Unconditional Surrender Signed

Nigeria Consulting 'Friendly' Governments On Requests

By MORT ROSENBLUM
Associated Press Writer

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The leader of conquered Biafra signed an unconditional surrender today and pledged his support for a united Nigeria.

Maj. Gen. Philip Effiong signed the document formally ending Biafra's 32-month secession and then embraced Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, leader of Nigeria. Effiong took over Biafra's leadership over the weekend after Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, who had led the secessionist province since the start, fled the territory.

The Nigerian government had rejected aid from four white governments and all private agencies that helped Biafra. But it said it is consulting "a number of friendly governments for immediate requests for relief."

The ban affects the governments of France, Portugal, Rhodesia, and South Africa as well as such groups as Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief agency; Joint Church Aid, grouping a number of agencies; Canaire-lief of Canada and the French and Nordic Red Cross.

The government said nothing about the four black African governments that recognized Biafra as an independent state: Zambia, Tanzania, Gabon and the Ivory Coast.

The government also put the persona non grata tag on "all foreign relief workers who operated illegally in the secessionist enclave" and said they would not be permitted in Nigeria. Presumably this means expulsion for those still in what was Biafra.

Lord Hunt, who headed the British team that conquered Mt. Everest, arrived in Lagos today with a committee to work out plans for British relief. His government has allocated $12 million for aid and 10 tons of relief supplies are waiting in London for airlift to Nigeria. The Nigerians first refused to allow them to be brought in on military planes, then submitted a request for extra medical supplies to be included in a civilian airlift.

The U.S. State Department announced that Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the Nigerian chief of state, told a U.S. envoy that the Nigerian government will not hesitate to call on the United States for assistance. The department said the Nigerian leader expressed warm appreciation to the U.S. diplomat, Assistant Secretary of State David Newsom, for the aid offered by the United States.

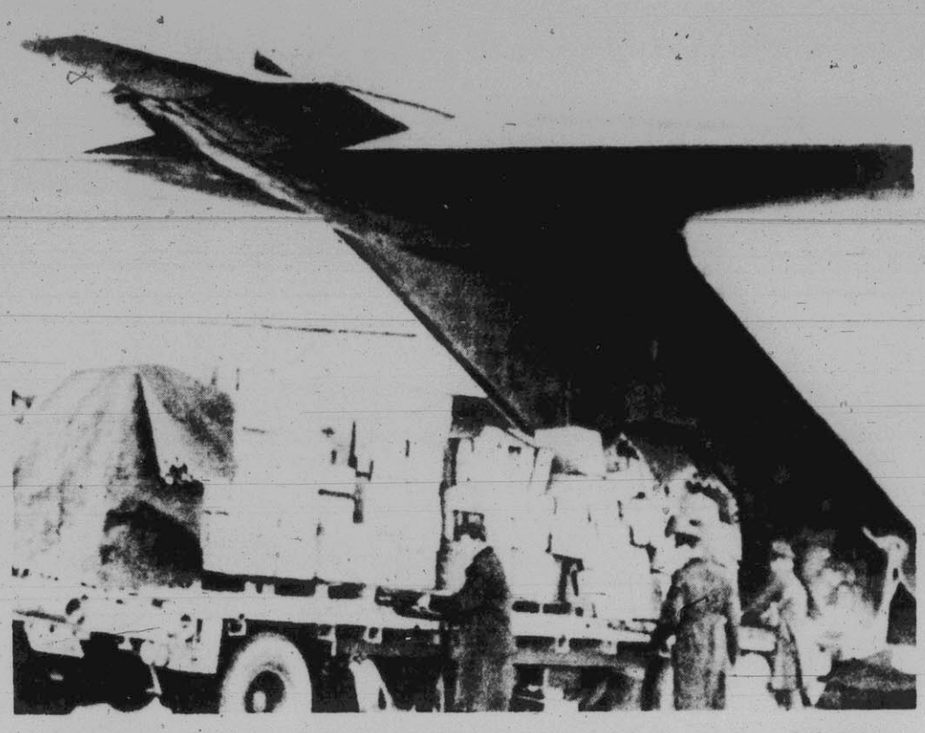

"There is no problem of delay or refusal to accept relief," said one official in Washington. "It is just a question of working out practical detail."

The official said enough food is on hand in what was Biafra to feed the population for more than a month. The problem now, he said, is to find out how many people need relief and how to reach them.

He added that transportation and medicine rather than food are most needed at this point.

A Red Cross official in Lagos said that trucks and ships—not planes—are needed to get relief supplies to the refugees. P. C. Stanissis, liaison delegate of the League of Red Cross Societies, cabled Geneva that 60 trucks, 40 Land Rovers and maritime transport including a small ship of 500-700 tons are urgently needed.

He estimated that about 1.5 million refugees "in need of full food ration" will emerge from the bush.

Declares Women Racing Lab Animals On Safety

By H. L. SCHWARTZ III
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A noted birth control specialist said today women are in a grim race with laboratory animals to determine the safety of the pill.

"The ultimate outcome of this race between dogs, monkeys and women can be anticipated by informed observers only with great apprehension and concern," Dr. Roy Hertz told the Senate monopoly subcommittee.

Hertz is chairman of the cancer task force of a Federal Food and Drug Administration advisory panel that twice has reported on the growing number of suspected hazards in taking oral contraceptives.

Testifying on the second day of hearings into the safety of oral contraceptives, Hertz said it might take years to confirm suspected links between the pill and cancer of the breast and uterus.

But he said it would be a "rare circumstance indeed" that would cause him to prescribe most current pills.

Hertz said much early testing of the pill had been misinterpreted. He blamed fear of the population explosion and drug industry pressure for creating a worldwide enthusiasm that hampers "truly comprehensive and objective evaluation of its merits and demerits."

Although Hertz made only passing reference to the drug industry, another witness blamed the drug makers for dispensing "untruthful and dangerous advice."

Dr. Edmond Kassouf, identified by subcommittee spokesmen as one of the first American practitioners to suspect serious side effects from the pill, said pamphlets given consumers failed to take note of studies definitely linking oral contraceptives to fatal blood clotting and other disorders.

Kassouf also accused the American Medical Association of having a "puzzling" record on birth control pills, refusing to publish or take note of some critical reports.

In testifying on the risk of cancer, Hertz singled out the widely used synthetic female hormone estrogen and said the overwhelming mass of studies had showed it caused cancer in mice, rats, rabbits, hamsters and dogs.

"It is also to be noted that all chemicals known to produce tumors in man such as aniline dyes, arsenic, coal tar and thorium also produce tumors in experimental animals and frequently in the same site," Hertz said.

Estrogen, virtually abandoned in Britain after a recent report linked it directly to fatal blood clotting, is used in about half the birth control pills prescribed for the estimated 8.5 million American users.

'Dismayed' By Court Orders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

School officials have reacted with dismay to a U. S. Supreme Court ruling which ordered the desegregation of public schools in 14 districts of five Southern states by Feb. 1.

"Physically speaking, I think it is an almost impossible Task," said Supt. M. Ney Williams of East Feliciana Parish, La., one of the districts involved.

The decision, handed down by the court Wednesday on a 6-2 vote, reversed a ruling last Dec. 1 by the 5th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, which gave the districts until Sept. 1 to desegregate.

"I don't know how we are going to do it in less than three weeks," Williams said.

Bessemer County, Ala., School Supt. William F. Clark said he had "no earthly idea how the school system can completely mix by Feb. 1."

In Marshall County, Miss., Supt. Stanley Malliken Sr. said his district could make the changes in time, "but it's going to tear up almost all phases of our school program." He said he thought the public school system "will be all black, except in one area of the county."

A crowd estimated by police at more than 1,000 marched on the home of U. S. Dist. Judge W. A. Bootle in Macon, Ga., Wednesday night, carrying a petition asking for the preservation of neighboorhood schools and freedom of choice integration plans.

Two representatives of the group were admitted to the judge's home. Bootle told them he will read and consider the petition along with four other Bibb County school plans that have been filed in his court.

Four hundred Bibb County teachers have been ordered to transfer by Feb. 26, but officials say these teachers will have to be given new transfer orders because the Supreme Court decision will mean more extensive desegregation.

The districts involved in Wednesday's ruling are Marshall County and the Jackson and Holly Springs municipal districts in Mississippi; Jefferson, Bessemer and Mobile counties, Ala.; Burke, Bibb and Houston Counties, Ga.; Bay and Alachua counties, Fla., and West Feliciana, East Felicana and Concordia parishes, La.

About 300,000 students are affected.

A source at the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the Feb. 1 date also will apply to 17 more districts which had previously been told they would be subject to whatever order the Supreme Court issued in the 14-district case.

Mark Birthday Of Boardwalk

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — This resort city kicks off the 100th birthday year of the boardwalk with a banquet Saturday night at Convention Hall.

All year long the city will present special events to draw attention to the four and one-eighth mile oceanfront wooden way.

Railroad conductor Alexander Boardman and innkeeper Jacob Keim sparked the idea for the boardwalk.

Boardman was tired of passengers carrying sand onto his trains in their shoes. Keim was fed up with stepping off the front porch of his inn onto the sands and into the water when the tide rolled in.

Nixon Works On Messages

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — With only one week before his State of the Union message, President Nixon was at Camp David today to work on that address and the final shape of his proposed federal budget.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon will return to Washington Saturday in time for a White House dinner honoring William McC. Martin Jr., the retiring chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Before the President left Washington it was disclosed he had ordered further substantial last-minute cuts in his forthcoming budget. The action indicated the budget probably will not be ready for presentation to Congress before early February.

Calls On World To Aid Biafrans

GENEVA (AP) — Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu charged today Nigeria seeks to draw an iron curtain around conquered Biafra in order to carry out genocide. He appealed for a neutral force to prevent it.

"The sole motive behind Nigeria's determination to draw an iron curtain over Biafra and exclude international observers, relief agencies, journalists ... is to make sure that the atrocities they will certainly carry out in Biafra is unseen and unreported in the world press," the former Biafran leader said from a secret hideout.

"I repeat the aims of Nigeria are genocidal—the test that the contrary is the case would be her willingness to admit humanitarian agencies whom Gowon has now openly declared he will exclude."

Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon is Nigeria's leader.

Ojukwu also appealed for the world to help Biafrans whom he described as starving and exhausted after an unsuccessful fight for independence from Nigeria.

"I implore the world to rise to this desperate need, to mount all possible pressures on Nigeria to insure that food gets to my people," Ojukwu said in a statement distributed by Markpress in Geneva.

Markpress, public relations consultant acting as Biafra's overseas press service, said it got the statement "directly from Gen. Ojukwu."

It said it was under strict instructions not to reveal the general's whereabouts. It added, however, it obtained the statement from the Biafran mission in Lisbon, Portugal.

Markpress has received all communications from Biafra through the Lisbon mission.

Ojukwu said: "I appeal to all governments and international organizations, countries and churches of the world, men and women of good will, to both our friends and enemies ... to come forward to assist and protect the lives and talents of Biafra."

Suspect Sabotage After Destruction At Atomic Facility

By JOHN S. LANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Destruction of equipment at a major Atomic Energy Commission plant in Colorado has raised suspicions of sabotage and prompted an intensive, round-the-clock investigation by federal agents, according to government informants.

The AEC confirmed there recently had been "a few instances of damage to government property" and equipment at the Rocky Flats, Colo., facility, but refused to characterize the incidents as sabotage "because we are still investigating."

The plant, the only one in the country which processes plutonium for nuclear warheads, was crippled by a $45 million fire last May 11.

A special AEC committee investigated the fire and concluded it was caused by spontaneous combustion. One source said the new probe has yet to establish that the fire was not sparked by natural causes.

"But two months after the fire," he added, "a series of things began to break out, not serious but troublesome things, very troublesome. And somebody's got to be doing it."

This source would not describe the incidents more fully, saying only that they occurred in such a way as to indicate sabotage was involved.

AEC officials have acknowledged that production of some types of nuclear warhead components for U.S. missiles was halted by the fire.

But the agency said all production deadlines can be met if the plant can be made operational by April. Congress has allocated $45 million for the repairs.

School Bus Driver Fired And Charged

Two more students were arrested and six more temporarily suspended at Rose High School yesterday as efforts continue to control the tense situation prevailing at the senior high school this week.

James Lewis Cox, 18 year old Negro, was arrested late Wednesday afternoon, charged with assault with a deadly weapon. The warrant, signed by Thomas E. Gleming, charges Cox with using the school bus he was driving as a weapon. Fleming charged he "was brushed by ths bus."

Bond in the amount of $300 was posted for Cox.

Sammy Crystal Perkins, a 16 year old Negro was charged with trespassing. He had been told to leave the campus, and was arrested when he feailed to leave. He has been placed under $100 bond.

A warrant has been signed by Negro student Jesse Lee Daniels, Jr., charging Mrs. Olgia Dawkins, a Negro teacher at Rose High, with assault. The warrant has not yet been served against Mrs. Dawkins. Police indicated it will probably be served at the end of the school day today.

William Earl Garrett, who had been placed in jail Tuesday on charges of disorderly conduct, has been released under a $200 bond.

Rose principal Glenn Cox revealed that six students were suspended from school Wednesday, four Negro male students and two white male students. These are in addition to the 10 students suspended earlier.

"These suspensions are not in connection with the disturbance Monday," Cox stated, "but result from misconduct on the part of these students. This is a part of our process of tightening up discipline, and is in accordance with the policy we discussed at the staff meeting Monday."

Dr. Cleetwood confirmed that police have been on duty in Mrs. Dawkins' classroom. The first warrant issued as the result of Monday's disturbances was one signed by Mrs. Dawkins charging a Negro girl with assault and disorderly conduct.

Attendance showed a sharp drop today as school officials

About 1,600 Persons Aboard Luxury Liner In Quarantine

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — About 1,600 persons in voluntary quarantine aboard a luxury ocean liner face at least two more days in port while health authorities seek the source of typhoid fever which struck six crewmen.

Three hundred others who had been scheduled to leave from Vancouver on the SS Oransay have not been allowed aboard. P&O Lines is providing quarters for them on Oronsay's sister ship SS Oriana.

Doctors reported that tests showed food and drink aboard the Oronsay to be free of typhoid, a highly contagious disease usually transmitted through food or water.

Four crewmen were hospitalized in San Francisco and two others in Los Angeles, all with confirmed cases of typhoid. Seventeen other crewmen and one passenger were hospitalized here Wednesday, but none was confirmed as having the disease.

