Judges Fail To Block Viet Tour For Man

BOSTON (AP) — Two federal judges have refused to block shipment of a Massachusetts soldier to Vietnam while his lawyers test a new state law that challenges the legality of the Vietnam war.

The law, signed Thursday by Republican Gov. Francis W. Sargent, says that, except for emergencies, "no inhabitant of the commonwealth ... shall be required to serve" in foreign wars where there has been no declaration of war by Congress.

State Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn said that in a little more than 24 hours after the law took effect 10 Massachusetts servicemen asked his office to take legal action to spare them Vietnam duty.

The activity in the federal courts involved John Griffin, 22, of Holyoke, an infantryman under orders to report today at Ft. Dix, N.J., for assignment to Vietnam. Griffin was drafted last July.

His lawyers, Joseph S. Oteri and Monroe L. Inker, asked the courts to issue a temporary restraining order barring the government from sending Griffin outside the United States.

Oteri and Inker went first on Friday to Judge Andrew A. Caffrey in U.S. District Court. Caffrey denied their petition with the explanation that he lacked jurisdiction, because Griffin was stationed in New Jersey.

The lawyers then appealed to Chief Judge Bailey Aldrich of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals. Aldrich denied the appeal without comment.

The lawyers said they might file a new appeal in New Jersey Monday.

They said they went to insure that Griffin would remain in the United States pending a court test of the law. Some legislative opponents of the law said they believe it is unconstitutional.

Local Man Survives Air Force Bomber Crash

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Greenville native, Maj. Ralph W. Smiley, 36, was one of nine crew members who escaped from the flaming wreckage of an Air Force B52 bomber which crashed upon landing at Ellsworth Air Force Base near Rapid City at 4:45 p.m. (7:45 p.m. Eastern Standard time) Friday.

Smiley's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Smiley of 249 Lochview Drive, Greenville.

According to Smiley's wife, the Air Force officer suffered a fractured foot, two fractured vertebrae, and lacerations and minor burns. He was one of three members of the crew who had to be pulled from the burning plane after firemen cut off the tail section to gain access to the burning ship.

His mother explained that Smiley is a radio navigator and that his escape hatch is in the belly of the plane and was blocked when the plane slid down the runway on its fuselage.

The bomber was returning from a routine training mission and was not carrying nuclear weapons, the Air Force said.

Mrs. Smiley reported the entire crew of which her son was a member had returned recently from a six-month's tour in the Pacific.

Maj. Smiley is a career Air Force officer. He is a 1951 graduate of Greenville High School and a 1955 graduate of East Carolina University. His wife and four daughters live at Ellsworth AFB where Smiley has been stationed two years.

Maj. Smiley's condition late yesterday was listed as satisfactory by officials at the Ellsworth AFB hospital.

ECU Property Sale, Purchase Is Approved

A resolution approving a proposed sale of property to the city and an acquisition of property from the Greenville Redevelopment Commission was adopted Thursday by the East Carolina University board of trustees.

ECU business manager F.D. Duncan pointed out Friday that the resolution was needed by the state Property Control Division in Raleigh before they could make a judgement on the negotiations.

Final approval of the sale and acquisition rests with the state property office, Duncan noted. The resolution will be sent to the PCD office "very soon," he said.

The land involved lies both north and south of Fifth Street and has been the subject of negotiations between the University, city and Redevelopment Commission for years.

The University proposes to sell to the city approximately six-tenths of an acre south of Fifth Street along Cotanche. The property will be involved in right-of-way on the proposed loop street projected in the central businss district plan.

Land located between First and Fifth Streets along Reade and owned by the Redevelopment Commission will be sold to the University if final negotiations are approved.

Duncan said the tract involves some 13 and seven-tenths acres. Prices for either tract involved in the two settlements have not been finalized, he added, and again, although the University will have a say in the matter, final negotiations will be resolved by the state.

Both tracts of land will be dealt with separately, Duncan added, and negotiations will be handled individually.

The city and Redevelopment Commission had agreed to the proposed transactions earlier and had awaited final word from East Carolina.

Nazi Files

WARSAW (UPI)—The Polish news agency PAP yesterday announced the discovery of original files from the Naxi concentration camp of Dachau, obtained from the widow of inmate Jozef Batory.

PAP said six boxes of files and record books with the names of inmates 1 to 149,298 were turned over by the attorney general's office to the Polish Commission for the Investigation of Nazi Crimes.

Two survivors of the Dachau camp who now work in the attorney general's office, prosecutor Tadeusz Olszewski and senior counsellor Stefan Rutkowski, spotted their own names among the entries, PAP said.

The news agency said the files are major part of records from Dachau, the site of which is now in West Germany, and they will help relatives of inmates to learn the fate of their kin.

"It is clear that the documents will be of valuable assistance in pursuing the Hitlerite murderers and they will help to establish more precisely the truth about Dachau," PAP said.

According to PAP, the existence of the documents was discovered by accident by Maj. Antoni Jurkiewicz, a secretary of the Polish veterans organization, at Pila, near Poznan.

Jozef Batory brought them to Poland in 1945 after his release from the camp, and his wife Zofia kept them after he died, the news agency reported.

21st Anniversary Marked By NATO Without Celebration

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) marked its 21st birthday Saturday without any celebration of its anniversary of its role as the Western defensive bulwark.

At NATO's austere, barracks-like headquarters outside Brussels, it was a normal Saturday. Offices were closed and parking lots nearly empty.

The political and military alliance came into being 21 years ago in Washington when the United States, Iceland, Canada and nine Western European nations—France, Britain, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Denmark, Italy, Norway, Portugal—signed the North Atlantic Treaty. West Germany, Greece and Turkey joined later.

It was born in the tensions of the cold war, a year after the communist coup in Czechoslovakia and while the Russians were trying to impose a blockade on isolated West Berlin.

Now, from the Arctic to the Bosphorus, the Allies have one and a half million troops plus air and sea squadrons committed to NATO.

But at the heart of continental Europe, the Allied divisions —ranging from 220,000 Americans and 306,000 West Germans to the 506-man Luxembourg Regiment—are far outnumbered by the ground forces of the Communist Warsaw Pact nations.

The equalizer is the American nuclear arsenal.

And after 31 years of peace, the political pressure on NATO member governments, including the United States, is to cut down its forces and military spending.

At the forthcoming meeting of NATO ministers in Rome, one of the principal topics will be the possibility of negotiating with the Warsaw Pact on mutual reductions of European forces.

No Changes

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Negro teachers called for continued "active resistance" to unfair dismissal or demotion Friday as they wound up the last convention of the North Carolina Teachers Association.

The NCTA delegates declared that the elimination of Negro teachers and administrators in some units due to integration is "a continuation of the system to which Negroes have been subjected for the past 200 years."

The convention also called on teachers to seek bargaining rights and more job security guarantees.

The delegates voted on the question of merging with the predominantly white North Carolina Education Association July 1, but the vote results will not be announced until April 17, after votes from both associations are counted.

NCTA delegates spoke out against "the strategy and psychology of brain-washing the general public into believing that all Negro instructional program, administrators, supervisors and teachers are inferior and incompetent."

'Greatest Need'

"The Coastal Plains of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia have the greatest need for job opportunities of any area of the United States," Fred Steele Jr., federal co-chairman of the Coastal Plains Regional Commission, told local Jaycees and their Jaycee guests from all over the northeastern part of North Carolina last night.

"The jobs of many agricultural workers and unskilled textile and other industrial employees will become obsolete as more automotion is used," he said. "We must find new ways of employing our people here instead of having them migrate to urban areas elsewhere."

Steele's dinner speech was the highlight of a northeast regional meeting being held at the Moose Lodge here this weekend. A North Carolina Republican, Steele works through his agency to promote the economic welfare of Eastern North Carolina and the sections of Georgia and South Carolina east of the fall line.

Yesterday afternoon a "Speak Up Jaycees" contest was held. Four novice public speakers competed in one division and four professionals — men used to speaking as part of their jobs — vied in another. Dick Ullom, local Boys' Club director, was Greenville's representative in the professional division. Winner in the professional division was Bunny Whedbee of Murfreesboro and Thurmond Pierce of Ahoskie was the novice weinner. Both will compete in a state contest to be held at the state Jaycee meeting to be held in Charlotte later this spring.

Incoming and outgoing presidents of the local organizations met yesterday afternoon, also.

On last night's agenda was a slide presentation by representatives of the Lake Waccamaw Boys' Home soliciting Jaycee support.

Officers for the region will be elected today and these will be installed at the state Jaycee meet.

New Head

Donald F. Hargy from the Post Office Department's Atlanta Regional Office will serve as officer - in - charge of the Greenville Post Office until a permanent postmaster is appointed to replace retired postmaster Joe Dudley.

Dudley retired Friday after five year service as postmaster and more than 36 years service with the post office department.

DONALD F. HARGY

A graduate of the Virginia Military Institute, Hargy served two years in the Army and worked for the U.S. Public Health Service in Fayetteville prior to joining the Post Office Department staff in 1967.

According to Hargy, the appointment of a permanent postmaster will probably come in September.

Schools Closed For Training

By VENG ENG

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodia closed its universities to give military training to students and warned the Communists Saturday it is ready to defend its independence.

Government sources said the five universities will remain closed from 10 to 30 days to prepare the 12,000 students to resist any Communist efforts to restore deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk to power.

(In Manila, two Cambodian ambassadors called Sihanouk a traitor and said he might be tried and executed if he returns from Peking to Cambodia. Roving Ambassador Long Boret and Ly Chinly, Cambodian ambassador to the Philippines, spoke at separate news conferences.

"Many people have asked that he be brought back tried and executed," Chinly said of Sihanouk. "For the meantime, we wish he'd stay where he is and let the government attend to its work."

(Both ambassadors said Cambodia might call on "friendly powers" for military assistance if needed to fight off aggressors, but they said they believed the present Cambodian government of Gen. Lon Nol was capable of handling the situation.)

The Cambodian Foreign Ministry sent notes to all diplomatic missions in Phnom Penh Saturday accusing the Viet Cong of "grave aggression" in an attack on a government post in Kampot Touk March 31 and saying:

"The Cambodian government reserves the right to take all appropriate measures for the defense of its sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity."

Timely Operation

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — A 21-year-old coed got her watch back and her appendix out all in the same timely operation.

Linn Tucker had swallowed the pendant watch 10 days ago. After waiting days for a natural solution to the problem, doctors retrieved it surgically and took her appendix out while they were at it.

She said the watch swallowing took place at a party. The timepiece fell from its chain and she put it in her mouth while she bent down to search for the broken clasp.

When she stood up, the pretty blonde, said some involuntary reaction made her gulp it down.

Antiwar Festival

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — One of the convicted Chicago seven, Ronnie Davis, will appear at an antiwar festival at Chapel Hill April 11-12.

Bill Barlow, coordinator of the festival, said Friday it would begin a week of national antiwar movement by the Vietnam Moratorium Committee.

In addition to Davis, who was convicted of crossing state lines to incite to riot during the 1968 Democratic National Convention, Barlow said festival participants will include folk singer Phil Ochs and the head of the national moratorium committee, Sam Brown.

Greenville Postmaster Joe Dudley Retires

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Postmaster Joseph C. Dudley ended his "appointed rounds" with the Post Office Department when he officially retired Friday.

Dudley, 59, grew up in Greenville and attended North Carolina State University until the depression. He had worked as a special delivery messenger for the Post Office Department during the summer months and during Christmas holidays while in high school and it seemed only natural for him when he began full time in 1934 as a clerk substitute. He was made a regular clerk in 1937 and in 1943 he was named superintendent of mails.

Dudley was named assistant postmaster here in 1960 and became postmaster in 1965.

The retired postal official, with nearly 41 years service with the government (he worked in Washington, D.C., from 1930 until 1934 as a bookkeeper and pay master in the House Restaurant which counted toward his retirement), has seen many changes in the postal service.

Reflecting on his postal career, Dudley said, "In 1934, there were approximately 18 to 20 workers here and the receipts of the office at that time were less than $45,000 per year."

"At the present time, 76 persons are employed at the local postal facilities and receipts for the past year totaled some $650,000," Dudley noted.

In the 1930's Dudley said, the post office maintained three and one-half routes and five rural delivery routes, as compared with 20 city and seven rural routes now.

"Another major change," Dudley pointed out, "is the fact that most of the city routes are now mechanized, with postmen walking only from the curb where they park their delivery vehicles to the addressee's door."

"Then," he said, referring to his first years with the department, "men walked their routes. We had only one motor vehicle then and now we have 17."

The local post office now operates two facilities, a new main post office completed last year on Second Street and a branch office on East Tenth Street completed several years ago.

"I have enjoyed my career in post office work . . . helping people of the community," Dudley commented. "I feel I have done so, and take great satisfaction in that."

Dudley does not have any immediate plans. "But I do plan to rest for a while," he explained.

His hobbies include golf and hunting.

Dudley is married to the former Elizabeth Madrin of Elizabeth City and they have one daughter, Mrs. Cecil Turner of Greenville.

Donald F. Hargy of the department's Atlanta Regional Office, will serve as office - in - charge of the Greenville Post Office until September when a permanent postmaster will be appointed.

(AP Wirephoto)

PREK CHREY, Cambodia (AP) — Despite denials from official quarters in both countries, it is common knowledge in this border village that South Vietnamese have crossed into Cambodia and fought beside Cambodian troops against the Viet Cong.

Sources here confirmed Friday that South Vietnamese Rangers and armored units crossed the frontier from An Phu district of Chau Doc province at least twice, on March 27 and 28.

The sources said also that Cambodian officials had prior knowledge of the raids, that Cambodian troops were "actively involved," and that road and river traffic was closed off about four miles north of the border.

The crossing of the border, while earlier confirmed by U.S. officials in Chau Doc province, was denied by South Vietnamese president Nguyen Van Thieu.

Thieu conceded that South Vietnamese troops had gone into Cambodia in reaction to attacks by the enemy but denied that they had ever pursued deep beyond the borders.

He also said South Vietnam had not been asked to help Cam Cambodia and "they (Cambodia) have stated very clearly they do not intend to ask help from any foreign country—and above all the neighboring country—to repel the Communists."

Gen. Lon Nol, premier in the new Phnom Penh government, also denied that Cambodia had asked for assistance in fighting Viet Cong and North Vietnamese on Cambodian soil.

Earth Day

RALEIGH (AP) — Students at three of North Carolina's major universities are planning everything from teach-ins and preach-ins to a trash-in for observance of Earth Day April 22.

The national observance is intended "to bring the word on the environmental crisis to as many people as possible and to look for rational, nonviolent solutions to our problems," said Paul Hevert, a student in environmental sciences and engineering at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Students at UNC, North Carolina State University in Raleigh and Duke University in Durham have scheduled pan discussions, speeches, movies, contests and other activities for the week of the observance.

In Raleigh, Earth Day Activities will begin April 19 with an "environmental sabbath" as participating ministers speak to their congregations on the environmental crisis.

Ron Harper, a student organizer of activities at N. C. State, hopes to arrange a bus tour that afternoon to point out sound and unsound uses of the environment in the Raleigh area and "prominent area polluters."

The formal program at N. C. State will begin Monday, April 20, with the first of a three-day series of panels and speeches.

Also, the Organization for Environmental Quality at N. C. State is sponsoring a "phoul photo" contest with a $15 first prize for the photograph that best shows "North Carolina's contribution to a poorer environment."

At UNC, organizers Jeff Richey and Hevert are planning a program April 21 and 22 of workshops on topics from the social and political environment to "women and ecology."

Hevert said they will also try to get cars banned from the campus and the center of Chapel Hill April 22 because their exhausts pollute the air.

They also plan a trash-in, with a $25 prize for the group that collects the most aluminum cans to be sold to Reynolds Aluminum Co. in Charlotte. Another project is an "ecology store" selling "organic foods without pesticides and a minimum of wasteful packaging."

Organizers at Duke plan a four-day program, April 20-23, with speeches by scientists from California and New York and a talk by Sen Gaylord Nelson, D-Wash., who first suggested the Earth Day observance.

Did Not Apply For A Deferment

RALEIGH (AP)—There were no irregularities in the process by which a 20-year-old high school student was drafted into the Army, state Selective Service Director William H. McCachren said Friday.

McCachren reviewed the file on Jimmy Carpenter, a former resident of Macon County, N.C., but who is now a resident of Dillard, Ga. If he had not been drafted last summer, he would have been a high school senior and president of his school's Future Farmers of America chapter.

The son of a tenant farmer with eight children, Carpenter didn't begin school until he was seven years old. He missed another year when he dropped out to help on the family farm.

According to McCachren, Selective Service law permits a boy to stay in high school until he is 20, graduates or drops out, whichever comes first.

He noted that Carpenter was 20 on Jan. 8, 1969, and was deferred until July, 1969, to let him finish the school year.

When the youth was reclassified, he received the same information on appealing the draft classification that all inductees are given, McCachren added, noting there was no appeal.

McCachren said young Carpenter might have been eligible for another year of deferment as a high school student, had he applied for it.

Retroactive Pay

CHERRY POINT, N. C. (AP) —Blue collar federal employes in 21 eastern North Carolina counties and Horry County, S.C., are to receive retroactive pay raises averaging 9 per cent.

About 4,500 are affected by the increases announced Friday by Wiley L. Hall of Cherry Point, chairman of the Southeastern North Carolina Area Wage Survey Committee.

Included are Brunswick, Carteret, Columbus, Craven, Jones, Lenoir, New Hanover, Onslow, Pamlico, Pender, Beaufort, Bertie, Dare, Duplin, Greene, Hertford, Hyde, Martin, Pitt, Tyrrell and Washington counties in North Carolina.

The raises are effective during the first pay period beginning after March 17.

The lowest paid employes will be brought up to $2.01 an hour. The raises average 28 cents an hour for nonsupervisory employes. For supervisory employes the average raise is 47 cents an hour, or 10.5 per cent.

Workers covered are at military installations at Cherry Point, the Air Rework Facility at Cherry Point, Myrtle Beach Air Force Base, Camp Lejeune, New River Marine Air Facility, the Corps of Engineers at Wilmington and the Military Ocean Terminal at Sunny Point, near Southport.

Bomb Call Charged

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Two teen-aged boys are being held in Catawba County jail today on charges they made a false bomb report Friday at Fred T. Foard High School at Lincolnton.

The two, 16-year-old Les Cline and 18-year-old Robert Dale Walters, were jailed in lieu of $500 bond apiece. Both are from the Startown community in southern Catawba County.

The office of the superintendent of Catawba County schools received a telephoned threat at 1:15 p.m. Friday that a bomb was to go off in the school at 1:30 p.m. three sheriff's deputies said.

Pupils were evacuated immediately and a fruitless search was conducted by the county sheriff's department and volunteer firemen. Pupils returned to their classes for the rest of the day when nothing was found.

Cline is a pupil at the high school, the deputies said.

Charged In Robbery

ASHEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — The FBI has charged Dewey Admiral Daniels Jr., 41, of Elizabethton, Tenn., with violation of the federal bank robbery statute in last week's $21,972 robbery of a Weaverville bank. He also is being sought on state charges.

A branch of the Bank of French Broad at nearby Weaverville was robbed March 27.

Buncombe County Sheriff Harry P. Clay previously announced that Daniels had been charged with bank robbery, robbery with firearms, kidnapping and larceny of a police cruiser.

Weaverville Police Chief Cleve Honeycutt said a man employed a ruse to get him to drive to a cemetery near the edge of town, where the stranger drew a pistol, handcuffed the chief to a tree, then drove off in the chief's cruiser.

Later the man robbed the bank and abandoned the vehicle not far from where deputies found the chief.

Threaten 'Sick Out'

GASTONIA, N. C. (AP) —Policemen at Gastonia have threatened a possible "sick out" if their demands for a pay raise are not met.

Some 40 members of the 80-man staff met Friday night to discuss their grievances, then conferred with Mayor Gene Woody, City Manager Dan Eller and Councilman Bill Price.

Another meeting with Eller was scheduled for Monday morning.

City officials were given a list of 14 grievances by the policemen last week. Included were demands for more money and faster promotions.

The list was considered by the mayor's policy study commission. Then the policemen were told a raise was planned for all city employes but policemen would not get as much money as they asked for.

Clemson Fees Go Up

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Clemson is increasing its fees next fall but only for out-of-state students.

The university said they will advance by $100 to $1,196 an academic year, exclusive of board and room. South Carolina residents will pay $596.

The medical fee for all students was ordered increased by $5 to $25 by a board meeting this week. Some housing fees are being increased, with dormitory rates advancing by $10 to $16, depending on the accommodations.

The board reelected state Sen. Edgar A. Brown of Barnwell as president of the board. He has been a member since 1934.

Raleigh Asks Help

RALEIGH (AP) — The City of Raleigh has asked for help in avoiding a repetition of the stroll a bare-breasted night club dancer took down the city's main street.

Raleigh City Attorney Donnie Smith asked the Local Government Study Commission to help determine if the city can enact an ordinance to forbid such behavior.

Smith told the commission that city officials received hundreds of calls and irate letters after the topless dancer paraded in the midst of a host of male admirers several weeks ago.

He said the city probably could enact an ordinance "prohibiting this type of conduct," but he was not certain whether the city would preempt a state power.

The woman's walk came shortly after the North Carolina Court of Appeals ruled that a woman baring her breasts in public was not violating the state's laws against indecent exposure.

Shot Himself

DURHAM (AP) — A 15-year-old junior high school student whose father was killed in Vietnam, shot himself to death in a bedroom at his home Friday night.

Gilbert Parker, a junior high school student was dead upon arrival at Duke Hospital.

His mother, Mrs. Lillie Parker, said she received a letter Friday from the assistant principal and dean of her son's school, saying he had been suspended.

Investigating police said Mrs. Parker said she scolded her son and told him he should stay home Friday night.

The youth went upstairs, took his brother's rifle and shot himself, police said.

Help!

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A woman called the Deerfield Beach Fire Department Friday to report a man yelling for help.

The department's rescue squad found only a man who said he was calling his dog named "Help."

Plane Is Returned

By ALBERT E. KAFF

TOKYO (UPI) —A Japan Air Lines Boeing 727 carrying three crewmen and a Japanese government official returned to Tokyo from the North Korean capital of Pyongyang Sunday morning, ending the longest and most bizarre hijacking in the history of aviation piracy.

The plane landed at Tokyo's International Airport at 9:09 a.m. (7:09 p.m. Saturday est), exactly five days, one hour and 34 minutes after nine leftist students hijacked it Tuesday morning during a routine domestic flight.

The plane taxied to a halt in front of the airport terminal, and thousands of Japanese jamming its balconies waved and shouted greetings as the four men who had been the kidnapers' hostages emerged.

The first to step off was Japan's vice minister for transportation, Shinjiro Yamamura, who had gone aboard it Friday in Seoul, South Korea, in exchange for 99 passengers and four stewardesses the kidnapers had held as hostages during three days of negotiations there for clearance to fly to Pyongyang. The plane was under control of the hijackers for 83½ hours, a time record in airline hijacking.

The pilot, co-pilot and engineer followed Yamamura. They were part of the original crew aboard the plane when it departed Tokyo last Tuesday morning on a scheduled 45-minute flight to Fukuoka in southern Japan.

"I did what I had to do," Yamamura said after mounting a small platform erected on the airport ramp to receive the four men.

"I am very happy that I was able to help others," Yamamura said. "I am home in good health."

The three crewmen were Capt. Shinji Ishida, 47, the pilot; Teiichi Ezaki, 32, co-pilot, and Toshio Aihara, 31, engineer.

"I am here. I am sorry for causing all this trouble," said Ishida, who was embraced by his wife and two small daughters as he stepped from the platform.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. picked up on its radio monitors the first word from North Korea that the plane had departed Pyongyang. The nine hijackers remained in the North Korean capital, but their status was not clear. An earlier Communist broadcast indicated they were possibly under house arrest.

Yamamura, speaking later at an airport news conference, said he and the three crewmen were treated well by the North Koreans. But he said they did not see the hijackers, members of Japan's fanatical "Red Army" Communist faction, after dining with them in a Pyongyang hotel where they spent Friday and Saturday nights.

"The hijackers and we were all together after getting off the plane at Pyongyang," he said. "The last time we were together was Friday night when we had supper. After that we were separated.

"Honestly speaking, the Red Army students were crazy guys.

"We had good treatment," he continued. "North Korea said we came there in violation of law because nothing was sent through diplomatic channels. 'You will be considered criminals until an investigation is completed,' they said. Then came the announcement that we should be ready to come back home."

During the time under the hijackers' control, the plane spent 72 hours on the ground in Seoul, South Korea, with the hijackers and 106 other passengers and crewmembers locked inside. All but three crewmen and the passengers were exchanged there for the Japanese government official.

Must Prove National Interest

By LIEF ERICKSON
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that the government must prove "overriding national interests" are at stake before it can require a reporter to disclose "confidential associations" to a grand jury investigating the Black Panthers.

In making the ruling Friday, Judge Alfonso J. Zirpoli said, however, that the reporter, Earl Caldwell of the New York Times, must appear before the grand jury as a "public duty which every person within the jurisdiction of the government is bound to perform."

Zirpoli said the 2½-hour hearing in U.S. District Court on motions to quash two subpoenas served on Caldwell presented "issues that go to the very core of the First Amendment."

He said they were "issues of significant magnitude the resolution of which may well be determinative of the scope of the journalist's privilege in sensitive areas of freedom of speech, press and association not heretofore fully explored and decided by the Supreme Court of the United States."

EARL CALDWELL

The judge stayed his order pending appeal to the 9th Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals, provided notice of appeal is filed within 20 days.

U.S. Atty. James Browning Jr. said the government has not yet decided whether to appeal to higher courts. That decision would be made by the solicitor general, he said.

Attorneys for Caldwell and The Times said they also will study the feasibility of an appeal.

In New York, A. M. Rosenthal, Times managing editor, said Caldwell told him by phone that "he feels very happy about the whole thing. He feels the decision is a good one and, I'm sure, so do we."

At the beginning of the hearing, government attorneys agreed with Zirpoli's suggestion that they withdraw a subpoena issued in February requiring that Caldwell appear with notes and recordings of interviews with Black Panther leaders. A later subpoena ordered only that the Negro reporter appear for questioning.

But Zirpoli said Caldwell "need not reveal confidential associations that impinge upon the effective exercise of the First Amendment right to gather news for dissemination to the public through the press ... until such time as a compelling and overriding national interest which cannot be alternatively served has been established to the satisfaction of the court."

The Associated Press, Newsweek magazine, and the Columbia Broadcasting System and five of its newscasters, acting as friends of the court, filed briefs in support of the move to quash the subpoenas.

Dak Seang Is Under Attack

By BERT W. OKULEY

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese commanders rushed reinforcements Saturday to an outpost on the Central Highlands where mountain tribesmen led by a handful of American Green Berets were trying to hold out in the face of a five-day siege by North Vietnamese regulars.

Two U.S. Army transport helicopters on supply missions were shot down Friday three miles west of the beleaguered outpost at Dak Seang, 292 miles northeast of Saigon in jungles only seven miles from the Laotian border. Field reports said two Americans were wounded in the crashes.

Dak Seang has apparently become a centerpiece in the nationwide wave of attacks which North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces launched last Tuesday night.

14 Killed

Communist gunners have pumped hundreds of rockets and mortar shells into Dak Seang, and military sources said the barrages have killed at least 14 South Vietnamese defenders and wounded thirty. Six Green Berets were reported wounded.

More than 500 South Vietnamese infantrymen and tribal fighters have reinforced Dak Seang since the siege began, sources reported, and waves of U.S. B52 Stratofortresses have been blasting jungles around the camp in an attempt to lift the siege.

Mititary sources said Saturday there was no way of knowing how many North Vietnamese and Viet Cong had been slain around Dak Seang by U.S. air strikes and counter artillery fire from Allied guns emplaced in the outpost.

Day Long Battle

Communiques reported hand-to-hand fighting at times Friday in a daylong battle between American troops and North Vietnamese regulars just south of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) border and six miles west of Cam Lo.

Troops of the 1st Brigade, 5th U.S. Mechanized Infantry Division reported killing 27 North Vietnamese regulars in the fight at a cost of six Americans killed and 40 wounded.

Two U.S. tank companies were rushed into the battle, forcing the North Vietnamese to abandon a position on a knoll from which they had been firing mortars, rockets and small arms against the Americans.

U.S. 25th Infantry Division forces reported killing at least 76 Communist troops in two days of fighting in an area 44 miles northwest of Saigon and three miles from the Cambodian border. Ten Americans were killed and 18 wounded, all on the first day of the action Thursday.

Reid Is To Head Group

David E. Reid, a Greenville attorney, will head the 1970 Mental Health Month committee of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, according to Dr. Malene Irons, president.

The annual observance is part of National Mental Health Month being conducted throughout the country by mental health associations and other community organizations and individuals.

A state legislator, Reid is a member of the legislative mental health committee and is also a director of the Pitt County Mental Health Association.

He received his A.B. degree in 1956 and his law degree in 1959, both from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Since 1965, he has been Greenville city attorney.

In 1963, he was state president of the North Carolina Young Democrats Club and was general chairman of the 1964 Jefferson - Jackson Day dinner. A Master Mason, he is a member of Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity, the Kiwanis Club, and the Moose Lodge.

He, his wife, the former Beverly Rippard, and their four - year - old twin daughters, Rebecca and Jackie, live at 1600 East Fifth Street in Greenville.

Reid said, "I am happy to accept this chairmanship and to join actively in this important educational effort to help persons in our community understand the problems of mental illness and how they can protect their own mental health. This assignment is challenging because it is concerned with the fight against the number one health problem of our time."

Anniversary Of Dr. King's Death

By United Press International

In Atlanta where he lived and in Memphis, Tenn., where he died and in cities across the nation Americans gathered by the thousands Saturday to commemorate the second anniversary of the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, and their four children visited the civil rights leader's crypt in Atlanta and laid there a tall wreath of red and white carnations.

After a quiet family ceremony, Atlanta's striking garbage workers gathered at the tomb for a march reminiscent of the 1968 Memphis garbage strike which lured King to that city and his death.

Chant Softly

In Memphis, 1,000 blacks and a few whites marched to the cadence of two bongo drums and softly chanted "We Shall Overcome" to the Lorraine Motel. There they knelt silently below the second floor balcony where King stood April 4, 1968 when a sniper's bullet tore into his throat.

A bronze bust of King was unveiled at a New York apartment complex and special services were held in churches in a number of cities. Boy scouts joined in a 24-hour period of mourning at Heritage Baptist Church in Los Angeles and in Chicago, authorities called a one-day halt to the eviction of blacks. Little Rock, Ark., water department employes, marking the 46th day of a strike, marched in honor of King.

About 50 persons accompanied Mrs. King and her children, Martin III, 13, Dexter, 9, Yolanda, 15, and Bernice, 7, to the crypt at Ebenezer Baptist church in Atlanta, where King and his father were co-pastors.

Can't Forget

"You can't forget it. I wish to God you could," King Sr. said in a brief speech. "It would be much better for me and the children if we could forget. But it's in history."

Special Session Of Assembly?

RALEIGH (AP) — Some sentiment was voiced Friday for a special session of the General Assembly to unblock some $133 million in federal housing funds. The suggestion was made at a meeting of the Local Government Study Commission.

Although the money has been allocated for public housing and redevelopment projects in North Carolina, the state is in danger of losing the funds. The federal interest rate is higher than the 6 per cent ceiling North Carolina law puts on the bonds of housing authorities and redevelopment authorities.

"Let's bring this thing to a head," Rep. Henry Fryer, D-Guilford, said to the commission. "If we have to call a special session of the General Assembly to repeal the interest rate ceiling, let's go ahead and do it."

Rep. Sam Johnson, D-Wake, chairman of the study group, expressed "deep concern" over the problem and said, "If a special session of the legislature should appear necessary to get these funds, we would support such a move."

Sen. David Flaherty, R-Caldwell, suggested that the commission "informally request" Gov. Bob Scott to convene the legislature to repeal the interest ceiling. Flaherty admitted privately he saw little chance of Scott calling a special session in an election year.

Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan reported Thursday that talks he held Wednesday with Housing and Urban Development officials in Washington "encouraged" him that a way could be found to solve the problem.

Forty nine municipalities across North Carolina could lose funds for 6,200 housing units if some arrangement is not worked out by late June.

Not Enough Oil

STUMPY POINT (UPI)—The Rapp Oil Co. has concluded there is not enough oil or natural gas here to be produced commercially. A drilling rig will be moved to Carteret County for exploration.

The oil company put up the Dare County rig in September and announced at one point the well showed a "small show of gas."

The announcement produced excitement in the northeastern North Carolina community, prompting state secretary Thad Eure to warn citizens not to be too hasty in buying stock in the company.

Rapp Oil Co. President Robert Rapp announced this weekend that the rig is being moved from Stumpy Point. "We don't feel the site could produce enough oil or natural gas to be commercially successful," he said.

Tests at the Stumpy Point drilling site showed the well contained only water, according to the rig's owner, Ralph Drieling.

