Earth Day An Occasion To Change One's Values

By BOB MONROE
Associated Press Writer

Earth Day is a cleaned pond, a buried auto, a college teachin. It is thousands of Americans seeking to understand the ills of their environment and learn how they can be corrected. Earth Day is today.

The unprecedented event focuses attention in more than 2,000 communities across the country on pollution problems, both local and national. In addition, many groups slated massive clean-ups.

At the same time, some corporations and large businesses singled out for criticism by anti-pollution groups took advertisements and planned talks at various school and community groups to give their side of the story.

Activities planned range from a "pollution trail" in Oklahoma to grade schoolers' litter pickup. Many were designed to highlight one of four areas: water pollution, air pollution, the automobile and general litter.

Hundreds of motorists planned to forsake their automobiles for the day to protest pollution caused by the internal combustion engine. New York Mayor John V. Lindsay planned to ride to appointments in an electric car.

Traffic bans were scheduled in parts of many cities including New York and Philadelphia. The University of Iowa in Iowa City planned a "Survival Parade of Nonmotorized Transportation."

Other groups planned to bury autos and a group at Western Connecticut State College in Danbury will parade through town pulling a cart with a car engine. They plan to bury the engine on campus.

Air pollution is the target of a Boulder, Colo. group calling itself People United to Reclaim the Environment. They asked residents to curtail use of electricity in an attempt to "reduce air pollution caused by electricity-generating plants."

In Jamestown, N.Y., the Kiwanis Club will dump 20 tons of sand in the downtown area to demonstrate how much dirt falls on one square mile of the city during 30 days of maximum air pollution.

Water pollution was the concern of a group of women from Canada and the United States who joined forces Tuesday to picket on Zug Island in the Detroit River. They protested alleged pollution by the Great Lakes Steel Corp.

Nursing students at the University of Connecticut in Storrs planned to drain and clean Duck Pond, adjoining their campus.

"In recent years, we understand certain chemical pollutants which have found their way into the pond have killed numerous fish," said one student. "It seemed natural that we, as nursing students, would express our concern in cases where pollution could constitute a health deterrent."

At St. Xavier College, a Roman Catholic women's school in Chicago, students will clean up a littered lake on their campus, install a sand bed and plant wild flowers on the shore.

Among the litter collection efforts was that of fifth and sixth graders at the Whitehall, Mich., Elementary School. They got a head start on Earth Day and have gathered 91,600 bottles and cans toward a goal of 200,000.

Reynolds Metals Co. said it would send trucks to 18 colleges in 14 states to pick up aluminum cans collected during "trash-ins." They will pay for the cans

Equal School Bus Service, Or For None

GREENSBORO (AP) — The state of North Carolina apparently must provide school bus service to all urban pupils on an equal basis next school year or terminate bus service to all city students.

This became the situation Tuesday when a three judge federal panel refused to delay beyond Aug. 1 implementation of a ruling striking down the state's school bus policy.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Ralph Moody said, "I see no particular reason for appealing the case any further."

The decision opens the possibility of a special session of the General Assembly to provide funds for added school bus service.

A spokesman said the state school superintendent, Craig Phillips, and the Board of Education controller, A. C. Davis, do not expect to make a comment until they have an opportunity to discuss the matter with the governor, the attorney general and chairman of the Board of Education, Dallas Herring.

Gov. Bob Scott and Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan were out of town Tuesday. Spokesmen said they would have no comment until they have had time to study the decision.

An estimated 41,000 students would be affected if bus service to all city pupils were terminated.

Tom Davis, director of public information for the Board of Education, said if the state decides to provide bus service for all pupils who live more than 1½ miles from their schools, an extra 55,000 children would be eligible.

Davis said it would cost an estimated $2 million during the next school year to bus the additional 55,000 children.

W. Warren Sparrow of Winston-Salem initiated the suit in U. S. Dist. Court in Greensboro, Aug. 2, 1968, on behalf of his daughter. They lived in the "inner city" not receiving free school bus service from the state.

Board Reviews Hospital Plans For Expansion

All avenues for expansion of hospital facilities were reviewed by the Pitt Memorial Hospital Board last night in anticipation of presenting a concrete plan to the County Commissioners within the next two months.