Capt. John Wacher said about 1,000 passengers and about 600 crewmen remained aboard today. He said 700 passengers and 600 crewmen had been inoculated since the disease first was suspected last Friday at Los Angeles. Others aboard had been inoculated within the past year and did not need new inoculations, he said.

The captain said there had been no alarm among the passengers.

The Oronsay's voyagers agreed to remain aboard at the ship company's request. Health authorities here explained quarantine is not required for typhoid under international sanitary regulations.

Typhoid can be passed by a carrier, a person who has had the disease whether he knows it or not.

Dr. G. A. Mott, Vancouver deputy health officer, said his department was testing crew members, seeking a carrier who is "probably a food handler."

The Oronsay sailed from London Dec. 16 on a four-month world cruise and stopped at Caribbean points before traveling through the Panama Canal and thence to the two California ports and Vancouver. It was to have left here Wednesday after a stopover of less than 24 hours.

Deferment Only For Medical Students?

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only medical students will be eligible for college deferments under the Nixon administration proposals to eliminate draft inequities.

After a specified date, no other student entering college can claim a draft deferment on the basis of education.

However, a sophomore, junior, or senior with an existing draft deferment when the new rules go into effect will be permitted to complete his undergraduate schooling.

This is the thinking of Pentagon officials who have been shaping the Administration's proposals to do away with draft deferments in the student, occupational, and parental categories.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said last weekend President Nixon "wants to move in the direction so that all young people are treated equally and fairly."

Proposed measures to carry out this objective will be reviewed by the National Security Council and laid before the Senate Armed Services Committee next month with indications the administration will put them into effect as soon as possible.

Just when this will be is still uncertain.

Officials said young men having occupational and parental deferments at the time the more stringent rules take hold will be allowed to retain them.

But, as in the case of student deferments, no new ones will be granted.

Unlike the student deferment, which officials say will permit exceptions for pre-medical students, there appears to be no prospect of any further deferments for job or family reasons, except where hardship might be involved.

Job deferments have been heavy in the field of teaching, police, and fire department work.

Authorities expect community needs can be filled adequately by former servicemen and no special deferments will be required in these areas.

The same reasoning applies to hard skill jobs in the mechanical and technical fields, it was said.

As the United States scales down its committment in Vietnam and simultaneously reduces the overall size of the armed forces, fewer and fewer young men will be required for the draft. The Pentagon expects the draft will take about 225,000 young men this year, a drop of 65,000 from 1969. The level should go down even further in 1971.

Some Pentagon experts believe the virtual elimination of student deferments may indirectly help the flagging ROTC program with some students possibly enrolling as a hedge against the draft interrupting their schooling.

Credit Women Hear Speaker

Charles Camp was guest speaker at the meeting of Greenville Credit Women International held Tuesday night.

Manager of General Electric Credit Corp., Camp spoke on "Installment Credit." He pointed out that credit was started when the Pilgrims came to this country. They obtained a sever-year loan, but it took them 25 years to repay it.

Camp also noted that General Motors Acceptance Corp. is the largest sales finance company in the world, Sears Roebuck is fourth and G. E. Credit is eighth.

Mrs. Pearl Hartsell, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Ruby Grimsley, of Atlantic Discount, was welcomed into the club as a new member.

Very Old, Very New Furniture Featured At Show

By DOROTHY HEESAKKER

CHICAGO (UPI)—Extremes of the very old and the very new are set for the January home furnishings show here.

Phyllis Mandel, one of the exhibitors, is arranging her showroom in that fashion for the buyers.

"It's the newest development in the industry, this blend of the very old and very new," said Mrs. Mandel, owner of Chippendale's decorator showroom.

"This new mixture can give a warm, friendly atmosphere which makes people feel good about bringing customers here. And it can create the same comfortable feeling in any home."

The exhibit area contains 14 bays and Mrs. Mandel gives each one a different look. "Just as anybody would give a different look to each room in her house," she explained.

One-third of the bays will have the old world look; another third, a contemporary, new atmosphere; and the remainder, a blend of both.

To give the furniture that "in your own home" air Mrs. Mandel adds many props, some furnished by the makers of the furniture on display.

Castle Furniture of The Netherlands sent tiles, paintings and pewter pieces along with its rustic oak furniture, styled in the Rembrandt fashion with modified modern touches.

The Holland-made furniture features Old World deep arvings in simple design of fine, mostly handmade construction. Some of the pieces have insets of handblown glass, others of handpainted Delft tiles.

Another phase of the old and new look, Mrs. Mandel says, is the mixture of wood and iron. Woodiron, Inc., whose products she shows, electrically bonds the iron to the wood, then puts the iron into an acid dip and the design is embedded in the iron to get the antique look.

One of the "newest" things in the furnishing industry, Mrs. Mandel says, is the versatile loose-laid and interchangeable carpet squares. She uses many patterns, colors and textures on the display room floors to show off the squares in family and dining rooms and entertainment areas.

For 19 years Mrs. Mandel was a wife and mother and then "just fell" into the furniture business as a career, she says. When her cousin, who founded Chippendale's, wanted to retire she agreed to try to run it for three months.

She had learned a bit about the manufacturing business from her father. Her husband, Sherman, a dealer in industrial cotton goods, encouraged her in the new job. She has operated Chippendale's, a showroom for nine factories, for two years.

Plastic items are rapidly taking over American homes. And not only are plastic silverware containers, water pitchers, glasses, trays, ketchup and mustard containers taking over private kitchens, they're also being used in increasing numbers in restaurants, hospitals, and other institutions.

Family Portrait Gallery Suggested

NEW YORK (UPI)—Turn that blank wall in den, family or living room into a family portrait gallery.

That's a suggestion from the Professional Photographers of America (PP of A).

"A wall of family photographs, tracing the family's history, makes an extremely attractive and interesting decorative device," says Bill Bell, of Albuquerque, N.M., chairman of the PP of A's portrait division.

"It also provides the family with a strong link to its past and gives the children a real sense of belonging."

To come up with the necessary photographs for your family gallery, some careful — and often fascinating —research may be involved. Photographs of older family members often are kept in unusual places, quite apart from the traditional family album.

Family Bibles are a favorite hiding place for photographs as well as birth certificates, marriage licenses and other treasured family records.

Often an ancestor's photograph has been found tucked into a favorite book on a library shelf. And tragically, old pictures that could be treasures have been thrown into files of other family papers and records and are damaged.

"Even though a photograph is damaged," said Bell, "all is not lost. Your family photographer can either restore the photo or knows of a reliable studio where this work can be done."

In assembling the gallery, don't overlook present family members. A current family portrait, in color, is an interesting and compelling finishing touch.

The clothes, background and pose of the family members, however, should be consistent with the setting in which the pictures will be displayed.

An informal pose and casual clothing usually are desirable for a more informal room like a den. A living room gallery calls for dress-up clothes and a more formal sitting.

How Should She Plan Wedding?

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I have recently become engaged and am in the process of planning my wedding. A problem has arisen about which my mother and I disagree. Let me explain the background:

When I was 16 I got into trouble. The boy ran out on me, but I kept the baby, and with the help of my wonderful family I raised the child. [She is now nearly 5.]

Abby, I want to have the kind of wedding every girl dreams about. My fiance says that he is with me all the way. I want a wedding gown and veil, and bridesmaids and organ music, and I even want my daughter to be my flower girl. It's not like nobody knows about what happened to me, Abby. All my friends and relatives know, and so do his. My mother said it isn't "right." Please help me make up my mind. I know that a wedding gown and veil is supposed to be for a first wedding only, but even tho I am a mother, this IS my first wedding. Would it be so wrong?

WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: If you want to have your "dream wedding" and your fiance is "with you all the way," then I vote with you.

However, instead of a stark white gown and veil, I suggest off-white, ivory, or a pale pastel. And please don't think me unkind, but having your daughter for your flower girl would undoubtedly call attention to that part of your life which I think is better deemphasized on your wedding day. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this question is too dumb to answer.

Why are famous women always referred to as "MISS"—regardless of whether they are married or single?

For instance, you are called, "MISS ABIGAIL VAN BUREN." I know that's not your real name, but since you are married and have grown children, why aren't you called "MRS. VAN BUREN?"

Also, when Judy Garland died, they were calling her "MISS GARLAND" until the end, and she had been married several times and had children, too. So why wasn't she called "MRS. GARLAND?" DON'T GET IT

DEAR DON'T: Yours is not a "dumb" question. It's a very intelligent one. When a woman takes a pseudonym [pen name] for professional reasons, she is always known as "MISS" regardless of her marital status. [This would have been a good question for Miss Amy Vanderbilt, who is also a "Mrs."]

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is quite a talented young artist. She's not "great," but there is a local demand for her paintings, and she has done quite well.

Recently an aunt [my sister] expressed a desire for one of her paintings, so my daughter spent several weeks painting a special picture for this aunt's birthday—as a surprise.

When the gift was presented, the aunt had nothing but criticism for it. "This was wrong, that wasn't right, and the colors weren't good, etc."

My daughter listened to all the criticism, then picked up the painting and said, "If you want a photograph, I'll buy you a camera." My sister was indignant, to say the least.

My daughter sold the painting for $150. The aunt is now threatening to see a lawyer. She says that painting was HERS, and my daughter had no right to sell it. Has my sister a chance to get the painting?

IN THE MIDDLE IN HOUSTON

DEAR IN: I would say that by clear implication, the painting was offered and rejected, so the painting was not your sister's until your daughter had given it to her. However, if this case ever gets to court, anything can happen. [P. S. One thing is certain, your sister will never make the diplomatic corps.]

CONFIDENTIAL TO VIRGO: It is time to take stock of your company. Those who sleep with dogs, wake up with fleas. [Or worse!]

Grandmother Tackles Tough Supervision Job In Capital City

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

LIMA, Peru (UPI)—A young-looking grandmother has tackled one of Lima's touchest jobs—supervision of city-run food markets. About 30 serve this capital of 12,772,000 population, in addition to privately-run markets, supermarkets and bodegas (independent groceries).

Maruja de Carnera Checa got the assignment as one of the first four women members of the central Municipal Council She said in an interview that she's trying to clean up the markets and hold prices at reaxonable levels.

It's asking a lot in a city where many are so poor they can afford to buy food only in single units, such as one egg or one oragne at a time.

Stall keepers also live precariously, the councilwoman added. That's why business is allowed to continue, even in markets undergoing almost total reconstruction.

An exclusive interview with Mrs. Carnera Checa took place during a trip to Peru with other United States newsmen and women as guests of Improtur, S. A., a Peruvian subsidiary of Braniff International. The trip was made for the official opening of Tambo de Oro, a restaurant and international gift market in downtown Lima.

As Mrs. Carnera Checa talked, we visited the 68-year-old Mercado de la Aurora, which she called one of the city's worst. Workmen were replacing old, cracked concrete floors with marble tiles, decaying wood counters with ceramic tiles, and painting grimy walls and ceilings.

The project also calls for replacing wooden water and sewer pipes with cement ones and substituting individual garbage cans at each stall for larger common ones now in use. Garbage will be hauled away in covered containers instead of open trucks that spill part of their load in the streets.

Mrs. Carnera Checa said doors and open spaces in ceilings would be screened to keep out flies.

Progress at this early stage is hard to evaluate. Mrs. Carnera Checa was elected to the council in 1966, and the market project was launched two years later, over what she said were objections from the mayor and other members of the council.

She added that the council so far has provided 3,000,000 soloes (about $71,000) and stall keepers have matched that sum.

Food prices are established by the minister of agriculture. They are posted daily in all markets, which serve both retail and wholesale customers.

Goods and services we take for granted in the United States have just begun to appear in the city-run markets. White paper and plastic bags only gradually are replacing newsprint as wrappings for raw foodstuffs. The small ones are free; large ones sell for one sole (slightly over 2 cents). Food that needs no wrapping goes into a customer's wicker or straw basket or shopping bag.

No reforms instituted so far resulted from popular demand, said the councilwoman, wife of a prominent Communist journalist. In fact, she insisted, no one had complained about the markets' condition.

Hard to believe, until you realize that the poor probably are so used to substandard conditions that they think it's useless to complain, and the well-to-do never see the markets because their maids or cooks do the shopping.

Mrs. Carnera Checa said United States-style supermarkets—one now in each section of Lima—at first lured away some customers. But she said she expects them to return as the markets are upgraded.

Still Considerable Way To Go

With all that has transpired at Rose High School in the past few days, it is obvious that Greenville has considerable ways to go in achieving understanding between races and groups.

When students fight one another, when teachers are assaulted, when factions develop among students and when police are needed to prevent mayhem in the schools it is time for every citizen in the community to study his own attitudes and to ask himself what he can do to restore harmony.

It is true that the high school students have found themselves in a new situation this year, with Rose and Eppes consolidated. We suspect that it also may be true that some outside forces are agitating the situation at the local high school.

Yet none of us can write off the situation there as solely a school problem. We cannot blame it only on blacks or on whites or on school authorities. What we have here is a failure of the entire community in the field of human relations. Somehow all citizens of good will have lost control of the situation.

There are always a small percentage of students in any school who want trouble and there are always people in any community who search for opportunities to create disruption. However, these elements are generally kept in check by the great majority of responsible people in the community. Here, the irresponsible are exerting a measure of control. Now it is up to responsible citizens to overrule this irresponsible element.

This is going to require the efforts of everyone, since the schools so much reflect the attitudes of the community. Men and women of good will are going to have to strengthen the lines of communication between the races. Leaders of both races are going to have to support school authorities as they take strong action to bring dissidents under control in the schools. The City Council must take the lead in the human relations field (perhaps a full time counselor employed by the city is the answer here).

Regrettably we have reached the point where firm action is needed against troublemakers; yet at the same time bridges of understanding must be rebuilt between races. Admittedly this is more difficult than maintaining the good will we once had, but that is the way it is. Greenville has reached the crisis stage in human relations. Now we must find ways to restore peace at Rose High through the efforts of everyone in the community.

Concept Of Greenville As A Park Is Enticing

Dr. Ralph Steele's concept of all Greenville being a park is one that is enticing to local citizens.

Dr. Steele is a member of the Recreation Commission and he discussed such a possibility at a recent meeting.

Citing the city's rapid growth, he maintained now is the time to begin doing something about beautification.

"Beauty is only part of the reason for such a program," he said. "There are many practical aspects. Greenery absorbs impurities in the air and helps keep temperatures down in the summer."