The well is added to some 80 other unproductive dry holes which have been drilled by various companies in the area since 1925.

Best Course For Junior High

It seems that the city board of education has followed the best course in operating only one junior high school, to be at Aycock next year.

At the same time the board adopted a long range committment for a second junior high school to be constructed in the western or southwestern portion of the city.

The board without a doubt had a difficult decision to make in that the Aycock enrollment will be swollen from its present 1,100 to around 1,650 next year. The building is designed for 1,200 students and can handle up to 1,400. This means that 10 mobile classroom units will be needed to take care of the full enrollment expected there next year. Too, Aycock is located on the southeastern edge of the city which means that it is not well situated to serve the entire city.

Still, time was running short for establishing the type Junior High system that will be used next fall, and the board could not have waited much longer to make the decision.

We can see much objection to spending money to remodel the old Eppes High to continue its use as a junior high, particularly when it is doubtful that freedom of choice could be continued as a method of pupil assignment for junior high.

There are also objections to taking one of the elementary schools and converting it to a junior high, since this would mean another disruption of elementary pupils who changed schools last year.

Using Aycock as a central junior high seems to us to be the least expensive and most orderly way of handling the situation next fall. In the meantime the board can be planning the best possible location for a second junior high to be constructed in a location so that both schools best serve all the city.

'Little State House' Travels

By AMBROSE B. DUDLEY
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Under the cover of night, Rhode Island's state government moves from town-to-town to hear citizen complaints and, hopefully, a few compliments.

Called "The Little State Houses," the program is aimed at bridging the gap between state officials and the people.

Although the state Capitol can be reached from any point in Rhode Island by car within one hour, Gov. Frank Licht feels it is inconvenient for many to visit the offices of their state officials.

"It may not be many miles from South Providence to the State House, but to the citizens there, the state Capitol may seem as remote as the moon," Licht said in proposing the program in the 1968 election campaign.

"We want to narrow that gap," he said.

"This program is unique in the nation," said Jack Thompson, the state's federal coordinator.

"A few cities and at least one state have operated 'Little City Halls' or 'Mini-Capitols,' but all have been aimed at a limited portion of the population," he said.

"The Rhode Island Little State House program is directed toward everyone," Thompson added. "The program is an attempt to establish better communications—between state government and the citizens and from the citizen to his state government."

The "Little State Houses" project involves four, three-member teams which move from town-to-town to be on hand to talk with citizens.

The teams hear complaints and pass them along to the appropriate state officials for action.

In Providence, Pawtucket and 12 other towns on the east side of Narragansett Bay—which juts into Rhode Island as far north as the capital—the teams visit "fixed" locations.

These offices are loaned to the state by city and town governments, community action agencies and divisions of state government. They are open one day every two weeks.

On the west side of the bay, two 30-by-10 foot blue and white trailers bearing the anchor and motto of the state seal are used.

The specially equipped trailer-offices, costing $14,000 each, are moved nightly by the Public Works Department to a new location.

The 1969 General Assembly allocated $50,000 to launch the program and the federal government added $75,000 to pay salaries.

There were reports that Republicans tried to block the grant from the Nixon administration in an effort to embarrass Licht, a Democrat.

Then, recently, the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced that federal officials have "serious reservations" about the program and therefore will finance it for only one year.

Locally, the results of the program are not known, Licht aides note, since it has been in full operation a short time.

Some legislators complained that it usurps their duty as laison between the people and state officials.

One Republican state senator set up a "little capitol" in his Portsmouth rug store to hear citizen complaints, pointing out it didn't cost the state a nickel.

In addition to criticism from legislators and Republicans, the program ran into unexpected trouble from the weather.

The trailers were delayed en route from the manufacturers in Oneonta, N.Y., to Providence by heavy snows.

No County Can Go It Alone Any More

"No longer can a single county be satisfied with its own local pride but the all encompassing spirit of inter - county cooperation must prevail," Congressman Walter B. Jones told those attending the Mid-East Economic Development Commission annual meeting in Beaufort County last week.

No county can go it alone, he continued. Total cooperation is essential in order to keep "moving forward instead of backward."

Planning and development can't stop at the county lines in this modern age. It is something that has to be done on an area basis.

The Mid-East objective is to promote the economic development of the area through local, state and federal cooperation. The commission can do this only with the wholehearted support of the counties which make it up. As Rep. Jones said, through total cooperation we can keep "moving forward instead of backward."

Crucial Soviet Canal Decision

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although the first large-scale deliveries of late-model surface-to air-missiles (SAM-3) are now being hurriedly installed by Soviet technicians in Egypt, there are strong indications that the Russians have not decided whether to place them along the Suez Canal.

That decision is a critical one, because it would risk the possible loss of hundreds of Soviet missile experts in predictable Israeli air attacks on the installations, both during and after construction.

So far, all indications are that the Russians are holding back on a decision. Thus, despite strong evidence that some of the estimated 20 or so missile assemblies already delivered, each with two to four launchers, are now all but installed, their location is deep in the Egyptian heartland.

When President Nasser travelled secretly to a Black Sea rendezvous with top Soviet military officials on Jan. 23, his most urgent request was for Soviet help in protecting three vital interior targets from the then-growing Israeli air assault: Cairo, Alexandria, and the Aswan Dam.

Nasser also wants SAM-3 protection for the active war zone along the 10-mile-wide strip bordering the Western edge of the Suez Canal. That, however, is the area of maximum danger.

Nasser's sudden decision two weeks ago to send his best MIG-21 fighters into the air to intercept Israeli aircraft was obviously intended to test whether his air force could control the skies for even short periods over the Canal. The result—nine kills by Israel against no losses—was the worst possible news for Moscow. It proved that Nasser's air force, suffering badly from a lack of pilots and maintenance, cannot provide a safe cover for Soviet technicians during the installation and operation of SAM-3s along the Suez Canal combat zone.

This leaves the Russians with several alternatives: they can risk massive Soviet casualties and move in now in an effort to install a serious SAM-3 defense system—a minimum 20 to 30 sites along the Canal—from the Mediterranean to the Gulf of Suez.

But the risks would be enormous, and there would be no assurance that, even at the cost of scores of Soviet casualties, the missile sites could actually be installed and the missiles actually fired.

Or the Russians could decide that the Egyptians, not themselves, should have the honor—and take the casualties—of installing and operating the SAM-3s along the Canal. That would involve a long delay, during which Egyptian technicians would be trained by the Russians to handle this highly-sophisticated anti-aircraft equipment.

That decision would continue the status quo along the Canal for several months, leaving Israeli aircraft free to neutralize Egyptian artillery sites as they've been successfully doing ever since last spring.

Finally, the Soviets could encourage Nasser to agree to a restoration of the cease-fire along the Suez Canal on the assumption that Israel would then stop its penetration of Egyptian air space.

There is reason to believe that if Nasser chose that course, and silenced his artillery, Israel would not only at once cease its air attacks but could be expected to permit Nasser to install SAM-3s—or any other equipment he wanted—along the Egyptian side of the Canal as long as the cease-fire was honestly in effect.

For Egypt's own advantage, then, a restoration of the cease-fire would have immediate and profound military advantages. To obtain it, Nasser would have to swallow his words of the past few months—that he will never agree to a cease-fire, much less negotiate, while an

Strength For Today

Inheritance Despised

We usually have scant appreciation for anything that has been given us; especially anything we have inherited.

It is interesting as well as discouraging to note this disposition with reference to the liberty we have inherited from our courageous forebears and the use we make of it. They had to achieve this liberty at the cost of sacrifice and persecution. They knew that they could retain their liberty only by subjecting themselves to a continuous self-discipline.

But we have inherited that liberty. We got it without any effort on our part. We appreciate liberty, but most of us do not see the relation between liberty and discipline. The world today appears to have gone insane over the idea of liberty. We must be free to do anything we want to do, to be as bad as we want to be; all of which we defend in the name of liberty. But if we had won this liberty for ourselves, we would see that liberty can only be achieved through sacrifice and retained through discipline.

We are swallowing a terrible dose of libertinism today because the modern world has achieved the blessings of liberty without having to work for them. We only appreciate what we work for.

Sunday Morning Notes

Construction work is still going on in The Daily Reflector building as workmen remodel the downstairs portion of the old building for use by the news department.

This meant that two doors had to be cut through a brick wall into the composing room. Since dust is an enemy of the computerized typesetting equipment in operation there some means had to be devised to keep the dust out of the composing room.

Workmen were assigned to box in the area in the composing room where the doors would open. Soon ply board enclosures appeared which look exactly like small houses sticking out in the composing room.

This brought out the creativeness among our compositors. Soon a half moon appeared on each of the enclosures. Underneath on one went the word "Men". On the other went "Ladies".

Other Editors Say
Beyond Age Limit

(The Durham Herald)

Youthful dissatisfaction with and concern over the Vietnam war goes beyond the administration of the draft, of course, but the operation of Selective Service has been an issue. So much of an issue did it become that it became necessary to replace Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the director of Slective Service since early World War II.

President Nixon has now appointed, and the Senate has confirmed, a replacement for General Hershey, whose retirement became effective Feb. 16, in the person of Curtis W. Tarr, an assistant secretary of the Air Force and a man with a special interest for Durham since he became president of Lawrence College after Dr. Douglas M. Knight came from Lawrence to Duke.

No one can predict, of course, how Mr. Tarr will do as director of the draft. He told the Senate Armed Services Committee that he is not sufficiently familiar with the system to form opinions on how it should be changed. But he can do much to restore confidence in the administration of the draft.

General Hershey was allowed to continue as director much too long, both for his own good and the country's. Had his retirement been required at age 70, the mandatory age for retirement in federal service unless a person is specifically asked to stay on by the President, the nation might have been spared some of the protests against Selective Service in the past several years. General Hershey was 70 in 1963, and both Presidents Kennedy und Johnson made the mistake of keeping him as director of Selective Service.

The nation has another comparable situation. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, is now 75. With crime on the marked increase in the country, the nation urgently needs a more intensive, more effective campaign against it. Obviously the U.S. needs a new, younger, more aggressive, more vigorous, more creative director of the F.B.I. Mr. Hoover has served well, but he, too, should have retired when he reached the age of 70. General Hershey was not indispensable to Selective Service, and Mr. Hoover is not indispensable to the F.B.I. President Nixon would serve the nation well by finding a new director for the F.B.I. also.

Tories Scent Victory

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI)—"As Maine goes, so goes the nation" ran the old political adage in the United States. British conservatives, who hope soon to topple Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government, are saying the same about London.

On April 9 the 5.5 million registered voters of the British capital go to the polls in elections for the Greater London Council.

This is the 100-member "parliament" that governs the vast amorphous urban sprawl of 620 square miles and 8 million population that claims to be the world's second largest city, after Tokyo.

Tories Seek Repeat Win

With more than one-sixth of the nation's total electorate of 33 million involved, the London contest is being watched this time as a general election in miniature—a sneak preview of the way the nation is likely to vote when Wilson orders national parliamentary elections, as he must do not later than Spring, 1971.

Three years ago the Conservatives grabbed control over London in a landslide victory after 33 continuous years of Laborite rule.

They won 82 council seats to only 18 for Labor. The Liberals and Communists failed to capture a single seat.

Trend Back To Labor

Even Conservative spokesmen concede they are unlikely to score a repeat performance on quite that scale.

In fact, in seven Greater London Council by-elections (special elections) in the past year there has been a sizeable swing back in favor of Labor.

Even so, unless public opinion polls and the predictions of British election experts are far off base, the Conservatives seem set for another three years in power in the nation's capital, probably by a reduced margin.

Labor is given a reasonable chance of winning in 12 city center boroughs out of a total of 32.

National Vs. Local Issues

Labor is particularly anxious to do so, because this would give it control of the so-called Inner London Education Authority—a kind of super-school board for the 432,000 children of the central area.

The Conservatives, determined to hang on to the prime political plum of London, are campaigning largely on national issues and on their own record of three years in office in the capital.

Desmond Plummer, conservative leader of the Greater London Council, is confident that teen-agers, voting for the first time in London since the minimum voting age was lowered Jan. 1 from 21 to 18, will support the Tories.

Sir Reginald Goodwin, Laborite opposition leader in London, is campaigning mainly on such local issues as city transit, housing, roads and local taxes.

Stirring Up Voters

Goodwin has splashed London with billboard posters referring to the capital as "Torytown" and blaming the Conservatives for all the ills that afflict London and every other vast city.

"So vote Labor back in Greater London April 9" goes the Laborite message.

One of the chief problems of both major parties is to beat lack of interest among the voters.

Standards For Annual Reports

By ELMER ROESSNER

ELMER ROESSNER

externally produced, graphic and similar to last year's.

So sayeth over 500 financial experts recently polled.

The group, surveyed by Robert S. Taplinger Associates, Inc., consisted of security analysts and financial professionals. They also indicated preference for:

- Simplified presidents' letters summarizing highlights in the body of the report;
- Five and ten year statistical tables of the firms' operations;
- Elimination of officers' and directors' pictures;
- Post - fiscal year information about the company;
- Listing the number of stockholders and the shareholdings of officers and directors.

Toss-Up

The answers were not unanimous. Many respondents disagreed with majority opinion. And in one case — whether an annual report should "sell" the company's products — pros and cons split exactly down the middle.

The profit - and - loss statement, not surprisingly, was the first - read item in an annual report for most. Second, and far back, was the president's letter, followed by the assets and liabilities table. Fourth choice, the lists of officers and directors, won no votes at all.

The primary audience for an annual report is the company's present stockholders, most agreed. The next most important audience, the financial community said, is the financial community. Potential shareholders were listed third. The general public did poorly as a fourth choice.

Multi-Purpose

A very large majority believed that an annual report can serve all four audiences. But more than half did not think the average annual report can serve as "a year-round instrument of corporate management."

Annual report writers apparently have hit the mark in length. Nearly 200 thought they were just about right while those that thought them too long and those that thought them too brief were almost evenly divided.

Significantly, most of the financial specialists read annual reports, even though they received an average of 865 a year. Moreover, the information gleaned from the reports materially affects their investment attitude toward the companies, they said.

A majority save all or most of the reports they receive. A minority save some. Only one threw them all away.

Observations From Editorial Columns

EQUALITY WITH A LITTLE EXTRA

In this country it is fairly easy and all too commonplace for a complacent and faceless majority to overlook and even forget the minorities. Hence all the constitutional safeguards for their protection and the wide latitude accorded them when they decide to seek redress.

In the case of the women, however, and the renewal of their struggle for equal rights, a novel problem arises. Women are not a minority in this country. They make up 51 per cent of the population.

According to reliable statistics, they own or control the larger share of its wealth and, presumably, cash most of the checks. And, by tradition, at least, through the duty they inherit to rock the cradle they pick up also the power to rule the world.

What the nation confronts here, then, is something a little different — an oppressed majority, and not a silent majority either, which has at its command every instrument of social and political change. What else the ladies want, then, unless it is superiority, is hard to figure out. — Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail

SCOTCH

When you visit Scotland, don't say the inhabitants are Scotch. They don't like it. The Scots say they are Scottish. Their beverage is Scotch.

Whisky (the Irish, Canadian and American versions are spelled whiskey) has been a product of Scotland for a good while. Legend has it that the Irish — who else? — were the first distillers. The stuff was cooked up as a cure for sick mules. When Irish pagans passed over to Scotland in one of those checkerboard migrations that afflicted those islands, the concoction was fed to human beings instead of mules.

We learn this in a book, "Scotch Whisky: Its Past and Present." It may explain why mules today are often so contrary. They're on the wagon and don't like it. — Atlanta (Ga.) Journal

RETROGRESSION?

Here we've been saying glibly that the present generation of young people is the brightest we've ever had. Then along comes educational scientists in Great Britain saying kids in 1914 were smarter.

They hasten to point out that they're speaking only of Great Britain. In a report comparing the marks scored by children half a century apart, the young people of 1914 scored significantly higher than today's pupils in every category. They averaged 100.3 in intelligence in 1914 against 99.5 in 1965.

Categories in which the 1914 students were better included reading accuracy, reading comprehension, spelling and arithmetic. Aha. How about space science and television? Or Driver Education? — Charlotte (N.C.) Observer

WON'T STOOP

Some people find it much easier to talk about organizing a conference on environmental improvement than to bend over and pick up a gum wrapper. — Charleston (S.C.) Evening Post

JUDGED BY THEIR BOOKS

If a man can be judged by the books he reads and the extent of his library, is it possible to appraise a nation by the subject matter of new books (and reprints) that publishers produce?

A comparison is available between the two English-speaking powers, the United States and England. According to the Bookseller, the total number of new and reprint titles published in the two countries annually is about the same and represents a doubling of the figures of two decades ago. But there were significant differences.

Major categories or subject matter of newly published books (or reprints) in the United States dealt with sociology and economics, followed by natural science, fiction and literature. The classification of subject matter in England gave top rank to adult fiction, followed by children's books and works in the field of political science. Far fewer children's books were totaled in the United States. In both nations, substantial declines were noted in books on religious and theological subjects.

On the basis of these findings, the United States has a priority of concern with social and financial problems, while England creates readership for entertainment and education of the young. And in both nations there is less attention to religion. — Wichita Falls (Tex.) Times

BE PREPARED NOT TO EAT

Almost everybody is organized now, including people on the welfare rolls. Their group, the National Welfare Rights Organization, is currently campaigning against the Nixon welfare reform bill, partly because they consider its guaranteed family income too low — they want $5,500 instead of $1,600 — and partly because they opposed the requirement that the able-bodied go to work.

Said the Welfare Rights leader, George E. Wiley, a former chemistry professor: "We're going to fight against forcing people to work in order to get welfare. We're prepared to beat it in the streets. We're prepared to refuse to take the jobs that are given to us."

We would remind the good professor of a quotation from the Second Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians: "If any would not work, neither should he eat."

Congress, we suggest, should say to all the ablebodied welfare pensioners who are "prepared to refuse to take jobs" that they should also be prepared to go hungry. A principle which was sound in the time of Paul is equally sound in the time of Richard. — Tampa (Fla.) Tribune

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, April 5, the 95th day of 1970. There are 270 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1792, President George Washington established a precedent when he vetoed a congressional bill dealing with representation.

On this date:

In 1614, the Indian princess, Pocahontas, was married in Virginia to the English colonist, John Rolfe.

In 1621, the Mayflower sailed from Plymouth, Mass., on its first return trip to England.

In 1827, the English surgeon who founded modern antiseptic surgery, Sir Joseph Lister, was born in London.

In 1841, Vice President John Tyler was preparing to take over as president after the death of President William Henry Harrison.

In 1939, all German children between the ages of 10 and 13 were ordered to serve in the Hitler Youth Organization.

A Conservative View

Looking Toward End Of Armed Service Draft

By J. J. KILPATRICK

It is altogether remarkable, when you consider the bitter turmoil surrounding the draft, how little attention has been paid to a well-reasoned proposal for ending it. Six weeks have passed since the President's Commission on an All-Volunteer Armed Force brought in its unanimous report, but nothing has come of it on Capitol Hill.

Not even the young people seem aroused. A college editor who sees dozens of campus newspapers says the all-volunteer idea has evoked scant discussion. Some of our young men, it appears, are less interested in solving their problem than in yelling about it. But one of the facts of political life is that only a squeaky wheel gets grease; the commission's proposal will surely die unless it attracts more support than it has drawn thus far.

The commission has recommended nothing that is revolutionary or even novel. Until 1947, the United States always had relied upon a voluntary armed force except for major wars. What the commission is urging is simply that we return to tradition: Let us put our first reliance upon regulars who serve by their own free choice.

Is the idea feasible? The commission is convinced that it is. In recent years we have become so accustomed to the draft that a notion has taken hold that all servicemen are the victims, directly or indirectly, of General Hershey's press - gang. This isn't so. All regulars with more than four years of service — 38 per cent of the total — are true volunteers. Roughly half of the 500,000 men who enlist each year also take up arms regardless of the draft.

What this means, in the commission's view, is that the problem of maintaining a stable force of, say, 2,500,000 volunteers is not nearly so difficult as many persons have assumed. Such a force can be achieved "by improving pay and conditions of service sufficiently to induce approximately 75,000 additional young men to enlist each year from the 1,500,000 men who will annually turn 19."

These inducements, granted, would cost a great deal of money. A basic pay increase alone would run to $2.7 billion a year. But the commission advances cogent arguments in support of this pay boost, no matter what becomes of the all - volunteer idea. In simple equity, our servicemen have a raise coming. The commission recommends that base pay for personnel in the first two years of service be hiked from $180 a month to $315 a month, with comparable increases for young officers.

Suppose, for the moment, that such a pay scale proved effective in terms of an all-volunteer force. Is such a force desirable?

On this point, reasonably minded men may disagree. It is objected, for example, that "volunteer" is no more than a pretty word for "mercenary." Many critics have speculated that the requisite pay scales would be so attractive to low - income blacks that a disproportionate number of Negroes would wind up in military service. There is some fear that a large professional army would pose a threat to civilian government.

The commission marshals effective responses to all these objections. Nothing in the nation's history, prior to 1948, suggests that an all - volunteer service is significantly different from a force composed of mixed regulars and conscripts. Negroes presently make up 10.6 per cent of the armed forces; they might constitute 15 per cent of all all-volunteer arrangement — hardly enough to have it said that whites were hiring blacks to defend the country for them.

From the military standpoint, the concept holds great attraction. While most draftees accept military service philosophically and become good soldiers, other spend their time fomenting dissension. The rate of reenlistment among conscripts is much lower than the rate among "true volunteers," which means that thousands of expensively trained men must be replaced every year. In war, as in most of the brutal games men play, experienced professionals are better than fresh - caught recruits.

All this makes sense to me. The idea ought to make sense also to the millions of young men who now suffer financial loss and personal disruption by reason of the draft. What are they waiting for? If they don't get behind the concept of an all - volunteer service, no one else is likely to push the concept for them.

An America Without Supermarkets Expected By End Of The Century

By CARL MILLER

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)— An America without supermarkets?

Research done at Battelle Memorial Institute here, indicates that American supermarkets — which currently receive most of the nation's food dollars—may be extinct by the end of the century.

They probably will be replaced within 30 years by home delivery services, small neighborhood specialty stores and prepared food outlets, according to this look into the future.

"Housewives' shopping patterns are changing," Gerald Collings, a research economist at Battelle, told UPI. "They want more convenient, quicker shopping to give them more leisure time."

Definite Trend

Collings said a preliminary study of consumer food shopping habits by Battelle showed a definite trend away from supermarket buying. Conversely, the study showed an increase in catalog sales, telephone ordering and home deliveries.

The supermarket came into being to give the housewife a vast array of goods from which to choose, he said, but this no longer is necessary.

The acceptance in recent years of prove-quality brand names and labels makes home delivery workable, not only of staple goods, but meats, vegetables, pastries and other groceries as well, he said.

"If she knows the canned soup, cube steak, or cream pie she orders this time will be the same as the one she bought a week ago, the housewife doesn't need to see it before she buys it," Collings said.

When home delivery becomes the chief method for consumers to obtain food, small neighborhood specialty food shops and prepared food outlets will appear in great numbers, Collings believes.

Specialty Stores

The specialty stores will provide the "pickup" items nearly everyone forgets t the market as well as fancy cuts of meat and other items the customer prefers to shop for individually.

The prepared food business, which already is growing by leaps and bounds, will reach a point where there may be as many outlets as there are service stations today, Collings predicted.

He said the logistics of home delivery of food should present no problem.

Delivery would be coordinated from a central warehouse from which the customer would order by telephone. Videophones or closed circuit television could allow the customer to view any or all of her order if she desired.

Collings believes the cost of home food delivery would equal or be less than the current overhead of supermarkets. Food prices also would be comparable or lower.

He pointed out that home delivery would not lend itself to "impulse buying" which helps boost supermarket profits. But neighborhood stores would benefit.

"Food processors and distributors will have to develop some new techniques to stimulate buying," he said.

To The Editor

In my reading I have come upon another message that I feel is quite pertinent to all. It is as follows.

An ancient king called in the wise men of his kingdom and asked them to compile for him all the wisdom of the ages.

After months of diligent research, they returned with their findings bound in twelve volumes.

The king commended them for their work but insisted that it was much too long. The intellectuals went to work, this time condensing the material.

Many weeks later, the wise men returned with only one volume. Again they were commended by their ruler but told to make the information even briefer.

Condensing all the wisdom of the ages into less than one volume posed a knotty problem. Wearily the scholars returned to their responsibliity.

Finally, the wise men brought in their findings, the results of years of research.

They handed the king a small slip of paper. Yes, they had distilled all the wisdom of the ages into one sentence. This was that sentence: "THERE AIN'T NO FREE LUNCH!"

The grammar may be wrong, but the concept is right—profoundly right! In the business of living, man never gets something for nothing.

You don't have to be a scholar to know this. You just have to be honest.

Perhaps the worst falsehood being perpetrated upon the people of modern America is at this point. Many young people finish their college training and, in spite of the many hours spent in class, they still approach life feeling that society owes them a living. Are they in for a rude awakening!

The implication coming from some people in government that citizens can have something for nothing bothers me. What is true for individuals is true for government. "There ain't no free lunch."

Everywhere one turns, he finds people who are satisfied to let others pay their bills. They think that they were born with "squatter's rights." They spend all their days hitchhiking on life's highways. They never contribute a fair share to anything and then have the audacity to consider their tactics as a smart maneuver.

People like this are in for hard days. The very laws of nature are opposed to them. Most of all, the laws of economics stand against them.

The lesson may seem elementary, but it's the beginning of all wisdom. In fact, it's the wisdom of the ages — "THERE AIN'T NO FREE LUNCH!"

Best regards,

Jazz A Legitimate Form Of Music, So It's Being Taught

Why teach jazz music in a university? The answer to that question is as simple as the music is complex.

Jazz music is a valid art form, one of the few which are uniquely American in origin, and is therefore a legitimate part of our music curriculum.

Jazz has, in fact, been taught at East Carolina University for two years now. It was born with uncertainty, as an experiment. It was nurtured with love and has developed into a thriving success.

One man has been responsible for continuing our heritage of jazz music at ECU. He is Joe Hambrick and he is living proof that the familiar saying 'Them that can't, teach', does not necessarily hold true.

Joe is a pro, and he has the credits to verify that. We don't have room to list them all, but among them are these: Joe has a master's degree in music; He played first trombone at one of Las Vegas' finest hotels for about two years; he has toured and played trombone with Al Hirt, Henry Mancini, Andy Williams and others; and he has recorded with some of the best big bands.

Joe, with the enthusiastic support of his fellow music faculty members, came to ECU and turned a group of 18 inexperienced students into an amazingly fine jazz ensemble. Within a few months after the program began, the first recital of the new ensemble received an enthusiastic reception.

The ensemble has since toured high schools in the Chesapeake, Va., area, has given several recitals at ECU and last April was invited to play at the annual North Carolina Symphony Ball, which was held at ECU for the first time. They gave a concert last October at a gathering of Merit Scholars, and most recently appeared on a March of Dimes telethon sponsored by a local television station.

Now Joe is planning his spring concert, jointly with our percussion ensemble, scheduled for Wednesday, April 22 at ECU. Aside from the ensemble itself, whose performances are one of the best bargains in live entertainment we know of — there is no admission fee — Joe has lined up an appearance by one of the nation's top drummers, Roy Burns. For those unfamiliar with Burns, he has played for Benny Goodman, Count Basie, Sy Zentner, Joe Bushkin, Peter Nero, Duke Ellington, Lionel Hampton and many others. He is now staff artist for Rogers Drums and is appearing as a clinician and soloist with the jazz and percussion ensembles.

Changing tastes and forms in music may have ended the heyday of the big bands, but as long as there is an audience, jazz music and its interpreters are here to stay. Joe Hambrick, motivated by an intense desire to continue that heritage, turned to teaching at ECU in order to instill in young musicians the appreciation of a type of music that has played its way from Bourbon Street to Moscow. — LEO JENKINS.

It is generally assumed a larger turnout this time will help Labor. London's Labor Party leaders are working hard to beat apathy among their usual supporters. They know another big Conservative victory in London would spell bad nneeds indeed for Wilson.

The August U.S. Senate Assumes Some Unpleasant Earmarks

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

The Senate of the United States likes to think of itself as occupying a sort of legislative pedestal.

And well it may. It has been described, approvingly, as the world's most deliberative body and its most exclusive club. It's easy to bask in such superlatives. They imply a remoteness from the mundane and the crass.

But the Senate today appears as no such august body, ruled by logic and judgment based on the interest of the nation. It is taking on more and more of the earmarks of easy yielding to special interests with those particular politial strengths best described as money and votes.

The big influences in the Senate today are not hard to identify. First, there is organized labor, especially the huge AFL-CIO. Second, there are the "professional" negro and negro organization leaders. The so-called intellectual elite, drawn from the campuses and from segments of the business and professional world.

While these groups may have different regards for each other, they do have a few things in common. They belong with the political left. They are wheels in the Democratic party. All have influence with important voting blocs and labor has huge amounts of money for campaigns. And each has a passionate dislike for the South, although they may at times, give different reasons.

These are the influences which work to keep government spending high and fought last year to reduce tax revenues, regardless of the consequences on inflation. They feel they have enough votes in the Democratic majorities of the Senate and the House to head off legislation they consider objectionable. In other words, they can keep the Republican Administration from bringing about statutory reforms.

What they worry about is that Nixon will manage to put a halter on the political left through appointments to the federal courts and the commissions that interpret the laws.

And this is what all the fuss over nomination of Harrold Carswell is all about. It is the same process which was used to kill off the nomination of Judge Clement Haynsworth.

In neither instance has opponents to confirmation come up with any sound case. They talk about a lack of distinguished decisions and a background (meaning Southern) which makes the nominees "insensitive" to problems of race and poverty. They forget that Justice Hugo L. Black had to fight a youthful connection with the K. K. K. and that Justice Douglass, one of their darlings, could hardly qualify for a good conduct ribbon.

The fights against the two men have been aimed at Nixon objectives, the attainment of which could well cut deeply into the political might of the left wingers.

One Nixon is to build political strength for himself in the South and to also build strength for his party. In this respect, both the Haynsworth and Carswell nominations had political implications — a Southerner on the high court, which would be a sizeable concession. But other Presidents have played politics with the court — saw to it that their was a Jewish member, for example, and more recently a Negro.

The other Nixon objective is to bring about more of a political or ideological balance on the court. This goes against the left in a very direct way. It is in the federal judiciary that the liberals long have had their way.

One thing that has tightened the grip of labor unions on individual Senators is the poor house conditions of Democratic party finances. With the party hard up, Senators facing reelection this year find labor money especially attractive.

But Nixon is having trouble with some of his own party members, too, especially in areas where the unions have strong power. Senate Republican leader Scott of Pa. is a prime example. He has never been considered a strong man. And with the unions threatening him, he is proving weak.

The verdict on Carswell will come this week. If he fails to make it, Nixon might as well leave the court vacancy go until after the November elections. Some Senate upsets then could change a lot of minds.

Group Campaigns Against Handicap Of Illiteracy

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Do you know someone who cannot read and write? Do you realize how great his handicaps are?

Even the housewife who does not have to meet the public every day is severely hampered. She cannot read labels on cans and packages. She cannot read directions or even words like left front, right rear, and the like on a kitchen range or the words and numbers on the dials of a washing machine. She cannot get a driver's license, vote, or read her child's report card, much less give him assistance with his school work. Her life, no matter how active, is limited and she cannot be the best citizen possible. Often, also, she feels a certain amount of stigma, some real, some within her own consciousness.

"Anyone reading this article who knows someone who cannot read and write but would like to, should do one of two things: He should see that a member of the Literacy Council of Pitt County is enlisted to teach him or he should attend a nine-hour tutoring course to be offered here in April to qualify himself to teach his friend," Mrs. Tom Davis, chairman and resource person of the Council said.

The Literacy Council of Pitt County is only a few months old, but already some 22 tutors are teaching some 25 students to read and write or to improve their limited skills in these fields. The Council promotes the "each one teach one" teaching method devised by Dr. Frank Laubach, who has taught people all over the world to read and write in many different languages.

"Each one teach one" means just what it says — that teaching is done on a one-to - one basis and that the person who learns to read can and should feel obligated to teach someone else. Dr. Laubach, who is now 86 years old, is still a world traveler promoting his efforts to make this a literate planet. He and his followers believe it is the duty of the good citizen and the Christian to give his illiterate brother "not charity, but a chance" by teaching him to read and write.

"Anyone who can read and who has a kind heart can be made into a good teacher in our workshop," Mrs. Davis said.

The first literacy workshop was held here last October and was really the beginning of the Council. Some 47 persons represented several communities in the county, including Greenville, Farmville, Falkland, Scotland Neck, Wilson, Grifton, and Washington. As soon as the course was completed, teaching began. Several students who were completely illiterate have already advanced to a second grade reading level.

