

Early Hearing Sought On State Board's Rejection Of County Appointments

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

State Elections Board Chairman J. Bryan Scott said today that he received a letter this morning from Democratic Party Chairman Gene Simmons notifying him that a hearing on recent county appointments made by the board was being sought in Raleigh.

Scott said that he had called the State Board of Elections in Raleigh in an effort to confirm the status of the hearing but had received no official word on the matter other than the letter from Simmons.

The State Board chairman pointed out that he had talked with Simmons by phone last Saturday on the possibility of holding a board meeting to discuss with him the appointments but that he (Simmons) had not said a hearing would be called.

Simmons reportedly is seeking to challenge the board's recent action in turning down his slate of nominees, submitted to him from Executive committees in Pitt and Pasquotank Counties, in favor of incumbent Democratic members on the county's elections board.

All other county nominations for the board posts were approved by the State Board.

Basis for Simmons' petition, filed through Judge James H. Pou Bailey in Wake County Superior Court, is a statute of the law that states, "The State chairman of each political party shall have the right to recommend to the State Board of Elections three registered voters in each county for appointment to the board of elections for that county."

The statute continues, "If such recommendations are received by the Board 15 or more days before the 10th Saturday before the primary is to be held, it shall be the duty of the State Board of Elections to appoint the county boards from the names thus recommended."

Judge Bailey confirmed this morning that the hearing had only been "tentatively" set and that if both parties involved were in agreement for the hearing tomorrow, it would be held.

The judge pointed out that he had received a petition regarding the matter late yesterday and had agreed at that time to hold a hearing if both parties could be present.

Unofficially, he said that he thought the defendant in the case, the State Board of Elections, was entitled to five days notification of the hearing. The matter had not been officially scheduled for the regular court calendar, he said.

"If both parties are represented tomorrow morning and are in agreement to hold the hearing, then we will have it," he said. Otherwise, Judge Bailey said, the matter would be scheduled for a later date.

Bryan said that he had received no notification from Judge Bailey's office concerning the hearing.

In addition to the Pitt and Pasquotank Counties board matters, Simmons is seeking to find out why the State Board chose the number three nominee submitted by the Franklin County executive committee rather than the number two man on their slate.

Bryan has contended that the proposed slate of nominees in Pitt and Pasquotank turned down in favor of the incumbents because the county boards were involved in administrative change-overs required by a recent legislative act to be completed by Jan. 1, 1971.

Experience held by the incumbents was necessary in order to complete the transition rather than bring in new men, unfamiliar with the situation, he said.

Goal Said Surpassed By Pitt United Fund

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For the first time in its history of the Pitt County Chapter of United Fund went over its goal.

J. Brantley Speight, president of Pitt County United Fund, announced a total collection of $125,078.94 for 1970. This is $2,024.64 above the established goal of $123,054.30.

Speaking to members of the Executive Committee, the Budget Sub-Committee, fund officers, and chairmen of the eight divisions, Speight revealed the results of the city and county wide collection drives for United Fund.

Praising the Budget Sub-Committee for "a realistic approach to the problems of budgeting," Speight added, "I've had the feeling all along that we had to win somewhere along the way."

John B. Lewis, Jr. of Farmville, vice-president of the Pitt County United Fund, also praised the efforts of the Budget Sub-Committee and commented: "After years of climbing we have finally made the peak. In the future we will be able to plan looking from the top."

"I really have no words nor the ability to fully express my appreciation for what has been done," Speight commented. "I was told when I accepted the presidency that all the people we'd call on would respond, and that's the way it turned out."

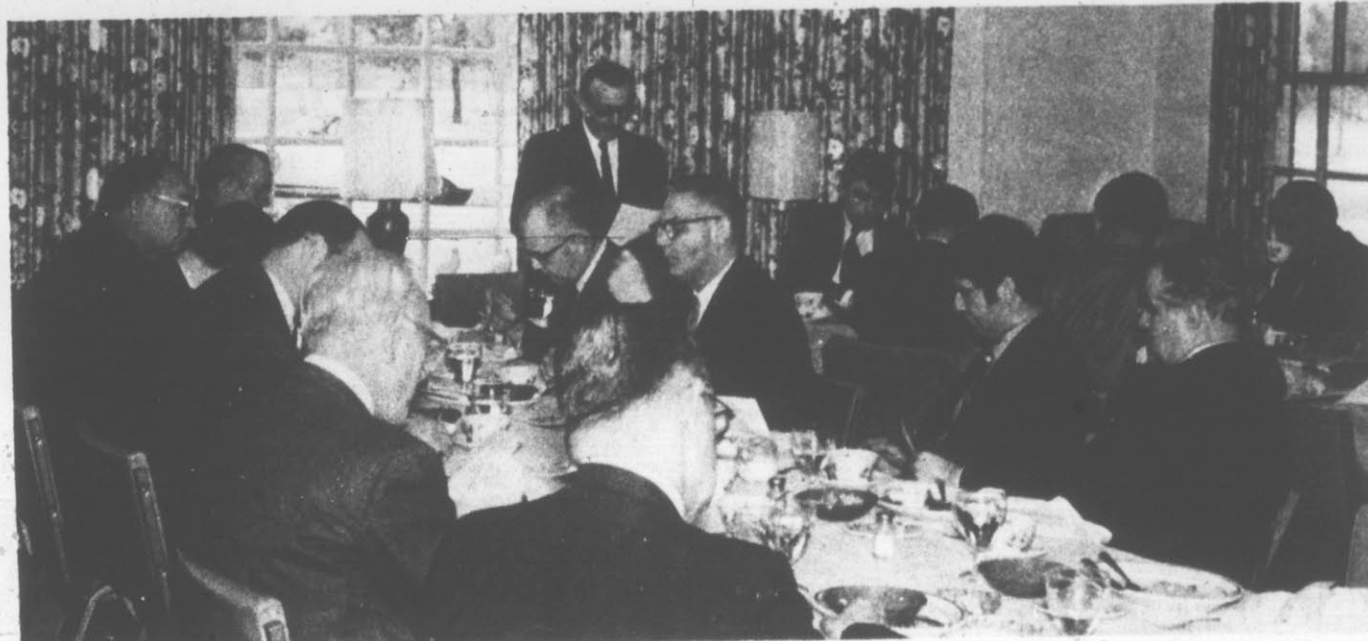

A list of the eight divisions, the chairmen, and the amount

| DIVISION      | CHAIRMAN              | AMOUNT RAISED |
|---------------|-----------------------|---------------|
| Industrial    | Henry F. Morris       | 35,426.55     |
| Professional  | Ray D. Minges         | 12,150.24     |
| Advance       | Dr. Robert Lee Humber | 2,357.00      |
| Leadership    | Joe O. Clark          | 8,028.60      |
| Special Gifts | M. Jack Moye, Jr.     | 9,786.98      |
| Goal Buster   | James W. Brewer       | 27,916.54     |
| E.C.U.        | Charles Q. Brown      | 9,990.75      |
| Pitt County   | Ralph C. Tucker       | 19,422.28     |
| Total         |                       | 125,078.94    |

This total is $5,376.01 above the total collected last year. These funds will be apportioned based on predetermined amounts to a number of charitable and service agencies within Greenville and Pitt County, including, among others, the American Red Cross, Association for the Blind, Association for Retarded Children, Boy Scouts of America, Carolinas United Community Service, Girl Scouts, Mental Health, The Salvation Army, and 4-H Clubs.

Curtis Hendrix, campaign chairman of the drive, paid tribute to United Fund President Speight. "If it hadn't been for him personally, we would not have made it. He wouldn't give up, but kept after it, and really deserves credit for pushing this over the top."

THE GOOD NEWS . . . is revealed by J. Brantley Speight, president of Pitt County United Fund, to officers, board members and chairmen of the fund.

Pitt County for the first time ever went over the top, exceeding its goal by $2,024.64 in the drive just finished.

Implications Held Unfounded

Find No Conflict Of Interest By Willis And Staff: Jenkins

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University President, Dr. Leo Jenkins said this morning that he is convinced that Tom Willis, director of the Regional Development Institute, and all members of his staff are innocent of any conflict of interests concerning a Car-taret County water project.

The study just completed by ECU vice president, Dr. Robert L. Holt and F.D. Duncan was revealed in a letter to Dr. Jenkins dated today. They reported:

"On Wednesday, March 4, we met for nearly two hours with Tom Willis and a member of his staff, William P. Minnette, who has worked with Willis on coastal development projects. We find no evidence of illegal or unethical involvement by Willis or any members of the RDI staff. "In the first place, the Winston-Salem newspaper articles do not accuse Mr. Willis of such action. They simply state that Willis bought a lot and that his name appears as a director of the White Oak Water and Sewer Corporation.

"Willis did buy a lot on Emerald Isle. Records indicate that he paid the market price for the land and that he subsequently built an inexpensive cabin on the lot. He and his family are currently using the cabin for rental and for personal pleasure. There is no evidence that the property was bought for speculation. In fact, had Mr. Willis been interested in speculation, he would probably have bought several lots and resold them to his advantage.

"Concerning the White Oak Water and Sewer Corporation charter, this is a nonprofit organization which could have benefited Willis in no way even had he been directly involved. He was surprised to learn from a Winston-Salem reporter on February 26, 1970, that his name was listed as one of the persons on the charter document for the corporation. It seems that W. B. McLean had placed the name of Tom Willis on the document without his approval or knowledge. "You will note that Willis has been involved in projects for economic development in 32 counties and approximately 175 towns in eastern North Carolina. There have been many instances when he could have taken advantage of privileged information for his personal advancement. There is no evidence that he has done so."

Holt added that all job applications go through his office and that he has received no request to hire a Charles Edwards. One news report said that, according to rumor, Edwards, North Carolina Economic Development Administration coordinator, who resigned effective next Tuesday would take a job with the Regional Development Institute. Holt said further that there is no vacancy on the Regional Development staff and no funds are available to hire an extra person.

SAIGON (AP) — A military court sentenced National Assemblyman Tran Ngoc Chau to 10 years in prison today after convicting him for the second time of pro-Communist activity.

Carlos Ebron Finalist For 'Boy Of Year'

"When I first heard the news I was speechless and just didn't know what to say," was Carlos Ebron's reaction to news from Boys' Club Director Dick Ullom that Carlos has been selected as a finalist for America's Boy of the Year.

Ullom, Director of Greenville Boys' Club, stated he did not know all the details, but had received a telegram from Ed Stapleton, Director of Public Information for the Boys Club of America in New York City.

"Carlos is one of about 20 from throughout the United States selected from a total of 875,000 boys as a finalist to be considered in choosing a Boy of the Year," Ullom related. "The boy chosen will afterwards go to Washington to meet President Nixon and to receive the award."

Carlos and Ullom will leave next Wednesday for New York for the final proceedings on March 12. The program is sponsored by the Reader's Digest in their National Boy of the Year Contest.