Greenville, with much growth ahead, has ample examples in larger cities of what can happen if parks and beautification projects are not begun early.

Now is the time to see that park areas are preserved.

Gene Simmons No Defeatist

RALEIGH — Gene Simmons is not -emphatically not -among those who feel that the Democratic party in North Carolina is leaderless and lacking in qualified candidates for state offices, top to bottom.

Neither is Gov. Bob Scott who by reason of his office is the top executive and political officer of the state and who selected Simmons to become chairman of the Democratic Executives committee. Simmons was elected Tuesday.

There's nothing to be defeatist—minded about, says Simmons in describing the present health of the majority party.

WILLIAM SHIRES

Despite what some have said, it's not "sick" says Simmons.

Healthy — Simmons, Scott and the outgoing party chairman Jimmy V. Johnson insist that the party is as strong and healthy as ever.

The "sick" label was attributed to Johnson a couple of months ago. He said the quotation was taken out of context. He meant to say that there were weaknesses which needed to be corrected. Now some changes are very much in evidence.

In Simmons' opinion it is a matter of asking loyal Democrats to go to work on behalf of a united party program, of working together.

He feels the basic strength is there and that the only real problem is to pull this tremendous political force together.

Changes — Governor Scott studied the report of a special party study commission carefully and said its recommendations were "sound and progressive." In almost every instance the state executive committee went along and approved the changes.

One recommendation which was rejected was that to limit party precinct chairman to two terms. Opposition to this is rooted in local political affairs. Party veterans with experience in handling political affairs in their bailiwicks are reluctant to give up such a position. Even thought it is non-paying, it carries a certain amount of power and prestige—especially if the vote results are in his favor.

There were no radical changes in party organization by but Scott said he felt those which were adopted would provide for "substantial improvements."

Jails — Jails in four North Carolina counties are being closed effective immediately under provisions of a law which gives the commissioner of Social Services (Welfare) authority to shut down those which do not meet minimum standards.

Each of the jails closed by order of commissioner Clifton M. Craig is more than a half century old.

The jail in Davie County was built 61 years ago. The one in Burke County 60 years ago and that in Avery County 58 years ago—the year Avery County was established by an act of the legislature. Craig issued orders closing the Columbus County jail last October.

Craig said he has taken the action on the basis of reports that the jail facilities are in such deplorable condition they cannot be renovated and must be replaced.

Andrews — Rep. Ike Andrews of Chatham County has been mentioned for but has never actively sought to get in line for nomination for Speaker of the House. In fact, Andrews dislike the procedure by which House Speakers are chosen more than two years in advance of the session.

Sources close to the Chatham County legislator say he is not interested in that sort of campaigning for the speakership. But, he may be quite interested in a statewide campaign for the lieutenant governorship.

Oil Men Turn To Mitchell

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The hard political fact that President Nixon has no intention of radically driving down consumer oil prices became clear last month when Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell put in a surprising—and highly significant—appearance at one of the last meetings of the Presidential task force on oil imports.

Mitchell is not a member of the task force and had not attended previous meetings even as an observer. But his representative at the meetings—Richard W. McLaren, Assistant Attorney General for anti-trust—had strongly made his presence felt. An old-fashioned Republican trust-buster in the Teddy Roosevelt tradition, McLaren vehemently opposed oil import quotas on principle. Any oil industry subsidy, he reasoned, should come directly from the Treasury, not indirectly from the consumer's pocket.

Outraged by McLaren and fearful that the task force would recommend dramatically increased imports (and hence lower prices), oil moguls appealed to McLaren's boss, Mitchell. The result was Mitchell's surprise appearance at the early December task force meeting.

Mitchell, the Cabinet's strong and silent man, was characteristically laconic. In contrast to McLaren's boldness, Mitchell urged extreme caution. "Don't put the President in the box," he said cryptically.

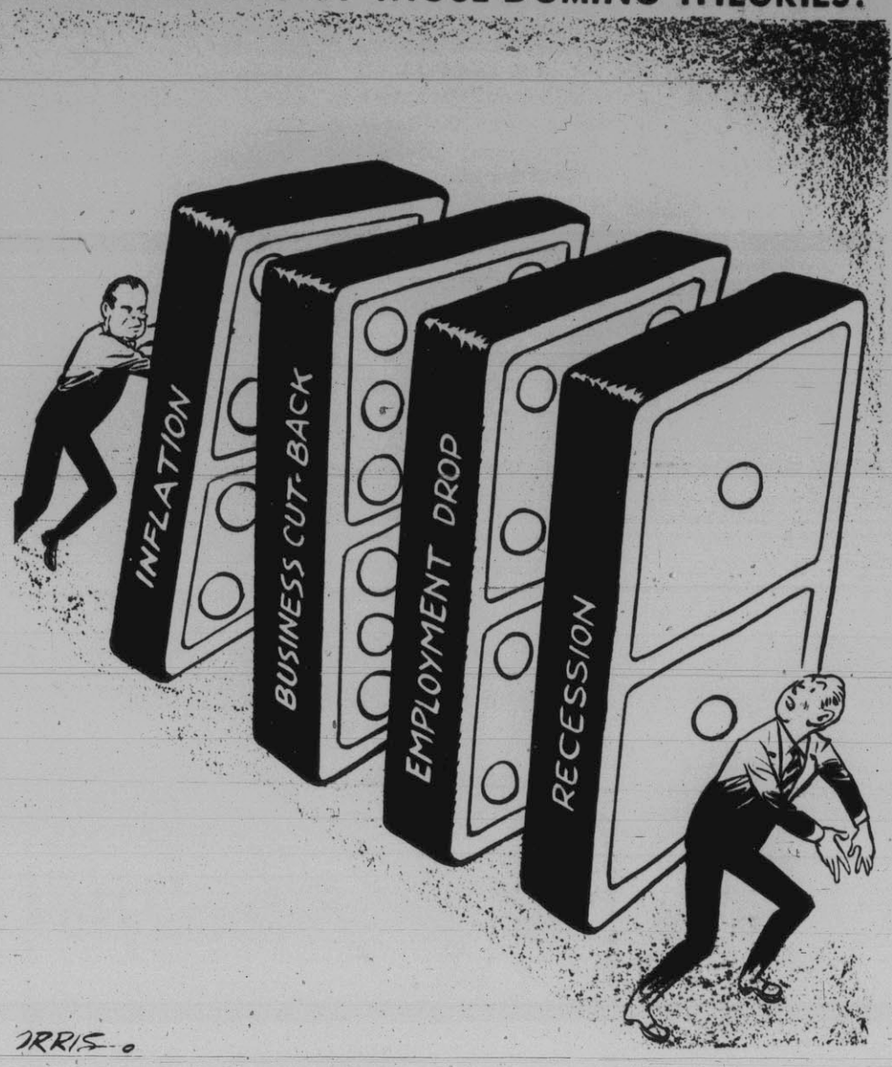

Mitchell carefully did not press specific recommendations on the task force. But to a man, those present put this interpretation on his remarks. Don't go overboard on a radical oil import policy that would force Mr. Nixon either to repudiate his own task force or alienate his longtime political supporters in the oil industry. Nor was there much doubt that Mitchell's brief appearance bad undercut all chance that the task force chairman, Secretary of Labor George Shultz, could push through a pro-consumer recommendation.

Soon thereafter, the task force sent the White House a still secret report now awaiting Presidential approval. By admitting slightly high oil imports, the report is not everything oil producers anticipated when they generously supported Mr. Nixon for President. The two most vigorous oil partisans on the task force, Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel and Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, have actually sent dissenting reports to the White House.

Nevertheless, oil lobbyists can breathe a sigh of relief, considering their apprehensions of last summer. At that time, the non-political professional staff of the task force talked about junking the present quota system in favor of a low tariff to reduce oil prices drastically. Staff economists then con-

ANOTHER ONE OF THOSE DOMINO THEORIES?

Belated Disenchantment

President Nixon served up his welfare proposals last August, wrapped in a package of pretty rhetoric and tied with a bow of conservative blue. Sad to say, some of us who should have known better were fairly swept off our feet. I hereby repent.

This confession is prompted in part by an excellent analysis of the Nixon proposals just published by the American Conservative Union. Even before the A.C.U. came along, however, the pretty package had lost its allure. It simply is not true, as I supposed back in August, that nothing could be worse than the welfare mess we have now. The Nixon plan would be worse.

What is the most serious criticism that is made of the present system? It is that it cultivates an attitude of permanent dependency upon the welfare state. As the A. C. U. report makes clear, this attitude itself is a pervasion of the concept that held public acceptance for so many generations. The ancient wisdom looked upon welfare payments as a means of helping poor persons who were temporarily in need. Now welfare benefits are viewed as a way of life; and any suggestion that a recipient ought to struggle to get off the dole is seen as a downright insult.

Mr. Nixon's plan would merely compound this situation. His principal proposal calls for abandonment of the present program of "Aid to Families of Dependent Children, financed entirely from the Federal Treasury. Under his formula, a family having no other outside income, would be entitled to payments of $500 a year for each adult and $300 for each child — $1,600 for a family of four, $2,200 for a family of six, and so on.

This would provide a minimum floor. The States could supplement these payments if they wished. The poor family with some earned income could qualify for public payments, on a diminishing scale, until its outside income reached a point in excess of the "poverty" level.

In his original presentation, which seemed so enchanting at the time, the President bore down heavily on the idea of "workfare" instead of "welfare." One of his conditions was that able-bodied recipients would have to accept suitable jobs, or undergo job training, in order to stay on the roll.

Well, forgive my disenchantment. Of the 9.6 million persons currently receiving welfare benefits, 4.8 million are children and another 1.5 million are mothers of preschool children. Take away 2 million aged persons, 728,000 disabled persons, and 80,000 blind — all of them exempt

Retesting Drivers

(Jacksonville Daily News)

Despite our love affair with the contraption, Americans are still something less than completely at home or in perfect control of the automobile.

Poliferation and pollution are, of course, the most obvious and pressing problems that currently make autos something more, or less, than merely beautifully styled conveniences.

But even in such an apparently routine area as keeping track of vehicles and drivers, procedures developed during almost three-quarters of a century of experience still leave something to be desired.

Driver testing has long been standard operating procedure throughout the country. All states now require some type of examination for applicants for first lecenses — written or oral tests, road tests, always eye checks and sometimes additional physical examination.

Variations occur from state to state in requirements and thoroughness of application, but the general pattern is one of conscientious supervision of first licensees.

It is another story, however, when it comes to renewing licenses. The pattern revealed by a National Safety Council survey is one of widely differing practices and all too often almost complete indifference to how well health and judgment continue to measure up to the requirements of safe and responsible driving.

For example, only two states (Illinois and Virginia) automatically repeat road testing for renewals. In another eight it is optional, with an examiner deciding. In 15 states, a written test is repeated.

The states are somewhat more attentive to the state of driver health with 32 requiring new vision tests (but only three—California, Florida and Washington — bother to check for hearing for even a first license). And 11 states and the District of Columbia recognize age as an important safety factor by requiring full retesting before renewals starting at ages ranging from 57 to 75.

Many untrustworthy over-30s can recall a more innocent and optimistic time when proof of age — and usually a very young one at that — was all that was required for a driver's license. We've come a long way since them, but still have far to go. Adequate testing is the beginning, not the end of efforts to reserve the roads for qualified drivers.

1970s Fail To Impress

By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — I don't know what your opinion of the 1970's is, but so far I'm not impressed.

Everybody got so worn out by the 1960's, that perhaps we all expected too much of the decade to follow it, which was heralded by its cheerleaders in glowing terms ordinarily employed by real estate developers trying to palm off a swamp.

Yes, sir, the 1970's got a tremendous advance build up. Didn't you get the hopeful feeling that it would signal the dawn of a better life and a better world?

Well, anyway I did. I thought 1970 would arrive in a blare of bugles and the waving of many banners, the dramatic striking off of age-old human chains and fetters, the lifting up of human hearts and hopes, flight after flight of bluebirds, and perhaps even the lowering of a state sales tax here and there.

I don't know how it is in your area, but after the first 15 days of the new decade, I can't see that it has made any striking major improvements on the street where I live. In fact, if it were not for the date on the calendar, it would be easy to believe that we were still back in the glum 1960's.

Life remains pretty much the mixture as before.

For example:

No flights of bluebirds have flown over my house. I did see a droop-feathered, shivering robin, his bosom a withered orange. But this early bird was getting no worms; they were asleep deep in earthen beds.

Weren't we to get June in January during the 1970's? The expectation was a fraud. The view from my window shows the same old vista of ice, snow and pavement slush. The trees stand budless and bare.

War still wanders the world with bloody sword and flaming torch. The dove of peace remains a flying fugitive, and the olive branch in its beak droops ever more limply.

Wasn't inflation to be curbed? Where I buy my groceries the price of eggs is still going up. So, I hear, is the price of practically everything else — from free love to college educations.

Way back at the start of the 1960's weren't scientists predicting an early end to the problems of cancer and the common cold? But here it is 1970 already and millions of people are still dying of the one and sniffling from the other.

Maybe I'm being too critical of the 1970's. What I'm going to do is to give them another couple of weeks to prove themselves. Then, if things don't get a darned sight better, I'm going to start looking forward to the 1980's. Surely mankind can't dwell in darkness and despair forever.

Strength For Today

IT CAN BE DONE

There are about three billion people on this planet, and the biggest job we have before us is learning how to live together peaceably and profitably.

It can be done. Geography plays a big part in this situation. Energy, even more. Education and scientific approach, a very great deal.

Then we have to realize that racial differences, historical background, natural resources are vital factors that can and will contribute to advancement and, by the same token, can, and under certain circumstances will, contribute to bad feeling between races and controversy between nations.

There is no reason why the inhabitants of the planet Earth cannot get along peaceably and profitably with one another. There are differences that tend to separate us, but there are great common ends to which the whole of mankind presses if the majority of those who make up this "mankind" are sensible, honest, and well-disposed toward neighbors. War is not only a great calamity—it is a mistake. Those who "win" wars soon find out that they have not necessarily won the peace. If we get too much for ourselves and give too little to those whom we confront, we are in for a bad time. We may seem to have won something, but this is in appearance only. We have lost a great deal more than we have won.

Getting and giving go together and must be kept in balance. Family, community, nations with their international problems—they are all the same. Give, get and keep benefits and responsibilities in balance.

