House Members Seek Assurance Of Alternatives

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Republicans in today's House vote to override President Nixon's veto of the $19.7 billion health-education bill sought last minute assurances the administration would come up with an acceptable alternative.

They were confident they had the 145 votes to defeat the attempt to override if all House members vote. Democrats said even if they lost the battle they still would make the bill a major campaign issue in the November elections. Leaders of both sides said the end result would be good for them at the polls.

Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., said Tuesday the White House had agreed to accept a $442 million funding level in a new bill for the crucial impact aid section allocating funds to school districts which have heavy enrollments because of federal installations.

New Round Of Interest Rate Hikes Looming

By RICHARD DAW

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolinians may be heading for another round of interest rate increases on many kinds of loans.

The commission did not get into discussion of the code's provisions in its organizing session Tuesday attended by nine of its 11 members.

Senate Republicans watched today's vote closely, hoping the House would sustain the veto and thus save them the agony of voting on it. The measure had passed the House 261-110 in December and the Senate 74-17 last week.

Wilson Sits In On Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today accorded Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Great Britain the privilege of sitting in on a meeting of the National Security Council—the President's top-most advisory board on national security and foreign policy affairs.

The NSC session preceded another meeting of the President and prime minister set for shortly before noon.

The NSC meetings are so hush hush that the White House seldom discloses even the general topics up for consideration. And the invitation to Wilson to sit in underscored the depth of Anglo-American relations at the top level.

Arrest Boys For Selling Heroin

NEW YORK (AP) — Three schoolboys, ages 11, 13 and 15, were arrested Tuesday, accused by police of selling heroin after class in the Coney Island section of Brooklyn.

Ervin Invokes Micah, Kipling And A Cockroach, But Loses Case

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sam J. Ervin Jr., senator and lawyer, summoned the prophet Micah, Rudyard Kipling, and Archy the cockroach as he argued his case.

Waving his dark-rimmed glasses like a weapon, his white eyebrows twitching with every word, Ervin spent two days trying to convince his peers the provision violates the Constitution.

Ervin, southern conservative and strictest of strict constructionists, has invoked it also in a fashion which sometimes allies him with Senate liberals.

Four Israeli Jets Raid Cairo Suburb; Military Installation Said Target

By JOSEPH E. DYNAM
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO (AP) — This Egyptian capital underwent its first air raid since the 1967 war today when four Israeli planes attacked targets on the outskirts of the fashionable suburb of Maadi.

The noise of the explosions and gunfire reverberated across the capital. In several parts of the city black puffs of anti-aircraft fire could be seen. Windows rattled throughout the city, but no air raid sirens sounded.

Artillery rocket and heavy machine-gun fire could be clearly heard in the center of the city where noise echoed from tall buildings. Windows of the fashionable Nile front Hilton Hotel shook.

Claim Atomic War Targets Identified

HAMBURG, Germany (ap) — A West German magazine reported today it had been passed top secret U.S. Air Force plans for dropping atomic bombs on West German cities in the event of a nuclear war.

The material handed to Stern comprised purported photographed copies of pages from a handbook, "Nuclear Yield Requirement," that it said was compiled by the deputy chief of staff for intelligence of the U.S. Air Forces in Europe, which is headquartered in Wiesbaden.

The pages outline possible atomic targets in northern West Germany, including the cities of Kiel, Neumunster, Flensburg and Luebeck, as well as strategic targets along the North Baltic Seas Canal, the magazine said in a report that will be published in its edition appearing on news stands Thursday.

Little Pleasure From New Heart

ROME (AP) — Mrs. Philip Blaiberg was quoted in an Italian magazine today as saying her husband, regarded as the world's first successful heart transplant, got little pleasure out of the time added to his life.

The magazine Bellezza quoted Mrs. Blaiberg as saying that of his 594 days with the transplanted heart, Blaiberg spent 248 in hospital and 95 entirely in bed at home at Capetown, South Africa.

Speaking of other raids, Maguid said Israel is hitting civilian targets. He said this was "an abortive attempt to undermine the morale of the Egyptian people."

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sources close to the Yablonski family slaying investigation said today three hired gunmen killed the United Mine Workers official and his wife and daughter, and that a fourth man who backed out of the assignment was in custody.

Three men have been charged with murder in the slayings. They are Paul E. Gilly, 36, Claude E. Vealey, 26, and Aubrey W. Martin, 21, all of the Cleveland area.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Gertrude Weber, an antiques dealer, gets as excited about 17th and 18th century handmade kitchen utensils as most other women do about diamonds and furs.

Her enthusiasm is shared by museums and house restoration project managers as well as individual collectors. Among the museums and restorations she's helped outfit are Schenck House of the Brooklyn Museum, the Torrington, Conn., Museum, George Washington's Headquarters, Rockingham, N.J., and a French consul's kitchen for the Colonial Dames of Texas.

In an interview, Mrs. Weber suggested that the relatively neglected field of kitchen antiques has come full circle in recent years.

We talked with her before the opening on Jan. 22 of the 10-day 16th annual Winter Antiques Show, where she will have a booth. The show benefits the East Side House Settlement.

When she entered her first show in the early 1960s, handmade kitchen and hearth utensils were so inexpensive that the average housewife could afford them instead of buying new ones.

Up to three years ago, she said, you still could find copper and brass implements for kitchen and hearth. But today's distribution is so wide and the demand so great that the supply has dwindled and prices have risen.

Complexity of design and use don't necessarily influence the value of such utensils.

"You won't believe it, but one hard to find, rare and expensive item is a set of iron skewers with its own hanger. The last I saw had at least half a dozen skewers, and Sturbridge (a village restoration in Massachusetts) has a copy for $350."

"Very important bronze cauldrons may sell for as much as $1,000. I saw one that was patched and plugged—it was a real bargain at $285."

"Most women want a kettle," Mrs. Weber said. "And you can still buy a nice one for $35-$45."

"People want a range of things, but they usually start with a kettle, then add something to put logs in."

She added that collectors may use a cauldron, originally a cooking pot, as a log holder and a peat bucket as a jardiniere.

The vivacious Mrs. Weber said she first became interested in kitchen and hearth antiques while collecting early American recipes when she and her husband, Palmer, went on house tours in Virginia, his home state.

Weber, an investment banker, was a college professor at that time and his wife planned to become a teacher.

Antique utensils changed her plans. She began buying them, and reselling to gourmet friends, to help finance more trips. Soon she was buying so many that she needed shipping crates. Rather than buy disposable ones, she branched into cottage furniture, including English and American chests large enough for packing boxes.

Today, furniture is the mainstay of her Kitchen and Hearth Antiques shop in the Long Island Historical Society Bldg., Brooklyn, because the supply of utensils no longer is large enough to support a business.

Mrs. Weber said her own interest is not in antiques as such, but in the beauty of workmanship and what they reveal about home life of their periods. "You would expect (hand-made) kitchen objects to be relatively crude, but they were made to the high standards that the guilds demanded (before the days of manufacturing)."

Founders often cast the kitchen cauldrons with the same expertise they showed in casting bells, she said.

Authenticating such objects—dating them and identifying country of origin—often is as tough or tougher than locating objects to buy, she said. A collection of photographs and drawings helps.

"The similarities are startling. The numbers and types of cauldrons (from different countries and periods) are very much alike. You look for little clues—the design of a handle may identify an object. Dated objects are rare."

She Can Still Win This Race

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I knew when I married my husband that his first love would always be horses. I never minded being second to a horse, but now I think a female bi-ped has put me in third place.

This woman is not married. She has horses of her own and she relies on my husband for help and advice about her horses. They seem to spend a lot of time together. I am invited to join them, but what fun is there for me when there is nothing but horse talk?

People who know her say that she has no women friends, enjoys the company of men, but doesn't want the responsibilities of marriage.

I love my husband too much to leave him, but I was much happier before this horsey dame came along. My husband keeps telling me that I have nothing to worry about, but for the first time in my life I am jealous. Please tell me what to do.

DEAR THIRD: Take it from the horse's mouth, your husband is probably just feeling his oats. Turn the twosome into a trio, brush up on your knowledge of horses, and you may win by a nose.

DEAR ABBY: The facts are as follows: "Mr. Phyllis" is a hairdresser who works on commission. After his day's work at the shop or on Sunday, or his day off, occasionally he goes to the home of a patron to set her hair there. It is usually for a wedding or some special occasion. And let me add that these patrons go to the shop regularly, too, so it is not as if the Mr. Phyllis is taking any business away from the shop.

My question: Do you think the shop is entitled to a commission on the services rendered by Mr. Phyllis OUTSIDE the shop?

DEAR INTERESTED: As I see it, what "Mr. Phyllis" does on his own time is HIS business. And if he wants to do business after business hours, that's also his business.

DEAR ABBY: My husband owns his own business and takes care of it almost entirely by telephone, which means that he is home all the time, and frankly, Abby, he gets underfoot.

I am the type of woman who likes a clean and orderly house, and I have my own way of doing things. I like to give each room a thoro cleaning, then I know that it's done, and I can sit down and relax. But with my husband home all the time, he's always in my way and I just hate having to clean "around" him.

If I could get him out of the way for just three full hours so I could clean properly, I'd be the happiest woman in the world. When I try to tell my husband how I hate to clean around him, he says, "Quit nagging me." What should I do?

BOTHERED

DEAR BOTHERED: The next time you tell your husband how you "hate to clean around him," listen to yourself. Do you come over like a loving, slightly "helpless" housewife enlisting his cooperation? Or do you sound more like a whining, impatient shrew whose demands have put him on the defensive? Then, perhaps you can answer your own question.

DEAR ABBY: Don't give up on your campaign against those god-awful, ugly, clumsy shoes that women are supposed to wear this season.

My husband has been in the retail shoe business for many, many years, and he tells me that the shoes he has to show his customers now are the most unflattering he has ever seen. In fact, he says that he actually has to turn his back whenever he shows these clodhoppers to the lady customers.

Abby, no woman I've talked to likes these shoes, but they buy them because there is nothing else to buy.

The manufacturers get by with them because so few women take the trouble to complain; they feel somebody else should do the complaining. If all the women who read this letter object to being shifted from needle-toe, foot-crippling styles to these clodhopper shoes, the manufacturers would stop this fad of built-in obsolescence.

Tell women who are unhappy with shoe styles to write to the National Shoe Retailers Association, 200 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10016. Otherwise the shoes next year will be so unflattering you won't be able to tell the men's shoes from the women's.

Do not use my name or my husband will kill me.

Paris Designer Predicts: To Overcome Fashion Grayness Will Be Salvation Of Couture

By JOAN DEPPA
PARIS (UPI)—Grim predictions of an end to the haute couture industry within the next decade have not shaken even a crystal chandelier in Pierre Balmain's elegant salons.

On the contrary, Balmain, one of the leading Paris designers for more than two decades, believes the struggle of modern men and women to remain individuals will provide more clients for his sort of custom-designed clothes than before.

"The drama of fashion in the future will be to overcome the grayness, the sameness of modern life," Balmain said. "It will be the salvation of our industry."

"The modern world is becoming more and more gray. I say gray because that's the way it strikes me. It would be the same if it were all orange," the designer said.

"A car made in Japan does not look that much different from one made in Germany or France or Detroit. You could look at a group of buildings in Tokyo and if you couldn't see the signs written in Japanese characters, you might be in any big city in the world," he said.

