to grow a beard—you realize it would come out gray or a mottled white.

At the office the boss doesn't expect you to come up with a new world-shaking idea ever day. One new world-shaking idea a year will keep you on the payroll nicely.

Slowly but steadily you turn from tarnished sinner into varnished saint as you lose the energy to pursue old bad habits and the desire to acquire new ones. The possibility emerges that you may yet become the kind of man your mother hoped you'd be.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUBLASS

Some people have long memories. They can cherish grudges for a whole lifetime and remember the very moment when someone said or did something that put him on the black list forever.

There are others who have long memories for the better aspects of life. They remember with gratitude a favor done in an hour of need. They look back with fond memory upon the support given when the burden seemed almost unbearable.

Sometime ago I met a nationally known character who is reputed to be able to call ten thousand men by their first names. I asked him if this was true, and his reply was: "Considerably more." Think of what an achievement this is. Nothing hurts one more than being forgotten, and by the same token, nothing ing cheers one up so much as being remembered. This man can walk up to a person he has not seen for twenty years, call him by his first name and reminisce with him over the past. This is a real achievement — a great gift.

Memory is given to us for a purpose. It involves the accumulation of experience and therefore enables us to approach the problems of life with an assurance that would be impossible if we could not call to our aid the resources of memory.

But be sure to remember the right things. The capacity to forget is also a gift when the things that need to be forgotten are bitter to the taste and incapable of being remedied.

We should make remembrance a blessing instead of a burden.

Current Economic Figures Should Give Cheer To Incoming President

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Special For The Reflector

President elect Richard M. Nixon may find a bit of cheer in the current flow of economic statistics out of Washington.

They provide some nourishment for the hope, and it is little more than that at this time, that the inflation which has been pushing living costs up for more than 20 months is losing some of its vigor, even though it remains sharply up.

If it develops that this is a real move toward a more stable economy, then the Nixon Administration may be spared, in its early months, a financial situation here at home which could bring on another international gold crisis.

A heartening sign is that the inflationary gap between government spending and revenue receipts, the deficit, is narrowing.

Along with this, the money supply is expanding at a far less rapid rate; due largely to credit policy.

Both moves are "restrictive" and may well lead to the much-predicted and long-awaited cooling of the business boom before inflation reaches the point where it will force a harsh "readjustment," meaning recession. This is what the Johnson-Humphrey Administration planners have hoped for.

Some signs that the combination of higher income and profit taxes and restraint on pending voted by Congress last summer are, in fact, beginning to have the desired impact can be found among the latest official economic indicators.

The Commerce Department issued a preliminary estimate which shows that retail sales shrank by 0.5 percent in October after, according to revised estimates, registering a slip in September. Still, the October level was a whopping 10 percent above the same month last year.

It has been the willingness of the consumer to part with his money at the retail level that has helped to fuel the inflation. It may be that the high prices, coupled with the fact that he is carrying a high load of debt, is making him a little more conservative as a buyer.

On the price side, the latest report from the Labor Department on the consumer index shows a gain of 0.2 percent for September, the smallest rise in a year. But the fall quarter figures, those that will cover October, November and December, are expected to show a more substantial gain.

Aronold Chase, assistant commissioner of labor statistics, is forecasting that the consumer price rise for the entire year will be about 4 percent, the highest since 1951. This is big, by any yardstick. It not only is a big slice from the spending dollar, but it also means that the dollar saved in government bonds or put away in a savings and loan account has done little more than maintain its value. Inflation has eaten up the interest almost in its entirety, despite the fact that interest rates are the highest in about 40 years.

Economists divide on whether budget or money supply developments are more significant in their impact on the overall economy. But there is wide agreement that when a decrease in the federal deficit coincides with a slowdown in the rate of expansion in the money supply there is bound to be a considerable restraining force at work.

The federal budget picture for the September quarter is this: Federal revenue rose by some $9.6 billion to an annual rate of $181.4 billion. At the same time, spending rose by $2.9 billion to an annual rate of $184.8 billion. The deficit gap for the quarter thus shrank to $2.9 billion. This is a considerable change from the June quarter, when the deficit gap was over $10 billion.

At the request of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee the Federal Reserve

Board issued the first of what will become a quarterly review of the money supply situation. This showed that the money supply grew at a 4.7 percent annual rate in the third quarter, sharply down from the 8.7 percent annual rate of the June quarter.

It was this shift in policy which tightened the supply of credit and pushed interest rates up some months ago. It is significant that after some slight declines only a few weeks ago interest rates are again moving higher.

There is a considerable feeling among economists and bankers that rates will remain relatively high into future years. This can add substantially to costs incurred by business in borrowing for new plant and equipment and tot he interest charges paid by the federal, state and local governments on their borrowings.

A continuation of high interest rates may force states, counties and municipalities to scale down some of their spending plans. If last week's voting results can be taken as an indication of public sentiment, taxpayers would like to see a curtailment in public works.

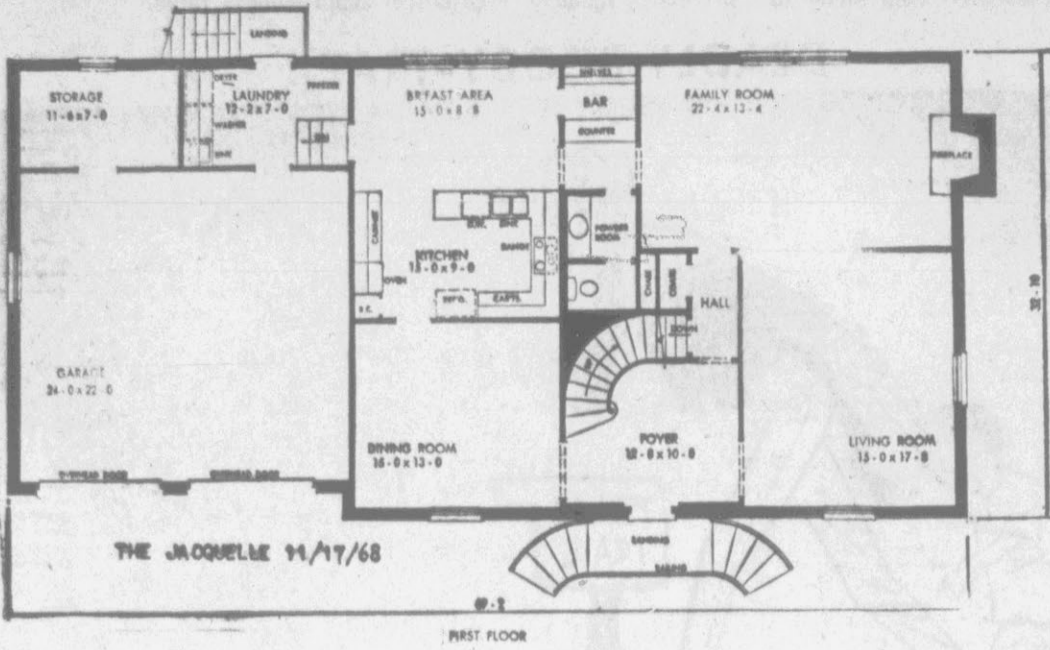

Figures pulled together on the fate of bond issues put up to voters on election day show that nearly half of the more than $9 billion in bond issues were rejected. This is believed to be a record in voter protest against local spending plans. In recent past voting, bond issues for public improvements have been commanding support of more than 70 percent.

A leveling out of the boom could save the new administration some severe headaches.

A resumption of the inflationary thrust to an annual rate of 6 percent, which was approached last summer, could force Nixon to back such direct controls as wage and price ceilings, which he opposes. But they might well become the only quick working remedy available if prices get completely out of hand.

Prolonged and steep inflation has ended up in substantial recessions in the past. This is something the Republican White House must avoid if it is to build up its party's strength in the House and Senate when the 1970 Congressional elections roll around.

THE MANSARD ROOF sets the mood for this four-bedroom home of formal French design. The Jacquelle also has two baths and a powder room with vanity, living room, dining room, large with overlooking balcony, kitchen, breakfast area, family room, laundry room, storage area and two-car garage.

Luxurious French-Inspired Elegance In Home

By GERRY BISHOP

The Jacquelle, as its name suggests, is architecture with a French accent.

Note the mansard roof which achieves an air of formality so often associated with French living.

And there are the twin circular front entry steps with wrought iron railings—another indication of refinement and grace.

Other decorative features of this four-bedroom model are the curved stone window heads, stone corner windows and the dormer windows. Each makes a significant contribution to the French exterior design.

Carrying out the French theme on the inside is the unusually large foyer with a spiral stairway to the second floor and stairs down to the basement.

With these appointments, the foyer actually sets the mood for the whole house.

FORMAL LIVING ROOM

To the right is the formal living room, also designed for formality. Its 15-foot-by-13-foot dimensions ease the task of interior decoration and furnishing.

Although this is a luxury home, it embodies all the components required for everyday living. Most notable is the large family room at the right rear corner. In marked contrast to the formality of other sections of the Jacquelle, this setting is one of charm and relaxation. The log-burning fireplace and beamed ceiling provide a comforting effect.

Adjacent to the family room is a bar and exceptionally large breakfast area. If desired, the bar could open into the family room.

The kitchen utilizes the conventional triangular arrangement of appliances, has adequate cabinet space, a broom closet, double sink and eye-level oven, among other conveniences.

OPEN BALCONY

Another extra on the main floor is the large powder room with vanity. Its central location also is a plus.

The first floor includes a service entrance and complete laundry facilities with access from the garage and back yard.

On the second floor are four bedrooms, two baths and a balcony overlooking the foyer. The master bedroom is served by a private bath and large walk-in closet. The other bedrooms also have large closets and enjoy easy access to the main bath.

There is a storage area behind the large two-car garage. Dimensions for the Jacquelle are approximately 69 feet by 32 feet and there are 2,970 square feet of living area.

Installing Light Fixtures By The 'Do-It-Yourselfer'

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Ceiling light fixtures have been inching their way back into fashion for many years.

In the last three decades, many homeowners removed ceiling fixtures and capped the outlets in favor of lamps and wall sconces.

Now one sees massive ceiling lights—crystal, metal, wood, even in small urban apartments. Newer fixtures are designed to spread the light and enhance the decorative scheme whether used in the kitchen, living room or dining room.

Many people still stuck with capped outlets and with old-fashioned ceiling fixtures, would like a new fixture, but the extent of such a project and the uncertainty of labor cost, keep them from updating their ceiling.

Well, why not do it yourself? Installation of new fixtures is neither complicated nor dangerous, advises the American Home Lighting Institute.

They advise getting the proper equipment—pliers, wrench, scissors, file and electrician's tape. Installation instructions and necessary hardware should come with the fixture. It is worth checking the contents of the package before beginning. If something is missing from the kit, be sure you get it before you begin the project.

Before beginning the job, check local laws. Some towns encourage people to do their own wiring and provide homeowners with information on doing such jobs safely and properly. Other towns insist that only licensed electricians may do the work.

Here are the lighting institute's directions for putting in a new fixture:

First, turn off current to the old fixture. It may even be better to throw the main switch at the fuse box, if you are squeamish about it or can't identify the right one.

Next, remove the canopy covering the fixture mounting and clip the two fixture wires. Remove the fixture from the mounting. Oldstyle fixtures usually are screwed to a center-threaded stud in the ceiling box. Some are fastened to metal straps which are in turn attached to the box with screws and can be removed by loosening screws that hold the fixture to the strap.

If the old fixture strap is the same as the new one leave it in place. Otherwise mount the new fixture strap and attach the fixture to the strap with screws or bolts that come with it. You are now ready to make wire connections.

Expose the ends of the wire that protrude from the ceiling moving insulation down to bare clean copper wire.

One ceiling wire may be black, the other white. Match black fixture wire to black ceiling wire and twist bared ends of the wire together. Do the same with white wires.

Wrap the splice securely with electrician's tape or use one of the variety of solderless connectors available in electrical supply or hardware stores. If you choose the tape method, place a few drops of solder on the splice before wrapping it. You may need a soldering iron or new type of solder that is applied from a tube and melted in the heat of a match flame.

Push the connected wires as close around the fixture mounting as possible, making certain that wires will not rub against any surface that might wear the insulation and expose the wires.

Finally, cover the mounting with the new canopy, install necessary light bulbs and diffusing bowl or glass, if any. Then replace the main fuse or throw on the main switch.

Leaves — asset or liability??

Leaves are nature's way of adding fertility and organic matter to the soil. True it does take tremendous amounts of leaves to add much fertility, but they have many other values.

Leaves make a good mulch, conserve moisture, keep down grass and weeds, reduce erosion, and help regulate soil temperature. When worked into the soil, leaves make the soil loamier and thus improve aeration, tilth, and its waterholding capacity.

Should leaves be ground up and left on the lawn or should they be removed? This, I believe, depends on your lawn. If your lawn is thick grind up your leaves with the mower and leave them on the grass. Be sure to keep up with the leaves and don't let them accumulate and pack down on the grass. After you get a good sod established, remove the leaves — at least most of them and use them for other purposes.

To make a compost pile, spread your leaves or other organic matter in a layer about 12 inches deep in any convenient prearranged size. Sprinkle with water if possible and then add one cup of complete fertilizer and one cup of agricultural lime over the top of every ten square feet of space. Then add another layer of organic matter, wet down, and add fertilizer and lime. Continue this process until the pile is as high as you desire. Since moisture hastens decomposition, leave the top of the pile hollowed at the center to catch rain water. It will hasten decomposition if you will shovel the compost from one pile to another two or three times during the season.

Compost makes an excellent top dressing for lawns and is very beneficial in the growing of any kind of plants. You can make an excellent soil for growing potted plants by mixing equal parts of compost, sand, and garden soil. Compost is also excellent for working in the border where perennials are to be grown.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG

AP Newsfeatures

When a husband gets a telephone call at the office from a frantic wife who tells him that a broken pipe is leaking water all over the place, his almost certain impatient advice is:

"Shut off the water and call the plumber."

Only at a time like that does he discover that his wife hasn't the faintest idea in the world of how to shut off the water. Besides, she already has called the plumber and reached an answering service which told her it would give the plumber the message when—and if—he calls in.

A situation of this kind, sometimes not resolved until floors, ceilings and furnishings are damaged, could have been avoided if the wife had known instantly which valve to turn to shut off the supply of water to the damaged pipe. Lacking that knowledge, she at least should have known how to cut off the flow of water to the entire house, even though that solution would have temporarily left the family without any water.

The responsibility for seeing that the lady of the house is aware of the location of the valves lies with the husband. He not only should have passed on the information to her, but should have placed a tag on each valve explaining which line it controls to prevent the possibility of a mistake during an emergency. The tags also serve as a guide to anyone else in the family who might have to operate the valves.

If the husband himself isn't too sure of his facts, he'd be wise to brush up on them quickly. The information can be obtained from a plumber, a neighbor, a utility man or through a trial-and-error procedure, with one person turning off a valve and another checking to see which plumbing fixture it affects.

In the perfect setup, there is a shut-off valve near every fixture, usually under it. But such arrangements are few and far between, and virtually nonexistent in older houses. Sometimes there are two or three line valves in the basement, the utility room or elsewhere. The main shut-off valve is located at the point where the water enters the house. Turning it off kayoes the entire water supply. In an emergency, it sometimes is wise to shut off this valve quickly; then, when the trouble is pinpointed, that particular line can be shut off and the main valve reopened.

Incidentally, a valve is shut off, preventing the flow of water, when it is turned in a clockwise direction all the way.

New Lawnmower Blade Is Safer; May Reduce Hurts

By EARL ARONSON

AP Newsfeatures

A new lawnmower blade made from a flexible material and reported to be safer than the conventional metal blade has been developed. Hopefully, the blade will lower the lawnmower accident rate—now more than 100,000 a year, according to the U.S. Public Health Service.

The most common accidents are to an operator's hands or feet.

The new blade is made of rubber and plastic. It will curve or flex over solid objects, such as the feet, the designing engineers say.

During tests in the last three years, several workers accidentally caught their shoes under the new blade. The shoes were scuffed, but aside from the jolt or sting to the foot, no serious injuries were reported.

The manufacturer says the new blade, which fits popular sizes of rotary mowers, will cut grass as efficiently as does the metal blade.

Daffodils vs. Narcissus
Do you know that the difference between a daffodil and a narcissus is in name only? The confusion goes back at least to 629, when an Englishman named Parkinson wrote: "... many idle and ignorant gardeners ... do call some of the daffodils, narcissus, when, as all that know any Latin know that Narcissus is the Latin name and Daffodil the English of one and the same thing."

Who was Narcissus? He was the handsome, rather vain youth of Grecian myth, so fascinated by his reflection that he turned into a pool-side flower, forever admiring his reflection in the water.

Tulips close partially to protect themselves to a degree against rain and snow. Daffodils take bad weather wide open.

They escape considerable insect damage because they bloom before the peak insect season.

Four varieties highly recommended by Garden News are: Yellow Cheerfulness, which has rounded, soft yellow heads with high, double scented centers; Geranium, a sturdy, 16-inch-tall plant with a white collar contrasting with its bright orange-red cup; Laurens Koster, with a bright yellow center cup and pointed white petals in the collar, and Scarlet Gem, with a wide-spreading orange trumpet and red center, winner of the 1914 Award of Merit in Haarlem, Holland.

Needs Thousand Housing Units

JERUSALEM (AP) — One thousand families a year should be evacuated from the teeming slums of the Old City, believes Mayor Teddy Kollek. He points out that 25,000 people live in an area of about 90 acres and some families live 10 to a room.

An estimated 3,000 families are in sub-standard homes while another 1,000 are in overcrowded apartments in projects built since the 1950s. Mayor Kollek has urged the Housing Ministry to start building 100 apartments for residents of the Old City.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG

QUESTION: I am making a finished room in our basement and I have to tackle the problem of hanging two doors. Can you tell me where the hinges should go? I've measured some other doors in our house and find the hinges are at different distances from the top and bottom. The two doors I bought are 80 inches high at 24 inches wide.

ANSWER: The recommended distances for a door of that size are 5 inches from the top and 10 inches from the bottom. That is, the top hinge should be 5 inches from the top of the door; the bottom hinge 10 inches from the bottom of the door. For extra strength and insurance against future sagging, you might want to install a third hinge midway between the other two.

QUESTION: My husband says wallpapering is a job for women and that I should paper our dining room wall. He says he read somewhere that women do a better job of it. Is he right?

ANSWER: While professional paperhangers are men, there is a theory that women are more adept at it. But if you aren't too anxious about doing it and are looking for a counter-argument, try this: there is an actual historical account of how George Washington and the Marquis de Lafayette collaborated in wall papering a banquet room. They did all the physical work while — and this is your clincher — Martha Washington supervised the project.

QUESTION: Why do I find it so difficult to remove varnish from old pieces of furniture? I've tried it twice within the past year and each time couldn't seem to scrape off the old finish without much huffing and puffing.

ANSWER: The most common fault is failing to leave on the remover long enough to do its work. Follow the instructions on the container about the length of time necessary, then try scraping in one corner. If the varnish doesn't yield readily, immediately apply another coat of remover right over the first one. Another fault is in brushing out the remover. It should be applied generously, then let alone. Do not brush it out as you might do when trying to level paint.

The techniques of applying various types of wood finishing materials are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.

GI's Find South Korean Prison Life 'Real Good'

By LEON DANIEL

SUWON, South Korea (UPI)—Pvt. Willie N. Page, 19, from Plaquemine, La., and SP-4 Raymond J. Velasquez, Jr., of Omaha, Neb., are the first American GIs to serve time in a South Korean prison and, they state it, they are being treated "real good."

A reporter who visited them at the Suwon Correctional Institute could see for himself that the two men—convicted of raping a woman they claim welcomed their advances—were comfortably housed.

"The Koreans think it's kind of an honor for us to be here," said Page. "You know what I mean?"

"Yea, they treat us real good," agreed Velasquez.

from the Korean prisoners in what Page calls "our dining room." Their food, supplied by the U.S. Army, is prepared in a separate kitchen by a man Page calls "our cook," a Korean prisoner.

Work In Garden
They work from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. in the prison flower garden. "We plant flowers," said Page. "You know, water them sometimes. Things like that. It's easy."

A sign over the door of the room Page and Velasquez occupy proclaims that is "For Foreigners" and another sign, also in English, states that the room has 72 square feet of floor space for each of its two occupants.

Other rooms of about the same size contain as many as 14 Korean prisoners.

The buildings and the grounds of the prison, surrounded by a high concrete wall, are clean and well kept. The prison is located 20 miles south of Seoul in a rich agricultural area.

Page then 18, and Velasquez, then 19, got themselves into trouble on the night of Sept. 11, 1967. They attended a party at a non-commissioned officers' club where they had drinks with Miss Yu Tae-Hi, daughter of a popular Korean movie actor. Both danced with the 21-year-old woman. Then, according to the prosecution, they took her to their barracks and raped her.