Girl's Best Friend: Selenium

By ELMER ROESSNER

Diamonds were not a girl's best friend in 1969.

Pick's World Currency Report, in its annual review of changing diamonds, which led its 1968 survey of values, did not fare so well last year. Dealer prices of commercial stones remained more or less unchanged, except for smaller stones which dropped 18 per cent. Excellent gems gained about 20 per cent at auctions, led by Parke-Bernet's sale of that 69.42 carat pear-shaped diamond ring to Henry Winston who in turn sold it to Richard Burton for Elizabeth Taylor.

During the year, Pick's reports, the uninterrupted decline in the purchasing power of all currencies continued for its 30th year, and "made the word investment a comic book term." There were no less than 56 devaluations, or "fraudulent state bankruptcies" during the year, far from being offset by the upvaluation of the German mark.

The value of all common and preferred stocks, public and private bonds, listed and unlisted, declined $1 trillion in the last 12 months, the report said.

Minerals and Metals Beat Diamonds

Star shelters of wealth in the year, the report states, were industrial minerals and metals. Selenium rose 766 per cent, antimony went up 592 per cent, largely due to the lack of Red Chinese exports. Nickel went up 361 per cent, due to the long strike in Ontario, copper gained 47 per cent (and went up further in the first dozen days of this year), and lead 29 per cent.

Hot rolled steel bars rose 41 per cent, hot rolled sheets 39 per cent, cold rolled sheets 38 per cent, steel plates 36 per cent, and wire and nails 33 per cent.

On the other hand, platinum dropped 39 per cent, palladium 19 per cent, gold 16 per cent and silver 6 per cent.

However, collectors' gold and silver coins increased about 80 per cent during the year, leading the list for collectors' items. An 1895 proof silver dollar went for $4,000.

Antiques Rose In Value

Next were snuffboxes, more popular than diamonds. They sold about 75 per cent higher than in 1968. One, presented by Louis XV to a Swiss banker, was sold for a historic high at $55,000 at Southby's.

Antique furniture, after a few quiet years, brought prices about 60 per cent higher than in 1968. A Louis XVI "petite table," believed to have been owned by Marie Antoinette and sibned Carlin, went for $105,000, at an auction.

Paperweights were up about 45 to 50 per cent, on fetching $16,300 at Southby's.

Old masters, after a dull 1968, rose about 40 to 45 per cent in price. Franz Hals's "Portrait of a Merchant" was sold for $3.2 million. An oval ceiling painting by Tiepolo brought $982,000 at auction at Christie's.

American paintings were about 40 per cent higher, sculpture brought 33 per cent higher prices, French Impressionists brought 30 to 35 per cent higher. Books and manuscrips were up 30 per cent, post impressionists, etchings, surrealists, porcelain and china and rare stamps all brought higher prices.

from the Nixon work requirement — and only 500,000 prospects remain for the work - or - starve demand.

Would the new system be effective, even as to them? Not likely. The first time a poor family were denied its Family Security check, on the grounds that unskilled papa refused to take a suitable job as an unskilled porter, all hell would break loose. The professionally indolent already thumb their noses at hundreds of available jobs — behold the help wanted ads in every major city! — and publicly operated job training programs are notoriously inefficient.

The President also emphasized, when he was wrapping his package, that his plan would replace such existing welfare schemes as the Food Stamp Program. You can forget that sales appeal too. Old welfare programs are as hardy as old politicians; few die and none resign. Food stamps would stay.

If the Nixon plan were adopted, the present $5 billion in annual Federal payments would at least double. Henry Hazlitt, a cogent student of these things, says the cost could triple.

Evans-Novak . . .

templated imports large enough to reduce the present domestic price of $3.30 a barrel (at the South Louisiana wellhead) to $1.80-$2.00.

That would require so thorough a restructuring of the U.S. oil industry (including elimination of inefficient small producers) that a more politically salable proposal was needed. Consequently, the task force staff came up with a "compromise" tariff pegged to result in a $2.50 a barrel price.

But even that was vigorously defended by Shultz alone among the task force members, and Mitchell's intervention killed it. Although Shultz did retain the tariff concept against opposition from Hickel and Stans, the tariff proposed in the final report is protectively high—$1.25 a barrel for Venezuelan oil, $1.45 for Arabian oil. That is calculated to produce a price of $3.00 a barrel.

This merely rolls prices back to where they were before the industry boosted prices last March. Moreover, it provides no help whatever for consumers of heating oil in the oil-poor Northeast. In order for imported oil to compete with U.S. heating oil at existing prices, the tariff can be no higher than $1.08 a barrel.

Girl Scout Cookie Sale Begins Today

The annual Girl Scout cookie sale will be held locally Jan. 16 through 24.

The sale will again be an order taking sale to enable customers to get the kind of cookies they prefer and to provide a more accurate supply of cookies for the sale.

Junior, Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts will take orders for five varieties of cookies — assorted sandwich, chocolate mint, butter flavored shorties, peanut butter sandwich and a new one, pecanettes (a chip chocolate with pecans). The price is 50 cents a package with the money paid at the time of delivery only.

Deliveries will be made from Feb. 20-28.

The annual cookie sale is a project by Girl Scouts for Girl Scouts and proceeds of the sale help support the council camping program and provide funds for troops for individual troop activities. Most of the profit from the cookie sale goes directly toward major renovation and replacements, new buildings and equipment for camping and special camping events for girls.

The council is seeking additional land for camping and proceeds from the cookie sale will be used for acquiring and developing suitable land when it is found.

Mrs. Wyatt Brown is cookie chairman in Greenville.

Anyone who wishes to buy cookies and is not contacted, should call Mrs. Brown.

Representatives from Pitt and Beaufort County Technical Institutes and area law enforcement officers have met with University officials in support of the center project. The Institutes are now providing basic and technical training for area law enforcement personnel. Under the center program degree level instruction will be offered.

A curriculum advisory committee, made up of representatives of the Law and Order Committee, local government, area law enforcement agencies, Pitt and Beaufort Tech and the Mid-East Commission, will guide the University in developing the program.

Dr. John Ball of ECU is currently coordinating project efforts.

ECU President Dr. Leo Jenkins recently met with Governor Bob Scott to discuss the University's undertaking. The Governor has indicated his support for the program.

No Rush For Auto Tags

Mrs. Anna Garris, the local license agent for North Carolina vehicle tags, reports that "now is a good time for people to buy tags while its rather quiet."

"We are running behind sales total compared to those at this time last year," she said. "As of today (Wednesday afternoon) we have issued 4,558 car tags, 36 for motorcycles, 555 for private trucks 312 farm truck tags, and 554 for trailers."

Purchasers of tags must furnish the company name and policy number of their vehicle insurance, and bring t" registration cards received fr.. Raleigh in order to get their tags. Persons who have not received registration cards or ones who have special requirements can check with Mrs. Garris for proper forms and information.

Announce Three Grants To ECU Science Depts.

Three grants totaling more than $100,000 have been awarded by the National Science Foundation to science departments at East Carolina University.

Largest of the awards is a grant of $75,941 to the science education department for a "Cooperative College-School Science Program."

Dr. Floyd E. Mattheis, program director, said the funds will sponsor an institute for 60 eighth grade earth sciences teachers from throughout Eastern North Carolina. Thirty teachers each will attend the institute at centers in Rocky Mount and Fayetteville.

"Participants will be selected on the basis of their potential to act as key teachers as they return to their schools after completion of the institute," Dr. Mattheis said.

The teachers will receive 12 quarter hours of graduate credit for their intensive study, designed to improve their teaching competence in the areas of astronomy and geology.

Dr. Mattheis said the institute was planned through the State Department of Public Instruction and is to be conducted with the assistance of Garlan F. Bailey, assistant dean of continuing education at ECU.

Children Trying To Protect ...nolia Tree

NEW ..ORK (AP) — A magnolia tree grows in Brooklyn and neighborhood children are raising money to make sure it won't be destroyed by an urban renewal program.

The four-story-tall, 85-year-old magnolia grandiflora, which normally flourishes in the South, has been protected from wintry winds by a brownstone apartment building in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section.

The community is selling raffle tickets — shaped like magnolia leaves — for a fund to raise $5,000 to save the building from the wrecker's ball. The horticulture Society of New York is pitching in by paying neighborhood kids one cent for each seed of the hearty tree they bring in.

The society says the tree, an evergreen, is the largest and oldest of its kind north of Baltimore. In the summer it produces large, white fragrant blossoms.

When South's demand opening bid in spades elicited a positive response in diamonds from partner, followed by a spade raise, he was bent on reaching slam. After his four no trump bid revealed that North held the missing ace, South figured he might just as well play the hand in no trump to avert the possibility of a ruff. He toyed with the idea of investigating for a grand slam, but was finally content to settle for six.

West led the seven of hearts, covered in turn by North's ten, East's queen, and declarer's king. A quick inventory of his assets convinced South that he could take 13 tricks provided that spades broke, and he momentarily regretted not having asked for kings during his Blackwood inquiry. He proceeded to cash his ace of diamonds and then led over to the ace of spades so that he might discard his losing heart on the king of diamonds.

He next led a spade to his queen, but when West showed out the slam went glimmering. East was given his spade trick and he quickly returned a diamond so that his partner might cash the setting trick.

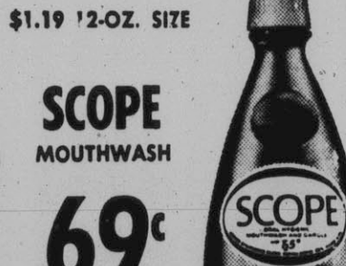

It would have done South no good to refrain from cashing dummy's king of diamonds, for then he would have had a losing heart in his hand at the end. The only way that he can safely obtain the needed sluff on North's high diamond is by taking a safety play in the spade suit—i.e. he concedes a trick that he might otherwise not lose, in order to assure the success of his contract.

After South wins the opening lead, he should cash the ace of diamonds and lead a spade. Instead of putting up North's ace, however, he should play the eight from dummy. East wins and returns, say, a heart. Declarer is in with the ace and leads over to the spade ace to take his heart sluff on the king of diamonds. He reenters his hand with a club to pull East's remaining spades, and now South is all aces.

Declarer played the hand as tho he were in seven. Since he had only bid a small slam, he should have played safe for 12 tricks.

Most N.C. Merchants Cling To Sunday Tradition

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina merchants largely are clinging fast to the tradition that Sunday is for rest and worship—not commerce—despite growing weekend business by some drugstores and discount houses.

The tenor of sentiments shared by many store owners and operators was caught recently in a letter sent to all 84 Rose's variety stores in North Carolina over the signature of L. H. Harvin Jr., president and treasurer of the Henderson-based chain.

"Yes, we may lose some of our competitive position," Harvin wrote his employes, "and we may lose sales and profits because of our determination to remain closed (on Sunday)."

With this admission as a preface, Harvin explained why Rose's would lock up on Sunday even through the Christmas shopping rush.

"We believe Sunday is a special day and not just another day of the week. Our people who operate our stores and our customers need to have an opportunity to go to church with their friends and neighbors and think about things other than those material," he said. "The deterioration of Sundays adversely affects the moral values and fiber of our way of life."

Similar feelings were expressed by George Ivey, president of the Ivey's department store chain headquartered in Charlotte.

Asked about Sunday openings, Ivey said firmly: "Not for Ivey's." In an extra step to keep commerce out of Sunday, Ivey's draws a curtain around its downtown Charlotte show windows — making even window shopping impossible.

Cecil Glover, general manager and vice president of City Chevrolet in Charlotte, said his agency remained closed on Sunday because his employes are "good citizens."

"We would hope that they go to church and spend the day with their families," he said.

This determination flexed during the Christmas season in Greensboro, where downtown department stores began opening on Sunday afternoons about six weeks before Christmas.

The stores were reluctantly following suit after Sears Roebuck Co. led the way by two weeks and the other merchants began to fear losing their share of the holiday bonanza.

But once the Yule season passed, all the stores—including Sears—resumed their Sunday closings.

Stores that welcome Sunday shoppers — chiefly superdrugs and discount department stores — report strong sales on both Saturday and Sunday.

Their experience is that shopping is family fun. "I've been in the retail trade business for nine years and we always got more business when the father is home from work and the whole family can go shopping," said Larry Cohen, assistant manager of a K-Mart discount store in Charlotte.

Though state law allows sales of anything except wine and liquor on Sunday, most cities have municipal ordinances barring the sale of beer as well.

Other cities have Sunday blue laws that bar the sale of specific types of goods — mostly those not used as medicine or nourishment. In Asheville, for example, shoppers can buy a cigar because they use it on their person. But they can't buy a match with which to light it.

The increase of general-goods sales in giant drugstores, combined with the inconsistency of many city ordinances, has led to challenges of some blue laws.

Three discount stores in High Point opened on Sunday, Nov. 30, in an open test of that city's law. Forty store employes were arrested.

The stores—K-Mart, Sky City and Zayres of High Point—have indicated their intention of taking the law to the North Carolina Supreme Court for a final test. Superior Court Judge James Exum, meanwhile, has told the city it can't enforce the law and has said he thinks a Supreme Court ruling would be a good idea to guide other cities with similar laws.

A record shop and a variety store in Mount Airy, for example, have been brought to court for violation of the Mount Airy blue law. Attorneys for the manager of the W. T. Grant store have contended in court the ordinance barring Sunday sales is invalid.

The feeling of citizens has never been widely tested. Ministers have spoken in favor of keeping the stores closed. But parking lots at the discount houses fill up on Sunday as much as the rest of the week.

In one poll, the High Point Enterprise twice sent questionnaires to a random sampling of registered voters in High Point to ask for sentiment on the city's disputed blue law.

The response remained steady at about 53 per cent in favor of doing away with the law. Both polls were taken while the city council was debating requests from the discount stores to lift the blue laws.

Storeowners report they are finding the most effective way to counter competition from the discount houses open on Sunday is to open at night and other times when families can shop together.

The merchants have no figures to back up what they say, but the feeling is that business jumps considerably for major purchases after 5 p.m. and on Saturday.

This is the time when fathers can accompany their wives and children to choose a television set, furniture or a new car.

One car dealer said his biggest billing day was Monday, "but it's generated on Saturday, when the whole family can come out."