The Laubach method consists of reducing the basic sounds and representative words of a language to a series of charts, primers, and other reading materials. The language needing to be taught is combed for words that may be linked by a picture - letter - sound technique and drawn on a large chart. See the illustration on this page entitled, VISUAL PUNS, which is what Dr. Laubach has called this technique.

The proponent of mass literacy believes there is nothing better for a newly literate person than to share his new - found skill with someone else. "It will crystallize all he has learned," Dr. Laubach said, "and will give him a feeling of self - respect and importance and will train him in the spirit of sharing. If every learner becomes a teacher, each literacy program will expand by geometric progression."

Dr. Laubach has said of each individual tutor - pupil situation: "If you sit down beside an illiterate as your equal, your heart overflowing with love for him, and with a prayer on your lips that you may help him to a new vision, if you never frown or criticize, but look pleased and surprised and praise him for his progress, a thousand silver threads wind about his heart and yours."

"This seems to me to be a wonderful way of producing good will and strengthening ties between people of different races and religious and denominational beliefs," Mrs. Davis said.

The need for new tutors here is already being seen and the Council is planning a workshop for April 14-16, with 25 in each of two classes, one to be given at night and one during the day.

The literacy movement here had its beginnings when Mrs. Tom Davis, wife of the general secretary of the Albermarle Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, was asked to go to Atlanta to a southwide literacy meeting. She brought the knowledge and materials she gained there back here and shared both with other church people, who arranged the first workshop soon afterward.

Other local Literacy Council officers besides Mrs. Davis and Mrs. John Grier and Mrs. Carl Moore, vice chairmen; Mrs. J. C. Whitehurst, secretary; and Rev. Tom Loftis, treasurer. Besides carrying on the work of teaching illiterates, the group is always ready to provide a speaker for any church or civic organization whose members are interested in learning more about the cause.

Pitt Technical Institute has assisted the Council considerably in providing some materials and much advice about teaching reading and writing. It is hoped that many of the persons now being tutored will advance into the remedial education program at Pitt Tech.

A weekly paper called News For You, which presents world news and interesting features in the very simplest words for beginning readers, is paid for by Pitt Tech for each student.

Other financial support has come from interested individuals and groups, including churches, civic clubs. More funds for purchasing materials is needed. Contributions will be received by any of the officers.

VISUAL PUNS . . . is the way Dr. Frank Laubach, who has devised charts of this type in many languages, describes this teaching aid. It has proved to be an excellent way for non-readers to associate letter and sounds with familiar objects.

Nursing Home Additions Open

Ribbon cuttings, talks by V.I.P.'s, special music, guided tours, and refreshments will be the order of the day when two new additions to the Greenville Nursing and Convalescent Home are officially opened for public viewing this afternoon.

Percy Cox, Greenville mayor pro tempore, will welcome visitors at 1:15 p.m. Comments will be made by Congressman Walter B. Jones; State Rep. Horton Rountree; Erwin Brown, executive director of Community Health Facilities, which owns the home; and Dan Powell of Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

Mayo Allen, director of the home, said he has invited Dr. Howard Gradis, Pitt Memorial Hospital chief of staff, and Dr. E. B. Aycock, who has the largest number of patients of any docotr who serves the nursing home, to cut the ribbons to the new additions.

Capt. Al Smith, commander of the local Salvation Army unit, and Rev. Russell Davis, pastor of Boyd Memorial Presbyterian Church, will cut the ribbon to the new chapel and will conduct brief services there.

Tours, which begin at 2:30 p.m., will be conducted by Mrs. Laurel Patton, director of nursing, and the entire nursing staff. The home beautician, Mrs. Helene Riddick, will greet visitors in the improved beauty shop, and Mrs. Maria Zincomb, registered physical therapist, will show them the new physical therapy room and equipment.

Refreshments will be served between 3 and 5 p.m. in the dining room, while musical entertainment is provided in the central court.

The full staff will be on hand for the afternoon, Allen said.

Some 43 beds have been added to the home's capacity. Of these, one-third are in private rooms. Each room has its own bath and thermostat control.

Besides the new and improved facilities mentioned earlier, a laundry, a nursing station, several storage rooms, an in-service training classroom, and an examination room have been added.

Participate In Gospel Concert This Evening

MISS FLORENCE DANIELS

MISS SANDRA MOORE

Miss Florence Daniels and Miss Sandra Moore of "The Crusaders" will be the two principal participants in a gospel concert Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at Rock Spring FWB Church.

Miss Daniels, a Rose High School senior, will be the featured soloist. She will do an original interpretation of familiar church melodies and traditional spirituals.

Miss Moore, also a senior at Rose High School, will accompany The Crusaders at the piano, while the director - organist, Johnny Wooten, will conduct.

Horse Show Set Here For Sunday, May 3

The date for the 11th Annual Greenville Horse Show, sponsored jointly by the local Jaycee chapter and the Greenville Saddle Club, has been set for Sunday, May 3rd.

Announcement of the show was made last night by Jaycee president Jim Lesley following their regular meeting.

Lesley also announced that the chapter's proceeds from the show will be donated to the Greenville Boys Club.

The Class "A" Show, one of the largest in the Coastal Plain Horse Show Circuit, will be held at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

ECU Grad Wins State Honor

Three Appointees For Pitt FHA Office Are Announced

Three appointments for the Pitt County Office of the Farmers Home Administration have been announced by James T. Johnson, state director of the farmers Home Administration.

Charles Mac Whitehurst and Jimmy F. Smith have been appointed assistant county supervisors for FHA and Mrs. Lorene O. Phillips has been named assistant county office clerk.

Smith lives at 27 Memorial Dr., and is a 1969 graduate of North Carolina State University, where he majored in Animal Science. He is a native of Conway.

Whitehurst, a resident of Ayden, is a 1959 graduate of North Carolina State University where he majored in Mechanized Agriculture.

Prior to his appointment with FHA, he was a farmer in the Ayden Community and served as Farm Manager for Planters National Bank on a part time basis.

Mrs. Phillips, a resident of Grifton, was previously employed by the Pitt County ASCS office as a marketing recorder during the tobacco marketing season.

The FHA is an agency of the United States Department of Agriculture serving farmers and rural people with credit and supervision.

Miss Elizabeth Stevens Weds Saturday Afternoon

Miss Elizabeth Anne Stevens, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Willis R. Stevens of Greenville, became the bride of Ronny Lamont Jordan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Loys A. Jordan Sr. of Greenville, S. C., on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The father of the bride officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The altar vases were filled with white snapdragons and crystal clear chrysanthemums flanked by single candleholders. In the background were semi-circle and spiral candelabra surrounded by urns of tall woodwardia fern. At the altar was a prie-dieu where the bride and bridegroom took their vows, exchanged rings and knelt for the wedding prayer and benediction.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Paul Toll, organist, and Mrs. Thomas Loftis, soloist, who sang "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee" and "The Greatest Of These Is Love".

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her brother, Willis R. Stevens Jr., escorted her to the altar. She wore an Angelo Original gown of silk faced peau and lace. Pearled and scalloped alecon lace formed the Camelot neckline and accented the empire bodice and Camelot long sleeves. The modified A-line silhouette had the matching lace scallops extending down the front of the skirt and across the hemline. Soft box pleats falling from the hi-rise bodice back swept into a full chapel train.

Her headdress was a styled formal length mantilla edged in matching lace and held in place by a prayer caplet of alencon lace and seed pearls. She carried a bride's Bible centered with a bouquet of phalaenopsis and white cattleya orchids showered with narrow satin.

Serving the bride as maid of honor, Miss Wanda A. Connor of Asheville, wore a formal gown of maize chiffon fashioned in the empire silhouette. The moulded bodice featured short cap sleeves and a scooped neckline. A pastel colored Venise lace trim encircled the bodice from which a full floating panel fell over the slim skirt back. She wore a four-tier bouffant head veil of illusion caught underneath a matching cluster of flowers. She carried a nosegay of spring flowers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. J. C. Giles of Greenville, S. C., sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Ronald Stewart of Williamsburg, Va., Mrs. W. D. Uzzle of Raleigh, and Miss Ruth S. King of Raleigh, cousin of the bride. They wore identical ensembles to that of the honor attendant and carried identical flowers.

Loys A. Jordan Sr. served his son as best man. Ushers were Loys A. Jordan Jr. of Rockledge, Fla., brother of the bridegroom, Frank H. Stevens of Raleigh, brother of the bride, Zane H. Hall, Eugene M. Paul, Jack N. Lister, and Joe C. Giles, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, all of Greenville, S. C.

The bride's mother chose a dress of delphinium blue crepe with crown collar and long bishop sleeves, appliqued with wild rose design illusion lace. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of white cymbidium orchids.

The mother of the bridegroom was attired in a pale pink textured ensemble with rolled cuffed collar of Venise lace and chiffon scarf. The lace covered torso body was accented by a chiffon tie. She wore matching accessories and a white cymbidium orchid corsage.

Reception

Following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception at their home.

The bride's table was covered with a floor length imported lace and satin cloth and centered with a silver bowl holding white camellias and carnations flanked by lighted white tapers in silver candelabra.

The bride's book was on an antique desk centered by a wedding candle and the bride's picture.

Dr. and Mrs. J. V. Early greeted guests and Mr. and Mrs. Willis R. Stevens Jr. presented them to the receiving line composed of the bridal couple's parents, the bridal couple and the bride's attendants.

Cousins of the bride assisted in serving throughout the home. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stevens invited guests to register. Mrs. Elma Pegram and Mrs. Leola Price presided over the bride's book. Mr. and Mrs. Talton Jones invited guests for refreshments.

Mrs. Robert M. Hensley and Mrs. Charles King, aunts of the bride alternated in pouring punch. Cousins of the bride, Mrs. Clara Lee Gurley and Mrs. Ina Warrick, served the wedding cake, after the first slice had been cut by the bride and bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Jones directed the guests to the gift room and good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Macy Hoyle. Other assisting in serving were Mrs. Bryant Tripp, Mrs. Tom Loftis and Mrs. Mary Anne Rimmer.

An after-rehearsal party was given for the bridal party and out-of-town guests on Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Loys A. Jordan Sr., parents of the bridegroom, in the Blue Room of the Candlewick Inn.

The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of blue and yellow spring flowers flanked by white tapers in silver eandelabra and covered with a white floor length satin cloth.

Guests were greeted by the host and hostess and were assisted in serving by Mrs. Joe Giles, Mrs. Zane Hall, Mrs. Jack Lister and Mrs. Eugene Paul.

On Saturday, Mrs. Willis R. Stevens Jr. and Mrs. Ida McKinnon of New Bern honored the bride, her attendants and mothers of the couple at a luncheon at the Holiday Inn, Greenville. The bride's table was decorated with wedding bells and an arrangement of spring flowers.

On Thursday morning prior to the wedding, Mrs. Fred Mattox, Mrs. Joe Goodson, Mrs. Ford McGowan and Mrs. Thomas Whitehurst honored the bride with a coffee at the home of Mrs. Whitehurst.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride wore a red, white and blue print knit ensemble with sleeveless coat and navy accessories. Her corsage was an orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet.

Mrs. Jordan graduated from New Hanover High School and attended Wesleyan College of Rocky Mount. She is now employed as secretary-bookkeeper at The Carolina Filter Co., Inc. Charlotte.

Mr. Jordan graduated from Hampton High School and Greenville Tech, Extension Branch of Clemson College, Greenville, S. C. He is now employed as a law enforcement officer with the City of Charlotte and plans to continue his education in that field at the University of N. C. in Charlotte, where the couple will make their home.

How To Make The Most Out Of Sewing At Home

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — Thinking of home sewing? If so, you're in good company, for latest figures have it that at least 40,000,000 American women — motivated by rising clothing prices, poor workmanship on ready-to-wear merchandise, or the sheer joy of doing it yourself on a sewing machine — are now making all or part of their wardrobes.

Here are some hints that will help you do this sensibly, in such a way that you can save yourself real money:

1—It's wise to comparison-shop for a sewing machine at all times, but particularly so if this is your first machine. Make sure, for example, that you get a trouble-free machine. If yours turns out to be a snagger, this can ruin expensive fabric even after you have gone to the trouble of cutting your pattern. Don't be dazzled by a maze of dials and control knobs; only a few are really needed to make a sewing machine versatile.

2—Buy fabrics off-season. Now that spring is here, you will find good buys in fall fabrics, and the reverse will be true six months from now. Visit as many fabric stores, or fabrics counters in your department or specialty shops, as your time permits, and keep a calendar of their special sales. Keep an eye out for so-called remnant stores, which often handle costly designer fabrics left over by major dress houses.

3—In buying fabrics yardage, find that happy medium between too much and too little, between being too lavish and too stingy. You are always safe with a bit too much fabric. Should you run short, though, you may find that your store is out of the particular fabric you are using, and your original investment may be lost.

4—Use remnants to good advantage — for things like throw pillows, and for dress and suit accessories. Make sure you have a convenient place to store the remnants from your own sewing projects, for they too will come in handy. Hint: store your remnants in plastic bags so you can see at a glance what you have on hand.

5—When shopping for fabrics, insist on getting information about their sewing characteristics. Nothing can be so frustrating as attempting stitches that a fabric is not created to accept. You may need special thread, for example, for best results with certain types of fabric.

7—Plan a good pattern file. You will soon find yourself able to combine elements from previously used patterns to create a brand new design.

8—No matter how eager you are to start sewing, take your time in cutting the pattern accurately. This is probably the stage at which the costliest mistakes are made.

9—You can acquire sewing skills most quickly and authoritatively by taking advantage of the sewing instruction offered by your dealer when you buy your machine. A good course in home sewing will help save you time as well as money in your projects.

10—One of the best safeguards against costly repairs is to aske the showroom expert to teach you required maintenance and minor repairs, which can save you the price and delay of a service call.

11—Don't let your creative urge divert you from an important money-saving use of your sewing machine: mending small rips on garments you already own, and making alterations — like changing a miniskirt to a midi, or vice versa.

12—Most important, be sure you plan to take your home sewing seriously and that you use your sewing machine regularly. Otherwise you may be throwing money away on an expensive piece of equipment, one that can cost as much as $500 and that averages about $250. The amount you will be saving depends on how often your sewing machine is used. A $250 machine can pay for itself in a month if it is used every day. But if it stands idle, it will never pay.

Civil Ceremony May Stop Church Wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

[© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I started dating a boy who I met in my last year of high school. We announced our engagement this past October. We planned a May wedding. At the end of January we could wait no longer so we slipped away and were married by a Justice of the Peace in the next state. We had no problem for we are both of age. Things have gone quite well for us until now.

Now the heartbreak is setting in. As I said before, we planned to marry in May. All plans have been made—church, gowns, and even the invitations have been sent. Yesterday, while talking to a friend, I learned that if the priest finds out that we have already been married by a J. P. he can refuse to marry us in the church. For we have been "living in sin," according to church laws.

Now I am confused. When the priest questions us should we lie to him about our present situation? Can he turn us down for what we've done? I always thought that God forgives all. We would like to rectify the wrong we've done, if it was really wrong. We are really planning on being married in church and it would kill our parents if they knew the truth for they are planning on it as much as we.

Please answer as soon as possible, for our meeting with the priest is in three weeks.

VERY MUCH CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: As a member of the Catholic church you are subject to its laws. By your secret marriage you have broken faith with this code. This fact poses a serious, but not insurmountable, problem for your parish priest.

The Catholic church teaches that the sacraments [of which marriage is one] "are for the benefit of the people of God." Hence I am sure that the priest in your parish will receive you well when you see him. Do so at once. When he questions you, tell him the whole truth. Remember that his life is dedicated to helping his people. You need his help. Call on him, trust him, and follow his counsel.

DEAR ABBY: Is it true that you had a Jewish father?

NOSY

DEAR NOSY: Yup. And a Jewish MOTHER, too!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married for nearly 10 years. We had a family. We were then divorced, but remained friends just the same. After 4 years of being divorced, we decided to give it another chance, so we are going to get married again.

My question: We want all our friends to know of our decision. Would it be in good taste to send our "announcements" saying something like, "JACK AND MARY ARE BACK TOGETHER AGAIN" or maybe, "Announcing the re-uniting of the SMITH family." We honestly don't know what is proper. Can you help us? If anyone reading your column has ever been thru this we would welcome their suggestions.

NAMELESS IN ILLINOIS

DEAR NAMELESS: Either of your above ideas is fine. If any of my readers have "been there" and have a suggestion, I'll pass it on.

DEAR ABBY: When I see women with legs like an elephant—or women with pouter pigeon bodies perched on stork-like legs wearing mini-skirts, I am ashamed of my own sex!

LUCY FROM THE OZARKS

DEAR LUCY: Didn't the Arkansas Traveler say, "There's no substitute for common sense"?

Up tight? Take a bath. Soaking in warm water and extra-thick soapsuds can do a lot to relax you.

Cameron-Gilland Vows Exchanged In Ceremony

GRIFTON — St. Mark's Episcopal Church here was the scene of the wedding of Miss Wanda Jean Gilland and John Erastus Cameron II on Saturday at 5:00 p. m.

William Barrett officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Sylvia Warren of Grifton, organist.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gilland of Grifton and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cameron of Kinston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length white chiffon gown over tissue faille made with an empire waistline. The front bodice was rounded at the neckline and had chantilly lace appliques re-embroidered with seed pearls and iridescents with self - bow at center front. The elbow length sleeves were of lace and the back bodice was low cut and the lace applique from the front formed a small collar on the back. The lace edged the back panels from the necklines and featured small bow closings. The A-line skirt was banded at the hem with lace and had appliques on the front.

Her veil of imported illusion was outlined with chantilly lace and was worn mantilla style over a full length veil. She carried a white Bible centered with a small bouquet of bride's roses and lily-of-the - valley showered with satin ribbons.

Miss Ella Mann of Grifton was maid of honor. She wore a formal length blue chiffon over linen gown with an empire waistline. The bodice was ivory with puffed sleeves and rounded neckline. The back bodice had blue satin - covered buttons. She carried a nosegay of daisy pom pons and baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Miss Pamela McLawhorn and Mrs. Emily Riley both of Grifton, cousins of the bride, Miss Sue Ipock of Kinston and Mrs. Kathy Cameron of Farmville, sister - in - law of the bridegroom.

The attendants wore gowns identical to the maid of honor's differing slightly in color. They carried nosegays of daisy pom pons and baby's breath.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Charles Smith of Ayden, Tommy Riley of Grifton, Everette Cameron of Farmville, brother of the bridegroom, Bill Post of Sanford and Robert E. Cameron of Northport.

A reception, given by the bride's parents, was held at the home of Mrs. Richard Nelson and Mrs. Jean Williams.

Following a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Grifton.

The bride attended East Carolina University and is employed by the Pitt County Board of Education.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Mercer University in Georgia. He is a pharmacist and owns Grifton Pharmacy.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at Kings Barbeque, Kinston. The cake cutting was held at the rehearsal dinner.

FAMILY DINNER

Use leftover cooked rice in this delicious concoction.

Veal Chops with Tomato Sauce
Mashed Potatoes Okra Salad Bowl
Bread Tray Chockful of Rice Pudding

CHOCKFUL OF RICE PUDDING

2 cups cooked rice
1-3rd cup raisins
2 large eggs
½ cup sugar
2 cups milk, scalded
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

In a buttered 1½-quart glass loaf dish (8⅜ by 4½ by 2¾ inches), with a fork, mix the rice and raisins. In a small mixing bowl beat eggs enough to combine yolks and whites. Stir in the sugar, then the scalded milk, salt and vanilla. Pour over rice-raisins; sprinkle with nutmeg.

Place loaf dish in a small roasting pan (13 by 9 by 2 inches. To the pan add enough very hot tap water—about two quarts —to come up high. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a small metal spatula, inserted about one inch from side, comes out clean or with only a few shreds of custard on it—one to one and a quarter hours. Serve warm or chilled with "pour" cream. Makes six servings. Raisins sink to bottom.

COMPANY DINNER

Unusual and delectable dessert for gourmets.

Curry of Shrimp,
Lobster and Crab Steamed Rice
Chutney Tossed Green Salad
Oranges Chablis Beverage

ORANGE CHABLIS

1½ cups chablis or other dry white wine
1-3rd cup sugar
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 cinnamon stick
4 whole cloves
6 medium oranges

In a serving bowl stir together the chablis, sugar and nutmeg until sugar dissolves; add cinnamon and cloves. Cut peel away from oranges so no white membrane remains; slice into thin rounds removing any seeds and discarding ends. Add oranges to wine mixture. Cover tightly and refrigerate six hours or overnight to allow flavors to blend. Makes six servings.

NOTE: A 4-5 pint bottle of wine may be used in this recipe.

Marines Had Sweet Recruits

EXETER, England (WNS)—The Marines came to the rescue when 30 coeds from Exeter University were named to march as drum majorettes in the Rag Day parade here in April. Corporal Thomas Murphy and Corporal Frank Panton of the Royal Marines at Lympstone were assigned to give the girls three weeks of intensive training. "The sweetest bunch of recruits I ever had," beamed Corporal Panton. Recruit Nikki Salisbury, 20, commented, "You wouldn't know they felt that way from their actions. It's mostly sweat and not very much sweet."

France Has Counsel-Shy Men

PARIS (WNS) — Marriage counsellors, who are comparatively new in France, report that husbands are finally beginning to accept them. In 1967, only 5 per cent of husbands accompanied their wives to marriage counsellors for advice. Now the percentage has risen to 17. The rest of the counsellors for advice. Now the percentage has risen to 17. The rest of the consultations were individual: 65 per cent attended by women, and 18 per cent by men in 1969. The golden rule of French marriage counsellors: "Don't give any rules."

Originator Of Worst-Dressed List Says: Don't Blame The Women

By ARLEEN ABRAHAMS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

That maverick of the fashion world, designer Mr. (Richard) Blackwell, says this year, for the first time in a decade, he suffered "terrible pangs of conscience" composing his annual list of worst-dressed women.

"Not that I worried about being outspoken or hurting anyone's feelings—I adore having people hate me—but I felt why blame the women," explained the flamboyant handsome former movie actor. "The blame should fall on those designers who have intimidated and brainwashed these women into wearing their clothes."

As he paused to comb his graying sideburns and adjust the shawl collar of his black mink coat, he reflected upon the public figures he had named to the list this year: Queen Elizabeth II, Barbra Streisand, Raquel Welch, Jacqueline Susann, Goldie Hawn, Carol Burnett, Doris Day, Shirley Temple, Mae West and Ann-Margret.

"Let's take No. 1, Queen Elizabeth," continued the Los Angeles resident. "Let's not blame the queen; let's blame her dressmaker, Hartnell, who I feel is terribly antiquated in his fashion concepts.

"Granted the queen's position influences her fashion choices. I agree with keeping her dresses to the knees but that doesn't mean the cut and line can't be modern. And protocol doesn't demand she wear only the one strand of pearls. Nor does tradition specify millinery 10 years behind the times or call for the big, oversized satchels, which she calls a purse," he elaborated.

Balenciaga is the designer he would choose to dress the queen. "He'd make her look like a royal lady, a royal figure who represents an extremely fashion-conscious nation."

Although Blackwell claims there is no one hard and fast rule for getting on his worst-dressed list—"the problem is individual"—he cites a woman's "total disregard for her own image, age and position in life" as being most offensive.

Elizabeth Taylor and Zsa Zsa Gabor, both named to his hall of fame for making the list three consecutive years, share a common disregard for individual figure problems, he says.

"Miss Taylor never acknowledged her size problem. For too many years, she's squashed herself into clothes too small for her figure."

Zsa Zsa, he points out, "overdresses from the waist down and exaggerates her figure problems, instead of framing her face, which is beautiful, or emphasizing her jewelry, which is magnificent." If it were up to him, he'd dress her in very simple, uncluttered styles, "maybe emphasizing a special neckline or a vivid color."

A woman who wishes to be well dressed, he says, must learn to disregard the dictates of fashion snobbery and be real, be herself. "She should concern herself with who she is, what she is, her particular figure problems and her position as a woman in view of her husband's role. No man wants to come home to Yves Saint Laurent's decision of what a woman should look like," Blackwell comments.

He insists, "For 90 per cent of American women, the total concept of high fashion is wrong. Small portions of haute couture should be applied, however, so the woman looks as of today."

Blackwell, who says he loves making fashion sense even more then he enjoys collecting his beloved antiques, claims most designers have lost sight of their role. "We're here to be of service to women, to make them more beautiful by dressing them in the best way possible. We're not here to set ourselves up as kings or judges or to appraise their measurements." His own designs are executed with one basic idea: A woman is a woman for a good reason and for a man to admire. "And if a woman doesn't have a man around to admire her, then she's not a complete woman," philosophizes the never-married designer.

With the introduction of the midi for spring, Blackwell believes the haute-couture designers finally may have done themselves in. "We're sitting at the funeral, businesswise, for high fashion. Stores, stuck with an abundant stock of minis, started advertising three skirt lengths and many women, adverse to the thought of instantly outdating their wardrobe, took to the idea. This may spell the end of dictates from designers."

Not that he is dead-set against the midi. "I like what I can do with this length, particularly for after-dinner costumes, theater costumes and after-5 outfits," he notes. However, he doesn't feel the midi is a contemporary enough look for daytime.

"Fine fashion should be a total evolution of concepts," he concludes. "It should evolve very gracefully over, say, a 10-year-period. Perhaps once in a decade we could have a smashing change. But why should a wardrobe be outdated instantly?" he asks.

(Tips On Accessories)

Accessories are essential in the home. They have an exclusive way of reflecting the homeowner's personality and individual, artistic touches. Small as they may be, their impact is tremendous.

They may not attract attention until removed. Then, right off the bat, a guest will ask, "What has happened to that unusual ashtray you had on the lamp table?"

Among the most popular of accessories is the decorated box. It may be of wood, china, metal or leather. The fact that it is usually empty does not detract from its decorative value!

Accessories include lamps, ashtrays, boxes, dishes, drawings, small photographs, porcelains, flowers and plants.

Good taste is a must in their selection. Further good taste is vital in their arrangement.

Speaker Sees A 'Lousy Job' In Fiscal Policies

One of the nation's leading mortgage bankers predicted Friday that money for long-term mortgages "is going to be hard to come by and is still going to be very expensive" for months to come.

"We may see a slight easing toward the end of this year and the beginning of next year, but it will be very slight," said Charles P. Landt, president of Cameron - Brown Co., Raleigh, N. C.

The problem of adequate and available mortgage capital is compounded by the fact that during the next 30 years the nation will need at least 75 million living units in the form of houses, apartments, mobile homes and the like, Landt said.

"The mortgage banker must play an important role in achieving these necessary goals," he said. "Frankly, the entire financial fraternity of our country has been doing a pretty lousy job.

"Our fiscal policies have been confused with monetary policies causing inflation and high interest rates on money.

"What it boils down to is that there is no way to mix politics with economics. This is being attempted every day, but oil and water will not mix. (I will not say which is oil and which is water.)"

Landt spoke at a morning session of a Mortgage Bankers Day program conducted by the School of Business Administration, East Carolina University. The daylong program was attended by a number of mortgage bankers from across the state and by ECU Business Administration students and staff under Dr. James H. Bearden, dean.

Landt said it is the job of the mortgage banker "to go to every conceivable source of funds" in order to meet the challenge.

In support of his prediction that long - term mortgage money will remain scarce and expensive, Landt said a recent reduction in prime interest rates charged by banks "really has nothing to do with a possible lowering of the general interest rate levels."

Actually, the term "prime rate" has very little meaning because there is no definition for a "prime borrower," he said.

Furthermore, Landt said, "it has no meaning in North Carolina because of our out-of-date usury laws which set a ceiling of eight per cent for the purchase of a house. Consequently we have already been under the prime rate and I cannot see a lender making further sacrifices in lowering the rate just because the prime rate went down."

In addition to Landt, speakers on the program included Robert B. Ferguson Jr., vice president, Wachovia Mortgage Co., Winston - Salem; Lawrence Crockett, president, Stockton, White and Co., Raleigh, and W. Jerry Gillis, assistant vice president, Cameron - Brown Co., Durham.

Lewis O. Kerwood, senior director, Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America, Washington, was a panel moderator, and the program was opened by Dean Bearden.

Falkland School Registration To Be On April 15

FALKLAND — Parents of children who will enter Falkland Primary School next year have been advised by Joshua Potter, principal, about what items they need to return to the school or to carry to registration day Wednesday, April 15 between 9 a. m. and noon.

Potter said information blanks which already have been sent out and health certificates should be sent to the school office by mail or a school child as soon as possible. Shot records and birth certificates should be carried by the parent who attends the pre-school registration meeting.

Potter emphasized that only the preschoolers' parents should attend. He said, however, that if a parent cannot attend, it would be well to provide a stand-in.

County Students In Spelling Bee

Nineteen Pitt County School students will participate in the second annual Pitt County Spelling Bee Monday at the Belvoir Elementary School.

Scheduled to begin at 9 a.m., the event will be held in two parts. Part I will consist of grade-level contests for grades four through eight from which a champion and runner - up from each grade will be named. Part II will see the first-place winner of each grade compete for the title "County Champion Speller."

Mrs. Lillian D. Bradley and Mrs. Patsy James, county supervisors, are con-chairmen of the event.

He has been returned to his regiment in Vietnam.

Free Oral Cancer Clinic Today

Can a person help protect himself against cancer? The Pitt Co. American Cancer Society says YES and one way is through its annual Oral Cancer Detection Clinic to be held today 1-5 pm at the Pitt Co. Health Dept. Taking only a few minutes, residents of Pitt Co. and surrounding areas are encouraged to take advantage of the detection services offered, at no charge, by dentists of Greenville and Pitt County who are contributing their services. The Clinic, and annual event, is sponsored by the Pitt Co. American Cancer Society.

"The earlier cancer is detected, the better the chance of cure," states Dr. Pinkney Young, member of the local Board of Directors and organizer of the clinic. "It is for that reason that the oral health checkup is so important."

Cancers of the mouth area afflict some 14,000 Americans annually and kill about 7,000. So many deaths arising from a site so easily observable underlines the need for a more intensive program of education. To achieve this, the ACS has accelerated its efforts to make dentists, physicians, nurses and the general public more aware of the potentials for closer control at this site. It is accomplished through professional and public education media and programs, together with industry-wide and community-wide screening projects, such as today's Clinic.

The Oral Cancer Detection Clinic is one phase of educational services offered to the public during April which has been proclaimed Cancer Control Month nationally by President Nixon and locally, by Mayor Wooten. Through its 3-fold program, the American Cancer Society educates the public, keeps the medical profession informed on the latest in treatments and research and provides services to the cancer patient while searching for a final solution to cancer through research.

Red Tape Cuts Into Adoptions In Italy

By BARRY JAMES

ROME (UPI)—There are thousands of children in need of homes in Italy and thousands of couples willing to provide them.

The barriers which stop the two coming together are bureaucracy and deep Arooted prejudice.

Italians are famed for their love of children—yet there are an estimated 300,000 youngsters, most of them illegitimate, living in institutions run by the state or the Roman Catholic Church. About 300,00 couples have their names down for adoption.

Last year, however, only 2,700 children were entrusted to adoptive parents.

Rough And Ready

Italy used to have a rough and ready way of dealing with orphans and unwanted children. They were exhibited in windows at hospitals and charity houses for prospective foster parents—or slave masters—to choose and take away.

At Rome's Santo Spirito Hospital—built by Pope Innocent ——in the 12th Century to save unwanted infants from being thrown into the Tiber River—the window of the "children of nobody" still is visible.

Leonardo da Vinci was one of the foundlings exhibited there.

When the windows finally were abolished during World War I, no adequate adoption laws were framed to take their place.

Until three years ago, couples had to be at least 50 years old and prove they were unable to have children of their own before being allowed to adopt.

Then a law was introduced to make the process easier. But labyrinths of red tape still daunt all but the most determined.

Another Hurdle

Prejudice is another hurdle. In the south, officials still talk of the "call of the blood."

"They hate to give out a baby for adoption because they feel that one day the mother will want it back," said a doctor responsible for adoption cases.

It is far easier to adopt a child in the more developed north. Many couples from Sicily and southern Italy travel hundreds of miles and set up residence in Milan or Turin in order to obtain a child.

A meeting of authorities connected with adoption—including lawyers, magistrates, doctors and social workers—was held recently in the southern city of Lecee.

The meeting called for a relaxing of red tape and for the formation of organizations to facilitate adoption.

On The Young Side

By JANE JACKSON

Eleven members of the Chorus Ensemble at Rose High School have been chosen to attend the All-State Chorus in Greensboro April 16-17.

Suzy Stocks, Carla Joyner, Susan Walker, Chris O'Connel, Susan Leggett, David Bowman, Paul Carr, John Daugman, Steve Rogers, Jensina Steinbeck, and Linda Shearin complete the group.

One thousand students will make up the All-State Chorus. Rose High choristers will be in Chorus II, one of two separate choruses, under the direction of Dr. Lara Haggard. They will perform Schubert's "Mass in G."

While in Greensboro and staying on the UNC-G campus, the students will observe campus rules. Chorus Director Betty Jane Foster will accompany the group.