"The sign of our times is that ready-to-wear clothes, the clothes of the average people are getting better and better. That means the level of appearance of the people on the street improves but it also imposes the danger of uniformity," he continued.

Balmain said the ready-to-wear styles produced by most big manufacturers were a popularization of trends launched by what he calls "pilot people."

"Personalities will always influence fashion and these personalities must be able to find things that are individual," the designer said.

"Originally it was queens and princesses. Then it became movie stars, because the movies can afford to spend any amount of money. In the future, I wonder... he mused and tilted back in his leather chair. "I think there will always be the happy few who can afford to spend vast sums on very individual clothes."

Balmain said one important thing to remember about real fashion or "pilot people" who help lead it is that they cannot be created artificially. "When you examine the impact of a woman like Brigitte Bardot, who was brought to that point of glamour artificially, you understand," said Balmain, who has dressed Miss Bardot for the screen but not in private life.

"When some trends are brought about artificially, as when they tried to introduce the James Bond look or the Bonnie and Clyde look, they don't last either," he said. "Fashion is not merely commercialization."

"As a friend of mine who is the most important man in French ready-to-wear said recently, fashions like the very maxi-skirts or the very mini-skirts are just to shock. He described them as just like the foam of a wave," Balmain said. "They're not a wave, just the foam. They make a lot of noise, but don't really amount to much."

The designer, who opened his first men's wear boutique this fall, said the trend towards more variety in men's fashions was part of the fight against the uniformity of modern life.

"Men have to maintain a certain appearance of steadiness and strength. Society expects them to play a certain role, but outside their business life they can be very casual and it is there they must rediscover their personality," Balmain said.

Research Group Foresees Use Of Synthetic Foods

By BERNARD BRENNER
WASHINGTON (UPI)

Government food experts believe Americans will be eating more red meat and poultry in the decade of the 1970s—along with more food substitutes such as "steaks" made from soybeans.

A reasonable guess about typical diets a decade from now would include more beef, more poultry, and more processed fruits and vegetables, according to Rex F. Daly of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service.

But there likely will be less milk, fewer eggs, and smaller amounts of animal fats like butter and lard, Daly added. He made the forecasts in a recent report on the long-range food outlook.

Looking through the 1970s down to the end of the century, Daly said gains in the average consumer's consumption of meats probably won't match the big increases of recent years.

While there is no reason to expect a revolutionary change in U.S. diets unless the world population explosion is unchecked or if U.S. production fails to rise as expected, Daly added:

"Synthetic foods and substitute vegetable proteins and oils will become more widely used in place of animal proteins and fats."

Daly said prospects are good that food supplies can meet rising needs in the decade ahead. The economist said U.S. agriculture now is operating under wraps, with millions of acres currently held out of production under government supply-control programs. In fact, he said, farmers a decade from now may still be worrying about surpluses.

But Daly cautioned that there are at least two factors which could affect future expansion of food supplies and the cost of those supplies.

National concern over pollution of the environment by chemicals is growing, he pointed out, with the result that new anti-pollution controls "may increase (food) production costs and slow the present upward trend in yields." He also said there is some question whether overall gains in farm efficiency can be as great in the future as in the past.

What about food prices in the coming decade?

Prices probably will be higher. But consumers probably will be earning more, too.

Discussing this in an interview, Daly said prices for foods will continue to push upward in comparison with crop prices. The gap between steak and oatmeal, in other words, may continue to widen.

But Daly said that with total farm productivity continuing strong, the odds are that retail food price increases of the decade ahead likely will mostly reflect changes in general price levels and the steadily rising cost of processing and distributing food.

The economist added that current projections also indicate that consumer income is likely to advance faster than food prices.

"If food prices increase at about the same rate as those of other goods—as they have over the past 35 years, spending for food will have to shrink as a percentage of consumer income," Daly said.

The share of the typical consumer's paycheck spent on food has dropped from 20 per cent in 1960 to a record-low 16.5 per cent this year. In the 1970s, the percentage may go even lower.

What about the coming 12 months?

Other Agriculture Department specialists predict that food prices probably will average about three per cent higher in 1970 than in 1969.

The forecast is based on the assumption that the government's anti-inflation campaign will help produce a slowdown in general economic activity during 1970. If inflation continues unchecked, the food price forecasters might have to change their tune, as they did this year.

Early in 1969, Agriculture Department economists were predicting food prices this year would average two to three per cent above 1968. The final figures show a gain of nearly five per cent.

On the basis of current supply and economic prospects, however, here is the best guess government specialists can make for 1970:

"Relatively little change is expected in average food prices between now and the middle of 1970.

"Little further change is likely this winter in meat prices, prices for coffee likely will rise, prices for dairy products, cereals and bakery products and sugars and sweets likely will continue gradually upward.

"Little change is likely for fats and oil products. But steady to lower prices (can be expected) for many other foods including fruits, potatoes, chickens and eggs."

BISSETTE'S

Lagging In Our School Taxes?

Apparently, as city board of education member Harding Sugg has pointed out, Greenville is lagging behind other cities in its local tax support of the schools.

Greenville taxpayers are paying 25 cents per $100 valuation for support of the schools in the local school district. This ceiling was established by a public vote in 1937, according to Sugg. Of course, the amount of money the schools receive from the tax has increased as property values went up. Still, there has been no change in this levy in 23 years.

Under state law this could be increased, again by public vote, to 50 cents per $100 valuation. It was brought out at a PTA Council meeting Monday night that Rocky Mount has established a top ceiling of 50 cents, while Wilson has a 39 cents rate. Goldsboro, with a 31 cent rate, is considered on the low side.

Of course, additional money will not cure all the problems of the city school. However, it is obvious that we need to take another look at the school needs which are provided for through local funds and consider an increase in the school tax levy.

At another meeting this week, it was suggested that Rose High needs additional custodians in order that the school can be kept clean in an effort to instill pride among the students.

Assistant Principal T.S. Whitney said it had been suggested that two individuals should be employed to check attendance and that additional guidance counselors were needed to handle individual student problems.

We think it would be a good time for the board of education to establish priorities for the city school's specific needs, which are not provided for through state and local funds. Then the public would have an idea of how much additional tax levy is needed and steps could be taken toward having a referendum on the matter.

All Can Gain Through Spirit Of Cooperation

East Carolina University and UNC have announced plans of cooperation in developing the Allied Health Sciences program on the local campus.

The venture was announced by Dr. Jenkins and UNC-CH Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson and UNC president William Friday.

Some UNC staff members have already begun to serve as consultants on several of the health programs which are underway here. In addition students in some field may intern at Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

We feel this spirit of cooperation is significant at this time. The cooperative program should mean that ECU's allied health program can be developed more rapidly and all the state's citizens will benefit from this.

Negroes Plan Political Push

By CHUCK MOONEY

The position of Negroes in the Democratic Party power structure is changing. In this guest column for the N. C. Association of Afternoon Dailies, Chuck Mooney, Raleigh Times political reporter, discusses this situation.

Tar Heel blacks, completely satisfied by the recent Hunt Commission reforms in the Democratic Party are planning to take control of much of the machinery in the East.

The instrument of black power on the Coastal Plain will be a change in party organization patterned after a national reform instituted by a national study commission headed by Sen. George McGovern, D-S. D. The McGovern Commission has said all future convention delegations and other party groups must "reasonably reflect" the racial make-up of the area it represents.

The Hunt Commission followed this to the letter and the State Executive Committee has approved requiring re-precinct, county and district organizations to reasonably reflect not only the racial composition but also the range of ages and the balance between sexes.

"We expect to have a big reflection of blacks in many of the counties in the 1st and 2nd Congressional Districts," said Dr. Reginald Hawkins. "Eleven counties in these two districts have a majority of Negroes and we expect to have majorities on committees at all levels there."

Hawkins is the Charlotte dentist who ran third with 125,000 votes in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. He is, at least for the moment, the titular head of the black political movement.

Potential—"We have a potential over the state of 700,000 Negro voters," he says. "There's no longer any way they can leave us out. If they pull any shenanigans, they're subject to challenge."

"And we're not going to let them forget it. We intend to elect members to the State House and Senate this year," Hawkins said.

He said he thinks Mrs. Eva Clayton, who challenged Rep. L. H. Fountain for his congressional nomination, has an excellent chance of taking the district away from Fountain if she runs again. Hawkins thinks the new black committees which will be formed virtually insure the election of blacks to most offices.

If they have realized the implications of the move, the new committee composition may be giving gubernatorial hopefuls a bit of a scare.

Democratic nominees have always expected to break even with Republicans in the Piedmont and win big down East. While the Eastern precincts were more sparsely populated, they always voted Democratic to the last man and woman.

Changes—Such Eastern solidarity enabled Gov. Luther Hodges to sail past Republican Kyle Hayes by 350,000 votes. Those margins, however, dwindled to a 84,000 votes between Gov. Bob Scott and GOP challenger Jim Gardner.

If blacks control many Eastern precincts, the Democratic candidates are going to have to deal with them. But this will alienate the conservative whites who have been the party's salvation in year's past.

If the candidates don't deal with the blacks, then they'll be turning their backs on their party. And dealing with blacks won't be limited to just the East either.

Gardner is a good example to what happens to candidates who modify position according to the section of the state in which they are campaigning. Modern communications have killed the political device.

U. S. Love For Coffee Cooling

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1962, Americans not only were drinking a lot of coffee but were tending to drink it black and bitter, using less cream and sugar than in previous years.

Per capita consumption by persons 10 years or older rose to 3.12 cups a day that year, and the coffee break had become an American institution equivalent to the British tea.

Everything indicated that America's fondness for the beverage was a long-term agreement and that it could only get stronger and stronger. Coffee was, in fact, considered by many to be the national drink. Everything was perking, so to speak, and the coffee producers basked in the aroma of success.

Well, for reasons that seem to be tied up with America's curiously changing habits, and with a little prodding from makers of other drinks, the love affair has cooled considerably.

—By 1969 Americans still were drinking a lot of coffee—something like 2.8 billion pounds a year—but per capita consumption had dropped to 2.68 cups a day. The coffee industry clearly had serious problems.

They had reason to be upset. Prices have remained nearly stable, a pound averaging 68.8 cents in 1959 and 71 cents in 1969, despite inflation. And the twice a day coffee break had even been written into some union contracts.

A marketing man was asked to explain the change, and he replied: "There is only so much liquid a human can be expected to consume. It is not a growing market; people drink the same amount of liquids year in and year out."

"The problem with coffee," he continued, "is that it is losing its share of the liquid intake of Americans to other beverages, but mainly to soft drinks." Even during the so-called coffee breaks.

The statistics tend to bear him out. Back in 1955, Americans consumed about 184.2 bottles of soft drinks a day. By 1969, per capita consumption is estimated to have reached 355 bottles, or nearly one a day.

Put in more colossal terms, Americans in 1955 consumed only 1.264 billion cases of soda or tonic or pop or whatever you call it. By 1969, that figure had grown to 2.985 billion cases and was rising steadily.

Audit and Surveys Inc., one of the nation's largest marketing research organizations, took on the problem of discovering how the change came about, and it found that:

"Today's youth-oriented population associates coffee drinking with an older age group while I think age group while I think soft drinks with the more exciting and swinging part of the national scene."