GLINTS FROM THE "LIGHT OF PEACE" — Natalie Baumer holds the "Light of Peace", a 434.6-carat diamond when it was unveiled in New York by its purchaser, a large retail jewelry chain. Officials said the stone was dubbed the "Light of Peace" because it will be used to promote peace. It is the 14th largest uncut diamond ever discovered. (AP Wirephoto)

Educator Says Campus Upsets Like Labor Riots Of The '30s

NEW YORK (UPI)—By their riots of the sixties, college students ceased being mere customers for sheepskins and moved into the role of participants in the molding of their educational fare.

Dr. Edward J. Bloustein, who makes that point, likens the campus upsets of the nation to the massive labor riots that occurred in Detroit in the 1930s.

The riots established the right of labor to collective bargaining. In essence, the campus happenings established the rights of students in a way that would shock administrators of the authoritarian colleges of old.

Dr. Bloustein, lawyer and doctor of philosophy, is president of Bennington College in Vermont, a school that prides itself on freedom for students.

Teaches Classes

He keeps in touch with students by slipping into the classroom to teach on occasion. He feels having a sense of teaching keeps him in touch with one of the most important aspects of higher eduction—"what happens in the classroom."

"It gives me a chance to show the students that administrators are not wooden headed idiots," he told UPI in an interview.

In this era of a stampede for sheepskins for all, Dr. Bloustein fears that some young people may be out of touch with the reason for going to college.

"We seem to have turned higher education into preparatory schools for the professions," he said. "But the only reason for going to college is to become a better person—to understand what human values are, to make choices in light of cultural heritages."

He emphasized that the twin goals of status and making money are not the highest for the truly educated man.

College students, circa 1970, have all kinds of rights—to be used responsibly and not abused, according to Dr. Bloustein. He listed them as:

—The right to learn in an atmosphere untrammeled by fear and apprehension.

—The right to learn from a faculty which feels free to teach whatever it will teach, no matter what the current political pressures. Free inquiry, a free atmosphere, is vital for students.

—The right of students to have education relevent or responsive to his or her needs.

—The right to speak freely themselves about the nature of education and the nature of the university and its role in society.

—The right to some form of participation in the governing of the institution.

—The right to express themselves in a way that does not trample on rights of other students to learn and the right of faculty to teach freely.

—The right to participate as a citizen in the outside community without having that affect status in college.

—The right to speak freely about anything on earth.

—The right of privacy in collegiate life. The right to have personnel directors receive only academic records without student consent. Medical records should be held absolutely confidential.

—The right to be regarded by the college as a person mature enough to reach one's own moral judgments. This includes the right to be treated as an individual moral agent rather than a child.

—The right of due process in disciplinary proceedings. This includes the right to appear and deny charges or to confront those accusing. This also includes the right to be represented by counsel of one's choice.

Rights Difficult

"The difficulty in all this," Dr. Bloustein said, "is that while I favor student participation, many students misread this and give a very distorted view of what it means.

"There are two extremes to be avoided. The first is an authoritarian educational system run by adults for adults which lays down laws without any regard for the students' views of what education should be or the form for participation by students.

"The second extreme is when student and faculty cannot discern differences of faculty and student competence to determine education's future.

"No one knows better than a student what interests him or his goals in education."

Students, according to Dr. Bloustein, really know effectively what they're actually getting —in ways education officials never can know.

None of this means the officials and instructors ought to run up the white flag and bow to the students as all powerful keepers of the keys to education.

"I believe the faculty still has something to teach and students still have something to learn," Dr. Bloustein said.

"And anyone who neglects this difference between a faculty member and student is making a grave error. Students and teachers are not on a parity of status ..."

Atlanta Dedicates King Memorial Center Today

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Dedication ceremonies for the Martin Luther King Memorial Center here today head up nationwide activities observing the 41st anniversary of the Negro leader's birth.

The $10 million center, originally planned as a library for King's papers and other documents of the civil rights movement, is being expanded into a center of knowledge, history and culture of the black people.

The facility will be built in two locations, a downtown complex and another near Atlanta University. The downtown complex will include restoration of King's birthplace, the nearby Ebenezer Church and a memorial park, where King will be entombed.

Plans also include a "Freedom Hall" to house exhibitions on the history of the nonviolent civil rights movement of the 1950s and early 1960s.

At the university, the Institute of the Black World—a center for research on the past, present and future of Negroes—already has opened temporary quarters. Its task is to discover the meaning of the history of black people and to determine where the Negro race is headed in human society.

Future plans for the university portion include an institute for nonviolent social change study and a museum of Afro-American life and culture.

The first step toward building the memorial park was taken early this week when King's body was transferred from the Southview Cemetery to a site near the church.

Dedication speakers on today's program were Mayor Sam Massell; Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, chairman of the Atlanta Board of Education; and the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, King's successor as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Atlanta University's five-college complex planned to close for the day, but public schools were open.

Nationally, school closings, religious services, marches, special dedications and other observances were planned.

Public classrooms were closed in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Kansas City, Berkeley, Calif., New Haven, Conn., Madison, Ill., and Venice, Ill. Partial closings were scheduled in Chicago and Seattle. At least 10,000 persons including Mayor John V. Lindsay were expected to parade up Broadway and gather for an anniversary rally on 34th Street near Eighth Avenue in New York City.

Connecticut, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York and Washington designated the day as "Martin Luther King Day." Similar proclamations came from the mayors of Atlantic City, Buffalo, Charleston, W.Va., Kansas City, New York, Rochester, N.Y., Syracuse and Pontiac, Mich.

No official national observance was planned.

Several organizations have urged that Jan. 15 be made a national holiday in commemoration of King.

Elsewhere, a playground in Syracuse, N.Y., was renamed in honor of the slain civil rights leader, and Ohio University students were building shacks on the college green to recreate "Resurrection City," the area which was used to house participants in the 1968 Poor People's March on Washington.

Ordinary Consumer Has Seen Economic Scramble

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Battered by high interest rates, prices and taxes, the average American has been forced to scramble like a threatened quarterback in order not to lose yardage in the old game of making ends meet.

Evidence of this is clear, and it tends to undermine the assumption widely held that somehow, for some reason, the ordinary consumer has been able to live easily with inflation and even to ignore government antidotes to the malady.

Not so. In 1969 there was considerable trading down in big ticket merchandise and postponement of many purchases. There was a surge in borrowing on life insurance policies. Credit unions reported loans outpaced savings.

While Americans were feeling very confident of their purchasing power they bought a lot of red meat and, allegedly, that is the reason beef prices rose early in the year. That appetite tapered off later, and so did red meat prices.

Ask any small banker if there wasn't a reaction. Small investors discovered in recent months such things as U.S. Treasury bills and municipal bonds yielded greater returns than bank account interest. And so they bought them.

A record of $252 million was drained from accounts in the nation's 500 mutual savings banks in December. These banks are limited by law to granting a rate of interest that now hardly matches inflation. Once content to leave his money in the bank, the small investor withdrew it in 1969 for bigger returns.

The impact on the banks is quite observable as they offer wrist watches, can openers, toasters, luggage, clocks, radios, blankets, pots and pans, knives and forks and whatnot for new accounts.

Ask the big insurance companies if there hasn't been an impact. By November, loans on life insurance policies had soared to $13.58 billion, an increase of about $2.36 billion in one year. Such borrowing is the least expensive of all.

Perhaps the most pronounced effect is observed in retail sales.

Preliminary reports by the Commerce Department indicate that although there were more Americans to buy in 1969 than in 1968, there really wasn't any commensurate increase in sales.

It is possible that the retail sales figures might appear larger. But then they have to be discounted by about 5 per cent to wring the price inflation out of them.

The tendency toward trading down and postponing seemed to grow stronger as 1969 wore on.

Meet On Milk Price Controls

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Milk Commission met today to decide what to do about its controversial market controls on milk as the date for their expiration neared.

The controls, known as Fair Trade Order No. 10, will expire Feb. 1 unless the board extends them.

During a public hearing in November, the board heard conflicting testimony on whether removal of the controls would send the state's already high milk prices up or down.

Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan entered a strong plea for repeal of the controls.

Morgan said the regulation "eliminates competition in the marketing of milk and tends to set prices at an artificially high level.

"I do not charge that this result flows from a deliberate plan by the commission," he said. "Nothing could be further from the truth. Yet duty compels me to speak out when the results are as clear and unequivocal as are the results" of the fair trade order.

But dozens of other persons, most of them connected with the dairy industry, spoke in favor of some type of controls.

"I predict that after a momentary drop in prices, within two years prices would substantially exceed those of today," said Rep. Sam Johnson, D-Wake, an attorney for the North Carolina Dairy Products Association.

Johnson urged the commission not to repeal or modify the order until a special committee could suggest modifications.

Members of the commission's executive staff met with members of the Dairy Products Association, but no specific proposals for modification of the controls were made.

The commission called the hearing after increased reports of industry violations of the order and contentions that the order was keeping milk prices in the state at one of the highest levels in the nation. At least one court challenge of the order is still in progress.

Included in the order are requirements that distributors report their wholesale prices to the commission and that they offer discounts to their customers on a uniform scale determined by the commission and a ban that keeps retailers from selling milk at less than a 7 per cent markup over wholesale prices.

Ten Freight Cars Derailed

ASHEVILLE (AP)—Ten cars of a freight train derailed near Asheville Wednesday night, blocking Southern Railway Company's main line between Asheville and Salisbury.

Company spokesmen said all available men and equipment were being used today to clear the tracks.

W. E. Milholen, chief dispatcher for Southern's Carolinas division, said the 17-car train, which was pulled by four engines, was traveling west from Spencer to Asheville when the derailment occurred about 9 p.m.

No one was injured, Milholen said.

The company spokesman said no estimate of damages was available immediately. Southern officials were at the scene of the derailment today and were trying to determine what caused the accident.

Train Derailment At Farmville

FARMVILLE — A train derailment this morning around 8:35 in Farmville resulted in extensive damage to five to seven cars on the Norfolk Southern Railway Company and to portions of the northbound track.

A railway employee this morning said the train, a 90-100 car freight bound for Norfolk from Charlotte, was attempting to use a "fast" track to go around a train that had already stopped in Farmville.

The spokesman said an apparent breakage in the track cause the cars to derail. The heavy weight of the loaded cars was shoved into the front part of the train when the emergency brakes were applied, he said.

No damage to local property in Farmville was reported other than slight street damage in the vicinity of the incident. Norfolk Southern had no estimates of the damage this morning but said a crane had been dispatched to remove the wrecked cars.

It was reported that one of the cars was a coal carrier and the rest were boxcars. All of the cars were damaged to some extent with the wheels torn from the structures in at least four of the cars.

Farmville police said that no injuries had been reported and damage was confined to railway property. The intersections that were blocked for some time following the derailment had been cleared, police said.

Satellite Is Put In Orbit

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A commercial communications satellite zipped through a great oval orbit today, carrying a rocket motor which must fire successfully Friday to avoid a multi-million-dollar insurance payoff by an international group of underwriters.

The Intelsat 3 payload rode into space Wednesday night aboard a Delta booster.

The first three stages of the Delta fired flawlessly and propelled the 642-pound satellite into a preliminary orbit ranging from about 165 to 22,700 miles above the earth.

But the insurance companies won't be able to breathe easy until the fourth stage fires for a 27-second burst about 9 a.m. EST Friday. The ignition is to kick the payload into a stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the Atlantic Ocean, where it is to serve as a telephone and television link between North and South America, Europe and Africa.

The Delta, first major American rocket launch of the 1970s, finally got off the ground Wednesday after five postponements in a week for technical or weather problems.

N.C. Dairying Still In Decline

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Agriculture reported North Carolina dairies imported 4,821,166 gallons of milk from other states last year.

Director Leonard F. Blanton of the department's dairy division, said Tuesday that despite this, the number of dairy farmers in North Carolina continued to decline.

"Dairying is just not profitable and attractive enough to hold on to good enough farmers to meet our needs," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said.

Pirates Face N.C. State Tonight

NFL Working On Aligment

NEW YORK (AP) — The 13 clubowners of the new National Conference of the National Football League huddled again today to try to realign themselves into three divisions that please everybody.

After five more fruitless hours of meetings Wednesday, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said, "I can't report any progress except I found out some of the owners are dissatisfied with their hotel accomodations."

"I'd say that might be a plus because maybe they'll want to go home."

Rozelle promised that the owners won't leave New York "until we have a resolution on this, one way or another."

He said if the owners don't unanimously agree to a 5-4-4 divisional setup among themselves this week, he will call the signals for them.

"Someone will have to change his view or I will have to become involved in this," Rozelle said. "I do not have the authority to move in, but I have the responsibility to see that it's done."

Rozelle's methods could involve unilateral action on his part or settlement by lottery, through a series of blind draws.

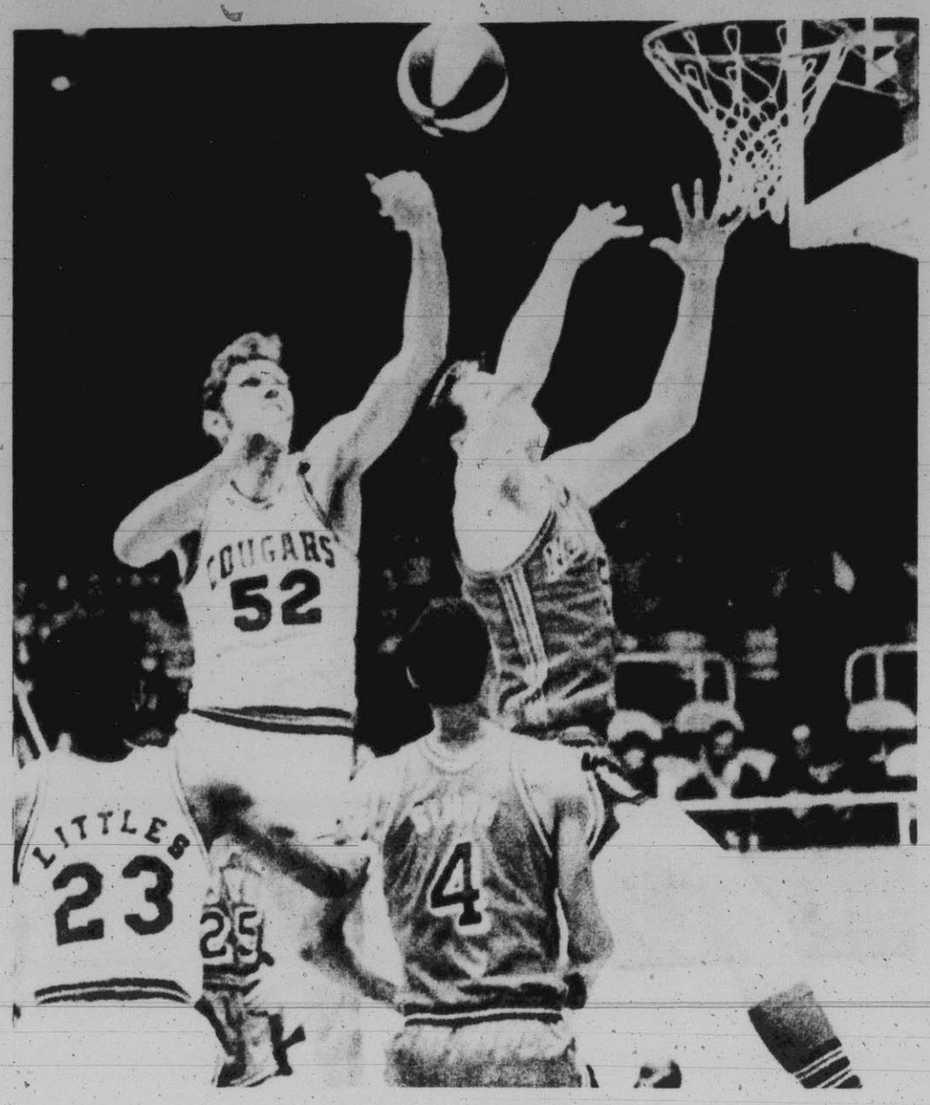

The commissioner has a few other methods at his disposal, which include "locking them up" as he did during the eight-month hassle over the grouping of the new American Conference.