The executive committee met with architects last week. The use of modules, the building of an additional wing, and the building of a completely new hospital are three possibilities for adding more beds to the overcrowded county medical facility.

The Board approved the hospital's laundry service being taken over by Prison Enterprises late this year or early in 1971.

The group was told that patient billing is now being done by additional computer equipment purchased by the county. The county computer has been handling the hospital's payroll for some time.

The Board was presented a "Coronary Care Manual" written by the hospital medical staff for use in the new critical care unit.

Dr. Lee West was the only member of the medical staff present.

Urgent Plea For Help By Cambodians

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cambodia's reported urgent renewal of its plea for U.S. arms aid in its struggle against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese has put President Nixon in a delicate diplomatic and political bind.

The President is considering the appeal, disclosed Tuesday night by administration sources. A similar request for weapons and other material was made last week by the new Cambodian regime.

Nixon has taken a position against widening U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia and is under congressional pressure to adhere to this policy, even though the Phnom Penh government of Premier Lon Nol did not ask for troops.

And the administration wants to avoid any charges that Cambodia has given up its neutralist role by linking up militarily with the United States.

Yet there is little doubt Cambodia is having a difficult time handling attacks by the Viet Cong-North Vietnamese elements and Nixon does not want a Communist takeover of the tiny nation that neighbors Vietnam.

One possible out being studied by the administration is the possibility of an international arrangement to provide aid to Cambodia with an eye toward supporting the Phnom Penh government's neutrality.

Lon Nol opened up this possibility last week when he issued a call for aid from other nations, saying he would accept "all unconditional foreign aid from all sources."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield has led the opposition to any extension of American military aid, no matter what the form, to Cambodia.

After the Phnom Penh regime's initial request for help, Mansfield said the only way for the United States to avoid further destructive conflict in Southeast Asia is to go no further "in any way, shape or form."

Undaunted Astronauts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The men of Apollo 13 were cold, bone-tired and fretful about their ability to get home. But go again? Sure.

And it's a measure of Jim Lovell, Fred Haise and Jack Swigert that they are looking out for the other guys, the astronauts-in-waiting who might be cheated out of a flight if the 13 crew suits up for Apollo 16 or 17.

"We certainly wanted to make a lunar landing," Lovell said emphatically. "Fra Mauro has so much to offer, we thought. We spent an awful lot of time at it. But this was my fourth space flight and there are many people in our organization who have not flown and who deserve to fly and are talented enough to fly.

"They deserve the mission. If they (space agency officials) feel that this team should go back there, I'm certainly willing to go back—but otherwise, I think other people ought to do it."

Haise and Swigert nodded agreement.

They looked rested and fit, none the worse for their harrowing days in space as they answered newsmen's questions at a 70-minute televised and broadcast news conference Tuesday night.

Lovell's wife Marilyn was in the audience. Before Apollo 13, when Lovell said he planned to hang up his space helmet after the flight, she had said she was glad. Tuesday night, she just smiled.

Says 400,000 Tar Heels Need Housing

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Irvin Aldridge, director of the North Carolina Department of Local Affairs, said today "decent housing" is needed by 400,000 persons in the Tar Heel state.

"By beginning to cope with the problems now, we can halt further inner-city decay," Aldridge said. "We can apply available federal funds to innovative ideas and salvage our cities before it is too late."

He made his remarks in a prepared talk to North carolina county extension agents.

"There is no disgrace in admitting the existence of poor housing," Aldridge said. "The disgrace lies in doing nothing about it. This is not going to happen in North Carolina."

He added, "We must see that it gets better, not worse, because inadequate housing breeds deterioration in our society, and this North Carolina cannot afford."

Adequate housing, Aldridge said, is not just a problem facing metropolitan areas. He noted that 70 per cent of the homes in Jones County were listed as substandard, 60 per cent in Pender and 71 per cent in Caswell.

Rural Robeson County, he said, placed 95th in the state in adequate housing with just over 14,000 "unfit homes." Johnson County had 11,488.

Aldridge told the extension agents the cities admit they have a housing problem "and our department is going to help them find solutions."