Club Activities

A talent show and trip to Virginia Beach comprise activities of Rose High's Omega Club in the near future.

Auditions for the talent show, which will take place April 9, began last Monday. Members of the club will ride a chartered bus to Virginia Beach the last weekend in May.

"The purpose of this club is mainly for entertainment . . . and to create racial harmony through social togetherness," states President Hubert Gardner.

Other officers include Christopher Johnson, secretary, James Corbett, treasurer, and David Moore, sergeant-at-arms.

New Chapter

A newly organized chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes has been organized at Rose High School under the leadership of Coach Bud Phillips.

Two Rose High graduates currently in the FCA at ECU, Mike Aldridge and Duke Clark, created interest for the program.

Members of the group are as follows: Jay Hagans; George Harris; Thomas Bland; Bill Cheek; Harold Lloyd; Ernie Adams; Chap Tucker; Bob Fornes;

Kenny Raper; Bill Higgins; Jimmy Radford; Johnny Smith; Bryant Kittrell; Josh Weeks; Alan Pate; Joe West; and Walter Gould.

MASONIC NOTICE

Greenville Lodge No. 284 A. F. & A. M. will have a stated communication Monday April 6th, at 7:30 P. M. Supper will be at 6:30 P. M. Business and presentation of Awards. All Master masons are cordially invited.

Hot On Trail Of Ancient Egyptian Builder's Tomb

By RAY WILKINSON

SAQQARA, Egypt (UPI)—A British scientist thinks he is close to finding the tomb of Imhotep, architect of the world's oldest surviving manmade structure, the pyramid of the Pharaoh Zoser.

The discovery of the burial chamber "will be the highlight of my career," Prof. Walter Eemery said Inhotep's, a philosopher, administrator, doctor and architect, was deified by the Egyptians as a god of medicine after his death. Many authorities now claim he was the father of medical science.

Emery, a balding Egyptologist who daily oversees the excavation dressed in a battered Trilby hat, large sunglasses and raincoat, has spent years sifting sand on this plateau above Cairo. It has served as the burial place for hundreds of Egyptian kings and noblemen.

200 Men Excavate

A few hundred yards away from the dig, which overlooks the dried up Lake of the Sacred Crocodiles, is the 200-foot high Step Pyramid, Zoser's burial chamber, and the most vivid example of Imhotep's genius.

The pyramid, built between 2,800 and 2,700 B.C. and the oldest surviving manmade structure, was surrounded by subsidiary buildings, chapels and temples. All were enclosed within a high wall nearly a mile in circumference.

This year Emery and a field team comprising eight other field specialists and a labor force of 200 workers uncovered a large rock-hewn gallery about 400 feet long, 10 feet wide and eight feet high.

Tablet The Key

Stuffed into recesses were thousands of pottery vessels containing the mummified bodies of ancient ibis birds. Emery said they were offerings from pilgrims visiting Imhotep's tomb.

The most important discovery was a piece of stone about eight inches long which had been carefully placed in a wooden box with two mummified hawks and deposited in a niche hewn into the rock wall.

Incribed in ancient demotic text were the words "Imhotep the great the son of Thor the great god and other gods who rest here."

The stone was the first direct reference to Imhotep Emery has uncovered.

Expensive, Arduous Task

"Now we know we are on the right track," he said. "Imhotep is around here." But he cautioned, "it could be tomorrow or it could still be years before we discover him."

Saqqara is one of the richest hunting grounds of man's ancient history. Generations have literally built temples atop temples as drifting sand obscured the buildings of previous civilizations.

Though Emery believes money can be found to complete the excavations, finances are tight and costs enormous.

Salaries for manual workers alone cost the expedition around $7,200 monthly.

Journey Against Odds, Time

Though the discovery of Imhotep's tomb would be a personal triumph for Emery, who likes to remember that when he began his career 47 years ago he lived in tents lighted by kerosene lamps and "you were lucky to take a bath once a month," he cautions against wild expectation.

"We have a one in a million chance of finding the tomb of Imhotep intact," he said. "We have never found a tomb of this era which has not been plundered.

"What we are really hoping for are written records which were of no value to the plunderer but which would be of tremendous value to us historically, especially medical records."

Emery, whose expedition is financed by the Egypt Exploration Society of London, has brought several innovations to the site, including one "which would shock fellow scientists"—a couple of bulldozers which Emery is using to clear thousands of tons of "dumped sand" from his site.

"For a hundred years archaeologists digging here would just dump sand from excavations anywhere," Emery said. "but this site is so rich they were probably helping cover up other discoveries. I've done it myself."

Professor Invited To Symposium

Dr. Kumar Kuthiala, assistant professor of sociology at East Carolina University, will contend that "industrialism in developing nations is a distinct phenomenon" before the Seventh World Congress of Sociology to be held in Varna, Bulgaria, in September.

DR. KUMAR KUTHIALA

Dr. Kuthiala, a native of Simla, India, has been invited to participate on a symposium on Modernization and will present "The Impact of Factory Production in Traditional Societies."

According to Dr. Kuthiala, there are alternatives in the adjustment of an agrarian society to industrialism not present in the histories of modern Western nations.

"Most Western scholars have assumed the inevitability of Westernization with increasing industrialization of developing nations," says Kuthiala.

"Those who are concerned with the non-Western societies should consider industrialism as a distinct phenomenon," he continued.

In the paper to be presented before the Congress, Dr. Kuthiala will stress that Western cultural history need not be repeated in the developing nations as they move toward industrialism.

Couple Fight, Win, Tug-Of-War With Crocodile

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — An African and his wife fought a grim tug-of-war with a crocodile in the Musarangadhli river and emerged alive. They were wading across the river when the crocodile seized the wife, who had a baby strapped to her back. Her husband attacked the croc with his fists, pounding it on the head, so it released the woman and snapped its jaws shut on his right hand.

Hanging to the branch of an overhanging tree, the African fought desperately for 15 minutes to stop the croc dragging him into deeper water. Then he had an idea. "I told my wife to remove the cloth holding the baby to her back. I stuffed the cloth into the crocodile's mouth and forced it to release my hand. We then ran for safety," he related later. The African had to have several stitches in his hand and his wife was treated for a crushed wristbone.

Angler Hooked, Rode A Shark

WALVIS BAY, South West Africa(AP) — Angler Nic Davin took a ride on a shark. Davin hooked the 283-pounder off a beach near here and played it into the shallows after 70 minutes. A companion waded out to gaff it, but the gaff wasn't strong enough, so Davin joined him. The shark suddenly shot between his legs and Davin found himself riding the sharp-toothed monster. Other anglers came to his aid and dragged the thrashing shark and its startled jockey to the beach.

HELICOPTER SERVICE

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — India has inaugurated its first helicopter mail service between Chandigarh in northern Punjab state and remote Keylong in the Himalayan mountains to the north. The service will help provide regular mail delivery to the area which is often inaccessible because of heavy snows.

Los Angeles and Long Beach, Calif., have the largest manmade harbors in the world.

DANGEROUS AGE

LONDON (AP) — The dangerous age for divorce in England and Wales is 25-29 years for women and 30-34 years for men, the registrar general said in a summary.

Knows Lock Keep'em Inside

KEVIL, Ky. (AP) — Bank president W. G. Miller hopes the lock at the Kevil Bank proves effective at keeping out burglars.

Miller knows it's pretty good at keeping the bank staff inside. The lock jammed as the workers started to leave and the employes waited one hour until a locksmith arrived to let them out.

Bucs Take Two From Citadel; Rose Wins

Hastings, Robinson Toss Three-Hit Wins

CHARLESTON, S. C. — East Carolina University began its quest for a third Southern Conference baseball championship here yesterday, sweeping a doubleheader from The Citadel. The Bucs won the opener, 5-1, then came back to get a 6-1 decision in the second game.

The Pirates received excellent pitching from Ron Hastings and Sonny Robinson. Both tossed three-hit games at The Citadel.

At the same time, their teammates were producing runs and hits with their bats. East Carolina rapped out 11 hits in the opener, then came back with 10 more in the second game.

The twin wins boost the Pirate record to 6-2 overall, and give them a 2-0 record in the Southern Conference. East Carolina is either in first alone or tied with either Davidson or Furman, which played a doubleheader yesterday, too.

The Bucs were to make up a rained-out game today at 2:30 p.m. in Wilmington against UNC-Wilmington, one of the two teams that beat them this year.

In the opener, Hastings went right to work on The Citadel, and never was in any great danger. The lone run came in the third inning and beyond that, The Citadel never offered a threat.

The run came when Mike Ross reached on a fielders' choice making two outs. He stole second, and Hastings committed a balk, moving him to third. Billy Watson then walked, and the two executed the double steal, with Ross scoring the lone Citadel run.

East Carolina had already pushed across the first of its runs, in the first inning. Lyn Dowd had doubled with one away in the inning. Stan Sneeden followed up with a single, driving in Dowd.

With the score tied at 1-1, East Carolina pushed over two in the fifth to take the lead for good. Hastings helped his own cause out with a single. He moved to third on a hit-and-run out, and then scored when Dowd hit into an abortive fielder's choice. Dowd moved down to second on the play, and took third on a wild pitch. Sneeden then singled to score Dowd to make it 3-1.

The Pirates added three more in the seventh. Stu Garrett reached on a fielder's choice, and an error on the play moved him to second. Hal Beard singled him home, and Matt Walker slammed a double to bring Beard over with the fifth Pirate run of the game.

The Bucs had it just as good in the second game, as Robinson wove his fine three-hitter. The lone Citadel run came this time on a two-out seventh inning home run by Bryan Burns. Only once before had a Citadel batter reached second base, that coming in the fourth on a single and a walk.

Jerry Wise followed up the homer, reaching on an error and moving to second on a passed ball to give the Bulldogs a slim hope of a rally, but it was snuffed out when the next batter flied out.

East Carolina pushed over three in the first inning to gain early command. Dick Corrada led off with a single and Dowd got his third hit of the day. Sneeden kept up his batting with a two-run double. Sneeden advanced to third on a single by Garrett, and Beard sacrificed Sneeden home for the 3-0 lead.

The Bucs scored one more in the fourth. Walker walked and moved up on an out. He scored when Corrada got his second hit of the game.

Two more Pirates crossed the plate in the fifth. Skip Taylor banged out a single and Garrett walked. Garrett was cut down at second on a fielder's choice when Beard grounded to the shortstop, but Taylor moved into third. Walker drove in Taylor with a single and Ken Graver got a hit to bring Beard across.

Following today's meeting with Wilmington, the Bucs travel to Campbell on Tuesday.

Rampants Hold Off Williamston

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School scored first and held off a pair of Williamston rallies to gain a 4-3 victory over the defending Class AA State Champions yesterday.

The Rampants, with the win, ran their record out to 5-0 for the season. They travel to Kinston on Friday for a non-conference affair to wind up their pre-conference schedule.

Both teams went after the victory, but Rose took advantage of just enough breaks to push through the victory.

Both offered threats in the first inning, when one-out singles put men on first. Both times, the runners stole their way to second, only to die there.

In the second, Rose put up a good threat, but it didn't pay off. Kim Harbin, Lewis Gidley and John Conway all drew walks, but with two outs, no one was able to score.

Finally, in the third, after another slight Williamston threat, the Rampants scored. The Williamston attempt came on another one out single and stolen base, but hurler Russ Smith retired the side to get out of trouble.

Rose started things off when Smith singled to right center with one out. Tommy Durham walked, and Smith was moved to second. Smith then stole third, and when the ball was thrown into the outfield on the pickoff attempt, he scooted home for the first Rose run.

Williamston came back to tie it up in its half of the fourth. With two away, Greg Godard walked and stole second. Denny Jenkins then lifted a single to center, scoring Godard with the tieing run.

Rose came back with two more in the bottom of the fourth to take the lead for good. Larry Hatton opened the inning with a long triple to center. Gidley was hit by a pitch, and with runners on first and third, pitcher Randy Bowen was charged with a balk. That brought Hatton home and moved Gidley into second. Ronnie Leggett brought Gidley home with a double.

In the fifth, Rose scored what proved to be the winning run. Durham led off with a single and Jimmy Page walked. Harbin singled, loading the bases. Hatton grounded out, but Durham scored on the play, making it 4-1.

Williamston then came up with two runs in the sixth before the Rampants could turn off the fire and stop the Green Wave. With one out, Ken Haslip reached on an error. Sammy Roberson followed with a single and Haslip moved to third. Godard lofted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Haslip. A walk to Jenkins and an error on Don O'Neal loaded the bases. Jerry Godley then walked, forcing Roberson across, closing the gap to 4-3. But the next man flied out, ending the threat.

Rose then shut off Williamston without a base runner in the seventh to take the win.

Pirate Gridders Back At Work; Team Divided

East Carolina University's spring football drills resumed Saturday afternoon, with the Pirates getting their first two-platoon workouts under Coach Mike McGee's new staff.

During the Easter break, the staff worked out the two-platoon units for the Pirates, and the team was introduced to their new positions when they return on Thursday. Thursday and Friday were used as conditioning drills without supervision, and do not count as part of the spring workouts.

"We have moved some personnel around to get the best players on the field, on the first team," McGee said. "We have been identifying our best players, and we want to get them in the game. Many times teams have good players on the bench but we don't have the depth to do that. We have to get as many out there as we can."

McGee said the switches usually involved such shifts as guards to tackles, defensive ends to linebackers, tackles to ends on defense, and a tight end to split end. "The boys who played blocking back last year are now basically in the line. There have been an awful lot of moves," the coach said.

McGee feels the team has come a long way in learning the new playing system. "We have new numbers (for the plays), new terms, and of course, a new offense. We expect to have some mental blocks from time to time, but so far they have done an excellent job. It's easy to tell that they did some studying off the field."

The coach said that there were still five or six players who could be moved to new positions in the future, but basically the team is set for the rest of the spring and into the opening of practice this fall.

Plans call for drills this week on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. "We'll have a short scrimmage on Tuesday, and then have a lengthy one on Saturday. We have not had a great deal of hitting so far due to the fact that everything is new. We wanted to get through 10 practices first. And so far we've only had one player hurt. Monty Kiernan, who has a pulled hamstring."

McGee's biggest problem, switching from the single wing to the T and pro set, has been to cultivate a quarterback. Currently John Cazza is running at the number one spot, followed by Jack Patterson and Pete Wooley.

"I can't say that this is the way it will stay," McGee said. "We've still got a lot of work to do before the Purple-Gold game."

That game is set for April 25, and will wind up the spring drills.

Buc Netters Gain 1st Win

East Carolina University's tennis team gained its first victory of the season here yesterday, downed Southern Conference foe William & Mary, 7-2.

Pirate Stickers Down Gobblers

The East Carolina University lacrosse team picked up their opening victory of the year Saturday, downing Virginia Tech, 9-4.

Gary McCulloch led the Pirate victory, scoring three goals. Eric Schandelmeier added two more for the Bucs.

East Carolina moved out into a commanding 7-0 lead before Virginia Tech finally managed to get on the scoreboard.

McCulloch scored the first Buc goal, with 5:40 left in the first period.

Then, with just 22 seconds gone in the second quarter, Tom Endrington tossed the ball into the goal for the second Pirate score. Steve Barrow followed with 12:12 left, and McCulloch picked up his second score with 11:10 to go in the half, making it 4-0 at the half.

Dave Holdefer scored with 11:25 to go, and Schandelmeir picked up his first goal with 9:20 remaining in the third period for the Bucs. Mike Linch scored with 5:40 to go running the score to 7-0.

Virginia Tech then scored its first goal of the day, as George Tolson hit with 3:15 to play in the quarter.

Tech came up with two more quick goals in the early minutes of the final period. Hank Kenchington scored both, with 13:30 and 11:18 to go.

East Carolina matched those, as Schandelmeier hit with 10:30 left, and McCullouch wwound up his afternoon with 9:20 to play.

The final Gobbler goal came with 8:00 to play as Tolson scored his second goal of the day.

The Bucs travel to meet the Duke junior varsity on Monday.

Saratoga Gets Win

SNOW HILL — Saratoga High School gave Greene Central a 6-0 lead, then came roaring back for an extra-inning 11-7 victory.

Greene Central pushed over a run each in the first and second innings, and then added two in the third, for a 4-0 lead.

The Rams added two more in the fifth, and picked up one in the sixth, but that one was needed to tie the game at 7-7.

In the top of the sixth, Sartoga used seven walks, a single and a double to drive across seven runs and take the lead 7-5.

After the scoreless seventh inning, Saratoga pushed over four in the eighth. Hayes reached on an error and Gardner was hit by a pitch. Page doubled to score both runners. Little then walked, and Rogers and Jones both reached on erros, as Page and Little came around to score the extra insurance runs.

Greene Central is now 1-5 overall for the season.

Bobby Scott and Robert Ivey led the Ram hitting with three and two respectively, while Page had three hits, which accounted for six runs for Saratoga.

Palmer Fires 67 To Take One Stroke Lead

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Arnold Palmer stormed into sole control of first place in the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament Saturday then went winging off to Washington for a White House dinner with President Nixon.

The fabled Palmer, golf's greatest gate attraction, broke out of a first place tie with Tommy Aaron by firing a four-under-par 67 for 131, 11 under par and the best 36-hole score of the year on the pro tour.

It took him about a half an hour to fight his way through a howling horde of fans—he called the gallery "about as big as I've ever seen"—to the clubhouse.

The first $1 million winner in the game had left almost immediately for his home in Latrobe, Pa. to pick up his wife, Winnie, before continuing on to Washington. Palmer, who has his own jet, planned to return to Greensboro later Saturday night.

A heavy rainstorm forced a one-day postponement in the start of the $180,000 tournament and Palmer faces a 36-hole windup on Sunday.

"I don't really mind playing 36," said the 40-year-old Palmer, who dropped off the tour briefly last year because of trouble with an arthritic hip. "My hip gets a little tired, that's all. But I can still make it around."

Palmer led lanky R.H. Sikes, a non-winner since 1966, by a single stroke. Sikes had a 67 for 132.

Aaron, who matched Palmer's opening 64, fell off the fast pace with a 69 for 133 and was tied at that figure with Miller Barber, 64, and the on-rushing Gary Player.

Player, a South African who was accompanied by plain-clothes policemen in his gallery, fired a brilliant 63 and said "it was as close as I've ever come to breaking 60."

Lou Graham followed with a 68 for 135, while rookie John Schroeder, son of former tennis star Ted Schroeder, had a 67 for 136. Schroeder got into the tournament as the second alternate from Monday's qualifying round.

Sunday's pairings for the final two rounds will have Palmer, Player and Aaron in the last threesome.

Palmer, followed by some 10,000 of the gallery that was estimated at 28,000, started on the 10th tee. He canned a 20-foot birdie putt on the 12th hole, put a six-iron three feet from the flag on 15 and went three under for the day with a 15-foot putt on the next hole.

But on 17, he put his drive in a ditch. He was allowed a drop, but the ball rolled into a creek and he had to take a penalty stroke and took a bogey.

He got it back on the 18th, however. He hit the branch of a tree on his tee shot, but put a three-iron on the green and made a 10-foot putt for a bird.

He also birdied the first when a six-iron left him five-footer, bogeyed the 10th when he missed the green and closed with a birdie four on the final hole. He was short of the green in two, but chipped to eight inches.

Player had six birdies and an eagle three, the latter on a 40-foot putt, in his remarkable round.

"It's as close as I ever came to breaking 60," the crew cut South African said. "I missed one putt from five feet, and another from six. If I'd made those, and had birdied the ninth, well, it would have been close."

The group at 137 included leading money winner Lee Trevino, Pete Brown, Larry Hinson, Steve Spray and Billy Maxwell.

Billy Casper had a 73 for 143 and defending champion Gene Littler took a 68 for 140.

Jim Wiechers scored a hole in one on the 225 yard, par three 16th and collected a total of $11,000 in prizes put up by an insurance company and a chemical firm.

Ayden Gains Win Over 'Dogs

AYDEN — The Ayden Tornadoes rolled to a 6-2 victory over Grifton High School here Saturday in a non-Pitt County loop game.

The Tornadoes spotted the Bulldogs a run in the first inning then came back to take the lead for good.

Grifton pushed over a run in the first inning. David Wahley singled and Adnois Grant got a walk. Cherry also walked, loading the bases. Whaley scored on Thomas' ground out for a 1-0 lead.

Ayden came up with two runs in the third to go ahead. Alan Wilson doubled and stole third. He scored on Dail Manning's ground out. Debro Blount then doubled and scored when Mike Tripp tripled. That put Ayden ahead, 2-1.

Grifton tied it up in the fifth. Whaley doubled and Harper singled. Cherry then singled to score Whaley for a 2-2 tie.

Ayden came right back with a run to gain the lead for good. Manning led off with a triple and scored on Blount's sacrifice fly.

The Tornadoes added three insurance runs in the sixth.

Whaley led the Grifton hitting with two, while Wilson and Tripp each had two for Ayden.

Duke Sweeps

COLUMBIA (AP) — Duke came from behind to down South Carolina 5-4 in the first game of an Atlantic Coast Conference baseball doubleheader Saturday and then rolled over the Gamecocks 5-0 in the second game.

South Carolina had a three-run lead in the first game when Duke broke loose for four runs in the fifth inning, then got the winning tally in the sixth after South Carolina had tied it.

Duke breezed to victory in the second game, although the Blue Devils were out hit by South Carolina, as was true of the first of the two abbreviated contests.

Furman Takes Two From 'Cats

GREENVILLE, S. C. (AP)— Sophomores John Katona and Bill Boyd each pitched the distance Saturday to lead Furman to 9-1, 8-1 Southern Conference baseball doubleheader sweep over Davidson.

Katona pitched three-hit ball and fanned nine and Boyd yielded four hits. Furman's overall record is 9-4-1. The Paladins were making their conference debut against the visitors.

Jerry Martin and John Campbell each homored for Furman Campbell cracking a three-run blast in the second game and Martin a solo job in the first game.

Rose Sweeps Pair From Robersonville

Arnie Still Is Top Attraction

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — He's still the king. He's 40 now, the hair is thinning in the front and the back of the neck is lined and seamed as a farmer's.

But Arnold Palmer still is No. 1, still the greatest attraction golf has known. And he still gets the job done.

The game's all-time leading money winner fashioned a sparkling first round 64, seven under par, and was tied for the top spot with golf's most famous bridesmaid, Tommy Aaron, going into today's second round in the $180,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

The dynamic Palmer, winner of more than 50 tour events, drew galloping herd of fans from the huge gallery of about 15,000 and responded to their urging of "Go, Arnie, go" with a brilliant effort.

He gained a share of the top spot when he pitched to within 2½-feet on the final green and the sound that went up sounded like Shea Stadium during the World Series. It took him 15 minutes to fight his way to the press tent.

But at least part of his mind was on next week's prestigious Masters.

"Do you have some second thoughts now about coming to Greensboro instead of waiting for the Masters?" he was asked.

The famous grin spread over the putty face and Palmer responded:

"Well, I didn't least year. At least I didn't after the Masters."

He was in the throes of a terrible slump at the time and finished 26th in the tournament he has dominated more than any other man.

Palmer and Aaron, who has finished second nine times and scored his only victory last year in the then-unofficial Canadian Open, held a single stroke lead over R.H. Sikes.

Masters champion George Archer, Phil Rodgers and San Diego Open titleholder Pete Brown were at 66, with Lou Graham and Bob Menne, the tour sophomore who forced Lee Treyino to a playoff before losing in last week's National Airlines, tied at 67.

The group of 10 at 68 included Tom Weiskopf, Tommy Jacobs and Bobby Nichols.

Winter rules were played, with players allowed to life, place and clean the ball on the fairways. The result was that more than half the field, 78 matched or bettered par 71 on the 7,034 Sedgefield Country Club course.

South African Gary Player, Billy Casper and British Open titleholder Tony Jacklin were at 70, Trevino had a 71 and defending champion Gene Litler a 72.

"I was hitting my irons pretty good," Palmer said, "But I've been hitting them pretty good for a while. Actually, it was getting a couple of putts to drop that kind of got me going.

"I had about a 25-footer on the second, and, well, you might say I charged it a little. I ran it about 15 feet past and made it coming back.

"On the next one, it was about 20 feet and I played just a little cautious. I left it 10 feet short, then made it. That kind of helped."

He birdied the next three holes, putting a seven iron four feet from the flag, canning an eight footer and two-putting a par five that he reached in two.

He also ran in a 25-footer, reached another five par in two and had irons shots that left him birds of 2, 1 and 2½ feet. His only bogey came on the eighth, where he hit a tree.

Aaron had an eagle three on the 14th, with a seven-foot putt, twice chipped in for birdies, put irons inside six feet three times and madeone 10-foot putt. He had one bogey, missing the green on the 16th.

Rampants Take Opener, 5-1, Win Other By 8-0

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROBERSONVILLE — Rose High School swept a pair of baseball games from Robersonville Friday, winning the opener, 5-1, then taking an 8-0 victory in the nightcap.

The Rampants took advantage of Robersonville mistakes in both games to gain the win. The first was helped with three runs scoring in the fifth inning on four errors, while the second win was aided by six runs in the seventh inning on walks.

The seventh inning was actually incomplete, as Robersonville called a halt to the game after Rose had forced in six runs and still had the bases loaded with none out.

The Rampants thus boosted their record for the season to 4-0, going into Saturday afternoon's game with Williamston. (See story, page 15.)

The first game saw a somewhat unfamiliar lineup for the Rampants, as regular shortstop Ronnie Leggett hurled for Rose. It was his first pitching assignment since his Little League days. He struck out seven and walked just two in going the distance.

In addition, the fielding duties for some of the Rampants were new, with Kim Harbin at third, Tommy Durham at shortstop, and John Conway at first.

Rose pushed over a run in the top of the first to take the lead. With two down, Russ Smith walked and stole second. Durham then singled into right center to score him for a 1-0 lead.

Robersonville came right back and picked up its only run of the day. Ed Warren singled and Hal Knox walked. Timmy James singled just over second, and loaded the bases. Danny Stalls then lifted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Warren to tie it at 1-1.

After threatened again in the second, Rose picked up another run in the third. Leggett led off with a double down the left field line. He stole third, and scored when Smith grounded out, putting Rose back on top, 2-1.

Rose broke it open in the fifth inning, picking up three more runs for the final 5-1 margin. They came on only one hit, as the Rams made four errors in the inning. With one out, Leggett grounded to short, but the ball was misplayed, and Leggett arrived safely. An attempted pickoff play was also errored, moving Leggett into second. Durham lofted a ball into center field, but just as the center fielder caught the ball, he collided with the left fielder, and dropped it, moving Leggett across, and putting Durham on second. .

Jimmy Paige brought Durham home with a triple to right, and he scored when the relay to home was thrown away.

Robersonville put up threats in the fourth and sixth innings, putting men on third, but couldn't push them across.

In the second contest, it was a scoreless duel until the third inning when Rose got the first fun of the game. Byron Dickens, who started on the mound for Rose, reached on a fielder's choice. Smith grounded to second, but the ball, played on Dickens was errored, and both men were safe. Tommy Durham then singled to score Dickens with the go-ahead run.

In the sixth, Rose picked up its second run. Leggett singled and moved to second on an out. He stole third, and scored when the ball was overthrown on the attempt to get him there.

The seventh broke the back of the Robersonville team, as they were unable to get an out against the Rampants.

Bill Hatton led off with a single and Jimmy Sugg reached on an error. Lewis Gidley walked, loading the bases. Smith then clobbered a double into deep center, scoring both Hatton and Sugg. Leggett walked, loading the bases, and successive walks to Durham, John Arnaud, Robbie Cox and Jimmy Bond brought in four more runs before Robersonville threw in the towel.

Following their meeting with Williamston yesterday, Rose plays a non-conference game with Kinston next Friday on the Red Devils' home field.

Exhibition Winding Up As Teams Ready To Open

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

A White House relief pitcher will launch baseball's 101st season Monday at Washington while Canada's young major league entry helps ring in the last Crosley Field opener at Cincinnati, where it all began.

Neither President Nixon nor Vice President Agnew will be on hand for the Washington inaugural, which pits the Detroit Tigers, without Denny McLain, against Ted Williams' ambitious Senators.

Mickey Lolich is set to pitch for the Tigers in the absence of McLain, under suspension until July 1 for his 1967 gambling activities. Dick Bosman, American ERA king last year, will be the Washington starter.

David Eisenhower, Nixon's son-in-law and grandson of the former President, is a candidate to handle the traditional first-ball assignment.

At Cincinnati, where the Reds' forerunners began playing professionally in 1869, Jim Merritt will be on the mound for the home club against Joe Sparma and the Montreal Expos in the other traditional opening day game. The Reds are scheduled to shift from ancient Crosley Field to a new stadium in time to host the July 14 All-Star Game.

The spotlight shifts Tuesday to Milwaukee, new home of the ill-fated Seattle Pilots, which entertains California in its opener while all other clubs except St. Louis also swing into action. The Cardinals play their first game Wednesday at Montreal.

In Tuesday's other AL games, league titlist Baltimore is at Cleveland, Minnesota at Chicago, Boston at New York, Oakland at Kansas City and Detroit at Washington.

The world champion New York Mets visit Pittsburgh, Atlanta is at San Diego, Chicago at Philadelphia, Houston at San Francisco and Cincinnati at Los Angeles in National League play.

The Orioles have been tabbed solid 9-to-5 favorites by Las Vegas bookmakers to repeat in the AL and St. Louis is the 7-2 choice in the NL, followed by the Mets and San Francisco, at 9-2.

While President Nixon has put in a bullpen call for the Washington opener, Baltimore's Dave McNally, Boston's Gary Peters and Los Angeles' Claude Osteen appeared geared for distance as their clubs' opening day pitchers.

McNally, a 20-game winner for the Orioles last season, Peters, obtained by Boston in a winter trade with the White Sox, and Osteen, another 20 victory man, were the standouts among half a dozen hurlers who worked Friday exhibition games in final tuneups for Tuesday starting assignments.

The Orioles bowed to Montreal 3-2 at Arlington, Tex., despite McNally's three-hit, seven inning stint. The Red Sob rallied for three ninth inning runs to top Cincinnati 3-1 at Tampa, Fla., as Peters yielded just two hits and stretched his scoreless string to 312-3 innings before being nicked for an unearned run in the eighth.

Osteen, who worked six innings, and Jim Brewer combined to limit California to three singles in the first eight innings, leading the Dodgers to a 7-2 victory over the Angels at Los Angeles.

Elsewhere, the Chicago Cubs outsocked the White Sox 13-12 in a 35-hit donnybrook punctuated with three grand slam homers —by the Cubs' J.C. Martin and the Sox' Buddy Bradford and Syd O'Brien; St. Louis trimmed Eddie Stanky's University of South Alabama team 9-2 with the help of 13 walks and Atlanta, keyed by Hank Aaron's homer, spilled Oakland 4-2.

Doug Rader drove in four runs with a double and homer as Houston downed the Yankees 9-5, San Francisco edged Milwaukee 6-5, on Hal Lanier's eighth inning infield hit, Pittsburgh blanked Columbus of the International League 5-0 and Cleveland bowed to Wichita of the American Association 7-5.

Hawk Won't Be In The Masters

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

FORT WORTH, Tex., (AP) — Ben Hogan will be in Augusta, Ga., Tuesday but he won't play in the Masters.

The 57-year-old Hogan, who has won every major golfing title, will only attend a dinner Tuesday night in conjunction with the Masters.

The feared Texas hawk is playing golf again after a shoulder operation, but a sharp pain in his left knee is cutting down his activity.

"If this knee problem doesn't work out, I may never play again," Hogan said after a round at Shady Oaks Country Club. "I'm only playing out of an (electric) cart. And you really can't play good golf on just one foot."

Pressed for his score, Hogan said "I guess it was about 73 or 74." Par at Shady Oaks is 71.

"Shady Oaks isn't very tough," Hogan added.

Hogan, who hasn't played a round of competitive golf in more than two years, said "Doctors aren't just sure what the problem is. I've taken medicine and all kinds of therapy for the knee, but it's not doing much good. I get a real sharp apin on my follow through."

Hogan said "My shoulder is fine. But one thing is certain—I won't be playing, competitively this year. There is no way I could walk 72 holes."

Hogan, who now manufactures golf equipment in Fort Worth, said he had been booked for an exhibition match in Kansas City in June.

"I'm supposed to play with Jug McSpadden, Byron Nelson and Sam Snead," Hogan said.

Then the golfing legend paused and said "You know, I don't think they'd like to see me in this shape."

Bucs Seventh In Golf Meet

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)— East Tennessee swept team laurels and Furman's David Strawn took the individual title Saturday in the Furman Collegiate Golf Tournament.

East Tennessee's Bucs finished with a 36-hole total of 760 to win team honors by seven shots over runnerup Furman. The low five scores for each team were used in the tally.

Strawn, who opened with 72 Friday, shot 73 Saturday, one over par for the 6,660-yard Furman course for a 145 total, three ahead of John Eddington of Austin-Peay, who had a pair of 74s.