One of those meetings lasted 36 hours. However, those meetings were more complicated than the current ones because they involved the transfer of three old NFL clubs to give the conference 13 teams. After it was decided which teams would switch, the realignment was settled in a matter of hours.

Rozelle is anxious to settle the National Conference and get on to other things, like the 1970 schedule and a new television contract for all 26 teams.

Today's meeting was the fifth the NFL owners have had on realignment since last May when Cleveland, Baltimore and Pittsburgh of the old NFL agreed to switch to the new American Conference.

Cleveland will compete with Pittsburgh, Houston and Cincinnati in one division. Kansas City, Oakland, San Diego and Denver will comprise another.

Second Ranked Team Of Week For Pirates

East Carolina University's Pirates play their second nationally ranked team in three days tonight when they invade Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh to face the Wolfpack of North Carolina State University.

The 'Pack, beaten only once in 12 games, will provide another tough test for the Bucs, who lost a 91-76 decision to Davidson on Tuesday night.

"We knew they are very good," ECU Coach Tom Quinn said. "They have a 6-10 center, and a great 6-5 guard. They have good reserve strength."

Quinn said that the Wolfpack is different from other recent State teams in that it has the height in center Paul Coder, and that they are a more free - wheeling team. "They set up when necessary but they can score off the running game," Quinn added. "They run primarily a man - for - man type game, but they have used a zone. Their outside shooting is fair and they have a good inside game."

The height of State will provide some matchup problems for the Bucs. With 6-10 Coder at the pivot, the Bucs will have to go with one of their 6-7 front line against him. Then, one of the 6-0 Buc guards will be matched up with 6-5 Ed Leftwich.

"I feel we can give them a good game," Quinn said. "I just hope we can keep our players in there. You can expect so much when you are on the road, but you can't go that far," he added. The coach was refering to the fact that sophomore star Jim Fairley picked up five quick fouls against Davidson, that Jim Gregory left midway through the second half, and that eventually all of the Buc starters went out against Davidson. "Fairley got the same sort of treatment Gregory did at Tampa," Quinn said.

"But in spite of it all, the team played well. I have a much different impression of our conference now that I did have. It is a real shame that the top two teams in the conference have to play under the conditions that exist in Johnston Gym (at Davidson). We left the dressing rooms five minutes before the start of the second half, but by the time we pushed our way through the crowds, it was time for the tipoff."

Quinn also heaped praise on his senior guard, Tom Miller, who led the scoring against Davidson with 29. "I've seen all of the guards in the conference, and I'm convinced that there isn't another around who is as good as Miller. Some score more, but they don't do the overall job of being a floor leader, ball handler, and scorer. He does everything."

Miller, in the past few games, has upped his average, and now stands second on the team with an 18.0 average. Jim Modlin tops the team at 18.6. Both Gregory and Fairley sport a 14.7 average.

State is led by forward Vann Williford, who has a 23.3 mark, while Coder is hitting at 20.0 per game. Leftwich rounds out those in double figures with 17.1 per game.

Rain Could Be Race Problem

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Dan Gurney's hopes of qualifying in the pole position today for Sunday's Riverside-Motor Trend 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race ride with the weatherman.

Gurney, of Costa Mesa, Calif., co-favorite Parnelli Jones of Torrance, Calif., NASCAR champion David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., and super speedway king Lee Roy Yarbrough of Columbia, S.C., drew qualifying assignments well down the list, virtually precluding them from qualifying until Friday should Wednesday's inclement weather continue.

The first 15 positions—along with qualifying prize money—are up for grabs today. The next 15 positions will be fought for Friday and the remaining 14 Saturday. Rain washed out Wednesday's practice and more rain is expected today.

The unfortunate turn of events for favored drivers occurred Wednesday with a new NASCAR procedure — drawing for the qualifying order.

James Hylton, Inman, S.C., driving a 1969 Dodge, drew the No. 1 qualifying slot. Among the top drivers with the best chance of registering an official time today, are A.J. Foyt, Houston, Ford, sixth in the order; Bobby Isaac, Catawba, N.C., Dodge, No. 11; and Donnie Allison, Hueytown, Ala., Ford, No. 13.

NCAA Tries To Decide Knotty Yale Problem

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association, having sent the nation's college football coaches into a whirlwind of activity by permitting them to schedule an additional game next fall, today faced the controversial case of Yale's ineligible basketball player.

A session between coaches Darrel Royal of top-ranked Texas and Joe Paterno of runner-up Penn State was just one of many hurriedly arranged meetings Wednesday as schools scurried to line up opponents for the newly approved game.

Meanwhile, although the NCAA's 64th annual convention officially ended Wednesday, the NCAA Council, policy making body of the national organization, was expected to punish Yale for knowingly using a basketball player declared ineligible by both the NCAA and its affiliate, the Eastern College Athletic Conference.

The likelihood was that Yale would be slapped with some form of probation, possibly contingent on whether it ceases to use the player. However, the school has said it will continue defying the NCAA and ECAC.

The issue is another power struggle between the NCAA and the Amateur Athletic Union over control of amatur basketball in this country.

In an attempt to bring the AAU to its knees, the NCAA refused to sanction the basketball competition in the Maccabiah Games in Tel Aviv last August, although it had done so in the past and approved all other sports in last year's games.

Yale, however, told its invited player, Jack Langer, that he could participate in the games and he was the only collegian on the U.S. basketball team, which lost to Israel in the finals.

Yale received a minor setback Wednesday when the NCAA delegates tabled a proposal that would have specifically identified the Maccabiah Games as one of the international competitions to be considered for approval.

A Texas-Penn State football game would be one of the highlights of the 1970 season after the storm that arose this past season when both teams posted 11-0 records. However, both sides insisted early today that such a meeting was not settled.

The Texas administration, in fact, voted against the proposal to allow an increase in the regular season from 10 games to 11.

Elsewhere, Paul Dietzel, head coach and director of athletics at South Carolina, said he hoped to announce shortly an 11th game against a non-league oppoinent. South Carolina belongs to the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Col. A. J. Dielens, athletic director at the U.S. Military Academy, said Army would add the extra contest. Coach Ara Parseghian of Notre Dame said he was for an 11th game but didn't know whether his administration would approve it.

In other action Wednesday, the NCAA delegates approved limiting to two the number of visits a prospective athlete can make to a college. Then they ordered further study of a proposal to limit a coach or his representative to the same number of visits to the youngster's home town.

The delegates also voted to prohibit a coach or his representative from contacting a high school athlete at an event in which he participates and killed a measure that would have given the NCAA's executive committee review powers over decisions made by the 14 rules committees, which operate autonomously.

Woodington Nips S. Ayden

Woodington High School edged past South Ayden, 80-74, Tuesday night.

Woodington pushed out into a 25-21 lead in the first period, then outscored South Ayden, 17-15, in the second frame. That gave the hosts a 42-36 lead at intermission.

In the third period, South Ayden put on a rally, outscoring Woodington, 18-13. That cut the lead to a slim point, 55-54 as the final period got underway. But Woodington pushed in 25 points in the final frame while South Ayden got only 20.

Leon Mayo led the South Ayden effort with 22 points, while Tommy Gorham had 20, Charlie Grimes had 15 and Kelvin King had 14. For Woodington, Grady had 18, Miller had 14, Hodges had 13 and Petterson and Parker had 11 each.

Woodington made it a clean sweep by taking the junior varsity game, 42-38.

Aycock moved out into an 11-4 lead in the first period, and were never in any trouble after that. In the second frame, the Phantoms outhit Washington, 9-7, and built the lead out to 20-11 at halftime.

In the third period, Aycock added 10 more points to its lead by scoring 14 points to Washington's four. That made it 34-15. The Phants coasted through the final period, outhitting Washington, 13-11, to take the win.

Gamecocks Nip Furman, 59-56

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

College basketball coaches enjoy a lone-hate relationship with national rankings that would titillate even the most subdued psychiatrist.

They love the prestige and publicity that come with ranking, but they hate — and fear— the fact that every foe is keyed for a chance to knock off one of the big boys.

South Carolina Coach Frank McGuire was reminded Wednesday night that adrenalin often flows faster in underdogs, as his Gamecocks managed only a 59-56 victory over Furman.

The Southern Conference team overcame a seven-point deficit and pulled to a 33-31 halftime edge on a field goal by Lisco Thomas. And the Paladins maintained a lead over their Atlantic Coast Conference guests through the first nine minutes after the break and led by as many as five points.

The Gamecocks, rallying behind the shooting of John Roche and Tom Riker, tied the score at 43-43 at the 10:53 mark, and raced to a nine-point lead, only to find out the Paladins weren't dead yet.

Furman regained momentum and pulled within two points before Jerry Martin, who finished with 21 points, missed what could have been the tying field goal with 17 seconds to play.

Tom Owens grabbed the rebound for South Carolina and sank a free throw to extend the margin to the final score.

The Paladins' inside game crumbled near the end when their big center, Joe Brunson, fouled out.

Meanwhile, Maryland, winner of eight games all last year, matched that Wednesday night with a 73-57 triumph over Navy.

The Terps gained a 10-point margin over the Middies late in the first half, but had that lead dissolve behind the shooting of Bob Perty and Scott Semko.

Navy pulled within 43-42 early in the second half but the Terps spurted ahead on Will Hetzel's and Charley Blank's shooting.

The taller Terps controlled the boards so effectively that they were often able to make baskets on second and third shots.

Tonight seventh-ranked North Carolina, 3-1 in the league, plays Clemson on the Tigers' court. The Tigers were victorious over Virginia but dropped a game Monday to Maryland in their only ACC outing.

Also North Carolina State has East Carolina, of the Southern Conference, coming to Raleigh and Virginia plays Wake Forest in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Villanova Hands 1st Loss To Niagara Five

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

South Carolina's towering Gamecocks overcame the Selvy mystique at Furman, but Philadelphia's imposing Palestra cast its spell on Calvin Murphy and Niagara.

South Carolina, the nation's third-ranked college basketball power, came from behind Wednesday night for a 59-56 victory over scrappy Furman, coached by former scoring wizard Frank Selvy and triggered by his youngest brother, Charles, who poured in 22 points.

At Philadelphia, Fran O'Hanlon provided the spark in the closing minutes as Villanova knocked off previously unbeaten Niagara 102-92 in the nightcap of a Palestra doubleheader. Georgetown beat St. Joseph's 89-80 in the opener.

Murphy, the 12th-ranked Purple Eagles' All-American marksman, scored 28 points against Villanova—two under his season average and four less than the winners' Howard Porter.

Ohio University, No. 14 in the country, trimmed Miami, Ohio, 71-61 and 18th ranked Louisville got by Dayton 77-69 in the only other games involving The Associated Press' Top Twenty.

At Greenville, S.C., the Gamecocks trailed Furman by as many as five points midway in the second half before rallying for their 12th victory in 13 games. John Roche, who hit for 23 points in all, paced the comeback along with 6-foot-10 strongboys Tom Owens and Tom Riker.

O'Hanlon drove for a twisting layup and followed up with two free throws, touching off a Villanova spurt in the last three minutes that handed Niagara its first setback in 12 starts. The Wildcats' gifted guard wound up with 22 points, two more than teammate Chris Ford.

Ohio University, leading 27-26 at halftime, broke away to a 23-point bulge in the second half and breezed past Miami for a 10-2 season mark. Greg McDivitt's 23 points led the Bobcats to their second Mid-American Conference victory against one loss. Bowling Green downed Kent State 73-67 to tie idle Toledo for the MAC lead at 2-0.

Al Vilcheck's three-point play with two minutes remaining broke a 70-70 deadlock, helping Louisville, 8-2, subdue Dayton for Coach John Dromo's 50th career victory. Vilcheck topped the Cardinals with 20 points while Dayton's Ken May was high in the game with 30.

Seton Hall nipped American University 64-63 at South Orange, N.J., in a wild game capped by a sit-in at center court by black students protesting Seton Hall's cheerleading policies. The students held up the game for 20 minutes after a goal-tending call on Ken House's driving layup with 11 seconds remaining gave the Pirates their winning points.

The Rev. John J. Horgan, the university's athletic director, finally persuaded the demonstrators to leave the court after promising there would be no organized cheer-leading for the remainder of the season. Two black girls had been suspended from the cheerleading squad for missing practice and a white girl had been dismissed for academic reasons.

Seaver Chosen As Top Athlete

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver, selected The Associated Press' Male Athlete of the Year Wednesday, is worrying less and enjoying life more now that he is the toast of the sports world.

"I've been turning down many more invitations than I've accepted," Seaver said of the banquet circuit that awaits baseball's brightest star every year. "I've just been enjoying myself, spending time with my family. I won't let all this interrupt my privat life.

"But the time to start worrying is when they stop recognizing you."

Seaver, the New York Mets' All-American boy who led them to their believe-it-or-not National League pennant and World Series victory last year, is enjoying his latest accolade now.