"I'm real excited about going to New York, it's the first time for me," Carlos added. "I'm a little nervous about it too, but Mr. Ullom will be with me, so I'm not worrying too much."

Just a few days before receiving the good news, Carlos was honored by being chosen Greenville Boy of the Year.

The son of Mrs. Mary Dixon of Greenville, Carlos was one of the first to become a member of the Greenville Boys' Club.

At Rose High, he is a defensive half back on the Junior Varsity football team and is also a track runner. Asked about his activities with the Boys' Club, he said "I love playing table tennis. I was the champion player for the North and South Carolina games Games Room tournament held in Goldsboro last year."

"Carlos has been a big help to us with the younger boys," Ullom noted. "He worked as a volunteer leader during the summer. He has won several awards for his activities, for public speaking, and for a various sports."

A committee, considering all the accomplishments of each member of the Boys' Club, a little more than a week ago chose Carlos as the Boy of the Year in Greenville. This of course meant his name and qualifications were immediately submitted to New York for consideration for selection of national finalists.

Sheriff Tyson Formally Files

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph L. Tyson today formally filed as a candidate for re-election in the May 2, Democratic primary.

Tyson, who is seeking his second full term in office, is a veteran of over 13 years with the Sheriff's Department. He was first employed as a deputy in 1956 and was reappointed in 1962 by the late Sheriff Duke Andrews.

Following Andrews' death in February of 1965, Tyson was appointed by unanimous consent of the County Commissioners to serve out the unexpired term. "I plan to continue as the policy of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department to furnish the most efficient and effective service possible for the people of Pitt County," the 37-year-old law enforcer commented.

"Modern law enforcement requires continued training of officers and dedication on their part to service of the public," he continued. "I pledge to the people of Pitt County that all the staff of the Sheriff's Department will use every means available to furnish courteous, thorough and impartial enforcement of law in Pitt County."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Tyson, the Pitt County native was graduated from Belvoir - Falkland High School with honors and entered East Carolina College. His education was interrupted by military service from 1953 to 1955.

Upon his discharge from the Army, Tyson worked for the Pitt ASC office and for Export Leaf Tobacco Company before returning to college. Tyson later graduated from the Coastal Plain Law Enforcement Academy at ECU, the Arson School held in Morehead City and the Sheriff's School on Civil and Criminal Processes at the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill.

A member of both the North Carolina and National Sheriff's Associations, Tyson is also a Tyson is married to the former Barbara Jean Dixon of Greenville and they have one daughter. The Tysons are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Coed Marches To ROTC Beat

By JOY STILLEY
AP News Features Writer

Petite Loretta Mullin's size 6 1/2 AA feet are marching in an area formerly reserved entirely for men—the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps.

The fragile-looking 105-pound blonde—5-foot-2, eyes of Air Force blue—is one of six girls in the nation enrolled in the ROTC program that for the first time this year has been opened to women.

"The boys think it's great to have girls in the program," says the 21-year-old junior at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa. "We're treated just like one of the men, except when it comes to regular courtesies extended to girls."

There is one other girl in the Drake detachment; the four others are at East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C.; Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, and Auburn University, Auburn, Ala. At the conclusion of the school year, the Department of Defense will determine if the program should be extended to other campuses.

"I was planning to join the Air Force after graduation anyhow," Miss Mullin explains. "I have a cousin who is making it his career and he has told me so much about all the excitement of the life. When this chance came along I decided to take advantage of it."

Instead of having to undergo three-months officers' training after receiving her college degree, she will get her commission as a second lieutenant upon graduation and report to her initial duty assignment. Her active duty commitment will be four years.

Before entering the program last September, the pretty coed attended a required six-week course at the Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina.

"For the first two weeks we marched four to six hours a day," she recalls. "It was on a blacktop parking lot, with no shade, and I imagine if we knew what the temperature was we couldn't have stood it."

During the second two weeks there was concentrated study covering the freshman and sophomore academic course taken by the male students in the four-year ROTC program. The course for women is two years, offered only in junior and senior years.

"Then we had survival training," Miss Mullin continues. "Members of the Green Berets taught us such things as how to make a tent from a parachute and how to make a pressure cooker in a hole in the ground. We lived on C-rations."

She passed a qualifying 30 out of 42 rounds with a .38 caliber revolver, took an orientation flight in a T-33 jet and made a simulated parachute jump. "If I really had to do it I'd be scared to death," she admits.

The small arms training, T-33 flight and survival training were all optional for the girls.

"But I didn't want to miss any of it," Miss Mullin says.

"There were seven girls (one failed to qualify) and 198 men," she adds. "They put one girl in each flight because they thought if we were all together we'd be dependent on each other. We did eat breakfast as a WAF group, though—a bit later than the boys, because they thought it would take us longer to get dressed."

The women's uniforms are Air Force blue, with double-breasted jackets, beret and light blue overblouse. They wear black pumps. "But we don't drill in those—we have what are called 'granny' shoes," Miss Mullin explains. The uniforms are worn to one class period a week and to corps training, where freshmen and sophomores (all men) are taught how to drill.

"Some resent a girl drilling them, but the majority go along with it," declares Miss Mullin, who was in a marching drill team in elementary and high schools.

In their senior year, the members of the program will fill staff positions in the detachment. Miss Mullin, who is studying business administration and works part-time as a secretary, hopes to work in either personnel or administrative services during her four years as a WAF. She would like to go overseas at least once.

Although Miss Mullin herself is enthusiastic about military service, she feels it wouldn't work for women to be subject to the draft. "I think it should be her choice," she maintains. "If she wants a position that is challenging and unique, she should join. In the service you have a lot more responsibility right off the bat than you would if you had to work your way up in another type job."

Husband Prefers Drinking, Ignores Wife

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am 51 years old but nobody believes it. Everyone says I could pass for 30. I guess I'm one of the lucky ones because I don't exercise or do anything special to keep in shape, and I still have the figure of a high school girl. Also I don't touch up my hair and it's flaming red without any grey.

Last winter my husband and I were at a resort hotel, and a perfect stranger came up and asked if he could take my picture. I posed for him in my bikini, and his hand shook so bad he could hardly hold the camera. [I'm not telling you this to brag on myself, I just want you to know I am no slouch.]

My problem is my husband. He likes to get drunk every night and he's not good for anything when he drinks, so I've been living without physical love for nearly a year. Last night I put on my heels and a black chiffon see-thru negligee and I did a little dance for him, and he didn't even look up from his newspaper. What can I do? Can you help me?

SEXY BUT LONELY

DEAR SEXY: It's your husband who needs the help. If he gets his nose wet every evening, he's either an alcoholic or a likely candidate. And the only "help" I can suggest for him is ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS. But HE has to want to help himself.

DEAR ABBY: We have a problem which I am sure has caused friction in many other families.

When my mother passed away recently, there were four potted plants sent by friends, as well as a lot of cut flowers. One of the sisters-in-law claimed THREE plants because they were sent by friends of HERS.

There are four of us children, so that would have given each family a pretty plant to take home.

I think that the distribution of those plants should have been made by our father, and he wanted each of us to have one.

This may seem like such a petty thing to complain about, but it has upset me so much I just had to get your opinion.

ONE DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: All plants were indeed the property of your father. And if HE wanted each of you children to have a plant, that's the way they should have been distributed—no matter whose friends sent them.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell that mother of a hippie son not to give up. Her story is much like mine.

My son was also kicked out of school a month before graduation. He was married at 18, and was a father before he was 19. Then he went on his little jaunt.

He also tried marijuana and drugs, but claimed he wasn't "hooked" either—he just wanted to travel, "find himself" and have some mind-expanding experiences. He had the long hair, beard, and the way-out clothing.

He is now 21 and with the armed forces, after two years of fines, jail, and I am sure many other experiences he will remember a lifetime, including draft evasion for three months.

The very fact that your son returned home once—regardless of what shape he was in—means that home and his family meant something to him in his confused mind and heart. He'll come back.

So when someone asks you where your son is; just say, "He's in New York working."

Take it from a mother in New York who said her son was "in California—working." Sign me . . . MRS. C.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "MRS. I. M. DOOMED": And "I. M. Suspicious." If your letter isn't an attempt at creative writing, send me your name and address and I will send you my personal reply.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Dear Miss Purvis:

I have just learned from Mr. Marston that on last Thursday, February 19, you missed your first day of work as a result of illness since your employment in January, 1934. This is such a noteworthy accomplishment I could not resist the impulse to write and thank you personally for this example of loyalty and dedication. In a day where loyalty has little meaning any more, this achievement takes on even more significance. I commend you on this outstanding achievement.

Since this exemplifies the commitment and attention to responsibility we seek in every employee, I would like, with your permission, to pay special tribute to you in our magazine, NCRB News, in one of its future editions.

Although my schedule does not permit as much travel to our city offices as I would like, I hope I can be in Greenville in the near future and would be privileged to meet you at that time.

Plan A 'Southern Plantation Party' To Fit The Family Budget

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Don't let the cost of food put a damper on your party plans. There are ways to beat it.

If you didn't start the new year with a good-luck bash, use the luck theme now. It provides a perfect excuse for serving low-cost foods.

In many areas of the South, a dish of black-eyed peas is considered a good-luck omen. So plan a "Southern Plantation" party around the black-eyed peas and corn bread. Your "dollar party" may be the best one you ever have given.

Two pounds of black-eyed peas and two pounds of cornmeal serve 10 or more persons. If you have a few dollars more, you might splurge on a couple of pounds of boneless ham. This isn't cheap, but it will go a long way. Or, you might invest in 10 chicken legs. Ham and fried chicken legs with black-eyed peas, turnip greens (another traditional food) and corn bread would be the ultimate in good-luck eating—if you can afford it. Black-eyed peas (some packages are labeled black-eyed beans) are lower in calories than other bean-type foods and have lots of vitamins and minerals. Corn bread also is nourishing. Traditionally, Southern corn bread is made of white water-ground meal, which somehow does taste better than yellow meal.

As there are a wide variety of corn meals and mixes, the recipe for this should be taken from the package. Some pre-mixed cornmeals are expensive and too sweet. (Most Southerners prefer sugarless cornbread recipes.)

If bacon fat is used for shortening, the corn bread may be moister and tastier.

The success of black-eyed peas lies in the making. Most package recipes (dry beans or peas) do not do justice to the peas. Here is a traditional family recipe.

EAST TENNESSEE BLACK-EYED PEAS

Soak dry peas (following directions on the package). Change water, covering peas and add a couple of pieces of salt pork, fatback or bacon. A few bay leaves, bouillon cubes and a sprinkle of thyme should be added to the water. Taste the broth until the flavor is just right. Cook the peas until they are tender, but not mushy. They should be firm. You may cook them in advance and heat them just before serving.

Some families freeze turnip greens from the garden in season, and serve the greens at the good-luck party. The high-vitamin vegetable is a great accompaniment to this meal, but unfortunately few commercial varieties live up to expectations. If you include turnip greens, add a little vinegar and cayenne pepper to taste before serving. (Experiment before serving this to a group.) If turnip greens don't turn you on, you might prepare a big green salad.

