Allsbrook, White And Blount Announce Bids For N.C. Senate Seats

A Greenville attorney, Marvin Blount Jr., announced today that he will seek election to the North Carolina State Senate in the May Democratic Primary.

Blount will file for one of the two legislative seats in the Fourth Senatorial District which includes Pitt, Halifax, Edgecombe and Warren Counties.

"If elected, Blount said in announcing his candidacy, I shall try to present an energetic approach to a government which will be more responsive to the people of the Fourth Senatorial District."

"Involvement of all the people within the District is essential if the legislator is to serve as the effective link between the government and the community," he continued.

His primary goal, he added, will be legislation which will "be in the best interest of the people of Eastern North Carolina."

Particularly the citizens of the four counties in the district.

A Greenville native, Blount received his A.B. Degree in 1963 from the University of Georgia and his Law Degree from Wake Forest University in 1966.

A past member of the Coastal Plains Development Association representing Pitt County, the attorney is currently serving as chairman of the Community Service Division of the Pitt County United Fund.

Blount is vice-chairman of the Pitt County Salvation Army Advisory Board, and is a State Senator Julian R. Allsbrook today announced his candidacy for re-election to one of the two legislative seats in the Fourth Senatorial District.

Allsbrook, who has served seven terms in the State Senate and one in the House, will run for a seat in the district that covers Pitt, Halifax, Edgecombe and Warren Counties.

The veteran legislator from Roanoke Rapids was first elected to the Senate in 1934 and has represented the Fourth District for the past two terms in Raleigh.

Stressing that he is running on his past record, Allsbrook commented, "I have served the people of North Carolina over a 35-year period. They know me. They know my record. They know I have sought to serve the best interest of my district."

One of the leaders in the 1966 General Assembly who fought the tobacco, soft drink and gasoline taxes advocated by the administration, Allsbrook, along with other legislators, also introduced and worked for the bill that led to university status for East Carolina College.

In the 1947 session, Allsbrook was selected by the press and radio media as the most valuable member of the Senate and was named most valuable member of the House in 1941.

Allsbrook attended the University of North Carolina and is permanent vice president of his graduating class. He has served as a City Commissioner Vernon E. White, Pitt County farmer and businessman, said today that he will seek re-election to one of the two Fourth Senatorial District seats in the 1971 session of the North Carolina General Assembly.

White's candidacy for re-election is subject to the Democratic Primary scheduled for May 2.

In announcing his intention to run, the Hertford County native commented, "I wish to take this opportunity to thank my fellow Fourth Senatorial District friends for having given me the honor and privilege of representing them during the 1968 session."

During that session of the General Assembly, White added, "I was fortunate in receiving committee assignments beneficial to the interest of our area as well as the state."

He served as a member of the Joint Appropriations, Agricultural, Higher Education, Highway Safety, Libraries, Mental Health, and Wildlife Committees.

As a member of the subcommittee on higher education of the appropriation committee, the senator was instrumental in helping East Carolina University obtain new programs and financing.

"The future growth of East Carolina University is vital to the growth and development of Eastern North Carolina, and the entire state," he asserted.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southern senators, flushed with a major victory in their fight to slow down Dixie school desegregation, sought today to strike the power of federal courts to order busing to achieve integration.

Pending as the Senate resumes its two-week-old debate on the multimillion dollar education bill was an amendment of Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., stating simply that no court or federal agency would have the power to order such busing.

This proposal appeared to have less support than the amendment which gave the South its first big civil rights victory in years Wednesday with the 56-36 adoption of a provision by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., to provide a uniform national policy on school desegregation.

The rider requires the government to attack neighborhood school desegregation in the North as vigorously as it has moved against legal segregation in Southern school systems.

However, some Dixie senators conceded the victory might be more psychological than real.

They expressed far greater interest in the more direct relief the Ervin proposal would provide.

Stennis commented he would "not expect any great immediate things to happen in the North as the result of this amendment." But he and other Southerners made it quite clear they hoped it would exert enough pressure on the North to slow down the school integration drive all over the nation.

Civil rights supporters who fought the amendment declared its real purpose was to allow Southern officials to blunt the push to end their region's dual school systems.

These senators said the Dixie officials would contend that desegregation orders could not be enforced against them until comparable progress was made against de facto—neighborhood—segregation in the North.

The Stennis amendment was adopted with votes of 29 Democrats and 27 Republicans. It was opposed by 24 Democrats and 12 Republicans.

However, it narrowly escaped being side-tracked in an earlier test. In that vote, Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania lost only 48 to 46 on his substitute which would have wiped out the Stennis proposal.

The substitute also called for a uniform national policy on desegregation but was considerably less broad than the Mississippi senator's rider.

Chicago 7 Defense To Higher Courts

Anti-Riot Law Will Be Tested

By F. RICHARD CICCONE

Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The government has won a split verdict in its prosecution of seven men accused of inciting violence at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention, but defense lawyers plan to contest the validity of the federal anti-riot law in higher courts.

A U.S. District Court jury convicted five men Wednesday of crossing state lines with the intent to incite rioting during the convention in August 1968.

But the jury of 10 women and 2 men acquitted all seven defendants of conspiracy to promote the bloody confrontations between police and antiwar demonstrators.

Two defendants, Lee Weiner and John R. Froines, were cleared of conspiracy and of a charge of teaching the use of incendiary devices. Froines and Weiner both resided in Chicago during the summer of 1968 and were not charged in the indictment with crossing state lines to incite rioting.

Convicted were David T. Dellinger, 54; Jerry C. Rubin, 31; Thomas E. Hayden, 30; Abbott "Abbie" Hoffman, 31, and Rennard C. "Rennie" Davis, 29.

Each man could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and fined $10,000.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman did not set a date for sentencing. All seven defendants are being held in the Cook County jail on contempt sentences imposed by Judge Hoffman last weekend. The sentences ranged from 2½ months to 2½ years. The judge has refused to grant bail on the contempt charges pending appeal.

The defense lawyers, William M. Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass, also were given prison terms for contemptuous conduct during the five-month trial—Kunstler 4 years 13 days, Weinglass 20 months 5 days. The judge stayed execution of their sentences to May 4.

Weinglass said late Wednesday that he hoped to file a motion by Friday seeking to have admitted to bail the five men convicted of inciting to riot.

He said appeals on the convictions themselves will be filed "as soon as possible."

Although the jury acquitted all seven men on the conspiracy charge, Weinglass said the conviction on the second count would provide an equal test of the federal statute's constitutionality.

Weinglass declared the statute "is unconstitutional to begin with" and that "there were so many errors in the course of the trial" that there would be many avenues of appeal.

Weinglass said the verdict "is obviously a compromise. The jury was deadlocked and they broke the deadlock by negotiating."

Kunstler said, "I would rather have them hanged than compromised."

Neither the lawyers nor their clients were prepared to hear a verdict when they entered Judge Hoffman's courtroom Wednesday. They came to argue a defense motion that the jury be declared deadlocked and a mistrial be ordered.

Newsman were ordered out of the courtroom shortly after 10 a.m., and the 23rd floor outside was cleared of all persons except certified newsmen, federal authorities and defendants' families.

When the courtroom was reopened, newsmen were readmitted and searched and after everyone was seated the doors were locked.

Judge Hoffman's bailiff reported, "The jury has reached a verdict."

The defendants were busy reading newspapers. Weinglass repeated the statement, "A verdict."

Rubin turned toward his wife Nancy, who was sitting with newsmen in the third spectator row. He said, "A verdict." He turned his thumbs downward.

The judge then granted a government motion to remove all families of the defendants because of their past behavior. The wives of Hoffman and Rubin, Dellinger's 13-year-old daughter, Weiner's girlfriend and Froines' mother-in-law were ejected.

Senators Praise 'State Of The World' Message

By WALTER R. MEARS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's first State of the World message drew praise from Senate leaders of both parties for its stress on negotiation and shared responsibility in foreign affairs.

"It's almost a 180-degree turn from the 'let's lick them before breakfast' attitude that we've had in the past," said Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, the Senate's senior GOP member.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he was "pleased that the President emphasized negotiation, participation and shared responsibility," but added that the message seemed filled with generalities. He said specifics will have to be forthcoming.

The 40,000-word Nixon report sent to Congress Wednesday stirred no debate and drew sparse comment in a Senate preoccupied with the school desegregation problem.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he heads may hold hearings later in the year on issues raised by the foreign policy report.

Mansfield praised the President's restatement and worldwide application of the so-called Nixon Doctrine. The President described it this way:

"Its central thesis is that the United States will participate in the defense and development of allies and friends but that America cannot—and will not—conceive all the plans, design all the programs, execute all the decisions and undertake all the defense of the free nations of the world."

"We will help where it makes a real difference and is considered in our interest," Nixon said.

"He has done a good job, I think, in shifting away from the period of U.S. dominance," Mansfield said.

There was disagreement on Nixon's advocacy of an expanded Safeguard antiballistic missile system as the response to Soviet intercontinental missiles. Aiken said he had misgivings about the ABM plan; Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said the Safeguard proposal "will face great opposition in the Senate."

But Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., said Nixon "dealt in facts rather than false hopes or fantasy to explain why we must have the Safeguard antiballistic missile system and why we can not permit the Soviet Union to become predominant in the Middle East."

Remembers: Iwo Jima Anniversary

Today is the 25th anniversary of the beginning of the Battle of Iwo Jima, a conquest that is remembered as one of the greatest of World War II.

According to Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina University, who was there with the Third Marine Division, the battle for the parcel of Japanese homeland, started out to be a 72-hour operation and became a six-weeks' campaign. It was thought that the Japanese had perhaps 10,000 men there, but it turned out they had twice that many, Dr. Jenkins said.

"It was a bleak place. Composed of volcanic ash, the island would support no plant life and it was quite cold at night. It was important that we take it, however, because the enemy was intercepting many of our planes with aircraft based here."

Dr. and Mrs. Jenkins have in their home a framed photograph, yellowed with age, of the raising of the American flag on Iwo Jima. Signed "Rosenthal, A.P.," it is an original copy of the A.P. photographer's famous depiction of four Marines and one Navy Corpsman raising the flag when the victory was won. The picture has become a symbol of the campaign and given of World War II. It was given to Dr. Jenkins by Rosenthal himself while the two were still on the tiny island in the Pacific.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A commission to study effects of federal laws, court decisions, federal directives and guidelines upon the quality of American education was proposed today in Congress by First District Congressman Walter B. Jones. (D-N.C.).

Jones joined with several other members of the House of Representatives seeking to establish a commission which would study at first hand and in depth the problem. Its membership would be composed of select members of the House appointed by the speaker.

The House study commission, according to Jones, would include the effect of HEW policies, court decisions relating to busing of students to achieve racial quotas, violence and unrest in the classrooms as well as the multitude of federal programs with educational objectives.

"As a result of the commission's study, recommendations in the form of legislative proposals to the judiciary, educational committees, civil rights committees, as well as the Justice Department could be considered," Jones stated.

He continued, "The administrative costs of such federal programs would come in for close study, for their high costs in some programs actually reduces the funds available for intended educational purposes."

"Previous efforts to secure appointment of such a study group by the House Education and Labor Committee for a personal direct investigation into federal policies as they affect education have met with no success," Jones pointed out. Thus, in an effort to bypass this committee, Jones joined in a non-partisan and non-sectional resolution which included representatives from Oregon, Ohio, Illinois, Louisiana and others.

"I hope the net result will be an opportunity to take the commission's findings directly to Congress and secure some relief from the chaotic situation now existing in many parts of American education," Jones declared.

Survey To Begin Today

T.I. Wagner, project manager of the General Neighborhood Renewal Project, reminds citizens living in the GNRPA area that interior housing and family composition surveys will begin today.