The following day they were arrested and placed in a U.S. Army stockade where they remained until they went on trial Nov. 16, 1967. They were found guilty on Dec. 21. Page was sentenced to a minimum of two and one half years and a maximum of three years and Velasquez was sentenced to one and a half years to two years by the senior judge of the Seoul district court.

Set Precedent
The sentences were the first which included imprisonment for members of U.S. forces since the status of forces agreement between the United States and South Korea went into effect in February, 1967.

Attorneys for Page and Velasquez appealed the convictions all the way to the South Korean Supreme Court. The appeals were denied. So the two GIs were removed from the U.S. Army stockade and placed in the Suwon prison Oct. 4, 1968. Thus did the Republic of Korea finally exercise its right to jail American FI's who break its laws. Many South Koreans considered it a milestone case.

And that is what Private Willie Page meant when he said Koreans thought it was an "honor" for his buddy and him to be cooped up at Suwon, a correctional institution.

"I've made a lot of good friends here," said Page who used to be a heavy smoker and now chews a lot of gum. (Smoking is forbidden in the prison). "I consider this a wonderful experience." He said he hoped to return to Korea some day and "go into the restaurant or nightclub business."

"We have learned to speak some Korean," said Velasquez.

"I hope to be out by Christmas," said Velasquez. He explained they would both be credited with the time they spent in the stockade and that prisoners are eligible for parole after serving one third of their sentences.

"I've got 17 months to go on my minimum," said Page. "The way things are going maybe I'll be out in six months or a year."

Upon release Page and Velasquez will be discharged from the Army as "undesirables."

Long Voyage For Pupils' Message

SARATOGA, Wyo. (AP) — The first grade class of Mrs. Len Denson at Saratoga Elementary School signed a note last year, put it in a bottle and dropped it into the North Platte River.

The note said: "Whoever finds this bottle please send this card back and tell us when and where you found it."

Mrs. Denson recently received a reply mailed from Lexington, Va., by Emil Smith. It said "found on bank of the Mississippi river near Memphis, Tenn., July 29, 1968."

The bottle apparently had floated over five major dams on the North Platte, Missouri and Mississippi rivers before being washed ashore near Memphis, nearly 2,000 miles away.

Local Family Tours Europe By Bicycle

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor

The Carroll Webber family of Greenville spent 11 weeks this past summer touring Europe. What was unusual about their trip? They rode approximately 1,800 miles on bicycles.

"We purchased our bicycles in Madrid, Spain, and there was not a very wide selection to choose from. Eleanor, our daughter, had a heavy girl's bike which slowed her down. We had racing bicycles styled for men. The bikes attracted attention everywhere we went," remarked Mrs. Webber.

When asked how they derived the idea of the trip, Mrs. Webber said, "We decided this would be a good way to make the trip interesting for all of us."

"The day we traveled the longest distance, we pedaled 57-58 miles. When we started on the trip, we traveled about 25 miles partly due to mountains. We now know that Spain is the second most mountainous country in Europe after Switzerland. We found this out with a vengeance! We would ask the local people if the road ahead was flat and when they said yes, we would find out the road was a lot steeper by our standards."

"This became a joke with us because we found that hills are much more significant when you climb them without gasoline power."

"We stopped to visit and rest quite often — we did not aim to push ourselves too much. The day we really pushed ourselves, Eleanor decided that she wanted to meet two girls from Holland again. She has seen the girls two straight nights at hostels along the way. We never found that particular hostel, a temporary one, was not listed in the hostel book. It was sometimes difficult to find certain hostels."

"By traveling further that day, we experienced a very interesting camping experience — we camped on the grounds of Belfast Castle, which is located in Northern Ireland. We were given a first-hand tour of the castle, which is city government property, by the director of parks. We did camp there for several nights," recalled Mrs. Webber.

The Webbers toured Spain, France, the British Isles, Holland and some in Belgium.

In the British Isles, they spent most nights at youth hostels. They were impressed with the interesting young people met in the hostels, which are designed to encourage young people to become acquainted with youngsters of other nationalities.

Youth Hostels

"It is possible to travel around Europe very inexpensively by using the youth hostels," she commented.

"On the continent, we did a lot of camping. We carried our tent and sleeping bags from home. The camping areas were frequently found. The camping rates are based on the number of people, whether on bicycles or in a car and the size of your tent. This was interesting to me, because at one camp, we were charged more as bicyclists than if we had been traveling by car."

"None of the campings had fireplaces, which was a disappointment and it was followed by another. Instead of finding cans of Sterno for the little collapsible stove we carried, we didn't find anyone who had every heard of the stuff. So after we'd boiled a couple of eggs and made a pot of tea one night, our Sterno rig was just useless weight."

"Finally in London, we bought a tiny frame with heat pellets, very compact, on which we sometimes cooked cereal, rice or soup. In the hostels, however, there was almost always a community kitchen which was much handier for cooking."

"Another difficulty in cooking was that we had heavy enough loads without carrying a lot of food. However, in campings and hostels you could usually buy supplies — there were no supermarkets, of course, but you could get by. Hostels usually offered meals, too," she recalled.

Laundry was a problem. For one thing they didn't have many extra things. The big problem was staying anywhere long enough to get things dry. After the first week or two, the summer was mostly cool to cold and damp.

"One day as I was dreaming of an automatic laundry, we rode past a little settlement where there were two large concrete tanks set into the stream. Cattle were drinking from the first, and in the second, the women were washing clothes. At least we sometimes found laundries and usually found something better than that to wash clothes in. Ironing gave us no trouble at all. We took synthetics and didn't touch an iron all summer," she said.

"Our real interest in the trip was to get the feel of the countries rather than seeing so many points of interest," she said.

Eleanor added, "I was interested in doing both." "There was some language barrier. In spite of our lack of fluency, we were able to communicate in French and Spanish. In Holland, I was reduced to drawing pictures. We were impressed at the patience shown by the people we talked to," Mrs. Webber replied.

Narrow Escapes

"Our narrow escapes, though, were in missing each other. The nearest miss was when Eleanor and I went on ahead expecting to meet my husband at a hostel perhaps 10 miles on. We had the map, but this time the map was a disadvantage."

The location of the hostel was a little ambiguous and no people were on the road, except hurrying by in cars. So they went on and on before we saw a police car, flagged it down and learned that the hostel had been closed.

"He told us where the turn-off was and agreed to call in to the police in the last town back, a message that we would camp in a spot where he said he had frequently seen people camping. Back at the turn-off, in the dusk, we looked down the steep hill to the bridge and thought about the long way to the hostel and the likelihood that my husband had been told when he asked directions that the hostel had been closed, and probably was even sitting there."

"We wished we could telephone, but there was no telephone. As we stood down and meditating going back, we heard a whistle and saw a light. It was Carroll, having returned from the hostel and seeing nothing to do but zoom ahead," remarked Mrs. Webber.

In Holland and Belgium, their transportation was recognized as no where else. There was usually a special bicycle path, and sometimes there was one on each side of the road. Sometimes, there was special road signs and even special traffic lights with the figure of a cycle on them. But the crowning touch was the special tunnel for cyclists under the river into Rotterdam. They went into a building, and there, doing a heavy business, were ranks of escalators.

"Yes, indeed, I would recommend this type of trip! After we sold the bicycles, regrettably, in Holland, we continued our trip back to Madrid by train and rented a car. This part of the trip was more conventional and emphasized cities and American-visited tourist areas more. It had its excitement though, too. We were quite surprised at how inexpensive our centrally located Paris hotel was. It turned out that part of Paris's wholesale fruit and vegetable market went on all night long under our windows. It was noisy, but the only thing that kept us from sleeping was the interest of the show," she said.

"It was fun, too, to climax our summer of getting along fine without reservations by getting exactly the pullman accommodations we wanted from Paris to the Spanish border on one day's notice — and that at the end of August when European trains were jammed with vacationers returning from summer holidays."

"So far, we had traveled by bus, plane, bicycle, train and boat. We finished off by renting a car for the last lap from Barcelona to Madrid. Finding a car on Saturday evening, Aug. 31, was another piece of luck. The Avis and Hertz agencies were long closed, but we were able to rent a Seato. Still and all, it was a little acclimatic after the cycling."

"When I read the English billboards urging, 'Buckle your seatbelts. You know it makes sense,' I couldn't help thinking of the contrast between our cautious living at home and the life on the bicycles. We got our first seat belts before they were generally available in Greenville. But in Bordeaux we were on a six-lane highway at rush hour, changing lanes. Things like this weren't planned."

"In this case, it happened because we were very unlucky with public transportation, and in no mood to stay in Bordeaux over night. Still, as a general thing, it was dangerous living for the seatbelt set," she continued.

"Alice, our college sophomore, spent most of the summer exercising her German in Vienna," concluded Mrs. Webber.

Natives of California, the Webbers have been living in Greenville for seven years. Mrs. Webber teaches English at East Carolina University and Webber is in the mathematics department.

Eleanor is in the seventh grade at the Junior High School and Alice is attending the University of California at Berkeley.

The Webbers reside at 610 S. Elm St.

Italian Ladies' Hairdresser Is Making Ping-Pong Hair

By TRIXIE BELMONT

SHEFFORD, England — Italian ladies' hairdresser Toni Contessa of Shefford, near Hitchin (England) is making wigs out of wood shavings, stainless steel, aluminum, copper, table-tennis balls, peacock feathers and pineapple tops.

Toni, who plans to exhibit the wigs at various exhibitions throughout Europe, says that he got the idea because women in England are too conservative about hair styles.

"There's a great future for these wigs to be worn at parties, or for use in stage and movie work," he says.

"I want to brighten up the scene for women. I want women to go in for more exciting and provocative hairstyles."

Total Care
PARIS (WNS) — Sophia Loren's millionaire husband Carlo Ponti is really determined that this time Sophia will not lose the baby she is expecting. To help he has bought a four-story luxury apartment house for around $450,000.

Help? Yes, for the building is next door to the private maternity clinic of Swiss professor Hubert de Watteville, world famous gynecologist, in whose charge Sophia has been ever since she moved into the $150-a-day presidential suite of Geneva's Inter-Continental hotel two months ago.

Sophia's new apartment is almost ready; waiting for her are two nurses, two maids, a valet and a secretary. After losing two babies, Sophia, now six months pregnant, is willing to make the sacrifice demanded by professor Watteville — to remain indoors near the clinic. Though it does help to have a husband who can buy up the necessary property.

Joan Of Arc
Was Joan of Arc really burned at the stake by the beastly British? There are many historians (including a descendant) who definitely say she wasn't, insist that she got a jail term, and married after regaining her freedom.

French writer Maurice David-Darnac now produces new evidence in support of the "no burning" theory — but has run into deep trouble with the Vatican.

For ever since Joan was made a Saint in 1924, the Vatican has rigorously refused to admit that she could have died in any other way than by fire.

And as for Monsieur David-Darnac's new book, one Vatican historian dismisses it loftily as "a spurt of soda water, better meant for a whisky-glass, and directed against a flaming stake, hoping to put it out. A ridiculous and miserable illusion."

Miss Roberts Or Mrs. Harrison?

For some years now Rachel Roberts has sacrificed — very willingly, it's true — her acting career to be just Mrs. Rex Harrison. No doubt it's a full-time job being wife of "Sexy Rexy." But how long can a career girl hold out against a career? It seems that Mrs. Harrison has yearnings to become Miss Roberts more often.

Says she: "I'm an actress — but Rex is an international star. He's the one who is recognized."

"I really do prefer being Mrs. Harrison to anything else. But I've got this blasted bug in me — I've got to work."

Which is why Miss Roberts is sharing star billing with the cinema's latest prodigy, Nicol Williamson, while her husband is working with Richard Burton in the Paris Studios for "Staircase."

Her film is called "Matter of Honour," and she plays a woman who has an affair with an ambitious young executive. "It's an earthy role, and very sexy. She's the most real thing that's happened to me in years," said Miss Roberts.

How hard is the work bug biting? "I think," she says, "this will get it out of my system for a time."

Youngest Professor

Twenty-one-year-old Francoise Faure has become the youngest professor in France. When she walks into her lecture room to teach classics, her pupils will be in her own age group.

Auburn-haired Francoise isn't scared at the thought.

"I'll be able to understand students and their problems better than most of my colleagues," she says. "We'll be able to talk to one another far more easily and freely than if I were twice their age."

Francoise, who lives at Roubaix in Northern France, was a bachelor of arts at 19 after a brilliant school record. Her mother is a school-teacher.

P.S. Her father is a tax inspector.

What's New?

Liz Taylor is planning to retire, probably next year, says "Sometimes I long for obscurity. Oh God, yes."

Best seller in Paris: Dior's new "liquid look" stockings — rather like the old-style silk stockings — in peach, champagne, pearl grey. Cost around $1.25 a pair.

Californian Bob Smart, who makes his home in Europe, is teaching French top pop singer Mireille Mathieu to speak English — in preparation for a new U. S. tour.

The Last Word

"You know what else I like about clothes? I think it's great fun if they make a noise. Most women just make a noise with spiked heels on pavements. I wouldn't like to sound like a tuba — but a tambourine is romantic." Cinestar Candice Bergen, filming "The Adventurers" in Italy.

"If you will pardon my rudeness for ignoring your question I will forgive your rudeness for asking it." — Julie Andrews.

"Of course it's an advantage having John Huston as a father." — Anjelica Huston, now a movie actress (thanks to father.)

"A career is like building with bricks. I don't look behind to see which other blonde is coming up fast." — Actress Mary Ure, currently starring with Burton in "Where Eagles Dare."

Fashion For Boys, Too

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
NEW YORK (AP)—In the days not very far past, fashion as far as boys were concerned, was for girls, or for their mothers.

Clothes for boys were just clothes; something to be worn to keep you warm and dry and decent and to keep your knees from scraping too hard on the sidewalk when you fell down.

What colors, or what shape they took did not matter much to the pre-adolescent. If, at all, his fashion consciousness did not awaken until he developed an interest in the opposite sex.

Perhaps the oncoming generation of males might have followed in the dull gray fashion footsteps of their fathers if the peacock revolution had not permeated from the young to the very young.

Kids are quick to copy their big brothers whom they envy for their maturity, and are loathe to imitate the ways of their fathers who are authority figures. At least that's the way the amateur psychologists in the men's and boyswear industry analyze it.

At any rate the lads of America are holding their heads high and their chins up because the minor fashion news is all around their necks. Their first lesson in style is to do their own thing with sweaters that do their own thing (or do the thing the sweaters for older boys do) around the collar line.

Dick Frankfort, stylist for Donnmor, was one of the first to mini the Nehrus and gurus for the little guys, and to make tall for the little turtles, rolled turtles, low turtles, turtled turtles, mock turtles, zipped-to-the-ears turtles and double-layered turtles and turtle dickers for the kids with very ordinary necks.

The junior crowd has been quick to take up the trend by decorating these with jangling jewelry and leather thongs and colorful scarves.

One probable reason for the popularity of these under-the-chain fashions is that kids hate to wash those necks.

Britain Has Two Women In Cabinet Positions

By MARIS ROSS
LONDON (UPI)—If Britain ever accepted the idea of a woman prime minister, Judith Hart would have a good chance of gaining the post.

For a woman who has been nine years in Parliament, she has done remarkably well. In October, Prime Minister Harold Wilson made her a member of his cabinet, the inner circle of power in Government.

Thus, for the first time Britain has two women cabinet ministers, appropriately in the 50th anniversary year of votes for women. The other is the redoubtable Barbara Castle, Secretary of State for Employment and Productivity.

Mrs. Castle is the more experienced politician but, looking into the future, Mrs. Hart has the advantage of living 13 years the younger.

Mrs. Hart has become a cabinet member at 44 with the title of Paymaster-General, a misleading one because the duties of paying anyone long since have passed to the administrative departments.

Watchdog
Paymaster-Generals do what the Prime Minister briefs them to do. Mrs. Hart's predecessor, George Wigg, had a brief so vague that it produced endless comic questions in Parliament. In fact, he was Prime Minister Harold Wilson's watchdog on security.

Mrs. Hart's brief is different but equally vague and, if carried to its fullest extent, probably would drive her to nervous exhaustion from overwork.

She is supposed to look into the problems of youth, decentralization, nationalism, forward planning, greater participation of the individual in government, and internal government publicity.

particular aims in mind — to particular aims in mind—to give her cabinet experience with a view bigger things, to see if she can think up some attractions for the three million potential voters aged 18 to 21 who will get the vote at the next general election because the government plans to lower the voting age.

She will be very much under the Wilson eye because she will be working out of his office, Number 10 Downing Street. The Paymaster-General has no department to go with the title. This has pitfalls because the ministers with departments object to any infringement on their territory.

Not Well Known
Mrs. Hart's is not a well known name in Britain. She has not chosen to see publicity and her posts in government have rarely attracted it.

Wilson has a high opinion of her and she got a job as soon as the Labor Party took office in 1964. She started as Joint Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Scottish Office, then Minister of State at the Commonwealth Office, and last year became Minister of Social Security, a post which disappeared last summer in a merger with the Health Ministry.

She gained brief limelight at the Commonwealth Office through a mission of the type normally given to a man. Wilson sent her to Zambia to try to placate President Kenneth Kaunda, angered at British handling of Rhodesia.

At the Social Security Ministry she won standing as an able administrator of a big department.

Mrs. Hart was born Sept. 18, 1924, daughter of linotype operator Harry Ridehalgh who had no great interest in politics. She went to a local school at Clitheroe in North-West England, then on to the London School of Economics (LSE) for a first class honors degree in sociology. She is the only highly qualified sociologist in the cabinet.

She married scientist Anthony Hart the year after she got her degree and has two student sons, Stephen, 20, and Richard, 16.

The LSE has a strong left-wing contingent and Mrs. Hart carried on those views for some time. She opposed the American Polaris submarine base at the Holy Loch in Scotland, marched to ban the bomb, led a rent strike and belonged to organizations on the left. But as she has grown in political stature, so she has moved further and further away from the left.

She talks of government in terms of power and seems all set for higher office, especially now that her children are growing up.

"I stopped working when my first child was born not out of any sense of virtue but because I couldn't bear for someone else to do it for me," she says.

"Then I went back to part-time sociology and part-time politics and it wasn't until I was offered the Lanark seat that I had to choose which way I wanted to go."

She won entry to Parliament through Lanark in 1959. Less than 10 years later she has a cabinet post with a salary of 8,500 pounds ($20,400) dollars a year. Would she like to be Prime Minister?

"I don't know. It is a very demanding job and takes a lot of stamina."

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

A holiday open house is being planned by the Pitt County Extension Homemakers and Home Economics Extension agents.

The event will take place at the Extension Office Bldg. on Friday between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Mrs. Barbara James, VEPCO home economist, will be on hand as a special guest. She will display her Christmas suggestions and free recipe booklets.

All interested persons are invited to attend the holiday open house.

A stranger walking into the office of Mrs. Elsie Edwards might find a seemingly disorganized array of homemaking devices, ranging from jars of preserves to workshop tools. "I'm not really disorganized," the extension home economist confided, "it just appears to be. Besides, I've heard that if your desk is too clean, you don't have much to do."

Mrs. Edwards, a former resident of Winterville, was recently presented the Distinguished Service Award from the Association of Extension Economists in Phoenix, Ariz.

The citation read: "Mrs. Edwards has played an active role in teaching handcraft skills and encouraging the marketing of the resulting products in a 10-county area. Under her positive, dynamic leadership, handcraft leaders have been trained for home industries — a program designed to increase family income."

An article written about the activities of Mrs. Edwards recently appeared in the Albemarle Daily Advance.

Mrs. Edwards received her A. B. degree from East Carolina University. While in Winterville, she taught home economics for five years but preferred the varied schedule of an extension agent.

She was married to the late Charles V. Edwards of Winterville. She has two daughters, Charlene, 17, and Julia, 13.

She was selected for the award by her co-workers and district and state agents in Raleigh.

Mrs. Edwards is active in the Blackwell Memorial Baptist Church, Albemarle Craftsmen Guild, the Albemarle Conserved Products Association, Epsilon Sigma Phi National Sorority of Extension Workers and the N.C. Association of Extension Home Economists.

Skater Aja Zanova Recalls Escape From Czechoslovakia

By CATHARINE BREWSTER

NEW YORK (WNS)—When Aja Zanova, the lovely skating star who has been a prime attraction of Ice Capades for 13 years, made a date for this interview, we had every intention of talking about beauty matters.

But by the time we met, the Russian intervention in Czechoslovakia had occurred, and Aja was too full of memories to keep long to our topic. She kept remembering 1950, when at 16 she had escaped being kidnapped back to her country only by the intervention of Scotland Yard.

"I had been first Czech skating champion, then European champion, and then Ladies Singles World Champion. I was in London to defend that title. I was determined not to go back to the tyranny at home. My friend and helper was Jan Masaryk, the son of the founder of our country and then the foreign minister. 'He was the one they said committed suicide, but I have never believed it.'"

Prize
As a star athlete, Aja Zanova was regarded as a prize by the Communist government of Czechoslovakia, and an attempt was made to kidnap her auto and airplane. Scotland Yard foiled the attempt, and soon afterwards, Aja was in the United States as a new star for Ice Capades.