Other individual leaders:

149—Jim Siler, Cumberland; 150-Mike Cation, East Tennesee State; 151—Robert Dunn, Virginia, and Jeff Heilman, east Tennessee State; 152—Jim Wagner, Catawba, and Marc Goodden, East Tennessee State; 153—Terry Clyburn, Presbyterian; Frank Chandler, Clemson; Tommy Gaul, Furman.

Other team totals:

Austin-Peay 768; Clemson and Virginia 778; Wofford 784; East Carolina 786; The Citadel 797; Gardner Web 0805; Davidson 808; Eastern Kentucky 809; Presbyterian 810; Catawba 819; Cumberland 824; Augusta College 838; Carson-Newman 843; Newberry 869, High Point 907; Mars Hill 908; Berea 912.

Pearson Holds Southeast Pole

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP)—Dave Marcis of West Salem, Wis., headed the second day qualifying Saturday at Bristol International Speedway for Sunday's Southeastern 500 stock car race, clocking 104.376 miles an hour.

Marcis became the sixth driver to break the qualifying record at the banked asphalt half-mile track, five having cracked the old one Friday.

David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., won the pole position Friday for the $32,500 race with a speed of 107.079 m.p.h. in a 1970 Ford.

Also making the top 10 Friday were five other factory-backed drivers, including Ford drivers Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough, Plymouth ace Richard Petty and Dodge drivers Bobby Allison and Bobby Isaac.

Three drivers went over the century mark Saturday with Bobby Watson of Louisville, Ky., having the second fastest speed in a 1970 Dodge at 102.267 m.p.h. Coo Coo Marlin of Columbia, Tenn., was third at 100.837 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet.

Cougars Keep Hopes Alive

RALEIGH (AP) — The Carolina Cougars are back over .500 again today and still cherish faint hopes of finishing second in the American Basketball Association's Eastern Division.

The Cougars led from the opening minutes Friday night as they routed the Pittsburgh Pipers, 107-83, to bring their record to 39-38. They are three games behind second-place Kentucky, each with seven games left before the playoffs.

A crowd of 6,142 saw the Cougars close out the Dorton Arena end of their three-court "home" schedule behind the 21-point shooting of Rich Niemann. Bob Verga, observing his "night," and Doug Moe each added 19 points, Verga hitting 17 in the first half. John Brisker paced the Pipers with 17.

The Cougars led at the quarters 30-21, 59-43 and 83-65. When Pittsburgh cut the lead to 85-76 with five minutes left, the Cougars went on a 22-7 spree to romp home.

Carolina's next start is at Miami Sunday.

Greene Central Falls To Nash

NASHVILLE — Northern Nash edged past Greene Central with an unearned run in the ninth inning Friday, 9-8.

Greene Central scored first, getting a run in the second, but Northern Nash matched it. Greene Central then pushed over two in the third while the Knights got one, leaving the Rams out in front, 3-2.

Greene Central added another in the fourth, but Northern Nash came up with two for a 4-4 tie. Greene Central got four in the fifth, but three by Northern Nash in the fifth and another in the sixth tied it up.

It stayed at 8-8 until the ninth. Bass reached on a single and moved around to second, when two were out. Ennis singled to center, and the throw in to get Bass at home was errored, allowing the winning run to score.

Northern Nash banged out four home runs on the way to the win.

Ivey and Scott led the Greene Central hitting with two each. Scott's two were doubled, which accounted for five Ram runs. Greene Central is now 1-3 in the Eastern Plains and 1-4 overall, losing all four games by one run.

Oak City Nips Jamesville, 1-0

OAK CITY — Oak City High School slipped past Jamesville, 1-0, yesterday in a Martin County Conference baseball game.

Phil Blount of Jamesville and J. C. Whitfield fired the pitchers duel in the game, each allowing three hits.

Blount struck out seven and walked four in absorbing the loss, while Whitfield got the win with 10 strikeouts and five walks.

Oak City pushed over the only run of the game in the first inning. Cliff Mobley walked and Whitfield also got a free trip. Marty Smith then singled to score Mobley with the run.

Jamesville got off a threat in the last inning, putting runners on second and third with one out, but the Red Devils were unable to get them across.

Belvoir Rolls Over Indians

BELVOIR — Belvoir-Falkland High School rolled to an 18-1 victory over hapless Bethel High School Friday. The win left Belvoir with a 2-0-1 record in the Pitt County Conference.

Bethel pushed over the first run of the game, scoring in the second inning. Abeyounis singled and Casper walked. Young then reached on an error, scoring Abeyounis for a 1-0 Indian lead.

Belvoir came back in the bottom of the second with three runs of its own to take the lead for good. Joey Moore walked and stole both second and third. Mike Cobb attempted to bunt, but interference was called, and Moore was scored and Cobb sent to first. Ben Joyner singled scoring Cobb, and Joyner later scored on a ground out by Timmy Tyner.

Belvoir then exploded for 14 runs in the third and picked up one more in the fourth.

Rockets Near Western Title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Denver Rockets have just about wrapped up the Western Division championship in the American Basketball Association.

With Spencer Haywood tossing in 38 points and grabbing 23 rebounds the Rockets shaded the New York Nets 105-102 Friday night and took a 3½ game lead with five games to play.

Dallas beat Washington 148-144 and tied the Caps for the runnerup spot behind Denver. Carolina routed Pittsburgh 107-83 in the only other ABA game.

Denver led the Nets by only one point, 76-75, after three periods, but Haywood hit for 11 points to help the Rockets stay on top in the last quarter. Sonny Dove led the Nets with 25 points.

Glen Combs helped Dallas win its fourth straight game by scoring 30 points. Mike Barrett was high for Washington with 41. Rick Barry, Washington star, was ejected from the game in the second half following a scuffle with Ron Boone.

A 22-7 spurt in the last five minutes dewed up Carolina's triumph over Pittsburgh. Rich Miemann led the Cougars with 21 points. John Brisker topped the Pipers with 17.

In the National Basketball Association, Milwaukee beat Philadelphia 115-106 and eliminated the 76ers from the playoffs, four games to one. Chicago stayed alive in its series with Atlanta by beating the Hawks 131-120.

Aycock Takes 11-10 Victory

E. B. Aycock Junior High School picked up its first victory in baseball yesterday, winning their opener, 11-10, in eight innings over Coon Junior High of Wilson.

Coon and Aycock both scored twice in the first, but Coon came on to pick up four each in the third and fourth for a 10-2 lead. In the bottom of the fourth, Aycock rallied for three runs, closing the gap to 10-5.

In that inning, Coon's starting pitcher, suffered a broken ankle when a Phantom runner slide into home where the Coon player was trying to make the tag.

Aycock then got two more runs in the sixth to close to within three. In the seventh, Aycock rallied for those three to tie it at 10-10.

Steve Bostic and Wayne Bailey both singled to reach in the seventh. Howard Adams singled in Bostic, and Mike Parker got a hit, driving in Bailey and Adams with the tieing runs.

In the eighth, Adams reached on a single, and stole second. He moved to third on a wild pitch and scored when Parker singled.

Parker, Bailey and Robbie Pinner led the Aycock hitting with two hits each. Stanley Cobb struck out 13 and walked six on the way to the win.

Karate Club Wins Trophies

Three members of East Carolina University's karate club picked up trophies in the Second Virginia Open Tournament, held recently at Quantico, Va.

The tournament, one of the largest ever held in this country, drew contestants from all over the world, including entrants from Hawaii, California, New York and the Orient.

Pham Dang Duoc of East Carolina took second place in the white belt Kata (practice forms) competition, while George Shedrick took fourth place.

Glenn Lewis of East Carolina won fourth place in the white-belt class in Kumite (fighting). Joyn Whitley was sixth in green-belt.

Charlie June, the only ECU brown belt entrant, while not placing in the tournament, finished higher than any other college entry.

The overall club finish was highest among college entries in the tournament, Bill McDonald, the club's instructor said.

The club will travel to the University of Tennessee later this spring to meet with other interested schools in the proposed formation of a Southern Katara Association.

Jerry Wanted Nothing More Than To Join Brother On Staff

(Third of a Series)

When Mike McGee became the new head football coach at East Carolina University last December, Jerry McGee couldn't have been happier.

Maybe, that's because his brother Mike named him as his first assistant coach, but that's only partly true.

Jerry has always wanted three things since entering the coaching profession following his graduation from Duke in 1961.

He always wanted to coach college football, he always wanted to work with his brother Mike (afterall they are twins and lived together for 21 years and living with anybody that long makes one believe they're pretty good friends) and he wanted to get back to the state of North Carolina where he had lived most of his life.

"Yea," says Jerry, the spark-plug and comedian of the young Pirate coaching staff. "Things couldn't have come out better for me. I got everything I wanted in one package deal."

Jerry came to ECU from Southern Illinois University where he had been for the past three seasons. At SIU, he was the defensive co-ordinator for two seasons and his first year there he was the backfield coach.

Like his brother, Jerry played football at Duke under Bill Murray and was the first winner of the Blue Devil Award, given annually to the team's most inspirational player.

Jerry was a fullback and linebacker back during the one-platoon system of football and readily admits he always like defense better than offense.

"Defensive football is a greater challenge," he said. "It is all reaction and must more free wheeling than offense. Offense is more orderly—you know more timing like on hang-doffs and passes."

The fun-loving Jerry began his coaching career at Roanoke, Va., in 1961. There he was an assistant coach to his older brother Jim; so working with Mike at ECU is not his first experience working with a brother.

From Roanoke, he moved to John A. Holmes High in Edenton where he won two conference and two state championships. When he left for his first college job at Kansas State, Edenton had a 26-game winning streak and his overall record was 35-5-4.

At Kansas State Jerry became the head freshman coach. It was quite a challenge considering he inherited a team that had not won a game in over eight years. The closest the young Wildcats had come was a tie.

But Jerry got to work and concentrated on the defense. The results were startling—he knocked off the Oklahoma freshmen in the first game and led the team to a 3-2 record.

"When he played Oklahoma there were only 200 people in the stands," recalls Jerry. "But the game was on the radio that day and when people heard what was happening—that we were ahead—they drove over to the stadium to see for themselves. When the game ended there were 8,000 screaming fans cheering us. It was a great feeling."

Jerry, 31, and 45 minutes younger than Mike, attended Duke on a Naval ROTC scholarship before a football injury forced him to drop it. He was also a finalist in both the Morehead and Angie B. Duke scholarship competitions.

Another reason Jerry was anxious to get back to North Carolina was his stomach. That sounds kind of funny but he just loves seafood. One look at him and you can tell he's had his fill since returning here in December.

"Yea, I like seafood," Jerry said as he rubbed his stomach. "My dad was in the Coast Guard (he retired a commander) and we always lived on the coast where there was plenty of fresh seafood."

His reason for becoming a coach?

"Nobody else wanted me," says Jerry, always looking for the opportunity to get off a good line.

But it's not the truth. His record tells you that.

Ayden Hands Loss To Chicod

CHICOD — The Ayden Tornadoes gained a 7-3 victory over Chicod High School Friday. It was the first loss of the season in Pitt County play for the Hornets, now 2-1.

Chicod pushed over a run in the bottom of the first to take a 1-0 lead. Danny Edwards led off with a single and Billy Evans walked. Bobby Edwards was safe on a single, loading the bases. Garland Warren then hit a sacrifice fly to score Edwards with the first Hornet run.

Ayden came right back to take the lead for good, however, pushing over three in the top of the second. Alan Wilson singled, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. He waited there while Mike Tripp walked and Billy Tyson was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Dail Manning then singled, scoring Wilson and Tripp. Tyson scored on a passed ball for a 3-1 lead.

Ayden added a run in the fifth, and picked up three more in the sixth to lead 7-1 before Chicod rallied for two in the bottom of the seventh.

Wilson led the Ayden hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Chicod.

New Bills Are Aimed At Boats

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Outboard Boating Club of America, which keeps tabs on such things, reports that the almost two dozen state legislatures holding sessions in 1970 already are beginning to disgorge a floor of bills aimed at pleasure boating.

Similar proposed legislation either has become law in some states or has been defeated. But some of the bills contain entirely new ideas, involving such matters as boating safety, taxes and pollution.

What is interesting is that some of the new propositions have a tendency to spread to other state legislatures when they convene at later dates.

Here is a look at a few by states:

Virginia: A bill to require proof of financial responsibility, in case of accidents, before motorboat owners may register. A bill which reduces the penalty for joyriding in a boat of less than $100 in value to a misdemeanor. Unauthorized use of more valuable boats, without intent to steal, would be punishable by imprisonment from one to five years or in the judge's discretion, without a jury trial, by not more than 12 months in jail and a $500 fine.

Tennessee: Boat numbering certificates could be issued for periods up to four years. Boat owners would have their choice of renewing annually, as under the present law, or they could apply for certificates valid for more than one year and pay a proportionately larger fee.

Pennsylvania: A bill proposing creation of an independent administrative agency, known as the Motor Boat Board, and transferring to it all the powers, duties and funds for the regulation of boating now vested in the state's Fish Commission.

New York: A measure which would require every undocumented motorboat 18 feet or longer to carry a foot-square fluorescent-orange distress flag and three red night flares. A bill increasing state aid for local boating facilities.

New Jersey: A bill to create a legislative commission to study the navigation and aesthetics problems in the state's rivers and bays owing to abandoned or unseaworthy vessels, piers and docks, and the effectiveness of present laws for dealing with such problems.

Maine: A bill that would repeal the requirement that boat owners prove personal property tax payment as a condition for registering boats. Another measure introduced and subsequently withdrawn would have required registration of sailboats in addition to motorboats and would have scaled registration fees according to the fair market value of the boat, in lieu of personal property tax.

Massachusetts: A bill that would prohibit effluent discharges from any boat having a toilet or sink. After Jan. 1, 1972, all such vessels would be required to carry a holding tank and marinas would have to install adequate pump-out facilities or lose their business license. The bill forbids the discharge from vessels of any solid waste, oil, grease, raw sewage, garbage, rubbish or debris.

Maryland: A bill that would extend state numbering to boats of 7½ horsepower, or less. The measure also would apply the titling tax which all Maryland-numbered boats have to pay to craft in the 7½ horsepower or less category, and would increase this titling tax rate from 3 to 4 per cent.

String Of Bass

Wayland Loftin of Ayden shows off a string of seven bass he caught while on a trip to Danville, Va. The fish, which weighted in at 16 pounds, were caught in a pond near Danville on a Hellbender lure. The largest of the first weighed 3½ pounds.

Rod And Gun: This Writer Has Enjoyed His Stay In The State

By ROD AMUNDSON

If you are lucky enough to have survived two-score years in this complicated world of ours, you may have noticed that the older you get the faster time flies. April 1, 1948, marked the beginning of my residence in North Carolina and my employment with the Wildlife Resources Commission.

The 23rd year must be faced with mixed emotions: gratitude for having been allowed to live and work here this long; astonishment that the past 22 years have slipped by so fast; regret that I have accomplished so little; and determination to accomplish more in the years ahead.

Time can be measured in seconds, hours, days, decades, centuries, eons. Accomplishment, like success, is difficult to measure. I would not trade those 22 years in North Carolina for all of the other 35. North Carolina is a nice place in which to "live and move and have our being."

So much for sentiment. Cynical Sam says, "Fishing is not generally considered to be a competitive sport. The competition begins when the fishing ends—when fishermen start lying."

But here is one guy who doesn't have to lie about his take. He made nine trips to the upper Chowan River recently and caught a total of 60 largemouths that weighed a total of 220-plus pounds. Like most other fish, largemouths are hungry after a long cold winter of comparative dormancy. Up until spawning time they will feed greedily, and all you have to do is locate the fish. They will hit just about anything you offer them.

With a little ingenuity, you can make an effective fish lure out of one of those pop-top gadgets you pull off the top of a beverage can. Punch a hole in the solid part and tie on a hook with soft, fine wire. Attach a swivel to the ring at the other end. You can vary the action by the simple means of bending the tab to suit your taste—or that of the fish.

Occasionally some rather intriguing letters come in the mail, and they usually come around to my desk. Recently a lad wrote to say that he had heard that rabbit meat has no food value, and that persons living on a diet of rabbit meat would die of starvation.

Rabbit meat is very high in protein. Rabbits are vegetarians, and because of the wide variety of plants they feed on, their flesh is probably more nutritious than beef. It is doubtful that anyone would literally starve to death on a diet of rabbit meat alone, but humans require fats and carbohydrates as well as protein, and this kind of diet would likely result in death from any of several diseases caused by malnutrition.

Incidentally, a shortage of protein is a major social and dietary problem in most of the world's underdeveloped countries. America's pet dogs and cats get far more protein than do people in many parts of the world. Economists and sociologists are looking to the oceans for a source of protein to feed undernourished countries.

Smoke Gets in Your Eyes

"These days, everybody's for conservation. The movement's oldest, most powerful enemies have raised such a public relations smokescreen you need a score card to tell the polluters from the polluted upon. Fact is, however, everybody's for conservation as long as someone else has to do the conserving. Like the middle-aged fellow driving the late model, 4-door, powder blue Falcon with Maryland license number AW 9861, he's for conservation. You can tell by the bumper sticker 'Pounce on Polluters.' Commuting into Washington, D. C., this conservation advocate—balding, wears sunglasses—pulled up to a stoplight and proceeded to dump his ashtray full of garbage into the street. But he's for conservation. Just ask him. And so are all the bigtime polluters. Just ask them."

Playoff Berth Still In Doubt

OAKLAND (AP) — A suspenseful numbers game is coming to a close in the National Hockey League West Division and the Philadelphia Flyers have been reluctantly drawn into the game.

The Flyers, who seemingly were assured of a playoff berth, found themselves tied today for third place with Oakland, which beat Los Angeles 4-1 Friday night in the only NHL contest.

Philadelphia ended the season today against Minnesota, faced with the possibility of being shut out of the playoffs if they lose or tie, because fifth-place Minnesota still has another game Sunday at Pittsburgh.

Oakland ends its season tonight at last-place Los Angeles, and the only way the Seals could miss the playoffs now would be to lose while Minnesota ties Philadelphia and also beats Pittsburgh.

If two, or all three teams, end the season in the tie, the team with the fewest victories is left out of the playoffs.

After Oakland's victory before 9,964 fans, second largest Oakland home crowd this season, the situation looked like this:

Minnesota, with two games remaining, had 17 victories and 56 points. Philadelphia had 17 victories and 58 points. Oakland had 22 victories and 58 points.

Bucs Eliminate Philadelphia

By BEN THOMAS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Lew Alcindor's up to his old tricks again.

He's got the Milwaukee Bucks dreaming of championships just as UCLA did during the years the amazing athlete played there....just as he did at Power Memorial Academy in New York.

In other words, Lew Alcindor became the first National Basketball Association team—oops, pardon the slip—The Milwaukee Bucks became the first team to advance to a divisional championship series in the NBA Friday night when they beat the Philadelphia 76ers 115-106.

Alcindor scored 46 points. It boosted his total for five playoff games to 181—an average just a shade over 36 points.

Chicago shot down the Atlanta Hawks, who were trying to make it four straight, in the night's other NBA playoff action, the Bulls winning 131-120. Atlanta holds a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Western Division semifinals.

Los Angeles, behind 2-1, plays at Phoenix in tonight's only NBA action. The Los Angeles-Phoenix survivor takes on the Atlanta-Chicago series' winner for the Western Division title.

Milwaukee now plays either New York or Baltimore, which trails the Knicks 3-2 with the Eastern Division series resuming Sunday at Baltimore.

It was an uphill fight for Milwaukee, however. The 76ers had an 85-82 advantage after the first three periods. The Bucks didn't get their first lead of the second half until Alcindor made good on a three-point play to put Milwaukee ahead 92-90 in the fourth period.

Bill Cunningham and Wally Jones kept the 76ers in contention until the waning moments. Cunningham scored 28 and Jones 26.

Chicago, with Chet Walker and Clem Haskins providing the scoring punch, breezed past atlanta in the first period and the Hawks could never get the upper hand, although they led briefly after intermission.

Dick Motta, Chicago's coach, isn't ready to just hand the series to the Hawks in the fifth game at Atlanta Sunday.

Pirate Netters Fall To 'Dogs

Atlantic Christian College handed East Carolina University's netters their fourth straight defeat of the season Friday in a tennis match.

The Bucs came closest to victory in the match, but failed to sweep the doubles, which they had to accomplish to take it.

The Bucs were scheduled to meet William & Mary on Saturday, then travel to St. Andrews on Monday.

Summary:

Ken Rand (ACC) defeated Graham Felton, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Danny Thompson (ACC) defeated Bill Ransone, 7-5, 6-4.

Danny Phillips (ACC) defeated Bill Van Middlesworth, 6-1, 6-1.

Mike Grady (EC) defeated Bill Graham, 6-2, 6-3.

Jimmy Adcox (ACC) defeated Bruce Linton, 7-5, 1-6, 6-2.

Kirk Jones (EC) defeated Henry Yancy, 6-1, 6-4.

Rand-Thompson (ACC) defeated Felton-Ransone, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4.

Van Middlesworth-Grady (EC) defeated Phillips-Graham, 7-9, 6-2, 6-0.

Orioles, Cubs Receive Nods

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Six months and 1,944 major league baseball games from now, it will all boil down to the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs in the National League and the Oakland Athletics and Baltimore Orioles in the American.

A nationwide panel of some 200 sports editors and broadcasters polled by The Associated Press, picked those four teams to win their respective division titles and battle it out in the post-season playoffs next fall. The Orioles and Cubs were picked to advance to the World Series. The winner of the fall classic? We'll leave that one to you.

The voters relegated three of last year's division winners to also-ran status, picking only the Orioles to repeat the American League East romp. The world champion New York Mets, who beat Baltimore in five games in the 1969 World Series, were rated no better than third in the National League East behind both Chicago and St. Louis.

Atlanta, winners in the NL West last year, also were placed third in their division with the Reds and San Francisco Giants ahead of them. If the Giants finish second, as the poll predicted they will, it would be their fifth consecutive runner-up finish.

Here's the way the four division races looked to the voters:

National League East— 1, Chicago; 2, St. Louis; 3, New York; 4, Pittsburgh; 5, Philadelphia; 6. Montreal.

National League West—1, Cincinnati; 2, San Francisco; 3, Atlanta; 4, Houston; 5, Los Angeles; 6, San Diego;

American League East—1, Baltimore; 2, Boston; 3, New York; 4, Detroit; 5, Washington; 6, Cleveland.

American League West—1, Oakland; 2, Minnesota; 3, California; 4, Chicago; 5, Kansas City; 6, Milwaukee.

The closest race, according to the poll, will be in the National League East. Chicago barely beat St. Louis, with 66 of 180 voters picking the Cubs first and 60 favoring the Cards. Only 34 thought the Mets could repeat.

New Phone Services For A Growing City

Text and Photographs

By Tommy Forrest

Gleaming new banks of electronic equipment have been installed to handle expanding communication of the fast growing city of Greenville.

The Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, to meet the accelerating demands, has had under construction for the last two years new dialing equipment on the third floor of their existing building on the corner of Fifth and Pitt Streets.

The building has been planned around a forecast of ten years to provide plenty of room for expansion in the future.

The new equipment enables numbers to be dialed with more accuracy and speed. Also, telephone users in the Greenville area will notice a difference in the dial tone in telephones. This is caused by changes in the new system.

The telephone company does more than just handle local and long distance phone calls. It also provides a microwave signal for the three major television networks, ABC, CBS, and NBC, as well as carry 600 conversations over the same signal.

Other services they provide include private lines, which enable a phone located in another city, as well as in Greenville, to ring at the same time.

Another service, valuable to the business man on the go, is a mobile phone installed in cars or trucks. The company has two channels for this service which are licensed by the Federal Communications Commission.

A gas company in one city can monitor the gas pressure in another city by taking advantage of the phone companies metering service.

With nine large cables in the basement of the phone company building, each cable is approximately 5½ inches in diameter and contains 6000 tiny wires that carry the conversations between parties. A few smaller cables are also installed in the basement.

As a company foreman explained, "Anything that can be sent over wire, the phone company can handle."

During an emergency, the company is well prepared. In the basement of the building, a large Diesel generator can produce power to operate the equipment and provide emergency lighting for their own building.

The new touch - tone telephone, one of the latest innovations in phone design, exemplifies the progress made in telephone design since Alexander Graham Bell invented the first workable telephone.

Young Promoter Looks For Festival Millions

By DAVID COHEN

TORONTO (UPI) — John Brower is a new breed of businessman. He's a 23-year-old promoter who sounds 49 on the telephone and looks 19 in person.

With two successful music festivals under his belt, he's accustomed to numbers with lots of zeroes on the end. He wheels in people by the hundreds of thousands, and deals in dollars by the millions.

He gets all the headaches the older-grey-suited businessman does, with some extras thrown in—including the vagaries of dealing with some rather unpredictable people such as Beatle John Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono.

Brower is a promoter of music festivals where dollar signs twinkle like stars in the House of Aquarius.

Hopes To Draw 250,000

He wants to bring one of the new tribal-migration festivals, a la Woodstock, to Canada in July. The festival's aims are to promote peace, love and understanding of the world youth movement, he says.

But it takes money to move the machinery. Brower is gearing for an influx of young—a quarter of a million or more, he says.

Brower is a slim, intense and confident type. It may be he sounds older than he is because of the way he talks about his peers, "the kids."

"We want to do something significant for this generation of kids," he says. "In a mass gathering, they can exhibit how they can behave themselves.

'Peace Brings Respect'

"There has been Woodstock, the Altamont (Calif.) festival, and then the Tate killing. People are now just terrifically afraid of us.

(Four people died in Altamont, one of them a spectator knifed and beaten to death by motorcycle gang "security guards.")

"If we can put on a festival that is ordered ... where nobody gets killed, where piles of garbage aren't left ... where there is peace, then we can re-establish our respect."

Karma Productions, John Brower president, is now in charge of the festival, scheduled for July 3-5, which includes the American July 4 Independence Day holiday.

Lennon Shunned Profit

Originally it was "John Lennon's Peace Festival," but Lennon and Yoko Ono no longer want to be associated with it.

Lennon wanted the festival to be "free," with no admission charge.

Brower said that would be impossible.

Government regulations call for a $3 million guarantee to cover costs of police and security, water facilities, sewage disposal, garbage disposal and medical facilities—if the festival is to take place at all, Brower said. To raise this money, investors were needed and investors would want some return.

Still Choosing Site

Brower now is preoccupied with plans for the festival.

The planned site 60 miles northeast of Toronto is not available due to zoning laws. But Karma is looking at three other nearby sites.

Once the site is selected, ticket sales will begin and Brower estimates that the festival could draw up to 40,000. Tickets will be $15 for the three-day event.

Eddie Capitalizes On 'Green Acres'

MONACO (UPI)—The television comedy series "Green Acres" ranks high among the more frivolous if successful programs of the present day. Yet star Eddie Albert has found a way to use the fame and some of the fortune it has given him in one of the most serious crises ever to face humanity, pollution.

The veteran actor has capitalized on the instant recognition he has acquired from the role in the United States and abroad to gain an audience which might otherwise have been less attentive to his argument that "we're in a lot more trouble from pollution than if the Russians had attacked us."

"The facts on pollution must be distributed as rapidly as possible," he said at the 10th International Television Festival here, at which he was a judge. He took advantage of the gathering to announce formation of the Eddie Albert Production Company to make educational films and visual aids on the subject.

"We hope to bridge the gap between the scientists on the one hand and the public and their representatives in government," he aid. "If man doesn't do something he has not more than 40 or 50 years left on this planet."

Sympathetic Listener

Albert, who found a sympathetic listener in Prince Rainier—the Mediterranean which borders this little country is becoming polluted—said he had spent much of the last year speaking in universities and elsewhere in the United States.

"We ship our last surplus bushel of wheat to Indian in 1974," he said. "There may be tragedies man has not yet conceived of in the offing, for example millions dying of famine in the next ten years. It can happen. We won't be the first civilization to die. The Sahara was once a lush Garden of Eden, you know."

Violinist Here In Concert Thursday

A Polish born Mexican citizen, Henryk Szeryng, one of the world's celebrated violinist, will appear in concert in Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University at 8:15 Thursday night.

This is a change from the originally announced date of April 14 for the Szeryng appearance.

Szeryng, born in Moscow, has been cited by Time Magazine as Mexico's "cultural ambassador." In 1954 Szeryng was a music teacher at the National University of Mexico when pianist Artur Rubinstein appeared in a Mexico City concert. Szeryng was so moved by Rubinstein's playing that he rushed backstage, embracing his fellow countryman. When Szeryng admitted that he "played the violin", Rubinstein invited him to his hotel room for an impromptu. "He played Bach sonatas and reduced me to tears," recalls the famed pianist. Rubinstein was so impressed that he asked Szeryng to make a record album with him, and later induced Sol Hurok to book Szeryng for a 20-concert tour of the U. S. A.

In the years following this first tour, Szeryng has played to audiences in North and South America, Europe, Australia, New Zealand, Indonesia, Portuguese Africa, and Japan.

On his current tour, his 11th coast - to - coast one in the United States, Szeryng will appear in more than 30 state capitals across the country.

As a recording artist, he has four times been awarded the coveted "GrandPrix du Disque" in 1955, 1957, 1960 and 1961 for performances of the music of Bach, Prokofiev, Brahms and Beethoven.

This concert, sponsored by the Student Government Association, is part of the series of outstanding entertainment made possible by purchase of season tickets for ECU's Artists Series. Admission to this concert is by season ticket only. No individual tickets are available.

HENRYK SZERYNG — Polish born Mexican violinist, who will appear in concert at ECU's Wright Auditorium Thursday evening.

Treat your taste buds to an exotic feast of foreign dishes using recipes from Scandinavia, the Orient, or the Middle East. Foods of the World presents THE COOKING OF SCANDINAVIA, THE COOKING OF JAPAN, MIDDLE EASTERN COOKING, and THE COOKING OF INDIA, each accompanied by a spiral bound recipe book. A source of delightful reading, these books give far more than the flavor of foreign cooking; they explore the customs of the countries, giving the flavor of life.

Spice up your life with Frederic Rosengarten, Jr.'s THE BOOK OF SPICES. Essential to any good cook's success is a knowledge of spices and how to use them . This comprehensive study gives the history, native habitat, picture, processing, and use of each spice described.

For the busy homemaker, THE CLOCKWATCHER'S COOKBOOK by WRAL Channel 5's Bette Elliott, can be a great help. Mrs. Elliott's purpose in writing the book was to aid those women who want "something we can do with what we have on hand that doesn't take long."

Those unfortunate people who must diet will find THE SPECIAL DIET COOK BOOK invaluable. Marvin Small's book contains recipes to use for 7 diets: Low Calorie, Low Sodium, High Residue, Bland, Low Fat-Low Cholesterol, Diabetic, and High Calorie. In addition to recipes, Small includes a description of each diet, informative tables, and charts as guidelines.

Dear to the heart of all Southerners is Southern cooking. Mildred Warren lets even Yankees in on some of the secrets in her new book THE ART OF SOUTHERN COOKING: A COLLECTION OF NEW, TRADITIONAL, AND OLD FAMILY RECIPES.

People who suffer food allergy will be interested in THE ALLERGY COOKBOOK by Carol G. Emerling and Eugene O. Jonckus. Written especially for those persons allergic to such staples as milk, eggs, wheat, and oil, this book lists allergy - causing foods and the products containing them, and lists substitutes for these foods. The dozens of recipes may open new worlds of taste treats for the allergic eater.

World Wide Search For Art Keeps Prices High

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI)—The stock market didn't keep going up forever, so how about the art market?

Almost to a man, experts in the increasingly rarified fine arts field are market bulls. They are happily astounded at the way prices (and thus their commissions) keep up their breathless zoom and they think it's a climb virtually without limit.

"More people are chasing more fine art objects for more reasons than ever before. But there are fewer and fewer objects of really fine art to be bought.

A new world record, more than treble the old one, for a painting by Van Gogh: $1,350,000 in a New York sale.

A new world record, double the previous one, for an icon: $8,820.

A new world record for a piece of porcelain: $110,400 for a rare Chinese bowl. One nonexpert described the bowl as "a plain and rather boring piece," but the price was about 21 times what the seller paid for it 11 years ago.

Nor are these isolated instances.

In December a single page from an illustrated Persian manuscript sold for $72,000.

Three days later a Rembrandt drawing also made $72,000. That was the lowest figure for three Rembrandt drawings sold in a year.

Rembrandt is art's most famous name, but what about Arthur Devis? He's a minor 18th century English portraitist. One of his paintings sold late last year for $115,200.

A fluke: Well, a second Devis went a few days earlier for $110,400.

N.C. Museum Opens Show, "The Door" In Raleigh Today

RALEIGH — An exhibition of doors, entitled "The Door" opens today on the fourth floor of the North Carolina Museum of Art.

For this show, original doors, photomurals of international and American doors, and a slide show with taped commentary emphasizing old and new North Carolina doors will be on view, according to General Curator Ben F. Williams.