The surveys, he pointed out, will be a 20 per cent sampling of every fifth family living unit in the area. Staff members of the Redevelopment Commission will conduct the visits.

Wagner said that GNRPA designed to rehabilitate deteriorating property over the next eight to ten years, encompasses some 1100 homes and close to 400 acres of property. Data from the interior surveys, along with information gathered through a 100 per cent exterior survey program conducted last summer, will be used for study and future designation of the first project area for rehabilitation.

Leggett Candidate For Seat In House

RALEIGH (AP) — The state's first American party candidates for Congress filed with the North Carolina Board of Elections Wednesday.

A Greensboro businessman, Lynwood Bullock, paid a $425 filing fee and entered the race in the Sixth District, and Gene Leggett of New Bern filed as a candidate in the First District.

Bullock said God prompted him to enter the race.

"I feel that God will call out men to oppose the evil things in our country, and I feel I am one of them," Bullock had said in announcing his candidacy last week.

There was considerable doubt that the American party leadership would support Leggett, a Navy veteran and a former private detective at Raleigh.

Leggett's filing came five days after the American party's district chairman, Byrd Hinshaw, said in a statement that he and other party leaders had decided that "the First District should not field a candidate for the U. S. Congress during this election cycle."

When asked by telephone if this meant Leggett does not have the support of the party leadership, Hinshaw said, "That is correct."

Shaw U. President Is Target Of Pies

RALEIGH (AP) — Shaw University's president was clobbered with a pie and so were several other university administrators and spectators Wednesday, but it wasn't a student demonstration — just a gag.

It was just Shaw's first—and possibly last—pie throwing contest.

Dining hall director Woodrow Anderson came up with the idea to divert student attention, which for lack of something else—seems to focus on food service during the dull winter months.

Every fifth student going through the cafeteria line was given a free ticket for a pie. Approximately 150 pies were stacked on tables about 25 feet from a wooden screen with holes cut for two persons to stick their heads and hands through.

The honor of throwing the first pie went to the "pie queen," Gwen Johnson of Englewood, N. J., who had been chosen by student workers in the cafeteria.

The first pie fell short. The crowd moaned. The second pie was better aimed, but the target, a girl pulled her head out of the hole before it struck.

Then the university president, Dr. King V. Check, stuck his head through the hole.

"Hit him, hit him," the crowd yelled.

Check stuck his tongue out. The pie flew. It didn't hit him, but it splattered pie on his face when it hit the board.

Proposes Two-Child Family

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Nixon administration official says parents should limit their families to two children if they want to help start improving the quality of life in America.

Robert H. Finch, secretary of health, education and welfare, disclosed his two-child suggestion in a speech Wednesday night before an opening session of a conference on the environment.

The secretary, describing overpopulation as a paramount concern that must be dealt with if other environmental problems are to be solved, said "the best job we can do now" is make birth control information available to more women.

In a question and answer period, he was asked what people could do on a voluntary basis to improve the environment.

"I would begin with recommending that they start with two children," Finch said. "Beyond that, there are many other voluntary commitments others can do." He did not give specifics on the last point.

He also said the government might have to offer "disincentives" to discourage parents from starting big families but he did not spell out what he meant.

Philip Handler, president of the National Academy of Sciences, echoed Finch's remarks, saying "the greatest threat to the human race is man's own procreation."

Handler said the United States is expected to have 100 million more people by the year 2000. He said virtually all the nation's domestic ills stem from the rapidly growing population.

Finch touched on overpopulation at one other point in his talk. "Unless the American people are really prepared to pay pollution 'taxes' and meet the costs of environmental restoration—costs that may range from less powerful autos to less frequently occupied bassines—no political authority can control the excesses of affluence or rampant technology."

Finch called on industry and science to find other ways to cope with the problems of the environment.

No 'Hippie' Child Is Better Off Dead

By Abigail Van Buren

(c 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to the woman who said that the mother whose son was lying dead in Viet Nam was better off than she, whose 19-year-old son was sick, dirty, living hand to mouth and using drugs.

I run a drug treatment program called RAP (Recognize All Potential) which deals primarily with adolescent and college-age drug users. Many of them are sick and dirty, living hand to mouth.

When I read them the mother's letter above, some of them said, "I'll bet my mother wrote that. She really wishes I were dead."

Abby, please tell that mother to examine her own feelings towards her son. Why has she give up hope for him?

Perhaps if some of these parents would worry less about what to tell their friends and more about what to tell their children, I could work less than 20 hours a day attempting to help kids whose parents wish they were dead.

PATRICIA PACKARD
Pittsburgh, Pa.

DEAR PATRICIA: It's a great job you and your colleagues are doing. Drug addiction among the young is, in my opinion, one of our nation's most serious problems. If only we had an educational program effective enough to keep our kids away from the stuff, we wouldn't have to work so hard to get them off the stuff.

DEAR ABBY: I guess my problem is a very common one as my husband says all men do the same thing.

Let me explain. A few months ago my husband and I were getting ready for bed, and he reached over to lay his wallet on the dresser and he missed. His wallet fell on the floor and everything in it spilled out. Plain as could be were some pictures of naked men and women together. [I do mean together.]

I was shocked and sick, but pretended I didn't see them. I tried to put it out of my mind. Now this morning when I went into his pants pocket to get a dollar for my daughter to take to school, I found more pictures just like the first. I wasn't spying or prying. I have always gone into my husband's pants pockets with his knowledge and permission.

This time I mentioned it to my husband, and he said all men carry pictures like that around. Do they? What does this mean? Could a man love and respect his wife and carry stuff like that? He never used to act this way. Please answer soon.

WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: Only the emotionally immature would look twice at such pictures. If your husband "never used to act this way," perhaps he is undergoing some personality change due to a physical illness. Ask your doctor. It's "normal" for curious little boys, but not for grown men.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old woman, unmarried. I live with my father. Dad is 62 and has been divorced from my mother for several years.

What bothers me is that my father refuses to go with women anywhere near his own age. He is very good looking and keeps himself in excellent physical condition by jogging, golfing, and dieting, and he looks more like 50 than 62.

He goes with three different women. The youngest is 32 and the oldest is 36. Most of Dad's men friends are about his age and they all are married with grandchildren. None of his friends will invite him to mixed parties because they are afraid Dad will show up with some young thing half his age. This bothers me, and it bothers Dad's friends, but it doesn't bother Dad. He says he doesn't intend to get married again and he prefers the company of young girls to that of women his own age, and if his friends don't like it, that's their problem. What do you think?

DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: I think a 62-year-old man, who looks like 50, should be able to bring a woman of 32 to a party without being criticized. Furthermore I think his friends are probably more jealous than bothered. And you, young lady, shouldn't be bothered either. Daddy is a big boy now.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S. A.: A closed mouth gathers no feet.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Rev. Hilton Is Speaker At Meet Of Faculty Wives

The Rev. David Hilton, acting minister of St. James Methodist Church, gave and illustrated talk on "Mayasia" at the Tuesday night meeting of ECU Faculty Wives Club at Methodist Student Center.

Hilton and his wife, Mary Losi, spent seven years in Malaysia before returning last year to complete theological studies at Duke University. The Hiltons have two children, David and Sarah.

A brief social and business meeting immediately proceeded the program. Mrs. Harold McGrath, president of FWC, announced that the annual bridge benefit would be held Tuesday, April 21, at South Cafeteria. General chairman and committee members have not been announced.

Mrs. McGrath also reported on the formation of a coordinating committee at a luncheon meeting last week of the Pitt Community Council.

She further announced plans to make Operation Sunshine, a voluntary project for girls, ages seven-nine, a permanent organization. Plans will be formulated at a meeting to be held Thursday, Feb. 26, at St. James Methodist Church. The club, because of past interest and support, was asked to send a representative to the meeting.

Other business included an announcement of programs on "Cake Decorating" by Frank Diener to the Odds and Ends group and an April tour of Tryon Palace in New Bern for the Antiques group.

Members are reminded that the March meeting will include the election of officers for the coming year.

Test For Right To Fair Trial

The murder of an army physician's wife and two daughters in Ft. Bragg Monday is horrifying to all decent thinking people.

Investigation has indicated that a hippie-type band committed the crimes which took the life of a young mother, her two daughters and also cost the life of her unborn child. The marauders stabbed the doctor, Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald, and left him in critical condition for a time.

The captain told of his home being invaded and the murders committed in a fashion that is similar to several other strange ritualistic killings which have taken place in the nation recently.

The girl with the group muttered "acid is groovy; kill the pigs." The word pig was found scrawled in blood on the headboard of a bed in the house.

The deaths were brutal. The pregnant Mrs. MacDonald suffered multiple stab wounds in her neck and chest and a fractured skull. Both forearms were also fractured. Officers said two knives, an icepick and a piece of wood two inches in diameter and 18 inches long apparently were used in the killings.

Thus the ultimate of horrors came to this family during the night and one wonders how such things could happen in a nation which is supposedly struggling to make barbarism a thing of the past.

A case such as this is a real test of our resolve to render fair trials in as dispassionate atmosphere as possible. The best we have in law enforcement must be used in attempting to solve this case so that no loose ends will remain when charges are brought.

The public should remain open minded as possible so that the defendants may receive a trial that is fair to them. It is a time to remember that the accused are not guilty until after the trial. When charges are made in this case there should be no legal question that those accused were not given the fairest trial possible in view of the circumstances.

No Alternative To A Gradual Disengagement

There seems little likelihood at this stage that there will be any sudden breakthrough in the Vietnam war and thus the only course for the United States to follow is its present policy of gradual disengagement.

That is what can be seen in the message on world affairs which President Nixon delivered to Congress.

He said a breakthrough in Vietnam peace negotiations could come without warning but there is not sign that it will. He said the United States remains ready to be "flexible and generous" in negotiations.

There is nothing to indicate that there will be a negotiated peace, however, so we can best assume that the United States will continue its planned withdrawals, gradually turning the fighting over to the South Vietnamese.

Benefit From Joint Action

(Today's guest column is from Washington, N.C. from Ashley B. Futrell, the editor of The Washington Daily News, written for N.C. Association of Afternoon Dailies).

By ASHLEY B. FUTRELL

Somewhere along the line communities begin to realize that alone each stands little chance of getting some badly needed facility. And then comes the feeling that the chances of success are multiplied many times when several counties come together and say "we shall act together."

This has happened here in far Eastern North Carolina, and the badly needed facility is a commercial airport.

Looking at the middle Eastern area of our state, there is today an airport to the North in Elizabeth City which serves commercial traffic on a sort of feeder basis. To the South there is New Bern, and to the West there is Rocky Mount. But the "dead area" lies directly between Elizabeth City and New Bern.

Beaufort country has a fine local airport, but no commercial lines. Greenville has a fine local airport with no commercial lines. Williamston is in the same predicament.

For many years now each has been trying without success to induce commercial lines to establish stops. But always has been "no, your traffic count is too low."

So under the auspices recently of the Mid-East Development commission, leaders of Beaufort, Pitt, and Martin counties sat down together to discuss a common airport to serve all three counties. Not a word was mentioned as to where the three county airport should be located. Each representative seemed anxious to talk in terms of working together. It was even agreed unanimously that pending future developments the Greenville airport would be pushed for the immediate time as the logical first step in the new cooperative venture.

It was agreed that each county would name a representative on the Airport Authority with each incorporated town or city in the three counties doing likewise. And right now the ball is rolling as the beginning of the all out effort gets underway.

Since the meeting some people have asked about the location of any possible airport. And if the triangle formed by lines drawn from Greenville to Washington to Williamston could serve as a guide, then a common airport in logical terms might be built just about where the three counties come together.

Citizens of all three counties realize that the task is difficult and the going tough in the days ahead as success is the goal. But it was expressed well when one fellow said "we had rather try and fail than not try at all."