"We go to 63 cities a year, and I have just retired from the ice to be special representative for public relations and to scout out new talent. There are many skating clubs in this country today, since all-year ice became common, so promising youngsters can be found everywhere."

A bright-eyed, curly-haired brunette, Aja has a flashing smile and an elegance which speaks of beauty lessons well learned in her adopted country, the United States.

"Of course, when I came here, I could scarcely believe all I found available. Beauty aids are luxuries in Czechoslovakia. Not that the girls used to look bad. They were very clever about doing their hair and using what makeup they had. We were always the most Western of the East European countries, and enjoyed looking chic."

Dazzling
Aja remembered how dazzling the costumes of the Ice Capades were to her when she arrived to join the show. But above all, she is still impressed with her travels all over this country.

"There is no real division here between city and country, as there is in Iron Curtain countries. There you will see fashionable women only in the capital, while the country is still much as it was years ago. But here, people everywhere know what is going on, and can have anything they want."

Somehow this recalled the fate of her parents. When Aja defected, her father and mother were still in Czechoslovakia. Her mother was able to escape, but her father was sentenced to six months of hard labor in a coal mine for his daughter's action and is still in Prague. The recent liberalization movement had given Aja the hope she could go home to visit him, but the Russian invasion destroyed her dream.

"There may be troubles in the United States, but it is the most fortunate country in the world. We are an international lot in the Ice Capades, but none are better than the American youngsters from Brooklyn, and Chicago and Hershey, Pennsylvania, to name a few places where some of our current stars were born."

Naturally, Aja Zanova thinks every youngster should ice skate.

"It's not hard to learn, it's great for health and a good figure, not to speak of grace. With practice, every skater can have the fun of doing figures or rhythm skating. And who knows what talent may be uncovered when a youngster gets started?"

Program Given By Mrs. Savage
Mrs. J. L. Savage presented the program at the meeting of the Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club held Tuesday.

She reviewed the book "Road to Bithynia."

Mrs. W. A. Pollard, chairman, presided at the meeting. Mrs. George Snyder told about pictures presented to the club building recently.

Plans were discussed to hold a luncheon meeting in December.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. W. E. Roseveare, Mrs. J. C. Galloway, Mrs. W. C. Eagles and Mrs. I. E. Alexander.

Sandy's Route: From Olympics To Night Club

By DOUG TODD

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Murruming ceased in the plush little night club as tall, lithe, some Sandy Ruddick spun into a spotlight and started her dancing-gymnastics routine.

She balanced on one hand on a chair and tapped her feet on the ceiling, swung herself into a pretzel shape on a small table and teetered on her shoulders on the backs of two chairs.

"She ought to be in the Olympics," said one admirer who got to sip his drink.

She was, once. He was watching a one-time Olympic performer-turned-go-go girl. Or, in the words of the performer, an "interpretive exotic dancer."

Sandy, a native of Indianapolis, Ind., participated in the 1956 Olympics at Melbourne, Australia, as a member of the U.S. team.

"We didn't win any medals, but we got our own satisfaction out of it," said Sandy before going on stage at the Oklahoma City night spot.

"My goal always had been to compete in the Olympics. I just had the urge to get up there and try."

She was married and the mother of two children when she qualified for the Olympics, but said she was just too busy to pursue her gymnastics career after having a third child.

She was divorced in 1961 and two years later, when the youngest child required a delicate operation, "I became a go-go dancer to help pay the medical bills."

Sandy admits to some difficulty starting her career as an exotic dancer. She said part of the trouble may be in her routine which includes more acrobatics like hand-stands and cartwheels than the standard bumps and grinds.

"Club owners are hesitant to hire me," she sighed. "But I've had people tell me they'd much rather see my acrobatics than anything else."

The 36-year-old performer, who stands 6-feet-3 in her high heels and hairdo and measures 38-25-35, says she's proud of her shape.

"But I'm not vulgar," she said. "I think people would like to see a good, clean act."

Sandy, who describes herself as a physical fitness buff, said she just goes "on pure energy that I've built up during my lifetime—I don't believe in this three meals a day thing."

"I enjoy my dancing," she said. "In a way, it's like the Olympics. I want people out front to enjoy my show as much as I enjoy doing it."

Early last year, while still go-going in Indianapolis, Sandy said she was arrested in the midst of her act.

"They said I was dancing topless, but I wasn't," she said. "I requested a jury trial. I won, and in the course of winning received so much publicity I decided to put an exotic show together and go on the road."

Part of the show she devised included a dance with a 13-foot boa constrictor.

"I'm the only snake show in the business that does acrobatics," she asserted.

After lunch, a short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Frank Longino, president.

Plans were discussed for the Christmas project.

Two giant scarecrows, pumpkins, magnolia leaves, turkeys, fruits, vegetables, red berries and other decorations were used on the table, on stage and in the windows of the fellowship hall.

Good Deed Daisy To Receive Pay

HOPWOOD, England (WNS)—Citizens here complimented transportation department for keeping such a clean bus shelter. Officials, who discovered there was no cleaning woman for the shelter on the payroll, investigated. Daisy Hemming, 57, a factory worker who lives near the bus stop, confessed that she keeps it cleaned and polished "because I like to give people pleasure." The officials have offered Mrs. Hemming thirty cents per cleaning to keep up the good work.

Husband Won't Reveal Secrets Of His Lodge

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently joined the Masonic lodge. Naturally, I was very proud of him, but now it has presented a problem to us. He tells me that this is a "secret organization" and he has given his word that he will tell no one about the secrets of the lodge.

Abby, in all the 18 years we have been married, we have not kept any secrets from each other. I have cried, begged, threatened, and tried everything I could think of to make him tell me these "secrets" of his lodge, but he refuses.

How can an organization which is supposed to be dedicated to such high ideals create a barrier between a man and his wife? I'd appreciate your views.

WIFE OF A MASON
DEAR WIFE: Consider yourself fortunate to be married to a man whose word means something. And quit pestering him to reveal the lodge secrets or you'll lose your Mason by degrees.
DEAR ABBY: The boy who sits in front of me in history is very smart and gets 100s on almost all his tests. I was stuck during a test last week and asked him some answers. He gave them to me wrong! I didn't know it until we got our papers back. He got 100 and I got 65! I was plenty mad and told him I thought he was a dirty cheat. I admit I wasn't very honest to ask him for the answers, but don't you think he was twice as dishonest to have purposefully given them to me wrong?
CHEATED

DEAR CHEATED: Don't expect to find an honest partner for a crooked deal.

DEAR ABBY: I have often read letters in your column about women who were worried about their husband's being unfaithful. Well I am one woman who is not worried.

In fact, I am all for it. You see, my husband's capacity for love making is far greater than mine, and rather than force himself on me night after night, he attempted to divert his energies to various other hobbies. The hobbies didn't help, so he eventually took up drinking, and was well on his way to becoming an alcoholic before I realized his problem.

We discussed it, and I told him I would rather have him out playing the field than killing himself with the bottle. He agreed and complied with my request, and it has made a new man out of him.

His other women aren't taking anything away from me. In fact, they are doing me a favor. I am grateful for other women.

CONTENT
DEAR CONTENT: If you are so sure of yourself in this strange love, why are you blabbing about it? I don't advise your system.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is not speaking to his parents because last Sunday we invited them for 12 o'clock noon dinner. They didn't show up, but at around 1:45 p.m. my husband's sister phoned to say that Mon had unexpected company and they couldn't make it.

My husband thinks they should have told the unexpected company they were sorry but they had a previous dinner invitation and had to leave. What do you think?

A. H.
DEAR A. H.: I think your husband is right. And I also think your husband should start speaking to his parents. If only to tell how he feels and get it off his chest.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FOR ABBY'S NEW BOOKLET, "WHAT TEEN-AGERS WANT TO KNOW," SEND $1 TO ABBY, BOX 69700, LOS ANGELES, CAL., 90069.

'Miss America' Types Called Too Fat For Modeling Fashions

By JEANNE SAKOL
NEW YORK (WNS)—Marilyn Monroe was too sexy, Elizabeth Taylor is too short and the girls who qualify for Miss America standards are too fat. For what? For the special world of fashion modeling, according to the undisputed king of models, Stewart Cowley, for over 20 years head of the renowned Stewart Agency.

A craggy, handsome man in his mid-40s but looking younger, Cowley handles the modeling careers of such unique types as Twiggy, Kezia, Marisa Berenson and a 6'2" tigress who was told she was too tall to model, the incredible Veruschka.

"A fashion model is a special and unique kind of performing artist. She is not a movie star and should not be confused with movie stars. Some models become movie stars, of course, like Audrey Hepburn and Suzy Parker, but the professional demands on fashion models are totally different from those of the motion picture camera.

"For one thing, a fashion model must capture in a passing instant an entire story, a drama, a comedy, whatever the clothes or cosmetics suggest. She doesn't have two hours to tell her story. On a television commercial, she may have 30 or 60 seconds, but even then her impact must be condensed — pow!"

The physical dimensions of modeling are much more rigid than for film stars, he said.

It's not only a matter of being thin; the proportions must be graceful, the body lean and supple enough to move easily into the most uncomfortable position.

Creator of the recent "Model of the Year" Contest as a national showcase for finding new models, Stewart Cowley set the top age limit at 23, physical requirements as being between 5'6" and 5'10", weight from 110 to 125 pounds.

The winner, a striking blonde, Cybill Shepherd of Memphis, Tennessee, received a guaranteed $25,000 in modeling fees, two runners-up $15,000 and $10,000 respectively.

Cinderella
Modeling is the last Cinderella story of today, the agency head said. Where once parents worried about their daughters becoming models, it is now the most coveted profession. Luck does play a big part since it is impossible to acquire the body structure and photogenic planes; you must have them to start. It's the last arena for overnight success.

"But then the hard work starts! A model's life is only glamorous on camera. Otherwise, she must be totally devoted to her career. No late nights. No booze. No rich mood. They show instantly!"

A model needs the physical stamina of a horse (a thoroughbred, of course). She must be on time for appointments, perfectly groomed and made-up — often from seven in the morning to ten at night. She must be able to follow the photographer's instruction and convey the required mood. Like the Boy Scouts, she must always "Be Prepared."

Versatility, too, plays an important role. As an example, Cowley introduced Lucy Angle, 17, a misty-eyed girl with light brown hair and exquisitely chiseled features. Because of her chameleon ability to change her appearance at will, she made history of sorts by being the only model ever to appear on the covers of Harper's Bazaar and Seventeen the same month.

"She looked like two different people."

To the thousands of girls who might be contemplating a career in modeling, Stewart Cowley has some advice: Don't try to look like Twiggy or Treeny or anyone else. Try to achieve your own special, individual look.

Give up bread and desserts for life.

Model as much as you can in school or at local fashion events for the experience and to learn from watching yourself and others.

Be ruthless in assessing your own looks. Study yourself in a three-way mirror. Get yourself photographed as much as possible and examine the results to see how you can improve.

"Then —" he smiled "come and see me!"

On The Young Side

Assuming the role of government officials, nine Rose High seniors participated in Youth Government Day on Thursday.

Acting city manager was Craig Jones, followed by: judge, Joe Saad; solicitor, Betty Jo Causey; police chief, Barry Billica; fire chief, Candy Pearce; public works director, Barbara Alcoin; Utilities director, Ernie Avery, and city council members, Mitzi Conleton and Tim Winslow, for Recreation and police departments, respectively.

Competing against 16 other candidates from Pitt County, senior Fred Irons was one of two nominees for the 1968 Morehead Scholarship program of the University of North Carolina.

Fred, son of Dr. C. Fred Irons and Dr. Malene Irons is a member of the Science Club, NHS, a member of the Student Council, and is on the swimming team.

Members To Be Inducted
New members of the Rose High National Honor Society and Quill and Scroll will be inducted during an assembly Tuesday. Speakers will present their views on scholarship, leadership, dependability, and science. Superlatives, who were voted on last week by the senior class, will be announced.

A drive was carried on all of this past week for subscriptions to the TAU Annuals will cost $5 this year, and cannot be brought at time of arrival by a student unless he has already subscribed.

Now that football season is over, other athletics have begun and are being greatly emphasized. Varsity basketball players started practicing in early November while the Junior Varsity began Nov. 1. Twelve boys will be on the team and Tarboro will challenge the cagers for their first game Dec. 10.

Matmen also began this week while future track team prospects are already getting in shape for next spring.

Featuring Coach Tom Harp of Duke University, the annual Rose High football banquet will take place tomorrow night. Awards will be made to outstanding players on this year's football team. Shrine Bowl Players David Harrington and Kyle Hodges have been selected to play in the 1968 Shrine Bowl next month. David led the Northeastern conference in scoring this year with nearly 1,200 yards in rushing.

Hodges was official punter for the Phantoms, averaging nearly 40 yards per kick, and exceeding several 60 yarders. Coach Bud Phillips will serve as coach for the North Carolina team this year, while Varsity cheerleaders will travel to the game Dec. 7 as cheerleaders for the team.

Anxious to show the boys that they can play football too, senior and junior girls clashed at Guy Smith Stadium Friday afternoon for a "powderpuff" game. Dave Bumgarner coached the seniors with Babs Winn as captain. Ronald Vincent coached juniors with Kaki King as captain.

Half-time ceremonies portrayed a homecoming king, Mr. Junior, Mr. Sophomore, and Mrs. Freshman.

Twenty-three distributive education students traveled to Roanoke Rapids, N. C., to attend the annual District 10 Leadership Conference of DE Clubs of America.

Accompanied by Horace Robertson and his student teacher, John Daughtridge, the students attended workshops during the afternoon on select topics. Junior Beverly Farmer ran for president of District 10.

Members of the FTA assembled at Wahl-Coates school Nov. 11 in the kindergarten room. The girls observed kindergarten and learned how children are taught to do certain things.

State Convention
Sandy Foley, Kyle Hodges, and Tig Sugg traveled to Jacksonville Nov. 10-12 for the State SCA convention. New state officers were elected and delegates were shown new ideas for student government.

Kyle and Tig represented Rose High and Sandy went as a discussion leader. The representatives stayed in homes while in Jacksonville. A citation was awarded to senior Edwin Causey at the Optimist Club Monday night in appreciation of his outstanding performance as a bus driver. This presentation began Youth Appreciation Week.

Members of the Welcome and Social Committee of the SCA sponsored a student-faculty tea last week. Taking place in the home economics rooms, teachers attended the tea from 3:30 - 4:15.

'Mealtime' Interrupted
MANCHESTER, England (WNS) — Wives flooded Chief Constable "Big Jim" Richards with complaints that their home lives were being wrecked by their husbands' late nights at pubs and clubs in this swinging swigging city. The clubs maintained that they were restaurants that did not have to observe closing hours for bars. Wives pointed out that a tea sandwich eaten while tipping is not a meal Richards agreed, lowered the closing hours and ruled that a meal is something substantial enough to require the use of knives and forks.

French Girl Is Champion Eater

PARIA (WNS) — Suzanne Haekspill, an 18-year-old French girl, won the European championship for hot-dog eating here by swallowing eight and one-half feet of frankfurters. Her male competitors included men from every European Common Market country "plus a few nations that haven't yet got in". Americans were not allowed to enter the contest. "They have had the advantage of eating hot dogs all their lives, but the 'chens chaus' are only a few years old here," explained Mlle. Haekspill, whose ambition is to visit the United States and learn what the original hot dog taste like.

Youngsters Reveal Their Ideas On Peanut Butter

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—If you examine a slice of life of a typical American child, you probably will find it spread with peanut butter.

This conclusion was reached by the Georgia Peanut Commission and the Alabama Peanut Producers, who grow about two-thirds of the goobers used for making peanut butter in the United States. It is based on an informal study made at four elementary schools, in Manhattan, Tifton, Ga., Upper Montclair, N.J. and Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

The 10 to 12-year-olds, asked to write compositions about peanut butter, came up with some novel if not downright revolutionary ideas.

They said peanut butter's benefits ranged from a source of quick energy—which is correct—to "a quick cure for the hiccups. It clogs your throat so the hic won't come up."

The Michigan youngster who suggested the hiccups cure also recommended it for treating a toothache or pulling teeth: "If you have a loose tooth, one thickly spread sandwich with lettuce will get it out."

A peanut butter and lettuce sandwich is mundane when compared with most of the children's combinations.

Children said they combine the spread with salami and pickles; mayonnaise; apples, oranges and grapes; celery, lettuce and tomatoes; cookies cake and pie; banana sandwiches smothered with mayonnaise; and spread peanut butter on cucumber slices to be included in tossed salads.

The growers added that the most popular combination remains peanut butter with jelly, although southern youngsters expressed a preference for cane syrup mixed with theirs, and one New York schoolgirl said she liked it with mozzarella Cheese. A New York boy of Chinese heritage suggested eating it with bologna "because it has just the right taste."

To some children, security is a peanut butter sandwich. A Georgian wrote: "I like it when I've just finished fighting my brother and when I finished getting a spanking. It calms my nerves."

A Michigan boy with more enthusiasm than spelling ability endorsed its use "with marshmello whip in a toasted peace of bread. Peanut butter is easy to spread on toast and what's good about it is it does rip wholes in your bread. It also doesn't smell up the house like other foods do and it is easy to clean up after it." He concluded that the color wasn't too bad but he'd "still eat it even if it were black or purple."

Giving their imagination full rein, many children composed anthropomorphic autobiographies of peanuts and peanut butter. Others wrote poems, including a seven-verse one of rhyming couplets. Two New Jersey children used the Japanese Haiku verse form, which is an unrhymed seven-line poem containing five, seven and five syllables in that order.

Churchwomen To Hear Mrs. Dunn At Monday Meet

The daughter of the late Governor and Mrs. W. W. Kitchin in Scotland Neck, Mrs. Sam Dun of Enfield, is scheduled to speak at the Monday morning general meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service (WSCS) of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Dunn, president-elect of the North Carolina Church Women United, has chosen as her topic "Work of Church Women United."

The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. in the chapel of Jarvis Memorial Church. A coffee hour is scheduled at 9:30 a.m. in the church parlor. All church women of every denominations are invited to attend the meeting and coffee, and a nursery will be provided for pre-school children.

Mrs. Dunn will become North Carolina's president of Church Women United in April and will serve the state for a three-year term. She is a graduate of St. Mary's Junior College and Meredith College, both in Raleigh, where she was awarded the AB degree.

She is the immediate past president of the North Carolina Conference Woman's Society of Christian Service. She is also a former chairman of the Halifax County Board of Education and a former trustee of North Carolina Wesleyan College.

A widow, she is the mother of two daughters, Mrs. Fred Steck Jr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson of Greensboro, and the grandmother of five children.

Mrs. W. H. Taft Sr., president of Jarvis' Women's Society of Christian Service, will preside at the meeting. The speaker will be introduced by Mrs. J. Knott Proctor Jr., WSCS vice president. Mrs. H. Lyman Ormond Jr., chairman of spiritual life growth, will provide a program preceding the speaker's address.

Ocean Floor 'Rights' Pose Riddles For UN

By MICHAEL ROSKIN
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.
(AP) — How deep is deep?
This is far from a semantic quibble among U.N. diplomats these days. It is a question involving potentially billions of dollars.
Frovoys from all around the world generously agreed here that no country could claim the ocean floor, that it is "the common heritage of all mankind"—except where it might mean losing money.

The riches in question are the minerals and oil buried in the continental shelf, an undersea plain which borders nearly every continent before the continental slope plunges away into the ocean depths.

It varies tremendously in width and is hard to define. Every country with a seacoast has its own ideas.
Nations smelling—or already exploiting—undersea minerals off their coasts want a definition of continental shelf that gives them more area.
Poor and landlocked countries, with no shelf they are able to exploit themselves, want a definition that makes the shelf smaller.

Someday all the ocean floor will be within reach of man's technology for mining and oil drilling. Right now the easiest-to-reach minerals are naturally where the ocean is shallowest—the continental shelf.

So diplomats in the General Assembly's political committee debated for days how deep is deep—that is, where does the continental shelf leave off and the deep ocean floor begin? The former belongs to the adjacent country, the latter to all mankind.
Prospects for a speedy settlement and definition are not good. The nations of the world haven't even been able to agree on the width of their territorial seas. The United States, for example, claims out only to three miles—old cannonball distance—while the Soviet Union says everything out to 12 miles is its.

Here are some of the methods suggested for delimiting the continental shelf:
1. Arbitrary Depth—Calling everything up to a certain depth the continental shelf. A conference in Geneva in 1958 suggested 200 meters or 656 feet as the limit. Now that techniques for undersea drilling are improving, and thus able to work deeper, countries want it to go more than that.

2. Average Width—Using an arbitrary depth, say 200 meters, measure the shelf around all the continents and call the average the continental shelf. Countries that might get shortchanged don't like this method.
3. Extend Coastal Waters—Expand the territorial sea greatly and call the shelf everything under that. But countries haven't been able to agree on their present coastal waters and it is unlikely they could settle on a common new distance, which might be so big it would interfere with shipping and fishing.