Solomon Dutka, president, claims that his research shows people do not have a natural "coffee tooth" in the same way they have a sweet tooth. It is an acquired taste, he asserts, citing a study that shows taste was the most common reason for both drinking and not drinking coffee.

In other words, people must be taught and encouraged to drink coffee, he told a meeting of the National Coffee Association. And how do you do this? "By pushing people over the 'taste threshold' at a younger age."

Based on existing consumption patterns, he said, "converting people to coffee only two and a half years sooner would increase U.S. coffee consumption by 10 per cent."

After that, the marketing man suggested, the industry must adapt itself to modern habits. It must, in the manner of soft drinks, offer flavor options.

Strength For Today

IT CAN BE DONE

Eleven teenagers (six boys and five girls) were in a railroad coach. Some of us who were in the same coach declared that not in years had we seen such uninhibited cheerfulness and good nature as was being manifested by these boys and girls. They chattered. Once in a while someone got a bump on the head but this only increased their glee. They wisecracked. In that railroad car, holding probably fifty people, these teenagers were undoubtedly the happiest persons aboard.

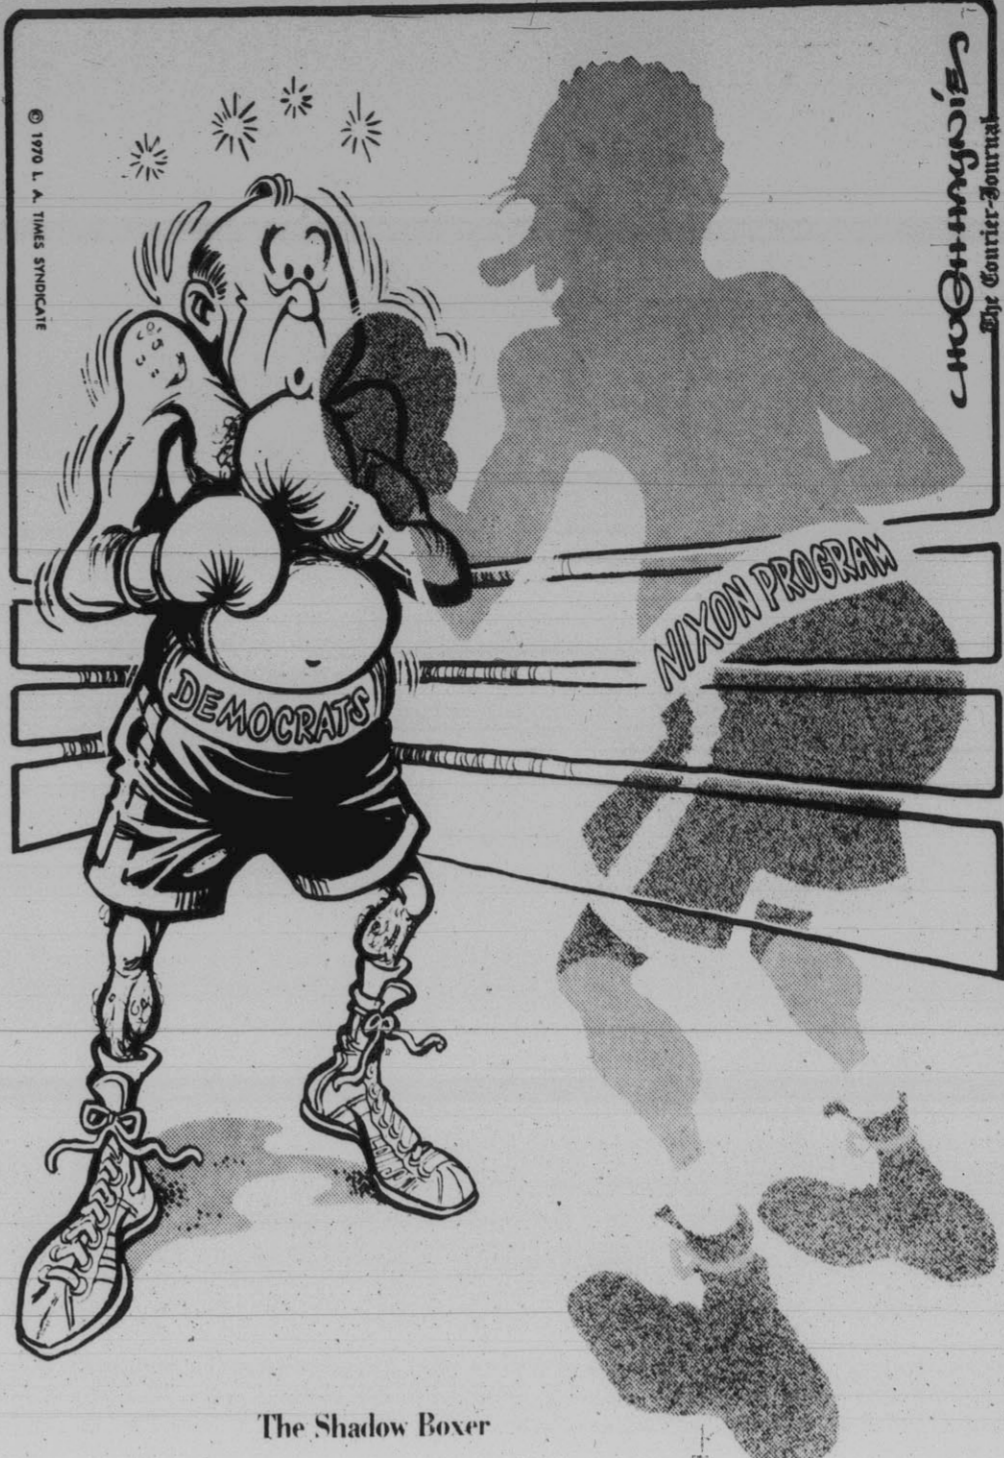

But they were all blind—members of a blind institute that operated in that area. We can well believe that there were times when they were not cheerful. For them the light is never turned on, and undoubtedly some of them as they lie in their beds weep quietly and wish that they had what most of the world's population has and enjoys.

It all goes to show that happiness does not depend upon circumstances but upon the way we meet circumstances, whatever they are. Abraham Lincoln declared that people are about as happy as they make up their minds to be. This gang of youngsters had made up their minds to be happy, and happy they were. And so were we as we watched them.

The Greek poet Homer was said to be blind. The English poet Milton was blind. A physician of great reputation went blind in middle life but never allowed it to make the least difference as he pushed his career from ordinary to distinguished.

It can be done.

Wally Hasn't Tried It

WASHINGTON — The American railroads may be behind the times when it comes to serving passengers, but as far as their public relations are concerned, they are literally in the Space Age.

ART BUCHWALD

Some months ago, the American railroads hired Wally Schirra, the astronaut, to do their radio and television commercials for them. Schirra, in his sincere voice, tells us what a great job the American railroads are doing for each and every one of us and always ends his commercials with the same statement: "The American railroads—who needs them?—you do."

I'm quite sure Schirra wouldn't make a commercial unless he believed in the product, so the only thing we can assume is that he hasn't taken a ride recently on a passenger train.

I would like to imagine what would happen if one of our astronauts took a ride from Stamford to New York during the morning rush hours.

"This is Penn-Central Control. We are 87 minutes late into takeoff and holding. How do you feel, Wally?" "I'm freezing my tail off.

Where's the train?"

"It's in New Haven and holding, Wally. Suggest you guys go into the waiting room."

Twenty minutes later: "Hello, Penn-Central. I am now in the cabin of the train and holding."

"Wally, our engineers advise us that the lack of heat will not hurt the train, so we're proceeding with all systems go. 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 blastoff!"

Static, noise, explosions, static.

"Wally, where are you? Give your exact position." "I'm still in the Stamford station. The coupling broke on the engine."

Twenty minutes later, Penn-Central Control: "Wally, we're going to try it again. Here we go 4-3-2-1 BLASTOFF!"

"Hello, Penn-Central Control. We're moving, we're moving! It's beautiful."

"What do you see, Wally?" "Nothing, the windows are all fogged. But what a feeling. It's the most wonderful feeling in the world to be on a train and actually moving."

"Hello, Wally. We're going to go through Larchmont in the next hour or so. We want you to drink some water."

"Penn-Central, there is no water on the train."

"Wally, the doctors advise us if you stay on schedule you may not need any water. But don't use up much energy. Can you see Larchmont yet?"

"I think so. There seem to be frozen carcasses of passengers piled all over the station."

Public Forum

To The Editor:

Sunday's paper (January 25, 1970) carried the story of the performance of a play, "The Concept" by members of the Daytop Village of Staten Island, New York, to be presented on Monday, February 2 in Christinberry Memorial Gymnasium of East Carolina University.

The play which is in a series of Drug Emphasis Programs sponsored by the Pitt County Mental Health Association, is a dramatic explanation and demonstration of the principals and functioning of Daytop, which is a half-way house for ex-narcotic addicts.

The Pitt County Mental Health Association and, in particular, its director, Mrs. Elizabeth LeConte are to be congratulated for bringing to Greenville a performance of this caliber.

With drug addiction on the increase and the use of drugs becoming more and more prevalent in our permissive society, there is a tremendous need for us to understand and come to grips with the problem.

"The Concept" entertainment and enlightenment for all who avail themselves of this unusual opportunity.

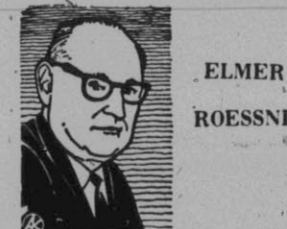

Sincerely,
Helen J. Barrett

Rates Not For Little Savers

By ELMER ROESSNER

New interest rates permitted by the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board still keep the little savers from dipping into the honey pot of high interest rates.

Ordinary passbook rates on savings at commercial banks were allowed to go up from 4 to 4½ per cent maximum. Rates at savings banks remains unchanged at 5 per cent maximum on regular passbook accounts. Savings and loan associations were allowed to raise their passbook rates from 4½ to 5 per cent.

Savings banks are allowed to pay more for time deposits, 5.25 per cent for 90-day deposits, 5.75 per cent for one-year deposits and 6 per cent for deposit of two years or longer. Commercial banks may pay 5.5 per cent on one-year savings certificates and 5.75 per cent on two-year certificates. The previous maximum has been 5 per cent.

Better Rates For The Rich But there are better rates for those with large chunks of money. Short-term Treasury bills are paying around 8 per cent, but they are sold in minimum units of $1,000, which is difficult to save out of a weekly paycheck.

Corporations can get 8.5 per cent on commercial paper, with $100,000 the usual minimum. The new Federal Reserve regulations allow banks to pay 6.25 per cent interest on 59-day certificates of deposits of $100,000 or more, and up to 7.5 per cent for such deposits that run a year or more. But the best that a little saver can get is 6 per cent.

Savings and loan associations are allowed to pay up to 6 per cent for certificates running two years or more, but the Home Loan Bank requires minimum deposits of $10,000. The associations may also pay up to 7½ per cent on certificates of $100,000. These minimums will effectively keep the little fellows away from the honey pot.