The matter of obtaining air transportation is a problem which has haunted many Eastern North Carolina communities for many years. Just a few years ago it seemed likely that Wilson, Rocky Mount, and Greenville might get together and have a common airport. But the effort died somewhere along the way. While Rocky Mount has a commercial airport now, there is much talk from time to time that Rocky Mount and Wilson will one day get together.

Now that Greenville and Pitt county have thrown in with Beaufort and Martin counties, the fact seems inevitable that the future for Wilson and Rocky Mount lies in a two community effort.

Right now there is a lot of enthusiasm prevalent in these parts. As times goes on and as the newly appointed Airport Authority gets into the "nitty-gritty" of the effort, there might be many reverses. But somehow the area and its people right now seem dedicated to keeping up the effort.

And who knows? One day there might just be a Pitt-beaumar Airport. Or will it be Beaumar-pitt or Mar-pittbeau?

Risks Grow In Middle East

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Remember October 1962 and the Cuban missile crisis? The world held its breath and wondered for many agonizing hours whether this was it.

Could something similar happen in the Middle East? Things are looking ugly. The angry tone of the latest Soviet blast at the United States suggests that the intensification of Arab-Israeli warfare has set back Soviet-American relations in that sphere, at least, by more than two years.

A showdown does not seem to be around the corner. Perhaps the danger is long-range. But men with long experience in government and diplomacy say it cannot be ruled out. There is no insurance that the superpowers can keep developments in the Middle East under control.

"The danger is always present of a new crisis of confrontation," says a source who was close to the Cuban one. "We cannot assume there won't be one, even if it is not precisely like that of 1962. Then there was an imbalance in our favor in missile weaponry and that was significant."

"What if Israel one day was on the point of being defeated? What would the United States do? At this point, nobody can say."

The Soviet statement Monday pledged all "necessary" aid to Arab states to defend themselves, an indication that Moscow intends to provide more hardware, including MIG-23 planes.

The Russians still insist they want a peace settlement. But whatever little progress may have been made two years ago on that score, at least, seems to be fading away, if it hasn't already evaporated.

A few weeks after the 1967 war ended, President Lyndon B. Johnson met at Glassboro, N.J., with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin. Johnson's public statements placed the Middle East at the top of their agenda. When the talks were over, Johnson said the meeting had made the world "a little less dangerous" and reported that while there had been no ready agreement on the Middle East, the positions of the two were "a long way from total difference."

Immediately afterward, some U.N. diplomats said they believed some sort of secret agreement had been reached on measures to avoid a new Middle East arms race.

While the American and Soviet leaders were talking in New Jersey, Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny had been in Cairo talking to President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Whether or not there was a Soviet-American agreement of any kind, it was noteworthy that shortly after Glassboro, Nasser's government was reported to have ordered its information media to mute calls for a new war.

Whatever took place at Glassboro, the arms race in the Middle East did escalate. In the final days of the Johnson administration, the United States agreed to sell Israel 50 F4 Phantom jets and spare parts. The first of the Phantoms were delivered last September. Later that month, Moscow rejected outright an American proposal for a general Middle East arms embargo.

Israel's air attacks on her Arab neighbors intensified. By last October, U.S.-Soviet quarrelling reached its worst point since the 1967 war, with each questioning the other's good faith. Today the Russians sound angrier than ever in the light of recent Israeli air action against Egypt. If anything happened behind the scenes at Glassboro, it could now be, from Moscow's viewpoint, that all bets are off.

Equal Enforcement? Ha!

When John Stennis embarked three months ago upon his patient crusade for equal treatment, most of us were convinced the Senator's effort was doomed to failure. This is because the Mississippian was seeking to embarrass his colleagues, and you can no more embarrass a Senator than you can embarrass a groundhog. The nature of the brute does not permit it.

Nevertheless, the astonishing possibility is beginning to develop that Stennis may yet cultivate some guilty consciences in a chamber where guilty consciences are as rare as short speeches. Last week he won over Connecticut's Abraham Ribicoff. A few other liberals are getting rubbery in the knees. They know in their hearts that Stennis is right. He has 'em squirming.

The Senator's innocent object is simply to seek equal enforcement of desegregation laws. Toward this end, he has introduced two innocent little amendments to the pending Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

The first of these, known as Amendment 463, would make it the policy of the United States that desegregation guidelines imposed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare shall be applied uniformly throughout the country, wherever segregated schools exist, "without regard to the origin or cause of such segregation."

The second, known as Amendment 481, is adapted directly from a law that became effective in New York last September. It has two sections. The first says that no child shall be refused admission to any public school by reason of his race. The second section states the converse of the proposition; it says that no child may be compelled to attend any school by reason of his race or for the purpose of achieving racial balance.

Other Editors Say Voice Is Weaker

(Washington Daily News)

James A. Graham, N. C. Commissioner of Agriculture, speaking recently before the Bath Ruritan club, said that in the year 2,000, it is predicted that less than one percent of our American population will be living on farms.

With more than 200,000,000 people living in the United States now, we hesitate to guess what our population might be in 2,000. Surely it will be somewhere around a half billion people.

But if less than one percent of our population is going to have the responsibility for feeding the other 99 percent, it means that a great burden is going to be borne by a mighty few people.

Yet, if we analyze the picture as it is right now and look back just a few years, we begin to see just how much political power the farm voice has lost within a very few years.

There was a time just a few years ago when the farm bloc voice was heard and heeded in congress. A presidential candidate had to think in terms of what the farm vote wanted. The political prestige of the farmer was high.

Today we hear very little nationally about the potency of the farm vote. It would appear that so many national candidates are just naturally disregarding it as a negligible quantity.

The label "farm bloc" seems to have passed from the American vocabulary, and it is a state of affairs with more sadness attached to it than many realize. If the farm people are to feed the nation on the one hand and be ignored politically on the other, it seems that our picture is very much out of focus.

We have heard many reasons advanced as to why the voice of the farmer is weaker today. We have heard it said that farmers are too individualistic; that they can never get together, and that there is no one who really can speak for them. But they seem to be alibis more than sound reasons.

The facts are clear and indisputable. America cannot exist without the farms and the farmers. America must eat, and the farmers must provide that food. If we put our house of values in order, we see and understand.

As talk continues in congress about doing away with this farm program or that farm program, many of those doing the talking know that within their own states and districts, there are very few farm votes. What they do not realize is that farmers somewhere else are providing their very means of existence.

We can admit that the farm voice has grown weaker, but it is tragic that it has done so.

In other words, this broadly representative organization, which once at least was not known for its advocacy of new ideas, recognized the consumer movement and even embraced many of its ideas.

Now the attitude of at least one Better Business Bureau suggests that the consumer movement may not be that popular among businessmen. Wirsig, in fact, said that in accepting consumerism some businessmen might be misguided.

His address suggests also that consumerism may have reached the point where some of its demands have become unbalanced, where opportunists might use the movement for personal goals, and where a critical reaction might be setting in.

If so, it is unfortunate for the consumer movement, because while some consumer advocates may sound shrill at times, the need for marketplace improvements are so obvious as to be unarguable.

Also, 'Year Of The Strikes'

By ELMER ROESSNER

This may be the Year of the Dog in China, but it will be the year of the dog-gonedest strikes in the United States.

There are a number of converging reasons why 1970 will be the year of strikes. They are:

- Contracts covering five million workers — twice as many as last year — come up for renewal or renegotiation this year. Last year there were 5,600 work stoppages, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.
- The Nixon administration has adopted a policy of hands-off in labor disputes. This will amount to a let-them-fight-it-out policy.
- Secretary of Labor George Shultz has indicated that the administration may be considering changes in the emergency strike provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. This will raise labor's hackles.
- On Top Of That, Recession
- With declines in business — many corporate profits are declining — employers will resist labor demands more than they would otherwise. Some may even welcome strikes as alternatives to plant shutdowns.
- The recession will not induce labor to modify demands. Government statistics show that, despite wage increases, many workers get less buying power because of higher taxes and higher prices. Furthermore, layoffs and less overtime are cutting take-home pay and prices keep on rising. Agriculture Department says that consumers will pay 3 1/2 to 4 percent more for food this year. Other prices have been rising.
- The Teamsters Union has already demanded a 75 percent increase over the next three years. New York tugboat workers struck for a 100 per cent increase. Other demands are high.
- Movie workers in Hollywood have agreed to some minor concessions, but only because more than half the movie making has been driven to Europe (even behind the Iron Curtain), Latin America and Asia where wages and other costs are lower.
- Coming Negotiation
- The Teamsters get a warm-up March 1 when their contract for 50,000 employees of California Processors, Inc., expires. Their contracts for 450,000 over-the-road and local truckers expires March 31.
- Other major expirations:

April 20: 18,000 Firestone, 11,000 Goodrich, 22,000 Goodyear and 19,000 Uniroyal Rubber Workers.

April 21: 20,000 New York apartment Building Service Employees.

May 31: 57,000 Ladies Garment Workers, mostly in New York.

May 31: 14,000 workers, International Paper.

June 1: 35,000 RCA Electric Workers.

June 30: 17,000 PG&S Electrical Workers.

July 14: 18,000 General Telephone of Calif. Communication Workers.

July 15: 10,000 ILGWU knitwear workers, New York.

Aug. 31: Armour, Morrel and Swift, 34,000 meat cutters.

Sept. 14: 30,000 General Motors Electrical Workers.

Oct. 1: 34,000 Caterpillar, 12,000 Deere, 40,000 International Harvester Auto workers.

Cynics Always Present

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There have always been cynics who warn that "you wouldn't eat in that restaurant if you knew what went on in the kitchen," and some observers of our society say the attitude is spreading.

Now we are told that you wouldn't buy a certain car if you spent a day on the assembly line; you wouldn't swallow a pill if you read the technician's report; you wouldn't fly if you knew the private lives of pilots.

To some degree a cynical attitude exists in the consumer movement. But to what degree? And isn't it better to be forewarned than not warned at all?

Speaking to business executives here for a consumer symposium, the president of the New York Better Business Bureau won rounds of applause for suggesting that the consumer activists had overstated their case.

They have, said Woodrow Wirsig, used "harassment, hunch, prejudice and emotion" in their criticism of safety and quality, and they have helped push business into a deepening decline.

The attack was a distinct departure from the speeches made recently by business spokesmen. Only last fall, a study made for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States produced a document that, among other things:

Accused business of tardiness in responding to consumer criticism; advocated a re-examination of business practices; advised sellers to provide more information on safety, performance and durability of products.

It recommended simpler warranties, speedier repairs of defective products, better training of sales personnel, voluntary safety standards, forthright action against deception, and more awareness of social consequences.

Goldwater Urges Removal Of Voting Right Technicalities

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater urged Congress today to wipe out legal technicalities that prevent millions of citizens from voting in presidential elections.

The Arizona Republican, his party's candidate for President in 1964, said state residence requirements and restrictions on absentee voting "are utterly out of tune with the changing needs of a modern, mobile society."

In testimony prepared for a Senate constitutional rights subcommittee hearing on voting legislation, Goldwater said, "In my opinion every able-bodied citizen of the several states should be entitled to participate in the choice of his President—period.

"A citizen should be able to exercise this right regardless of where he is in the world on election day and regardless of how long he has been a resident of any particular state."

Goldwater offered his proposal as a substitute for a section of a House-passed voting rights bill that provides a person residing in a state on Sept. 1 in a presidential election year could vote if otherwise eligible.

The establishment of a uniform residency requirement is one of the least controversial parts of the bill, an administration measure that would replace the 1965 Voting Rights Act, but Goldwater contended it is inadequate.

In his statement, he didn't touch on the key issue in dispute—whether the 1965 act, applying only to parts of the South, should be extended or supplanted by the nationwide legislation urged by President Nixon.