4. Middle Line—Allow a country to extend its claim out until it collides with another country's, then split it down the middle. This could quickly lead individual nations to claim the whole ocean bottom, exactly what the committee has vowed to prevent.
5. Geological—New ocean floor studies may lead to a scientific definition of just what the continental shelf is. This could take years and the world is waiting for guidelines to use now.

THERE WAS NO BUSINESS LIKE THE SHOE BUSINESS IN THE FABULOUS FIFTIES.

THE HOLE OUR FORMER NEIGHBOR CHOSE TO IGNORE

THE FIREMAN'S BALL IN THE DISASTEROUS SIXTIES

OUR NEW STAND AT 306 EVANS ST.

Dig It Neighbor

THE WHOLE OF IT

For many years, we had a thriving shoe business in Greenville until our store was ravaged by fire in May 1965, then again in September, 1968. After the second fire, the city of Greenville condemned the building that we were in, and we were forced to move to a new location on North Evans Street.

We hold no grudge against a city official for carrying out his duties of office. Our gripe, however, is with a former neighbor. When we were located in the heart of downtown Greenville, you know where the traffic light was perched atop the pedestal in the center of the street. That's the place that "Ace Advertising Agency" made so famous with the story they told about the hitching post.

Since we left, they haven't had a word to say about that big hole right in front of their door. Maybe they don't want to advertise the fact that the best neighbor they ever had was replaced by a hole.

Sincerely,
Larry Averette

the Bucs to a 49-20 win over the Thundering Herd, which hasn't won a game in two years now. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Clemson Gains 24-14 Victory Over Carolina; Draws Close To ACC Title

By DEL BOOTH

Associated Press Writer
CLEMSON, S. C. (AP)—Billy Ammons, Ray Yauger and Charlie Waters led Clemson to a 24-14 victory over hapless North Carolina Saturday, boosting the Tigers bid to retain its Atlantic Coast Conference football championship.

The game left Clemson with a 4-0 conference record. The Tigers must win next Saturday's closing game against arch-rival South Carolina to stay ahead of N. C. State and claim the fourth consecutive full or shared ACC title. N. C. State has completed conference play at 6-1.

Ammons scored Clemson's first touchdown, passed to Waters for a second and sent Yauger smashing over from a yard out for the third, by which time Clemson had victory well in hand.

Yauger piled up 201 yards rushing on 35 carries, while Ammons had 176 yards passing, 113 to Waters.

North Carolina's touchdown in the first half came on Gayle Bommar's short toss to Tony Blanchard in the end zone after Mark Mazza raced an intercepted pass 50 yards to the Clemson two. Coach Frank Howard used reserves liberally in the second half, after Clemson had built up a 24-7 lead. It was against these troops that North Carolina moved 92 yards to score on Ken Borrie's two-yard run in the final quarter.

Mazza's interception return and the subsequent touchdown threatened the Tigers' lead late in the first half as Clemson was ahead only by Ammons' touchdown and Jim Barnette's 29-yard field goal.

But a 99-yard march climaxed by Ammons' 28-yard scoring pass to Waters gave the Tigers breathing room. On the next series, Billy Ware intercepted a pass at the Tar Heel 30 and ran to the eight. From there, Yauger took it in on the last of four tries to put the contest on ice.

Clemson rolled 77 yards for a first touchdown, Yauger getting good first down yardage on three occasions. Ammons passed for 11 to Waters and Clemson picked up another 10 on a pass interference penalty.

North Carolina moved 52 yards to the Clemson 20 in the first period, but Don Hart's 37-yard field goal try was wide.

Barnette attempted a 29-yard field goal just before the half ended, but the kick was wide. The game opened with pass interceptions by each side. Ken Price cut off a Clemson threat with a theft at his 26, and Richie Luzzi moved in on a North Carolina throw at his 23.

North Carolina threatened twice late in the final quarter. The Tar Heels had to give up the ball on downs at the Clemson eight on one occasion and at the Clemson four at the other.

As the game opened, there was a light misty rain falling that soon slackened off. Skies were blue and the sun was bright by the end of the contest.

Hart Leads Duke Past Wake, 18-3

By RICHARD DAW

Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N. C. (AP)—Quarterback Leo Hart put on a display of aerial wizardry Saturday in a record-shattering performance that led Duke to an 18-3 victory over Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

Hart passed for two touchdowns—one an 81-yard play—and accounted for most of the yardage on his team's third score in setting conference marks for total offense and passing.

Hart gained 333 yards passing and running to run his year's total to 2,121 and become the first ACC player ever to gain more than 2,000 yards on total offense.

He also set an ACC record for pass completions in a season by connecting for 20 of 28 attempts, bringing his total to 140. Duke used long drives to score two first-half touchdowns, carrying 78 yards on one and 60 on the other, and then struck suddenly for its third score on Hart's long pass play.

Passes by Hart accounted for 53 yards on Duke's first march, with Phil Asack carrying over after a final pass play of 14 14 yards moved the ball to the one yard line.

Another series of Hart passes moved Duke to its second touchdown with only 35 seconds to play in the first half. A pass to

Florida State Rips Wolfpack

By REESE HART

Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)—Florida State rolled up 34 points in the second half behind the passing of Tom Cappelman and the running of Bill Gunter to crush North Carolina State 48-7 Saturday.

The Seminoles gained their sixth victory against two losses in handling the Wolfpack its worst defeat in 15 years under Coach Earle Edwards.

Cappelman bombed N. C. State's defense with passes, hitting three for touchdowns. Gunter, 171-pound halfback scored three touchdowns, all in the third period, on runs of one and 11 yards and a one-yard pass from Cappelman.

It was a dismal season finale for N. C. State which finished 6-4. The Wolfpack, plagued by fumbles and pass interceptions, fell behind early in the first period but trailed by only 14-7 at the half.

Florida State's first touchdown came early in the first period when Walt Sumner scooped up a blocked field goal attempt and raced 58 yards to score. Sumner had charged in to block an attempted 46-yard field goal by Gerald Warren.

Florida State made it 14-0 early in the second period on a 13-yard touchdown pass from Cappelman to end Phil Abraira, climaxing a 49-yard drive.

N. C. State's touchdown came late in the second quarter on a 10-yard pass from Jack Klebe to Jimmy Lisk, capping a 61-yard drive in eight plays.

In the third period, Gunter raced 11 yards for his first touchdown, ending a 71-yard drive. Moments later, Florida State's Chuck Elliott intercepted a Klebe pass on the Wolfpack 41. From there the Seminoles roled to a touchdown, Cappelman passing to Gunter from the one after N. C. State's Gary Yount fumbled a punt on his two and Billy Cox recovered for the Seminoles.

Gunter scored again, going over from the one to climax a 63-yard march.

Early in the final period, Cappelman connected on a 37-yard touchdown pass to Abraira.

The Seminoles added their final score on a 13-yard pass from Tommy Warren to Gary Pajcik.

Florida State tried to run its score to 50 with a two-point conversion attempt, but the pass failed.

A century ago, a thundering herd of buffaloes occupied the plains of the United States, and ran wild over everything in their path. But they have long since been slaughtered.

Yesterday in Ficklen Stadium, another Thundering Herd was led to the slaughter, as East Carolina's Pirates butchered Marshall University, 49-20.

East Carolina put together one of its finest games, scoring in just about every way possible. They scored on short runs, long runs, and a punt return. Marshall made up for the fact that the Bucs didn't score on a pass, throwing for all three of theirs.

The Marshall touchdown came, however, after the game had been decided, and East Carolina's second unit was running things.

The Bucs got two touchdowns each from Billy Wightman and Butch Colson. Wightman scored on 18 and 68 yard runs, while Colson's both came from the one yard line. Tommy Bullock scored on a 67-yard punt return, while Mike Mills went over from the one and George Gay scored from six yards out. Don Tyson kicked five extra points, and the Bucs got a two-pointer on a pass from Mike Boaz to Dick Corrada.

Marshall's touchdowns came on two passes to Jeff Ternes, of 20 and 40 yards. The first was from John Oertel and the second from Don Swisher. Swisher also passed 13 yards to Charlie Jones for the other score.

Bullock broke a couple of East Carolina records in the ballgame returning kicks. His total of 153 yards in kickoff and punt returns broke the record of 123 in a single game held jointly by Bill Cline and Robert Ellis. Bullock's 121 yards in punt returns cracked Ellis' mark of 82.

East Carolina scored the second time it got the ball. The Bucs had been stopped on their first drive, and Wightman got away a booming 54-yard punt into the end zone. Marshall started from its own 20, and was knocked back to the 17. Billy Beard then recovered a fumble on the 18.

On the first play after that, Wightman moved back to pass, found nobody open, and reversed his field to go in for the score, and with Tyson's kick, it was 7-0 with 11:11 left in the game.

After a couple of kick exchanges, the Bucs got the ball back on their own 37. Wightman picked up eight yards, but the Bucs were penalized back to their own 3 for being offside, and from there Wightman struck again.

This time, the speedy tailback went to the outside and streaked 68-yards down the sidelines, pushing the lead to 14-0 after Tyson's second extra point.

It took only two minutes for the Bucs to get back on the scoreboard again. East Carolina had held Marshall again, and this time, the Herd punted away to Bullock waiting on the 33. From there, he broke loose, and scampered 67 yards for the score.

The Bucs then used some fancy tactics to score a two-point conversion. The snap went to Tyson, waiting, apparently, to kick, and he pitched back to Boaz, who was supposed to be holding. Boaz then tossed to Corrada, waiting all alone in the end zone for the two-point conversion. That made it 22-0 with 5:40 left in the first period. Late in the second period, Marshall got off on their only scoring drive of the first half. Taking over on their own 45 after a penalty, the Bucs appeared to hold the Herd, but a penalty pushed the ball down to the Buc 30 and a first down. Swisher then rolled around end to the 15, but had the ball set back to the 20 on the next play by a penalty. Finally, on fourth down, Oertel passed to Ternes for the score with 2:25 left. Bob Dardinger kicked the extra point to make it 22-7.

The Bucs came back on the next series to score again. After a 20-yard kickoff return by Boaz put the ball on the 31, Colson broke through the middle and raced down to the Marshall 16, on a 53-yard ramble. Wightman added two, and Colson threw a swing pass to Wightman who was pulled down at the one. Colson went over from there, and Tyson made it 29-7 with 53 seconds left in the half.

The Bucs took the opening kickoff and rushed it back for another score. Starting on their own 44, Wightman got away to go down to the Marshall 32. Colson added five yards, and when the Bucs appeared held, Tyson tried a field goal. It was short, but Marshall was penalized for roughing him, and the Bucs got a first down on the 13.

Colson picked up two, and Wightman moved it to the six. Colson carried to the two, and then to the one, crashing over from there to make it 36-7 after Tyson's kick.

On the following kickoff, Marshall fumbled, and Tom Pulley came up with the ball for the Bucs on the Marshall 29. Wightman carried for four, and Dave Brill got four more to the 21.

Colson ripped through to the 16, and Mills moved it to the one, going over from there, making it 42-7 with 8:36 left in the third period.

The Bucs got it back on downs at the own 26 and took yards to the Herd's 35. Mike McGuirk picked up 11 yards, and Gay added three more after a five-yard penalty against the Herd. Charlie Overton added three more, and Mills carried for four to the nine. Gay picked up three to the six, and went over on the next play for the final Pirate score with 1:19 left in the third period.

Marshall came back to score twice in the final period. The first drive started on their own 23. Swisher added 11 yards, and after losing four, he passed to Ternes at the Pirate 40. The two then worked the pass combination again for the second Marshall score, pulling it to 49-14.

The Citadel Upsets William & Mary, 24-21

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—

The Citadel salvaged a 24-21 victory over William & Mary here Saturday in a see-saw Southern Conference football battle that saw the lead change hands four times.

The Bulldogs going 80 yards in 12 plays, got the winning touchdown with 1:16 left after blowing an early 10-0 advantage and losing a 17-14 lead with 3:59 left in the fourth quarter.

Jim McMillan scored the decisive six-point play on a six-yard sweep of left end, but it was Tony Passander's passing and running that set up the score.

Passander hit on five passes for 60 yards and added another 12 yards on a key third down run.

The outcome was in doubt right up to the finish, however. William & Mary took the ensuing kickoff and stormed to the Citadel 10, only to have a pass to Terry Morton called incomplete in the end zone on the final play.

The victory leaves The Citadel, now 4-1 in conference play, with an opportunity to tie Richmond (5-0) for the league title. Each team has one conference game remaining.

The Citadel, which had fumbled nine times in its game a week ago, stunned the Indians by building up a 10-0 lead the first two times it got the ball during a rain-soaked first quarter.

Jim Gahagon booted a 24-yard field goal and Passander rapped a 73-yard drive by squirming into the end one from the four.

The Indians then took charge for the next two quarters, relying on the hard running of Morton, who scored all three of their touchdowns.

Morton, carrying on 11 of 13 plays, accounted for 48 of the 63 yards in the 63-yard march that ended on the first play of the second quarter. In the third quarter, Morton hauled in a 17-yard pass from Wes Meeteer, sending the Indians out in front for the first time, 14-10, with 2:27 left in the third quarter.

The Citadel, bottling the Indians up in their own territory, put a punt in play on the WM 32 and bounced back in front 17-14 when McMillan bowled over from the one eight plays later.

William & Mary took advantage of three breaks to move back in front 21-17. Meeteer completed an 11-yard third down pass to Jim Cavanaugh, then hit Cavanaugh on a 9-yard fourth down pass that gave the Indians a first down on The Citadel 23. Then, on fourth down, The Citadel apparently had William and Mary stopped, but a holding penalty gave the Indians a first down on at the five and Morton carried it in.

Frosh-Varsity Cagers Battle

The East Carolina University basketball team will hold its annual Freshman-Varsity scrimmage game on Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Bucs, under their third season with Coach Tom Quinn, will show off their wares for the last time before opening the season two weeks from now against West Virginia.

Quinn said that the game will be under full game conditions, and would be over the regular game time.

He listed the starting varsity lineup as Tom Miller and Bob McKillop at guards, Jim-Gregory and Robert Kier at forwards and Jim Modlin at center.

The freshmen will start Jim Fairley (6-6) and Arnie Ruegg (6-5) at forwards, Ronnie Lepors (6-6) at center, and Julius Prince (6-1), and Greg Crouse (6-2) at guards.

Quinn noted that co-captain Earl Thompson will not play in this game, nor in the opener against West Virginia. "He will be eligible to play after that," Quinn said, "as the Winter quarter opens on December 2."

Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. East Carolina students will be admitted on ID cards.

Clyde King Tells Of Hopes, Plans For Giants

By WOODY PEELE

Shortly after the World Series had been completed, a number of managerial changes were announced throughout the major leagues. One of these occurred at San Francisco, where Herman Franks quit as manager of the Giants.

The new manager of the Giants was named shortly thereafter, and by the time the actual naming came about, it was only a matter of the official announcement that Clyde King of Goldsboro would be the new chief.

"I'm delighted at being named manager," he said in a Daily Reflector interview last Saturday evening. "I'd be happy and thrilled to manage any big league club, but to have one of this caliber is Utopia. It's just great.

"The Giants have a fine reputation—they finished second four years in a row and have an outstanding club. There's also a good representation of North Carolina boys on the club."

King spoke of his goals in guiding the club during the 1969 season. "If we finished second again, nobody would be mad. But we'll show no improvement. When I got off the plane at Raleigh after returning from being named manager, I found a note chalked onto my suitcase. It said 'Welcome to San Francisco, Mr. King. We are tired of being second.' It was signed by the TWA Baggage Boys."

King feels that it can be done. "It's not going to be any easier this year in the new divisional setup. We have two new expansion clubs and we don't know how good they'll be. You have to win twice now to get to the series. First in your own division, and then in the National League playoffs." The Giants will be in a division with Los Angeles, San Diego, Cincinnati, Atlanta and Chicago.

"I think the Giants have to score more runs. The pitching has been good enough, but it can always improve. I'd like to see us score more runs," King said.

"(Gaylord) Perry's record is an example. He could have won 23 or 25 instead of 16 if just a few more runs had been scored. Basically, we can compete, but we need a winning attitude."

In the form of trades, King said he would like to have a left-handed pitcher and another lefty for the bullpen. "We have a young boy who played under me at Phoenix, Don Mason, a secondbaseman. He could make the team. And there's also Bobby Bonds who did a fine job late in the year for the Giants after coming up from Phoenix."

After losing three outfielders in the draft, King found his supply depleted. "We need to rest Willie Mays, so we may be using some new fellows." An example could be Dave Marshall and Ken Henderson, a couple of newcomers. "We also plan to put Jim Ray Hart back into the outfield, hoping he hits better. Bobby Ethridge is the boy we have in mind for third."

Asked if the Giants might become a running club, King said, "I don't know now. I have to see what the club can do. If they're capable of running, we will. I'd like to have a hit and run combination in each end of the lineup, so if one goes down, the other will come up in the next inning. We've got to get all the runs we can, and that may be one way to do it."

"Last year, the Giants were last in the league in double plays. There may be several reasons for this. Maybe there weren't many double play situations because of the fine pitching. But it could be that the double play punch is not what it should be. We want to improve this if that is the case. I want the infield to be able to play back and forget about a runner on third when there is an out and a man on first."

Asked who his ideal player in the majors is, King responded quickly. "Pete Rose. Anything you mention about him is great, even the way he wears his uniform. I'd like to have someone like him. He's great for the team."

Talking of Perry, King calls him a "real pro." He said, "He's the type who takes his work seriously. He acts as if he's the last man on the roster, and someone were behind him trying to scramble past him. He's very dedicated."

King's philosophy is "to do the very best you can every day you go out there. Nobody likes defeat. But in baseball you have a situation you don't have anywhere else. You play every day, with no rest like in basketball or football. If you lose, you have to shrug it off and come back with a winning attitude. You can't like defeat, but you have to live with it."

"I don't think physically there'll be a lot of change on the club. We just need to get a different mental approach. We have finished strong,

Rod And Gun: Wildlife Suffers From Too Many Excited People

By ROD AMUNDSON

I read an item the other day in a magazine called "North Dakota Outdoors." It had to do with the death of a bull moose. So, what does a dead moose in North Dakota have to do with readers of this column in North Carolina? Not much, really.

But moose were once native to North Dakota. They still are to northern Minnesota, Montana, and a few other states along the Canadian border. They were shot out or otherwise removed from northeastern North Dakota, changes in agricultural practices, that sort of thing.

This particular moose strayed out of northwestern Minnesota, and for some reason, crossed the line into North Dakota. Maybe he was following the natural animal urge to return to the ancestral habitat. But curiosity, human curiosity, killed him.

North Dakota residents hadn't seen a moose for a long time. When this one appeared in Grand Forks County, ranchers in pickup trucks and one guy flying an airplane chased the animal until they literally drove it to its death. It died—dropped dead—well out in the middle of a North Dakota plowed field. No one shot the moose. It died of heart failure, exhaustion, or whatever full-grown moose die of when they stray out of their usual haunts.

So what does all this mean here in North Carolina, halfway across the country from North Dakota? Moose probably never did live as far south as North Carolina, but whitetail deer range as far as North Dakota, and are probably the best-known and most popular of North American big game animals.

North Carolina lies near the heart of prime whitetail deer range, yet of its 100 counties, 28 do not have a deer season this year. Granted, most of these 28 counties lie within the industrial Piedmont where you would not expect to find prime whitetail deer habitat; but every one of these counties could support at least a small deer population if dogs, and the people who own them, would leave them alone.

Two or three times a year there are newspaper stories about deer running down Main Street, dashing into plate glass windows, being pursued by police, sheriff's deputies or constables, and finally subdued or run out of town. Oddly enough, most of these incidents occur in counties where there are not enough deer to warrant an open season.

Wildlife experts contend that if people and dogs would leave deer alone long enough, there could be deer and deer—hunting—in almost every county in the state.

Black bear were once indigenous to all of our 100 counties. Today, there are 35 counties in which there are not enough black bear to warrant an open season. The habitat requirements of black bear are considerably more restrictive than those of deer, and it is doubtful that they could ever return to their original range within the state.

But let a bear stray into a county where bear do not ordinarily occur! Rumors will spread 100 times faster than the bear can possibly move around.

With Only One Starter Back, Wolves Must Rebuild During 1968-69 Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(One of a series)

WINTERVILLE — Winterville's Wolves may have a hungry winter, if pre-season guesses mean anything in the Pitt County Conference.

The Wolves have only one starter back this year, and their new coach, John Mears, admits that this season is one of rebuilding. Apparently, the rest of the conference agrees with him. The Wolves were picked to finish last in a poll of the coaches. Four picked the team to be last, while two others picked them to finish sixth.

"Lindsay Godley is the only starter back," Mears said. "The rest of the team is made up of newcomers, so I guess you could say that we're rebuilding. We have to look to Godley, however, to be the spark of the team."