Two outstanding primitive carved wooden doors from the Mali Republic in Africa will be shown. One of these is from a granary (or in local terms, a corn-crib). These were lent by the Museum of Primitive Art in New York. The Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation in New York has sent a painted rawhide Tipi door from Cheyenne, Oklahoma; and Rutgers University has loaned an 18th century Pennsylvania Dutch door.

Other outstanding examples will include a molded fiberglass door; a carved wooden door from Mexico; a pair of carved Italian doors of about the 17th century and a pair of gilded and carved 18th century Venetian doors (both the latter pairs are a gift to the museum from Mrs. Byron Foy of New York).

ECU Music Calendar

The first week in April at East Carolina University, through coincidence, becomes a week of violinists. Mexican violinst Henryk Szeryng; Sergiu Luca of Israel; and four American violinists, Paul Topper, Rodney Schmidt, Carol Hampton and Donna King — will be in concert at ECU this week. The week's offerings include:

—Sunday, 3:30 p. m. The N. C. Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Benjamin Swalin, with guest violinist Sergiu Luca performing the Tchaikovsky "Violin Concerto." Other selections will be Beethoven's "Egmont Overture" and Sibelius' "Symphony No. 1." Admission by membership or by purchase of tickets at the door.

—Monday, 8:15 p. m. Recital Hall, School of Music. Senior recital by Donna King, violin. Her selections will include the Beethoven "Sonata No. 1" and two movements of Bach's "Partita." On the same program, junior Charlene DeShaw will give a voice recital. Selections not known.

—Thursday, 8:15 p. m. Mexico's violinist "cultural ambassador" Henryk Szeryng is appearing in a concert as part of the Artists Series. Selections unknown.

—Friday, 8:15 p. m. Recital Hall, School of Music. Eight faculty and two student musicians will appear in a "Faculty Chamber Music Recital." Participating will be instrumentalists Paul Topper, violin; Rodney Schmidt, violin and viola; Paul Kosower, cello; Eugene Isabelle, oboe; Charles Stevens, harpsichord; James Houlik, saxophone; Carol Hampton (student), violin; Linda Latosek, bass (student); and vocalists Virginia Linn, soprano; and Paul Aliapoulios, bass. The program will include Beethoven's "Serenade"; "Four Bagatelles for String Trio," Gregory Kosteck, Bach's "Cantata No. 82 (It Is Enough)"; "Autumn Nocturne," by Norman Symonds; and "The Owl and The Pussy Cat," by Kosteck. Kosteck is composer - in - residence at ECU.

Admission to both the Monday and Friday recitals is free.

Sculpturing In Stone Remains A Challenge To World Artists

From the time man first felt the instinct to portray his world in art, stone has been one of his favorite materials. From early crudé goddesses of fertility to the latest abstract objects fashioned from stone, sculptors have tackled marble, sandstoné, granite, limestone and other types of stone, native and imported.

This is one field in which there are no easy short-cuts to achievement. Stone is basically a stubborn material — in varying degrees, depending on the characteristics of the individual type of stone. Unlike painting or other arts, sculpturing does not readily lend itself to correcting mistakes. Once the artist has made a cut and removed portions of his basic material, there is no going back or changing direction.

Stone has one outstanding advantage. It is not nearly as perishable as other materials. Some art lovers have expressed a conviction that art executed in stone becomes more beautiful with the passing of years. Others even claim that accidents of time enhance the work of an artist — that a torso or fragment can be more expressive than the complete original sculpture.

Techniques change. Modern artists have at their disposal new tools to ease the physical labor of carving. But basically, sculpturing in stone remains a challenge to artists — not only physically, but one of vision. A sculptor still has to visualize the secret of form and beauty locked within the untouched block.

One has only to look at the magnificance of stone sculpture in all lands of the world to realize that over the centuries sculptors have met the challenge, and through their labor of love have made the world richer and given us a lasting legacy of beauty. — JERRY RAYNOR

Two-Bedroom Ranch Has Appeal

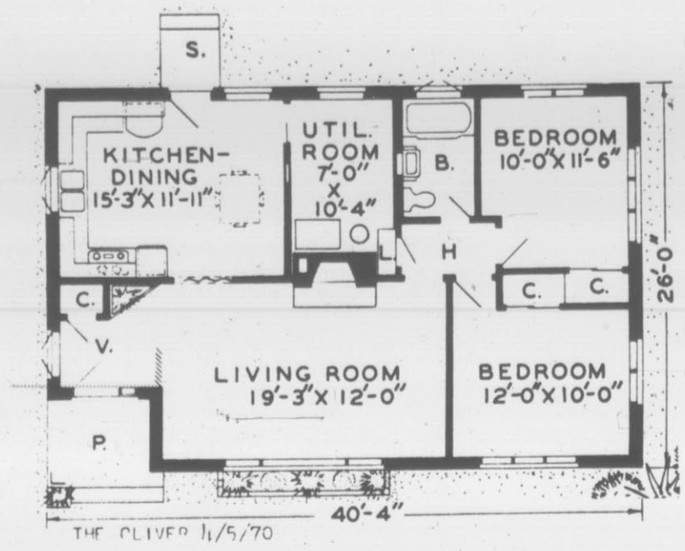
THE OLIVER 1/5/70



THE OLIVER 1/5/70

A BUDGET PLEASER — The Oliver, designed by the Associated Architects, is a two-bedroom traditional ranch with one bath, living room, kitchen with dining space and utility room. There is no basement, although one could be provided if necessary.

By GERRY BISHOP

Low-cost housing is at a premium in this country. In fact, 50 per cent of all the American families in the market for a house cannot afford to buy, according to federal government figures.

One of the reasons is that much of the new construction has been in the higher - priced category, leaving the demand for smaller homes unfilled.

Often a family would be willing to build what it could afford if the plans were available. With these families in mind, the Associated Architects offer the Oliver, a two-bedroom ranch with many economy features.

Despite its money - saving advantages, this model has class and distinction of its own. The style is traditional, enriched by stone veneer construction and a hipped roof with a 5-12 pitch. Asphalt shingles are specified.

This would be an ideal home for either a young couple or retirees. Maintenance chores would be a breeze, an important consideration in this time of higher labor costs.

The log - burning fireplace in the living room is another amenity not usually found in a house this size. Like the stone veneer, it adds a touch of charm that takes the Oliver out of the ordinary.

Vestibule Adds Living Room Privacy

A vestibule receives arriving guests, an asset for the living room, giving it a degree of privacy. The living room's dimensions, approximately 19 feet by 12 feet, suggest that it would be the family activities center.

Another bonus is the large kitchen with dining space. It measures approximately 15 feet by 12 feet and is equipped with built-in appliances and cabinets.

Adjoining the kitchen is a utility room for the furnace and water heater. Sine there is no basement, the washer and dryer could be located there too.

The bedrooms, each of comfortable size, are near the bath.

Although plans call for crawl space rather than a basement, the builder could provide a cellar if one were desired. This could be adapted to an integral garage.

The plans call for oak floors.

The outside dimensions are approximately 40 feet by 26 feet and there are 1,014 square feet of living area.

Termite Control Plays Key Role In Any Home Maintenance Program

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Is termite control on your home maintenance schedule?

For most homeowners, thought of termites comes with the sight in spring of swarming, winged, ant-like creatures which may or may not be termites. For others, it is the prelude to sale of a home, required by FHA or bank mortgage officials. For some, sadly, it is discovery of damaged doorsills, floors, window frames or other wood in the home.

For the wise, it is a matter of routine maintenance.

Termites are tiny (1/4 to 3/8-inch) wood-eating insects that can do incredible damage to a house—and even to books, rugs, curtains, clothing, anything that contains cellulose—if allowed to do their work undisturbed. However, they are by no means uncontrollable.

Ideally, the ground on which a house is built should be treated chemically during building to protect against termites, and the house itself should be built following certain protective practices.

But what about the house you have that's up and lived in and, perhaps, infested? Termites can begin work in a house before the construction crew is out, or after it has been standing 100 years. They are found in every state except Alaska, but, the farther south the more prevalent they are.

A homeowner would be wise to make a careful inspection part of his spring routine and, if he has the slightest doubts, call in a professional. Infestations can be treated, damage repaired, and a contract obtained providing annual inspection and guaranteeing against reinfestation.

Even if there are no signs of termites, treatment of the soil around a house and annual inspection will provide peace of mind. It is well to note that no one can guarantee against termites forever, and periodic inspection is necessary to assure that the pests are not present.

Unless you are searching for them, termites seldom are visible. They are seen only when a termite "population explosion" in a home causes emigrants to leave for a "new world" where they can found a colony, according to Dr. David Watson, entomologist for Velsicol Chemical Corp., a supplier of chemicals to the pest control industry.

Termites may sprout wings and swarm, or emigrate, once a year (twice in the South), usually but not necessarily on a warm day after a rainfall. "It's all over in a couple of hours, and as a result it usually happens without detection by the homeowner." The swarm you do see may be flying ants.

How To Tell Them

How do you tell a termite if you do see one? Watson says termites "look very much like an ant, except that an ant is narrow-waisted, like a Coke bottle, while the termite is shaped like the rest of the soft drink bottles."

If you should see them swarming, they are yellow-brown to black and lumpy looking with four transparent wings of the same size. If, on the other hand, you should find them while probing the exposed wood of your home with a screwdriver (an excellent tool for the job) they will appear as milk-white, plump bobls.

The species of American termites which live underground, Watson says, make their nests at a "warmth level," anywhere from one to 25 feet below grade. They go to the ground to obtain moisture which tye require at least every 36 hours. With moisture available, they can exist within the house.

By building mud tunnels which protect them from contact with the air, which is fatal except during swarming, termites can go from ground to house with ease. The termite tunnel can range from pencil thin to a foot wide. Termites have built free-standing mud-tunnels as high as six to eight feet, Watson said. And any opening as small as 1-64 inch in diameter can admit the termite—cracks in concrete slab or foundation, openings around drain and water pipes, around electrical service portals. Wood in contact with earth makes a delightful raceway for them.

Where to look for termites? The first space to inspect, Watson recommends, is any earth-filled area covered by concrete such as steps, porches or garbage slabs. Also in the masonry foundation of a frame house, particularly where there is heavy planting. Inspect carefully, inside and out, for telltale mud tunnels or evidence of decay.

If possible (where there is a basement or crawl space) conduct your inspection from below. Probe exposed wood parts with a screwdriver. Any more than normal penetration of the point may indicate termites.

In looking for a reliable source for termite inspection and control, Watson suggested, check your local Better Business Bureau. This source may have information concerning an operator if he is unreliable. Membership in the National Pest Control Association, or a state branch of the organization, is a key to reliability.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—I will be 65 years old in a couple of months. When I retire at that time, I expect to sell my house and move to another city, where my wife and I will pay rent to my son, who owns a two-family house. I have been told that I can get about $18,000 for my present house. I paid only $12,000 for it. Is it true, as I have been told, that I won't have to pay any income taxes on the profit because I will be over 65 at the time of the sale?

A.—Your information is correct. The tax law says that if you are more than 65 years old at the time you sell your house, you do not have to pay a tax on the profit—provided that you have lived in the house for five of the past eight years and that the sale price is not over $20,000. If it should be over $20,000, then only part of the profit is taxed.

Q.—I painted our house last year. The paint seems to be in good condition except under the eaves. Why is this?

A.—Without more information on exactly what condition has developed, it is difficult to give you a definite reply. But the two most common causes of such trouble are (1) that the area was damp at the time you painted it or that dampness found its way under the paint later on or (2) that the area under the eaves, unlike the rest of the house, was still glossy at the time you painted it and that the paint failed to "take" properly. Paint under the eaves is less exposed to the weather and often retains a measure of gloss for years, assuming that a paint of that nature was used in the previous job.

Q.—The walls in our attic appear to be some kind of insulation board. They were there when we bought the house four years ago. We now have decided to paint the insulation board. Does it require any special kind of paint?

A.—The surface of insulation board is porous and should be given a coat of primer-sealer before the top coat is applied. Be sure the board is completely free of dust before painting. Almost any type of paint can be used, but if the primer-sealer is water-thinned, use a paint of the same kind; if it's solvent-thinned, use a solvent-thinned paint.

When you look at the outside of a house, can you tell whether it is well designed?

Most persons would hesitate to answer that question in the affirmative, fearful that they might be called on to define the reasons for their opinions. They need have no such hesitation, for an important element of good exterior house design is its effect on the onlooker. And a complete evaluation of the outside of a house must bear a relationship to its surroundings.

While a house design is the sum total of many things, inside and out, it must fit comfortably into its environment so that it appears to be part of it. No matter how architecturally sound it is, it loses part of its appeal when it does not do this.

This is why houses of traditional design have retained their popularity over the years. They seem to be part of the landscape, although it must be admitted there are some individual examples of traditional houses which hardly fit this description.

Houses of contemporary design have so-called "clean" lines. They stress beauty and function, generally disdaining ornamentation. They emanate an air of sophistication pleasing to many persons. It is unfortunate that contemporary design is often confused with modernistic design, which usually is "way out" architecture that may please the owner and a few others but is so innovative that it has a dubious resale value. Contemporary design, on the other hand, has a fairly general appeal if one remembers that the word "good" implies proper placement on a suitable site.

It thus becomes clear that, if you are having a house built, you should give considerable thought to a harmonious relationship between it and the land. A good architect keeps this constantly in mind in designing a custom house for an individual. Thousands of persons have houses built every year according to plans published in newspapers, magazines and other publications. These generally are sound plans, created by selected architects.

While changes in these plans are sometimes necessitated by the needs of an individual family, it is usually wise not to permit the builder to make changes in the natural growth present on your property. Too often a builder will have the land bulldozed indiscriminately, leaving a couple of large, old trees but pulling out dozens of smaller ones. Usually, a little extra planning and imagination will enable those immature trees to be left in place—to provide beauty and shade in the years ahead.

New Neighbors Offer Challenge

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A new neighborhood can be quite a challenge to your good humor, observes a woman, who has had occasion to make many house moves in the last few years.

But our transient way of life makes it important to circumvent the potential pitfalls and to get the family into the neighborhood structure as soon as possible. Some people are just getting to know neighbors when they must move on.

Some neighborhoods are set up like private little clubs. But you need not be insular because they are. Ignore. Make the overtures, if you want to be happy, she points out, offering these tips to ease the way:

Introduce your children to adults and children in the neighborhood within a few days. You might give neighbors three or four days to make that first neighborly call.

Animals should be introduced. If you have a cat, and there is a big dog next door, let the dog owner know that you have a cat. If you do this before the cat is treed by their dog, you may avoid an unpleasant encounter. Many people are not aware of a neighbor's cat until it has been injured by their dog. Then they may become defensive about it.

If you have a dog, inform your neighbors who might have cats or other small pets. If they are garden enthusiasts, they might good humoredly forewarn you to keep Fido away from a prize delphinium. They'll mean it.

Dogs and other animals can start a great many neighborhood feuds. A dog should be trained to stay on its own property. It can be happy roaming on a screened-in porch, but if there is enough space, some kind of outdoor pen should be built for it. A chain link fence may be needed for a large dog, but smaller dogs may be fenced inexpensively with a light wire mesh.

You should become aware of all booby traps in the area, if you have children. Swimming. Swimming pools can attract toddlers. You should determine whether there are any in the vicinity.

You might become aware of community activities, but you shouldn't become enmeshed in controversial town subjects until you have had time to study the facts. Don't take sides because you like the people involved in an issue.

Maintain friendly relationships with everyone, if possible. Many communities are divided constantly, and there is a tug-of-war about everything that happens. Always give the impression that you can't take sides until you've made a decision about the issue.

Don't be a house snob, seeking out people who live in the most important houses. First get acquainted with immediate neighbors, who may be more reliable in emergencies. Many people prefer unostentatious living, and you can't tell what they are like until you know them.

If you find the neighborhood conceals battle stations behind the crochet curtains, your main object should be to keep them holding their fire. You can do it by ignoring all the little neighborhood feuds.

Many people have difficulties in neighborhoods because they expect more of some people than they are willing to give of themselves. If you want good neighbors, you should be a good one yourself, it has been this woman's experience.

Local Utilities Added To Gold Medallion Program

The Greenville Utilities Commission has received authorization from the National Electrical Manufacturers Association to participate in the Gold Medallion home and apartment program.

Formal announcement of GUCO's affiliation with the program, which strives for standards of excellence in the field of electricity, was made Thursday night during a commission dinner meeting.

GUCO staff member Bill Wright pointed out that the program is designed as a communication tool between the construction industry, the electric power industry and the home owner.

By participating in the program, the commission will award the gold medallion to homes (or apartments) which meet or surpass the utility's standards.

"This program is a nationally recognized certification program through which total - electric homes and apartments are identified and may be publicized, provided their electrical content, insulation, and appliances meet approved standards and numbers," Wright said.

These homes and apartments are identified by the gold medallion emblem, a registered certification mark of NEMA, he added.

Wright said that gold medallions can be awarded to homes and apartments of all sizes and price brackets without "regard to the brands of electrical equipment which the builder or customer may choose to install."

"At this time, he said, we have a large lag between our summer electrical load and our winter . . . load. For this technical reason we are promoting electric heat."

He pointed out the commission has carefully examined the national standards and found them "not only sound in all facets but extremely desireable for our customer's benefit."

Home and apartments will be certified by GUCO, based on the standards adopted by the commission. The firm will maintain a permanent record of this certification for future reference.

Each home must be entirely electrically heated, equipped with an electric range, electric water heater plus at least three additional major appliances. The county electrical inspector will verify the adequacy of the electrical wiring.

Wright said that a minimum service entrance of 150 amperes is required in addition to a specified number and location of outlets and switches . . . Specific insulation requirements will be met also, he added.

When the home or apartment has been certified for gold medal qualification, GUCO will advance the sum of $0.95 towards the type of identification device the builder or developer desires.

The gold medallion award, it was pointed out, has gained recognition as a "sign of assurance" to new home buyers.

Others explaining the new program Thursday night included Ed Waldrop, GUCO chairman, utilities director Charles Horne, and utilities engineer Malcolm Green.

Persons desiring more information on the program are urged to contact the commission. The standards set for meeting gold medallion requirements are outlined in a brochure prepared by the commission and are available upon request.

Plan To Reduce Burglary Rate

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Hoping to cut a rising burglary rate, police have launched "Operation Identification"—a plan for placing identifying numbers on household belongings.

Police Chief L.A. Jacobson said Thursday the department and a service club will loan etching tools to homeowners with hopes they would etch the owner's driver license number on such items as bicycles, tools and television sets.

Then the numbered items will be registered with police. Jacobson said decals will be furnished for front windows of homes to warn that property has been marked.

Stamps Buy An Elephant

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI)—Now you can get an elephant with trading stamps.

At least, the Norfolk City Zoo has done so in a campaign sponsored by the Virginia Zoological and Aquarium Society to collect donations of stamps to acquire a baby elephant for the zoo.

A group savings project was authorized by a stamp distributor (Sperry and Hutchinson) with a goal of approximately 2,000 filled stamp books required for "purchase" of the pachyderm and its transportation to Norfolk.

A market chain placed collection boxes in 37 of its stores in the state. School groups and civic organizations cooperated in solicitation of the trading stamps.

The Norfolk zoo now is considering community stamp collecting campaigns to acquire other animals.

'Town' Seeing Population Boom

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — In the 1950 census, nearby Dellview with a population of four was the smallest incorporated town in the nation. It had shrunk to one resident recently, but has since had a population explosion.

The 1970 census will record a population of 10 because one of the two houses in the town has been rented to a couple and their seven children.

Before that, the only resident was Mrs. Onie Dellinger. One of her relatives, David Dellinger, had Dellview incorporated in 1925, when he was a member of the legislature, so the town could adopt an ordinance giving him and his relatives authority to shoot wild dogs who were attacking their livestock.

HARDWORKING SOLONS

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Lawmaking is getting more complicated in Texas.

The 61st session of the State Legislature in 1969 considered 2,341 bills, 1,951 resolutions and 100 proposals for constitutional amendments—all record numbers. Legislators approved 944 bills and agreed to submit 16 of the constitution change proposals to voters.

NEW SPACE SUIT — ILC Industries in Dover, Del., manufacturer of the space suits America's astronauts have worn to the moon, released this picture of a new suit which is lighter, easier to put on and which allows more freedom of movement. The suit is being tested for use on future space flights. (AP Wirephoto)

Plea For Mercy Brings Results

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California minister who was faced with paying a penalty for filing a late tax return had his prayer answered.

The Internal Revenue Service regional office says its computer center at Ogden, Utah, received a letter from the minister about his 1968 tax woes which concluded: "I shall pray for Mercy."

The IRS assigned to the case a tax examiner at Ogden named Mercy Mardiel. Her decision, reported Thursday, was to cancel the penalty.

Carriers' Sale Interests Many

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Navy says there have been plenty of inquiries ever since it announced last week that the aircraft carriers Princeton and Valley Forge were for sale.

One company wanted to use the carriers for floating warehouses in Singapore; a San Francisco man wanted to make one into a museum, and a Nevada disc jockey said he wanted to support one with helium balloons to make "the largest floating crap game" in the gambling state.

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION ANNOUNCES A NEW PROGRAM

The Gold Medallion Home Program

The Gold Medallion is the electrical industry's award for standards of electrical excellence built into total electric homes and apartments. The emblem is registered in the U.S. Patent Office as a Certification Mark of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association (NEMA) and is awarded only by local electric utilities on the basis of approved electrical standards. All electrically heated homes are not necessarily Gold Medallion Homes . . yet all Gold Medallion Homes are electrically heated! To be certified for the award, a home must meet specific standards of wiring, lighting, ventilation and insulation as well as heating. They also must contain certain major electric appliances.

Some Grounds For Optimism Appeared During Past Week

By JOHN HENRY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some grounds for cautious optimism about a resumption of growth in the economy appeared during the past week.

"The odds on some upturn look better," said William Butler, chief economist for New York's Chase Manhattan Bank. "The second half of 1970 won't be spectacularly better than the first, but it certainly won't be worse."

One basis for optimism was a statement by Herbert Stein, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, that the current economic slowdown would be limited and that "output will be rising again in the second half of the year."

The case for an upsurge in the economy in the second half is better now than in January when the council's Economic Report was written, Stein said.

He said the council foresaw the economy rising in real terms at a rate of 3 to 4 per cent throughout the next government fiscal year, which begins July 1, 1970.

The major cause of an upturn at midyear, he said, would be a turnaround in housing and business inventories.

While Stein conceded that some of the February economic statistics had caused concern that the current slowdown might be "more acute and longer lasting" than the council had predicted in January, he said some recent news was more encouraging.

He cited as an example the increase in the money supply in recent weeks and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns' endorsement last month of a continued moderate monetary expansion.

Some economic indicators released during the past week appeared to lend reinforcement to the favorable picture that Stein painted.

The Commerce Department reported new factory orders rose 1.6 per cent in February to $54.75 billion from $53.86 billion a month earlier. The January results were 2.7 per cent below the December level.

Meanwhile construction outlays in February rose 1.2 per cent to a seasonally adjusted rate of $91.7 billion from $90.6 billion in January, 'he department reported.

Another favorable development was news from the Commerce Department that the ratio of inventories to shipments in February remained unchanged from January even though inventories registered their largest increase since October.

Two important consumer surveys released during the past week indicated consumers were still in a buying mood.

The Federal Reserve Board reported the expansion in consumer debt accelerated in February after four successive months of narrowing advances, but the gain was among the smallest in the past two years.

Offsetting the positive developments was word that orders for machine tools dropped 20 per cent in February from a month earlier.

The value of orders is regarded as an especially important economic indicator. That is because the orders show well in advance of other signs how industry planners regard the outlook in terms of ordering equipment to be delivered perhaps a year or more later.

Auto production rose 2.4 per cent to 130,695 cars from 127,635 a week earlier but declined 8 per cent from 142,118 in the same period a year ago.

In another development, the Securities and Exchange Commission raised the cost of buying and selling stocks for smaller investors. The move is intended to ease the profit squeeze of brokerage houses.

On the labor front, the trucking industry and the Teamsters Union reached tentative agreement on a new national contract that would provide sizable pay boosts for 450,000 workers.

The accord, which must now be ratified by members, represents a sharp compromise from the union's original demands.

Furthermore, the increases are considerably smaller than those provided in many recent building trades contracts. Bargainers for the Teamsters were under heavy pressure to equal the building trades settlement.

Consequently, ratification may prove difficult.

Trouble Ahead For Postage Hike

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Initial congressional reaction has raised the possibility that trouble lies ahead for President Nixon's proposal to raise the price of a first-class postage stamp from 6 to 10 cents.

"A 10-cent first-class stamp is unconscionable," Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee, declared Friday after Nixon's proposal was sent to Congress.

The proposed increase was part of a package plan Nixon offered to finance a 6 per cent wage increase the government promised all federal workers under terms of an agreement reached Thursday.

Government and postal union negotiators worked out the 6 per cent agreement, along with an additional boost of 8 per cent for postal workers only that would be effective when Congress approves Nixon's postal reform plan.

The agreement halted the immediate threat of a new postal workers' strike, but it raised financing problems for the President.

Nixon's message left unanswered what will be done about the current 10-cent air mail rate. Assistant Postmaster General James W. Hargrove said the question is under study, adding the air mail rate might be merged with the first-class charge.

The first-class stamp proposal would bring in $2.3 billion annually, Nixon said. Raising charges on other types of mail would produce another $300 million.

Under the proposal, parcel post would cost 15 per cent more, so-called "junk" advertising mail an extra 5 per cent, second-class mailings 12 per cent, and single-piece thirdclass mail, 67 per cent.

The President also proposed a speedup in collection of estate and gift taxes to produce a revenue windfall of $1.5 billion in the 1971 fiscal year. That, coupled with mail cost increases and money already budgeted for federal pay increases, would pay for Thursday's agreement, Nixon said.

But McGee said it is out of the question to "load the burden of paying for this significant move in the area of labor-management relations on the one class of mail that pays its own way. We are going to have to talk about and consider a more equitable distribution of this load."

Nixon said his plan "will neither require extending the surtax nor raising income tax rates." But he said new and permanent revenue measures will be needed by mid-1971. He didn't say what type the administration will favor.

Police Go To School

Greenville police officers last month completed two 9-hour in-service training programs, one on search and seisure laws and one on the laws of arrest.

According to Chief T.E. Gladson, 48 men completed the refresher course on laws of arrest while 30 officers attended the search and seisure classes. The chief noted that the classes were attended "on their own time" and said the attendance was "good".

In addition, policemen David Garrison and Euel Atkinson completed a 30-hour breathalyzer school, and Sgt. David Bullock graduated from a 160-hour course for supervisors.

Officers this month are attending another in-service training program.

This month's program, "Psychology for Law Enforcement," is a 30-hour course being attended by officers on their off-duty time.

Both the two in-service programs last month and this month's program are being conducted in cooperation with Pitt Technical Institute.

Cuba's Crop Short

By THEODORE A. EDIGER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Cuba's sugar harvest is running so far behind schedule that they're betting on this side of the sugarcane curtain that Fidel Castro won't reach the 10 million tons on which he says rides the honor of his revolution.

The five millionth ton of Castro's dollar crop, scheduled for harvest March 17, was reached nine days late, Havana radio reported. Castro blamed rains and other factors. The tropical rain season still lies ahead.

The sixth million was scheduled for harvest Friday. Economists noted that more than 50,000 tons daily would have been needed to make the goal even if the halfway mark had been on target. Daily production, announced in Cuban broadcasts monitored here, have been below 45,000. Wednesday's, one of the higher ones, was announced at 44,887 tons, placing the total harvest at 5,296,882 tons.

"The best month-March-is gone," said the Economic research Bureau, operated by exile economists.

The bureau, headed by Rafael Rivas Vasquez, added: "In sugar circles the possibility of Cuba reaching its target of 10 million tons is not even discussed at this point. Everyone seems to have accepted the fact that the 10-million-ton goal is out of the question."

She's The All-American College Girl, 1970 Model

By CAROL ANN ROSS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Shelley Green will never admit it, but she's the all-American college girl, 1970 model.

She says she has tried pot, she turns on to acid rock, and her social conscience is outraged by pollution and poverty. But she has no ambition to overthrow the government, and she has more compassion than respect for students who "think they can change things by busting windows."

Shelley, 20, a green-eyed, miniskirted brunette from West Orange, N.J., is a junior at George Washington University here. She's hardly a "typical" coed since she's secretary of student government at GWU and well above average in academic standing. But in her attitudes and life style, she is representative of a large portion of today's undergraduates.

Parental Dialogue

Like most college students, Shelley has a parent problem. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel L. Green, tend to get uptight when she airs her views about the harmlessness of marijuana and the innocence of premarital sex relations if a couple is really in love.

She said of her mother: "I'll tell her it is a 'new morality' and she'll say, it's just a new way of saying that you're sleeping with somebody."

She is tolerant of their attitudes, however. "We disagree a lot, but I have a very close relationship with my parents," she said in an interview. "They've grown up more in the past five years than I have. They really are pretty open minded."

An Active Activist

Shelley also believes that working with adults will achieve more change in the long run than open defiance. But she refuses to put down many aspects of the youth culture which so alarms the middle-aged. In practice, she is hard-working, disciplined and responsible.

"Shelley gets more done in a week than most people do in a month," said GWU President Lloyd Elliot. "What the campuses of this country need are more persons like Shelley."

Besides carrying a full load of studies and earning a B-plus average, Shelley works part time in a university office job to help pay for her education. She also puts in many hours a week on her student government job. Yet she finds time for recreation, especially good movies and plays, which are her favorite entertainment. Occasionally she goes with a date to one of the rock music spots in Georgetown, which are popular hangouts for the capital's younger set. She rarely watches television, which she regards as "a waste of time."

She Dislikes Nixon

Shelley is a political activist and took part enthusiastically in last fall's moratoriums against the Vietnam War. ("A very good friend of mine was killed in Vietnam.") Currently, she says, Vietnam is "out of priority" and the big campus concern is pollution of the environment.

Although she favors orderly demonstrations to dramatize student protests aginst such things as war and pollution, she has a low regard for the more radical campus organizations, such as Students for a Democratic Society (SDS).

Her political sympathies are "left of center" and she has an outspoken distaste for President Nixon ("a very shrewd politician") and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew ("his popularity is a very sad commentary on the American public.")

Aims For Individuality

She describes David and Julie Eisenhower only as "cute." Asked about Tricia Nixon, she said: "I don't think too much about her. She is the President's daughter and anybody is allowed to have kids."

Shelley acknowledged, under duress, that "a lot of people probably would call me an average college girl." But she doesn't like being thought "average"—who would?—and she honestly feels that her political activism differentiates her from the majority of her fellow coeds who are "mainly interested in social life."

ALL-AMERICAN COLLEGE GIRL Shelley Green is representative of a large portion of today's undergrads. (UPI Telephoto)

Newsman To Lecture On Monday

Harrison Salisbury, first U.S. newsman granted permission by the State Department to visit North Vietnam, will appear at Wright Auditorium on East Carolina campus Monday at 8 p.m. This is the final lecture in the 1969-70 lecture series sponsored by the Student Government Association.

Salisbury, a Pulitzer prize - winning journalist, a specialist on foreign affairs, created a sensation in the newspaper world with his first hand accounts of the way in which the Vietnam war affected the people and land of North Vietnam. His reports from thia area caused considerable discussion, not all favorable, in the press and on TV and radio.

A long time journalist with the New York Times, Salisbury is the author of "Behind the Lines - Hanoi"; "Orbit of China," "A New Russia?"; and "The 900 Days: The Siege of Leningrad."

For five years, Salisbury, who speaks Russian, was Times correspondent stationed in Moscow. From this vantage point, he made several journeys throughout the country, reporting on all phases on life in Russia.

One of his outstanding reporting feats was a penetrating look at the 25,000 miles of frontier boundaries along Communist China. His series of reports on this extensive trip were dispatched from Loas, Burma, the Himalayan - Indian border, Mongolia and Siberia.

As a lecturer, Salisbury has spoken at many major American universities and colleges, as well as at a number of national conventions.

Admission to this lecture is by season ticket or by purchase of tickets at $2 each at the door just prior to the lecture hour.

Honeybees Go Modern; Prefer Plastic Hives

LETHERIDGE, Alberta (UPI)—The honeybee is getting with it. The bees prefer plastic hives to more traditional housing, it turns out—and go for exterior decorating, too.

Dr. G.A. Hobbs of the Canadian Agriculture Research station recently discovered that alfalfa leaf cutter bees work harder and seem happier in hives made from lightweight polystyrene than in the traditional wooden box nests.

The bees show a definite preference for plastic hives of pastel blue, and are particularly attracted when they are painted with symbols such as y's, x's and groups of parallel lines, Hobbs reports.

The discovery is good news for the farmer—who previously needed custom-made equipment to fashion the intricate tunnel work of wooden hives.

Weighing only 13 pounds compared to the average 45-pound wooden hive, plastic nests are easier to assemble and easier to handle.