Iced tea makes a good low-cost punch. Served in a big bowl with slices of lemon floating on top, it makes an almost irresistible treat.

Amazing Boom In South Korea

To anyone who spent time in South Korea when the war was raging there during the early 1950s, reports of the booming economy and super highway construction there are nothing short of amazing.

Seventeen years ago South Korea was a war-ravaged nation. There were virtually no paved roads in the country. The government and business buildings that had been the heart of Seoul were either destroyed or unsafe because of shelling and bombing. The populace had shifted back and forth as Communist and allied forces moved through the country to finally settle on the demarcation line. Most of people at the war's end lived in simple huts at best or the shacks of Pusan at worst.

Now, however, in the 17 years since a truce was reached, South Korea's economy has boomed. For

Heartened By New Attitudes

By EDWARD CODY

Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Nixon administration's recent statements on school desegregation provide fresh hope to school officials and white parents fighting a determined battle against massive busing to desegregate Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools, the largest school system in North Carolina.

Buoyed by what they consider a changing national atmosphere on court-ordered desegregation for the South, members of the city-county board of education have carried their fight to the U. S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Most of the nine member board believe the appellate court, heeding what they feel is a change in the desegregation climate signaled from Washington, will find U. S. Dist. Judge James B. McMillan went too far in a Feb. 5 desegregation order for the 85,000-pupil school system.

School officials say the order, which requires execution by May 4, calls for busing 23,000 pupils. They say it would cost $3.5 million to carry it out this spring, and $1 million a year to keep it in operation.

Robert H. Finch, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, got front-page attention in Charlotte's largest newspaper this week when he said such sweeping desegregation decisions as in Charlotte and Los Angeles were "totally unrealistic" and "moving in the wrong direction."

Charlotte and Los Angeles, also facing a court order which school officials contend requires busing thousands of children at prohibitive expense, have been singled out by Finch on other occasions as examples of orders pushing beyond the frontiers of reason.

William E. Poe, an attorney who is chairman of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Board of Education, says Finch's declarations and those of other administration officials are "straws in the wind" signaling a retreat from the uncompromising line followed recently by appeals courts and the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I think it definitely has an effect," he said in an interview. "I think it will have an appreciable effect in what the courts are going to do."

School board attorneys have asked the appeals court to grant a stay of execution of McMillan's order pending the outcome of hearings.

Their request contends it would be "disastrous" for the board to spend money for buses now "in view of the probability that the defendant appellants (the board) will prevail in their appeal."

Thomas B. Harris, an insurance man leading white parents in their denunciation of the order, and in a campaign to boycott public schools if it is carried out, says he found "tremendous enthusiasm" when he led a delegation to Washington recently. The delegation complained about the order to White House aides, HEW officials and North Carolina congressmen.

Harris believes Washington has begun to realize school desegregation is a national problem, "not a Southern problem." He says once Northerners come face to face with the prospect of seeing their own children bused, the pressure for immediate desegregation will wane North and South.

But many Charlotte housewives and working fathers remain cautious of the administration's public declarations against busing, and confused by the swirl of conflicting court decisions they see reported. They appear unconvinced relief is in the offing.

"I think it is sensed by leaders, not the public," said Poe. "This is terribly confusing to the public at large."

"There's been so much talk," observed the mother of a child who would be bused out of his comfortable white neighborhood under the McMillan order. "And of course talk is cheap. Let's see some action."

Some of the public confusion is intentional, Poe believes.

"I have had the feeling that there's a certain amount of duplicity on the part of the administration," he said. He cited the apparent gap between administration statements and Nixon's position on House-passed antibusing legislation watered down this week in the Senate.

Senate liberals claimed during debate on the amendments that Nixon stood behind their successful effort to invalidate the antibusing provisions.

Harris also acknowledged — even while the antibusing amendments were still alive — that congressional action was "more psychological than full of substance."

But he cited this psychological drift away from hardline desegregation enforcement as one of the signs the country would not embrace further school desegregation North or South if it meant large-scale busing.

better or worse, that monument to progress the super highway has come to South Korea.

The New York Times reported Sunday on the progress of an American style interstate type road which will be completed from Seoul to Pusan this summer. At that time the last link in the super highway, which stretches almost the full north-south length to South Korea, will be opened. The highway runs through the country side where the ancient staple, rice, is still grown by methods of cultivation which reach back through the centuries. Yet it is symbolic of South Korea's move into the industrial age.

Other branches of the super highway are planned to the east and west so that eventually all sections of the nation will be linked.

South Korea has lifted itself from a low economic point following the end of armed conflict in 1953. The super highway stretching from Seoul to Pusan is an indication of the nation's determination to build a strong economy.

Americans In Trouble With Narcotics Toll

To us, nothing is more tragic than the death of young people due to drugs.

Thus it is discouraging to learn that five people, 20 and under, died in New York over the weekend from heroin poisoning.

To date this year there have been 35 deaths among teen-agers from drugs, plus nine 20 year olds.

Last year there were 900 drug deaths in New York and 224 of these were teen-agers.

If the problem is that serious in New York, it is multiplied many times over across the nation, and there is much reason to believe the problem is getting worse.

It is already obvious that the nation is in real trouble with illegal drug traffic and it is going to take a national effort to bring the problem under control.

Fear Eclipse Eye Damage

By BRIAN SULLIVAN

AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two major organizations of eye specialists have expressed grave concern over the danger of eye damage to persons watching Saturday's eclipse of the sun.

The American Association of Ophthalmology and the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness emphasized the following points through the National Science Foundation:

—Incautious watching of an eclipse may result in burning the retina, the delicate back inner layer of the eye where images are transmitted to the brain.

—You can't tell when such damage is taking place because the retina is insensitive to pain.

—The damage produces a blank spot in an individual's field of vision—at the vital area used for reading and fine seeing.

—The damage is permanent—incurable.

—While sunglasses, smoked glass or photographic film may eliminate the glare, they do not block infra-red rays that can cause damaging burns.

The ophthalmologists offered this advice:

"You can see the eclipse better by not watching it. Instead do what the experts do—watch the image of the eclipse using a pinhole device.

"A projector for use in watching the eclipse may be made with two pieces of white cardboard. A pinhole or pencil hole in the top cardboard will project and focus the image of the eclipse on the second cardboard.

"The size of the image may be changed by altering the distance between cardboards. Do not look at the sun through the pinhole."

U. S. Surgeon General Jesse L. Steinfeld says the safest way to watch the eclipse is on television.

In the past, he said, the majority of eclipse eye injuries occurred in children from 9 to 15 years of age.

The blindness society found 247 cases of eye damage after the last major solar eclipse in the United States in 1963, and it checked fewer than half the country's ophthalmologists.

The only time it is safe to look at an eclipse is when it is in its total phase. The moment the moon moves to allow light to flow past, the danger returns.

Saturday's eclipse, weather permitting, may be seen in totality by millions along the southeast coast of the United States, in Mexico, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

A partial eclipse will be visible generally over all of North America except northwestern Alaska, Central America and northwestern South America.

The mountains of southern Mexico have attracted a large number of scientists who will be studying such things as the sun's corona, its gaseous outer atmosphere, which can only be seen well during a total eclipse.

The length of totality for areas in the path of the eclipse will average about three minutes.

Strength For Today

TODAY

J. Edgar Hoover, a great national policeman who stands between the American people and their assailants, reveals to us that crime is increasing six times as fast as the population. He has written two books on the menace of communism. This is no crackpot speaking. He can document everything he says. No man in the history of our country has ever had his opportunity to know so much about subversion, treason, and designs of violence.

What has happened to the human race? From the standpoint of economics, communism is hocus-pocus. It is poppolitical chaos. It is not an ideology but a criminal conspiracy. What has caused the tremendous increase in crime? Two world wars, the automobile, the growth of large cities, the prevalence of poverty and unemployment — these are powerful factors.

Yet there would appear to be other causes. We cannot be sure what these causes are, but evil is at work in our midst.

These are days of such solemn importance that we cannot overestimate the jeopardy amid which we stand. To all other varieties of evil we now have a growth in drug addiction. This is probably the most menacing evil that we as a nation have ever confronted.

I hear someone say: "I thought you wrote a feature called 'Strength for the Day.' Can't you give us something better than moaning and groaning over evil with all modern appendages added? We wish we might. Facing truth is facing truth, and often truth is the hardest thing we have to confront."

This is the greatest age humanity has ever passed through. And probably the most dangerous. Face that. By Earl L. Douglass

THE HANDMAIDEN!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

A Few Medicis Needed

Saturday Review magazine devoted most of a recent issue to a melancholy look at "the business of culture." From the several essays, this conclusion emerged: Business is bad. Our major cultural institutions are just about broke. Only a new infusion of money — big money — will save them.

The story, of course, is not new. Symphony orchestras have starved from time immemorial. What is new, and deeply troublesome, is the spiraling magnitude of the problem. And for the conservative, who believes in limited government and in free competition in the marketplace of taste, the problem has coils like a French horn.

Briefly, this is the picture: In 1963, the country's 90 principal orchestras spent $28,320,000, and reported a cash loss for the season of $170,000. This was bearable. But last year, their expenses mounted to $66,800,000, and the estimated cash loss jumped to $5,216,000. This is hardly bearable at all, and the outlook is bleak: By 1972, according to the orchestra presidents, the cost will mount to $87,000,000, and the deficit to $13,222,000.

Roughly the same picture obtains throughout the performing arts. Grand opera barely survives. Ballet companies struggle to stay alive. Repertory theater is in trouble. And beyond the performing arts, in the lonely world of the painter and sculptor, the outlook is desperate.

Now, culture is no, properly speaking, a "business." If it were, the problem could be approached on classic economic lines. A symphony manufacturer could be urged to increase his productivity, to cut his expenses, to raise his prices, or to diversify his line of products. All this failing, we would let him go broke.

The rules do not apply. As several of the Saturday Review contributors remark, there is little, an orchestra can do "to increase its productivity." A second violinist, playing the Beethoven Third, performs the same labor his grandfather did. Automation cannot help him. Ticket prices have been raised to a point of diminishing returns. The salaries of professional musicians creep up as irresistibly as a progression of major scales.

What to do? "It is clear," says Amyas Ames, speaking for the orchestra presidents, "that the American orchestras must have government support."

But is this clear? Is it a proper function of government, especially of the Federal government, to support symphony orchestras? Can public funds properly be applied to the preservation of grand opera, ballet, and living theater? If paying customers will not support the culture business, should the moribund business be kept alive by injections of public money?

These are not simple questions. Obviously, tax funds may be used in certain specific ways — for concerts in schools and parks, for sculpture in a public square, for the maintenance of a public museum. This is not what the debate is about. What troubles the conservative is the propriety of using tax funds to preserve a particular kind of entertainment. Would we subsidize Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians? Why, then, subsidize the New York Philharmonic?