No Bitty Minimums New York banks, which generally set the pace for the nation, immediately established minimums that keep small savers from enjoying the top interest rates. The Bowery, Dime and Dollar savings banks offered the higher permissible rates on 90-day, one-year and two-year savings certificates, but specified $500 minimums. Commercial banks generally offered the higher passbook rates but were undecided on offering the higher passbook rates but were undecided on offering the higher rates for term deposits and savings certificates. While all are offering the higher rates, there is yet no unanimity on minimums. Chase Manhattan made no mention of minimums in its first announcements. First Pennsylvania Banking & Trust, which startled the banking fraternity with offers of 7½ per cent notes in units as low as $100, has sold its block of $20 million in such notes in 11 banking days. However, it announced it was not going to repeat the offer, but would offer the highest possible rates under the new schedule. Meanwhile, the idea that the raising of interest rates was not intended to help small savers share in the fat interest rates available to the wealthy was confirmed by Federal Reserve officials who said that the increase was intended to check the flow of deposits from banks. Depositors, largely big ones, had withdrawn around $6 billion from banks in the last of 1969 to buy bonds and notes that paid higher interest rates than banks were permitted to Treasury bills, for instance, have been paying around 8 per cent.

Identity Crisis A Must

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Have you had an identity crisis lately?

Well, if not then you don't belong with the real swinging set. An identity crisis occurs when someone who knew for sure, or thought he did, who or what he was suddenly becomes a stranger to himself. The affliction has become as common in these confusing times as the common cold.

HAL BOYLE

When you are gripped by an identity crisis, you become pitifully indecisive.

In the morning you stare in the mirror at the face you are shaving and question, "Is that really me, or some impostor who has stolen inside the real me?"

Although undergoing an identity crisis is personally unnerving, it is somewhat like having a baby: it gains you a lot of respect from others. They feel that if a dullard such as you can have an identity crisis surely a smart person such as they can have an even bigger and better one.

If you become bored with your identity crisis, you can always find out who you are by a process of eliminating other possibilities.

Such as:
You couldn't be a porcupine, because you're not that touchy.
You couldn't be a cat, because you've never had kittens.

You couldn't be a lion, because nobody runs when you roar.

You couldn't be a bird, because you have a striking lack of feathers.

You couldn't be a tree, because you've never worn a nest of robins in your hair.

You couldn't be a jet plane, a bus, or a train, because nobody rides you except your boss.

You couldn't be money, because you are not a medium of exchange and a measure of value.

You couldn't be a member of Congress, because it's your wife who makes all the speeches and you who do all the listening.

You couldn't be a television performer, because you are not repeatedly interrupted by commercials.

Step by step as you find out who you couldn't possibly be, you become excitingly closer to the discovery of who you must be.

Your identity crisis is finally over when you look at your bank statement. It says there very clearly who you are. You are number Z12-0034-615—that's who you are.

Good—old Z12-0034-615!—The digits ring in your ears happily as you repeat them over and over. You wonder how a guy identified Z12-0034-615 could ever have forgotten who is was. Who would really want to be anyone else in the world?

Gold Mining Once Major North Carolina Industry

By H. G. JONES
Dept. of Archives and History
Written for The AP
RALEIGH (AP)—Gold mining was once second only to agriculture as North Carolina's most important industry.

It started in 1799 with the discovery of a large nugget on the Cabarrus County farm of John Reed, a former Hessian soldier. For three years the hunk was used as a door stop.

Finally a jeweler recognized it as a 17-pound gold nugget. Within a short time several other nuggets, weighing up to 28 pounds each, were found on the Reed farm. After exhausting the surface gold, Reed and his new partners, James Love and Martin Pfifer, opened a vein mine in 1831. By 1849, it is estimated that more than $10 million in gold had been taken from the Reed property alone.

Meanwhile, gold was discovered in Anson, Burke, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Rutherford, and other counties. A Tarboro newspaper in 1828 claimed that North Carolina had become known as the "golden state, from the great lumps of precious metal found there."

Professor Fletcher M. Green of the University of North Carolina, writing about the forgotten industry, pointed out that prior to 1829 all the gold mined in the United States and coined at the Philadelphia Mint was taken from North Carolina.

The discovery of gold brought to North Carolina outside capitalists and laborers. Green wrote, "Gold-finding became the all absorbing topic of the day; capitalists invested in mines, and the gold region expanded daily."

Thousands of foreigners—Welsh, Cornish, Germans, Austrians, Poles, and others—flocked to North Carolina. Farmers began inspecting the stones in their fields; slaves were purchased by local landowners and put to work looking for gold; and large landowners from the east—particularly Granville, Halifax, and Warren counties—moved westward, greatly increasing the number of men and women engaged in gold finding. At one time at least 30,000 persons were engaged in gold mining in the state. A branch mint was built in Charlotte in 1837 and the Bechtler family operated a private mint in Rutherford County from 1831 until 1857.

The early industry was largely restricted to "placer" mining. Dr. E. W. Phifer, Jr., a Morganton surgeon who is an accomplished historian, has described this as the type of mining that "required nothing more than pick, shovel, a stream of water, and a pan—or at most a rocker—with which to separate the heavy particles containing gold and lighter sand, gravel, and debris."

As the surface gold gave out, vein mining was started; this began as ditching but gradually deepened into shafts and tunnels. Large financial investments became necessary for heavy equipment required at the deeper mines.

Among the boom towns that sprang up were Bissell, Brackettown, Capps, Huntsville, Jamestown, Vein Mountain, Brindletown, and Gold Hill. All are now only memories except Gold Hill in Rowan County.

Now when one rides past the pleasant but sleepy community on U.S. 52 between Albemarle and Salisbury, he has little reason to be reminded of Gold Hill's former wealth and fame. If the passerby wants a fascinating tour, however, he might catch E. G. Isenhour between his rural mail delivery trips, for Isenhour is a walking atlas of the Gold Hill area. Earlier this month he led the writer, three members of the Archives and History staff, Salisbury Post writer Jim Brawley, and several others on a tour of old mines.

Only a few hundred yards off the highway we found the remains of tremendous mining operations where more than 3,000 persons were employed in 1856. We were awed by evidence of 600-foot mine shafts, of towers and buildings, the air, of huge piles of sifted earth, of long-extinct railroad spurs, and of foundations of the once famous structures of Gold Hill—a three-story hotel, several mining company headquarters, busy stores, doctors' offices, blacksmith and leatherworkers' shops, and at least one tavern. There once were fifteen mines in the Gold Hill community; the Gold Hill Mining Co. alone was capitalized at a million dollars in 1842, and the town became one of the most prosperous in the Piedmont.

Following the discovery of gold in California in 1849, the industry gradually declined in North Carolina. Some of the mines—for instance, the Union Mine at Gold Hill—later yielded copper, and several operated into the 20th Century. When more concentrated copper deposits were located elsewhere, even this industry died out. And one by one the historic buildings, mostly of wood construction, burned or deteriorated. Only last year the most vivid reminder of the boom town days—the office building of the Gold Hill Mining Co.—burned, taking with it the life of a caretaker. The huge safe, which once must have protected thousands of dollars in securities, sits empty in the ruins. Little is left to reveal the past glory of the community except Isenhour and a few oldtimers who still take delight in trudging over the scarred hills and telling the stories of the "golden" days of Gold Hill.

There was a brief revival of gold fever in North Carolina in the 1930s when several mines were reopened, one of the largest being the Rudisill Mine in Mecklenburg County.

Who knows? There may still be gold in them thar hills.

Bury Corpse Standing Up

VIENNA (AP)—"Standing room for eternity" is at a premium here.

Serge Kirchhofer, formerly a swineherd and radio evangelist, has founded a "Club for the Vertically-Buried Loved Ones."

Kirchhofer's basic idea, according to the February issue of Atlas, the magazine digest of the world's press, is that "man must be buried vertically. He is meant to stand for all eternity, or at any rate, for five years, before he turns to dust."

The grave reformer believes that a person who has lived a straight, upright life will not want to buckle down after death. "And as for those whose lives have been less than upright, death should at least provide the opportunity for going straight."

The idea is to make obsolete undertakers, grave diggers and coffins and to save space. The grave will be a deep, narrow hole, and the corpse will be placed in a plastic tube, about three feet in diameter.

The tube will be covered with a lid, and Kirchhofer plans to offer such options as "a photograph of the loved one placed on top of the lid, or a window through which the face of the loved one can be seen at all times."

Vandalism Has Very High Price

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The cost of vandalism in the 17 National Forests in California in 1968 amounted to $353,235, according to the U.S. Forest Service.

Officials said the vandalism loss would cover the cost of a new 100-unit campground with paved roads, new tables and stoves, a water system and restrooms that would accommodate 500 campers at one time, or more than 6,000 people in one summer season.

PTI To Be Fewer Jobs For Censorship Test Center Young Physicists Cry Denied

Pitt Technical Institute was designated an official GED Testing Center on July 1, 1969, according to Avery E. McRorie.

For this reason, persons interested in securing their high school equivalency certificate may make application to take the GED tests at Pitt Tech or at either of the offices of the city or the county boards of education.

GED tests are given twice monthly, on the first two Saturdays of each month, from 8:00 a.m. until 1:00 p.m. It takes both days to complete the tests. These tests are given at Pitt Tech.

The total cost for taking the GED tests is $3. This is a considerable reduction in price from the former cost of $10.

McRorie stated anyone interested in further information concerning the GED tests—their scope, purpose or any other factor involved—can contact the Director of Student Personnel at Pitt Technical Institute—either by calling 756-3130 or by writing to the director.

CHICAGO (AP) — Some of the nation's elite young scientists are having a hard time finding jobs.

The cutback in federal and state government research funds was the prime reason for the situation given by scientists interviewed Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Physical Society.

A job placement service for physicists is maintained each year in connection with this meeting.

This year, only about 100 potential employers—mainly industrial and academic—have registered their desire to interview job applicants. Nearly 1,500 applicants, all with Ph.D. degrees, are seeking jobs.

Last year, 1,285 applicants were formally interviewed by 167 employers. In 1967, 272 employers could choose from 895 applicants.

A Ph.D. physicist can expect $9,000 a year or more in his first job.

tries no longer want "narrowly trained physicists" to do engineering work.

Clark said there "is still a crying need for good physics teachers" in high schools and junior colleges.

However, Dr. H. Richard Clark, professor of physics at the University of Michigan and past president of the American Association of Physics Teachers, said that as a group the Ph.D.s probably would not be good teachers at this level—they are trained primarily in research.

Dr. Arnold Strassenburg, director of the division of education and manpower at the American Institute of Physics, said there "is no significant number" of physicists actually unemployed.

"But there is a great number, and it's increasing, of those who are not getting the jobs they want," he said.

SAIGON (AP) — Charges that unfavorable news reports were censored by authorities at the American Forces Vietnam Network are "completely unfounded and unsupported," investigators for the U.S. Command said today.

The command's inspector general also denied that a former AFVN newscaster who made the censorship charges during a broadcast is being persecuted for his remarks.

The broadcaster, Spec. 5 Robert E. Lawrence of Atlanta, Ga. was transferred from Saigon to Pleiku and made a chaplain's assistant.

A command spokesman said court-martial charges of disobedience and insubordination pending against Lawrence have nothing to do with the censorship investigation or the newscaster's charge that he was "not free to tell the truth."

The charges concern an earlier incident in which Lawrence refused to obey an order to drive AFVN staff members to their downtown billets.