'Panty Raid' By Charlotte Coeds

CHARLOTTE (AP)—About 50 girls from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte staged a "panty raid" on the men's dormitory next to their own dorm.

The girls apparently were acting in reprisal against—or in glee at—a panty raid conducted by a group of men students last week. Both raids were campus firsts for the young school.

Tuesday night the marauding women assembled outside the men's dorm shortly after midnight and shouted: "We want tee-shirts."

That quickly evolved into, "We want shorts"—and that's when the men responded by tossing some underwear out the windows.

Alcindor Suing Over Apartment

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Lew Alcindor has filed a lawsuit alleging a couple violated the state fair housing act by refusing to rent him a $350 apartment because he is a Negro.

His court petition Tuesday asserted Mr. and Mrs. William Forsythe told Alcindor's lawyer the apartment was available, but declined to agree to a lease when they learned the tenant would be the former UCLA All-American, now with the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association.

Invaders Hunted By Cuban Troops

Miami (AP) — Cuban troops combed mountainous Oriente Province for antigovernment raiders today while a militant exile group in Miami demanded U.S. aid and official recognition that the Communist island is in a state of war.

An official of the organization, called Alpha 66, said the group was demanding "all the necessary moral and material support" for the two-pronged invasion mounted last week in an attempt to overthrow the Fidel Castro regime.

The spokesman said Alpha 66 also was demanding a U.S. "declaration that Cuba is already in a state of war."

"The welcome and reception of Cubans living in and around the landing spot were out of the expected proportions," the spokesman said, "and scores of fellow countrymen joined the invasion forces on their way into the hills."

A statement released by Alpha 66 said, "In the name of freedom and self-determination of the Cuban people, we remind the mandataries of this country (the United States) and those of Central and South America ... that time after time they said to the whole world they would support, help and assist any inside revolt of the people of Cuba."

"We ask and demand that they live up to their commitments," it added.

Meanwhile, the head of the Cuban army in Oriente Province said over Havana Radio his troops had surrounded the invasion forces and "within 48 hours they will be completely exterminated."

The number of invaders has not been disclosed.

Capt. Raul Menendez Tomasevich said in the radio interview monitored in Miami that government soldiers had the raiders pinned down near Baracoa on Cuba's eastern tip.

Alpha 66 said there had been two clashes since the invaders' landing last week and "our men came out victorious against the tyranny's armed forces."

Havana Radio reported two raiders had been killed and three captured, and that five government soldiers had been killed.

LUMBER YARD FIRE

MARSHVILLE, N.C. (AP)— Fire fighters from three volunteer departments extinguished a lumber yard fire today near Marshville, but the blaze had already done an estimated $100,000 damage.

Nixon Urges Loans For Stricken Communities

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon urged Congress today to authorize federal loans to communities suffering major disaster so they can make up losses of property tax revenues.

In a special message, Nixon said the general framework of current federal disaster relief programs is effective but declared that "a number of improvements are in order."

One of his principal recommendations was for low-interest loans to offset destruction of a substantial part of a community's property tax base.

Nixon also called for improvements in the disaster loan programs of the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration.

"The recommended changes," he said, "would provide for improved refinancing, payment deferral, and forgiveness arrangements and would assure disaster loans to older citizens."

The chief executive also asked the Congress to expand federal authority to permit permanent repair or full replacement of central public facilities damaged by disasters.

And he asked for a two-year extension of a program making unemployment compensation available to individuals made jobless because of a major disaster.

Other provisions in the legislation Nixon seeks would speed federally aided removal of debris from private property when it is in the public interest, simplification of laws allowing the government to provide temporary housing or other emergency shelter, and new emphasis on disaster prevention.

Nixon, by executive order, created a National Council on Federal Disaster Assistance made up of senior officials of agencies involved in such efforts.

Also, he said, "We are developing plans to provide 'one stop' service to individuals in disaster areas so representatives of federal agencies and the Red Cross would be available at a single assistance center.

The message revealed, too, that Nixon has ordered a comprehensive study of property insurance coverage for disaster situations, to be completed by the end of the year.

Arrest Suspect On Multiple Charges

A 28-year-old New Bern man is in Pitt County Jail following his arrest early Tuesday morning on charges stemming from three separate incidents of automobile breaking-entering and larceny.