There are two other lettermen returning, Jack Allen and William Wilson, and they are joined by a Maryland transfer student, Ronnie Stokes. "Godley can do just about anything about anything," Mears said. "For a 5-8 boy, he can get higher on the boards than most six-footers, so he can get in and get the ball back for us."

Joining Godley in the starting lineup will probably be Wilson, Stokes, Allen and Edgar Wall. A freshman, Steve Evans, also figures high in the plans of the Wolves. "He came in as a reserve the other night, and popped in eight real quick and sparked us."

"Right now, our offense is very weak, but we expect the boys to improve with every game. They need the experience badly, and we have four who are capable of scoring 20 every night."

"We need the experience, and we need to learn to play with each other, to recognize and adjust to situations we run into," Mears said.

Mears noted that the Wolves have some height, but not overpowering. "We want to play, we hustle and that may mean everything. We're going to do better than last year," he promised.

Turning to the girls team, Winterville could have a challenge to the leaders. There is one big reason for this, sharpshooter Faye Everett. "She's probably the best girl in the county," Coach Glenn Strickland says proudly. "And this might be our biggest problem."

"We have to get someone to go along with Faye, and compliment her scoring. So far we haven't found anyone. We do have a fine guard in Sherry Corey, however."

All six of last year's starters return this year, which means that there is experience aplenty. Joining Misses Everett and Corey are Carrie Carr, Sandra Sutton, Kay Gooding and Jackie Sutton. There is one other letterman, Alexine Dewes. A couple of promising freshmen are Jane and June Hall, who will be making opponents see double this fall. They are identical twins, so this is one case where you can't tell the players without a program.

"Experience is our biggest asset," Strickland said. "We have played together and the girls know what each other can do. But we have to get them to respond."

"Our defense is strong, and they work together to get the ball into scoring position, but there's where our problem starts," he said. "They depend on Faye too much to get the job done. We expect here to have off nights, and to be truthful, I'd rather have four to hit eight each and one to hit 20. Faye is tremendous, but it takes more than one girl.

"But you'd better not foul her, because she's a deadeye from the line." All of this spells good fortune for the Lady Wolves if they can get the ball to Miss Everett in the open. Otherwise, they'll have to find some additional scoring somewhere.

Both Winterville teams held 1-0 records going into Friday's game with South Edgecombe.

Creel Limit Put On Shad

RALEIGH, N. C. To conserve the reproductive potential of shad in North Carolina, the state Wildlife Resources Commission yesterday enacted a regulation to impose a daily creel limit of 25 in aggregate on American (white) and hickory shad in inland waters.

The Commission further voted to include the striped bass among the "8 in aggregate" daily creel limit, which now applies to the black basses. This regulation is to apply in all reservoirs and their tributaries, but not in coastal rivers where the daily creel limit remains 25.

In order to further promote safe boating activity throughout the state, the Commission voted to require that outlines be set parallel to the nearest shore in ponds, lakes and reservoirs and passed a regulation making it unlawful to operate a vehicle on any boating access area in a careless or reckless manner so as to endanger life and property.

The Commission established April 5 through September 1 as the 1969 season for trout fishing in North Carolina, and in action on special fishing regulations applying to game lands, reduced from 16 inches to 12 inches the minimum size limit for brook trout taken from trophy waters. In other action yesterday, the Commission approved the addition of the Virginia Resident Combination Hunting, Fishing, Trapping License to the North Carolina-Virginia reciprocal license agreement applying to Kerr and Gaston Reservoirs; prohibited the use of traps, gigs, and spear guns in Lake James; deleted the requirement that a game-lands fishing permit is required for fishing intrastate game-land boundary waters; deleted the Nolichucky River (excluding tributaries) in the Flat Top Wildlife Management Area from designation as public mountain trout water and opened it to daily fishing throughout the year without requirement of a game-lands fishing permit; and deleted the Green River Purchase Unit from the listing of Western Game Lands.

To preserve the catfish population in Indian Camp Lake, where a fish feeding experiment is presently underway, the Commission voted to establish a daily creel limit of 5 catfish on this four-acre lake at the Sandhills Wildlife Management Area.

In further action, the Commission modified the existing migratory-fish seasons to permit the use of dip, bow, and gill nets in all public waters of Bertie County, and to prohibit the use of dip, bow and gill nets in Contentnea Creek downstream from the U. S. 11 bridge at Grifton.

The Commission also voted to permit the use of dip, bow, and gill nets for the taking of rough fish in all public waters of Bertie County; to prohibit the taking of rough fish in Bellamys Lake in Halifax County; to permit the use of gigs in all public waters of Northampton County; to permit the use of gigs in streams tributary to the Raleigh City water-supply reservoirs of Wake County; and to remove Sandy Creek from the waters of Warren County in which the use of seines is permitted.

The Commission took no action on a proposal which would have opened Western Game Lands to trout fishing seven days per week. The Commission, however, noted that this proposal may be reactivated after it has received further study.

South Edgecombe Slaps Winterville

WINTERVILLE—South Edgecombe handed the Winterville boys and girls their first defeat Friday night, as the boys fell, 64-41, and the girls lost, 25-21.

In the girls contest, South Edgecombe shot away to an 8-1 lead in the first period, then held on for a 16-10 margin at the half. Winterville snipped another point off the score in the third period, cutting it to 10-15, and managed another point in the final period, outscoring South Edgecombe, 6-5, but the rally fell four points short.

The Lady Wolves were hampered by the fact that star player Faye Everett was ill and did not start. She did enter the game in the second half, but was ineffective. Debbie Webb led the South Edgecombe scoring with 11 points, while Sandra Sutton had eight to pace Winterville.

In the boys contest, Winterville inched out into a 10-9 lead in the first period, only to see South Edgecombe come back strong to run off to a 26-20 lead at the half.

In the third period, South Edgecombe continued to pull route. Ronnie Stokes led Winterville in the final frame, South Edgecombe outscored Winterville, 21-10, to insure the victory.

Farriery Is Being Offered At Pitt Technical Institute

By BETTY CASEY

"Under a spreading chestnut tree the village smithy stands. The smith, a mighty man is he, with huge and sinewy hands. . . Longfellow."

A farrier is a blacksmith who specializes in shoeing horses. Pitt Technical Institute in Greenville offers one of the few farriery courses in the country and it operates under a North Carolina oak instead of a chestnut tree. But is there a demand for horseshoers?

Breeding and training of show horses and race horses is more popular and there are more saddle horses in the U. S. today than ever before.

They all need shoes. Yet the old masters of horse shoeing are fading from the picture and are not being replaced. Horseshoeing, believed introduced about the 2nd century B. C., is in desperate straits.

"I have racing ponies," said John Delligatti, a Pitt Tech farrier student from Newcastle, Delaware, "and I've often been unable to locate a man to trim their hoofs and shoe them." That's why John was forced to learn the art himself. In addition to caring for his own mounts, he will also be available to shoe other people's horses.

Edward Everett, who works for the Pamlico Thoroughbred Horse Farm near Bath, is another student. The Farm arranged for him to attend the course because of the desperate need of farriers to care for about 40 horses already in their stables.

"I'm studying to be a farrier," said 16 year old Ronnie Miles from Belhaven, "because I like to work with horses." Ronnie has four palomino Shetland colts and hopes, when he is 18, and old enough, to do summer work at the Pamlico Farm with the projected herd of 300 brood mares and studs. Since the course is not offered every quarter, he is taking time out from High School to take advantage of the current session.

One student from Wonington, Delaware plans to set up shop near the race tracks. "Racing horse owners are crying for farriers," he said. Mitchell Owenby, an 18 year old farm boy from Franklin remarked, "A horseshoer told me there's good money in it, so I plan to do it part time."

Former students of the class, representing many States and Canada, have reported making up to a thousand dollars a month at farriery. Rates run from $12 to $75 per horse, depending on the reputation of the farrier and value of the horse.

But the three month course is not easy. It includes the study of anatomy and physiology of a horse's foot, bones, pastern and legs, and requires skill with forging tools. Real frozen horse feet from the slaughter house are used in anatomy study. Other important areas of study cover lines of flight of hoofs in motion, growth of the hoof, and wear patterns of the hoof and shoe.

Farrier instructor at the Institute, Frank Duff, from Pennington Gap, Va., has shod horses in 28 States and Canada during the last 45 years.

"I can tell when it's right," said Huff, hammering a red-hot semi-circle of metal into a horseshoe on the anvil, "when I hear a certain 'ping.'"

Ready cast shoes can be ordered, but since each foot of each horse is different, handmade ones fit better. The weight of the shoe, judged by the size and type of horse, is important.

"The wrong kind of shoe," explained the teacher, "can upset years of training which produced a five-gaited horse, or can cause a draft horse to develop corns."

Special, different types of shoes are required for polo horses, hunters, jumpers, mules, racers and draft animals. One text lists 151 different types of shoes.

One recommended for a knee-sprung horse, has a bevel from the inside, another has a steel plate for protective covering of a nail-wound, and one is toe-weighted to increase the horse's stride or heel-weighted to increase knee-action. The shoe for a hunter has very deep nail grooves to prevent slipping. For city use, a fine rubber pad with an inside rim of rubber is recommended to protect the horse's feet from hard roads.

Hard surfaces, in fact, cause the protective horn covering of the vulnerable horse's hoof to split, break or shell away. Expert knowledge is required to trim the horn of a damaged hoof and build it up with a shoe to keep it level with the "frog," or sole of the horse's foot. Students at Pitt Tech farrier school offer horseshoeing as a free service.

Few Openings
"This was the only farrier school in the country with any opening," declared Ken Eggert, 20, from Chicago, who claimed to be an IBM dropout. He loves working out-of-doors and with horses and has already made contact with riding clubs in the Ozarks. Ken plans to set up his equipment on a truck, as do most of the students at Pitt.

Marvin Chezem from Apex is one of these. He has interests in horses on the West Coast and has been "messing with horses a long time — riding the rodeo circuit. . . green-breaking horses." Another is Jim Kelly, who farms in Aurora and is also a bus driver for Carolina Trailways.

A jumping horse owner from the Shenandoah Valley, James Marshall, is a laboratory worker. "I couldn't afford a three week wait for a farrier," he said, "when a show was coming up within a week." So he decided to learn how to do the job himself.

"I've lain awake nights," said perfectionist Duff, "trying to figure out how best to shoe someone's horse." Although he doesn't recommend that students copy his method of learning farriery, Duff admits that he got his start skipping school and hiding out from his dad at the blacksmith shop. When work horse business played out, he studied other horseshoers' methods and mistakes on saddle horses, and tried to "do what the other feller couldn't do."

"Farriery," declared the veteran horseshoer, his constant companion, a dalmatian dog named Buddy, beside in at the anvil, "is a neglected trade in the United States — and there are more horses needing shoes now than ever before."

"We at Pitt Tech," said W. H. Moore, Head of the Agriculture Department, "are glad to be able to offer farriery to meet the growing need. We are proud of the students who have finished the course — and registration is continuously open."

REMOVING A SHOE . . . Ken Eggert removes a horse shoe from the forge at the proper moment.

THE SHAPE'S THE THING . . . Frank Duff shows Ken Eggert the secret of properly shaping a horse shoe.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—Next Aug. 18 is the date for Merv Griffin to shift his current syndicated program to the CBS network. The talk-entertainment show, highly successful for more than two years on a basis of selling to individual stations around the country, will be on the network, Monday through Friday, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. Eastern Time. The daily syndicated show will continue until the changeover.

I know that the "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" show is still highly popular in its second NBC season, but a couple of things puzzle me. I wonder if the public realizes the gamey origin of what might be called its trademark phrase, "Sock it to me," which has become a part of the language of the moment. Also, why, in these sensitive days, there has been no "Uncle Tom" outcry against the repeated "Heah come de judge" gambit as a dialectal reflection on Negro dignity? That is pure old-time minstrel show stuff, and you can easily imagine what would happen if someone dared attempt presentation of such a show today. I know that it stems from an act originally associated with a Negro comic, but its origin was decades ago when there was no nitpicking about ethnic comedy.

"Art Linkletter's House Party," which has been a CBS-TV weekday feature since Sept. 1, 1952, after seven previous radio years, became "The Linkletter show" in November and rightly so. Besides father Art, regulars on the program have been and remain son Jack and daughter Diane. The show has undergone some changes so there is more emphasis on interviews and personalities than on games and stunts.

An Aptitude Test Turned Betsy Palmer To Acting

NEW YORK (UPI)—Betsy Palmer, a warm, beautiful lady, became an actress as the result of an aptitude test that indicated she was suited for a career in the arts that would involve meeting a lot of people. Her warmth and good looks so satisfied her audiences that she has spent most of her time playing understanding wives and sweethearts. This is almost what she does in the upcoming Hallmark Hall of Fame special, "A Punt, a Pass and a Prayer" which will be aired Nov. 20 on NBC-TV.

Almost, that is, because her role in the David Mark original drama of professional football has a twist. She plays the long-suffering wife of Hugh O'Brian who stars in the production as

Role In Comic Strip Can Be Very Trying

NEW YORK (UPI)—Life as a comic strip character can have its trying moments. At least, that's what the cast of the off-Broadway music, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" has found out.

Just how is an experienced actor supposed to feel when he is asked to audition for dog food commercials instead of people parts just because he plays Snoopy eight times a week?

Don't Help And those little kids after autographs don't help either. They're a lot more interested in having Charlie, Lucy and Linus written in their programs than Bob Lydiard, Boni Ethen and Gene Kidwell, who play every night, either. A pile of the parts.

Karen Johnson, who is Patty, is the only survivor from the cast of eight that started out in the show in March, 1967.

"The original cast became closely identified with the roles," explained Miss Johnson, daughter of Pennsylvania Congressman Albert W. Johnson. "They started assuming the characteristics of the parts, and Rive Rose, for example, became very Lucy-like, although I think her real personality is more of a Patty."

The opening night cast helped develop a lot of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" by improvisation after diligently studying the works of their cartoon-strip creator, Charlie M. Schulz.

Psyched Up To get psyched up to play the part of five-year-olds is not easy

Looking Ahead

A NEW GARBO HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Alfred Hitchcock describes his new leading lady for "Tora" Tira Hedstrom—as a double for Greta Garbo.

LEMMON STARS HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jack Lemmon will star in Neil Simon's original screenplay, "The Out-of-Towner."

SAMMY CAN HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Sammy Davis Jr. will star in the film version of his autobiography, "Yes I Can."

CRONYN CAST HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Hume Cronyn was cast by Elia Kazan for a principal role in "The Arrangement" which stars Kirk Douglas, Faye Dunaway, Deborah Kerr and Richard Boone.

BOOK NEWS

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By LINDA M. STANCILL

For years one of the most popular books in the American home has been the "Sears Roebuck Catalogue." Yet, with periodical changes and editions, it rarely finds a permanent resting place on the book shelf.

Fred L. Israel's interest in America's past led to the reprinting of the "1897 Sears Roebuck Catalogue." A professor of American history, he found that neither his college library, nor the Library of Congress, nor the Smithsonian possessed any early volumes of the catalog. Classified advertisements in mid-Western newspapers brought him an 1897 catalogue which gives us an insight into a by-gone era. The objects pictured here have been out of stock for years, but they are an authentic part of American culture, sociology and history. This panoramic view of the needs and fashions of yesterday will provide many hours of enjoyment in the home today. Like the faded family album, this catalogue occupies a unique place in American history.

The most successful man in the world, J. Paul Getty, reveals his personal formula for dynamic living in "The Golden Age." At the age of seventy-five, the richest man in the world displays remarkable vitality and vigor. While actively directing the operations of a vast, global financial empire, he enjoys a social life that would be the envy of men half his age. In this inspiring and practical book, he gives some expert advice on budgeting and financing to end needless worries about retirement and old age. He shows you how to avoid the pitfalls of faulty or insufficient economic planning and he explains the intricate aspects of savings accounts, real estate investments, insurance and stocks and bonds. He presents a proven plan for making life and living an exciting, meaningful and dynamic experience.

One of the leading novels of the month is "A Small Town in Germany" by John Le Carre. He turns to the world of high-level diplomacy in his story of the British Embassy in Bonn where Russia and the Communist bloc carry on a continuous war against the West. At a critical time in world affairs, a British official has defected to the Communists taking with him secret files that can seriously embarrass the British government. The search for the defector and the interests of British diplomats and aspiring German politicians make a suspenseful story.

Reviews And Reflections

By ALBERT PERTALION

I just finished reading a book called Dagon (Harcourt, Brace and World, Inc., New York, 1968, $4.75) by Fred Chappell. Joan Williams, a pretty fair novelist (The Morning and the Evening) said this about the book: "Dagon is fascinating and disturbing, and as all his books are, smooth and beautifully written. It casts its own spell which is not easy to shake off. An honest book, I think, and his own soul searching reaches into all of us."

I'll grant that Mr. Chappell writes smoothly and in many places his metaphors are interesting, but not beautiful. As far as "casting its own spell," the book certainly does that. Pallor and gloom. Southern gothic or American grand guignol. A dark, brooding horror story, and the soul that it searches must be interesting indeed.

Dagon is the account of the disintegration of a young Methodist minister named Peter Leland. Leland and his wife Sheila inherit his ancestral farm. Leland's end begins the day he finds instruments of torture in the attic of the old farm house. As his mind begins to go, he first dreams of murdering his wife, and then after a quarrel he actually kills her with a fireplace poker. He falls under the spell of a strange girl named Mina who lives with her family as tenants on Leland's farm. She takes care of him after the murder, and keeps him in a semi-drunken state of mind on her father's moonshine. All the while, she heaps all forms of debasement and humiliation on the passive ex-minister.

Dagon is Fred Chappell's third novel. His earlier work, The Inkling received that solace to new writers, critical success. Orville Prescott called Mr. Chappell a "genuine talent," and the National Institute of Arts and Letters awarded him a $2500 grant in 1968. I hope the grant was not for the writing of Dagon. I found the book dull except toward the end when it became repugnant. As a horror story it was too mild in the chronicling of physical torture, or not insidious or subtle enough in the area of spiritual debasement.

The ending was probably conceived to be triumphant for the victim, but Mr. Chappell did not make it work.

When Peter Leland attains a certain self-cognition and is able to smile at the person who slits his throat, the effect is one of sick pervasivity. Personal nihilism on the lowest level.

The last chapter, Mr. Chappell's "deus ex machina," only wakens the effect of the already too weak novel by reporting Mr. Leland as doing well in his reincarnation as a spatial leviathan. A giant metaphor (only) who "wallowed and sported upon the rich darkness that flows between the stars." Mr. Chappell states that "suffering is the most expensive of

Elliot's Work Exhibited Here Sees Self A Conceptual Painter

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"Basically, I'm a conceptual painter — that is, I have a concept which I try to put into visual terms," said Jerry Elliott, whose paintings and drawings are currently on exhibit at the Greenville Arts Center, 802 South Evans Street.

Elliott, head of the Art Department at Kinston's Lenoir College, directs much of his current effort to things of today. "I think in terms of contemporary landscape — so much of our landscape is man made. The asphalt highway is as much a part of our landscape as were little winding roads in the landscapes of the 1600s." His thoughts on this are borne out in a number of the paintings on view. "Distant Horizon" is dominated by a stark stretch of back asphalt, punctuated by a sharply contrasting centerline of white. Small areas of olives and golden browns relieve the stress of intense black.

Elliott commented on this painting: "I use symbolism to express things. For instance, the white line on a black background expresses a highway. You could say my paintings are semi-representational."

Repeatedly, Elliott's concern with modern America's traffic enters into his subject matter. In "Times Eternal Bridge," a curved highway half surrounds two suggested figures who have crossed a bare stretch enclosed by the highway, leaving a trail like footpath behind them. The colors are somber; tans, black, very dark reds. In a similar vein, "Signal Lamp in Tondo," which almost photographically shows the three circular eyes of a traffic light, has a highway leading up to the light. On either side, abstract areas of greens and reds give the impression of landscape. A bold black half-bar separates the colored area of the canvas from the unfinished lower panel.

In "Signal Lamp in Tondo" and in "Analogy of A Map," Elliott has shaped his canvases. They protrude toward the viewer, and use the tondo device as the most outward point of protrusion. "Analogy of A Map" is the most graphic example of Elliott's highway in America theme. The upper portion of this shaped mixed media work is composed of a network of roads radiating from a city formed of pasted up sections of actual maps. Again, a bar, in this case all the way across the canvas, is used to separate the work into two parts. The tondo rests in the center of the lower panel, with pasted maps which are almost obscured by application of heavy pigments in reds, browns and blacks. The rest of the lower panel is basically an unfinished area, with only lines representing roads sketched in lightly.

Two large canvases, in which dominant areas are left unfinished or even untouched, deal with utilitarian subjects. "Elevated Chair" is an outside study of a chair seen from the underneath, as if the chair were suspended against a ceiling. "Drainpipe" also uses the elevated perspective, showing gutter and drainpipe as if it were viewed while looking up at an angle. Both these paintings are limited to spartan use of black, white, gray and mere touches of green and pink.