Ames makes the argument that twenty million persons attended symphony concerts last year. The figure fails to impress. A larger number went to the harness tracks. He remarks that nearly every city or more than 50,000 has at least a semi-pro orchestra. To which one responds that nearly every city of 50,000 once had at least a semi-pro ball club. Popular taste would not support the sandlot leagues; most of them disappeared. Wherefore, Tchaikowsky? Jones plays the bassoon and Smith plays second base. Can we say, through the tax collector, "Jones, the world has need of thee?"

Of course great music should survive in America. The "culture business" cannot be permitted to go the way of trolley cars. All the same, its first appeal ought not to be to government subsidy, but to a vast increase in private support. What we need are a few guys named Medici at the head of corporation boards.

Office Boy's Lament

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that an office boy gets tired of hearing:

"Hey, boy!"

"So you're the new office boy. Well, if you don't work out any better than the last one, you won't be around here very long."

"Where the deuce is he now? Out in the washroom staring at his hair in the mirror again?"

"I hear you're trying to grow a beard now, Wilbur. The best way to get it started is to put fresh cream on your face and let the cat lick it off."

"Fun is fun, but quit playing tricks on Wilbur. One of you guys sent him out last week to get a left-handed monkey wrench, and he didn't get back for three days."

"Hey, boy!"

"I don't think you should tell that kind of joke with Wilbur here. After all, he's still a kid."

"There's a lot of opportunity here, Wilbur. I started out as an office boy, just like you, and after only 15 years I got promoted to file clerk. That was 10 years ago, and now I think I'm about to get promoted again."

"No, I didn't call you into my office to give you a merit raise, Wilbur. I just need to get some indoor golf practice. Would you mind standing over there on the far corner of the rug with your heels together and your toes apart? Now, what did I do with that putter?"

"Just cashed your check, Wilbur? How about being a good sport and lend me $10 to tide me over the weekend? By the way, don't mention this to any of the other guys. They might not think it looks so good for me to borrow from a minor."

"Your mother just phoned, Wilbur. She says for you to come straight home from work and get caught up on your sleep."

"Don't fret about it, kid. When I was your age I had acne bumps on both sides of my face."

"Hey, boy!"

"Listen, fellows, let up on Wilbur a little today, will you? He's been secretly sending a single rose every day to the vice president's secretary, and this morning he just found out she's leaving to get married."

"Wilbur won't be in tomorrow. He is leading some other night students in a demonstration to clean up City Hall."

"You must be training to be a policeman, Wilbur. You've never around when you've needed." "Now where has he gone to?" "Hey, boy! Hey, boy! Hey, boy!"

Retirees Balk At Tax Clobber

By ELMER ROESSNER

The highest rate of taxation is paid, not by millionaires, but by some of the oldsters on Social Security. In fact, their taxes can be 100 per cent of their earned income.

This point, long known to Congress, has been underscored by an organization called the Working Retirees of America. It has filed suit in Boston against Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Robert M. Ball, Social Security Commissioner, challenging a provision of the law which, it asserts, creates "instant poverty."

No one can survive on Social Security payments alone unless he migrates to Mexico, Italy or some other area where he can live on $165 a month. So those without affluent children or other sources of income are forced to work.

The 50 Percent And 100 Percent Tax

But the law decrees that anyone on Social Security who earns more than $140 in any month will have his benefits reduced by $1 for every $2 he earns up to an additional $100, and after that, the benefit is reduced $1 for every $1 he earns.

While this isn't called a tax, it is, in effect, an income tax of 50 and 100 per cent.

The maximum regular tax rate is 70 per cent and that applies only to incomes above $100,000 for single persons and $200,000 for married couples.

The Working Retirees assert that the 50 and 100 per cent bites on their incomes are "arbitrary and irrational," and they are asking an injunction against that provision of the law.

Well-Provided Have It Better

They have another beef: Persons collecting Social Security may enjoy income from sources other than labor without any loss of benefits.

While they pay income taxes on dividends, interest, rent, annuities, private pensions and other income not involving work, their Social Security benefits continue free of cuts.

Furthermore, a beneficiary who can concentrate his earned income over a short time may still continue to get benefits over the long term. The Social Security administration several years ago called attention to the case of the since deceased Eddie Cantor, who stopped taking Social Security benefits for a short time while he earned several hundred thousand dollars acting, then promptly resumed depositing Social Security checks.

Even now, half the Social Security benefits are paid to individuals who have incomes of more than $10,000 a year. Yet almost none is paid to the elderly who continue to work at far smaller incomes. Stanley S. Surrey, who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under President Johnson, once declared that he could not imagine any responsible official putting together "the crazy - quilt pattern of our tax treatment of the elderly."

Except, perhaps, our Congress.

Bound Over For Trial On Drug Charges

GREENSBORO (AP) — Thomas A. Hosick, 40, a laboratory chemist, and Mark A. Scallise, 18, both of Winston-Salem, were bound over to Guilford County Superior Court Wednesday on charges growing out of the sale of the hallucinogen drug MDA.

Hosick was held in $15,000 bond and Scallise in $3,000.

Hosick is being held on three charges: having and selling 100 doses of the drug for $400 on Jan. 31, and having another quantity of the drug under his control in a Greensboro bus station locker on Feb. 9. Scallise is charged with having a quantity of the drug in another locker on the same date.

MDA was declared illegal last Dec. 4 by the North-Carolina Board of Health.

Jenkins Carries Message Of Area Concern To Dunn

DUNN — "Forget about personal desires and wishes for your immediate community and county and think more in terms of the area of the State as a whole," East Carolina University President Dr. Leo Jenkins told some 250 persons attending the "Dr. Leo Jenkins Night in Harnett County" Tuesday.

Dr. Jenkins was honored at a dinner sponsored by the Dunn Rotary Club. The civic clubs of Dunn, Erwin and Lillington met jointly at the session along with a number of other individuals.

"I know," Jenkins said, "it is important for us to love our cross roads, our neighborhood, our little community, but we must not let love become a stumbling block. We have done this all too often."

Jenkins continued, "It is not to our advantage to have every incorporated community try to be everything to all its citizens, when this results in creating inadequate and often grossly inferior facilities and services."

"It would be well, for example, if certain communities would assume specific tasks for the entire region, such as building a regional airport, or a regional culture center; allocating various needed but expensive facilities, in different areas within a region would permit the pooling of funds which, in turn, may result in adequate facilities in each instance," the ECU president declared.

Jenkins added, "In planning big for eastern North Carolina, we must recognize that one of the most pressing needs is better medical care for all our people."

Dr. Jenkins was presented a key to the city of Dunn by City Commissioner Crafton Tart. Jack Brock, chairman of the Harnett County Board of Commissioners gave Dr. Jenkins a framed copy of the proclamation in his honor.

Rotary Club President Donald Langdon presented Dr. Jenkins with a bronze plaque engraved with the following inscription:

"Dr. Leo Jenkins, East Carolina's No. 1 Citizen. Presented by the Dunn Rotary Club, March 3, 1970." Among the score of high ranking State, county and city officials attending the dinner were Attorney General Robert Morgan, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees, and Mrs. Morgan.

DAY PROCLAIMED — Governor Bob Scott and East Carolina University President Leo W. Jenkins examine the Governor's proclamation of Saturday as "North Carolina Solar Eclipse Day." Scott issued the proclamation from his office in Raleigh yesterday, citing ECU as the center of scientific and educational activities during the rare total solar eclipse which comes shortly after noon Saturday. ECU is "the only major institution so favorably located" dead center of an 85-mile wide path of totality over the state, the proclamation says. The eclipse, which will be studied here by a number of scientists and educators from 33 states and the District of Columbia, will be the second totality over North Carolina in 70 years. Totalities occur on an average of once every 360 years over any given locality. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

Greene Board Given Reports

SNOW HILL — The Greene County Board of Commissioners Monday received reports on the conditions of the county jail and social services department facilities.

A report from the North Carolina Department of Social Services, Division of Jail and Detention Services, showed several things in the jail needed correcting in order to comply with standards set by the department.

The board approved the installation of a modern-type brake on the elevator in the jail. The board voted to make an effort to have the conditions at the jail corrected as soon as possible.

The members discussed a letter from the North Carolina Department of Social Services relating to an inspection and evaluation of the county's social services department office facilities. The report indicated the facilities were not in compliance with those required by the state federal directives. It also indicated that no basic changes had been made in the quarters since last year's report. It was requested that the county commissioners report to the N.C. Department of Social Services what steps are being taken by the county to correct the deficiencies.

The commissioners decided to make every effort to provide funds to improve the office facilities in the next budget.

Board members received two petitions requesting road improvements in the area, one asked for the repaving of roads 1314, 1315, 1316 and 1317 (all in the Speight's Bridge Community of Greene County), and the other requested that an addition road be added to the state secondary road system in the Shine Township of Greene County. The two petitions were given to the State Highway Commission for action.

Farmville Board Affirms Rights On Debris-Disposal

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — The Board of Commissioners initiated the use of a new type of ordinance Tuesday night when two specific ordinances were written saying the town has the right to see that debris which affects the health and safety of citizens is removed from private lots.

The ordinances provide that the town can ask a property owner to remove debris from a lot and that if the owner does not comply, the town can get the work done and bill the owner. A similar type of standing ordinance against allowing grass over 12 inches high to grow on vacant lots has been used extensively here for some time.

The two specific ordinances concern a lot at the corner of Church and Contentnea Street owned by Rhoderick Harris which has had the remains of a house that was demolished on it for several months and one owned by Mrs. Rachel Williams on South Main Street which has had the foundation and floor of a house that was partially torn down on it for months.

A town seal designed by Farmville artist Dan Morgan was adopted. The cost of decals, printing plates, etc. will be $490.

Commissioner Lum Wooten asked the Board to give the town's auditing business to a new local certified public accountant, Vance Taylor. The matter was tabled.

Pitt County Transportation Company, based in Farmville, was given permission not to display the 35 town tags it bought recently.

The Board agreed to request that the State Highway Commission release a block on Wallace Street and a short street, now, unnamed, which connects the Farmville Corporation property and Main Street to the town street system. It also will request that the Advance Planning and Research Division of the SHC study building a road between East Wilson Street Extension and the Old Stantonsburg Road to give school buses from the consolidated school which will open next year an outlet and generally improve Farmville's thoroughfare system.

A letter of intent will be sent to HUD about plans for several miniparks in Farmville.

Increasing the size of the town's library committee was discussed, but it was decided to leave it at six members.

Fire Chief H. P. Norman reported four town fires and four rural calls during February and told of a successful fire school held here recently. He requested that Richard Tripp be put in charge of maintenance of the old fire truck and Tommy Young be given responsibility for the maintenance of the two rural trucks.