According to Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson, deputies arrested Richard Lee Hodges around 12:30 Tuesday morning in Craven County.

The three incidents, Tyson said, were reported by employees of Burroughs Wellcome who returned to their cars Monday after a work shift and found various items of equipment and accessories missing.

Carlton Joyner of Greenville reported that a two-way radio, antenna and amplifier had been stolen. Roy Haggard of Robersonville reported the theft of a stereo tape deck and seven tapes and Joe Ange of Greenville reported a tool box and tools, valued at $200, were missing.

The Sheriff said that all of the missing items, plus several tires, were recovered when the arrest was made.

Trial for Hodges has been set for April 29 in District Court. He is being held under $600 bond on three counts of breaking-entering and larceny.

Body Of Sixth Victim Found

WELDON, N. C. (AP) —The body of the sixth victim of a collision of two military jets over Weldon five days previously was found Tuesday by searchers.

An Air Force spokesman said an Air Force helicopter spotted the body of T. Sgt. Joseph Brown of Abbeville, Ga., in a clear but grassy section of a wooded area about a quarter of a mile from the point where an Air Force plane hit the ground.

Brown was one of four men in an Air Force T39 twin-jet from MacDill Air Force Base in Florida which collided with a Navy jet fighter from Oceana Naval Air 7 Station in Virginia last Thursday. The bodies of the three Air Force men and of the two Navy men were found in the wreckage of their planes.

Black Power Advocates In Trinidad Stir Revolt

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON
Associated Press Writer

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Shooting broke out again today in the Trinidadian capital's business district as authorities sought information on the whereabouts of rebellious elements of the Regiment, the island nation's 800-man army.

Three deaths were reported in the Tuesday night violence that grew out of the arrests of 13 Black Power movement leaders. A rebellious soldier was killed by a coast guardman as he tried to flee the army camp six miles from Port of Spain, a 16-year-old youth throwing rocks from a rooftop was felled by a policeman's bullet and a fireman was killed when he was hit in the chest by a fire bomb.

The Defense Department in Washington reported a Navy helicopter carrier, the Guadalcanal, had been dispatched from San Juan, Puerto Rico, "heading in the direction of Trinidad." It declined to give further details. The Guadalcanal normally carries about 2,000 Marines and 15 helicopters in addition to its crew.

The violence broke out when police tried to bring the 13 arrested Black Power leaders to the military camp at Tiburon Bay in order to ship them aboard coast guard boats to Nelson Island, a small detention prison off the coast.

But when they arrived at the camp, police were turned back at its gates by army guards and forced to take their prisoners back to town, according to reports.

Reports pieced together from witnesses indicated the following chronology of events:

An estimated 200-300 soldiers of the Regiment sympathetic with the Black Power leaders charged toward the camp gates, but in doing so passed the quarters of the 100-man coast guard, which remained loyal to the government of Prime Minister Eric E. Williams.

A 28-year-old army private was killed in the skirmishing as the rest of the rebels surged out of the camp and headed for the hills around Port of Spain.

Unconfirmed reports said some of the soldiers had commandeered a boat and escaped to the island of Monos, a Trinidadian territory off the coast of Venezuela.

Most of Trinidad's 2,000-man police force remained at their posts in the lucrative oil fields, and the rest withdrew from the streets and took up positions guarding police headquarters and the Red House, containing the Parliament chambers and the high court.

About 1,000 youths surged along the main thoroughfare, Frederick Street, in defiance of a dusk-to-dawn curfew imposed by Williams. They shouted "Power! Power!" and gave the Black Power clenched-fist salute as they heaved rocks through store windows and did some looting.

Police moved in on the crowd and dispersed it after 45 minutes, firing shots over the youths' heads. An unknown number of persons were injured in street battles.

Williams and his Cabinet met late into the night, to discuss the situation.

In Terms Of Dollars, Cost Of Getting Married Has Gone Up

By CAROLYN A. BOWERS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Now that you've selected the bridegroom and set the date, what do you know about the high cost of loving—the wedding.