Several drawings, principally studies of people's heads, are a departure from the paintings. In the drawings, realism is foremost. "1931 Revisited" shows two thin faces, their bony hands clutching soup bowls. This drawing employs only a few lines. "Contentious Contentions" and "Presidential Couple," each depicts several faces. A partial front view of a motorcycle provides a footnote to the faces in "Presidential Couple" and again suggests the theme of modern traffic.

"Sun Image Number One" is a darker drawing than the others. A face partially emerges from a web of shadow in which can be dimly seen the eye and nose of a second face. A hand breaks the shadow in the foreground. "In my drawings, the thing which seems to hit the public is the discontinuity of my drawings compared to my paintings. I'm trying to move to a common goal, where my drawing style transfers over to my painting, and my painting style transfers over to my drawings, so that the two will merge into one style. I think this will come when my style matures," Elliott commented.

Experimental Work Elliott, both as a young artist and a teacher, is doing much experimental work in different media. He works in lithography and sculpture. "Right now I'm working on an eight foot sculpture, a combination of welded steel and cement. Like most of my other work, it is semi-representational. In this sculpture, two crucified figures are growing out of a central form. The figures are fragmented, but recognizable as figures."

He feels there has been a radical change in the outlook for art in America in recent years. "I think young artists today do not need to be in Europe to be in the center of things. There is more happening in the U. S. now than anywhere in Europe. However, I hope to travel, and I believe all artists should travel when possible, in order to see the treasures and the new work into their countries."

"Latin America fascinates me: Here is an area where the people by tradition are close to the earth and close to their art," Elliott stated.

Elliott is a native of Lakeland, Florida. He spent four years in the Navy and after receiving his discharge began studying art. He received a B. A. degree from the University of Southern Florida and a M. F. A. degree from the University of Florida. In New York he studied under Friedl Dzubas, and at the University of Florida under Hiram Williams, a man he greatly admires. "I consider him one of the greatest artists in America, and certainly one of the most loveable persons anywhere."

Exhibitions in which Elliott has shown include ones at the University of Southern Florida, the 27th and 28th Annual Contemporary American Painters Exhibitions, the Society of Four Arts at Palm Beach, Florida Fine Arts Circuits Exhibitions, the Florida State Fair, the National Print Show at Chapel Hill, and currently, his prints are in the Young Printmakers Show which is touring the U. S. In 1966 he had a one man show at the Paradigm Art Gallery in Lakeland and Florida.

Elliott has won several awards. Among them are a first place at the Ridge Art Show, second place at the Florida State Fair, and a purchase award by the Florida Union Show.

His wife is the former Judith Dappelhauer of Berlin, Pennsylvania. They have one daughter, Jeri Lynn, who is three years old.

"I am happy about the feeling about art in this area," Elliott said. "I think people are ready to seriously accept art in all forms and are beginning to be familiar with all that is going on."

Playhouse Will Present U.S.A.

Events in these United States have an intriguing tendency to relive themselves — a fact that will be illustrated December 11-14 in McGinnis Auditorium with the East Carolina Playhouse production of the dramatic revue, "U.S.A."

By a masterful use of biography, news, and fiction, the authors — John Dos Passos and Paul Shyre — have transformed the former's classic novel into a theatrical cavalcade of America in the first third of the twentieth century.

On the surface, "U.S.A." can be enjoyed either as a panorama of history or for its choice snatches of "American," or even for the nostalgic songs and forgotten dances that are woven into the storyline. But in a deeper sense, "U.S.A." projects a bitter-sweet parallel between those times and these. Portrayed is an era of colossal technological achievement, experimentation and transition in the arts, burgeoning economy, labor disputes, sweeping social reforms, and war. The events bear an immediate and thought-provoking resemblance to our own.

Important as the events are, however, "U.S.A." is a play about people, and most specially the personalities who gave life in those troubled times its impetus: Henry Ford, Isadora Duncan, Rudolph Valentino, the Wright Brothers, Eugene V. Debs, to mention only a few.

Director Edgar Loessin has chosen an experienced, all-student cast of six actors to play the numerous parts called for in the script. "It is an exciting show for the actors, especially for student actors," Loessin said, "since the authors have written the sixteen speaking roles for only six principal actors. Playing two or three roles in the same play requires a tremendous amount of concentration and a great deal of character study."

The talented cast includes Jim Boswell, a graduate student in the English Department, and Mark Ramsey, Cullen Johnson, Carmen Smith, Barbara Simpson, and Harriet Flannagan, all students in the Department of Drama and Speech.

Tickets for the production are available at the Central Ticket Office in Wright Auditorium on the E. C. U. Campus.

Six Murals By ECU Art Students Hung In School

Six murals done by students in the East Carolina University School of Art have been hung in the Wahl-Coates Elementary School library on the ECU campus.

The students who worked under the direction of Donald Sexauer of the ECU art faculty, are Mrs. Lisa Holt, Joyce Sink, Sandra Smith Mrs. Edith Overton, Mrs. Joan Murray and Joseph Testo.

The murals, which depict scenes from fairy tales and children's stories, were developed by the use of literature related to a particular age group. Preliminary sketches were developed into cartoons on panels before the final painting was completed.

"The murals not only add color," Sexauer said, "but have become a visual tool in the education process. They have provoked questions from the students and we hope they will help to stimulate an interest in reading."

Sexauer said the project was developed jointly by officials of the School of Art and Wahl-Coates School, and was completed in five weeks.

ABOUT SHINGLES (HERPES ZOSTER)

Shingles is a virus infection attacking the nerves. Usually it is a "one sided" disease, since nerves branching out of the spinal cord spread out on each side. It is characterized by a vesicular eruption and severe neuralgic pains arising in the affected nerve root ganglia.

Shingles are more frequent in males and while it may happen to anyone, it is more common after 50. After about the fifth day the eruptions usually dry up and scab. A painful neuralgia may last for years. Diagnosis is difficult in the pre-eruptive stage. A physician is needed.

Is Business Holding Firm?

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An increasingly perplexing question is whether the rate of economic growth is tapering off or whether business is holding firm.

There were conflicting signs this past week.

Many economists and government officials had predicted there would be a slowdown about this time as a result of the 10 per cent federal income tax surchage. This was the intent of the higher levy imposed as a means of stemming inflation.

Some saw indications of a softening in a sag in new car sales in early November from normal levels and a dip in retail sales in October. On the other hand, company purchasing executives reported a better-than-expected increase in new orders and production in October—a harbinger of future business activity.

Looking further back, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said the economy had expanded far more rapidly in the third quarter than most observers had expected.

In the first 10 days of November, dealers sold 209,505 U.S.-made cars. While this was 14 per cent ahead of the total in the like 1967 period, when Ford Motor Co. dealers were short of cars as the result of a two-month strike, it was below the pace of the 1966 and 1965 periods.

The auto industry considers November a key month for testing public reaction to new model cars.

Automobile production this past week slipped to an estimated 211,100 passenger cars from 217,197 the previous week.

The Commerce Department reported that in October Retail sales slipped for the second straight month. The drop to $28.8 billion from $28.9 billion in September was only one-half of 1 per cent and was 10 per cent above October 1967.

The Federal Reserve Bank said that as the third quarter drew to a close, retail sales and a few other economic indicators appeared to ease slightly but many others, including housing starts and new orders for durable goods, strengthened.

The bank commented that the cumulative effects of the fiscal-restraint program are likely to become more clearly visible as time passes.

But, it added, "the delay in getting the economy back to a slower rate of growth has unquestionably complicated the task of restoring reasonable price stability and achieving the much needed improvements in our international trade balance."

Chase Manhattan Bank, one of the country's largest banks, this past week forsook its lonely stand with a 6 per cent prime interest rate. It raised its rate to 6 1/4 per cent, the level which had prevailed among other major banks since last September.

Chase said it took the action because of the substantial rise in money market rates in recent weeks.

The prime rate is the interest charged by banks to their biggest and most credit-worthy customers.

There was important activity on the busy merger front again this past week.

U.S. Plywood-Champion Papers, Inc., and Johns-Manville Corp. said they were discussing a possible merger. Such a combination would result in one of the nation's biggest building products concerns.

Last year U.S. Plywood had sales of $1.13 billion. Johns-Manville's sales totaled $510.4 million.

Xerox Corp. and C.I.T. Financial Corp. announced they had terminated negotiations which could have led to one of the largest mergers in corporate history.

Steel production last week rose 4.6 per cent to 2,175,000 tons from 2.08 million tons the previous week.

Pitt Coed Student Lives In 'International House'

GREENSBORO — Among the coeds living in international House at the University of North Carolina here is Miss Laura Alice Braxton of Rt. 2, Greenville.

The UNC-G International House, located in Shaw Dormitory, is home during the academic year for 83 coeds who share a common interest in the world that extends beyond the United States.

With their residence hall as a focal point, residents of International House have been able to attract other UNC-G students with an interest in international affairs, and they also have produced some interesting programs for themselves.

The 83 coeds living in International House share the lone qualification for membership—a sincere desire to learn about others. The residents represent all major fields of study, numerous cities and several foreign countries, and they live together in an experiment in understanding.

The residents have lived or visited in a total of 34 foreign countries. They hope to adopt an American and a foreign child through financial aid adoption agencies.

Miss Braxton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Braxton of Rt. 2, Greenville.

Maola To Dedicate Big New Facility Here This Afternoon

The Maola Milk & Ice Cream Company will dedicate its new Greenville facility with an open house this afternoon from 1 to 5 p.m.

The new 3,500 square foot facility, built at a cost in excess of $100,000 is located on the Greenville Boulevard.

"Our investment in Greenville demonstrates the great confidence we at Maola have in the continued growth and progress of the greater Greenville area," Mrs. Kathleen Barnes, president of Maola said yesterday.

The new Maola facility will serve Greenville and the surrounding area, including Ayden and Grifton.

It will be managed by J. Paul Jones, who has been associated with Maola for the past 15 years.

The Maola Milk & Ice Cream Company is Eastern Carolina's largest independent dairy, serving the 40 eastern counties of the state.

The company, founded by the late Harvey L. Barnes, began as an ice cream plant 35 years ago. In 1937 Maola started selling milk as well as ice cream.

Maola formerly served Greenville from its facility in Williamston, where the company had acquired the Taylor Dairy.

"We decided several years ago that we could better serve our Greenville customers with a local operation," said Mrs. Barnes, "and that's when we started planning this new Greenville facility."

Runaway Sees Much of World

LA CANADA, Calif. (AP) — Zoltan Katinsky, 15, saw a lot of world in the process of running away from boarding school.

The youth finally got back to his home in this Los Angeles suburb, but it took him three weeks and across most of Europe and into the Orient to do it.

Zoltan's adventure began Oct. 23 when he and three friends ran away from their school at Kastl, near Nuernberg in West Germany. They set out for Sicily.

He stowed away on a jet he thought was going direct to New York and then on to California. Airline officials there found the boy sleeping when they cleared the plane.

"They were very kind," Zoltan said. "They got me some more clothes and took me round Hong Kong." Then they called Zoltan's father, Elmer Katinsky, who had sent the youth to Germany to learn the language.

Heart Donor's Widow Feels Husband Still Lives

By TOMMY GEDDIE
United Press International

Dorothy Haupt, whose husband Clive's heart beats in the body of Dr. Philip Blaiberg, sorrows, but still feels that Clive is with her even today. "It's a wonderful feeling," Mrs. Haupt said from her South African home. "I suppose this is one of the compensations of being the wife of a heart donor—the feeling someone who was very dear to me is still taking part in life."

The majority of relatives of heart donors have indicated they would, if they had their way, make sure there was never a shortage of donors for future transplant patients, a world say they also have recipients waiting.

Belief Unchanged

Mrs. Haupt said months of thinking she has done since her husband died of a stroke Jan. 1 when he was only 24 years old, has not changed her belief that heart transplants should continue.

"It's wonderful to know that lives which would otherwise have been lost can now be saved through the magnificent pioneering work of professor (Christiaan) Barnard. I am very proud to know that through my late husband, I am associated with this great work," Mrs. Haupt said.

Blaiberg, 58, a retired dentist who received Haupt's heart Jan. 2 at Groote Schuur Hospital in Capetown, is the world's longest living heart transplant recipient.

Eddie Darvall, 65, also of South Africa, father of the world's first heart donor, Denise Darvall, 25 said he is "very proud" his daughter's heart was used in the Dec. 3, 1967 transplant to Louis Washkansky.

Father Proud

"Knowing her heart was used to further medical science, I have the satisfaction at least of knowing she did not die for nothing," said Darvall. "Even though the recipient, Mr. Washkansky, died, I am proud to know a member of my family contributed to a major breakthrough in transplant surgery."

Gabriel Veliz, father of the 20-year-old butcher's apprentice who donated his heart June 28 to Maria Elena Penaloza, said, "If Christ died on the cross giving his heart to save mankind why deny the heart of my son if it can save someone?"

Veliz, who owns a tire vulcanizing shop in Valparaiso, Chile, said he, his wife and his surviving nine children would all give their hearts to save someone if they were in their son's situation.

Carmen Cuello, mother of the 35-year-old man who donated his heart in Argentina's second unsuccessful transplant attempt, said both she and her grandchildren should be proud their father had helped prolong the life of another.

Mrs. Cuello said that "without a doubt" she would give her own heart for a transplant.

"I have donated that of my son, and this means much to me," she said.

Some Objections

There has been some objection to the donation of hearts, but most of this has come when the heart was taken before permission could be obtained from relatives.

Pedro Contreras, 43, of Valparaiso, Chile, whose son Pedro Jr.'s heart was given to Nelson Orellano Sanchez, Oct. 1, accepted doctors' explanation that his son's clinical death had been confirmed and that the 17-year-old boy's heart had saved Orellano, who was dying of a distended heart.

Contreras said, "no matter how much one loves a son, one cannot deny another young person the possibility of staying alive."

A suit was threatened in Capetown after the heart of an unidentified woman was transplanted into Petrus Smith without permission being obtained from the woman's relatives.

Relatives Unavailable

Evidence points strongly to the donor being Evelyn Jacobs, a South African servant who died Sept. 7 of brain hemorrhage at Groote Schuur Hospital. The hospital confirmed the heart was removed from the woman following special health department permission when the donor's relatives could not be found in time to give consent.

While controversy over the identity of the donor grew, Miss Jacobs' cousin Benjamin Tsindi told reporters he was taken to the Groote Schuur mortuary and shown the face of a dead woman he identified as Miss Jacobs. He said he was not shown the rest of the body, which was wrapped in a sheet.

Tsindi said he and members of the family were dissatisfied about the removal of Miss Jacobs' heart and threatened to demand its return.

"As we see it, a body is not complete without a heart. How can they remove an organ when relatives don't even know whether a person is dead?" said Tsindi.

Everglades, Once Dying Of Thirst, Alive Again

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The bountiful "River of Grass" flows once again down the flat face of South Florida, and Everglades National Park—a vast primitive wilderness that just a year ago was dying of thirst—has won a new lease on life.

In the spring of 1967, robbed of water by years of drought and man's greed for water, wildlife in the park fought a desperate battle against extinction.

Starving alligators thrashed the waters of fast-vanishing ponds, fighting over the last of the garfish. Rookeries which once teemed with hundreds of thousands of birds were abandoned. Marshes browned by the blazing sun were scorched by fire. Masses of dead fish floated on oxygen-depleted pools, casting a heavy stench of death over America's only great subtropical water park.

Today the picture is bright and hopes are high that the park never again will be forced to the brink of destruction.

The wide, shallow river that for centuries poured over the south rim of Lake Okechobee and drifted slowly down through the sawgrass to the sea runs as it did before. It nourishes thousands of ponds, swales and sloughs filled with fish and crustaceans. On this rich food supply, birds, animals and reptiles thrive.

"There is plenty of food now for everything out there," says Francis Nix, the park's hydraulic engineer.

The resurrection of the park was brought about by two months of record-breaking rains, and a discovery that Florida has water enough, if properly controlled, for both man and beast.

In May and June, double the normal amount of rain deluged the Everglades. And since June, gates from the reservoirs of the Central and South Florida Flood Control District have been wide open, pouring excess water southward into the park.

No one can be sure how much permanent damage the park has suffered from drought and man's interference with the balance of nature. When there is plenty of water, wildlife is scattered over the park's 1.5 million acres.

Rare birds like the roseate spoonbill, egret and white heron, which once inhabited the park in large numbers, are making a comeback. It is estimated that 50,000 birds now occupy the mainland area. And, with plenty of food, a good nesting season is in prospect this winter.

The alligator, one of the park's most prized denizens, has been badly hurt, but more by poachers than by drought. The population has been slashed 95 per cent since the 1930s.

Pressure on Congress led to recent approval of a construction program that will improve storage and distribution facilities of the flood control district. It promises the park a minimum of 315,000-acre-feet of water a year through the floodgates. In this wet year, the park already has received 700,000 acre-feet.

Nix knows that human demands of the future could revive again the cries, "Water for alligators or people?" and "Birds can't vote." These were heard in 1966 when the National Audubon Society and other conservation groups—fighting to stave off a monumental tragedy in the park—argued that enough water could be spared from the reservoirs to save the wildlife.

Finally Caught By A Good Deed

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) —His good deed finally caught up with T. Sgt. Eugene J. O'Hea of Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque.

In May, O'Hea made a suggestion that is saving about $26,000 annually in computer operations at an Asheville, N.C. weather center. He was on a temporary assignment at the center.

In the meantime, he had gone back to his job with the military Airlift Command at Dover AFB, Del.

The award went to the Delaware base but O'Hea had already left for Kirtland. The award finally reached him there.

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Some science students in Calcutta University are putting their skill to unscientific use.

Vice-chancellor S.N. Sen has complained that some students use chemicals to erase failing marks on their report cards. They then apply for admission to higher courses after inserting qualifying grades.

Ask Them Yourself

financial columnist

I am amazed at the different sizes of checks. Wouldn't processing be much easier and faster if all checks were uniform in size?—L. R. Edwards, Dunedin, Fla.

● Not necessarily. Computers at banks can sort out all sizes of checks and reject those few which are very large or very small. These are handled by hand.

FOR REP. GERALD R. FORD,

House Minority Leader

Why do the Democrats have twice as many national-convention delegates as the Republicans?—Michael Kubit, Lowell, Mass.

● The national committees of the two major parties determine the number of delegates based on party rules. The number is based on the size of each state's congressional delegation (Senators and Representatives) and, to some extent, the success of the party in that state in the preceding election. The far greater number of Democratic delegates as compared with Republican delegates at the 1968 national conventions also is due to the Democratic practice of awarding a "victory bonus" of 10 convention votes to each state which voted Democratic in the 1964 election.

FOR DON KLOSTERMAN,

general manager, Houston Oilers

With the exception of high-priced bonus players, what is the average salary of pro football rookies?—Rex King, Pine Bluffs, Ark.

● I estimate that rookies earn between $12,000 to $14,000 a season. But this does not include the many benefits they enjoy—a pension plan after five years in the league, medical and life-insurance plans, and tremendous exposure to potential employers.

FOR ELIZABETH MONTGOMERY

of "Bewitched"
Have you ever made a movie with Dick York? If not, are you planning to?—Tina Murphy, Emmett, Mich.

● No, I have never made a movie with my "Bewitched" series husband, nor is one planned.

FOR GOV. RONALD REAGAN

Why did you give up your acting career to enter politics?—LeiAnne Handy, Orem, Utah

● A deep desire to administer to the needs of California's citizens prompted the decision to leave the theatrical world for the political one.

FOR REUVEN FRANK, President,

NBC news

What music is played following the "Huntley-Brinkley Report"?—C.J.C., Salem, Ore.

● Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, second movement.

FOR REP. L. MENDEL RIVERS,

Chairman, House Armed Services Committee

Can a boy be drafted if he is his mother's sole support and only son?—Margaret Salyer, Coeburn, Va.

● No. A registrant will not be drafted if his local draft board, after reviewing his case, agrees that his mother is in fact dependent upon him. He would be classified 3-A and not be available for induction. The fact that he is an only son, however, has no bearing on his availability.

FOR JIM "JUMBO" ELLIOTT, track

coach, Villanova University

What traits do you look for when appraising new track men?—John Tibor, Seattle, Wash.

● The single most important trait is the desire to excel. If we can find a boy with this desire, along with natural ability and the necessary basic intelligence, we can be fairly certain that a fine career lies ahead.

FOR GEORGE SCHAEFER,

movie director

Who makes more money in movies: the director, producer, star, or writer?—Earl M. Day, Roy, Utah

● Impossible to answer. Each talent is able to command a salary based on his current reputation and box-office value. Generally, the stars are paid the highest, but an exceptional director or writer can equal their earnings. A producer's income is linked to the financial success of the movie.

WHAT ^{IN} THE WORLD!

Fall Skiing The skiing season is already two months old in northern New Jersey, not noted for towering mountains nor autumn blizzards. While most skiers have just been dreaming, the New Jersey breed has been gliding over a new plastic ski surface previously used only at Grenoble and Cortina in Europe. What's different about the Sno-Mat, an artificial surface, is that all types of fancy and fast skiing are possible—even the high-speed slalom and the jump. The surface's American debut was at McAfee, N.J. It can be snapped together with fingertips in your own back yard (assuming it slopes), and can be used in sun, rain—even snow, if you like that sort of thing.

that of her close friends, the Kennedys. "I used to think we were the most tragic family in the world." (Patricia's little girl died; a baby son was brain-injured). "But now I know we are only second."