Street Department Director E. P. Freuler said the shed at the town landfill has been completed, the washpit for the street trucks is finished, and the new truck ordered for the department is here. He told the Commissioners that a local ladies' group will clean up and plant trees at the town park soon.

Water and Light Department Director J. A. Wooten reported that the 90-day limit for the town's separate meter ordinance will be up March 19 and that only nine persons affected by it have complied. He said there are about 30 instances in which people have two or more residences and-or business business places on the same meter. The board reiterated that the ordinance will be enforced in all instances. Power and-or water and sewer service will be cut off soon after the deadline for those who do not comply, the Commissioners said.

The Board was informed that International Paper Company, located on the edge of Farmville, is considering building and maintaining its own water system. The company now buys about nine million gallons monthly from Farmville. The Board agreed to study giving the company a special rate in hopes of encouraging them not to go through with the project, since it is feared an additional well system in this area would affect the pumping level of the town's wells.

A trailer on a lot owned by C.

F. Brann, which has been put there since the town's ordinance against trailers on lots of less than half an acre was passed, was discussed. Brann was refused electrical power for the trailer and has been providing the need by running an extension from his home. Town Clerk Carl Beaman said. The ordinance will be enforced, the Commissioners said. Police Chief Graham Creel reported that the breathalyzer is here and is in use. He said that a Vascar instrument will soon be given to the town by the Governor's Highway Safety Committee. He was asked by the Board to begin enforcing the buying and displaying of town tags.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.
The unblocking play is a maneuver available to either the declarer or the defenders. It is accomplished by deliberately dropping an honor prematurely while the player retains a lower card in the suit, and its purpose is to facilitate entry into partner's hand. Today's hand presents an interesting case in point.

West opened the ten of spades against South's three no trump contract. Dummy covered with the jack, East with the queen and the latter was permitted to hold the trick as South held off from his hand. The spade continuation was taken by the king, and declarer immediately led a diamond since several tricks were required in that suit to bring the total up to nine. West played low and North's king won the trick.

On the diamond continuation East was in with the queen.

He was out of spades and could not further the development of partner's suit, so he shifted to a club. South saw that if he finessed and it lost, West would be able to clear the spades while he still held the ace of diamonds. Declarer, therefore, played the ace of clubs, noting that he still had a quick stopper in the suit as long as East was kept out of the lead.

West's ace of diamonds was now dislodged but declarer still had the ace of spades to stop that suit and when he regained the lead — there were nine tricks available — two spades, three hearts, three diamonds, and one club.

East missed his chance to be a hero when South led a diamond at trick three to North's king. Since East was out of spades and was therefore no longer able to assist in the development of partner's suit, he should at least have tried to stay out of West's way. The queen of diamonds serves no useful purpose since it must fall on the next lead of the suit from dummy. If West has any diamond strength it will stand on its own merits and does not require any promotion by East.

Had East dropped the queen of diamonds under the dummy's king, West would have been able to get in twice during the establishment of the diamonds — once with the ten to knock out declarer's last spade stopper and once with the ace of diamonds to run enough spades to defeat the contract.

LBJ Said Improving

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson began his fourth day of hospital care today and doctors said they had "every reason to be encouraged" as he continued to show improvement.

Aides reported Wednesday that physicians were "quite pleased" with Johnson's progress. He entered the Army's Brooke General Hospital Monday with chest pains caused by hardening of the coronary arteries.

Doctors said, however, that Johnson had the sniffles and "could have the beginnings of a common cold."

His younger daughter, Luci Nugent, said her father is "determined to abide by the rules" set by his doctors.

"He's being quite good, and mother and I are quite proud of him," she said, adding that he "seems to be in excellent spirits."

Johnson was so swamped with flowers from well wishers that he decided to spread some cheer, Luci said.

He asked her and husband Pat Nugent to give the flowers to patients on the floors below his penthouse suite.

"The president has been so fortunate to receive so many flowers, and he feels so many of our military men have done so much for him, he felt this was one way to show his appreciation," Luci said as she distributed the bouquets.

Strom, who is in the county to direct the state investigation, said the warrants are being drawn as persons are identified from photographs taken by SLED agents at the scene of Tuesday's clash.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven North Carolina military installations are involved in the Defense Department's plans to curtail military programs in the state this year and next, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N. C., said Wednesday.

The Navy Rework facility at Cherry Point, N. C., will not be closed as had been proposed earlier but a total of 721 civilian jobs will be cut from the force by June 30. There are a total of 2,760 civilian jobs at the facility, which repairs military planes.

The Naval Air Station at Cherry Point is to be closed by July, Jordan said. The cutback at Cherry Point will eliminate 22 civilian jobs.

Fort Bragg suffered the biggest cut with a reduction of 1,819 military jobs and 117 civilian jobs by Feb. 1, 1971. It will also phase out a high frequency radio facility by July 1, 1971, eliminating four jobs.

A Naval Reserve training station will be closed at Shelby by July 1, eliminating two military jobs.

A similar closing at Statesville, N. C., will also eliminate two military jobs.

At Camp Lejeune Marine base in Jacksonville, N. C., bread baking is to be discontinued in July, trimming 22 military jobs but no civilian jobs.

At Seymour Johnson Air

Force Base near Goldsboro, a reduction in flights for fighter aircraft from 45 hours to 37 flying hours is planned by June 30 and will cut 308 jobs. An additional 48 civilian jobs will be cut by June 30, 1971, in the man-power program there.

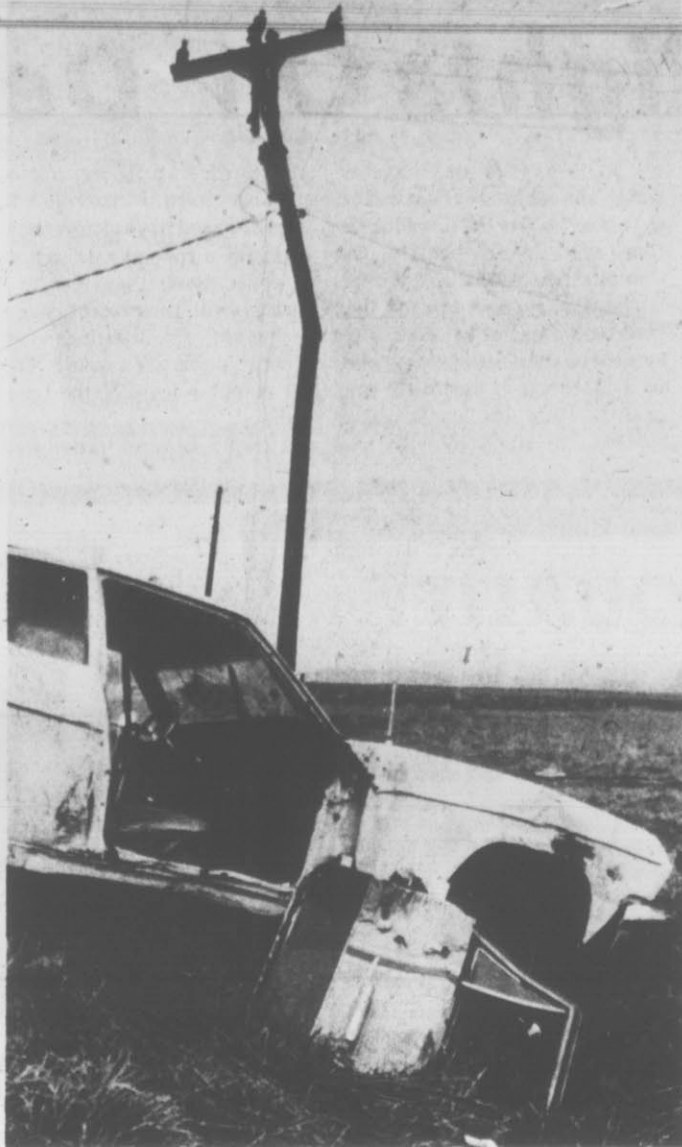

At Winston - Salem, the 810th radar squadron will be inactivated and the site declared surplus to Air Force needs by Sept. 30, eliminating 130 military jobs and 20 civilian jobs.

Recognition As Human Beings

DURHAM (AP) — Dr. Carl Degler, an historian from Stanford University, says that women in America want to be recognized as "human beings first and women second."

"That," Degler said Wednesday night in a speech at Duke University, is what the current "female liberation movement" is all about.

"I am convinced," he said, "that in the partnership that is marriage, there are many couples in which the male partner is much better fitted to stay home and take care of the house while the woman partner is better fitted to go out and to fight in the world and be the principal bread winner."

Woman Dies

GRIMESLAND — A 32-year-old Negro woman was killed here early this morning when a car in which she was riding went out of control and crashed into a utility pole.

Highway Patrolman W.L. Thames said Hattie Mae Wallace of Route 1, Grimesland was thrown from the car when the vehicle collided with the pole.

The trooper identified the driver of the car involved as 27-year-old Elliott Jones, Negro of Route 1, Grimesland.

Jones was quoted as saying the vehicle, headed North on rural paved road 1565 a quarter-mile South of the U.S. 264 intersection, started pulling to the left, and he was not able to correct the movement. The car went down an embankment and struck the pole.

The door on the passenger's side was ripped off.

Pitt County Coroner E.W. Harvey said the woman died of head injuries.

Investigation of the 8:45 a.m. collision is still in progress.

Damage to the car was set at $1,000 while damage to the pole was estimated to be $75.

Bethel, Belvoir Collide In Finals

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A third meeting between Belvoir-Falkland and Bethel, which split regular season contests, will be held tonight with everything at stake. The two fought their way into the finals of the District I, Class A Tournament, and a trip to the State Tournament is the prize for the winner.

For the loser, it's mothballs for another summer.

Bethel scrambled its way into the final game with a 66-62 victory over Columbia that wasn't decided until Gary James hit a three-point play with seven seconds left in the game.

And Belvoir was not to be outdone for a heartstopper. The Eagles lost an early 14-point lead, and had to fight their way through two overtimes before getting a 47-45 win over Aurora.

One thing is assured in the championship game. A Pitt County team will, as in six of the past seven years, represent District I in the state playoffs.

The Bethel-Columbia game was fairly close all the way, although Bethel pushed out into as much as an eight-point lead in the third period. But Columbia fought back and nearly pulled it off. They never could get off the shot they needed to either take the lead or tie it up.

Neal Fenner put Columbia on top at the start, but Bethel came back with a free throw by Ricky Parker and a jumper by James to take a 3-2 lead. Guy Swain put Columbia back out and Alvin Midgett hit to give the Wildcats a three-point edge.

Bethel again came back to regain the lead, but lost it again at 8-7. The Indians then pushed out and rolled up a six-point lead after that. Parker put Bethel ahead with a turnaround jumper, then hit again to raise the lead to three. A steal by James and a free throw by Russ Andrews ran the score out to 14-8 with 1:39 left.

But a pair of Wildcat baskets cut it back to 14-12 at the break.