During testimony Wednesday, civil rights leader Clarence Mitchell appealed for passage of a bill extending the 1965 voting

Previn Seeking Calif. Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conductor-composer Andre Previn, who has announced that he and actress Mia Farrow expect the birth of a child in the spring, has filed suit for divorce from his wife of 11 years, Dory.

Previn, 40, is in London, where he conducts the London Symphony Orchestra. The suit was filed in Los Angeles Superior Court Wednesday by his attorney.

It alleges irreconcilable differences, the only ground required for divorce under a new California law.

Mrs. Previn, 44, of Beverly Hills, Calif., is a song lyricist and received an Academy Award nomination this week for her lyrics to "Come Saturday Morning."

They were married in Las Vegas, Nev., in 1959 and separated Feb. 15, 1969. They have no children.

rights law without change for five years.

He said Congress should not let "this valuable legislation get bogged down in a morass of litigation because of technical changes in the present statute."

Mitchell said that he was confident the House would accept a simple extension bill if the Senate passed it.

By a 208-203 vote last December, the House approved the administration's nationwide voting rights bill in place of a measure extending the 1965 act.

The administration bill bans the use of voter literacy tests in all states instead of just the Southern states covered by the 1965 act. It also permits election observers and examiners to be sent anywhere to protect voting rights.

But it repeals a section of the 1965 law requiring Southern states to get advance clearance from the U.S. attorney general for any change in their election laws.

Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D-Md., testifying in support of extending the 1965 act, said this section is the key to success in increasing Negro voter registration in the South.

good for Florida, why isn't it good for Illinois?

The response from Senator Smith of Illinois is ah, hhm, and well, Mr. Smith surely does oppose bussing, and ah, but, he will vote no on No. 463, and he doesn't yet know about No. 481.

The response from Senator Percy is ah, hhm, how's that, and Mr. Percy is just not clear on what the Stennis amendments would do, and ah, hhm, you know, it's not as simple as it looks, eh, hoo, golly gee, and let's take a long weekend.

Indiana parallels Illinois. Ohio has dozens of all-black schools. So does New York. Well, asks Stennis, what will you do about it?

He gets feeble answers, or none at all.

Will Ask For Three New N.C. Prisons

RALEIGH (AP) — Plans to ask the next three legislatures for funds to construct three single-cell, high-rise prisons were approved Wednesday by the North Carolina Prison Commission.

The commission also approved proposals of Corrections Commissioner Lee Bounds to seek state funds for the addition of 272 cells at Central Prison in Raleigh and 300 cells at the Caledonia Prison Farm in Halifax County.

At its monthly meeting, Bounds told the commission he approves a proposal by Gov. Bob Scott for the consolidation of the state's adult and juvenile correction units, and the Probation and Paroles Department, into a single state department of correction.

Tools Stolen From Station

An estimated $600 worth of tools were taken from Bob's Atlantic Station at the intersection of Memorial Drive and U. S. 264 by-pass early Wednesday, according to a report made to Greenville police.

Chief T. E. Gladson said thieves gained entrance to the building by breaking through a window in the station's wash pit. A variety of tools were taken, including one air wrench.

and adult levels," Bounds told the commission.

In connection with the request for funds for new prison units, Bounds said, "We are asking for what we can reasonably expect to get. We see no need to go through an exercise in futility."

Bounds outlined to the commission these specific legislative recommendations:

1971 legislature—A 72-cell unit at Central Prison; a 100-cell unit at Caledonia; one medium custody high-rise unit; a gymnasium at the high-rise unit at Morganton; and $500,000 for unspecified capital improvements.

1973 legislature—A 100-cell unit at Central Prison; a 100-cell unit at Caledonia; a high-rise medium custody unit; and $500,000 for unspecified capital improvements.

1975 legislature — 100-cell unit at Central Prison; 100-cell unit at Caledonia; a high-rise medium custody unit; and $500,000 for unspecified capital improvements.

Political Concern Can Help Anti-Pollution Fight

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Early in 1970, the growing public cry for cleaner air, water and general environment is finding a most potent ally—politics.

The rising political concern could help remedy two crippling weaknesses in past antipollution efforts—a lack of money and lack of legal authority and governmental determination to enforce corrective actions.

To politicians—from city halls to Washington—the answering of public complaints about pollution could bring the reward of votes.

Producers Urged Join In Sign-Up

Pitt County feed grain, wheat, and cotton producers were urged today to sign up early during the 1970 farm program sign up period — Feb. 2 through March 20 — at the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office.

Stacy J. Evans, county executive director for ASCS, said farmers may avoid standing in line if they come in early during the seven-week period. "We always seem to get a last minute rush even though we try to get the word out well in advance about the sign up period," Evans said.

Farm programs for feed grain, wheat and cotton producers are voluntary, and farmers must sign up in order to participate in them. At sign up time, farmers indicate their intentions to participate and agree to comply with program provisions.

In return for restricting their production to help keep supplies in line with need, farmers are eligible for price-support loans.

Evans said farm programs benefit all consumers, not just the agricultural segment. "A stable and prosperous agriculture is a foundation stone for a stable and prosperous economy," he said.

"The farm programs probably enlist more farmers in a voluntary, cooperative endeavor to stabilize production and prices than any other method yet found," Evans explained.

'Thinking Day' For Girl Scouts

Thinking Day will be observed by local girl scouts at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church Saturday from 10 a.m. until 11:30 a.m.

Thinking Day is held the world over to honor the birthday of Lord Baden-Powell, founder of Boy Scouts, and Lady Baden-Powell, the Chief World Guide.

Various displays will be set up representing the countries of the world. The public is invited.

Governmental battle lines in the pollution war began to be more clearly drawn in a period that witnessed these other gains and losses in matters of Americans' environment.

Plans were dropped for a jetport for Miami in the Florida Everglades, after conservationists argued it would threaten the Everglades National Park.

Bee keepers reported disastrous lethal effects upon bee colonies from use of some pesticides which farmers or others began using in place of longer-lasting DDT. The DDT was blamed for taking a toll of birds, fish and other life, while bees seemed to tolerate it better.

Research chemists at the Bureau of Mines Coal Research Center in Pittsburgh produced, in laboratory experiments, a type of crude petroleum from ground-up garbage and paper. A next question is whether the technique would work practically to help dispose of solid wastes.

Governmental agencies brought suit against a score of industrial firms on charges of polluting or interfering with navigation on New York City waterways.

In Cincinnati, a strike by city employees piled garbage up on the streets and led to spilling of millions of gallons of raw sewage daily into the Ohio River. One hundred miles downstream, Louisville, Ky., uses river water for domestic purposes. Kentucky officials protested.

General Motors announced it would modify future car engines to run on lower octane, lead-free gasoline, and Ford and Chrysler were expected to follow suit. The action means the petroleum industry must develop powerful but less polluting gasoline.

President Nixon appointed the three members of his new Council on Environmental Quality—Russell E. Train, undersecretary of the interior, Robert Cahn of the Christian Science Monitor, and Gordon J.F. MacDonald, vice chancellor of research and graduate affairs of the University of California at Santa Barbara. Conservationists generally liked the appointments, questioned only whether their work as advisers and watchdogs over influences upon the environment would be funded sufficiently in times of tight budgeting.

The President in his State of the Union message gave high priority to cleaning up the environment, and in his budget message suggested specific sums for antipollution programs.

He enriched some of these proposals last week. For example, he authorized $4 billion immediately for fiscal 1971 to cover the full federal share of a $10-billion program to clean up waste waters, with $1 billion to be spent each year for the next four years. Congress earlier had voted $800 million for this purpose for next fiscal year, while the administration had originally asked for only $214 million.

In other steps, Nixon proposed a means of helping states raise money through bonds for water clean-up, establishment of state-federal water quality standards to impose precise effluent requirements on all industrial and municipal sources; authority to impose fines up to $10,000 daily for failure to meet water and air quality standards; and research under the Solid Waste Disposal Act to emphasize techniques for recycling materials.

Before the President submitted his environmental message, Democrats had taken the view his programs involved more rhetoric than action and money muscle, and some, like Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, could point to their own long-standing efforts to halt environmental pollution.

Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel said the party with the best record on environment "is going to be the party that wins the most election."

Muskie plans to introduce legislation to provide $12.5 billion over a five-year period for waste treatment grants, with states and cities matching for a total of $25 billion. He will also seek $325 million a year for three years.

The State of Illinois needs over $1.5 billion to clean up its water, says C. Wallace Poston, director of the Great Lakes Regional Office of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration. Rescuing Lake Michigan from pollution would cost upwards of $1 billion, he adds. Other members of the same agency think the bill could be $2 billion to $10 billion.

On matters of air pollution:

In Washington, the General Services Administration announced that more than 1,000 federal trucks and autos would be converted this year to burning natural gas in a system that cuts noxious exhaust emissions by about 80 per cent.

The National Air Pollution Control Administration and the nation's airlines agreed the airlines by the end of 1972 would have installed devices, called burner cans, that would eliminate up to 80 per cent of the carbon particles in the smoke left by jet planes exhausts.

But the devices, producing a higher temperature, would also bring an increase of about 40 per cent in the amount of nitrogen oxides in the exhausts. While this is invisible, it nonetheless is blamed as being one culprit in producing smog when sunlight breaks it down into ozone.

Red Losses Forced Slowdown In Laos Operations

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer
VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Heavy casualties apparently have forced the North Vietnamese and the Pathet Lao to suspend operations temporarily in their campaign to recapture the Plain of Jars, official sources reported today.

The battle area 100 miles north-northeast of Vientiane was reported "very quiet" today after seven days of hard fighting in which the Laotian government said 17 of its troops were killed and 28 wounded.

The only action reported today was the loss of a small government outpost four miles northeast of the Xieng Khouang airstrip. The airstrip is the government's chief stronghold, but North Vietnamese rocket bombardment have closed it to everything but helicopters and "now that's not too advisable," the sources said.

The sources said government guerrilla patrols had found the bodies of 174 North Vietnamese troops on the plain, bringing the total confirmed enemy casualties to more than 385 since the North Vietnamese offensive opened last week.

The sources said the North Vietnamese were carrying new battle gear and had been killed by AC47 gunships recently supplied to the Laotian air force by the U.S. government.

Nine North Vietnamese trucks were found destroyed near the bodies, the sources said.

Intelligence reports say the North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao have massed about 20,000 men around the Plain of Jars. But the premier of Laos said today that the outnumbered force of Meo hill tribesmen and Laotian army troops, commanded by Gen. Vang Pao, will "fight to the end" and will contain the North Vietnamese offensive until the rains return and end it.

Prince Souvanna Phouma said the offensive which the North Vietnamese and the Communist Pathet Lao movement launched last week is "much more important" than their offensive during the dry season last winter.

"This time," he told a news conference, "they are better prepared."

Like Smoking An Extra Pack

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A professor studying the effects of air pollution on textile materials says living in polluted air is like "smoking an extra pack of cigarettes a day."

Dr. Victor Salvin, professor of home economics at the University of North Carolina, blames about 65 per cent of air pollution on automobile exhausts.

The North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces were reported earlier this week to have captured a number of outpost positions around the eastern part of the plateau, and the government forces were reported regrouping on the western side. But Prince Souvanna declared: "We will maintain all our positions on the Plain of Jars."

The Plain of Jars, so called because of the large number of funeral jars there, is about 50 miles long and 20 miles wide. It is 100 miles north-northeast of Vientiane, the capital, and is the hub of most of the country's main roads.

Souvanna denied that American troops are fighting in Laos and said that his government would never ask for foreign troops.

"We need only material," he said.

He said he had no information on reports from informed sources in Saigon that U.S. fighter-bombers are flying as many as 400 sorties a day over Laos—a sortie is one flight by one plane—and that U.S. B52s bombed the Plain of Jars region Tuesday and Wednesday for the first time.