Selecting the invitations, the gown, flowers and caterer are all part of seemingly endless decisions facing you and two million other brides this year, whose retail spending power happens to amount to a $5 billion bridal market.

In terms of dollars an cents, getting married, like everything else, has gone up. The cost of the wedding gown, probably the most important item in the bride's personal trousseau, has increased by at least 20 per cent, say bridal consultants and buyers across the country. This increase, the experts agreed, is due to labor, more specifically, they said, to the seamstresses' union.

A buyer for the bridal department of Stix, Back & Fuller Co. in St. Louis, estimated that the price of a wedding gown goes up by $10 to $20 everytime the garment workers' union signs a contract.

Material and decorations on gowns have been reduced to hold down the cost, buyers in Memphis report, but by the peak buying season, costs still had increased by $10 to $20. In Detroit, gowns that sold for $125 in 1965 have gone up to as much as $200, buyers there report.

Bridal consultants and buyers in New York said the overall market has increased by 20 per cent, bringing the average spending price between $125 and $300.

One Study Shows

In 1969, the average cost of the bridal gown was $115.98, according to a survey conducted by National Family Opinion, Inc. for the Modern Bride magazine.

This year, Weddiquette, a bridal planning and management service, advises the bride with a $1,500 budget to allocate $150 for her gown.

It should be noted that several buyers also reported increases in costs of gowns for the bridesmaids. Gowns that sold for $28 five years ago are up to as much as $40 now, they said.

The cost of the invitations depends on the type of engraving and size of the cards. The traditional nine-line invitations with double envelopes and separate reception cards average from $118 to $145 per 100. When the wedding and reception are held at the same place such as the home or hotel, only one card is needed. These cards range from $65 to $95 per 100.

Printed invitations, if the budget demands them, are considerably less, ranging from $3 to $10 per 100.

Prices on bridal portraits and candids of the wedding vary across the country, depending on location. Costs are usually higher on the East Coast and near major cities.

Most costs for formal portraits in black and white, however, usually range between $30 and $90, depending on size and pose. Color candids, usually grouped per 20 or 30, probably will average between $150-300.

The Floral Picture

The cost of the wedding flowers always has depended on several variables such as the season, variety and arrangement. All these considered, florists across the country reported that prices have gone up as much as 50 per cent. While allowing for slight increases in the cost of materials, most florists attributed the price increase to labor, citing overtime that must be paid to employes for weekend nights for many weddings and the industry's lack of sufficient growers and designers.

Considering all variables, bridal bouquets can range from $25 to $100, attendants' flowers $15 and up, and church decorations from a $15 altar vase on up. The most popular flowers, according to several florists, are lilies of the valley and stephanotis. Orchids, they said, have lost their appeal.

Although the cost of the reception is another variable, depending on the type and menu, the catering industry reported that prices have almost doubled in the last five years because of labor and the overall national increase in food prices.

Cocktail or tea receptions held in the home or a hall with outside caterers this year probably will range from $3 to $10 per person. This type of reception usually includes hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, canapes and a beverage.

The sitdown meal or buffet with a more substantial menu most likely will run between $6-14 per person. Some caterers charge a flat rate per 100. Depending on the menu, and based on 100 guests, this charge can range from $175 and up.

Reception Costs

If the reception is held in a hotel or restaurant, cocktail receptions probably will average $15 per person and up, the sitdown meal and buffet from $30 per head on up. These prices will vary also because of other extras the bride may desire such as flowers and music. Tips and taxes are usually included in the total bill.

The wedding cake if ordered through the caterer, may also add additional costs, depending on the kind of cake and the number of people to be served. Some caterers include the cake in their flat rate as part of the service.

If ordered separately, a cake for 100-150 people probably will average between $35 and $40.

Church rentals, if charged, are about the same. This cost, depending on whether or not there's music and other services the church may supply, average between $10 and $30.

One note for the friends of the bride—the cost of rice has gone up to, 5 per cent per pound in the last 10 years. Its average retail price is up to 19.1 cents.