The only problem comes from mice, who will chew through the plastic walls to eat larvae if the hives are not protected during storage, Hobbs said.

Barring such misfortune, the bees eem completely at home in their modern environment, he said.

College Training Demand Booms

EDUCATIONAL DEMAND

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The demand for college training in the field of computer sciences, systems analysis, and data processing has multiplied at a staggering rate, according to a Temple University dean.

Dr. Seymour L. Wolfbein, dean of the School of Business Administration, said college graduates from every segment of commerce and industry are seeking graduate education in computer sciences because the use of computers in business has no limit.

FRANK FACTS

DETROIT (UPI)—A sausage company here has a new frankfurter machine capable of turning out 60,000 franks an hour.

Largest of its type, the machine built by Chemetron Corporation smokes and cooks franks in two continuous lines and prepares them for packaging at the rate of 6,000 pounds an hour. At the usual 10 franks to a pound, that's 60,000 hot dogs.

To Our Friends in the Greenville Area

Most of you doubtless know that the International Union Of Operating Engineers is attempting to get into Greenville by organizing the employees of Barrus Construction Company. We believe this would be undesirable for everyone – our employees, ourselves and our community – and are doing all we can to prevent it.

We at Warren Brothers are very honored that the former owners of Barrus invited us to associate with their fine firm. We are pleased with the company, its many fine employees, and the community, and look forward to a long association.

When Mr. A. K. Barrus, Sr. learned that this union had set out to unionize the Barrus employees he wrote a letter to each of them urging them to consider carefully before voting to bring this union into this town. We are publishing that letter so that you, the citizens of Greenville, may read what he had to say on this serious subject.

WARREN BROTHERS COMPANY

Robert L. Smith
President

ALBAN K. BARRUS
KINSTON, NORTH CAROLINA

To Barrus Construction Company Employees:

You all know that I am the founder of Barrus Construction Company and that the building of our business has been my life's work. And I hope you all know that the continued growth of our company and the real job security of each of you is as important to me today as at any time during the years we have spent working together. That is why I feel I have an obligation to try and tell you how strongly I oppose the efforts of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 500, to bring unionization to our company.

Prior to his death last year, Marion Cowper and I gave a lot of thought to the future of the company due to his health and my age. We both knew that if our company was to grow and prosper we had to associate with a larger firm; and that if our company was to continue to provide jobs for the many loyal employees who have made its success possible, that larger firm would have to be engaged in similar work. We selected Warren Brothers Company because of the caliber of its people and its national reputation as a paving contractor. Based on the months we have been with Warren I can truthfully say I am satisfied with the move and feel it was good for everyone.

When Warren Brothers purchased our company I agreed at their request to stay on in an advisory capacity. I receive no salary or other benefits of any kind for this, except free use of office space in the Kinston office. My sole benefit from this transaction is the money I received for my Barrus Company stock, and the satisfaction I have knowing that the future of the company we all helped build is in the hands of the right kind of people.

I am very upset that this outside union is trying to come into our fine company. I firmly believe that our people can trust their company, and that our company can trust its people. I would hate to see union business agents and union shop stewards upset the fine relationship we have all enjoyed throughout the years. I urge each of you to vote NO in the union election April 16.

Yours very truly,

A. K. Barrus

Ask Them Yourself

FOR WILLIAM E. MILLER,

1964 Republican Vice-Presidential nominee

Do you think that Spiro Agnew is making noises like a man who has ambitions to be a candidate for the Presidency?—Robert Crane, Waco, Texas

● Definitely not. As a Vice President, you don't tackle the news media if you have ambitions to be President. It is obvious that Agnew has no such designs. He seems to want to make a contribution instead of being a nonentity.

FOR WINTON BLOUNT,

Postmaster General

What are some of the danger signs concerning "nest-egg sharks" that plague the public?—Byron George, Seattle, Wash.

● "Nest-egg sharks" can be avoided by investigating the promoter, checking with the Better Business Bureau, by asking companies selling franchises for names and addresses of those making the "fabulous profits" and by checking their business records. You might even interview individuals actually operating a franchise.

FOR RUTH MONTGOMERY

Your paperback book, "Here and Hereafter, features a nude woman on the cover. Was this done with your permission?—Kathryn Reagan, Sacramento, Calif.

● It was not. When I saw it (after publication), I protested vigorously to my editor, but it was too late.

FOR LOU BOUDREAU,

Chicago Cubs sportscaster

Is it true that in 1946 you had five hits in five times at bat and all for extra bases?—Wally Smith, Altoona, Pa.

● The date was July 14, 1946; the hits were four doubles and a home run.

FOR HUGH DOWNS

of the "Today" show

What is meant by the term "star-crossed" as used on several television programs recently, including yours, in connection with the Kennedy family?—Mrs. L. S. Calvert, Danville, Va.

● Star-crossed is an astrological term that describes a condition in which two people who have some relationship have bad luck. Their stars are said to be crossed. A star-crossed person is one who fate has been dealt with harshly—like the Kennedy family.

FOR GEN. JAMES F. COLLINS,

Do Americans, through the American National Red Cross or through any other organization, furnish blood to our enemies in North Vietnam?—Mrs. Leroy D. Collier, Kokomo, Ind.

● The American National Red Cross does not furnish blood to North Vietnam, nor to my knowledge does any other U.S. organization. Several years ago, one or more of the liberal college groups on the West Coast said they were going to send blood to North Vietnam, but they had no facilities for collecting and shipping blood, so nothing was done about it.

FOR LOUIS R. BRUCE,

Commissioner of Indian Affairs

How many official different tribes of Indians does the United States Government recognize?—Bill Hill, Langdon, N.D.

● In states other than Alaska, 263 tribes, bands, villages, pueblos, and groups are eligible for Federal help. In addition, approximately 300 native Alaskan communities are served currently by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

FOR LILY TOMLIN of "Laugh-In"

Do you find women will not accept the new "feminine" comedians?—Lester Smith, Detroit, Mich.

● The women are cooler to you when you are pretty and feminine. The men, on the other hand, like feminine comedians. They don't appreciate the grotesque in a woman, however.

coming R. J. Reynolds Foods special, "Tales From Muppetland," on ABC-tv, April 10. Surrounded by some of his "muppets" (also seen on "Sesame Street"), Jim looked like a contented father. "They're sort of like a family to me," says Jim. The Hensons live in Greenwich, Conn., where Jim has built his four children a miniature puppet theater at home for the youngsters' enjoyment as well as to test his materials on them. "I highly recommend parents and children using puppets together for fun and family involvement," says the puppeteer.

Communications Mule Even in the space age there's still a need for stubborn old mules. For instance, General Telephone of Kentucky has lines to construct through rugged Appalachian Mountain country. There are some thickly wooded back-country areas where even the best trucks or jeeps just can't go. Then the crews get Kate-the-mule from the local rent-a-mule man. For $3 an hour, technology is served by an obedient beast which drags poles and cables through ridges, hollows, and brier thickets. Kate can even force her way through sections too rough for her masters to negotiate. Progress is great, but sometimes the old ways are best.

Swallowing Myths Too many athletes and coaches have been swallowing myths instead of the proper food, the AMA reports. Included are "rare beef steak for strength" and "milk for calcium," according to Dr. Isao Hirata, Jr., of Yale. One type of protein is as good as another, he observes. It may be a waste to flood the metabolism with high-calcium milk after the athlete already has his strong bones. Further, there's no evidence that vitamin B-12 injections will benefit the normal athlete—though it is good for pernicious anemia. What is important then? "A sufficient amount of calories, but not a heavy meal before the game—just a liquid meal."

Home-Grown Profiles The Duke and Duchess of Bedford get the prize for one-upmanship. Instead of having their portraits painted and hung in the ancestral halls like other nobility, this creative couple has their profiles "grown" on the front lawn of their home, Woburn

Abbey, in England. The Duke's gardeners etched out 44-foot-long images of the couple's heads and then planted a special, darker grass which, when it grew fully, looked like a silhouette against the lighter green lawn. Now tourists can take photographs of the unusual lawn from a tower at one end.

What More Could Jane Fonda Want?

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

Jane may get Oscar for her role in "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?"

THERE'S A GOOD chance that willowy Jane Fonda will get an Oscar as Best Actress for her dramatic portrayal of Gloria in "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?"

Her performance as a marathon-dance contestant garnered her rave reviews from many critics. Jane insists that if she should win, it will not change her life. "I'll be happy about it," she confessed, "but I always look forward to what's next."

To make the film, Jane returned to California from her home in France and set up housekeeping in a rented beach house at Malibu. Jane, her husband, French director Roger Vadim, and their 16-month-old daughter Vanessa all love the beach.

Jane was moody, and some of her moodiness was a hangover from the role she played in "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" Her characterization absorbed her completely—so much so that she finally moved to the studio instead of going home. "I found I couldn't go to work in the morning as a happy woman and step into that role. Gloria was such a totally desperate, negative, depressed person!

"Gradually I let myself become that way, too. How could I go home like that? I'd walk in the door and auuuuugh! So I stayed away. Of course, Vanessa would stay overnight with me every now and then. Still, it took me a month to get over it."

During that month of recuperation, Jane took time to relax in Hawaii with her younger brother Peter, who has become as famous as Jane and their father Henry Fonda, having starred in the highly successful film, "Easy Rider."

"He taught me to play his 12-string guitar, and it's a whole new form of expression!" Jane told me.

She also took advantage of the lull to be with her father in California, where I caught up with her. "It doesn't really matter where I am," she told me. "I seem able to feel at home any place."

Actually, Jane does have a home base—her farm, about two hours from Paris. "When I bought it, it was just an old house. I wanted to refurbish the interior of the house and plant trees around it. I found a place in Paris that sold 40- to 50-year-old trees, and I told them I wanted enough to make a forest. I also wanted the ground level changed. Vadim (almost everyone calls him that, including Jane) thought I was crazy! Not only did it cost a lot of money, but nobody in France did that sort of thing. If the ground was flat, it stayed flat! But I'm from California, where we think nothing of moving mountains and planting them all over the place."

While Jane and Vadim have toyed with the idea of selling the farm, they both feel it is a great home where their three children can put down roots. Natalie, 12, is Vadim's first child, by his second wife, Annette Stroyberg. His first wife was Brigitte Bardot. Natalie lives with Jane and Vadim. His son Christian, five, who spends a great deal of time with them, is his child by actress Catherine Deneuve.

Obviously, Jane's life now has more direction and meaning than it once had. Both her marriage to Vadim and her professional relationship with him (she has starred in every picture Vadim has made since she met him, but won't in his next one) have curtailed her freedom somewhat. But she still has lost none of her individuality or her identity. Because of this, she is able to move about the globe alone and feel at home everywhere.

Born in New York City, she was raised in California until she was sent East to school. After two years at Vassar, utterly bored, she convinced her father she needed to go to Paris to study art and French. Fonda agreed, and off she went. Six months later, shocked by her conduct, he ordered her home. For a year she floundered around New York, playing the role of social butterfly, trying to find reasons for her actions. She also did two summer-stock plays with her father.

Finally, on a vacation to California in 1958, she joined her father for a summer at Malibu and became friends with neighbors Susan Strasberg and her parents, Lee and Paula Strasberg of the famous Actors Studio in New York.

They triggered Jane's interest in acting, and she returned to New York to go to a psychiatrist and study under Strasberg. "One day, he complimented me," Jane remembered, "and I was a different person! I knew what I wanted then."

It was Josh Logan, her unofficial godfather, who gave Jane her first chance in films in "Tall Story," with Tony Perkins, and on Broadway in his production of "There Was a Little Girl." Although Jane got good reviews, she was convinced she was not making the grade. In fact, much was said about her getting the parts because she was Henry Fonda's daughter. Fumed Jane, "I was proud of my name, and it could get me into producers' offices—but no one gets parts on the strength of that because too much money is involved. Mistakes are too expensive!"

Eventually her on-screen record proved her individual worth. She chalked up star credits in a dozen major movies such as "Sunday in New York," "Cat Ballou," "Barefoot in the Park," and her latest, "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?"

Now what is next for Jane? She curved her long arms around her slender pantalooned legs and rested her chin on her knees. "I don't know. And I am not really planning. I used to go crazy if I didn't know what I was going to do every minute. For the first time in my life, I feel like I want to take a long vacation. I've always been on the go, but since Vanessa was born, I haven't felt that way. Now there is always something vital to do at home."

Whether or not Jane walks off with an Oscar Tuesday night, her future is assured. She's young, greatly talented, and, at the moment, she has the best of two worlds. ◆

That's the idea behind a new personal-injury insurance plan, says this U.S. Senator—but a lot of

By Sen. PHILIP A. HART of Michigan
With Charles and Bonnie Remsberg

IF YOU ARE INJURED in an auto accident, whether or not you get a settlement may depend on your looks.

An adjustment manual issued by one of the nation's largest car insurers warns claims men not to pay until they note whether the accident victim possesses such characteristics as "squinty eyes, a big Adam's apple, a pock-marked face, yellow teeth, dirty fingernails, or a morose, shy, or brusk manner."

The reason is simple and shrewd. Present laws in all states require that before you are entitled to compensation from liability insurance for injuries or economic losses arising from an auto accident, you must prove that the other driver was at fault. It is from his insurance company, not your own, that you must collect. Getting this proof is often extremely difficult, but even if you nail it down, his insurers still do not have to pay you until a court orders it.

Insurance companies know from long experience that persons with the physical characteristics outlined in the manual are generally unappealing to juries. Thus if you fit this pattern and the other driver's company refuses you a settlement, their chances of a court victory are improved. You may wind up with no compensation whatever for someone else's carelessness, or at the very least, you may be delayed for years.

This is just one of many inequities of the "fault system" for settling auto-injury claims. On the surface, making the person to blame pay for the consequences of his errors seems like good old-fashioned American fair play. But in practice this concept has grotesquely backfired.

In seeking deserved liability payments, accident victims are commonly subjected to maddening legal snarls, delays in therapy, senseless frustrations because of whimsical company policies, and, even after they have used every weapon at their command, possibly unfair rewards because of the high-risk gamble of going to court, where emotional factors rather than evidence can influence the outcome.

In short, the necessity to pinpoint blame often does more to punish the victims of accidents than the drivers who cause them. If you have already innocently been involved in a collision, you may have learned this grim lesson firsthand. If not, you may learn it tomorrow.

As chairman of the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee, which started investigating the auto-insurance industry in 1965, I have heard mounting demands from traffic experts, drivers, even insurance executives themselves, that the fault system be abolished entirely. By replacing it with "imaginative insurance plans," these witnesses argue, you and other drivers would be guaranteed prompt reimbursement for injury-caused expenses and income loss, and your auto-liability insurance rates could be cut.

Now that sounds very appealing and many of these plans have great merit. But the problem, as we shall see, is that all of them create new problems for the motorist as they eliminate the old ones.

Of course, it is becoming increasingly difficult to say for certain who is legally to blame in a great many auto mishaps. Traffic experts have calculated that with today's congestion and proliferating distractions drivers are called upon to make an average of 200 observations and 20 decisions in every mile. With this kind of responsibility involved, it is hardly surprising that both drivers are partly at fault in about one out of five accidents.

In most states, unless you can gather the physical evidence and witnesses to prove that you are free from any blame, your chances of negotiating successfully with the other driver's insurance company are slim indeed.

With solid evidence on your side, you'll likely get the most favorable consideration from an adversary insurance company if your claim is small. This is where the grave injustices of the fault system begin to show themselves.

To avoid expensive litigation, especially if you look as if you might make a good witness in your own behalf, insurance companies tend to settle minor claims for several times their actual worth. Various studies have revealed, however, that as the seriousness of injuries increases, the portion of the victim's costs recovered directly from insurance companies decreases. In other words, the present fault system results in claimants being overpaid, underpaid, or not paid—and only rarely being fairly paid.

If the insurance company decides to fight the matter out in court, as it often does with sizable claims, the situation gets even worse.

Long delays are common. In counties with more than 750,000 population, the average delay in a personal-injury trial is nearly three years. In Chicago, it is 70 months; in Philadelphia, 51. In Michigan, even of the minor cases that reach the courts, only one out of four is settled within a year. This wait can inflict economic hardship on victims whose medical expenses have skyrocketed and whose income has been cut or wiped out because of an accident.

Statistics make the risks of the fault system painfully clear. In a recent Unversity of Michigan study of persons suffering economic losses from injury in auto accidents, only 37 percent received any payment from a liability claim. Of those seriously injured, almost one-half got nothing. Often the settlements that were paid did not begin to meet the actual loss.

In my opinion, based on evidence heard so far by our subcommittee, it is high time we explored alternatives to the fault system. Many bold new plans have been proposed, and some already are at work in other countries, including Canada.

Two experts working to reform the present system are Professors Jeffrey O'Connell of the University of Illinois and Robert Keeton of Harvard, both authorities in the law of auto accidents. Under their plan, if you were injured in a car crash you automatically would be reimbursed fully for the cost of treatment, loss of income and other expenses you suffer, up to $10,000, without any determination of fault being made.

You would simply have to prove that the injuries occurred and document your economic loss. You would be paid by your own insurance company, just as you are now under health-insurance policies, and the reimbursement would be made promptly as expenses occur instead of in a lump sum.

The $10,000 limit would be a minimum that every driver's policy would be required to carry. You could also buy additional "catastrophe" protection, up to $100,000 from your own insurance company. Or, to collect amounts above $10,000, you could sue the other driver's company, as is now possible. Suits for amounts below $10,000, however, would be prohibited by law.

The main goal of the Keeton-O'Connell plan is to eliminate the litigation, delay, inequity, and much of the cost now involved in settling claims. They say that cuts in investigative and legal work would be so great that auto insurers could lower premiums by about 15 to 25 percent. That looks very promising until we examine it closely. But then we find that the "no-fault" system—despite its appeal—is not itself without fault.

This system would leave the small claimant all alone in the fight for just compensation from the company. The policyholder's company is still going to be tempted to settle for the smallest possible amount. And if the claim is under $10,000, the claimant is unable to threaten court action. So his bargaining position is somewhat eroded.

Another plan has been submitted by the American Insurance Association, whose member companies handle about 30 percent of the nation's auto-insurance business. After studying some 11,000 accidents in

ce plan; it has a lot of merit, of problems, too

seven states, this group ignited controversy within the insurance industry by recommending the removal of blame-fixing from the insurance laws entirely.

In contrast to the present system, the AIA plan basically would eliminate payment to accident victims for pain and suffering and would prohibit liability suits between drivers. But your own insurance company would reimburse you for documented medical expenses and other costs of any amount and for income loss up to $750 a month over any length of time. (Additional income protection would be available for an extra premium as well.)

In lieu of payment for pain and suffering, you would be granted additional compensation equal to half of your medical expenses if you were permanently injured or disfigured by the accident. Again, supplementary insurance would be available to pay larger amounts.

What's more, says the AIA, insurance companies would save so much by being able to scrap the whole inefficient fault-finding apparatus—from investigators to lawyers to expert witnesses—that they could reduce your premiums up to 45 percent. This seems optimistic, although there is no doubt that savings would be significant.

Here again, however, the policyholder is thrown on his own resources in trying to negotiate a settlement with his insurance company. He is denied recourse to the courts and his bargaining power is considerably diminished.

Still, the AIA plan could turn out to be a very good deal for the motorist, providing the policy rates were low enough. If the policy rates were too high (no rate projections have been announced), the entire AIA package might be no better than the current system where any driver can buy unlimited protection if he is able to shell out for big premiums. Although the "no-fault" system is not flawless, it is not as imperfect as its detractors claim.

Under a no-fault system, reckless drivers would still be subject to arrest for traffic violations. So there is no reason to believe, as some insurers who oppose change have argued, that reform would encourage careless driving. Also self-inflicted injuries, another cause of concern, would be disqualified for reimbursement under the new proposals.

Moreover, the belief that drivers who cause accidents are now paying for their misdeeds because of fault-finding is just a myth. The money that goes to their victims—if and when it does—comes out of the insurance fund which is paid into by all policyholders. The question, really, is how we can best distribute the proceeds of that fund.

Late this spring, the U.S. Department of Transportation will issue the report of a two-year study that should further illuminate the problem. Legislatures in several states, including California, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Indiana, and Tennessee are now considering alternatives for their jurisdictions. I think more states should join in these critical studies.

One striking deficiency of all the plans submitted so far, it seems to me, is that none attacks the problem of double premiums for hospital and medical care. At this moment, millions of Americans are paying auto-insurance companies for protection against the costs of medical treatment. The same people are also paying health-insurance premiums for the same protection.

One obvious solution would be a program of national health care that would simply extend Medicare protection to everyone, young and old. Then there would be no need for the payment of duplicate medical-care premiums to auto insurers.

Secondly, I do believe that auto insurance should go to some sort of no-fault system, although I don't believe that either Keeton-O'Connell or the AIA plans are the final answer. Both deprive too many people of the right to go to court for settlements tailored to their individual cases. Clearly, the "no-fault" system would be the most efficient and inexpensive way of settling small claims, but I don't think the claim should have to climb as high as $10,000 before court remedies become available.

Moreover, in those cases where court action becomes the only alternative, victims ought to have the right of a speedy decision. So instead of making litigants wait in a long line to see a judge, why not have a system of "claims referees." These would be qualified examiners who are attached to the state courts but are not themselves judges. They could relieve the judge of most crash cases, hear the evidence, and order settlements—thus immeasurably speeding up the system.

The volume of mail that floods my office indicates that American motorists in great numbers are fed up with the present auto-insurance system and are demanding revolutionary changes. I don't think our state and Federal governments are going to ignore that pressure.

One Illinois survey indicates that 70 percent of the public would prefer some kind of "no-fault" system. The public wants it, and certainly the public deserves it. ◆

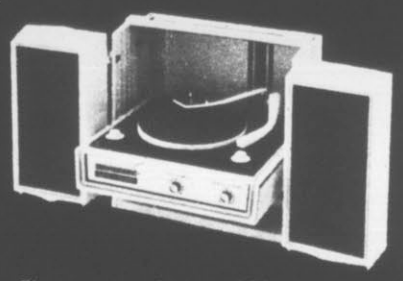
How to tell a boy stereo from a girl stereo.



First, go to a Voice of Music dealer. (Everybody else's look pretty much the same.)

Walk up to the V•M GT329 portable ($59.95) and the V•M Stereo Bug portable ($59.95).

The GT329 is the boy. Bold red racing stripes. 4-speed changer. Precision solid-state amplifier. 2 high-compliance disc speakers in the detachable wings.

The Stereo Bug is the girl. Pretty yellow with a dainty daisy and little orange love bug.

You see, V•M thinks there's more to enjoying music than meets the ear.

That's why we've built a stereo with a boy-look and a girl-look.

If you're looking for stereo, doesn't it make sense to get one that looks like something?

QUIZ

What Your Home Decor Reveals About You

THE WAY YOU decorate your home tells what kind of a person you are—a social-climber, a conservative, a secure individual.

At least that's what Dr. Edward O. Laumann, professor of sociology at the University of Michigan, says after a study of hundreds of homes in various income brackets. Below are some statements about household decor. Do you think they are true or false?

1. Families which have a consistent decor in their homes are likely to be loyal to one particular political party.

True. Persons who favor a unified style, say French Provincial, Victorian, etc., tend to have well-defined views.

2. People who have French furniture, books, a piano, expensive stereo, etc., are trying to climb the social ladder.

False. Such people are actually trying to show that their families have had money and status for several generations.

3. In houses where traditional decor predominates, the husband and wife stick to the accepted male-female roles.

True. Such persons like to have their life roles well-defined.

4. Homes that are full of new fashions are inhabited by people who feel secure enough to be adventurous.

False. Such households usually are representative of the nouveaux riches, and these individuals are anything but secure.

5. Persons who have tv sets in their bedroom like to watch the late talk shows.

False. Actually, a belief has grown that a tv set in the living room is a feature of a low-income household, so many status-conscious individuals seek to avoid this stigma.

6. You can tell something about the economic status of a family by its dog.

7. Types of window curtains vary widely from one social class to another.

True. Working-class houses frequently have living-room curtains with floral patterns. Lower middle-class homes favor translucent curtains. The nouveaux riches prefer curtains with geometric patterns. The established rich choose solid-color draperies, often in expensive fabrics.

8. Religious paintings are found in all kinds of homes, regardless of class.

True—up to a point. The preponderance of religious art is becoming confined to lower-class homes. In middle- or upper-class households, religious scenes are chosen on the basis of their quality as art rather than because of their symbolism.

How to get rich

How can you get rich some day? Make a hit record . . . a killing on the stock market . . . or invent a gadget like the hula hoop?

For most of us, these are just dreams. But have you ever stopped to think that there is a way to get rich—possibly only one sure way? Most fortunes, as you know, are made by people who own their own business.

Perhaps you've thought of starting a small business of your own . . . a franchised drive-in, or maybe a service business. Trouble is, you need $10,000 to $15,000 to get started and even then it's a gamble—with slim chance of ever making really big money.

But there is one business which could make you rich—almost overnight! And the beauty of it is, you can start on a shoestring during your spare time, even while holding your regular job.

Cash by Mail

The business is Mail Order—and it's fabulous! Come up with a 'hot' new item . . . and WHAM!

It strikes like a bolt of lightning!

Suddenly, you are deluged with cash orders from all over the country . . . MORE MONEY than you could ever make in a lifetime!

Like the Vermont dealer who ran one ad in Sports Afield Magazine. His ad pulled 22,000 orders—over A HALF MILLION DOLLARS IN CASH!

There is no other business where you can make a fortune so quickly!

• A beginner from Newark, N.J. ran his first small ad in House Beautiful—offering an auto clothes rack. Business Week reported that his ad brought in $5,000 in orders. By the end of his first year in Mail Order, he had grossed over $100,000!

• Another beginner—a lawyer from the midwest, sold an idea by mail to fisherman. Specialty Salesman Magazine reveals, "he made $70,000 the first three months!"

Proof

It's a fascinating business! Running ads in newspapers and magazines . . . mailing gift catalogs . . . getting cash orders in your daily mail—steady as clockwork.

There is no other business where you can start on a shoestring and pyramid your profits—without investing in merchandise! One husband and wife mail order team took in $40,000 selling one item. They obtained FREE ads in national magazines . . . didn't invest a cent in merchandise, and even got the supplier to ship all orders for them!

These exceptional cases are absolute proof that you can get rich in your own Mail Order business. Very rich. Even a U.S. Gov. Report stated: "A number of one-man Mail Order enterprises make up to $50,000!"

Pick up any magazine. Notice how the same mail order ads are repeated . . . month after month? That's concrete proof! You know those ads wouldn't be repeated over and over again—unless they were bringing in big cash profits to their owners.

The Secret

The secret of getting rich in Mail Order lies in financial leverage. It's a little-known, almost secret method—using other people's capital to make money for you!

You can get thousands of dollars worth of advertising in big national magazines—without investing your own money! And you don't have to write a single ad. Tested and proven ads are prepared for you by experts. Reinvest the profits from your first successful ad—to get more, larger ads, and the profits begin to snowball! It's like building a chain of stores . . . each new store puts more money in your pocket.

You mail out beautiful catalogs which offer hundreds of dollars worth of fine, quality gifts—yet you don't invest one cent of your own money in merchandise! Your catalogs are printed with your name and address, so all orders come to you. Everything is "drop-shipped" for you, and there's up to 100% mark-up! You pocket the cash profits immediately—even before the orders are shipped to your customers!

Repeat orders alone, just from mailing catalogs, could bring you a steady income for the rest of your life!

Yes, Mail Order is the fastest-growing, most profitable business in America! And now, with more people moving to the suburbs . . . the population explosion . . . and the expanding teenage market . . . we are on the verge of the BIGGEST BOOM in Mail Order history!

Now, with the help and backing of Mail Order Associates, Inc., of Montvale, N.J., you can follow the same proven steps to Mail Order success—using the 'secret' of financial leverage!

Start Now

We supply you with beautiful gift catalogs throughout the year. All products are dropshipped for you, with up to 100% mark-up! You get free samples of top-selling mail order items, plus monthly trade reports on 'hot' new products . . . tested, successful ads are sent to you monthly. You get advertising directories, postal laws, complete courses, expert guidance—EVERYTHING you need to practically guarantee YOUR SUCCESS. Why? Because our business depends upon your success. It's mutually profitable!

A recent feature article in Income Opportunities Magazine stated, "Mail Order Associates Inc., offers the most comprehensive Mail Order program ever offered to beginners." They go on to say, "This could be the opportunity you've been looking for. A chance to get in on the ground floor in a little-known business which we believe is on the verge of a new boom."

Why We Are Sure Of EVERLASTING LIFE

Of all the questions that confront a human being, none is so important . . . none so perplexing . . . as:

What happens after death?

A few will contend that there is no life hereafter . . . that man ends his days in a blank nothingness like animals. But for most people, there is a natural and instinctive hope that life on earth is only the first step toward a more joyous eternal life to come.

This instinctive hope, however, carries with it no conclusive proof that there is a life hereafter, and no obvious "blueprint" showing how to attain it. Because of this, many are bewildered — uncertain of the earthly way of life that will determine their eternal destiny.

Catholics, of course, do not claim that they alone are capable of having a greater knowledge of eternity than is available to anyone else. But where some may be confused and uncertain, the Catholic finds certainty in his Church for that time when "the night cometh that no man can work."

You may hear it said that this is only a blind and superstitious faith . . . that Catholics are merely "whistling in in the dark" . . . that the Catholic Church doesn't know any more about God's plan for our destiny than does anyone else.

On the contrary, Catholics believe that the way of life prescribed by Jesus Christ is God's own plan for our salvation. We believe further that Christ established the Catholic Church to perpetuate His teaching — and administer His Sacraments . . . and that it has done so from the time of Peter down to this very moment.

It is often said that the faith placed in Christ by Catholics . . . and by other Christians, too . . . is unwarranted by facts and reason. A powerful answer to this will be found in our pamphlet: "The Way To Everlasting Life . . . The Catholic Church." Even though you may not be interested in the Catholic Faith, this pamphlet will help you better to understand God's plan for your life.

We invite all people of good will to write for a free copy of this pamphlet. It will be mailed promptly, and nobody will call on you. Write today . . . ask for Pamphlet No. FM-20.

even for thousands who perspire heavily

A different formula has been found to keep underarms absolutely dry—even for thousands who perspire heavily. A formula so different it has far more anti-wetness agent than it is possible to put in any aerosol can. By anybody. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible — with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 57-year-old laboratory and guaranteed by Good Housekeeping. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need—and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily — get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Your choice, liquid or cream. Ninety-day supply, each $3.00. Available at your favorite drug or toiletry counter.

Mitchum

AGE SPOTS*

FADE THEM OUT

*Weathered brown spots on the surface of your hands and face tell the world you're getting old—perhaps before you really are. Fade them away with ESOTERICA, that medicated cream that breaks up masses of pigment on the skin, helps make hands look white and young again. Equally effective on the face, neck and arms. Not a cover-up. Acts in the skin—not on it. Fragrant, greaseless base for softening, lubricating skin as it clears up those blemishes. If you have these age-revealing brown spots, blotches, or if you want clearer, lighter skin, use ESOTERICA. At your favorite drug and toiletry counter. $2.00.

Denture Invention

For People With "Uppers" and "Lowers"

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds false teeth—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that actually holds dentures to mouth and gum surfaces!

It's FIXODENT—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U. S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally. You may even eat and enjoy apples, steak, and corn-on-the-cob again.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last round-the-clock. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

Spur-of-the-Moment

Tender green peas, whole kernel corn, and bacon add a subtle sweetness to this delicious meat and spaghetti mixture cooked in tomato sauce and topped with Parmesan cheese.

■ It's a comfortable feeling to know that this sumptuous casserole might be prepared early in the day and popped into the oven as guests arrive for an evening buffet. With salad fixings in the refrigerator, a praline cake on hand, and vanilla ice cream in the freezer, it's a jiffy feast with food at its finest.

The Comfy Buffet Casserole

- 6 slices bacon, diced
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 1 lb. ground beef
- 4 oz. thin spaghetti
- 1 can (15 to 15½ oz.) spaghetti sauce with mushrooms
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
- ½ cup water
- 4 to 6 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 can (12 oz.) vacuum-packed whole kernel golden corn, drained
- 1 can (8½ oz.) sweet peas, drained

1. Fry bacon until crisp in a large skillet; drain. Pour off bacon drippings and return 1 tablespoon to skillet. Heat; blend in onion and then ground beef. Stirring occasionally, cook just until meat loses its pink color.

2. Meanwhile, break spaghetti in half and cook according to pkg. directions; drain.

3. Mix the spaghetti sauce with mushrooms, tomato sauce, and water into the cooked meat; heat thoroughly. Blend in 4 tablespoons of the Parmesan cheese and the cooked spaghetti. Finally, stir in corn, peas, and bacon.

4. Turn into a 2½-qt. casserole; sprinkle with remaining Parmesan cheese.

5. Heat in a 325°F. oven about 35 min. If prepared early in the day for evening service, allow 45 min., or sufficient time for mixture to heat thoroughly.