"It's quite an honor," he said of the Associated Press award. "I'm very flattered."

At 25 years of age, Seaver, who won 25 regular season games, one playoff game and one World Series game last season, appears to have a number of worryless years ahead of him. In fact, with his drive to accomplish the impossible as the leader of the Mets, it isn't unbelievable that he might match Sandy Koufax's feat of winning the AP award twice.

The only other double winners are tennis player Don Budge and golfer Byron Nelson.

By winning the honor, Seaver continued baseball's domination of the award. He is the fifth straight baseball player to win the honor, following on the heels of Detroit's Denny McLain, and he is the eighth in the last nine years.

To win it, Seaver had to beat out Joe Namath, his football rival in Shea Stadium. Namath, of course, led the New York Jets to another impossible goal, the American Football League's first Super Bowl triumph.

Seaver received 96 votes in the balloting of sports writers and sportscasters throughout the country. Namath got 51.

Verga Paces Cougar Win

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Hot-shooting Bob Verga popped 20 points in each half and set the Carolina Cougars on to a 112-107 American Basketball Association victory Wednesday over the New York Nets.

Verga wasted no time in mounting his scoring spree and sank 11 points in the first period.

The Net defense, recovered later in the game and either tied or outscored Carolina in the other three periods. But New York was unable to overcome the Cougars first period spurt.

Verga, a former Duke star, who has been unanimously elected to the ABA eastern all-star team, hit his 1,000th point of the season in the final three minutes. His game total included five three-point fieldgoals.

Rich Niemann, playing in one of few games in which he was not in foul trouble, popped 20 points for Carolina and grabbed 16 rebounds.

LaVerne Tart and Ed Johnson led the Nets with 23 and 22 points.

The Cougars face a sterner test tonight when they play eastern division-leading Indiana on the Pacers' home court. Carolina hasn't beaten the Pacers.

Lefty Looking For Winning Cage Season

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) —Lefty Driesell, with an avowed goal to make the University of Maryland basketball team "the UCLA of the East," has reached his first modest milestone.

By beating Navy 73-57 Wednesday night, the Terps brought their record to a respectable 8-6 and equalled their victory total for all of last season.

The Terps were 8-16 last season — before Driesell left his third-ranking Davidson team and began his massive upheaval at Maryland.

"I thought if we won eight this year, we'd be doing good," Lefty said after Maryland downed Navy on the strength of a 15-3 streak after the Middies had pulled to within 43-42 early in the second half.

"Now, I'd like to have a winning season," Lefty said, and then added unsmilingly: "I'd like to win the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, too — and that's not impossible."

With four ACC teams ranked among the nation's top 20 teams, that's a tall order for Maryland — which has lost in the first round of the annual tournament in six of the past seven years.

But Maryland fans — who came early in the season to cheer Lefty and the start of a new era, and now give enthusiastic support to the team—are ready to believe anything Driesell says.

Lefty still gets a standing ovation when he arrives at the bench prior to the game. Signs in Cole Field House implore, "Go, Lefty, Go," and the crowd reacts noisily to Driesell's foot-stomping, two-fingered victory signs and sideline antics.

Driesell stirred the alumni even before the season started with his paid advertisements in Washington, D.C., newspapers uring four hot high school prospects to head for Maryland. Two of them did, and Maryland was rebuked for its imaginative recruiting efforts by the NCAA.

Maryland already has drawn five crowds of 7,800 or more to home games, topped by the 12,700 turnout which watched third-ranked South Carolina squash the Terps 101-68.

But Maryland lost only 55-44 in a return game at South Carolina, and upset Wake Forest to avenge an earlier 17-point defeat.

Senior Will Hetzel, Maryland's No. 4 all-time scorer, led the Terps with 16 points against Navy and senior Rod Horst had 15. Scott Semko scored 18 for Navy, now 2-11, and Bob Perry had 17.

"A lot of little things go into developing a winner," Driesell said, "but the big thing is recruiting."

To that end, Lefty has put close to 50,000 miles on two cars since moving to Maryland last March, and his three-man staff is constantly on the go. "We fly a lot, too," he adds, somewhat proudly.

"My double post system is geared to the big man," he said, "and I'll be disappointed and surprised if we don't recruit a great center this year."

Stockton Wants Golfing Victory

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Dave Stockton, admittedly disgusted with his performance last season, was a man with a mission today as he set out in the first round of the $100,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

"I want to win," said the six-year tour veteran from the University of Southern California. "Winning. That's what's important.

"That's what this game is all about."

Stockton, not noted as a long hitter but a first-rate scrambler, gathered $70,707 in purses last season, but failed to win a tournament.

"I'd rather have won $25,000 and have a title," the 28-year-old said.

"I won two tournaments the year before, in consecutive appearances — not consecutive tournaments but in consecutive starts—and won over $100,000.

"Maybe I got a fat head. I don't know. Something happened. I didn't play that well last year, didn't concentrate that well.

"Maybe I thought they just ought to hand me a championship.

"Well, it's different this year. "I'm out here to win."

If his first tournament is any indication, he's on the right track. He was among the leaders for three rounds in last week's Los Angeles Open before struggling in with a final round 74, three over par but still good enough to give him a tie for seventh.

Stockton, the son of a golf pro, scored his first tour victory in the prestigious Colonial Invitational at Fort Worth in 1967, then won the Cleveland and Milwaukee Opens in 1968 before going into a decline last year.

His performance in Los Angeles stamped him one of the favorites for the title in the Phoenix Open, one of the oldest events on the pro tour.

Impala.

It's got more re-sale value because it's got more to re-sell.

One of the nicest things about buying an Impala is selling it. That's because selling it traditionally brings back more of what people put into it in the first place. Money. Where does Impala keep getting its higher resale value? From features like those you see below. Features which explain why America's most popular car for the last nine years will undoubtedly make it ten in a row.
Impala. More to drive. More to re-sell.

Various Other Pesticides For Tobacco Crop

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

With DDT and several other pesticides banned from use on tobacco, Pitt County farmers still have a number of other insecticides available to them for use in controlling such insects as the flea beetle and the bud worm and horn worm.

The North Carolina Department of Agriculture has warned that it will not authorize the use of DDT and related pesticides for a number of uses this year, including all uses on tobacco, shade trees, around the home and in aquatic environments such as marshes (except for control of disease as determined by public health officials).

In addition to DDT, other products not approved for use on tobacco include TDE, aldrin, dieldrin, heptachlor, chlordane and lindane.

Sam Weeks, tobacco specialist with the Pitt Agricultural Extension Service, said, "Other insecticides are available that can be used to control insects that DDT controlled and which do not have the residual effect that DDT has."

Naming the flea beetle as one of the most worrisome pests facing tobacco growers, Weeks said DDT has been very effective for flea beetle control, but there are other insecticides that are very effective, such as Guthion and Parathyon.

Another flea beetle control agent, according to Weeks is the systemic insecticide Di-Syston. Di-Syston, the tobacco specialist said, is a granular material broadcast and disced into the soil prior to transplanting.

He noted that the systemic insecticide may also be applied on plant beds, but plants should be about half-dollar size before applied, then it should be watered in to get the chemical into the soil.

A mixture of DDT and other agents was formerly used for horn worm control, while TDE, was used as poison bait for bud worms.

"There is the biggest void here," Weeks emphasized. "Farmers will have to resort to a biological insecticide."

According to Weeks, farmers can use "Bacillus thuringiensis", a bacteria, to kill bud worms and horn worms.

"There will be insecticides available to control tobacco insects," Weeks explained.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham siad the state's tobacco markets could be adversely affected by the presence of residues from the banned pesticides on tobacco.

According to Graham, the North Carolina insecticides law requires registration and label approval of the State Department of Agriculture and he warned that anyone selling the products for uses which have been banned in 1970, would be in violation of the law.

Graham explained that the ban on the DDT products was taken for the following reasons:

—Recommendations by North Carolina State University indicate that suitable substitutes are available;

—some pests will no longer be controlled effectively by some of these pesticides have persisted and are now present in detectable quantities in many target and non-target segments of our environment.

—North Carolina's export tobacco markets may be adversely affected by the presence of residues of these pesticides on tobacco.

Pope Paul VI 'At Home' On Wednesdays

By BARRY JAMES

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI is "at home" on Wednesday mornings at 11 o'clock.

And every week thousands come out of faith or curiosity to see him.

The occasion is his weekly general audience in St. Peter's basilica.

Harder to get into, but more intimate are the semi-private bacciomano—literally, kiss the hand — audiences which the Pope holds in his palace after the general audience.

Pope Pius XII used to gather several hundred persons in the various audience rooms of the palace and move from room to room, meeting everyone very briefly.

Pope Paul has continued this trend. Usually, not more than 100 or so persons attend his semi-private audiences. He moves among them, speaking at length to as many as possible, frequently asking them about their problems and handing out medals or rosaries as mementos of the visit.

Beyond this are the private audiences usually reserved for national and international personalities, diplomatic representatives and church leaders.

The private audiences usually are arranged by the embassies, governments or church hierarchies of the persons concerned, or through direct influence with someone of importance in the Vatican.

There are several ways of gaining entrance to general or bacciomano audiences.

Many countries have embassies to the Vatican, some of which do little else but arrange audiences.

The United States, however, maintains no diplomatic relations with the Vatican. Instead, the North American College—whose main task is training priests—has a special audience office in the center of Rome.

The head of the office, the Rev. Richard J. Mahowald of Sioux Falls, S.D. says it is advisable to apply for audience tickets as far in advance as possible.

"We are not given a specific number of tickets to dispose of," he said. "Therefore we have to make a separate application for everyone who wants to attend an audience. And the seats are often difficult to come by, especially so at Christmas and Easter."

"The most important thing for us is to have a letter of recommendation," Mahowald added. "one from a parish priest is usually enough. And of course, we also try to obtain tickets on ecumenical grounds for persons who are not Roman Catholics.

"What we want are a few details about the persons seeking audiences. the more details the better, since it helps us to formulate our requests for tickets.

"For the bacciomano audiences, we need very extensive details. Tickets for these are always hard to come by."

TheNorth American College audience office sends applications to the office of Bishop Jacques Martin, prefect of the apostolic palace.

Mahowald said his office replies to everyone seeking audience tickets and even delivers the tickets to major hotels in Rome.

It often is possible to gain admittance to general audiences without a ticket by going to the Basilica and taking unfilled seats if there are any.

Audience visitors are ushered to their places by attendants wearing red silk costumes. The colorfully clad Swiss Guard stand with their halbeards around the papal altar, underneath the dome of the basilica.

The Pope comes down from his quarters by elevator and walks through the Renaissance halls of the apostolic palace to a side entrance of the basilica. He is borne into the church on his gestatorial chair, so the crowds can see him better.

His entrance is greeted by applause and sometimes shouts of "long live the Pope."

Smiling and waving, the Pontiff appears to appreciate the accolades. Vatican sources said the pope, who often attacks dissension in the church in his audience speeches, enjoys the general audiences as a chance to keep in touch with ordinary and enthusiastic Catholics.

In turn, visitors get to see the Pope in a more human and relaxed vein, away from the stiff pomp of high church ceremonies. He walks around the raised altar platform so that everyone can see him. An aide reads a list of special groups of pilgrims. The Pope acknowledges their cheers then doffing his red cloak, he goes to his chair to read a speech which usually deals with matters of faith, morals or discipline.

After reading the speech in Italian, he often repeats part of it in French, Spanish, or halting English or German.

Then he gives his blessing to all present, which also is extended to objects of devotion such as rosaries, crucifixes and medals which Catholics take with them.

At the end of the audience, the Pope steps down for a bacciomano meeting with people given a place of honor right in front of the altar.

These include heads of groups at the audience and persons considered deserving by the Vatican—for example, those who perform outstanding religious or social works or those who are seriously ill.

The entire general audience usually lasts less than one hour.

Next year, the audiences will be moved to a special hall now being built in the Vatican to a modernistic design by Italian architect Pier Luigi Nervi. The hall will be able to hold a maximum of 14,000 persons. As many as 75,000 persons can cram into St. Peter's Basilica.

A GHOSTLY SUN . . . reflects on the tombstone of Bettie Grimes in the Bryan Grimes cemetery.

GOVERNOR'S MONUMENT . . . The tombstone of former Governor Thomas J. Jarvis is located in the Cherry Hill Cemetery in Greenville.

Pitt County Cemeteries

Slowly the sun rises from behind a towering tombstone as the wind brushes a limb against a neighboring grave. Pitt County has many old grave sites — some well-tended, others neglected and almost forgotten.

Grimesland is a historic small town with numerous graves. It is here that the grave of the sister of the well-known pirate, Black Beard, is believed to be located. Lying in the brush near the banks of the Tar River, legend has it that visitors have attempted to dig up the grave — on the chance that a treasure might have been buried with her. No one has yet succeeded.

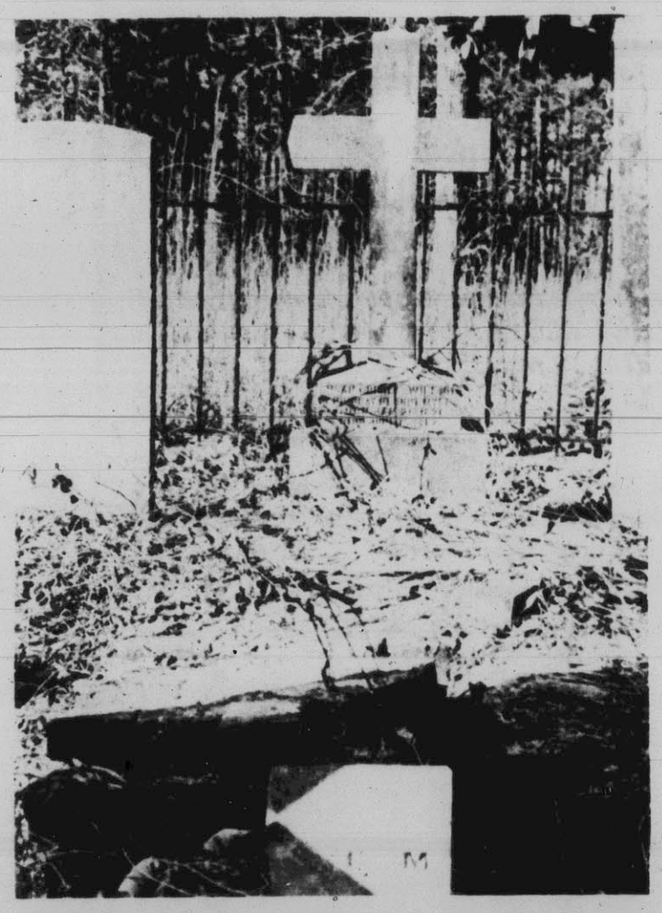

A former North Carolina governor, Thomas J. Jarvis, is buried in the old Cherry Hill Cemetery on Pitt Street in Greenville. Jarvis was governor from 1880 to 1884.