Run, Baby, Run Leroy Keyes, Purdue's great running back, makes college defenses reel with his sure-footedness—yet he didn't walk until he was more than three years old. Sports-writers keep asking why, and Leroy, quick of wit, too, replies: "There wasn't anything wrong with me—I was just lazy. Why walk when grownups carry you around? Besides, there was no place I particularly wanted to go."

Leroy Keyes

Stronger or Sicker Sex Men and women are equal when it comes to sick leave. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company found that both stayed away an average of six days a year—but for different reasons. Women claim respiratory diseases, men digestive disturbances. Neither admits to the blahs.

Gifts to Avoid Elizabeth Post, Emily's granddaughter-in-law, has updated the original "Etiquette." She advises, "Never choose a gift that might be construed as criticism. A cookbook can be most welcome providing your friend knows you have enjoyed her cooking, and you know she likes to cook. This same cookbook, given to someone whose cooking is at best mediocre, might easily be resented." Mrs. Post advises that before buying any present think, "What would she do with it? If you can't find an answer, don't buy it."

Pontiac Motor Division. The Wide-Track Family for '69: Grand Prix, Bonneville, Brougham, Executive, Catalina, GTO, LeMans, Custom S, Tempest and Firebird.

Looks like another bumper year for Pontiac.

Get our engineers and designers going on something and they can't leave great enough alone.

Take the bumper on this 1969 Pontiac Bonneville Convertible. That center section looks like ordinary sheet metal. It even matches the color of the sheet metal. But it is actually Endura, a man-concocted substance that "gives" should you accidentally scuff something. And the color is impregnated, not just laid on. So it resists cracking, peeling, fading and chipping.

What else is new with Bonneville? Oh, a longer 125" wheelbase; wider

And inside, shades of the Taj Mahal. A hide-tough yet skin-soft bench seat arrangement in fully expanded Morrokide. Dash and door inlays with the look of Carpathian burlled elm. Plus what appears to be a bowling green of deep, broadloom carpet.

Our point, then, is this: If you've an itch to break away from drab, dreary driving, scamper (and we mean scamper) on down to your Pontiac dealer. Since we're having a bumper year, he's having one, too.

THE YEAR OF THE GREAT PONTIAC BREAK AWAY.

THE BROAD SPECTRUM ANTISEPTIC
Kills All Germs
Which Cause Infection

A FEW PLAYERS were still straggling about the locker room when a perspiring Number 18 came clattering down the dugout steps of Blair Field in Long Beach, Calif., sank down on a bench in front of his locker, and tugged pensively at a sweat-stuck jersey.

There was no one left to play catch with, so Roman Gabriel, quarterback of the Los Angeles Rams, had decided to call it a day.

Gabriel had been on hand at Blair Field since nine that morning, long before the other players made the scene. He had dissected films of the Cleveland Browns—the Rams' opponent for the following Sunday.

Then there had been a team meeting that broke up into special units for practice. The coaches were working on the defense this day, and Gabriel had run intricate pass patterns against two sets of defensive specialists. That done, Gabriel had taken two laps around the field, then looked for a volunteer to catch some passes.

After six years in professional football, Roman Gabriel has it made. Such patience and hard work moved him from benchwarmer to pro stardom—those qualities, plus luck.

"Three things helped me," Gabriel says. "First, the opportunity given me when George Allen came in as head coach two years ago. Also, the whole Ram club matured. And, finally, I got a chance to play regularly."

Gabe only glimpsed stardom from the time he joined the Rams in 1962 until Allen arrived in 1966. A native of Wilmington, N.C., Gabriel is unusually large for a quarterback, standing 6-foot-4 and weighing 220 pounds. Until 1966, he divided quarterback duties with Bill Munson (since traded to Detroit). Both hated benchwarming.

"Two things kept me going," Gabriel says. "When I did play, I knew I was capable of being a quarterback in this league. I never doubted that at all, but I was bringing my football troubles home and taking out my disappointments on my family. I suppose my wife Suzanne was as responsible for my staying in pro ball as anyone. She knew I had to find out if I could do it."

Roman Gabriel runs against the St. Louis Cardinals. He's almost as powerful afoot as with his passing arm.

Suzanne is small, blonde, and blue-eyed. She met her husband in high school in Wilmington and suffered through every disappointment with him during the bad days.

"Generally, I'm pretty unemotional," she says, "but I still get a nervous stomach during the crucial games. But it was so much worse when he wasn't playing!"

In 1965 Gabe decided he wanted a shot at running a professional team by himself, so he played out his option and looked around for new opportunities. The Oakland Raiders of the rival American Football League offered him a bonus to join them, and he had signed a contract with Oakland when George Allen left the Chicago Bears for the Rams. Allen didn't want to let Gabriel get away.

"He phoned me," recalls Gabe, "the first time a professional coach ever called me. He gave me no assurance except an equal opportunity to win the job. That was all I wanted."

Gabe has been winning quarterback in 22 of the 32 games he has started since late in the 1965 season, when Munson injured his knee.

"Physically, he's the strongest quarterback ever to play the game," says a Ram staff member. "He can take a lineman's rush head-on and push his nose in the dirt. Under ideal conditions, he can throw a football the length of the field."

For the first time this year, some of the fringe benefits of athletic success are coming Gabe's way. He has just opened a travel agency with his best friend, Merlin Olsen. He's also suddenly in demand for endorsements, which he screens carefully. "I turn down all the liquor, beer, cigarette endorsements," he says, "because I won't do something I don't believe in."

A few months ago, the Gabriels—with their three sons, Roman III, 7, Ram Alan, 6, and Rory Jay, six months—moved into a large new stone-and-frame house. Roman spends most of his evenings during the season studying films of the teams he'll be playing against.

"A bad game or a bad sequence doesn't bother me the way it used to," Gabriel says, "because I know I won't be benched just at the snap of a finger. I have some security and confidence now."

"If I enjoy what I'm doing, I'll be that much better for the team. And I'm enjoying myself now." ♦

How to Get Even with Your

By SHEPHERD MEAD

MY PROBLEM is that I've always liked women too much—so much so that I've been married to the same one for 25 years.

In fact, she's always getting into my writing. The worst time was when I was writing "How to Succeed with Women Without Really Trying."

"Unfair!" she said. "It just tells how to take unfair advantage of women."

"Nonsense!" I replied.

"Prove it," she said, "by telling women how to even the score."

So, to keep peace in the house, I've agreed to tell you ladies how to get even with your man. Right now you're not even with him at all. You're miles behind. And this is surprising since you're much better made in almost every way. You'll last at least five years longer, recover from most diseases much more easily, be 16 times less likely to have color blindness, and a whole list of other physical advantages.

This is because you were engineered to be the baby factory, the part that takes the real stamina. I know how much this takes—I've been on the side lines for 27 months of it, all told, and the three kids are still doing fine, thank you.

In spite of this clear superiority, your man is one up on you in almost every way. Start even with him, same education and intelligence, and he's almost sure to get ahead of you in any business. Marry him, and by the time you're both 50, he's No. 1, with some influence and a bit of power, including (more than likely) quite a bit over women, and he's making several times what he once did. What about you? If you were cut loose on the open market, economic or matrimonial, it might be hard to give you away. You're definitely getting the short end of the bargain.

Can you get even with him? Yes, you can. Follow these simple instructions, and you'll have a start. Memorize these simple rules—and hide them from him.

How to Choose Your First Husband

choose your second husband, once you've worn out the first.)

Nearly all women choose the wrong first husband. I know, I'm my wife's second husband. I always tell her the second marriage is the best.

"But I'm your first wife," she says.

"Exactly," I say. "The second marriage is always the best."

Your first impulse will be to choose the young, boyish type. This is a mistake. The very young man will have to use you like an old mop. He has no choice. He can't afford anything else. You're his first and utility-model wife, chosen as cook, scullery maid, washerwoman, nursemaid, jalopy driver, and playmate. Unfortunately there will be almost no time for the latter. He will be expecting, subconsciously at least, to replace you later (when he can afford it) with a luxury or sports model.

Try, if you can, to be someone else's luxury model. Choose your second husband first. Select a junior executive in his late 20s. He can buy your freedom from the slavery stage, and he's more experienced in the ways of the world—meaning you. Don't sneer at experience. It's always better to ride with someone who knows how to drive. The average young male is totally incompetent. If his backhand or his approach shot were as bad as his lovemaking, he'd never win a game.

"Now all that," said my wife, looking at the typewriter, "is cynical and Machiavellian. We marry for love."

"But you did marry me, pet, when I was 29, and making a lot of money."

"You needed me, love. And who else would have you? You were definitely getting pear-shaped."

Should I Choose a Pear-Shaped Man?

Yes, you should. Your first impulse will be to grab the barrel-chested, slim-hipped Adonis. Resist it. Like the open two-seater sports car, he looks wonderful going down the street, but he'll be impractical for the long haul. Choose a comfortable, station wagon of a man, with well-developed thinking or sitting muscles. The boy athlete will get shoddier and poorer with the years, whereas the thinking (or sitting) man's pay check will grow and grow. (So, alas, will his sitting muscles, but you have to take the bitter with the sweet.)

How to Measure His Money

Never marry a man just for his money. Figures show, however, that most marriage breakups are caused by either money or sex.

Don't be bamboozed by the free-spending suitor, or by the size and elegance of his car. A good rule is: the more money a man has, the tighter he clings to it. This is why he has it.

"You can say that again," said my wife, looking over my shoulder.

There are several good conversational gambits to determine how much money he has.

1. The by-the-year query. Work the conversation around to something like this:

"It says in the paper here that he'll be making $14,000 a year. Is that too much?"

If he replies, "Let's see, how much would that be a week?" then look around a bit. If he figures it by the week, he hasn't got it.

2. The Tax Query. Just ask him: "Can you help me with my income tax?" If he says, "I don't know a thing about it," then he hasn't got it. If he turns white and trembles at the mention of income tax, grab him. The more they worry about taxes, the more money they have.

My wife interrupted: "Dear, the problem isn't just how much he has got. It's how to get it away from him."

Very well, then. We will stop at nothing.

How to Get Money from Your Husband

You'll have no problem getting as much as you need if your timing is right. If you say, "Dear, I need a new dress," he will reply, "What happened to the one you just got?" no matter how long ago that was.

Wait until he says you need a new dress. When the time comes, put on your oldest, shabbiest rag and say:

"Dear, Mrs. Biggley phoned . . ."

"The boss' wife?"

"She wondered whether we could drop over for dinner on Friday. She said not to dress up. Don't you think this dress will be all right?"

He will send you right down to the best dress shop in town. Money will be no object. You'll discover that this gambit can be carried to almost any extreme. No need to slave over small-time home improvements. The clever girl does it with one stroke:

"Dear, Lulu Biggley was saying . . ."

"Oh, it's Lulu now, is it?"

"She said there's a beautiful house for sale near them, up on the country-club grounds . . ."

See to it that the place is in apple order before you move in.

My wife just looked at the typewriter again and said, "Now that is carrying it too far."

"You can never," I said, "carry it too far."

"Then get down to the real pay dirt."

How to Break Your Man to the Saddle

Remember that the only way your man is really superior to you is in his heavy or horse-muscles. Think

Husband

Feel inferior to your men, ladies? You needn't be, says this noted humorist, if you follow his crash course in marital one-upmanship of it this way: he is like the horse, and you are the rider. This will work beautifully as long as you never let him know you're holding the reins and as long as you use your spurs, so to speak, only when absolutely necessary. Be gentle to him. Like the horse, he will think he is going where he wants to go. But you will know better.

Horses and husbands need regular exercise. See that he gets it. Regular canters around the back yard behind the lawn mower are good for him—if done regularly.

Violent exercise is dangerous to husbands only if they aren't used to it. Jogs around the shopping center, brisk sessions hauling in the groceries, and invigorating trots with the dog or behind the baby carriage will do him a world of good. If he hesitates about the shopping, show him that it will pay him to do it. On your next trip, buy out practically the whole shopping center.

"You brought all that?" he'll ask.

"I don't know what happened, dear! Everything just went blank, and there I was with a whole carload of groceries!"

After several demonstrations like this, he'll see the point.

How to Wear Out Your Husband

The best way to dispose of old, unwanted husbands is to wear them out. But remember, men don't wear out like machinery, from motion. They wear out like carpets, from being stepped on. If your husband works for a big organization, keep in touch with it:

"Dear, Mabel was saying that the new supervisor's job pays $2,000 a year more." (He may begin to tremble a bit already.)

"It's only money, isn't it?"

"I couldn't care less about the money, dear. Mabel said George was going for it, though."

"Not little Georgie!"

"That would make you Georgie's assistant, wouldn't it? Mabel said not to worry. George said he'd promise not to work you too hard."

You'll note a change in his firmness of purpose. He'll be thinking and smoking more rapidly. Keep up regular encouragements like this, and there's no limit to what can happen to him.

How to Handle the Other Men in Your Life

Home economics was for Grandma. Your problem is home electronics. There's never a time when at least one of your electrical helpmates isn't dead, dying, or pretty sick. You're at the mercy of a whole army of double-talking repairmen:

"What's the matter with it?"

"Bad, lady, bad. Timer's out of synch, and the linkages in the conductor chassis are . . ." You're absolutely at his mercy. You don't know what he's talking about.

Even your husband, who may not really know how to do anything but rewire a plug, has you where he wants you: "Very tough plug, dear. May take the whole afternoon." (And he'll do it all afternoon, too, right in front of the tv.)

An evening a week at the local vocational school, learning simple electricians' jobs, will put you one up on all of them. After that, you can lie in wait for your next double-talk expert:

"Yes, ma'am, you need an inductor coil rewiring and a resistor cable voltmeter. Comes to $23."

"It just needs a new brush here, and they cost 50¢. Anything else?"

"Well, let's look at it again . . ."

Your husband, too, will have new respect for you:

"Now, muscleman, just lift it up and hold it there."

"I'm breaking my back!"

"But you have such a strong back, dear. I'll just unscrew this resistor coil and you can run down and get a new one. I'll write down the number for you."

Be Kind, Be Generous

Once you have him where you want him, be generous. Treat him as gently as you can. No need to worry about overdoing all this. If you should go too far and really get above him—if he has to look up to you—then make the view as pleasant as you can.

My wife just looked at this manuscript again, and said, "You've gone too far, dear. We don't want to be above you. Just side by side, darling. Kiss me—and then run down to the shopping center for me, will you? That's a good boy." ♦

First Clues in the War Against Multiple Sclerosis

Medical science is coming closer to solving the puzzling disease which is crippling half a million Americans

By JAMES Q. SIMMONS, Jr., M.D.

Director of Medical Programs, National Multiple Sclerosis Society

A YOUNG WIFE, drying dishes, lets go of the coffee cup she'd been holding. A moment later, she collapses, too suddenly even to reach out to break her fall.

A brilliant college student, sitting in an easy chair at a seminar, starts to rise to greet his professor. Struggle as he might, he cannot lift himself more than a few inches. He falls back, helpless and exhausted.

Both people are experiencing the first frightening symptoms of multiple sclerosis. MS is a progressive disease of the central nervous system which strikes adults in the prime of life, 20 to 40 years old. It is not fatal in itself, but a slow, surecrippler for about 500,000 in the U.S. today.

The central nervous system consists of the spinal cord and the brain. Nerve fibers in columns are housed within the spinal canal; these nerves transmit messages to and from the brain and determine movements of arms, legs, organs, and the functioning of all five senses. The fibers are covered by a protective sheath of fatty tissue called myelin—similar to insulation on an electric wire. If anything happens to the protective myelin sheath—as it does in MS—the communicating nerve impulses are distorted, weakened, or blocked.

Earlier symptoms may be tingling in the limbs—or no sensation at all. This can be followed by vision problems, speech difficulties, a stumbling gait. MS victims may experience a remission (temporary retreat of all symptoms), but eventually the symptoms return, even more severe.

Yet there is mounting hope we can curb or even cure this cruel crippler.

"New facts, some isolated just now," according to Dr. Harry M. Weaver, consultant for national research programs of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, "indicate that we are entering a period of rapid progress." Two major research areas in the war against MS give particularly significant clues.

Epidemiology: MS is most frequent in cold or damp climates—parts of Scandinavia for instance. The Shetland Islands, in the northern seas above Scotland, have the highest prevalence, twice that of the northern U.S. and Canada, considered high-prevalence areas.

Current research aims at finding out why MS is prevalent in cold regions; often once the "why" is learned, the "how" of curing follows. It is known that MS cannot be cured by moving from a cold to a warmer climate; where the patient spent his early years is the deciding factor. There is no proof of hereditary, contagious, or congenital influences.

It is believed that a general run-down condition—physical or mental—will bring on relapses. Triggers seem to include fatigue, overwork, chilling, and colds.

The emotional state of the patient has some bearing on the course of MS disabilities.

The unique tragedy of MS is that there is little hope that a victim achieves a good emotional state. There is an agonizingly long wait for specific symptoms to appear to get a confirmed diagnosis—and even then no way of predicting the outcome. As a result, friends and acquaintances often drop away; many marriages break under the strain.

The emotional symptom of euphoria (feeling of well-being or elation) frequently is a protective response covering severe depression. Such reactions are helpful to the MS patient, though sometimes an added strain to the family. One bride, for instance, spoke of her sick husband's "total lack of reality." He insisted that no wife of his would go back to work; he'd support them by playing the horses. She had to trick him into going to the doctor.

A helpful service is the Patient-

to-Patient Program. There are 63 chapters around the country which enable patients to socialize and help one another find strength. (Headquarters: National Multiple Sclerosis Society, 257 Park Ave. South, New York, N.Y. 10010.)

Immune Response Theory: Everyone is born with a natural defense against many forms of disease. When attacked by a foreign body (a wound or a germ), this defense system produces special proteins called antibodies especially designed to hook onto any invading germs or viruses and render them harmless.

Some researchers are working on the theory that in MS sufferers the body's immune response may go awry. These doctors believe that instead of fending off invading germs, the immunological system inexplicably goes off on a destructive rampage, attacking the very tissue it would normally defend—in this case, the myelin sheath.

A parallel theory is that the white blood cells (lymphocytes) are acting destructively and not the antibodies. Dr. Rune Stjernhom, biochemist from Cleveland's Western Reserve University, is working on a blood test to diagnose the almost undiagnosable MS.

And, too, there is now laboratory evidence that myelin can be regenerated. Dr. Murray B. Bornstein of New York's Albert Einstein College of Medicine now classes MS as a four-stage disease. Functional blocking, interrupted nerve-impulse transmission, and loss of myelin are three stages which are potentially reversible. Only the final—the scarring phase—cannot be altered. Concerning the possibility of restoring interrupted nerve-impulse transmissions, he states, "The electron microscope shows that vesicles (which carry energy to and from nerve cells) disappear in the presence of blood that previously blocked impulse transmissions. But if the blood is removed, the vesicles will reappear within a day."

Believing that these abnormal blood factors are antibodies which mistakenly attack myelin instead of hostile infection, Dr. Bornstein thinks that MS might be corrected by modifying the defense system through use of an antiserum.

The final medical breakthrough against MS may come soon. Research grant applications to the MS Society are at an all-time high; dedicated scientists are closing in on answers in their projects. Like a jigsaw puzzle, the many pieces of the ancient enigma of MS are beginning to form a clearer picture.

We just need that final piece. ♦

If you want to Stop Smoking,

*Here's

by Y. A. Tittle

Y. A. Tittle is a former great NFL quarterback, one of the most productive passers in the history of professional football. He is now a successful insurance executive and backfield coach for the San Francisco Forty-Niners.

You need a lot of desire as well as cooperation to be a successful quarterback in tough professional football. You really have to want to make good—but even that isn't enough without plenty of help from your teammates.

There's no substitute for the same kind of desire if you want to stop smoking—and I assume you have it because you're reading this ad—but, luckily, there now is something to help you. It's a little white pill called Bantron.

After my doctor advised me to stop smoking I made many starts—with no success. Just as I needed help on the football field, I found that desire, alone, wasn't enough to stop smoking. Then Bantron was recommended to me by a friend. Bantron did the job! I stopped smoking completely in 5 days and I'm proud to say I haven't smoked in well over a year.

It's like quarterbacking my team to a championship. It was a real accomplishment.

Maybe you have the desire to stop smoking but can't! If you want help in quitting, take Bantron.

I've learned that clinical evidence has established that Bantron is more than 80% effective in helping chronic chain smokers give up smoking completely. Extensive research work at a great American University has shown that 4 out of 5 patients who had a desire to stop smoking were able to do so within one week with the help of Bantron. Even those who didn't stop completely cut down drastically.