Zucchini-Orange Salad Bowl

- 2 or 3 zucchini, rinsed
- 3 or 4 navel oranges, pared, sliced, and chilled
- Spinach leaves, whole
- Spinach leaves, torn in pieces
- Italian salad dressing, bottled or prepared from a mix

1. Trim off ends of zucchini. Using a fluted vegetable cutter, slice zucchini into halves and each half into lengths for 2-in. strips. Chill.

2. When ready to serve, line a salad bowl with spinach leaves. Fill the bowl with the spinach pieces. Overlap orange slices in a wreath around edge of bowl. Pile zucchini strips onto center of spinach bed. Drizzle with the salad dressing.

Praline Cake

Caramel Syrup (see recipe)
Candied Carrots with Syrup (see recipe)
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups pecans, coarsely chopped
Caramel Frosting (see recipe)

1. Prepare Caramel Syrup and Carrots.
2. Sift the flour, baking powder, and salt together; resift and blend well. Set aside.
3. Cream butter or margarine and extract; add the Caramel Syrup gradually, blending well. Add the eggs in thirds, beating thoroughly after each addition. Beat in the reserved carrots.
4. Alternately add the dry ingredients in fourths and reserved carrot syrup in thirds to creamed mixture, beating only until smooth after each addition. Mix in the nuts. Turn batter into a greased (bottom only) 13x9x2-in. baking pan and spread evenly.
5. Bake at 350°F. 45 to 50 min., or until cake tests done. Set on a wire rack and cool completely in pan.
6. Frost with Caramel Frosting.

One 13x9-in. cake

Caramel Syrup

Melt 1 cup sugar in a heavy light-colored skillet (a black skillet makes it difficult to see the color of the syrup). With back of a wooden spoon, gently keep sugar moving toward center of skillet until sugar is completely melted and of a golden-brown color. Remove from heat. Being careful that steam does not burn hand, gradually add 1 cup milk, a small amount at a time, stirring constantly. Return to low heat and gradually add 1 cup sugar, stirring constantly until completely dissolved. Remove from heat, blend in 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, and set aside to cool to lukewarm.

Candied Carrots with Syrup

Put 2 cups sliced carrots, 1 cup sugar, and 1 cup boiling water into a saucepan; stir until sugar is dissolved. Cover and simmer about 10 min., or until carrots are tender and syrup is clear. Drain carrots, reserving syrup. Force carrots through a sieve or food mill. (If an electric mixer is to be used for mixing cake batter, do not sieve carrots.) Set aside to cool.

Caramel Frosting

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup lightly packed brown sugar
¼ cup cream
1½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar

1. Melt butter or margarine in a heavy skillet over low heat. Blend in the brown sugar and cream. Stirring constantly, bring to boiling and cook 1 min., or until sugar is completely dissolved.
2. Remove from heat and cool to lukewarm (110°F.).
3. When syrup has cooled, gradually add the confectioners' sugar, beating until blended after each addition. If necessary, continue beating until thick enough to spread.

Frosting for a 13x9-in. cake

Superstrength That Saves Lives

What is the mysterious power that, in emergencies, enables a 100-pound mother to lift a car, an ordinary man rip apart a truck's cab?

By VINCENT H. GADDIS

The stranger squeezed into the truck's cab and, with his arched back, bent back the caved-in roof.

AT AN auto-body plant in Flint, Mich., the frame of a nine-seat station wagon was moving down the assembly line mounted on a steel conveyor truck weighing more than a ton.

Victor Howell, 21, was beside the assembly line when he slipped and fell, catching his foot in the conveyor. The truck with its heavy frame was inching its way toward him. Howell screamed for help!

The truck and frame had started to pass over Howell's leg when Charles McClendon, 48, five feet, 10 inches tall, threw both the truck and the frame off the conveyor belt with a mighty heave. Weeks later when McClendon was given an award for lifesaving, he said, "A mysterious voice inspired my feat. It told me to lift the truck, and I did. It was as simple as that. But I don't know how I did it."

A 12-year-old boy, Robert Heitsche, was playing on a construction site in West Covina, Calif., when he was buried under a half-ton of steel scaffolding and bricks. The cries of Robert's playmates brought police officer Clint Collins, 28, to the scene. The 155-pounder stooped and in one quick motion raised the entire mass of scaffolding with its burden of bricks.

"It was the sight of that little guy's hand sticking out through the steel and bricks that got me," the officer said. "At that moment I would have tried crashing through a brick wall to help."

In Columbus, Ohio, in July, 1966, Carolyn Horn, an 18-year-old girl who weighed less than 100 pounds, moved a 40-foot-long, one-foot-thick tree limb about four feet to rescue a cousin pinned beneath it.

It has happened time and again—this ability under stress to move objects that ordinarily are immovable. Emotionally charged men, women, and children can tap reservoirs of latent, mysterious physical strength.

Mrs. Gene Perryman, 25, was standing on the back porch of her Jasper county, S.C., home on Oct. 1, 1965. Her two elder children, Andy, 8, and Vicki, 9, were out in front of the house waiting for the school bus.

She heard Vicki scream, and her daughter's cry was followed by the squeal of automobile brakes. Mrs. Perryman ran to the street. Andy had been struck by a car and dragged 160 feet before the driver could bring his sedan to a stop. The boy was wedged beneath the car between a rear wheel and the gasoline tank.

"I am not sure how I did it," Mrs. Perryman told reporters later. "It happened so quickly. But I knew I had to get my boy out. He was pinned beneath the gas tank, and I thought it would catch fire."

Mrs. Perryman seized the bumper of the car, raised the vehicle, then shoved it until it rolled off the boy and into a ditch. Andy was taken to Candler Hospital in Savannah where he was later reported in good condition. Mrs. Perryman was a small woman, just under five feet in height, and she weighed 98 pounds.

"If it had been your child," she said, "you would have found the strength as I did."

What is the source of all this amazing energy?

Although many intricate details of how the body secures and releases its energy remain mysteries, some basic facts about the electro-chemical-mechanical system are known.

Physiologists tell us that at times of emotional stimulation of the nervous system, glands produce the hormone adrenalin. This hormone increases blood pressure and speeds up the respiration and the heartbeat. In situations of stress, fear, anger, or intense excitement, it gives the individual added strength.

When adrenalin is poured into the blood stream by the glands, the sugar level in the blood is rapidly increased at the expense of stored sugar in the liver and muscles. Anger makes a person's blood "sweet" rather than "sour." Thus this hormone is a defense mechanism in times of stress, adding fuel and energy.

Again, some of the energy derived from food can be stored in special forms for use in emergencies and thus does not leave the body immediately as heat. Such storages occur most frequently in muscles in which long periods of little activity are followed by sudden exertion.

It is now known that a chemical called adenosine triphosphate (ATP) is responsible for our energy. When activated by impulses from the brain, ATP gives power to muscles in a complex chemical reaction almost explosive in effect. This demonstration of superstrength is one of the most incredible ever recorded:

Roy Gaby was driving a large 14-wheel truck-trailer from Waco to Houston, Texas, when an apparently intoxicated driver raced out of a side road in front of him. Gaby swerved, lost control, and the front of the truck crashed into a huge tree. The trailer piled up on the telescoped cab, and Gaby's body was doubled up beneath the crushed top, his feet pinned between the twisted clutch and brake pedals, the steering wheel jammed against his waist.

Police summoned to the scene called in a heavy-duty wrecker. The odor of gasoline was heavy in the air. A small army of men and machines worked furiously to free Gaby. Suddenly fire shot out from beneath the cab. Other truckers and motorists went to work on the crumpled doors, pounding with hammers, twisting with crowbars but to no avail.

Out of nowhere, a stranger appeared, seized the door of the cab and ripped it off. Tossing the door aside, he ripped out the burning floor mat with his bare hands and beat out the flames around Gaby's feet.

He then grabbed the steering column and bent it forward. Next with one hand on the clutch and the other on the brake pedal, he forced them apart and released Gaby's feet. Then he squeezed his way into the cab, arched his back against the caved roof and bent it out of the way while awe-struck workers pulled Gaby out.

Later, when discussing his act of unprecedented heroism and Herculean strength, the stranger, Charles Jones, said he had recently lost his home and a child in a fire, and now every time he sees fire he is enraged.

Asked about his super-human strength, Jones said, "A man doesn't know what he can do until another man is hurting." ◆

imagine what it

Before

After

can do for you!

Invented to fool the super-critical eye of color TV, a totally new kind of make-up... almost invisible, easy as lipstick to apply, more effective in keeping aging stars young looking than the efforts of the best make-up artists in Hollywood.

Forget everything you've ever heard about make-up. Suddenly there's a totally new kind of make-up. A make-up as new as color TV... and just as exciting. A make-up from the world of make-believe in Television City, Hollywood, that can make every woman's dream come true, banish lines and wrinkles from sight, dark circles, any and every flaw.

A make-up so feathery light in tone and texture, so perfectly matched to your own complexion, that nobody will ever know you're using it. A make-up designed to be used under blazing color TV lights, so it stays beautiful hour after hour, for as long as 16 hours.

Cameras don't lie... but the eye can be fooled.

Better than words express, you can see for yourself in the dramatic unretouched photos what this wonderful new make-up can do. Those aren't just lines and wrinkles, they're furrows deeply etched by years of outdoor living. Now look at the after picture. It proves beyond a shadow of doubt that cameras don't lie, but the eye can be fooled. And now you, too, can create this remarkable illusion... as simply as you put on lipstick.

Two Simple Steps, Three Little Minutes

Couvert comes to you in two small tubes. Each performs its own share of the magic. Together they take no more than three minutes to apply... together they take 5, 10, even 20 years off your appearance.

Couvert No. 1. A feather-light, skin-tone liquid make-up base that comes in 4 shades, one to exactly match your complexion...

Couvert No. 2. There is nothing else like this. It doesn't mask, coat or cover up. It hides! That's right, like a magic cloak, it makes every single flaw invisible to the eye. Lines, wrinkles, circles, enlarged pores, crow's feet.

There is, of course, a sound scientific reason why this miracle takes place. It's called light refraction. Nobody knows you have lines or wrinkles because nobody can see them. But all the explaining in the world won't mean as much to you as the results you see with your own eyes. Therefore, you must see the results spelled out below, or we will return your money with no questions asked.

Three-Way Money Back Guarantee

First, wrinkles, mouth lines, crow's feet, complexion flaws must disappear from sight completely...

Second, you must see an immediate glow, a smooth flawlessness, an alluring young radiance that you didn't dare dream you'd ever see again...

Third, this magical illustration must last all day, all night—even under the harshest lights—for as long as 16 hours at a time...

or Elan Corp. International will return your money—no questions asked.

Inexpensive Because The Man Who Invented Couvert Wanted It That Way

The man who invented Couvert is a famous make-up artist. He is also a rich man. Up until now he's only been able to help the wealthy or the already beautiful. That's why he wanted his discovery to help as many women as possible. The way he put it was, "I'd like it to get rid of every ugly line and wrinkle in the whole world."

That's why we got the exclusive rights to Couvert. Instead of the $10, $15, even $50 other people were suggesting as the selling price, we recommended selling Couvert for only $5.00. (With the unconditional money back guarantee.) We figured that at this price every woman could afford to try it ...and go on using it year after year.

So, behold an amazing transformation in just three minutes. See your face unlined, unwrinkled, visibly smoother, younger-looking than it has been in years—just like the stars you see on colored TV who look so young though you know they're over 35. Return the coupon below right now.

How a Grateful Uncle Sam Our Vietnam Veterans

GI benefits go far beyond academic aid—there are programs in

HAROLD G. BURNS, 22, lost both legs in a mine detonation in Chu Lai, Vietnam.

He had been a high-school dropout before entering military service. When he returned home from Vietnam, Harold was rehabilitated, obtained his high-school diploma in San Francisco and, through counseling service at the Veterans Administration, entered an on-the-job training program at the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) organization.

Today Harold Burns is a national service officer—a general counselor to other DAV field officers—right there where he received his training.

This case is only one of thousands typifying a grateful nation's attempt to help Vietnam servicemen return to a rewarding civilian life. The Government has upgraded veterans' benefits recently and appropriated $7,691,257,000 for the Veterans Administration program—one of the largest sums ever to be slated for the department.

There's a problem, though, I think. Many veterans aren't fully aware of how broad the VA help is. They think it's summed up in college-oriented benefits when actually thousands of returning veterans have many interests and needs other than academic studies.

The VA has launched an aggressive program on all levels to reach every individual veteran to acquaint him with such services as farm-cooperative training apprenticeships and other on-job training in such vital trades as building, electronics, and auto maintenance.

Also available are direct loans for homes and farms, compensation for disability, job counseling, and employment placement.

A wide range of educational assistance includes high-school classes (without a charge against college financial benefits), flight training, grants for disabled veterans for the purchase of specially equipped automobiles or other conveyances, group life insurance, and excellent dental and medical care.

Not only are nonhigh-school veterans being directed to technical or on-job training, but former college students are being counseled in careers more in keeping with their aptitudes.

Troy E. Kloefkorn, 20, an ex-Marine from Wichita, Kan., was wounded by shrapnel in Vietnam. His right leg was amputated above the knee, and he now walks on an artificial leg. Troy had worked for a law firm before entering service and thought that he would work toward a law degree when he returned. After a false beginning, VA counselors uncovered his interest in electronics.

Troy is presently in vocational rehabilitation supervised by the Wichita VA Center, studying to be an electronics technician at the Wichita Technical Institute. He's in the top 20 of his class and, planning a career in the broadcasting industry, spends much of his time in the control room of a local radio station.

Elvon Arndt of Kansas City, Mo., was wounded by machine-gun fire while serving with the Marines in Vietnam in 1966. After nine months of hospitalization, he returned home to his wife and son.

He had been a welder with the Darby Steel Corp. of Kansas City before entering the service but could not go back into that work because his injury left him without feeling in his left leg. There would be the danger of his stepping on a hot spark and getting severely burned without knowing it.

After thorough counseling, he decided his future was in accounting, and Arndt applied for vocational-rehabilitation training at the Kansas City VA office.

He enrolled in a diploma business course at Draughon's College of Commerce. Arndt sped through the course in 18 months with almost straight A's, according to Dean McIntire, his VA counselor.

While studying such subjects as marketing, sales, advertising, and income tax, he also worked part time for a worldwide brokerage firm. He stayed on after graduation and eventually rose to operations manager, the position he holds now. He is contemplating computer training under the GI Bill, which he considers his "ace in the hole."

The military is not waiting for servicemen's discharge to prepare their men for civilian life. "Project Transition" was initiated a few years ago by the Department of Defense in conjunction with private corporations. The on-base program consists of specially designed free courses in just about any desired occupation available to GIs during the last six months of duty.

Trained representatives of some of

n Is Helping

Administrator of Veterans Affairs
With Milton Lounsberry

everything from farming to flight training

the largest corporations in the U.S. conduct these transition courses. GIs are excused from their regular duties to take advantage of the courses, and those successfully completing them are then eligible for employment with any one of the large firms after discharge.

Among the many participating corporations are American Oil, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Dictaphone Corp., RCA, Ford Motor Co., General Motors, Sears, Mobil Oil Corp., Lockheed Ship Building Co., New Jersey Bell Telephone, and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

New Jersey Bell Telephone Company, participating in "Project Transition," recently hired George Watson in its Asbury Park division. Watson was a career man with the U.S. Air Force, having racked up 26 years of military service before deciding to go back to civilian life. He signed up for one of the courses with the telephone company at McGuire Air Force Base and was subsequently hired as a lineman.

If there's one thing besides funds that is plentiful in the Veterans Administration these days, it's information. Every state has a regional office for veterans' assistance and some states have local offices as well. And, of course, the hub of VA activity is at the main headquarters: Veterans Administration, Washington, D. C., 20420.

I think our whole massive administrative effort was summed up nicely by a colleague who said recently, "Our whole reason for being is to inform and assist veterans. New legislation has helped us get our message of benefits to veterans—but we still need all the help we can get in order to help all those who need us." ◆

What to Do When Your

Youngsters exhibiting antiparental attitudes may actually be calling for help!

By REBECCA LISWOOD, M.D.

Founder and Executive Director of the Marriage Counseling Service of New York

With Adele Whitely Fletcher

THERE WAS a great hullabaloo in the apartment building in which I live when a mother came upon a list of criticisms her subteen daughter had compiled about her. It read:

"I wish my mother was pretty, wore shorter skirts, used more make-up on her eyes, talked like other mothers, was more go-go."

Certain neighbors, upon hearing of this list, were quick to say this mother had asked for it, had "spoiled that kid something rotten." They went on to express the hope the child now would get what she deserved.

Strangely, these neighbors could remember no time when they had thought of their mother or father as less than perfect. Others, however, more realistic and honest, admitted to moments in their youth when they had regarded one or both of their parents as less than perfect—even, on occasion, resenting them.

Fortunately, the criticized mother held the second group's point of view.

She neither disciplined nor pouted. She told her daughter she was sorry there were so many things "wrong" with her since she, like any mother, would always like to have her child proud of her.

Then she proceeded to explain that she dressed and made up conservatively because both she and the girl's father, whom she loved and sought to please, preferred an understated look. "I'm sorry not to be pretty," she said. "But I try to be well-groomed.

"As for my speech, it reflects Boston where I grew up. And a Boston accent, as you'll learn, is generally admired."

Then, resting her hand lightly on her daughter's shoulder, she said, "You and I, for the moment, have different ideas. But that doesn't keep me from loving you very much. And I hope it doesn't keep you from loving me."

There are times when boys and girls—contrary to all sentimental concepts—are not only critical of their parents but actually dislike them. And there is a reason.

Generally speaking, resentment stems from insecurity—a feeling of not being loved. What causes the insecurity? Any number of thoughtless actions on a parent's part, from laughing at a childish mistake to ignoring a childish fear. When this happens the child reacts—reacts with hostility. The child may say, "I hate you!" But what he is saying is, "I love you. But I'm not sure you love me."

Irrespective of how defiant the young may appear, they know a dependence that at times is frightening to them. I believe it is this that induces their fantasies of adoption. For it is not uncommon for some children to daydream of the time when their real parents —beautiful and rich and always smiling approval—will pull up in a big car and take them to a mansion, where they won't have any chores but will be waited upon and will have anything they like.

Such daydreaming, of course, is sheer fantasy escape to affluence. But it also can be escape from their dependence on their parents and the resentment that results. For with a second mother and father waiting off-stage boys and girls feel less vulnerable.

A 12-year-old girl who attends a school where many pupils board because their parents are dead or divorced, repeatedly says to her mother: "You and Daddy are good and healthy, aren't you? I know you'd never get a divorce."

Her mother, sympathetic to the insecurity behind this, says, "My child's tone of voice makes what she says more a demand than a question."

What the child is expressing is fear that her parents—like those of her schoolmates—will be separated—that she will be left without parental love.

Child "Hates" You

It is insecurity that prompts the young to translate anything they rate unjust as proof positive they're not loved as much as they wish to be. Consequently, they react badly to being asked to do more than they consider their share.

They tend to something approaching martyrdom any time they are not taken seriously, when they're laughed at, when they're reprimanded or punished in front of others, especially their friends, when they fail in some way, when they're compared unfavorably with a brother or a sister.

A poor report card can cause the bearer greater concern than it causes a parent, even though they act contrarily. Therefore, it's generally wise to be constructive about a poor report, saying, in effect: "Looks to me as though you hadn't paid enough attention. Both you and I know you can do much better than this."

Most children love to talk. And those who listen, with an open mind and a sincere wish to understand—learn much they otherwise never would know.

Young people, like everybody else, respond well when they understand what goes on; why their parents do what they do and why, in turn, they must do what they are told. If there is no time for an explanation when a direction is given there can be a promise one will be forthcoming. This, after all, is no more courtesy than we show our friends. And parents who treat their children with the same cordiality and respect as friends are likely to be happier and to have happier children.

Only when there is communication are kids given reasons for what they're asked to do. Tell a teen-age girl she absolutely can't go out on dates and you're in trouble. Ditto when you forbid a teen-age boy to drive after dark! But if the parent has a plausible reason and explains it, the resentment is less. Maybe the parents should also listen to the youngster's counter-arguments. They may be plausible, too—enough to make a compromise that will leave no one unhappy.

When children manifest any destructive attitudes—even just verbally expressing dislike of their parents—the first thing to do, of course, is discover the reason for it so that steps can be taken to correct whatever has gone awry in the relationship.

To have children continually at odds with the parents is a tragic experience. Consequently when son or daughter says in effect "I don't like you," or otherwise shows hostility, we tend to be angry. To put it bluntly we are more concerned with how we feel than with how our child feels. And this is unfortunate. For boys and girls who lack accord with their parents are almost always unhappy. Actually they, by exhibiting a destructive behavior, are often sounding a cry of warning or a call for help!

To react in anger will feed the feeling of unlove that caused the outburst. To counter with reason and warmth will dispel the feeling of insecurity. The love that is already in the child will grow, and so will the soundness of your family. ◆

OVERWEIGHT?

NEW SAFE TABLET

Absorbs on principle of blotter or sponge . . . helps curb appetite with feeling of fullness.

Overweight is dangerous and embarrassing. But when reducing, beware of so-called "rainbow pills" and reducing machines. There's only one safe way to take off pounds and inches . . . eat less calories than the system uses.

Easier Reducing Without Drugs

New Wate-OFF Tablets Reducing Plan helps retard appetite 2 ways . . . begins counteracting the sense of taste almost instantly. Then upon entering the stomach they absorb and give a feeling of fullness. Dietary suggestions included. As you reduce calorie intake, you should lose weight and look slimmer. Be satisfied or return for refund. Don't be fat!

The secret of teaching yourself music

It's just organized common sense, says this 70-year-old home-study school. Their step-by-step word-and-picture instructions take the mystery out of learning to play the piano, guitar, accordion, any popular instrument you choose.

It may seem odd at first – the idea of teaching yourself music. You might think you need a private teacher at $4 to $10 an hour to stand beside you and explain everything you should do – and tell you when you've made a mistake.

But surprising as it seems, you need no such thing. Thousands of people have taught themselves to play with the lessons we give by mail. And you can too.

You Learn Easily, Quickly

The secret lies in the step-by-step way our lessons teach you. You don't need any special talent or previous musical training. In fact, it's so easy that even children can learn.

Starting right from seratch, our lessons show you with simple words and pictures exactly what to do. You'll learn to play the right way – by note, from sheet music. Without any gadgetry or gimmickry.

But how do you know you're doing it right? Easy. The tunes you'll practice first are simple songs you've been familiar with for years. And since you already know how they're supposed to sound, you can tell right away when you've "got them right."

By the time you go on to more advanced pieces, you'll be able to tell if your notes and timing are right, even without ever having heard the songs before. Sooner than you might think possible, you'll be playing your favorite music as though you've known how all your life. Folk music. Popular music. Classical. Dance songs. Hymns.

Convenient and Economical

You learn in your spare time, in the privacy and convenience of your own home. There's no one standing over you to make you nervous. And because you teach yourself, you can set your own pace – you're free to spend as much time mastering any lesson as you wish. And you'll be delighted to discover how economical this wonderful course is.

There are other advantages too. Since your lessons are yours to keep permanently, you can go back and refer to them at any time. And you can share them with other members of your family.

There Are So Many Rewards

How effective are the lessons? Ask Mrs. Norman Johanson, one of our recent graduates. "My daughter," writes Mrs. Johanson, "has taken lessons for 8 years from a private teacher, and now she asks me questions about some of her lessons. How very proud I feel when she says to friends, 'You just have to hear my Mom play!' "

Others also enjoy her playing, Mrs. Johanson reports. She plays for herself to relax after a trying day, and for her husband when he's tired. She also plays for friends when she goes to parties. "In a sentence," she says, "it's the most soul-satisfying thing that has ever happened to me."

WONDER IF THE FAT-CAT FOREIGN MINISTER KNOWS THAT THE SECURITY POLICE COMMANDER COULD FILL HIM IN ON WHAT HAPPENED TO THE MISSING YANK AND RUSSIAN.

THE AMERICAN FOLLOWS THE POLICEMAN WEARING THE UNUSUAL MILITARY INSIGNIA TO U TU'S PRIVATE VILLA.

PROBABLY NOT. SINCE THAT FUNNY FUZZ JUST DELIVERED A FAT ENVELOPE FROM A TOP DOPE DEALER, I SUSPECT U TU DOESN'T CLUTTER UP HIS REPORTS WITH EVERY LITTLE DETAIL.

SO, Y' JUST DON'T PICK UP AMERICAN WINGS AND RUSSIAN EPAULETTES AT THE LOCAL NOTION COUNTER. THE GENERAL'S HANDY MAN HAS BEEN IN CONTACT WITH THE LOST SOULS ALL RIGHT. BUT WHAT'S THE PITCH?

HEY! WE'RE HEADING OUT OF TOWN. BUSTER WILL SPOT MY LIGHTS. KILL 'EM.

B71451

WHILE, AT THE VILLA...

I WILL INFORM PEKING THAT ALL IS ARRANGED, GENERAL.

THEY MUST REALIZE IT WILL TAKE SEVERAL DAYS TO MOVE THE PRISONERS AND THE HIJACKERS TO THE NORTH.

I WILL HAVE TO TRAVEL IN SUFFICIENT FORCE TO INTIMIDATE THE UNRULY HILL TRIBES, AND THE ROADS ARE FEW AND WRETCHED.

MEANWHILE...

CHEERS FOR UNDERDEVELOPED NATIONS! THE RUTS IN THIS GOAT TRACK ARE SO DEEP OL' BETSY CAN'T CLIMB UP TO THE DITCHES.

HOO, HEE! BUSTER'S TURNING OFF AND SLOWING DOWN. BETTER PARK. ONCE HE STOPS, HE COULD HEAR BETSY'S SMOOTH, POWERFUL ROAR.

THEN...

YEAH. THERE'S HIS JEEP. NICE LAYOUT. JUST THE SECLUDED, QUIET PLACE FOR A G.I. AIRDALE AND A SOVIET SOLDADO TO GET TO KNOW REALLY WHAT THEY DON'T HAVE IN COMMON!

"Good ol' Charlie Brown"

by SCHULZ

It was a dark and stormy night. Suddenly a shot rang out. A door slammed. The maid screamed.

4-5

Suddenly a pirate ship appeared on the horizon. While millions of people were starving, the king lived in luxury. Meanwhile, on a small farm in Kansas, a boy was growing up.

End of Part I

Part II.... A light snow was falling, and the little girl with the tattered shawl had not sold a violet all day.

At that very moment, a young intern at City Hospital was making an important discovery. The mysterious patient in Room 213 had finally awakened. She moaned softly.

Could it be that she was the sister of the boy in Kansas who loved the girl with the tattered shawl who was the daughter of the maid who had escaped from the pirates? The intern frowned.

SEE HOW NEATLY ALL OF THIS FITS TOGETHER?

BUT WHAT ABOUT THE KING?

BONK!

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: KING ARTHUR RETURNS TO THE LODGE AFTER A FRUITLESS DAY OF HUNTING. HE IS IN A RAGE, FOR HUGH-THE-FOX AND HIS FORESTERS HAD DRIVEN THE DEER HERD DEEP INTO THE THICKET.

AND HUGH, IN CHAINS, WONDERS IF HIS IMPUDENCE HAS GONE TOO FAR. HE PLACES HIS HOPE IN PRINCE VALIANT. IF ANYONE CAN SOOTHE THE KING, IT IS HE.

AND VAL RIDES ALL NIGHT TO CAMELOT, THERE TO SEARCH THE ARCHIVES FOR A PARDON SIGNED BY ARTHUR SOME FIFTEEN YEARS AGO.

SIR KAY IS PROSECUTOR, A JUST MAN BUT SEVERE. HE BELIEVES IN THE LETTER OF THE LAW; "THE PENALTY IS CLEARLY WRITTEN AND MUST BE ENFORCED. THOUGH IT IS NOT PROVEN THAT HE KILLED ANY, YET HE DROVE AWAY THE WHOLE HERD!"

'LET ME READ FROM THIS DOCUMENT," PLEADS VAL. "'IN GRATITUDE FOR GREAT SERVICES RENDERED TO KING AND COUNTRY, WE GRANT FULL PARDON TO HUGH-THE-FOX AND HIS BAND OF OUTLAWS AND GIVE THEM THE FREEDOM OF OUR FORESTS. SIGNED: ARTHUR, REX.'"

"LET US HEAR FROM HUGH," THE KING COMMANDS. "SIRE, WE HAVE OBEYED YOUR LAWS, WE HAVE TRAINED YOUNG MEN AS SCOUTS TO SERVE YOU IN WAR, BUT WE WERE BETTER OFF AS OUTLAWS. WE ARE FORESTERS, NOT TILLERS OF THE SOIL. WE LIVE ON NUTS, RABBITS AND BERRIES IN WOODLANDS TEEMING WITH DEER. MANY OF MY BAND HAVE RETURNED TO THEIR OLD OUTLAW WAYS."

"OUTLAWS AND POACHERS CAN EXPECT THE HANGMAN'S NOOSE," INTERRUPTS SIR KAY. "SO WHAT?" SHOUTS HUGH ANGRILY. "OUR LOYALTY TO THE KING AND HIS LAWS IS REWARDED WITH STARVATION!"

NEXT WEEK – Temper! Temper!

PASS LEFT

"THE WORLD IS FULL OF FOOLS AND HE WHO WOULD NOT SEE IT SHOULD LIVE ALONE AND SMASH HIS MIRROR" - CLAUDE LE PETIT

MY GUESS IS, TINY TOM, THAT SIMON SLUMLARD IS MEETING WITH THE FOLKS HE'S SELLING THE MIDASBURGER FORMULA TO! AND HE WANTS US THERE AS SORT OF ··· EXHIBITS!

WELL ANYWAY, IF MR. SLUMLARD WANTS US TO MEET THE PEOPLE HE'S SELLING YOUR FORMULA TO, YOU CAN BE PROUD THAT IT WAS YOU WHO INVENTED THE BEST TASTING 'BURGER IN THE WORLD!

I'M FAR PROUDER OF THAT THAN I AM OF MY BUSINESS ABILITY, SON!

ANNIE (AND THE ASP) CAN SEE WITHOUT BEING SEEN ···

NOW THAT SAHIB WARBUCKS OWNS CONTROLLING INTEREST IN THE COMPANY DICKERING FOR THE MIDASBURGER FRANCHISE AND FORMULA, HE IS SIMPLY APPLYING THE COMMON SENSE YARDSTICK OF HIS AND HIS ASSOCIATES OWN PALATES!

AN' SINCE TRIGGER USES THE MIDASBURGER FORMULA HE SWINDLED FROM KING MIDAS, THE CHANCES ARE THAT THE WHOLE BOARD O' DIRECTORS'LL GO APE WHEN THEY SWALLOW THEIR FIRST MOUTHFUL!

A WISE MAN ONCE SAID, ANNIE ···· "GOD SENDS MEAT, AND THE DEVIL SENDS COOKS"····

YA MEAN, ASP··· THAT EVEN USIN' THE RIGHT FORMULA THEY COULD LOUSE IT UP??

WARBUCKS BUILDING

THOUGH IT COST ME A PRETTY PENNY TO OBTAIN THE MIDASBURGER FORMULA, MR. WARBUCKS, I SAID TO MYSELF··· "SIMON LEGREE SLUMLARD, A BARGAIN IS A BARGAIN! DON'T EXPECT A CENT MORE THAN THREE MILLION!!"

I GATHER YOU MEAN YOU WERE MORE THAN GENEROUS TO KING MIDAS, THE MAN WHO DEVELOPED THE MIDASBURGER??

WHEN I MADE HIM MY OFFER, HE WAS RENDERED SPEECHLESS! CORRECT, TRIGGER TREAT??

WORSE'N DAT··· HE COULDN'T EVEN TALK!!

SINCE I'VE HAD THE PLEASURE OF TASTING THE MIDASBURGER BEFORE, I AM IN THE POSITION TO MAKE COMPARISONS, MR. SLUMLARD!

YOU WON'T BE ABLE TO TELL THE DIFFERENCE, MR. WARBUCKS··· I GUARANTEE IT!!

THERE GOES THE FIRST BITE ··· "DADDY" LOOKS LIKE HE'S ENJOYING IT··· NOW HE'S TAKIN' THE SECOND BITE ···· EVERYBODY'S WATCHIN' HIM···

AS MAJORITY STOCKHOLDER, HIS DECISION IS THE VITAL ONE, PRINCESS····

MAYBE THINGS WON'T TURN OUT SO BAD, TINY TOM! I CAN ALWAYS GET A JOB AS A COOK IN SOME DINER··· AND WE'LL NEVER GO HUNGRY···

BUT YOU'RE A GREAT CHEF, FATHER···· COULDN'T YOU INVENT SOMETHING ELSE SPECIAL LIKE THE MIDASBURGER??

I WISH I COULD SAY YES, SON··· BUT RECIPES LIKE THAT COME ALONG ONLY ONCE IN A MAN'S LIFETIME···