Buildings in Venice, Italy, sink at the rate of about one story each 1,000 years, says the National Geographic.

Jailbreak Is Thwarted

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Authorities say an attempted jailbreak in Winston-Salem Wednesday night was thwarted by the quick work of an alert trusty.

The trusty was released because of his actions, but the Forsyth County jailer still had a net gain of two prisoners as three men were charged in the attempt to free three prisoners.

Police described the chain of events this way.

—Two men entered the Forsyth County jail armed with shotguns, and announced to a jailer that they were going to break three of their friends out.

—The two took two jailers as hostages and went to the cell area.

—A trusty serving a term for traffic violations saw the armed men and ran across the street to call police.

—Deputies and police quickly surrounded the building and after a short period convinced the men to give up.

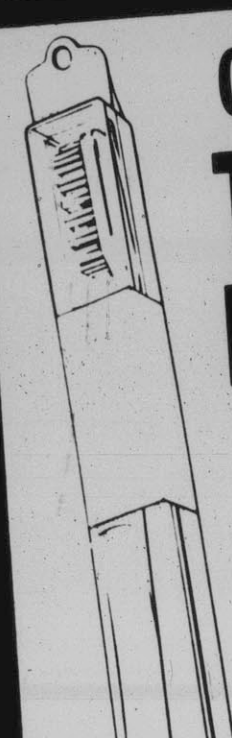

—One shotgun blast was fired in a jail elevator, apparently by one of the two men, but no one was hurt.

Sheriff E. G. Shore said John R. Baumgardner, 23, of Rural Hall, and Earl Blevins, 21, of Winston-Salem were charged with armed robbery for stealing the jailer's gun and with jailbreaking. The man the sheriff identified as the "get-away driver" was charged with public drunkenness and aiding and abetting the other two men.

The three prisoners were returned to the former cells.

And as for the trusty who called police, Sheriff Shore sent him home with a full pardon for a job well done.

The medical needs of rural Eastern North Carolina, water and air pollution, and the expanding cost of social services are most vital, he said.

Ailing Novelist 'Much Improved'

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Novelist Erle Stanley Gardner, whose favorite character "Perry Mason" never lost a case in court, appears to be winning a serious bout with a kidney ailment.

The 80-year-old novelist was reported much improved Wednesday night in Riverside Community Hospital.

A spokesman at the author's 3,000-acre Ranch del Paisano near Temecula, 40 miles south-east of here, said Gardner had been hospitalized about three weeks, adding:

"He was pretty sick, but has shown marked improvement in the last two days and we understand there is nothing to worry about."

Only 2 Days Before, He Discussed Tate Case

By RICHARD DAW
Associated Press Writer

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — An Army doctor's best friend said today that he and the doctor discussed the Sharon Tate ritual murders in California only two days before the doctor's wife and two children were killed in a similarly bizarre slaying at nearby Ft. Bragg.

"It's all so ironic," said Lt. Ronald Harrison, 26, of Columbus, Ohio. Harrison revealed his conversation with Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald, 26, of Patchogue, N.Y., as scores of Army and civilian investigators continued a probe into the stabbings of the pregnant Mrs. MacDonald, 26, and the MacDonald's two children, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 2.

They were found dead and MacDonald injured in their blood-marked six-room apartment at Ft. Bragg early Tuesday. The word "Pig" was scrawled in blood on the headboard of the MacDonald's bed.

MacDonald told police that the strange pre-dawn attack was carried out by a hippie-type band of three men and by a blonde girl who carried a candle and murmured, "Acid is groovy; kill the pigs." Acid is a slang term for the hallucinatory drug LSD.

Harrison, one of the few persons to visit MacDonald in the Womack Army Hospital, where he is recovering from stab wounds and a bruise on the head, said in an interview that his conversation about the Sharon Tate murders occurred Saturday at MacDonald's home.

Actress Sharon Tate and some friends were slain at her home last summer. Members of a hippie band have been indicted in the case. The word "Pig" had been scrawled in blood on the door of the home.

Harrison and MacDonald are Green Beret officers in the same unit at Ft. Bragg, the 6th Special Forces, and bachelor Harrison was a frequent visitor to the MacDonald home.

Harrison said MacDonald pointed to a magazine lying on a table and called his attention to an article in it dealing with the use of drugs, the existence of satanic cults in California, and the Sharon Tate murders.

"Jeff said to me, look at that, isn't that wild?" Harrison recalled. He said they talked about the article "and agreed the whole drug scene is terrible."

"Jeff treated drug addicts and knew what the problem was like," Harrison said. "He felt they were unfortunate people."

Army investigators, who have questioned hundreds of MacDonald's patients, said Wednesday that he did treat some persons with drug problems, but that it was not his specialty, nor did he treat any more drug cases than most physicians. During his off duty hours, the Army doctor also worked at two civilian hospitals.

The investigators said they so far they have not been able to come up with solid clues or motives.

The lean, crew-cut Harrison was asked if MacDonald ever expressed fear that any of his drug patients might one day harm him or his family.

"No, never," Harrison said. "Jeff wasn't afraid of anything."

Harrison was asked if he knew of any reason why anyone would want to harm MacDonald and his family.

"Hell, no," Harrison replied. Harrison said he agreed to the interview only because he felt someone should tell the news media what "an outstanding person" MacDonald is.

Harrison said he had known MacDonald and his family since last October, and described him as "very intelligent, very perceptive, very kind."

Harrison said he was "very close to the MacDonalds. I ate at their house about three times a week. I was supposed to take them out to supper tonight."

Harrison said that when he learned of the slayings Tuesday morning he went to the hospital and was told that MacDonald had been asking for him.

He refused to reveal anything MacDonald had said to him during his visit, but he declared: "He is taking this every hard but very bravely."

Nuclear Testing Cutback Feared

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is keeping secret its plans to cut back drastically, for economy reasons, its readiness to resume atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons if the Russians violate the test ban treaty.

Critics such as Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., say they are fearful the cutback could give the Russians a tremendous edge if the Soviet Union should suddenly spring a test series.

Jackson said in an interview the Russians geared up in secret for 18 months before breaking a nuclear test moratorium in 1961, prior to the test ban treaty.

committee is seeking behind closed doors to evaluate the impact of the readiness cutback.

Pentagon reticence to discuss the new plans is in marked contrast to the voluminous statements made by Kennedy administration defense officials in 1963 while trying to persuade the Senate to ratify the treaty banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere and space.

The Senate approved the treaty only after the Kennedy administration pledged to adopt certain safeguards recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to minimize risks.

Sources said the position of the current panel of military chiefs is fuzzy.

Early Pirate Barrage Flattens W&M, Nails Down Second Place For Tourney

Fairley With A Rebound

Jim Fairley of East Carolina University goes high to take a rebound from Bob Sherwood of William & Mary in last night's Southern Conference basketball action. East Carolina won, 96-83, to wrap up second place in the conference. (AP Wirephoto)

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's Pirates wrapped up second place in the Southern Conference for the second straight year last night when they bopped William & Mary, 96-83.

And Coach Warren Mitchell of the Indians is still probably trying to figure out whether his charges could have scored 13 points in a minute.

The winning score stood as the official clock reached the one minute mark. But at that point, the clock apparently short-circuited, and skipped from 1:01 to 0:00, thus ending the game. The players and officials left the court, and despite Mitchell's pleas, did not return, thus making it the only official 39 minute game of the season.

But probably the only thing that minute would have accomplished would have been just a little more of the same.

East Carolina completely outclassed the Indians, running up as much as a 23-point lead in the first half before the hosting team decided to join in the fun too. When they did, they managed to make a game of it, just as they had at Greenville, when a similar lead fell down to 10 before the Pirates won. This time, it dropped to as little as seven at 86-79 before the Bucs put it on ice with four straight free throws.

The Bucs led all the way. Jim Gregory pushed through the first Pirate shot, and they hit nine of their next 10 to shoot away to a lead that William & Mary couldn't overcome. Tom Miller popped one from the corner, and Julius Prince stole the ball for a score.

Gregory added a layup and Jim Fairley hit a jumper, running it out to 10-2.

William & Mary finally got on the board as Mike Schemering hit at the line, but a hook by Jim Modlin ran the margin to 12-1. Tom Jasper got a pair of free throws, but Fairley, Miller and Gregory each popped through baskets, running the lead to 18-3. Schemering added another free throw, but a basket by Gregory and a free throw by Fairley ran the margin to 21-4.

William & Mary finally broke the ice on the basket as they scored their first field goal with about 13 minutes left in the half. Schemering did the honors from underneath the basket.

But still the Bucs pulled away. They continued to build up their margin until with 8:50 left, Gregory hit a layup to run it out to 35-12, a 23-point spread.

The lead hovered around the 20 point mark until late in the half when a surge by the Indians cut the lead back to 11. Trailing 42-22, William & Mary came up with two three point plays, one each by Jasper and Jim Warns, and a basket by Schemering and a free throw by Bob Sherwood, cutting the lead to 42-31. But the Bucs pulled away again on three straight baskets by Miller, and built up a 55-37 lead by the end of the half.

The Bucs again hovered around the 20-point mark until another string by the Indians cut it to 16. Warns hit two in a row, and Sherwood got a basket and a free throw to cut it to 67-51. The Bucs pulled out again, however, as Gregory scored on a three-point play and Miller scored from the line, making it 72-53.

The two team effectively swapped baskets for much of the remaining time until it reached 86-73. Then, Schemering hit a jumper, Warns and Harry Kent each scored from the line, and Ray Anderson tossed in a field goal, cutting it to 86-79, the closest the Indians had come since the start.

But the Bucs were not to be denied. Modlin hit on four straight free throws to run the lead back to 90-79, and after the Indians cut it back to 90-83 again, Gregory got a three pointer, and Prince hit on three free throws, running it back to 13, the final spread before the missing minute appeared.

Modlin, playing one of his finest games, tossed in 26 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to lead the Bucs. Miller finished with 25 points, while Gregory had 22 points and nine rebounds. Fairley, who suffered from foul trouble, got only 14 points and 10 rebounds.

Jasper led the William & Mary scoring with 19, while Sherwood had 18, and Warns and Schemering each had 16.

The game was the last to be played in historic Blow Gymnasium, the William & Mary court. Next year, the Indians are scheduled to move into a fine new field house, thus doing away with the last of the old time gyms in the conference.

The Bucs, now 8-2 in the conference, seek to wind up the regular season Saturday night in Charleston, S. C., on another winning note. Should they down The Citadel in that game, The Bucs will carry a five-game winning streak into the tournament, tied with Furman for the longest extant streak among the eight-team field.

Toledo, Bucs Set Meeting

East Carolina University will meet Mid-American powerhouse Toledo in an 11th football game next fall, it has been announced. The game, under a new rule passed in January by the NCAA, will be played on September 12, in Toledo's Glass Bowl Stadium. It will be the opening game of the season for both teams.

Toledo, one of the top 20 teams in the country last season, copped off an unbeaten regular season with a big victory over Davidson College in the Tangerine Bowl.

The two schools have a two-year agreement, with Toledo paying a return visit to East Carolina in 1971.

Toledo was one of several schools contacted by East Carolina with the aim of signing the 11th game. Others included Navy, Pitt, Rice, Florida State, Tulane, Vanderbilt, Duke, Wake Forest and the University of North Carolina. Negotiations are still underway with these and others about future contest.

"This is the caliber of football team East Carolina will be playing in the future," new head football coach Mike McGee said. "We are very fortunate to add them to the schedule. They have an outstanding quarterback who will be returning next year, along with most of their other top players. They had one of the outstanding teams in the nation last year, and should have again this year."