Bantron simply acts as a substitute for the nicotine in your system and helps curb the desire for tobacco with a harmless, non-habit forming drug called lobeline. The result is that you feel no pangs of withdrawal and no desire to smoke.

Bantron is easy and pleasant to take; doesn't affect your taste for food or anything else. It really worked wonders for me. Even now, when I think of smoking, I just take Bantron instead. I recommend Bantron to everyone who wants to stop smoking quickly and easily. Try it. You'll be amazed with the results, just as I was. It really works!

Bantron is so safe when taken as directed that you can get it in the United States and Canada at all drug stores without a prescription. It has even been granted a patent by the U.S. Government.

NOW! Run Your Car Without Spark Plugs

THE IMPORTANT DIFFERENCES BETWEEN ORDINARY SPARK PLUGS AND JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS

Your car's power comes from tiny explosions of gasoline vapor and air in your cylinders. The bigger the explosions, the faster you go.

SPARK PLUGS
NARROW SPARK

CONVENTIONAL PLUGS explode this mixture with a spark jumping across an air gap. The spark is just 35-thousandths of an inch across — not wide enough to explode all the fuel in the cylinder. Unburned gas escapes through your exhaust. In time, the electrodes become eroded and caked with carbon. The gap widens, the spark gets narrower, you lose more power, waste more fuel . . . and finally have to replace your plugs.

JET-FIRE
FUEL IGNITER
WIDE SWATH OF FLAME

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS use no sparks. Instead a fanning swath of flame walks across a semi-conductor bridge from one electrode to another, exploding far more fuel, getting far more power. There is no gap that can widen, and carbon deposits actually improve performance. They do not have to be adjusted or replaced—ever!

BOAT OWNERS!

NEW JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS

Will deliver up to 30 more horsepower, 5 more miles per gallon using only regular gas!

THEY NEVER WEAR OUT

Spark plugs are obsolete! Now there's a far better way to run your car.

With conventional spark plugs, only a fraction of the fuel that enters your cylinders is turned into power. The rest escapes through your tail-pipe as unburned vapor. That is because their spark is so narrow—only 35-thousandths of an inch wide—that it cannot possibly ignite all the fuel mixture in the cylinder. As plugs get older, their sparks get narrower and less efficient till they have to be replaced.

New Jet-Fuel Igniters do a far better job of turning gasoline into power. Instead of a narrow spark, they send out a wide swath of flame that "walks" across a semi-conductor tip, fanning out in all directions and exploding far more fuel in the cylinder.

Proof That You Get Up To 30 Horsepower More . . .

Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters look like spark plugs merely because they have to be screwed into the spark plug socket. But what they do is far different. Here's how to prove it:

1. Run your car till it's fully warmed up.
2. Stop on a perfectly level stretch of road.
3. Put the car in Drive (1st gear with manual transmission), and see how fast the car rolls at idling speed.
4. Remove plugs and install Jet-Fuel Igniters (a 10-minute job).
5. Now see how fast your car rolls at idling speed. You can expect it to go 4 TO 6 MILES PER HOUR FASTER without touching the gas pedal — dramatic proof that Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters increase engine RPMs by 100 to 150 with no increase in gas consumption. (At high speeds, RPMs increase by 300 to 350.)

So, first thing, you can reduce the gas flow by adjusting the idling screw, and start saving money before you've even driven a mile!

(At the same time, you can make your air-to-gas mixture leaner. Fuel Igniters require only a 15:1 ratio instead of the conventional 9:1. It's a simple adjustment that you or your mechanic can make in one minute. It provides even greater economy.)

Start driving and you'll notice even more improvement—up to 30 more horsepower of acceleration power, climbing power, and passing power. All this while burning less gas!

SWITCH TO REGULAR

The next time your gas gauge gets near the "Empty" mark, tell the attendant to fill it up with REGULAR! Chances are you'll no longer need premium which costs four to eight cents more than regular gas.

And this second saving is only the beginning. Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters provide easier cold-weather starts . . . and that means less drain on your battery, and no drain on your patience as you try to get started.

NO REPLACING OR ADJUSTING EVER

The more you drive, the better your Fuel Igniters perform. They don't become eroded, wear out or require adjusting. And carbon build-up—the natural enemy of old fashioned plugs—actually makes fuel igniters perform better. Carbon becomes an additional carrier for the igniter's big jet flame.

So there you have a third saving. One set of fuel igniters will last the life of your car!

Invented To Save Air Force Lives— Now They Can Save You Money

Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters were first developed to save airmen's lives. During World War II, there were times when more men were killed by spark plug malfunction than by enemy action. A failure-proof replacement was needed, and Fuel Igniters did the job. Both the Navy and Air Force have approved them for jet engine use.

Now at last they have been modified for automobile use. They won't save your life, but they can save you big money—up to $100 a year with ordinary driving.

Some day, all cars may come equipped with Fuel Igniters like these. But why wait when you can install a set yourself now. Just mail the coupon with the make and model of your car, and we'll rush you a set with full instructions. Just $12.80 per set of 8 ppd., $9.60 per set of 6 ppd.

SHOPLIFTING

Is Your Youngster

CHRISTMAS comes but once a year and "thank heaven for that," says one Chicago department-store owner who estimates his annual Yuletide shoplifting losses at more than $30,000.

Shoppers and "lifters"—half in their teens—will hit the stores again this year in record numbers, and by the time the old year rings out, theft losses for 1968 will exceed $2.5 billion—with more than $700 million worth of the goods stolen during the two weeks just preceding the holiday itself.

The public mistakenly thinks these losses affect only the store owners. What the average person fails to realize is that shoplifting increases their prices by about five percent, simply to recover their losses.

Since 1960, shoplifting losses have increased 112 percent, the main reason being the expanding breed of "amateur" shoplifters, specifically teen-agers.

Although a large number of thefts are committed by professional shoplifters, the amateurs outnumber the pros by at least 20 to 1. I submit that the amateur shoplifter is more of a menace to society than the pro for two reasons:

The pro usually has a police record and is recognized easily by store security personnel. He is reluctant to steal when he is aware that a store has taken precautions.

The amateur fades into a sea of faceless people—a perfect cover for picking up items unnoticed.

As a result, the amateur doesn't have to resort to the more sophisticated methods of stealing that the pros use. A shopping bag or purse is usually sufficient for secreting merchandise; many simply stuff their coat pockets full. And unless store security is tight, the shoplifter gets away easily.

The amateur, of course, is not an accomplished thief and, therefore, is more easily detected when security is in effect. A number of cases based on my personal experiences will serve to emphasize this point:

Follow that trenchcoat! An attractive teen-ager wearing a stylish trenchcoat entered a Seattle department store, and I followed her to the Teens Department where she selected several items of clothing. She collected an entire wardrobe before moving into the fitting room. I really wasn't surprised when she emerged from the dressing area empty-handed and headed for the exit. None of the clothing was in the fitting room. I rapidly overtook her and found that she was wearing the entire wardrobe taken from the counters only minutes before. She admitted that she entered the store without wearing anything under her trenchcoat.

How not to keep a date. Another young lady was apprehended while attempting to steal a complete wardrobe. She neglected to conceal the items carefully, and it was obvious that she was a shoplifter. Upon questioning, she related that she was new in town and needed the new clothes for a date!

Lo, the poor oarsmen. A routine spot check of the sporting-goods department at a large retail chain store brought one of our investigators face-to-face with two boys in their mid-teens, each toting a canoe paddle. When they were stopped and questioned about the paddles, they readily admitted that they were stealing them for a canoe, which they had previously carried out of the store without getting caught by store detectives.

Grandma "Lightfingers." With certain misgivings, I had to arrest a little old lady in her early 70s for stealing dress-making materials such as buttons, zippers, threads, and fabrics. But when I learned that she owned a dress shop and often shoplifted to help reduce her overhead costs, I wasted no more time sympathizing with her.

In police and security jargon, the professional shoplifter is better known as a "booster." He may bob, jam, clout, nick, bag, cop, grab-off, snag, or swipe—all synonyms for stealing. A booster who "clouts and lams," for example, is a shoplifter who "steals and runs."

Male boosters frequently will conceal merchandise in a specially made pair of "roomy pants" which will hold phonograph records, books, shirts, even suits and topcoats, while women quite often wear "booster bloomers" for carting away similar items.

The "booster box" is one of the more ingenious devices of the professional shoplifter because with it he looks like an innocent shopper. It is a large box which appears to be wrapped and tied with string. Actually, it contains a slit at one end, through which boosted merchandise is slipped inside.

Many store losses are the result of price-tag switching—removing the label from a high-price item and replacing it with a tag taken from a low-cost product. The practice is commonly employed in supermarkets, discount stores, and large retail outlets where cashiers have limited knowledge of all prices.

A great many of today's shoplifting losses can be reduced if parents take a more active interest in their youngsters' shopping habits, especially during the Christmas season.

1. Set a good example.

If you have a grievance with any store, take up the matter with the management. Don't use your children as a sounding board with phrases such as, "I'd like to get even with that gyp outfit." They may get the idea that they would like to "get even" for you.

2. Know where your children are.

This is especially true during the Christmas vacation. Beware too of the lure of the shopping center. With idle time on their hands, a sudden whim to get something for nothing could prompt youngsters to shoplift.

3. Keep your teen-agers busy.

Insist they earn their shopping money. A busy youngster has little time for getting into trouble.

4. Ask your youngster about his purchases.

Check his sales slips for merchandise bought during the holiday season, too.

5. Encourage talks given by local police.

They and private-investigation firms often sponsor programs before school assemblies and business groups on the perils of shoplifting.

Should you catch your youngster with stolen merchandise, don't hesitate to march him right back to the store. If the merchandise is returned intact, chances are the matter will go no further. And your youngster will have learned that honesty really is the best policy.

Should you choose to overlook a shoplifting theft, then you and your youngster both will face much graver consequences later on. Once the teen-ager realizes that he has "gotten away with it," he will probably try it one more time. That one more time could, and often does, result in arrest. The child thus is branded as a thief for the rest of his life.

We all want to believe that our children are trustworthy and above suspicion. But the risks are great if you're being deceived.

Don't take the risk. Youth is particularly vulnerable to temptation these days, and you should stand ready to help them avoid it. ♦

JENNIFER EDWARDS:

Is She the New Shirley Temple?

TWO YEARS ago, nine-year-old Jennifer Edwards, holding a copy of the children's classic, "Heidi," asked her mother, "When you were a little girl, Mommy, did you ever want to be someone else?"

Patricia Edwards, estranged wife of writer-director-producer Blake Edwards, admitted she had.

"Well, I want to be Heidi!"

At about the same time, producer Fred Brogger was thinking of "Heidi," too, but for more professional reasons. He had just signed a contract to film a two-hour special for NBC, based on the famous Johanna Spyri novel, which has been done several times before, most successfully with Shirley Temple some 300 years ago.

Jennifer's dream would come true—but not until 187 little girls were auditioned for the part by Brogger and Academy Award-winning director Delbert Mann. "It was a difficult task," Mann recalls. "The character of Heidi is the focal point of the entire project. Most of the children we interviewed were too inexperienced."

As the date for location shooting in Switzerland approached and still no Heidi was found, the project came within two weeks of abandonment, when Brogger ran into Edwards. To solve the problem, Blake suggested Jennifer.

"She came to see me by herself," Mann recalls. "Although she grew up in a show-business environment, she had no pseudo-sophistication. No showbiz mannerisms. Just a straightforwardness and naturalness—exactly what we were looking for."

The film, to be shown tonight, is charming, with Jennifer excelling as "Heidi"—and yet, strangely, both Jennifer and her mother regret the whole experience.

Heidi, 1968—Jennifer and Michael Redgrave as the grandfather, in a TV version.

"It was boring," Jennifer says. "I didn't know you spent so much time just standing around. I like school better."

Mrs. Edwards—once an actress herself—hates everything about show business at this stage, and the bitterness shows through. "The film was done against my wishes, before I had custody of Jennifer. It was bad for her. Now, every time she visits Blake and her stepmother (actress Julie Andrews, who isn't her stepmother—yet) in Dublin, she comes back a bore. Why can't she be left alone? I don't want her to be in any more films."

In spite of the attention she received, and having a father who is one of Hollywood's best-known directors, Jennifer did not become spoiled. "She remained unaffected and professional," says Mann. "Most important, she has true instinct for what is right, and she always responded with that instinct."

There is a scene in front of the mountain cabin Heidi shares with her grandfather when she puts her hand in his, with tears in her eyes. It was reshot 10 times. Each time Jennifer had the right expression on her face and tears in her eyes. Mann says he never has seen such response in a child.

As a result, her performance was far more convincing than Shirley Temple's. And, although cast opposite Maximilian Schell, Jean Simmons, Walter Slezak, and Sir Michael Redgrave—Jennifer out-acted them all.

So where does she go from here?

If her mother has her way, it will be back to school and to a normal home life. But if some enterprising producer, after seeing "Heidi" and remembering Shirley Temple, has his way, Jennifer might soon be setting sail on the "Good Ship Lollipop."

VISTARAMA WORKS DIFFERENTLY FROM ANY SLIDE PROJECTOR EVER MADE

Ordinary slide projectors can't work without slides. But this new VISTARAMA is so completely different! It doesn't need slides or transparencies, or film strips. In fact, it can project direct from your color or black and white prints — even direct from a bound book or solid object. Here's the reason why: VISTARAMA has a special built-in mirror system. This is correlated to a famous Phillips Projection Bulb and Magnifying Lenses. That's why VISTARAMA delivers such uncanny performance! That's why it can do things that no ordinary slide projector can ever do — no matter how high priced!

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

With its special mirror system, this machine captures the image of any photo, sketch, person or thing (almost like a Television Camera). Then it enlarges and projects them onto your wall or movie screen. It picks up photos, lettering, comic strips, sketches, handwriting, stones, stamps, coins, jewelry, finger prints, etc. It even picks up living insects, small animals, fish, machines in motion, working watch movements. Best of all — it projects them in GIANT size — up to 16 SQ. FEET!

CHANGES YOUR WALL INTO A SHOW!

You can shoot right onto any light colored wall, or if you wish, onto your movie screen. VISTARAMA projects in FULL COLOR. Just aim it at machines, insects, animals, etc. and there — before your own eyes — you're seeing true-to-life "movies" Yes — you see magnified projections of operating motors, watches, machines. You see live insects crawling, moving, scavenging about for food.

THIS POWERFUL "TEACHING MACHINE" HELPS SCHOOL KIDS TO ADVANCE

For decades educators have stressed the great value of MAGNIFIED VISUAL AIDS for faster learning and better retention. With VISTARAMA homework becomes fun instead of a dreaded task, because VISTARAMA becomes a powerful "teaching machine". It makes textbooks, diagrams, maps, pictures and words burst into GIANT size. In fact, this great little "learning machine" is a BIG helper for reading, spelling, geography, arithmetic, biology, etc.

SO EASY — EVEN A CHILD CAN DO IT!

You can operate VISTARAMA in less than one minute after receiving it! Pick it up by its insulated handle. Then aim it at any subject. For instance, hold it close to any book, picture, reading matter, even over live insects or small animals such as a frog, etc. Instantly the subject is projected to a GIANT SIZE — bigger than life itself. Your child will not readily forget what he learns this compelling new way. And on stormy days, when kids are trapped indoors, VISTARAMA gives them hours of joyous entertainment:

PROJECTS YOUR FAMILY PHOTOS DIRECT FROM FAMILY ALBUM

You don't have to take out the photos from your family album! Just aim the VISTARAMA over any picture in your album. That's all! Instantly it's enlarged and projected — to GIANT SIZE! VISTARAMA also projects pictures onto paper, canvas, or wood. This way you can trace them out to make your own sketches, water color or even genuine oil paintings! This wonderful VISTARAMA projector belongs in every family — especially where there are young children!

As a fitting and enduring memorial tribute, this 1969 12-month calendar features a superb full-color art reproduction of the famous painting, "Brothers United", by the noted American artist, Alton S. Tobey. This beautiful portrait of John and Robert Kennedy truly merits a place of prominence in your home and office. Here is a painting you will value and cherish not only throughout the coming year, but for a lifetime.

Unfortunately, the small black-and-white illustration at the left cannot possibly show you the exquisite colors and masterful detail rendered by the artist. Only when you actually receive this unique "Brothers United" calendar will you fully appreciate its rare dramatic beauty. It measures a full two feet high—24"x12"—and is magnificently reproduced on fine vellum-finish stock. We urge you to order promptly while the supply lasts. (Limit: three per family, please.) This offer will not be repeated in Family Weekly.

QUIPS AND QUOTES

Note on the windshield of a parked car with a dented fender and trunk: "I have just run into your car. People have seen me and are watching me write this. They think I am giving you my name and address. They are wrong."

—M. W. Martin

Since the children were grown and away from home, the housewife had gone back to work. She was having trouble juggling her new routine with the housekeeping chores. One night she worked overtime and dinner was rushed and late. Over instant coffee, her patient husband comforted her, "Don't worry, dear, this meal was one of the tastiest you ever thawed."

—Stephanie von Esse

The novice shoe salesman sold so many ladies' shoes that he had to ask the manager to order more. "How did you do it?" the manager wanted to know. "I hope you didn't mark down the prices."

"No, sir. I marked down the sizes."

—Lane Olinghouse

Meat on the Table

Home is our hero from hunting,
Singing as blithe as Tennyson.
He's here in the doorway grunting
Under a load of venison.

At Nimrod's art he's a winner,
And worn from his outdoor tedium.

What does he want for dinner?
A nice thick steak done medium.

—Georgie Starbuck Galbraith

A lot of what used to be called "sin" in our grandparents' generation, our kids now insist on calling
"in."

—Al Roberts

Sign-o-rama: On a big, very old Army truck for sale in a used-car lot in Augusta, Ga.: "One owner." . . . Posted at exit of New York City's self-service auto garage: "We use the honor system: Deposit money in slot. Your license number is recorded." . . . At a narrow pass on a winding Rocky Mountain road: "Oh, yes, you can. Millions have."

Prince Valiant

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story turns now to the private chamber where El Muluk is appraising his latest possession, Aleta. Then from the courtyard below comes the clatter of hoofs and the confused shouts of his horsemen. "AH! MY MEN HAVE RETURNED, SOON THEY WILL BRING YOUR CAPTAIN TO ME AND YOU WILL WATCH HIM DIE..... VERY SLOWLY!"

"MASTER! OUR MEN RETURN IN PANIC AND EVEN NOW THE ENEMY IS STORMING OUR GATES AND THE STABLES ARE IN FLAMES!"

"THE VULTURE" SPRINGS UP AND CALLS FOR HIS ARMS. THE COURTYARD IS A SCENE OF WILD DISORDER. THE STABLES ARE BURNING AND HORSES DASH ABOUT IN FEAR. ON THE OPPOSITE PARAPET ARN AND HIS SMALL FORCE ARE HACKING THEIR WAY TO THE GATE TOWER.

HE CALLS TO HIS ARCHERS AND SOON ARN'S MEN ARE SUBJECTED TO A STINGING HAIL OF ARROWS. A SHIELD-WALL IS FORMED AND ARN CALLS TO HIS FATHER BELOW: "SCALE THE WALL WITH THE BOARDING PIKES, WE WILL PROVIDE COVER WITH OUR SHIELDS!"

LESS THAN HALF AN HOUR HAS PASSED SINCE THE FIGHTING BEGAN, AND NOW PRINCE VALIANT LEADS THE WAY OVER THE PALACE WALL.

BRIEF BUT BITTER FIGHTING WINS THE GATE TOWER. THE GATES ARE FLUNG OPEN AND THE REST OF THE TROOPS COME STORMING INTO THE COURTYARD. NEVER HAS "THE SINGING SWORD" FLASHED WITH SUCH DEADLY EFFECT, FOR A GREAT FEAR LEADS TO VAL'S ARM. SOMEWHERE WITHIN THE PALACE ALETA IS IN PERIL OF EL MULUK'S REVENGE.

Introducing new Drive: The Hungry Detergent.

Eats the stains other detergents won't touch.

Menu

APPETIZERS: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Egg stains Orange Juice stains 	DESSERTS: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Grass stains Beet stains Ketchup stains
MAIN COURSE: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Blood stains Meat stains Baby food stains Gravy stains 	BEVERAGES: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Chocolate milk stains Tea stains Coffee stains

Drive eats stains. Other detergents you may have used don't do that. Drive works better because Drive has a new, a different ingredient: a professional stain remover. It is the same kind of stain remover professional laundries use on the worst stains. In Drive, this professional stain remover is called En-Zolve. Hungry En-Zolve is in Drive's blue crystals. New Drive with En-Zolve eats, consumes, devours stains. Tea stains. Grass stains. Yes, even blood stains. But unlike bleach, Drive is absolutely safe for washable fabrics, washable colors. Think of it, Drive adds a professional stain remover to the most powerful detergent you can buy. That is why it's the hungry detergent. It's hungry for stains. You don't need expensive additives. All you need is Drive. Drive can get your whole wash so clean it's spotless.

(The Hungry Detergent)
It can get your whole wash so clean it's spotless.