A summary of the investigation report released by the command said that there was no censorship at AFVN. It classified the withholding of certain stories as "editorial selections."

CAMPUS ROAD BLOCK — Students enforcing a town meeting rule, stop automobiles from entering Marlboro College (Vt.) campus after the faculty, students and administration adopted the restriction as a protest against pollution in this southern Vermont town. Cars no longer enter the campus except for reasons of health or safety, and in that case they must be preceded by a pedestrian bearing a red flag or a lantern at nights. (AP Wirephoto)

Suggest Lessons On Environment

RALEIGH (AP) — A state study group is expected to recommend that North Carolina pupils be given instruction on environment and natural resources for 12 grades.

Suggestions that the step be taken were made Tuesday as the Task Force on Environment and Natural Resources wound up a series of hearings Tuesday.

Dr. Robert Beck Clark, a postdoctoral fellow at the University of Texas, said the present abundance of physicists is an outgrowth of the nation's effort to produce more scientists after the Soviet Union launched Sputnik in 1957.

Young people in high school were told "to go into science and you'll be in a good fix," and many did, he said.

But government cutbacks reduced research positions at institutions, he said, and indus-

Airline Tax Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislation to enable local authorities to tax airline passengers might be introduced in the 1971 General Assembly by Rep. Sam Johnson, D-Wake.

Johnson mentioned the possibility Tuesday and said the tax could provide needed funds for airport improvements.

Johnson said several states, including Ohio, Montana and New Hampshire, are trying the tax, despite contentions it is unconstitutional.

$110,112 In Pitt Taxes

Carolina Telephone's Pitt County taxes for 1969 amounted to $110,112, one of the largest assessments in the county.

Linwood Langley, local manager said that the tax payment covered ad valorem taxes on the company's property located within the county.

A check of the county records indicated that Carolina Telephone ranks among the top six taxpayers in the area.

According to Langley, municipal ad valorem taxes were also paid to Greenville, Bethel, Ayden, and Farmville. These taxes exceeded $49,800.

County and municipal 1969 taxes paid by the company in its 40-county operating area totaled over $2,350,000. Carolina Telephone's entire operating tax bill for 1969, including all state and federal taxes, came to more than $18,600,000.

Langley pointed out that this did not include $5,524,000 of 10 percent federal excise taxes which were billed to telephone users by the company. These taxes are remitted to the federal government upon collection.

U.S. Relief Cargo Arrives In Nigeria

LAGOS (AP) — The first of the American C141 cargo planes landed at Lagos airport today and workers immediately unloaded its supply of three trucks, 10 electric generators and 600 blankets.

The huge four-engine jet, was the first of six planes scheduled to make 21 emergency flights from the United States over a two-week period. It was immediately followed by a C130 prop jet.

Out of deference to the Nigerian government, and its sensitivity towards foreign relief aid, the C141 had its military markings painted over with the words "United States of America".

It's Air Force crew wore civilian clothing.

The first plane will take off again as soon as it is emptied and refueled.

The cargo is being taken to a nearby staging area for immediate dispatch to the war-swept Eastern region.

A U.S.-chartered DC8 is expected to arrive later today on its third and final flight bringing three portable field hospitals and 50 jeeps from the American government.

The cargo will be loaded aboard a 15-ton landing craft to be shipped to Port Harcourt.

Two U.S. Public Health Service specialists arrived with the first aircraft to supervise shipping and mounting of the hospitals. The biggest has 200 beds with X-ray and other facilities.

Recuperating At Key Biscayne

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Nixon's 23-year-old daughter Tricia, ailing for the past two weeks with flu, has gone to the presidential home in Key Biscayne, Fla., to recuperate.

The White House disclosed Tuesday Miss Nixon flew to Florida by military plane last Saturday and would stay there indefinitely.

Hijacker Tells Of Being Held In Cuban Jail

By FRANK FROSCHE SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI)—“As they closed the door, I felt like I was being buried alive ... in a tomb. I explored the cell, but there wasn't much exploring to do. It was about the size of a small bathroom.”

So begins the diary of Robert M. Helmey, 36, a Savannah lumber dealer.

On Jan. 11, 1969, Helmey hijacked a United Air Lines Jet and forced its pilot to fly to Havana, Cuba. After 103 days of virtual solitary confinement by Cuban authorities, he was released April 23, and sent to Canada where he arranged to surrender himself to U.S. authorities.

Charged with air piracy and kidnaping, Helmey went on trial in federal court here last Nov. 17. After less than 30 minutes of jury deliberation he was acquitted, judged innocent by reason of temporary insanity. At the time of the hijacking, Helmey testified, he imagined he was part of a CIA-FBI plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Keeps Track Of Things
Alone in his tiny cell in Cuba, Helmey first kept track of things by scratching symbols into the white-washed walls, he said. He called this record his “diary.” Later, he said, the transferred his record-keeping to a tablecloth which also served as his only blanket.

Describing his cell, Helmey said: “I could lie down in the middle of the floor and touch every wall with my hands and feet. There were no windows in the cell, only vents near the 10-foot-high ceiling.”

The only sanitary facility, he said, was a hole in the floor, into a pipe. Light was provided, his account said, by two bulbs, one in the ceiling and other set behind a metal grate in the wall and with both lights controlled from an outside switch.

On his first day in jail, Jan. 12, Helmey said, he was given two pieces of hard bread for breakfast and later in the day received a tray of rice and

Arrived Late, But Determined To Be Married

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Herbert Schaefer and his bride arrived late at the local registry office and couldn't get a special license for their wedding. With the minister and the reception guests waiting, they persuaded a magistrate to break his dinner date and return to the registry office. The office was locked, but a policeman climbed through a window and opened it. The special licenses were locked away in a safe, so they checked three changes of address to find the clerk who had the key and got her to unlock it.

One-and-a-quarter hours after the wedding was to take place, the special license was signed and ready. Forty-five minutes later, Schaefer, recently immigrated from Bonn-Oberkassel, Germany, was married to his fiancée—but not until they had called the minister away from a meeting to perform the ceremony.

black beans. He said this was his basic diet for 101 more days.

“I didn't have a spoon, I didn't have a cup,” he said. “I didn't have toilet paper.”

Becomes Ill From Stench
Once, he said, he became ill from the stench in the cell because a water spigot designed to flush the pipe didn't work for the first 13 days.

He was questioned intermittently by two officers who wanted to know why he had come to Cuba. He always, he said, demanded to see Castro—a demand apparently not taken seriously or ever granted.

There were other Americans in the prison, Helmey said.

“Underneath my cell,” he said, “was this other guy. I couldn't see him but I could hear him. They beat on him three or four times a day. While they were beating on him he'd sing the Marines' Hymn. Then he'd pray and say crazy things like he wanted to get back in the womb.”

Helmey said that through a slip in security he got a glimpse of “a young hippie with real long hair” in one of the cells.

Helmey said he discovered he could communicate with another prisoner by talking through an unused conduit shaft. He said the man was a plane hijacker from Bogota, Colombia.

Cuban Boots Squeak
“We'd talk until we hear the guards coming,” Helmey said. “You could hear their boots squeaking in the hall. Man, you sure can tell a Cuban boot, the way they squeak.”

Ten days after his jailing, Helmey said, he was taken from his cell for the first time and fingerprinted, photographed and weighed. He'd already dropped in weight from 250 to 212 pounds, he said. During the entire time, he said, he lost at least 100 pounds.

On Jan. 29, Helmey said, and for reasons he couldn't explain, two Cuban officers took him for a drive into Havana pointing out various buildings and landmarks. At one point, he said, he saw “25 or 30 Russian-made helicopters and one MIG21,” a late model Soviet fighter plane.

Hits Jackpot In Playing Bingo

SCUNTHORPE, England (UPI)—Mrs. Janet Rae hit the bingo jackpot. She won 40 pounds ($96) and a seven-pound, seven-ounce baby.

Mrs. Rae became so excited when she drew the winning number that she went into labor. She was whisked straight to the hospital from the bingo hall—but not before she collected the money.

Old Flag Found In Sitka Museum

SITKA, Alaska (UPI)—The U.S. flag raised at Sitka upon the transfer of Alaska from Russia on Oct. 18, 1867, has been found in the recesses of the Sheldon Jackson Museum.

Curator Esther Billman said the flag was found while preparing a storage area of the museum for fumigation.

LINCOLN and ALLEGIANCE

Abraham Lincoln in 1860.

Preservation of the Union was the prime concern of President Lincoln. And he had to try to maintain it in the face of the most divisive conflict which can assail a nation—civil war.

He delayed the Emancipation Proclamation for two years, hoping that some solution could still be found, even after the actual outbreak of the war, and he continued to search for ways of bringing about peace. He looked forward to reconciliation and healing after the war—which he never lived to see.

The Oath of Allegiance (right), published here for the first time, was issued by Lincoln's Administration for use during the Civil War. It was specially worded to counteract "any ordinance, resolution, or law of any State Convention, or Legislature" (such as that shown in the lower left-hand corner of the page). The document is from the U.S. Customs Documents collection of Mr. Ernest L. Chambre of New York City. The oath was sworn before a collector of Customs: Customs was the main income of the government till the Civil War.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

AND TO

SUPPORT THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

District and Port of Alexandria.

I, D. H. Prunk do solemnly swear that I will support, protect, and defend the Constitution and Government of the United States against all enemies, whether domestic or foreign, and that I will bear true faith, allegiance and loyalty to the same, any ordinance, resolution, or law of any State Convention, or Legislature, to the contrary notwithstanding; and further, that I do this with a full determination, pledge, and purpose, without any mental reservation or evasion whatsoever; and further, that I will well and faithfully perform all the duties which may be required of me by law. So help me God.

Sworn and subscribed, this 15 day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty three

Zloty's Value Elastic

By MARTIN ZUCKER
 WARSAW (AP) — There is no doubt that the Polish national currency is known as the zloty. Beyond that, everything is relative.

Officially, the government says 24 zlotys are worth a dollar. But it underwrites a number of other rates. A tourist who cashes more than $50 gets 40 to 1. A foreigner can buy goods at a 50-1 rate.

Hard currency is sorely needed by the government to pay for industrial imports from the West. Polish banks do not sell hard currency to individual Poles unless they are traveling to the West. Then they can buy $5, at 48 Zlotys to the dollar. Their travel and living expenses must be previously guaranteed by a sponsor abroad.

There is also a 72-1 rate for Poles who receive dollars from friends or relatives abroad. On the black market a dollar brings 80 to 150 zlotys.

Almost every Western tourist who has visited a Communist country is familiar with the common agent of this market: the money trafficker who loiters around big hotels or tourist attractions.

After ascertaining with a quick glance that here, in the flesh, is a dollar-bearing foreigner, the man steps up and says something like: "Like to change money?"

One American who took a stroll around the picturesque old Town Square in Krakow was confronted four times.

The money man may offer 80-1 but according to knowledgeable sources the foreigner can collect around 110.

Some Poles claim that these operators even work for the government in an attempt to secure hard currency. Officially, this activity is supposed to be illegal but the fact it continues so openly makes the observer wonder.

One Polish newspaper recently described the lobby and approaches to a prominent hotel as so full of money-changers that the many foreign guests were not able to pass without being stopped by them.