Buc Freshmen In Final Win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The East Carolina University freshmen wound up their season last night with a 73-64 victory over the William & Mary yearlings. It was the second win this year over the Papooses, and brought the Baby Buc record to 8-8 for the season.

The contest was close most of the way, with neither team able to work out to any great advantage. William & Mary held the lead in the early minutes of the contest, working out by four at 15-11.

But the Bucs took over and worked up a 38-33 lead by the end of the half.

In the second half, it stayed close. The biggest lead for East Carolina was the final margin, nine points.

Steve Moore and George Spack kept the Indians close throughout the first half. Moore scored 10 of his 15 points, and Spack got eight of his 10 in the first 20 minutes.

But the Bucs proved too much with Dave Franklin and Roland Leggett leading the way.

Leggett got the big baskets for the Bucs and finished with 17 points. Franklin poured through a game high of 19, and pulled off 12 rebounds. Teammate Al Faber had 15 rebounds.

Two other Bucs broke into the double figure category, Ernie Pope with 11 and Jack Redmond with 10.

The leading scorer for the Papooses was Moore with 15, while Randy Davis had 14, and Spack and David Tinker each had 10.

The Bucs outrebounded William & Mary 45-32, to hold their edge in that department for the season.

Immanuel Ups Church Lead Exchange Nails Robinson Downs Bethel Union Down 1st Place To Advance In Pitt Tournament

Immanuel Baptist pulled out to a game-and-a-half lead with a 39-33 victory over Oakmont Tuesday night in the Church Basketball League. Black Jack downed Mt. Pleasant, 47-25, and Presbyterian beat Piney Grove, 54-41, to pull into a deadlock with idle St. James for second.

Immanuel is now 9-3 in the league, while St. James, Presbyterian and Black Jack are all 7-4. Piney Grove is 6-5, followed by Oakmont, 3-7, and Mt. Pleasant, 0-11.

In the opener, Immanuel and Oakmont battled neck-and-neck through the first half, which ended in an 18-18 deadlock. But in the second half, Immanuel managed to outpoint Oakmont, 21-17, and avoid the upset.

Fred Carroll led Immanuel with 14, while Al Gold had 10.

Oakmont was led by Don Parrott with 10.

Black Jack nipped Mt. Pleasant, 17-15, in a close first half, but Mt. Pleasant couldn't keep pace in the second half. Black Jack outthit their opponent, 30-10, in the half, to win easily.

Tal Adams led Black Jack with 13, while Ephraim Smith had 11. Willie Wallace had 10 for Mt. Pleasant.

In the final game, Piney Grove threatened an upset by running out to a 24-22 lead in the first half. But they didn't hold onto it, as Presbyterian came back to outscore Piney Grove, 32-17, for the win.

Jimmy Mills led Piney Grove with 11, while Buddy Allen had 10. Presbyterian's win was led by Brazel Moore with 20, while Herb Adams had 15.

The Book Exchange downed Campus Corner, 102-59, last night to wrap up the City Basketball League title again. In other games, Cola-Cola took over sole possession of second place with a 65-57 win over the Jaycees, and ROTC beat Watson Electric, 59-47.

The Book Exchange is now 12-2, followed by Coke at 10-4, and the Jaycees at 9-5. Campus Corner is 6-8, while ROTC is 4-10, and Watson is 1-13. Only one game remains to be played by each team prior to the post-season tournament.

In the opener, ROTC inched out into a 25-22 lead in the first half of play. Watson was unable to rally in the second half as ROTC outscored them, 34-25, to take the win.

Gary Schaal led ROTC with 21, while Joe Johnson had 19 and Ashby Elmore had 11. For Watson, Jim Woods had 17.

In the second game, Coke pushed out into a 33-27 lead in the first period of play. Then, in the second half, they held off the Jaycees, 32-30, to take the win.

Jerry Boyd led Coke with 13, while Wayne Hardee and John Lynn each had 12. Larry Graham and Bob Haubenreiser each had 15 and Tex Everett had 10 for the Jaycees.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two cities in North Carolina — Rocky Mount and Asheville — and one in South Carolina — Rock Hill — were among the 11 communities announced today as winning the title All-American City.

Other All-American cities were Martinsville, Va.; Borger, Tex.; Cuero, Tex.; El Paso, Tex.; Eugene, Ore.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Maryville, Mo.; and Springfield, Ill.

It marked the second time Asheville had won the designation. The mountain city was last honored in 1951.

The judges praised Asheville for its sense of community spirit which has resulted in better job opportunities, urban renewal and development of black capitalism.

Rock Hill was cited for its network of Neighborhood Associations which involved blacks and whites in a series of projects to improve race relations. Rock Hill residents were also praised for efforts to improve education and better housing. Rocky Mount received the award for uniting blacks and whites in its Total Community Development Program. After racial tension mounted, residents worked to improve opportunities and cool friction in the high school.

Residents also raised $5 million of $20 million needed to re-route railroad tracks which blocked downtown traffic. That was the first step to a major downtown face-lifting.

B52 Fleet Returns To Targets In South Vietnam

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — U.S. B52 bombers went back to targets in South Vietnam today after 48 hours of heavy attacks in Laos.

ANCIENT BELIEF HIT A TREASURE
MANIPUR, India (AP) — No body had dared enter the ruins in a corner of Santi Daleepur village near here for years because of a widespread belief that they were haunted. A journalist accidentally wandered in and discovered an ancient Buddhist temple dating back to 300 b.c.

All 75 of the Strategic Air Command's big bombers in Southeast Asia had been diverted to the Laotian front. Sources in Saigon said B52 strikes were continuing against North Vietnamese supply depots and the Ho Chi Minh trail through eastern Laos. But the sources said the attacks were not of the magnitude of those flown Tuesday and Wednesday. The U.S. Command announced two B52 missions in South Vietnam between midnight and 6 a.m. today, a total of 10 planes dropping 300 tons of bombs on base camps and troop concentrations in the western Mekong Delta. The targets were five miles from the Cambodian border and 125 miles southwest of Saigon. Informed sources said the big bombers for the time being were flying their usual number of missions, about seven every 24 hours in South Vietnam and about two every 24 hours in Laos. This means 35 planes dropping about 1,000 tons of bombs in South Vietnam, and 10 planes dropping about 300 tons across the border. From time to time more missions are flown in Laos than in South Vietnam in efforts to slow North Vietnamese infiltration of troops and supplies before they are in position for an offensive. But the total diversion to that target area this week apparently was due to the North Vietnamese offensive launched last week against the Plain of Jars, a strategic communications hub in northeast Laos. U.S. fighter-bombers fly regularly in support of Laotian forces there, but sources in Saigon said the B52s were used Tuesday and Wednesday for the first time in the Plain of Jars area. The U.S. Command never announces planes lost in Laos since it does not admit that U.S. planes are flying combat missions there. But it did announce the loss of three more helicopters in South Vietnam with 19 troops killed and three injured. One was shot down 20 miles north of Saigon, one farther northeast near the Cambodian border, and the other had mechanical trouble 78 miles southeast of Da Nang. A total of 6,410 American helicopters and fixed-wing planes have been reported lost in the war. Allied forces reported 72 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in half a dozen scattered clashes. In the ground fighting, U.S. headquarters said, one American was killed and two wounded. Four South Vietnamese were reported killed and 25 wounded. The weekly casualty summary issued by the allied commands today showed a 25 per cent decrease in combat deaths among government troops but little change for American and enemy forces compared with the week before. The report gave these figures (previous week in parentheses): Killed—96 (95) Americans, 222 (298) South Vietnamese, and 2,205 (2,105) North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. Wounded—589 (637) Americans and 710 (809) South Vietnamese. Total reported killed in war—40,562 Americans and 601,315 enemy since Jan. 1, 1961; 100,295 South Vietnamese since Jan. 1, 1960.

GOP Chairman Sees U.S. Resolving Racial Issues

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Republican National Committee thinks the nation is moving toward a resolution of its racial problems that will eliminate George Wallace as a presidential candidate in 1972.

In an interview with the Associated Press, Rogers C. B. Morton said the policies of the Nixon administration are leading toward a better environment in which there will be less segregated community patterns.

Morton said neither major political party can take comfort from the fact that more and more Americans are registering as independents. Both parties—specifically his own—need to re-examine themselves and find a new sense of mission, he said.

Morton, who also is a congressman from Maryland, said he knows of no plans for President Nixon to go on a political barnstorming tour this year on behalf of Republican candidates.

And the plight of the Democratic party concerns him, he said, because it might lead to government intervention in the financing of political campaigns.

Some key questions and answers:

Q. Speaking of third parties, George Wallace is still in the picture. Do you expect him to be a candidate for President in 1972?

A. I don't think so. I have a feeling that what George is going to do is try to keep his power base by focusing it sharper on the Southern states ... I can't see him in 1972 running a national campaign.

Q. Do you think that all this agitation in and out of Congress over school desegregation is fading out?

A. No, but I'll tell you what I think is happening ... I believe the enforcement of these policies is going to take on a national scope rather than a regional scope. This thing is going to work so that the whole country is going to get into the act, and when the whole country gets into the act the process is going to get more evolutionary than revolutionary ...

And hopefully, and I am confident they will, all the other programs enhancing the environment—I'm dealing now with housing, transportation, all the things that tend to integrate the community—are going to be working.

I don't believe you can say we'll integrate the schools and then forget about the community ... And I'm saying that the Wallace issue is going to be downgraded in this area. Without the segregation-integration issue there is no Wallace issue ...

Q. You are running candidates for governor in quite a few Southern states, but not in Alabama. The Wallace people say this is because you Republicans support the Democrat in hopes of defeating Wallace. Is there anything to that?

A. "I don't know. There might be. I don't run anybody's state organization ... I think one reason the Democrats are in such disarray is that they tried to dictate the policies in the states, to set political strategy in the states from a central office in Washington. And that doesn't work."

Q. How about President Nixon? It seems he is going to take a very active role in a lot of campaigns.

A. I don't know whether he is or not. There has been a lot of talk that he is, but in conversations with the President and with his senior advisers—and there have been several—I don't quite get the feel he is going to go out on any great big barnstorming tour.

Q. Do you think it might backfire if he did?

A. Well, I think you have to use a lot of judgment.

He's President of the United States. You've got to remember that ... I think he should be awfully well guarded as far as the options for him, as how far politically inclined he should go ...

WASHINGTON (AP)—A telephoned bomb threat brought about clearing of maintenance personnel Wednesday night at the National Archives, Federal Trade Commission and Justice Department buildings. No bombs were found.

The Senate labor subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., held hearings two weeks ago into the UMW's disputed December election with testimony from the son of Joseph Yablonski.

The spending resolution for $265,000 was approved Wednesday by the parent Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. It must now be adopted by the Rules Committee and the full Senate, which is expected.

Church Raps Laos Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Frank Church said today that American forces are operating in Laos without either a treaty or congressional authority.

"It is time the American people heard the truth—the whole truth—from their government," he said in a speech prepared for the Senate.

Church cited press reports of stepped up U.S. operations in Laos and said while "there is a statutory basis for our support of local forces in Laos and Thailand, nowhere do I find authority for American personnel to engage in combat operations."

"Indeed," he said, "not the least of the paradoxes of this curious war in Laos is that not only is there no legal basis for it; there is an affirmative legal prohibition against it."

Church was author of an amendment to the defense appropriations act, adopted in December, that bars use of American ground combat troops in Laos or Thailand.

ASWAN, Egypt (UPI)—Ten years ago President Gamal Abdel Nasser exploded 10 tons of dynamite to signal the beginning of construction of the Aswan High Dam—the economic cornerstone of modern Egypt that was to dwarf the wonders of the Pharaohs.

Today, a task force of 19,000 Egyptians and 180 Russians is putting the finishing touches to this huge 366-foot-high barrier of rock, sand and clay which for the first time in history has realized man's dreams of controlling and harnessing the River Nile.