City By City

A United Press International cross-country survey showed these changes in wedding attire and service:

In Detroit, price increases from 1965 to the present were: bridal gowns retailing at $125 up to $200; bridesmaids gowns that sold for $28 up to $40; florists fee for bride's and attendants flowers up to $64.75 from $53.25, church decorations up to $37 from $30; wedding cake for 100 up to $33 from $27, for 150 up to $37 from $33; cocktail or tea reception up to $2.75-$3.28 from $1.50 to $2, sitdown meal or buffet up to $6.85 from $3-$5.50.

Memphis reported that flowers costing $7.50 in 1965 had increased to $10. Over the last year, bridal gowns increased between $10 and $20 and bridesmaids' between $3 and $6.

St. Louis showed the following increases: bridal gowns up between $10-$20 in the last year; bridesmaids gowns selling for $30 in 1960 up to $45-$50; catering up 20 per cent since 1965 and flowers up 5 per cent.

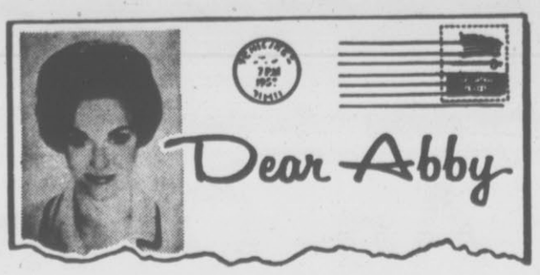

In Los Angeles the wedding gown market has increased by $30 since 1960.

In Houston, price increases were: bridal gowns up to $300 from $225 in 1960 and $250 in 1965; cocktail receptions for 100 up to $175 from $150 in 1965 and $125 in 1960; color candid photographs of the wedding up to $7.50 each from $6 in 1965 and up to $225 per 30 from $200 in 1965; music, based on a 6-piece orchestra, up to $350 from $300 in 1965 and $250 in 1960; local wedding planning agencies, who set up rehearsals, reception, flowers, etc. based on three bridesmaids and 100 guests, up to $620 from $415 in 1965 and $220 in 1960.

Dallas reported that bridal gowns had increased 50 per cent since 1960; catering totaling $135 in 1960 up to $215 and flowers costing $80 up to $95.

New York reported these increases: bridal gowns up 20 per cent over the last year: flowers up almost 50 per cent since 1965 and catering nearly 100 per cent.

Husband Wants Both Wives With Him

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Both my wives read your column.

I have just been offered a promotion to a top job in our Honolulu office. Policy dictates that either I take the job or resign.

For 25 years I have been in charge of our two offices, one in Fort Worth and the other in Houston, alternating weekly.

I have a wife in each town, support two families, and put two sets of children thru school.

If I were to resign, it would hurt everybody. I cannot, and will not, decide between either of my wives. I want to take both of them. What should I do? Please hurry, Abby. I haven't much time. TROUBLED IN TEXAS

DEAR TROUBLED: Keep one family in Hilo and the other in Oahu. And buy all the volcano insurance you can get.

DEAR ABBY: Will you help us get the message across to our 15-year-old daughter that it looks bad for young people to put on a show of affection in public? I want to crawl in a hole when I see my daughter walking down the street with her boyfriend. She is hanging on him, or their arms are around each other's waists, and they even stop to kiss right on the street!

When they are in the car together, she is practically sitting on his lap. And when they are indoors, it's the same picture.

Abby, I know young people are attracted to each other, and I am not saying there is anything wrong with honest emotions, but please tell young people to keep their hands off each other in public! OLD FASHIONED

DEAR OLD FASHIONED: Hello, young lovers [wherever you are] and this goes for the older lovers, too.

All the world may love a lover, but it's poor taste to act out the role in public. A boy who respects a girl will keep his hands off her in public, and a girl who respects herself, will make sure he does.

DEAR ABBY: I am 69 years of age, a Buddhist missionary and a private teacher of English, German and the violin here in Bangkok. I came here from Germany 38 years ago, and during that time I have had no chance to satisfy my refined and spiritual love hunger — the reason being that I am two-thirds bald.

The Thai women do not like bald-headed lovers, and the western women find other excuses. German women never demanded hair on their men. Can you help me while there is still time! BALD-HEADED IN BANGKOK

DEAR BALD-HEADED: Either get yourself a hair piece, or head for Germany and find a woman there who will satisfy your refined and spiritual hunger — while there is still time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ARIES AND CAPRICORN": Thank your lucky stars! It's better to have loved and lost than to have hated and won.