Poles who want dollars to make purchases at stores that sell goods only for hard currency usually know individuals who change money.

The difference in the selling and buying price of dollars is around 10 zlotys and enables big operators to make a good profit.

Before World War II the Polish zloty was readily converted to other currencies. The post-war zloty of the Communist government was designed primarily as an internal currency. It is not even convertible in other Communist nations. Similarly, their monies are not interchangeable here. Provisions for tourism allow the exchange of small sums, however.

Julie Learns How To Die

NEW YORK (AP) — Children taught Julie Harris how to die. On the stage, that is.

It happened when the actress played Juliet for a children's audience at a Shakespeare festival. When Miss Harris came to that dramatic moment when Juliet plunges a knife into her own bosom, some children laughed.

It was an upsetting and confusing moment for the actress — and it caused her to examine her performance.

"I became aware that I was doing the suicide scene too slowly, too painfully," she says. "I realized the suicide should be as realistically simple as possible. It mustn't be overdone."

Miss Harris says children help her acting in other ways because "they are so demanding and they are difficult to reach and hold."

The actress performs for a group of young people in "A Children's Festival at Lincoln Center," to be shown on NBC-TV on Saturday, Jan. 31 at 11:30 a.m. EST. The show is the second of the "American Rainbow" series of children's specials.

Miss Harris interprets four poems by Emily Dickinson during the special, which includes performances by opera stars Robert Merrill and Richard Tucker and ballet dancers Edward Villella and Patricia McBride.

California is the third-ranking state in production of cotton, hay and wheat.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—North Carolina egg markets steady to slightly weaker Tuesday. Supplies adequate, demand good. Prices paid producers and handlers for consumer grade eggs in cartons delivered near-by outlets:
Grade A large whites: 69-68; medium whites: 65-66; small whites: 55-56.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—North Carolina hog markets today were steady to 50 lower, mostly 25 lower.
Tops of 26.50-27.50 at Rocky Mount; 27-27.25 at Wilson; 26.50-27 at Siler City and Denton; 25.75-26.75 at Bethel and Tarboro; 27.25 at Salisbury; and 26.50 at Greensboro.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—The North Carolina poultry market today was mostly steady. Live poultry at the farm is mostly 13 cents per pound.

NEW YORK (AP)—Stocks continued on the plus side in moderate trading today, with advances barely ahead of declines.
The Dow Jones industrial average at 11 a.m. inched up 0.60 to 746.59.
Some analysts said that the market has been so oversold after three sessions of losses that a technical rally of some dimension was due.
Among the New York Stock Exchange prices were:
Royal Dutch Petroleum 38 1/2, up 1/8; Chrysler 27 1/2, off 1/4; Texaco 35 1/2, up 1/4; International Industries 30, off 2 1/2; and Schering Corp 56 1/2, off 2 1/2.

Von Braun To Planning

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Werner von Braun, the German-born space rocket scientist, is being moved from the nation's rocket development center at Huntsville, Ala. to a planning job in the space agency's headquarters here.

Von Braun's appointment as deputy administrator for planning for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration became effective immediately, NASA administrator Thomas O. Paine said Tuesday.
His successor as director of the George C. Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville is Eberhard Rees, 62, a long-time deputy and World War II colleague at Germany's rocket research center at Peenemunde.
NASA said in a news release that von Braun, "for a quarter of a century a leader in space rocket development, will head NASA's planning effort for future U.S. space missions."

Life Jackets Are 'Improper'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI)—In this day of mini-skirt and the peek-a-boo blouse, it would hardly seem that life jackets could be considered improper attire.
But eight women who showed up at the Harbor Restaurant on the wharf here wearing bright orange life jackets were refused admittance on grounds they were improperly attired.
There was more to it than dress however. The ladies were protesting against use of the pier by oil-drilling companies.

Dogs Accompany Owners To Camp

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI)—Until 1967, Californians who went camping in a state park were not allowed to bring along their best friend.
Now the state has a 4,000-acre camping park to stay overnight. The park, with 30,000 trees, camped with their masters in 1967, with 90,000 canines in the parks the following year.

PUTS VANDING CITIZEN
Reynolds May, of Greenville, will be saluted on WNCN-TV as "Today's Outstanding Citizen" on Saturday. Mr. May recently named the first executive director of the ECU Foundation.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.
Temperatures will continue above normal through Monday, scattered showers toward end of the week.

Sunny weather has not done much to increase the activity this morning on Pitt County grain buying stations but two markets report changes in corn quotes over yesterday. One change is significant as Ayden reported a five-cent jump in shell prices. Also, the Bethel market is quoting a one-cent increase over Tuesday's quotes. All other prices remain the same. Troops Bar Display 4 Boat Models Irish Mob At National Boat Show

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—British troops with fixed bayonets headed off a Protestant march on a Roman Catholic section of Belfast early today as angry chanting crowds roamed the streets for the fourth night in a row.

The upsurge of tension brought fears of a revival of the religious warfare in which more than 20 persons were killed and hundreds injured last year.

Shortly after midnight a mob of about 500 Protestants tried to charge the "peace line" of barbed wire and steel between the Protestant Shankill Road section and the Catholic Falls Road area.

They were met by a line of troops with bayonets fixed and wearing gas masks, apparently ready to use tear gas for the first time since armed clashes last October. The mob retreated.

The British army garrison in Northern Ireland, which is part of the United Kingdom, has been reduced to 6,000 men. Army officers say this is enough to handle riots but probably not enough to cope with a guerrilla war.

Chrysler, GMC Plan Layoffs, Cut Production

DETROIT (AP)—Faced with growing stockpiles of new cars, General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. will lay off some assembly line workers and shorten work weeks during February.

GM officials announced Tuesday work schedules at 22 plants would be cut back, affecting 126,500 employees during February. The slowdowns in production "are being made to reflect market requirements," a spokesman said.

Chrysler announced indefinite layoffs of about 2,200 employees at four U.S. plants. Production rate at three facilities are to be reduced and one of two shifts is to be eliminated at the fourth.

Actors Go To Court; Oppose Names In Cast

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actors Steve McQueen and James Garner have gone to court to stop a film company from listing them among the cast of the motion picture "Mexican 1,000."

Image Films, Inc., filmed the Ensenada-to-La Paz auto race, known as the "Mexican 1,000," in 1969.
The actors, in separate Superior Court suits Tuesday, charged that the firm is listing them as cast members in pre-release publicity in trade journals.

The two said they were contestants in the four-day race and had expressly denied Image permission to film them or use their names.

The stars said that connecting them with a low-budget film was damaging to their professional reputations.

Charles Evers Speaks Tonight Bar Dumping Broken Glass On ECU Campus

VICTORIA, B.C. (AP)—The British Columbia government Tuesday shattered an artist's plan to frost a tiny island with 100 tons of broken glass.

After protests from conservationists, resources Minister Ray Williston said there would be no dumping on Miami Island, in the Strait of Georgia near Nanaimo, B.C.

A New York artist, Robert Smithson, and a Vancouver art dealer, Douglas Christmas, had planned to dump the glass next Monday—as a work of art. They collected 100 tons of broken, green-tinted glass in Stockton, Calif., and Williston's department at first approved the project.

However, conservationists said the glass could endanger basking seals.

Williston Tuesday ordered Christmas to hold off the dumping "until such time as you can present further evidence to me that wildlife habitat is not being disturbed." Neither Christmas nor Smithson could be reached for comment.

Charles Evers, field director of the Mississippi National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and mayor of Fayette, Miss., will speak at Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus here tonight at 8 p.m.

The brother of Medgar Evers, who was shot and killed while doing civil rights work in Mississippi, Evers has been in civil rights work himself since his student days at Alcorn A and M College.

Belvoir Edges Past Grifton

GRIFTON — Belvoir Falkland High School edged past Grifton's Bulldogs last night, 52-48, to stay within hailing distance of first place Bethel. And the Grifton girls did the same, romping to a 53-37 win over the Eaglettes.

In the girls contest, Grifton powered out into a 19-8 lead in the first period. Grifton continued to move away in the second period, dumping in 16 points to eight more for Belvoir. That put the Lady Bulldogs into a 35-18 lead at the half.

Grifton continued to steadily pull away in the third period, tossing in 14 while Belvoir accounted for only nine. That made it 49-27 with a frame to go. Belvoir finally got moving in the final period, downing Grifton, 12-4, but it was too little to make any difference in the final outcome.

Marion McLawhorn led Grifton with 22 points, while Jennifer Smith had 16. For Belvoir, Theresa Pollard had 15 and Maggie Edwards had 10. Belvoir took the lead early in the boys game, and then had to hang on to hold to it. The Eagles moved out into a 13-8 lead at the end of the first period, but Grifton came back to outscore the Eagles, 10-8, and cut the gap to 21-18 at halftime.

In the third period, Grifton continued to nibble away at the lead, and finally, outscoring Belvoir, 13-9, took a 31-30 lead as the last quarter got underway. But Belvoir came roaring back and outscored Grifton, 22-17, in the final eight minutes, taking the win.

William Shivar led Belvoir to the win, scoring 25 points. J. W. Wooten added 11, all coming from the line. David Whaley paced Grifton with 22, while Billy Edwards had 10.

South Ayden In Slim Win

AYDEN — H. B. Sugg made South Ayden work twice as hard for a victory last night, as it took two overtimes before the Eagles could down the Lions, 68-65 in a Pitt County Athletic Conference basketball game.

The Lions held a one point edge at the end of the first quarter, 13-12, then added four more to that in the second, taking a 32-27 half time advantage.

The Eagles started to cut away at the Sugg lead in the third with 17 points to 15 for the Lions, and again in the fourth when they had 15 to 12 for their visitors to tie it up, at 59-59.

In the first overtime, both teams had four, while in the second, South Ayden pushed in five to two for Sugg to take the win.

Charlie Grimes led the South Ayden scoring with 23, while Leon Mayo had 18, Tommy Gorham 11, and Edward Forbes 10.

For Sugg, Ronald Edmonds had 11, Brown 13, Cradell 10, and Forbes 12.

Conetoe Holds Off Robinson

Conetoe — Conetoe High School held off a second half rally by W. H. Robinson High School last night to take an 81-74 victory over the Tigers.

Conetoe had slipped out into a 14-13 lead in the first period of play, but did most of its damage in the second quarter. In that one, the Tigers were outshot, 25-14, and trailed at halftime, 39-27.

In the third quarter, however, Robinson put on a rally, dumping in 24 points to 16 by Conetoe. That cut the margin to 55-51, as the final eight minutes of play got underway.

But it was all to no avail. Conetoe came up with 26 points in the final period, while Robinson got 23, to close the door on the Tigers' hopes for a victory.

East Carolina University's swimming team will play host to tough Florida State here Thursday at 3:30 p.m.

The meet is the first of two inter-conference meetings for the Pirates this week. Following their meeting with the Seminoles, they will play host to the Atlantic Coast Conference's Maryland on Saturday afternoon.

Coach Ray Scharf anticipated a tough meet from Florida State. "They have too much depth for us, but we look for some outstanding efforts from some of our swimmers," he said.

WNCT Pulls Off Overtime Win

Three N.C. Poets Will Appear At Poetry Fair

Four well-known North Carolina poets — Thad Stem, Jr., Thomas Walters, Julia Fields, and Vernón Ward — are to read poems from their works in a Poetry Fair Thursday night.