The dam, 600 miles south of Cairo in one of the most inhospitable spots on earth, will be completed in June. Twelve turbines housed in a by-pass channel hewn into the granite plateau churn the green-blue Nile waters into a muddy cauldron. When all turbines are working fully they will produce 10 billion kilowatt hours of electricity annually to feed the nation's industries and light its homes.

Has Too Many People

Egypt's dilemma is that it has to feed too many people on too little land. The nation's 33 millions population is increasing at the rate of 2.8-2.9 per cent annually, or nearly one million persons a year, one of the highest birthrates in the world.

The nation must live off only five per cent—seven million acres—of land mostly along the Nile Valley, which is cultivatable. The other 95 per cent is desert.

By controlling the Nile waters, the dam will add 1.2 million acres of land to the over-all farming area and convert an additional 700,000 acres to perennial irrigation—allowing from one to three crops a year.

Still, in the time it has taken to build the dam, the population explosion has wiped out its benefits. In 1960 there was roughly one-third of an acre of cultivated land for every Egyptian. Today, even with the increased area under the plow there is only a quarter acre to feed each member of the population.

Approaches Saturation Point

With such a birthrate, Egypt is quickly approaching the absolute agricultural saturation point. Even if the nation is able to introduce an effective family planning system, something it has been unable to accomplish thus far, industry is the key to the future, according to many economists.

They contend heavy industry is the only way to increase the standard of living of Egyptians, many of whom are still earning the government's minimum wage of 60 cents a day.

The dam will provide the force to turn industry's wheels. Already 20 per cent of its electrical output has been earmarked for an aluminium plant which will produce 100,000 tons a year, a further 20 per cent for a phosphate plant at Aswan producing 320,000 tons a year, and 11 per cent for the iron and steel complex near Cairo.

Costs $996 million

Construction costs of the 366-foot dam, two-and-a-half miles long at its crest, was $996 million. Russia provided $271.7 million in hard currency.

At the peak of its construction in the early 1960's there were 34,000 Egyptians and 1,000 Russians at the site working in temperatures which soared to 135 degrees. More than 220 construction workers lost their lives in the building.

THE ASWAN DAM — Huge blasts of water gush out of power station of the Aswan Dam. Now, ten years after Pres. Nasser signaled beginning of construction, workmen are putting finishing touches to this huge structure. (UPI Telephoto)

Soviet Union Plans Massive Lenin Birthday Party

Indefinite Pacemaker Is Devised

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR
ATLANTA (UPI) — A fuel cell powered by the body's own sugar and capable of operating a cardiac pacemaker indefinitely has been successfully demonstrated in an Emory University laboratory.

The device, once implanted in the body, would eliminate a major drawback in the use of present-day pacemakers — the necessity of surgery every few years to replace worn-out batteries.

The pacemaker is a small power pack surgically implanted in the tissues of heart patients to regulate and strengthen their heart beat by electrical impulse. But at least once every two years the patient must undergo new surgery in order to get fresh batteries for his pacemaker.

To Use Primate

But if the glucose fuel cell can be implanted successfully into a large primate to generate electricity continuously, utilizing body glucose as fuel, it will be possible to power a cardiac pacemaker for many years and, eventually, for the lifetime of the individual.

The developer of this promising little gadget is Professor Hal Warner, chief of Emory's electrophysics laboratory.

Warner says he plans to test his fuel cell on a chimpanzee implanted with a pacemaker next year. If all goes well, Warner hopes the cell can be used in a human patient by 1975.

The major medical problem barring the way to human use of the glucose cell, according to Warner, is the same problem that has caused a slowdown in human heart transplants — tendency of the body to reject foreign substances.

The glucose fuel cell is disc shaped, measures an inch and a half in diameter and is about one-fourth of an inch thick.

Warner said that in human use, it would be implanted in the peritoneal space between the intestines, an area where the body "juices" contain a lot of glucose.

Major Medical Use

Major medical use of the cell would be to power cardiac and possibly bladder pacemakers, Warner said.

"Much of the energy we consume for thinking, muscular movement, body heat, rebuilding or repair of tissues, and growth comes from metabolizing this sugar," Warner said. "As one might assume, these sugars are constantly being replaced by the food we ingest."

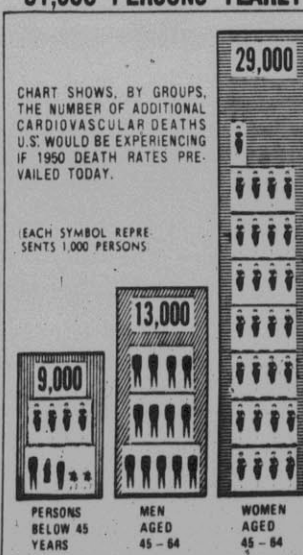

Development of the glucose fuel cell was accomplished by the Yerkes Regional Primate Research Center of Emory University, supported in part by a grant from the university's School of Medicine.

Warner's fuel cell can continuously convert some of the chemical energy bound up in glucose into electrical energy, with an efficiency of better than 40 per cent. He says this percentage of efficiency is more than enough to power a cardiac pacemaker.

Dim View Of Travel Expense

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — When two college professors sought travel expenses to observe the habits of the Labrador retriever in Michigan, Finance Commissioner Albert Christen turned them down with this comment: "It would be cheaper to buy the dog and watch it here."

'HEART' ADVANCES SAVING 51,000 PERSONS YEARLY

HEART FUND GIFTS have speeded virtually every advance in cardiovascular medicine over the past 20 years. Because of these advances, about 51,000 Americans are living who would have died prematurely if the 1950 death rate prevailed.

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russians are gearing up for the greatest birthday party in their history — the 100th anniversary of the birth of Vladimir Ilych Lenin, the Soviet Union's founding father.

Every minute of the country's life is linked to Lenin. As the sacred April 22 date comes closer the two-year-long Lenin worship campaign is near the peak of its furious pitch.

Automobile workers these days put in extra hours so the leader could be proud of them. Employees of a shoe factory are working harder, as if the great Lenin himself could wear their products.

Every newspaper and magazine issue carries several articles about the forthcoming anniversary. It is mentioned hundreds of times daily on radio and television.

Bolshevik Makes Statement
"Today I visited the Lenin Museum in Ulyanovsk and I felt not like a 92-year-old but I felt like a 24-year-old man I was when I met Ilych in 1900," old Bolshevik F. Petrov was reported as saying by the government newspaper Izvestia.

The newspaper Gudok reviewed a book, 520 pages, of photographs and descriptions of wreaths, flags, banners, mourning ribbons and placards placed on Lenin's tomb during funeral ceremonies in 1924.

Moscow television took the entire nation to an art gallery displaying works of a painter who devoted his entire life to painting pictures of Lenin.

Sculptor N.V. Tomsy was reported to be finishing the statue of Lenin which will be placed in the center of East Berlin.

Work On Lenin Art

The newspaper Vechernaya Moskva (Evening Moscow) reported that more than 2,500 Moscow painters and sculptors are working on Lenin paintings, drawings and statues.

A six-week festival devoted to Lenin is currently being held at 50 Moscow movie houses, one third of all movie halls in the capital. The festival includes three series, "Lenin is Always Alive," "Lenin's Ideas Live On and Win," and "Proletarian Internationalism in Action."

Similar festivals are to be held in all major Soviet cities. The novosti Press Agency announced it would print four-and-one half million copies of books about Lenin in honor of the centenary. These books will be translated into 65 languages. The Soviet Press Daily reported worldwide preparations for the 100th birthday anniversary, ranging from a "meeting of the Senegalese public" held in Dakar to various civic activities connected with centenary preparations in every corner of the globe. Lenin's every gesture, every word and thought are held up as holy treasures before the nation. The campaign to sanctify his name and its fervor are beyond description.

Campaign Would Be Abhorrent

The entire campaign would have been abhorrent to Lenin himself. An ascetic man, Lenin in his lifetime was known for his modesty and urbanity.

When he came from a long foreign exile to then Petrograd, now Leningrad, in 1917 czarism and lived in very modest quarters first in Petrograd and then in Moscow.

His Kremlin apartment was small and modestly furnished and stood in stark contrast to the splendor of czarist palaces nearby.

While undisputed leader of Russia, Lenin refused all public ceremonies where he was to be honored and there is little doubt that he would condemn the current Lenin-worship campaign.

Despite all the propaganda, admiration and affection for the founder of the Soviet state is genuine and virtually universal in the Soviet Union.

Bottle Battle To Be Seen In Oregon

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—The country's first great bottle battle is likely to be waged in Oregon.

Gov. Tom McCall has declared war on beverage bottles and cans which litter the state. "My commitment," he told a civic group recently, "is to put a price on the head of every beer and pop can and bottle sold in the U.S."

He admitted the battle has to begin within the state. And he has wide backing here.

Considering Deposit

A legislative interim committee is studying proposals to ban no-return bottles in the state. It is considering requiring a 5-cent deposit on every beverage can and bottle.

A similar measure in the 1969 legislature was overwhelmed by the combined lobbies of the bottlers, can manufacturers and bottling companies.

The problem of cans and bottles littering the countryside is not peculiar to Oregon. But because of the public concern over the environment in this scenic state, and because of the governor's declaration of war on cans and bottles, the industries involved are already lining up their counter attacks.

The industry will continue to promote, as it did during the last legislature, anti-litter campaigns. As the National Soft Drink Association says, "hands alone cause litter." It then proceeds to list 50 ways to lessen litter in its promotional material, dealing mainly with education.

Conservation Groups

When the issue was in the last legislature it had the support of the governor, state treasurer Robert Straub, and 23 different conservation-minded groups.

How bad is the litter problem?

Edgar Grimes, representing the Linn County Farm Bureau, said each year some of his cows die from broken glass that has gotten into the hay from the roadside.

Controversy Marked Former Governor Benj. Smith

Light of History
By H. G. JONES
Dept. of Archives and History
Written For The AP

RALEIGH (AP) — Smith (or Bald Head) Island, much in the news these days, lies off the coast near Southport, the modern name for old Smithville.

The original name of the island and the name of the old village honored Benjamin Smith, who was governor of North Carolina from 1810 to 1811.

Benjamin Smith once owned the island like it, he too was surrounded by controversy.

Smith was born about 1756 in Brunswick County. Few other North Carolinians have descended from such famous stock: Landgrave Thomas Smith, Sir John Yeamans, "King Roger" Moore, and Catherine Rhett. Benjamin Smith, says one biographer, inherited "not merely wealth, but fine talents and high social station." He married Sarah Dry, daughter of William Dry, a member of the colonial Council.

He served on Long Island with Gen. George Washington in the Revolution.

In 1780, he was accused of having contributed to the premature surrender of the city of Charleston to the British when his letter to his wife, divulging the precariousness of the city's defense, was intercepted by the enemy. But he was later a brigadier general in the militia.

Beginning in 1783 Smith served almost continuously in the General Assembly from Brunswick County until 1810, and for several years he was speaker of the Senate. He was also a member of the Hillsborough convention that refused to ratify the federal constitution and of the Fayetteville convention which did ratify it.

He was a member of the first Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina and gave to the university the 20,000 acres of land in Tennessee which had been granted to him for his service in the Revolution.

Remembered On Valentine's Day

Approximately 45 persons in nursing homes throughout the county were remembered on Valentine's Day according to Mrs. J. B. Spilman Coordinator of the Pitt Greenville County Council on Aging.

Mrs. Spilman revealed that each person was given a Valentine favor and visited individually by employees of the Pitt-Greenville Council.

The group also joined in singing songs and playing games. Mrs. Spilman notes that plans are under way for other holiday parties, and for summer recreation activities for these groups, as part of the council's plans to create recreation and activities for aging citizens.