Graves lie in scattered sites within Greenville — in shopping centers, in the middle of golf courses, in redevelopment areas — where the growing town has isolated them. Others dot the open fields and forests in Pitt County.

At certain times of the year — particularly on the the Christmas and Easter holidays — people place flowers on the graves in rememberance of loved ones.

In neglected cemeteries, old rusty gates that once were frequently opened now stand idle. Hand made brick grave coverings have caved in; tombstones have turned over or have sunk into the earth with the passage of time.

As the years go by, cemeteries are becoming well-tended park-like institutions. But old individual graves, and small cemeteries will remain a part of Pitt County's landscape for years to come.

BRICK GRAVES . . . with some of the hand made brick still exist in a few of the county's cemeteries.

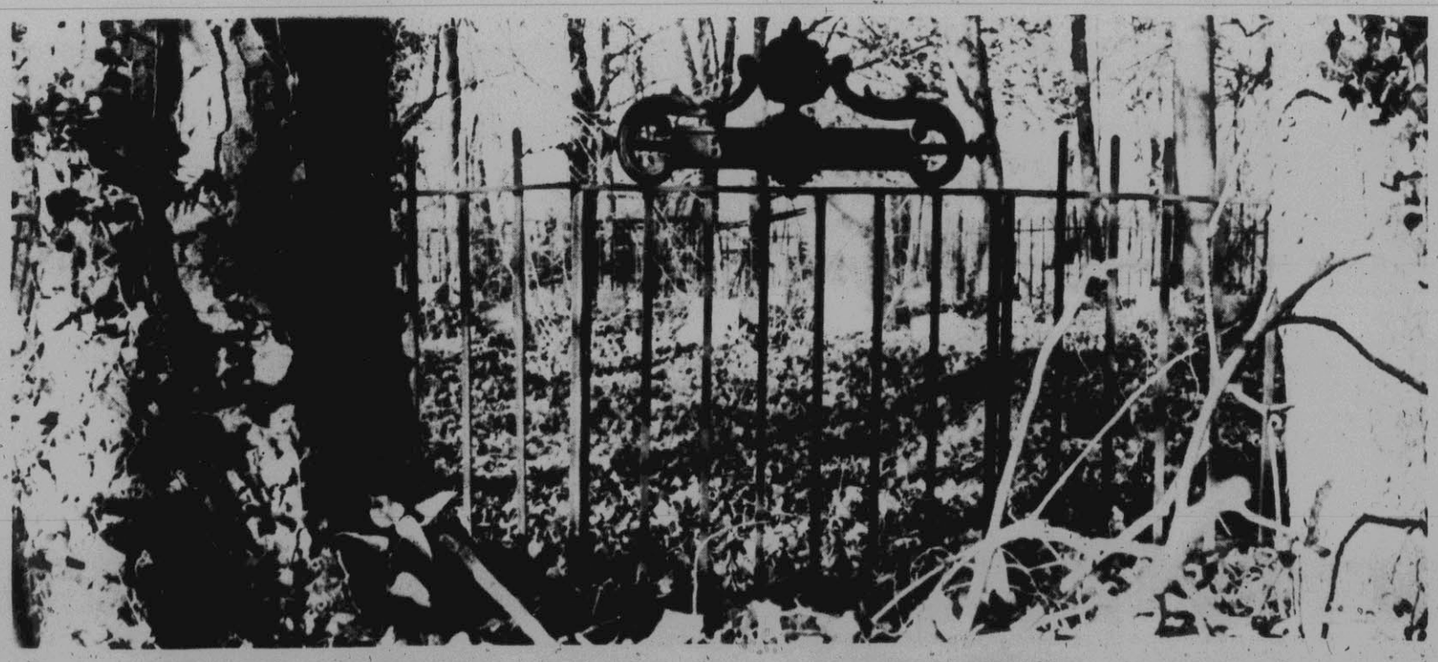

Text And Photos By Tommy Forrest

SHADOWS OF TIME . . . fall across this old grave as the mid-morning sun casts strong shadows from a fence.

COUNTRYSIDE SERENITY . . . The cemetery shown above stands in the middle of a Pitt County farm, neat and well-kept.

RUSTY GATE . . . set off by trees, was perhaps often opened and closed. It now stands idle.

Ph. D., M. D.

CASE L-502: Mavis G., aged 24, is soon to have a baby.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "my husband and I have been arguing over its name.

"I like something that is musical and unique, but he thinks we should use good, solid names, especially if it is a boy.

"For he says boys often get a complex about sissy names.

"Is that true?"

Yes, it is certainly true that many little boys dislike the fancy names their doting mothers have given them.

That is one reason why such youngsters delight in inelegant monickers, such as "Spike" or "Butch" or even "Fatso."

Girls are not as likely to resent masculinizing names, such as Pat (Patricia or Bobby (Roberta) or Jo (Josephine).

For in childhood, girls feel inferior to boys in many ways, so they gladly adopt cigarettes, liquor, jeans and even nicknames that have a masculine flavor.

But boys do not wish to be regarded as sissy!

A mother of my acquaintance had trouble making her son tuck his shirttail inside his belt.

So she finally hit upon the clever device of sewing a lace fringe on his shirttail.

Thereafter, he was meticulous about keeping it tucked inside his belt, for he didn't want to appear sissy!

In our family, we named our firstborn son George Washington Crane, since we had been carrying that name for over 100 years through four generations.

And when George was in early grade school, he solemnly informed his mother and me that he was always going to tell the truth, for he added, "George Washington never told a lie!"

This minor incident shows that children often respond in a positive manner to lofty sentiment linked with the famous person for whom they have been named.

Our other 3 boys were given good, solid Bible names, as Philip, Daniel and David.

And we christened our daughter Judith.

Then, to help the children remember their genealogy, we inserted the maiden names of their mother and grandmothers.

Philip was thus named Philip Miller Crane, since my wife was a Miller.

My mother's maiden name was Bever, so Daniel was called Daniel Bever Crane.

My wife's mother was a Goodrich, so David was thus christened David Goodrich Crane.

If you have several children, it is thus efficient to use the surnames of the mother and grandmothers as middle names, at least for your sons.

Good, historical masculine names include Andrew, William, Thomas, Franklin, Stephen, Robert, John, James, Peter, etc.

Similar feminine names are Rachel, Anne, Miriam, Ruth, Esther, Deborah, Martha, Mary, Cora, Elizabeth, Sarah, etc.

But sometimes a name loses some of its rhythmic appeal when it is shortened in the usual nickname, as Pete, for Peter; Rae for Rachel.

So send for my 200-point "Tests for Parents," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

Being a superb parent involves many facets, over and beyond the naming of your kiddies.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Foreign Coins Beat Fare Hike

NEW YORK (AP) — Some city subway riders have found that you can beat the new 30-cent fare by depositing foreign coins of lesser value in the turnstiles.

Hundreds of old French franc pieces and coins from Denmark, the Bahamas, Spain, Mexico, Jamaica and Venezuela have shown up in the fare boxes in the one week since the new, enlarged tokens have been in use.

Several large coin dealers in the city said Tuesday that they had received dozens of requests from persons who wanted to buy large quantities of token-sized coins, presumably to no good end.

City Termed Heat Island

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Government weather researchers said Tuesday metropolitan Buffalo—the heat it generates and its smokestacks and auto exhaust—play a role in increasing the amount of snowfall from storms sweeping in off Lake Erie.

Researchers said the city actually is an island of heat that can be as much as 20 degrees warmer than surrounding snow-covered terrain during daylight hours.

The heat and air rise above the city, they said, and rising with them are particles from industry, cars and residential areas—particles that form the nuclei or cores for snowflakes.

The researchers from the Environmental Science Services Administration Research Laboratories at Boulder, Colo., came to this conclusion after conducting cloud-seeding experiments with silver iodide in Buffalo this fall and winter.

An 18th century Bermuda silversmith, David Glegg Ming, became widely known for his teething rings made of boar's tusk mounted in silver.

UNC Committee Favors Retaining ROTC Units

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A special committee has recommended that the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill retain its ROTC units and incorporate them into a special curriculum on war and defense.

The committee, composed of five faculty members and three students, proposed setting up the special curriculum for naval and Air Force ROTC students and any others that wanted to take it.

The report said the unique curriculum should concentrate on "war as a paramount human problem," rather than a "vocational specialty."

"The possibility that American soldiers commanded by an officer on the scene killed more than 500 unarmed men, women and children underscores the supreme importance of educating officers in such a way that the uncivilized use of military force becomes abhorrent to them," the report said in a reference to the alleged My Lai massacre in Vietnam.

The committee was headed by history Prof. George V. Taylor and was appointed by UNC Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson last spring.

"For reasons that are difficult to understand, American universities have slighted the study of war as a social and moral phenomenon and left it to the hazards of piecemeal treatment," the committee said.

It proposed that all ROTC professors be given faculty council voting rights, which they do not have.

The committee found that most restrictions on cadets, such as neat appearance and short hair, were reasonable but suggested other restrictions be lifted.

The committee recommended the students be permitted to major in any field and that it be made easier for students to drop out of ROTC if they wished.

The report goes now to the administrative board of the College of Arts and Sciences, which will make its recommendations to the Faculty Council for consideration Feb. 6.

There are 360 UNC students enrolled in the Navy ROTC unit at Chapel Hill and 90 in the Air Force unit.

The committee rejected proposals by some UNC faculty members that the ROTC curriculum be abolished, as it has been at some universities.

The report recommended setting up a "course on moral and political philosophy dealing with the ethics of force and coercion."

Kinston Lawyer To Be Candidate

KINSTON, N. C. (AP)—Fitzhugh E. Wallace Jr., Kinston attorney and former Lenoir County Democratic party leader, said today he will be a Republican candidate for the state House of Representatives.

Wallace said, "Taxation is and can be an unconscionable burden on us all, and should be limited to only those taxes absolutely required for sound and recognized functions, and should be reduced at every reasonable opportunity."

He recently announced his switch to the Republican party. He was co-chairman of Gov. Dan Moore's election law study commission and has been chairman of the Lenoir County Board of Elections.

WILL TRY AGAIN

X-Rated Films Bonanza And Burden To Theaters

By NORMAN GOLDSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The controversial X-rating for movies is proving both a bonanza and a burden to the people who operate the nation's theaters.

The bonanza is obvious from the box-office success of the sex-oriented films, both the ineptly made ones that make up with sex scenes what they lack in quality, and the fine film efforts which were given the rating because of what was considered excessive nudity or obscenity.

The burden is primarily one of moral responsibility and in enforcing the industry-devised ratings system—an X-tag bars youngsters under 16, with local variations in age, from attending the movie under any circumstances.

For the theater owners and managers, the responsibility often conflicts with commerce, as they are faced with a plethora of sex films, major productions as well as cheaper "nudies," and a dearth of others.

Some of the nation's movie exhibitors have voluntarily refused to play X-rated films, but for the most part, circuit owners have opted in favor of commerce.

A recent survey by the Young National Association of Theater Owners, or Young NATO, a small group of second-generation movie house owners, showed that between 1,000 and 1,500 theaters have declined to show X-rated films. In a questionnaire sent out last September to 13,000 theater managers, 47 per cent of the 3,164 who replied in the anonymous survey said they would not play X-films.

Of those who did play X-films, 70 per cent said they enforce the ratings restrictions and exclude all underage patrons.

Don Durwood, chairman of Young NATO, who runs movie houses in Kansas City, Mo., and other cities in the Southwest and West, said he thought the number would be less now, because since the survey, in October and November, "there was not much else to play."

Durwood noted that most of those who declined the X-films were from cities of less than 100,000 population. "They're playing them in the larger cities," he said, "but these smaller situations have a lot of sensitive pressures."

The Young NATO members, as a result of the survey, recommended that the ratings system be modified to distinguish between X-rated pictures made strictly for exploitation and those made with serious artistic intent.

One of the pictures Durwood Theaters bypassed in Kansas City was "I Am Curious, (Yellow)" a sexually explicit Swedish film which has caused theater owners the greatest concern and still is the subject of court litigation in numerous cities.

Dick Smith, state manager of National General Corp. Fox Theaters, resigned his job to protest a Phoenix, Ariz., booking of "I Am Curious." (Its American distributor, Grove Press, does not subscribe to the rating code of the Motion Picture Association of America, but has self-imposed an X restriction on the import.)

"I feel anyone over 18 years old should have a right to see what he wants to see," Smith said at the time. "But that leaves us with the responsibility for using good common sense in what we present. There are places this type of picture can be played, but I don't feel the type of theaters our company operates should play them."

The man who runs the company disagreed, however. Irving Levin, president of the circuit parent National General Corp., told a recent meeting of his company's theater division: "In these changing times, public tastes dictate. We really do not set the standards. The people who come to be entertained do. If we do not play the pictures, our competition will. The sky's the limit when it comes to selling pictures to draw patrons."

The public indeed made successes of many X-rated films last year. "I Am Curious" grossed $6.6 million since it was released in the United States a year ago, more than $1 million of it in New York alone. According to Variety, it was the 12th highest grossing film in the nation. Another X-rated film, "Midnight Cowboy, ranked seventh, with an $11-million gross since it was released last March. (The top-grossing film, however, was Disney's "The Love Bug," followed by the musical, "Funny Girl."

The majority choice of cash over cautious use of X-rated films by theaters was sharply attacked by Walter Reade, New York-New Jersey theater owner and head of a film distributing company that released the film version of "Ulysses" several years ago after numerous court fights.

"The X-classification," Reade said recently "has inspired the production and release of trash the likes of which was undreamed of five years ago, even 18 months ago ...

Indeed, some theater managers and film company advertising men have made the X-rating a sales gimmick, a come-on for ticket sales.

SUICIDAL TENDENCIES

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Subconscious suicidal tendencies in drivers are to blame for many car accidents, believes Prof. Johan Garbers, Dean of Education at Port Elizabeth University.