Beginning at 8:00 p.m. in the East Carolina University Nursing School Auditorium, the four poets will present one of ten Poetry Fairs being sponsored throughout the state by the North Carolina Arts Council. The four poets reading in Greenville are among 22 outstanding North Carolina poets selected by the Arts Council to read in the series of first annual Poetry Fairs. The Greenville Fair is jointly sponsored by the ECU Poetry Forum.

Thad Stem, Jr., long-time writer and author of nine books, is a native of Oxford, where he now lives. Some of his poems are included in Richard Walser's Poets Of North Carolina. Stem won the Roanoke - Chowan Award for The Jackknife Horse. Tom Walters, native of Edgecombe County, now teaches English at North Carolina State University. He has a book to be published in the spring.

The one lady poet of the group, Julia Fields, is a black poet who has been published in England, Holland and the U. S. Some of her poems appear in the anthology Black Poets Of America. ECU's Vernón Ward, general editor of the ECU Poetry Series, is a native of Bethel. He has published Of Dust And Stars and other volumes of poems. A selection of his verses is in Poets Of North Carolina; Word Gatherers, and other anthologies.

The public is invited to attend the poetry reading, for which there is no admission charge.

Movie Rating System Changed

By DICK BIESER
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After 15 months of what the film industry calls "gratifying success," its voluntary program of rating movies is being modified. Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said Tuesday one change was made because a survey had shown considerable confusion over the "M" rating which meant a film was recommended for mature audiences only.

So that category is being dropped in favor of "GP." This means all ages may view the movie but that parental guidance or discretion is advised.

The other change raises the age limit for viewing films rated "R"—restricted category—without an accompanying parent or legal guardian from 16 to 17.

Both changes are effective March 1.

Observers said the boost in the age limit may represent an attempt to broaden the "R" rating to include racy but serious films heretofore relegated to the "X" category for adults only. Valenti has said he originally intended the X to be a "Leper colony" for films of no artistic quality. But it hasn't worked out that way.

Two of the most successful and critically acclaimed films of 1969—"Midnight Cowboy" and "Medium Cool"—ended up in the X class.

Here is the new set of standards:

G—All ages admitted.

GP—All ages admitted, but parental discretion recommended.

R—Anyone under 17 must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

X—No one under 18 admitted.

A survey conducted by the National Association of Theater Owners showed that 9 out of 10 theaters queried used the ratings in their advertising.

Valenti was joined in his announcement by Eugene Picker, president of the theater owners group, and Munio Podhorzer, a member of the governing board of the International Film Importers and Distributors of America.

Krishna Finds Followers In America, Too

By SUSAN EVERLY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Mid-afternoon in the hurrying crowd, six young men in long saffron and white robes, their heads shaved, sway past Saks Fifth Avenue begging with extended conch shells and chanting to their Lord Krishna.

Sunday when the drug and crime infested East Village is sleeping off another Saturday night, young people in a walk-up second-floor storefront quietly dress multicolored wooden dhoties and prepare food for a Sunday feast in honor of their Lord Krishna.

A 17-year old boy shaves off his long shaggy hair and leaves his home and parents in suburban Long Island to serve his new Lord Krishna.

Lord Krishna is the god of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, which claims to have temples in more than 20 locations in the country.

The new Western cult serving an ancient Hindu deity is part of a growing interest among young people of Eastern philosophies and Eastern ways of life which stress spiritual experience rather than material concerns. In recent years there has been a growth in the United States in devotees of yoga, of interest in Zen Buddhism, in Indian music and the wearing of Eastern garb.

Krishna devotees are mostly in their late teens and early 20s. Many were hippie-types; some were drug users.

"We're not going to get the Midwestern college kid," said Chandan Acarya, a member of the East Village temple. "We're going to get the kid with the long hair who has sensed that it is a money-grabbing world."

Chanadan, 22, was formerly Christian Kinder, a rock musician and commercial writer in Montreal. "I was making all kinds of money, but I was going out of my mind," he said. "That's why I'm here."

The key to the new Hindu cult is the chanting of the ancient 16-word mantra: "Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna, Krishna Krishna, Hare Hare, Hare Rama, Hare Rama, Rama Rama, Hare Hare."

"This is the authorized process by which one can develop an unalloyed love of god—god realization," said Brahmananda, president of the New York temple. "This chanting establishes a link between the living entity and the absolute truth."

Translated, the Hare Hrishna asks: "Krishna, Oh my Lord, give me relief from illusion of this world and attraction to the material world. Bring me to serve you."

The colorful Sunday feast draws many more people than the 30 some devotees.

Then a crowd of young people flock to the temple. Some are attracted to the cult's philosophy; some are curious; some come for the free meal.

Chanting begins softly as burning incense coils a thin smoke throughout the room. One robed devotee, tinkling finger cymbals, rises slowly and sways before the flower-decked altar.

A brief sermon informs the visitors of the values of Krishna consciousness. "Transcendental bliss" can be theirs, they are told.

Then the rugs are rolled and devotees and visitors settle down for a vegetarian feast. Some visitors linger, and go out into the street chanting and begging with the robed devotees.

But for the initiates, Krishna Consciousness is more than a Sunday lark.

It is a way of life founded in 1966 when Swami A.C. Bhaktivedanta arrived from the East with what he said was the "divinely appointed task" of carrying to the West the prescribed method for devoting to God—the chanting of the Hare Krishna. He set himself up in a lower Eastside storefront. The curious came, some remained, and the temple was founded.

Krishna life is highly regulated for all followers. Beginning at 5 a.m., their day is crammed with devotions, ritual cleaning of themselves and the temple, other chores and chanting and begging in the streets.

Following the law of the Vedic scriptures, they give up all intoxicants, drugs, alcohol, coffee and tea, abstain from sex except for procreation within a Krishna marriage, avoid gambling, and don't eat meat, fish and eggs.

Beats Test, But Fined, Anyway

WALTON-ON-THAMES, England (UPI)—Driver Gordon Grey found one way to beat the breathalyzer test. Stopped by police, he reached in his pocket, pulled out a half-filled bottle of whisky and downed the contents.

A court agreed he could not be held responsible for a breath test given less than 20 minutes after his last drink. But Grey was fined 26 pounds ($62.40) for drunk and disorderly conduct and for obstructing police.

ASPEN, Colo. (AP)—Chuck Betcher, 23, a Colorado College student from Aspen, is only the fourth person on record to hike along the Continental Divide in Colorado from the Wyoming to the New Mexico boundary.

The population of Turkey is about 33,000,000.

GETTING THE JUMP ON HIS HANDICAP — Capt. Buddy M. Allgood, 23, of Columbus, Ga., right, who lost his left foot while on patrol in South Vietnam, prepares for a parachute jump at Ft. Benning where he graduated from the U. S. Infantry School's jump school Saturday. Capt. Allgood, who was in jump school for a week before anyone knew he had an artificial foot, said the most difficult part was the four-mile run on his third day in training. (AP Wirephoto)

Today In Washington

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Australia and the United States have agreed to exchange technical and scientific information on the control of drug abuse. Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell announced today.

Mitchell said the Justice Department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs will collaborate with Australia's department of science and education in the program.

The agreement marked the fourth country to join the United States in new projects aimed at dealing with the international narcotics problem.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee says foreign foods carrying residues of dangerous pesticides should be kept off American tables.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., introduced legislation to require that food imports meet the same standards on pesticides as those applying to domestic products.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department has forecast very little economic growth, some rise in unemployment, a profits squeeze, and strong price increases for the U.S. economy in 1970.

Its January Survey of Current Business, released Tuesday, said the government's restraining policies lessened progressively late last year after reaching peak intensity during the first half of the year.

The report said the budget surplus will be endangered by new social security payments, reduction and proposed elimination of the income tax surcharge and a possible pay raise for federal employees.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has given final approval to a compromise $1.8 billion foreign-aid appropriations bill after killing a controversial $54.5 million to supply Nationalist China with jet fighters.

The jet fighter appropriation was stricken from the bill by House-Senate conferees Monday, clearing the way for 202 to 162 final passage Tuesday.

The measure was sent to the Senate.

Movies May Turn Away From Sex

By BOB THOMAS
 Associated Press Writer
HOLLWOOD (AP) — Is the sex revolution leveling off in movies?

There are some faint indications that such a trend is on the way. Not that filmmakers are turning away from sex; nudity and explicit love-making appear to be standard ingredients of the new cinema.

But sex in itself appears to be losing its capacity to shock. Since "I Am Curious (Yellow)," little remains that would startle an audience with frank depictions. Like all cinematic devices, nudity and steamy sex have been so overworked that they are almost cliches.

At least one young filmmaker believes that the recent emphasis on sex was the result of a wrong evaluation of the youthful audience by the film companies. Said he:

"Kids today don't go to the movies because they are sexy. The young people today have a franker, more realistic attitude toward sex than their parents had, and they are neither shocked nor obsessed by it."

"If a movie has sex, that's okay with them, as long as the sex is real and not thrown in for some phony reason. But they're more interested in politics and today's problems. Young people didn't flock to see 'Easy Rider' or 'Midnight Cowboy' because of the sex quotient; they went because of the themes of alienation and the search for identity."

"The older producers and directors would be making a mistake if they continued trying to aim sex pictures at the younger audience. They'd just be exposing their own sex hang-ups, which the kids today don't have."

Box office figures seem to support his thesis. In each New Year's anniversary edition, Variety reports its estimates of the rental returns on the previous year's movies. The figures are unofficial and do not reflect a film's long-range receipts. But they can be revealing.

The No. 1 moneymaker of 1969 was "The Love Bug," a Walt Disney movie which couldn't have offended anyone, except perhaps the competitors of Volkswagen. Variety figured that its domestic rentals—turns to the releasing company in the United States and Canada — were $17 million.

The runners-up: "Funny Girl," $16.5 million; "Bullitt," $16.4 million; "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," $15 million; "Romeo and Juliet," $14.5 million; "True Grit," $11.5 million; "Midnight Cowboy," $11 million; "Oliver" and "Goodbye, Columbus," $10.5 million apiece; "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," $7.5 million.

Of the top 10, only "Midnight Cowboy" was rated X. "Goodbye, Columbus" had some frank passages, and there was a bedroom scene in "Bullitt" and even "Romeo and Juliet." "True Grit" featured some salty language. But most of the top 10 attractions of 1969 could be classed as family entertainment.

Tree Goes; They Too

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — "If that tree goes, so do we," said the six members of the city's Shade Tree Commission. It did, and they did.

The tree, once an 85-foot cottonwood labeled "Pioneer Tree No. 1," is gone now. So is the historical plaque from the Daughters of Utah Pioneers claiming the tree as the first planted by Mormon pioneers after they arrived here in 1847.

All that remains is a 10-foot stump.

City Streets Commissioner George Catmull ordered Pioneer No. 1 felled to allow for drainage improvements.

The Shade Tree Commission, headed by Mrs. Hazel Bullough, felt it was a matter of aesthetics as well as history. "It was a beautiful tree," she said.

"There is no reason for a Shade Tree Commission," she added, "if one city commissioner can rudely ignore the unanimous decision of the tree commission."

So they all resigned.