Biology Seminar Set For Friday

"Snake Circadian Rhythms" will be discussed by Dr. Carlton Heckrotte in an East Carolina University biology seminar Friday at 1 p.m. in Room 103 of the new Biology Building.

Dr. Heckrotte, whose research deals with aspects of snake behavior, received his Ph. D. degree from the University of Illinois in physiological ecology. He is an assistant professor in the ECU Biology Department. The talk is open to the public.

tion. He operated a great plantation, Belvidere, in Brunswick County, and at one time he owned Orton Plantation which he inherited from his grandfather, "King Roger" Moore.

Elected governor in 1810, Smith proposed a progressive program of education, penitentiary reform, development of domestic manufactures, and improvement of the militia. After having served as chief executive, he returned to the state Senate.

A man of violent temper, Smith is claimed to have been involved in three duels, one of which was with his kinsman, Maurice Moore.

Many Misconceptions About Geo. Washington

By ARLEEN ABRAHAMS
Associated Press Writer
What does George Washington mean to you?

If you're a bargain hunter, Feb. 22, the date on which his birthday is celebrated may mean a chance to shop and save. In recent years, Washington's Birthday has become synonymous with furniture and department store sales.

If you're one of the 75 million employed persons in the nation's labor force, Washington's Birthday most likely means a paid holiday.

And if you're a child ... here's a roundup of kindergarten's and first grader's thoughts on the subject.

"George Washington was born in George Washington, d.c." So said dozens of children in East Coast elementary schools.

"When George Washington died, they built the Statue of Liberty for him," opined Chris S., a first-grader at P.S. 45, Queens, N.Y.

"George Washington had a lot of children. That's why he's called the father of our country," said Gracine E., 5, of Englishtown, N.J.

Although most of the 5- and 6-year-olds knew that George Washington was the nation's first president, what he did during his earlier years was a source of much misinformation.

A little girl, whose family recently moved to New York City from Puerto Rico, proudly recited the Parson Weems' legend about young George chopping down the cherry tree—except that she insisted it was a palm tree. A Dover, Delaware, first-grader, apparently confused by

Svetlana Urged To Return Home

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Joseph Stalin's daughter, Svetlana Alliluyeva, says she received last spring a semi-official visitor who invited her to return to the Soviet Union.

"I will not tell you his name," she was quoted in an interview in the Evening Times of Trenton. "He advised me never to give up my Soviet citizenship."

Mrs. Alliluyeva said her visitor also advised her not to write any more.

The late dictator's daughter, 43, has written two books about her father since defecting to the United States in 1967 and last month her Soviet citizenship was revoked. She said returning to the Soviet Union now was "unthinkable."

Approximately 60 per cent of the population of the U.S. Virgin Islands is black.

The former governor, accustomed to living in wealth, lost much of his fortune in old age. He died in 1826 at Wilmington. But even in death his body found no peace, for the state law at the time allowed creditors to seize a body until his debts had been satisfied. Smith's friends, aware of a plan to seize his remains, slipped his body aboard a boat at midnight and buried it by torchlight near Smithville. Fifteen or so years later it was decided to exhume the body and reinter it in St. Philips Churchyard at Brunswick Town in accordance with Smith's final wishes.

Controversy arose over the identity of the remains. This was settled when the debris in the coffin yielded a bullet—one that Smith had refused to have removed after one of his famous duels.

The remains were reburied in Brunswick Town. But even there, there was no lasting peace. Brunswick soon became a ghost town. Then, in 1865, a Yankee shell fell on the marble slab that had been placed there 12 years earlier, shattering it. Years passed before a Wilmington attorney searched the brush, found the fragments, and had them pieced back together. In 1929 the Masons placed another monument over the grave to memorialize their past grand master.

Today visitors may pass the tormented grave of a former governor, walk through the ruins of St. Philips Church, view the excavated foundations of a once thriving municipality, and see exhibits on the colonial governmental town in the visitor center at the Brunswick

Town State Historic Site, administered by the state Department of Archives and History. Meanwhile, Smith Island remains the center of controversy.

It also remains pretty much in its original state. Many North Carolinians want it to stay that way. Others want to develop it into a sea resort.

Tight Money Has Jacked Up Those Housing Costs

TUSTIN, Calif. (AP) — Walk into a $30,495 four-bedroom home at Tustin Meadows and you'll see vaulted ceilings in the living room and parks through the windows—hallmarks of California living.

What you won't see is $3,265 that tight money has added to the price of the house—but it's there, too, and it's the hallmark of high interest rates and money scarcity.

The effects of tight money are everywhere in the housing field: They increased the builder's costs, boost monthly payments if the buyer can find a mortgage, and make it harder to sell a house.

Virtually all these tight money costs come home to roost on the buyer of a house.

Robert H. Grant, developer of 900-home Tustin Meadows, located in Tustin, Calif., between Disneyland and the Western White House, outlined how tight money added $3,265 to the price.

On the house, he has to give eight points to the lender to get a government-insured mortgage for the buyer. Each point is 1 per cent of the mortgage, so that cost alone could reach $2,400.

The rate of interest for construction loans has gone from 5½ per cent to 10 per cent for Grant. On the $30,495 home, that means an additional cost of $565.

Holding land for that house during the year of acquiring, planning and building costs $300 more, said Grant, because land loans are 10 per cent instead of the former 6 per cent.

Thus, $3,265 of the price is directly attributable to the higher costs of tight money.

A study by the House Banking Committee released this month found that half of all American families could not afford payments on a $20,000 mortgage. "Virtually all moderate income families have been priced out of the housing market," said committee chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex.

Viewed another way, a family taking on a $20,000, 25-year mortgage would pay $42,418.37 over the life of the loan if the interest rate were 7 per cent. But if they take the same loan at 9 per cent, they'll pay $50,399.41—a difference of $7,981.04.

What is it that makes money for buildings and mortgages so scarce?

Basically, the Federal Reserve Board has restricted the money supply as a means of fighting inflation. The theory is that if less money is available, the demands for goods and services will decline and prices will tend to stabilize.

But the demand has not declined. Business and industry wants money for expansion. Consumers want it for credit purchases. Home buyers want it for mortgages. As competition for loans has sharpened, interest rates have soared.

Since home mortgages traditionally pay the lender a lower rate of return than most other types of loans, less and less money has been going into home mortgages.

Another factor is involved, too. Basically, the money for home mortgages comes from a pool of capital made up mostly of America's savings—bank and savings and loan association deposits, for example.

But this pool of capital has been shrinking. Instead of putting their savings in bank deposits earning perhaps 5 per cent, more and more people are putting the savings in other investments, like short-term government securities, which have climbed recently to 8 per cent interest and higher, but are just as safe.

As a result of these economic pressures, the home buyer must pay higher interest rates on his mortgage. And to get the loan, he must make a bigger down payment.

Many lenders say they can still make 20 per cent down payment conventional loans—but some report down payment requirements are inching toward 25 or 30 per cent.

Federal Housing Administration-guaranteed loans on homes selling for more than $20,000 still require a down payment of $950 plus 25 per cent of the excess of the purchase price over $20,000. Thus, a $30,000 house would require a down payment of $3,450, or just under 12 per cent.

In many states, home mortgages have run up against usury ceilings in state law. In early 1969, for example, mortgage money in Maryland virtually disappeared because state law allowed no more than 6 per cent interest. Money flowed again when the limit was raised to 8 per cent—but dried up once more when the interest rise bumped into that ceiling.

Another legal interest ceiling that has dried up money is the federal limit on interest for loans guaranteed by FHA and VA.

During most of 1969, lenders making an FHA or VA loan could not charge more than 7½ per cent interest. This was below market conditions, so lenders charged points as incentive to make the loan.

The seller is required to pay these points. Each point equals a one-time fee of 1 per cent of the mortgage.

To entice more money into FHA and VA loans, the government boosted the interest ceiling to 8½ per cent in January.

The government has taken other steps to try to pump more money into home mortgages.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board increased its advances to federal savings and loan associations by $4 billion in 1969.

The board currently requires associations to keep 5½ per cent of their assets in reserve. But some keep much more.

The privately incorporated Federal National Mortgage Association, nicknamed Fannie Mae, and the government-operated Government National Mortgage Association—Ginnie Mae—already try to keep money pumped into the mortgage field by purchasing batches of mortgages from lending institutions. This gives lenders new funds.

The privately incorporated Federal National Mortgage Association, nicknamed Fannie Mae, and the government-operated Government National Mortgage Association—Ginnie Mae—already try to keep money pumped into the mortgage field by purchasing batches of mortgages from lending institutions. This gives lenders new funds to put into mortgages.

Federal regulatory agencies have also tried to lure money into mortgage markets by raising the interest rates which banks, and savings and loans can pay depositors. This, they hope, would bring more money to these institutions for mortgage use.

But the bulk of these policies have the effect of only shuffling around the existing supply of money. The Federal Reserve System, through its discount and reserve policies, controls the volume of the money supply. And the Federal Reserve Board has believed that tight money is necessary to stifle inflation.

There is speculation that the Federal Reserve Board will loosen money under its new chairman, Arthur M. Burns. Any easing would provide some degree of help to housing. But if a loosening of money and drop in interest comes, it would almost certainly be far more gradual than has been the interest climb of recent months.

The Worry Clinic Teacher Who Changes Lives

Prof. Robert Ivy deserves a universal salute from all teachers and parents. Horace Mann, Father of our Public Schools, would say he merits a gold star. For he has taught his pupils one of the greatest secrets for lifelong happiness, namely to verbalize praise for their companions while the latter are still alive!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
PH.D., M.D.

CASE M-527: Robert E. Ivey is a school teacher at Anderson, Indiana.

Last year he decided to help extrovert his students and thus offer them specific training in winning friends.

"Dr. Crane," he said, "I launched our 5th and 6th graders upon your Compliment Club project.

"And now I am asking for 62 signed diplomas, for that number actually completed the task of paying 3 sincere compliments every day for 30 consecutive days.

"Although I am their science and math teacher, I feel that noticing and being kind to others is very important."

"So I offered an 'A' for this science project if they faithfully completed it.

"This is by far the largest group that I have had thus far who successfully completed this experiment in Applied Psychology.

"Since school will be out by the time your signed diplomas reach me, I shall personally deliver the diplomas to the 62 children in their homes."

Robert Ivey warrants a unanimous salute from all teachers and parents.

For he may have changed the entire lives of those 62 pupils so that they'll be happier, more successful in their careers, and much less likely to suffer from divorce in later life.

Alas, most of us habitually are so concerned with SELF that we greedily try to win praise instead of passing compliments to those deserving folks around us.

Our natural egotism makes us wish to monopolize the social spotlight!

It thus requires deliberate training before we learn to curb our selfish hunger for the limelight and thus bolster the ego of our companions.

This "Compliment Club" project can be started even at kindergarten level, for the earlier we become adept at it, the more happiness we shall spread.

Meanwhile, too, we'll win far more popularity and social acceptance.

Robert Ivey thus would merit the supreme praise from the father of our Public Schools, namely, Horace Mann, if the latter were still alive.

"Be ashamed to die," stated Horace Mann, "until you have won some victory for humanity!"

Robert Ivey has constructively altered the entire future outlook of those 62 pupils who have become habituated to paying sincere compliments.

He has injected the Golden Rule into the daily activity of those 62 children.

For the "Compliment Club" merely asks each member to look for merits or virtues in our associates and then pay them a bit of honest praise thereon, while they are still alive and can be inspired to renewed good works.

Compliments are thus "verbal bouquets" which we can bestow on the living, instead of waiting till their funeral and then lavishing an extra floral wreath on the casket!

How many children ever think to give their mothers a compliment before rushing off to school?

How many husbands likewise verbalize a bit of praise for their devoted wives, whom they usually blame for everything goes wrong?