Quincey Spruill tied it up for Columbia in the opening seconds of the second quarter, but Bethel held onto the lead until Spruill hit again at 6:26 to make it 18-16. Bethel tied it back up, then regained the lead on a shot by James to make it 22-24. After it was tied again, Eddie Stokes moved the Indians back out, and they pushed out by five, 28-23, but a three-point play by Midgett cut the lead to 28-26 at the half.

The third period was the big one for the Indians, as they built up their eight-point lead that was a key factor in the win. Midgett got a free throw to cut the lead to one, but baskets by James pushed the margin back to five. From there, Bethel slowly pulled away, and a free throw by Stokes with 2:41 left made it 41-33. Bethel held onto the edge until just before the end of the period, when the 'Cats cut it back to six, 45-39.

Columbia got two quick baskets at the start of the final period to cut the lead back to two, but Bethel continually held them off. The lead finally shrunk to one at 51-50 with 5:01 to go. But a three-point play by Stokes moved it back to four again, and again Bethel held them off. Finally, however, with 33 seconds to play, Midgett hit on a pair of free throw to close the gap to one, 63-62.

Bethel controlled the ball, however, until James was open with seven seconds left. He hit the layup, and was fouled. The three-points thus sealed the win for Bethel.

James led Bethel with 21 points, while Parker had 20. Stokes had 12, but completely dominated the boards with his rebounding, and L.D. Casper added 10.

For Columbia, Morton Selby had 20, Midgett had 16, Fenner had 11 and Spruill had 10.

And if the fans didn't get enough excitement in the opening game, the second must have brought it on.

While it looked easy enough at the start, Belvoir had to scramble for its life to make it to the finals. In the first quarter, however, it looked like the Eagles were going to wipe Aurora's Trojans right off the floor. With William Shivar leading the way, the Eagles bombed in 19 points, and hurried out to a 19-7 lead at the end of the period.

Donnie Everett and Shivar put in the first two baskets for Belvoir for a 4-0 lead, but three straight buckets by the Trojans changed the lead to 6-4. Doris Tyre hit the first two and Ira Hamilton added the other for the lead.

But in the remaining five minutes, Aurora got only one more point, while Belvoir pushed through 15. A three-point play by Shivar put Belvoir back on top, 7-6, and another by J.W. Wooten ran it out to four. Aurora got a free throw from Hamilton, but that was the last point for the Trojans in the quarter.

In the opening seconds of the second period, Shivar hit to run the lead out to 14, 21-7, but Aurora started to come to life after that.

Three straight foul shots by Tyre, and a steal by Hamilton cut the lead to nine, 21-12. Both teams went through a period of scorelessness, but finally Aurora broke it open by pushing through two more baskets by Dexter Mills, and that closed the gap to six, 23-17.

Belvoir got shots by Shivar and Mike Burroughs to pull back to 10, but a final shot by Hamilton made it 27-19 at the half.

Mills hit a three point play for the Trojans at the start of the second half, cutting the lead to five. Another basket by Tyre sliced it to three, and the Trojans appeared back in the game.

But Belvoir edged away again, and built up an eight point lead. A pair of free throws by Wooten, and baskets by Everett and Shivar built the lead to 33-25 with 5:03 left in the quarter. Aurora battled back again, however, and cut the lead back to three again, as a free throw by Roger Moody, and baskets by Harper and Hamilton made it 36-33. Belvoir got a free throw from Moore to inch back out by four, 37-33 at the end of the frame.

Belvoir appeared to hole control of the game, however, as it built up a seven point lead, 41-34 with 4:44 to go. But then the bottom fell out for the Eagles. Hamilton and Mills each hit, cutting it to three, and a basket by Harper sliced it to one, 41-40. Harper then canned a free throw with 1:45 left to tie it up, 41-41.

Aurora got the ball back with 1:36 left in the game, and held the ball until Harper was fouled with 29 seconds left. He made both to give the Trojans a 43-41 lead.

Belvoir then got a chance when Everett was fouled with 12 seconds left, but his shots missed. Shivar pulled off the rebound, however, and hit to tie it up with 10 seconds left, and that forced the first overtime.

Mills hit a jumper with 2:03 left to give Aurora a 43-42 lead, but Moore drove in with 1:52 left to tie it up again. Neither team could score after that, and it was 45-45 when the horn sounded again. Then, in the final overtime, Moore was fouled with 2:08 to go, and made both shots, giving Belvoir a 47-45 lead. There was no more scoring as the Eagles controlled the ball after that. Shivar led Belvoir with 21 points, while Hamilton had 15 to pace Aurora. Mills and Tyre each had 11 for Aurora.

Pirates Chase SC Mat Crown

East Carolina University's wrestling team will go after the prize that barely eluded it last season when it invades Williamsburg, Va., this weekend for the Southern Conference championships.

Last year, the Bucs barely lost the title to the Indians of William and Mary, the host team. This year, the tournament again appears to be a toss-up between the two schools. The Bucs downed the Indians last week in a dual meet, but Coach Johnny Welborn points out that there is a lot of difference in a dual and a championship meet.

"It could go either way between us," he said. "They might have some psychological advantage by being at home for the tournament, but neither of us can afford to take a lot for granted. VMI has an up and coming team and could sneak by both of us, while we battle it out."

Welborn feels that the Bucs have several opportunities for individual titles. Two members of the team, Tim Ellenberger and Stan Bastian will be out to defend the titles they won last season. Ellenberger will be shooting for his third straight crown.

Welborn has about decided on his entries in the tournament, but noted that there could be some shifting later on. But his current entry list looks like this.

In the 118-pound class, Tom Ellenberger will be shooting for the title. He was second in the conference for the past two years, and is the reigning North Carolina Collegiate champion. He holds a 12-1 record for the season, and could, with a fine effort, pull off an upset in this class.

Brother Tim Ellenberger will be after the 126 title, for the third time. He also is a state champion, and held an 11-1 record this year.

At 134 will be Steve Morgan, 11-1 for the year. He is a junior college transfer.

Robert Corbo will be in the 142 slot. Second in the conference last year, he has posted an 8-5 mark this season.

Bastian will wrestle at 150. A defending Southern Conference titlist and the N.C. champ, he is 9-2 this year.

Mike Spohn, another junior college transfer, also won in the state meet, and is 11-3 for the year. He will be in the 158-pound class.

Sam McDowell, who has finished fourth and third in the conference, hasn't had a spectacular year, at 3-7-1, but is expected to do a fine job in the 167 ranks.

Cliff Bernard will wrestle at 177. He was second in the meet last year, and is 2-2-1 for the year.

Bob Vosburg, 5-0 for the season, will wrestle at 190, while Jerry Trachenberg, 5-1 will fill the heavyweight division.

"This is the finest team we've ever had at East Carolina," Welborn said. "And we're going to be going all out for the title."

Local Boy In Tourney

RALEIGH — A Greenville boy will be among those from nine schools competing in the 24th Annual Eastern Athletic Association for the Blind Wrestling Tournament to be held in Raleigh Friday and Saturday.

Phillip Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie M. Kelly of Greenville, will compete in the tournament in the 155-pound class. He is a student at the Governor Morehead School in Raleigh.

The tournament is being held in conjunction with the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. It is the first time the tournament has been held in North Carolina since 1951. The Association is composed of schools from Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and North Carolina.

Brook Valley Sets Tourney

The first tournament of the spring will be held at Brook Valley Country Club Sunday. A "Spectacular" is planned.

The tournament, pairing golfers classed A, B, C and D into teams, will get the 1970 season underway. Members wishing to participate may call or sign up in the pro shop prior to noon on Saturday.

Shivar paced Belvoir to a 47-45 double overtime victory over the Trojans in last night's District I, Class A Tournament. ## Buc Thinclads In Loop Meet

East Carolina University joins the other Southern Conference schools Saturday in their quest to top William and Mary's powerful track team in the annual Southern Conference indoor meet at Lexington, Va.

"We got a fine performance from our boys in our last outing," ECU track coach Bill Carson said. "I look for more of the same in the meet, and a good finish for us."

Carson listed his top prospects in the meet.

Barry Johnson and Jerry Covington have been looking good in the 440 yard dash, and could bring home points for the Bucs. Mark Hamilton, Bill Mitchell and Les Strayhorn are the top chances in the 60-yard dash.

Lannie Davis is the top Buc in the half-mile, while James Kidd and Rusty Carraway could score in the 1,000-yard run. Joe Day and Dennis Smith will handle the mile, with Neil Ross and Ken Voss in the two-mile.

Ronnie Smith in the 60 highs and Mickey Furcron in the 60 lows are the hurdler chances.

Walter Davenport could bring home a title in the long, high and triple jumps, while David Drye will help in the lone and triple jumps. Rich McDuffie, Bill Pace and Hamilton will contest in the pole vault.

Carson also expects his teams in the mile and two-mile relays to score well.

Robinson Wins Over S. Ayden

OAK CITY — Robinson High School rolled to an 82-69 victory over South Ayden last night.

The Eagles pushed away to a 25-16 lead in the first period, and appeared headed for a win. But Robinson got into the game in the second period and began to cut away at the lead. The Tigers outscored South Ayden, 17-16, and trailed at the half, 41-33.

In the third period, the same results were seen, as Robinson again outthit South Ayden, 17-16.

But Robinson turned on the gas in the final period, and tossed 32 points through to move ahead.

Cincinnati Has The Hitters, But Is Hoping To Come Up With Hurlers

By JACK HAND
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are no toe dancers. They come out swinging. They remind an old fight writer of a slugger with a glass chin. They climb all over you. Like Joe Frazier, but go down easier than Floyd Patterson when somebody hits them on the pitching staff.

In order to strengthen that vulnerable pitching staff, the Reds made deals that brought people like Jim McGlothlin, Vern Geisbert and Ray Washburn to the club. It remains to be seen whether the new pitching can carry the load.

Sparky Anderson, a second baseman in the old Brooklyn Dodger organization who had a one-year shot with Philadelphia in 1959, has been hired to succeed Dave Bristol as manager. As third base coach for Preston Gomez at San Diego last year, Anderson knows how the Reds look from the other dugout.

"Preston asked me one day if I thought a 9-1 lead was enough against the Reds," said the 36-year-old Anderson. "I told him we'd better get some more. I think we finally won it 10-9."

"Houston had them (Cincinnati) 9-0 one day with Denny Le-master rolling along strong and wound up losing 10-9. And then there was that 19-17 game against the Phillies.

"Some people say the pitching was awfully bad last year, but Larry Shepard, my pitching coach who was managing Pittsburgh, didn't think they were so bad. He thought it was a combination of sore arms and injuries."

If getting in shape can do the job, the Reds' pitchers should be ready. Anderson has them running around the Reds' training complex until their tongues are dragging. They stoop to pick up rolling baseballs and then run some more.

"I'm not going to take any pitcher north if he's not ready to pitch," said Anderson.

Jim Maloney's contract dispute has delayed his start. The club wants to be sure it will get more out of Maloney than the 179 innings last year when he had a 12-5 record.