Seek To Restore Bottle Deposits

RIVER FALLS, Wis. (AP) — A group of citizens has drawn up a litter-bug campaign aimed at a no-deposit, no-return policy which it said is leaving bottles strewn by the nation's roadsides.

The recently organized 30-member River Falls Ecology Action Group said it will collect discarded bottles and deposit them March 21 at the doors of local bottling plants.

James Lenfestey, who formed the group, said the campaign is designed to get bottlers to return to the policy of requiring deposits, encouraging consumers to return the items to stores.

Stamp Machine Wouldn't Stop

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ralph Hargrove deposited a nickel in the stamp dispenser in Augusta's main post office Tuesday and the machine didn't stop until it had piled some 500 five-cent stamps onto the post office floor. That's 40 feet of postage.

Hargrove—summoned a post office employee who rolled the stamps back into the dispenser. Then Hargrove asked the postman to sell him the five-cent stamp the old-fashioned way—by hand.

The Worry Clinic Alter Outlook At Early Age

Goldie's case shows how thousands of teenagers become launched into delinquency and anti-social conduct. Dr. Hamula and his dental colleagues thus are superb Applied Psychologists when they alter the outlook of teen-agers with inferiority complexes, due to organic defects. And many menopausal women are saved from a mental institution by attractive false teeth.

We found out that she was even stealing and shoplifting!

"We couldn't do anything with her until her Guidance Counselor finally called us for an interview.

"She said Goldie's crooked front teeth were probably the basic cause of her misbehavior.

"So we consulted Dr. Warren Hamula, a former orthodontic teacher at Indiana Dental College.

"He talked to Goldie at length and showed her some of the remarkable changes that such dental surgeons can produce.

"Besides, he had a daughter in high school with Goldie, whom Goldie secretly admired, so Goldie responded wonderfully to Dr. Hamula's advice.

"Now, two years later, Goldie is a changed personality. She is cheerful and cooperative. And she doesn't steal or lie or flaunt our advice.

"She no longer shuns her classmates and has brought her grades up to a 'B' average. She is also eagerly planning to go on to college.

"So please warn parents that even if it costs them $1,500 or more to resore a teen-ager's teeth to an attractive appearance, it is well worth that amount by thus stopping possible delinquency and excessive shyness."

Dental Sculptors
Dental surgeons can thus alter a child's entire personality by their cosmetic improvement in the youngster's looks.

Such doctors are really sculptors in human clay!

So, too, are the eye surgeons and orthopedic doctors who straighten crossed eyes or crippled feet, arms and spines.

Indeed, many fearful, menopausal wives are also restored to a happy, cheerful outlook, merely by a beautiful set of false teeth.

For such dentures banish the sunken cheeks, puckered and indrawn lips, and also add 3/4 inch to the vertical dimension of the face when viewed in profile.

This removes that "old witch" appearance and actually makes a woman look as much as 10 to 15 years younger!

False teeth also give you a more "kissable mouth."

In many cases, dental surgeons thus can bolster a wounded ego and banish shy, anti-social attitudes that can drive their victims into mental institutions!

They can often do more for many menopausal wives than we medics can offer via hormone shots, for psychology often beats medical drugs.

Criminologists, too, attest to the fact that many lawbreakers, especially among teen-agers, are goaded into such illicit conduct by organic inferiority complexes.

Even redhaired, freckled boys may become chronic fighters and take a belligerent attitude because of early teasing.

Unduly stunted or crippled youngsters may also either shun society and retreat into a shy, introverted realm with possible delusions of persecution, or they may turn to get even with society for the tough break they break they figure they have received.

Then they steal and rob or take the "hippie" hostile attitude toward the "establishment."

So send for my booklet "Psychology and Medicine of the Face," which includes (How to Overcome a Social Inferiority Complex), enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

The bidding:

Pass 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥
Pass 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠

Opening lead: King of ♠

A finesse conscious declarer went set in his four heart contract when two kings were adversely located. A careful analysis of the bidding and play would have placed South in position to uncover the winning line of play.

West opened the king of spades and continued with the ace. Since neither a diamond nor a club shift appeared inviting, West switched to a trump.

South played three rounds of hearts ending in his hand then trumped the nine of spades in dummy. The queen of diamonds was put thru for a finesse and it lost to West's king. The latter returned a diamond and now South tried the club finesse. When this too lost, he was down.

The key to success on the deal, lies in the play to the first two tricks, in which West is revealed to hold the ace and king of spades. If he also has both minor suit kings, that would give him 13 points in high cards, and he would surely have opened the bidding as dealer.

He may have one other king—or neither king—and there is one line of play that allows for all possibilities. Two rounds of trumps are drawn with the ace and king of hearts and then a low club led from dummy.

As the cards lay, East must go up with the king of clubs to protect his trick in that suit. This establishes both South's jack and dummy's queen and gives him two discards. If East returns a spade to force the dummy, declarer comes back to his hand with the jack of clubs, leads a small heart to the jack to pull the last trump and then throws his small diamonds on the ace and queen of clubs.

If West has the king of clubs, South still has one diamond discard available when he cashes the ace and the queen of clubs. Now a simple diamond finesse will pick up the king which becomes marked in East's hand after West shows up with the club king.

Belts Are Being Tightened In Lengthy GE Strike

THE PRIME MINISTER BOWS — Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain bows as he pauses before massed flags while reviewing an honor guard with President Nixon on the White House grounds. U.S. Army Col. Robert Daugherty salutes. This was during a formal arrival ceremony for Wilson who is meeting with Nixon for 2 days. (AP Wirephoto)

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
As the General Electric Co. strike enters its fourth month, there reportedly has been only a trickle of back-to-work sentiment, but a widening ripple of fringe economic effects and a general belt tightening by 130,000 idle production workers. Salary losses have mounted into the tens of millions of dollars.

"People are buying cheaper cuts of meat, thinner slices, stretching as much as they can," said Bud Fitzner, manager of a supermarket in Louisville, Ky., where GE wage losses are estimated at $26 million. Pickets in Louisville still get free bean soup every morning from Frank Davis, who has a restaurant near the plant. But he said the strike is costing him $200 a day in business losses.

Limited back to work action was reported in Chicago, Lakeside, Vt., and Ontario, Calif. But the vast majority of GE strikers apparently were sticking with the walkout.

The strikers were getting by in most cases with part-time jobs, savings, credit, strike benefits, unemployment insurance payments or welfare assistance. About 1,100 workers at the Owensboro, Ky., GE plant are not on strike, but are being laid off for lack of materials. Layoffs in related industries were reported in Syracuse, N.Y., and Albuquerque, N.M.

A labor-backed national boycott of GE products appeared to have elicited a questionable response, at least in most areas surveyed by The Associated Press. However, some union officials claimed it is being felt by the nation's fourth largest industrial giant.

GE officials have cited several instances during the strike in which they say radical groups—most frequently the Students for a Democratic Society—have been welcomed on picket lines by strikers. However, union officials have insisted that where such groups were spotted strikers have ejected them from picket lines.

The strike of 12 unions began Oct. 26, spearheaded by the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers and the independent United Electrical Workers. They rejected a company offer of a 20 cents an hour wage increase in the first year of a three-year contract, with wage reopeners in each subsequent year. Wages averaged $3.25 an hour.

Most GE plants in 135 cities remained open with nonunion employees. But production was all but halted in most of them. In Washington, as it has since the strike began, the Pentagon declined to discuss effects of the walkout on military materiel. However, at GE's nuclear energy division in San Jose, Calif.,

330 of 475 union employees were reported on the job, augmented by 2,500 nonunion workers. The company called production normal—the unions disagreed.

An AFL-CIO spokesman estimated that about 180 Ontario, Calif., GE employees have crossed picket lines and gone back to work, although he said 2,000 to 2,500 remain on strike in the Los Angeles area.

William Grotz, a spokesman for Hot Point, which has three GE subsidiary plants in the Chicago area, said 1,200 hourly workers have returned to their jobs since December—about one-third of the normal work force.

And the Lakeside, Vt., plant, a Defense Department supplier, said 1,081 out of 1,552 IUE employees are at work, a 30 percent increase over the 40 percent who originally refused to join in the walkout.

Some union officials claimed support for the national boycott of GE products organized last November by the AFL-CIO.

However, a spokesman for the medium-price range May Co. of Los Angeles, said: "If anything, it's been just the opposite. It seems when things get scarce or may become scarce, the people buy more. We're almost completely out of GE products now, but we aren't hurting because we have other lines—GE is probably suffering though."

National Lottery Seen A Blow To Organized Crime

Indicted For Arms Cache

RALEIGH (AP) — Indictments charging violations of federal firearms laws have been brought against two men linked in Senate testimony with a five-ton arms cache found at Fayetteville last year.

The indictments, which did not involve weapons found in the cache, were returned Monday by the grand jury of U. S. Eastern District Court at Raleigh.

Named were Earl V. Redick Sr., 45, of Fayetteville, and George Demeo of Yonkers, N.Y. Redick operates Pine State Gun Shop at Fayetteville; Demeo is a reputed weapons dealer.

Both were indicted on charges of failing to register as arms dealers, neglecting to register the weapons they offered for sale and failing to obtain a license to sell explosive devices.

In addition, Redick was indicted on a separate count of failing to maintain records and receipts of firearms. Charges against Redick and Demeo grew out of a raid June 27 on a warehouse at Redick's home in which federal officials seized five tons of weapons.

Arch Flanagan Is Named Chairman Pitt District

Arch J. Flanagan of Farmville will serve as chairman of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District during 1970.

Robert G. Little was named vice-chairman and Hugh C. Winslow was chosen secretary-treasurer. F. Curtis Martin and Truman W. Haddock are the other members of the Board of Supervisors for the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District.

Some conservation projects recently completed in the county include two grassed waterways on the Ralph Tucker farm. The waterways, constructed to intercept contour row water, will be limed, fertilized and seeded to a mixture of tall fescue and Pensacola bahia grass.

Mrs. Dorothy Stewart of the Red Oaks Community recently had a 6 acre waterway constructed on her farm to remove excess surface water from a cropland field. Last year she installed six-inch drain tile to give drainage under the waterway. This drainage will permit heavy equipment to cross the waterway without the danger of becoming stuck, according to Roger Montague, soil conservationist.

Jasper L. Lewis of near Belvoir, has just completed a conservation plan on 230 acres of his land. His plan includes a conservation cropping system and crop residue use. Approximately 13,000 feet of six-inch drain tile will be installed over a period of eight years, Montague said. This is in addition to the 1700 feet of tile already installed. Also planned on the Lewis farm, Montague said, is 3700 feet of open ditch

Writes A Song To Combat Fear

NEW YORK (UPI)—Songwriter Gladys Shelley has a fear of flying but she has written a new song, "Flying Can Be Fun," which has been adopted as a theme song of Fly Without Fear, a group organized to help people who have a phobia about air travel.

Nat Cott, of Flushing, N.Y., founder of Fly Without Fear, says about 80 per cent of Americans have not been in an airplane, primarily because of a fear of flying.

LONDON (UPI)—A spokesman for the National Hairdressers' Federation said longer hair styles for males have cut into barbers' profits by 25 per cent in the past six years.

"Even MPs (members of parliament) who are bald on top are growing it long on the back," the spokesman said. "They look like a lot of sheep."