At the moment Anderson is thinking in terms of Gary Nolan, Jim Merritt, McGlothlin and Wayne Simpson (a 7-13 rookie from Indianapolis) as his starters with Washburn, Tony Cloninger and Geisbert close behind. Add Maloney and then put Wayne Granger and Clay Carroll in the bullpen and that will do it, barring major surprises. McGlothlin was 8-16 and Geisbert 1-1 with the California Angels. Both Nolan and Maloney had shoulder problems last year.

The extent of the Reds' pitching problem can be seen from the fact that Granger appeared in a record 90 games and Carroll in 71 for a total of 161 games from the roommates.

Except for left field, vacated by Alex Johnson who was traded to California for pitching help, and shortstop, where Woody Woodward tried to plug the gap in 1969, there are no open spots in the Reds' lineup. After all, the club hit .276 and led the league with 171 homers finishing third in the Western Division, four games behind Atlanta.

Lee May will be on first with Tony Perez at third, sluggers at both ends of the infield. Tommy Helms will be on second. Shortstop is wide open with Dave Concepcion, Frank Duffy and Darrel Chaney in the running and Woodward in the background.

Bob Tolan again will be in center field and Pete Rose, the $100,000-plus two-time batting champ, will be in right. That leaves left up for grabs between Bernie Carbo, .359 at Indianapolis, and Hal McRae, coming back after missing almost an entire year due to a broken leg.

Johnny Bench, the All-Star catcher, has the job all to himself backed up by the veteran Pat Corrales.

Maravich Is Named Player Of The Year

By ED TUNSTALL
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Pete Maravich, who thrilled crowds from the Louisiana Bayous to ocean beaches of Hawaii with his shooting and court magic, is college basketball's Player of the Year. And it climaxed a long and often lonely road for the skinny kid from the Carolinas to the top of the basketball world.

"Gee, this really caps it, this makes it worth every step," the 21-year-old Louisiana State record buster said when told The Associated Press had named him the season's top player Wednesday.

"Sure, I was hoping I would get it, it means so much," he said in an interview in the office of his father, Press Maravich, who has directed LSU to its finest season in years. "But you never know. There's so many good ones around. It's a real honor, it's very flattering."

The list of credentials are impressive for the LSU shooting star who is rarely satisfied with his crowd-thrilling performances. He broke Oscar Robertson's NCAA career scoring record more than a month ago and a 55-point outburst against Mississippi State Monday night gave him 1,263 for this season, another major college record.

Through 27 games, he's hitting at a 46.8 points per game clip with only Georgia left on the regular season schedule, but the Bayou Tigers have a spot in the prestigious National Invitation Tournament starting next week.

The award given "Pistol Pete" marks the realization of a goal he set for himself when he barely had hands big enough to handle a basketball.

"He's always wanted to be the best, to be No. 1," his father said. "He's worked so hard for it. He's never satisfied with what he does. He's always looking for ways to do it better."

He was named to The Associated Press All-American team Wednesday for the third straight year. He led the nation's major colleges in scoring in his sophomore and junior years and is the first player in major college history to go over the 1,000-point mark in three years.

So what's left for him now? To be sure, a professional career, something else he's always had his sights trained on, and it's no secret every pro team would like to have him.

"Sure, I want to play pro ball but I don't have any preference," he said, when asked about the bidding war for him that is almost sure to come between the rival National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association.

Exchange Is City Champ

The Book Exchange, regular season champions in the City Basketball League, downed the Jaycees, 54-53, last night in the finals of the league's post-season tournament.

The Jaycees held the lead at the end of the first half, as they worked up a 31-30 advantage. But they were unable to make it last long enough. The Book Exchange came back in the second half and outscored the Jaycees, 24-22, and it was just enough to nip them for the title.

The Exchange was led by Tommy Jordan with 15 points, while Wayne Gibson had 11.

Coach Worries About Jacksonville's Play

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer
Joe Williams, coach of the nationally sixth-ranked Jacksonville Dolphins in college basketball, has an upset stomach and isn't getting much sleep these nights.

Even the 108-97 victory the Dolphins scored over Miami of Florida Wednesday night to finish their regular season at 23-1 didn't help much.

"I haven't had a good stomach for two weeks and the countdown is now slapping us right in the face," Williams said. "We didn't give this Miami game much consideration and if we'd lost it wouldn't have dampened our spirits for the national tournament. Our mind was in Dayton and our bodies in Miami."

Williams referred to Jacksonville's first-round game in the NCAA championship tournament against Western Kentucky in Dayton, Ohio, Saturday afternoon.

"I'm getting very little sleep these days because of worrying about how we'll play in the NCAA," Williams said.

He won't have to worry too much if the Dolphins keep up their 100-point average per game. They finished the regular season with 101.3 average to better the mark of 99 set by Syracuse in 1966.

Vaughn Wedeking's 26 points and 19 from 7-foot-2 Artis Gilmore paced the Dolphins but 6-3 Don Curnutt, playing on his home court, took game scoring honors with 40 points.

Curnutt became the second Miami player to score 2,000 points in his career. The first to do it for the Hurricanes was Rick Barry.

Win Gives Boost To Hill

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Victory in last week's Doral Open gave Mike Hill a big boost toward future success, the latest winner on the pro golf tour said today before teeing off in the first round of the $50,000 Florida Citrus Invitational.

"Confidence," Hill said. "More than anything winning gave me confidence. Let's face it. This game is about 65 per cent between your ears. If you think you can win, you can win."

Hill, who looks much younger than his 31 years, is a plain-spoken, up-the-hard-way sort of guy very much like his more famous brother Dave.

He's a late starter, has been on the tour only two years, and didn't really want to play golf to begin with but decided it beat driving a beer truck.

"Dave was the golfer," Mike said. "He was much better than me, always beat me pretty bad. I wasn't very serious about golf when I was a kid. I always wanted to play baseball. But my father kept on buying me golf clubs, not baseball gloves."

Hill had a checkered early career. He spent one year each in Jackson, Mich. Junior College and Arizona State, then spent four years in the Air Force.

"I didn't do much but play golf," he said. "If you've got a little talent they'll put you in Special Services and you just work around the gym and play golf. It's not too tough."

After the Air Force he spent five years "doing construction work and driving a beer truck. That's when I started getting serious about golf. I decided it was easier than working."

He had an excellent season his first year, winning more than $30,000 and finishing second in three tournaments. He slipped badly last year, dipping to only $16,000 in winnings before bouncing back.

Hill has had little formal instruction—"I kind of leach off of Dave's knowledge sometimes."

"The ability to play, strength, timing, coordination, is a God-given gift. I have a natural golf swing. I don't mess with it much. Just leave it alone."

Hill was among the favorites for the $30,000 top prize in the Citrus, being played as an invitational rather than an open tournament for the first time.

Rain Hampers Carolina Runs

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
ROCKINGHAM, N. C. (AP) — Twenty positions in Sunday's $90,000 Carolina 500 stock car race will be filled in time trials today if the weather finally cooperates.

Rain, which had curbed time trial activities for the race at North Carolina Motor Speedway three years in a row, forced the postponement of Wednesday's first rounds of qualifying when 10 spots at the front of the lineup were at stake.

The 10 drivers who had drawn starting times for their qualifying runs Wednesday were to get first chance at the up-front berths today.

The remainder of the field will be added Friday and Saturday, with the fastest 40 drivers getting their chance to shoot for the $18,200 check that goes to Sunday's winner.

LeeRoy Yarbrough's lap record of 137.726 miles per hour for the one-mile trial was expected to fall. Several drivers who turned practice laps at or above the 137 m.p.h. level, included Dodge ace Bobby Allison, who was touring the sharply-banked speedway above 138 consistently before the rain came Wednesday. The speedway also has been resurfaced for this season.

A $500 bonus goes to the pole position winner with another $1,000 being offered to the driver whose speed is the fastest above 140 m.p.h.

Boston Confrontation Culminated In Revolution

(Editor's note: This Thursday, March 5, the nation marks the first of a series of historic anniversaries that will culminate in 1976 in a massive observance of the republic's 200th birthday. The following dispatch deals with the causes, outcome and consequences of the Boston Massacre.)

By SAM FOGG

United Press International
Blood was spilled on the cobbles of Boston two hundred years ago this week in a panicky confrontation that culminated five years later in revolution.

The events of the wintry night of March 5, 1770, have come down through the history books as the Boston Massacre. But the clash that left five civilians dead and nine British Redcoats charged with murder was distorted at the outset by propaganda and thrown further out of focus by patriotic myths that sprang up later.

From this smudged history, these facts emerge:

—The troops fired after provocation from a hostile threatening crowd.

—The officer in charge of the guard was acquitted of murder by a civilian jury. So were six of eight soldiers indicted and brought to trial. The two found guilty were punished by being branded on the thumb.

—The incident, fanned by the propaganda of Paul Revere and Sam Adams, so inflamed American opinion that war became all but inescapable.

Unpopular Tariffs

The fuse to the massacre had been touched off three years before with the British parliament's passage of the Townshend Act, that levied a tax on all imports of such everyday staples as tea, lead, paper and glass.

Prior to that, in the face of colonial hostility, Parliament had rescinded the Stamp Act that triggered American defiance of taxation without representation. But in October, 1767, the import duties promoted by "Champagne" "Charley" Townshend had sailed through and trouble began anew.

To worsen the situation, two British regiments were sent into Boston under a despised Mutiny Act that allowed the quartering of soldiers at the town's expense, including the cost of their candles.

British warships stood at anchor in Boston Harbor. A British admiralty court sought jurisdiction over cases involving American seamen.

Rivalries With Britons
Instant rancor flared between the townspeople of Boston and the troops garrisoned in the seaport city. There was woman trouble. There was economic bitterness when the soldiers took moonlighting civilian jobs on the waterfront to help make up for their pittance pay.

The Townshend Act was openly and violently defied. The people of Boston declared an overt boycott of merchants who complied with the law. Smuggling was rampant. In one instance at least a British customs informer was tarred and feathered.

Gangs of youngsters hooted at the Redcoats and pelted stones and snowballs at them as they stood sentry duty.

Further friction was generated by the Sons of Liberty—a band of Boston militants who wore medallions and exchanged passwords to show their membership in the secret group. Anti-British firebrands such as Sam Adams and James Otis held sway over the organization.

Violent Incidents

The situation began degenerating into violence in the fall of 1769 when Otis got into a coffee house fight with a group of British officers and was severely beaten.

It turned for the worse on the afternoon of Feb. 22, 1770, when Ebenezer Richardson, hated as a pro-British merchant and customs informer, was pursued into his home by a gang of boys and teen-agers hurling rocks, snowballs and missiles.

Richardson appeared at a window with a musket and fired. A young boy lay dead and the first blood of a revolution had been shed. The victim was the son of a German immigrant whose name has come down in the history books as Snyder.

Richardson barely escaped lynching when enraged citizens hauled him to jail with a halter around his neck. Five days later, the tension intensified when an emotional public funeral procession filed through the streets of the town in honor of the slain youngster.

Anonymous Challenge

On Friday, March 3, new troubles exploded when workers and soldiers brawled outside a ropeworks factory on Hutchinson Street, later known as Pearl Street. A Redcoat seeking a job had been told what he could do by a worker in Anglo-Saxon explicitness.

On Monday morning, March 5, a notice appeared on waterfront posting boards which read: "This is to inform the rebellious people in Boston that the soldiers of the 14th and 29th Regiments are determined to join together and defend themselves against all who shall oppose them."

A number of historians suspect the challenge was posted by unknowns from the colonial side trying to provoke trouble—and succeeding.

By eight o'clock that night, both sides were bristling. A British soldier stood sentinel near the Customs House on King Street (now known to tourists as State Street) and a passing young barber's apprentice taunted him for owing money to his employer.

Church Bells Ring Alarm

The sentry walloped his antagonist with the butt of his rifle and an angry crowd gathered, throwing snowballs and ice. The troops in the area were called into their barracks and the incident seemed over.

But within minutes, church bells began ringing alarm in the neighborhood and another throng of Bostonians swarmed into the area in front of the Customs House, threatening and cursing the same sentry.

The Redcoat shouted for help and from the barracks, Capt. Thomas Preston, described at his trial as "a benevolent, humane man," emerged with a reinforcement of eight soldiers.

They took stations on the steps with primed muskets and fixed bayonets. Facing them was an incensed crowd of 100, jeering "damn you for cowards" and "bloody backs."

Clumps of ice, snowballs, rocks, oyster shells and clubs began to fly between the two opposing groups and the crowd of civilians pressed closer. A soldier slipped on the icy steps and someone shouted an order to fire.

Five Men Die

A volley exploded in the cold moonlight and five civilians went down—three of them dead; two mortally wounded. Immediately slain were Crispus Attucks, a strapping six-foot mulatto; Sam Gray, who had lost his job after Friday's ropeworks factory fight, and James Caldwell, a coasting vessel mate.

Samuel Maverick, an apprentice ivory-turner who had brought his master's son to the scene, was carried away and died a few hours later. Patrick Carr, known on the wharfs as the "Irish Teague," lingered on for several days, then died, but his deathbed testimony proved the turning point of the trial that followed.

Before dawn, Capt. Preston and the eight soldiers were in Suffolk County Jail faced with murder charges. In the words of the indictment, they did not have "the fear of God before their eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil and their own wicked hearts."

By noon of the day after the affray, a town meeting had demanded the removal of the British troops from Boston and three weeks later the regiments left for Castle William in the bay.

Legend Enlarged Incident

Paul Revere had whipped up an engraving purporting to show the "massacre." In his version, the troop stood in line, firing with military precision with their officer waving them on with his bared sword. The townspeople stood huddled and astonished on the other side of the square. Above the heads of the soldiers was a street sign which read "Butcher's Hall," an establishment that did not exist.

A deposition was gathered from 96 Bostonians with all but two asserting the Redcoats fired without provocation. The royal commissioners fled to Castle William with their families.

In this festering atmosphere, Preston and his eight soldiers sought defense attorneys and they found three—Robert Auchmuty, Josiah Quincy and, more important, John Adams, a sympathizer with the American cause and later a President of the United States.

On Oct. 24, Capt. Preston was brought to trial before four red-robed judges and an American jury. The defense stressed that by military custom a sentry's post was his castle. After a six-day trial, Preston was acquitted.

Dramatic Trial Testimony

The eight soldiers went into the dock on Nov. 27 under far more hostile circumstances. Two were the special targets of hate—Matthew Killroy, who had been a frequent brawler, and Hugh Montgomery, the sentry who had been under attack by the crowd.

The crown produced 32 witnesses and the defense 51 in the trial of the eight, who sat in court clad in their red uniforms. The dramatic highlight for the defense was the surgeon who attended Patrick Carr when he died of a British bullet in his abdomen 10 days after the massacre.

The doctor told the jury: "He told me ... he was a native of Ireland, that he had frequently seen mobs and soldiers called upon to quell them; that he had seen soldiers fire often on the people in Ireland, but had never seen them bear half so much before they fired in his life."

On Dec. 4, John Adams rested his case with the jury on this statement: "The law on the one hand is inexorable to the cries and lamentations of the prisoners. On the other it is deaf, deaf as an adder, to the clamors of the populace ... gentlemen, to your candor and justice I submit the prisoners and their cause."

Two-and-a-half hours later the jury returned with the verdict, finding only Killroy and Montgomery guilty of manslaughter, not murder. Because both could read and write, the ritual known as "benefit of clergy" was granted and they suffered branding on their thumbs before the court concluded business for the day.

One of the acquitted six asked Adams if he feared for his life because he had won their case.

And he replied: "You forget, gentlemen, that you have been acquitted by a jury of my countrymen. Boston is my home."

Ahead lay other American towns—Lexington, Concord, Saratoga, Yorktown.

The Worry Clinic

The System To Break A Habit

The answer to Herman's acute problem should be of vital interest not only to smokers and drinkers, but also to all those who are overweight. So scrapbook this case. Or mail it to your relatives who are in the same boat with Herman. And send for the medical booklet below, which offers many additional suggestions.

By GEORGE W. CRANE

Ph. D., M. D.

CASE M-550: Herman G.,

aged 42, has scared his wife. "Dr. Crane," she began, "my husband went to the doctor for a complete physical examination last week.

"And the physician told Herman that his blood pressure was well over 200, so he must start using drugs to try to pull it down.

"But the doctor also warned him to stop his cigarettes before he has a coronary attack or a stroke of apoplexy.

"But Herman has tried to do that several times the past few years, yet he never has been able to quit tobacco.

"So what is the best way to break a bad habit?"

The very best, way to free yourself from slavery to bad habits, including the use of cigarettes, is to follow this plan:

(1) Make a public declaration to quit!

Then your pride will help reinforce your resolution at a later date when you begin to grow weak.

(2) Stay away from temptation!

This means, keep cigarettes out of your house or office.

Same goes for piquor or food knickknacks if you are dieting.

(3) Channel much of the former muscular pattern involved in your bad habit, into another more constructive outlet.

Actually, your cigarette "hunger" is not due primarily to your craving for nicotine or the inhaled burning tars, but to a desire to rid yourself of pent-up tensions via the waving of your hand and arm.

For muscular action dissipates the nervous "pressure" generated in your brain.

You cigarette addicts thus might carry a package of candy-coated chewing gum and in the same pocket!

When your arm then cries out to be used in the familiar pattern of smoking, reach for that package of gum.

Then shake out a piece, for this gets your arm involved in the old action and thus partially satisfies that "muscle hunger" which prods the cigarette slave.

Moreover, the act of chewing gum also drains off some nervous tension via the muscles of the tongue and jaw.

Which is also why tense school kiddies relish chewing gum!

Obviously, the muscles of the jaw are not as large as those of the arm, so they don't reduce a smoker's tension as fast.

But he can chew gum for 30 minutes whereas he would not wave his arm but 5 minutes while smoking the cigarette.

(4) Take 10 deep breaths when you feel the urge to smoke.

This will be good for your lungs and also involve the chest muscles, plus the diaphragm, thereby draining off nervous energy.

(5) Place some candy jelly beans across the room and when you feel the cigarette urge, get up, walk over to your jelly beans, and then take just one!

The rationale behind this "jelly bean" strategy lies in the fact that the act of smoking stimulates the digestive process.

So smokers may have periodically prodded their pancreas into the habit of releasing more insulin.

The jelly bean will neutralize the latter.

And the act of walking across the room will drain off more energy because of the large leg muscles involved, than a similar period spent waving your arm with a cigarette between your fingers.

Send for my booklet "How to Quit Tobacco and Liquor," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Mensa Expedition Here For Eclipse

Greenville will be host to the first international scientific expedition of Mensa, an organization whose only requirement for membership is an I.Q. within the upper two percent of the general population.

Professor Williams White of East Carolina University, who heads the Greenville Chapter of Mensa, has arranged an observation site at ECU's football stadium for the use of the 30 member expedition who will come to Greenville to photograph the sun's corona, observe shadow band phenomena, and search for comets during the three minutes of totality.

The expedition will be headed by Tom Hamilton, head of the Astronomy Department of the Mensa College in Easton, Maryland. Other prominent members of the expedition will include Jerome Brown of Princeton and astronomer Rene Verseau of France. Verseau is bringing a small reflecting telescope with complete photographic attachments.

The concept of Mensa has appealed to more than 10,000 Americans, among them some 1,100 living in the six eclipse-touched Southern states. Special interests of members include the education of gifted children in Mensa schools, which are located from Texas to the island of Sicily. Other interests of the organization include national priorities and astronomy.

The findings of the expedition coming to Greenville will be assembled, published in the Society's Journal and made available to qualified institutions.

Mensa has experienced a considerable expansion of interest in astronomy since it was revealed that all American astronauts have I.Q.s which make them eligible for membership.

Today In Washington

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate and House appear to have reached a compromise over the precious metal content of a dollar coin commemorating the late President Eisenhower.

A bill to mint the coin has been stalled in Congress since last fall. The Senate wanted the coins to contain silver, while the House sought the copper-nickel sandwich used for quarters and dimes.

The compromise calls for 150 million collectors' sets containing 40 per cent silver to be minted and sold at premium prices. General circulation coins will contain copper and nickel.

Mint Director Mary T. Brooks was given credit for pushing the compromise to meet Western states' demand for a silver coin. The Treasury Department sought to keep silver coins out of circulation since it figured hoarders would squirrel them away.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors and medical students at the Georgetown University School of Medicine have been authorized to wear "mod" hairstyles and beards.

The executive faculty announced its policy Wednesday, saying:

"A professional person should be neat and clean at all times. Mustaches, beards, long hair and sideburns and other styles are not objectionable in themselves if they match an otherwise good appearance."

Capital Quote
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"Our members—have been without a wage commitment for 15 months and now they are asked to swallow an additional 37 days without any indication whatsoever of what is expected to be achieved in these 37 days," William W. Wimpinger, chief union negotiator on congressional action temporarily prohibiting a nationwide rail strike.

Capital Footnote
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., who argued over the price of a taxi fare in Washington, D.C. more than 20 years ago, has received a letter of apology from the cabdriver who admits that "for a long time I have been putting off writing this letter."

'Chicago Seven' Talk Film Story

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Rubin says the seven defendants in the Chicago riot case plan to make a movie of their trial.

Each defendant will play himself, Rubin said, and "we're going to offer Julius $100,000 to play himself." Judge Julius Hoffman presided at the trial.

"We're going to raise $1 million," Rubin said Wednesday, and tell the whole story of the trial exactly the way it was."

The first composer of Czech nationality to receive world-wide recognition was Anton Dvorak.