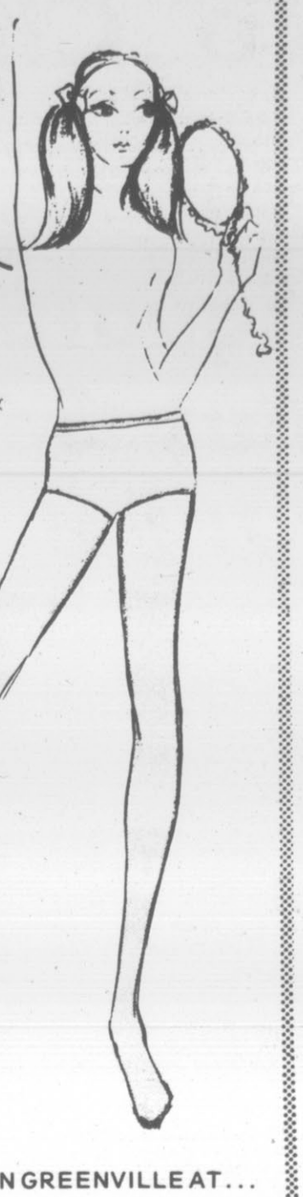

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Swiss Courtesy Is A Miracle

ZURICH, Switzerland (WNS) — Muriel Freiberg, 27, was in a rush to get to the airport and asked the porter to put her bags in the luggage compartment of "the rented yellow car out front" while she paid her hotel bill. At the airport she opened the luggage compartment, and the bags were not there. Then she noticed that she was driving a blue car, not a yellow one. The owner of the blue car, accompanied by the porter and the luggage, showed up at the airport in the rented yellow car in time for Miss Freiberg to make her plane. "Swiss courtesy is a miracle," commented Miss Freiberg, and Mr. Blue Car replied, "I hope I don't lose my wife. I was supposed to pick her up 30 minutes ago."

Unappointed Round Caught Burglars

LONDON (WUN) — Linda Griffiths, a 40-year - old postwoman, caught three burglars by chasing them on her post - office bicycle. Mrs. Griffiths was wakened by the screams of her daughter whose noise frightened the burglars into quick retreat. The lady took time to dress before setting off in hot pursuit. "I hope the post - office won't disapprove of my using their bicycle for other than postal duty," she said later.

Private Family Palaces House Fashion Firms

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL

ROME (UPI)—The number of Italian fashion firms working in private family palaces has doubled since January.

Now there are two—and one is of American heritage.

The first was the Marchese Emilio Pucci, whose family and palace in Florence date to the 11th Century.

The second is La Mendola—the American duo of Mike La Mendola, of Rockford, Ill., and Jack Savage, of Herminie, Pa. Their mansion is in Rome's fashion center, Via Gregoriana, one block from the Spanish Steps known to millions of tourists.

Almost As Important

Many Italian designers think where they show their clothes is almost as important as the clothes themselves.

They want to impress their clients. And when the world press and buyers come in twice a year, they think an elegant setting helps draw the top people.

The La Mendola mansion has been in the family only since January, but it has been a part of Roman history almost as long as there has been a Rome.

The house is built into a steep hillside. Roman history starts 200 steps down past the furnace room at a grill sealed by the government pending archeological excavation of a passage running up the Pincian Hill toward the Via Veneto.

The Dolce Vita set of pre-Christian times frequented the neighborhood. The villa of the Roman Consul Lucullus in the First Century B.C. stood about where the American Embassy stands now on the Veneto.

Banquet Scene

It was the scene of banquets so famous that even now the word Lucullan is used to descrube superb meals. The La Mendola mansion is built where part of Lucullus' gardens once stood.

Marian Kemp, daughter of a former U.S. ambassador here and a member of the Morgan banking family, purchased it in 1904.

For decades she entertained nobility, diplomats and art world figures like Henry James. He put the house—and some say Miss Kemp—into the novel "Daisy Miller."

Miss Kemp loved elegance. Her balconied bedroom was papered entirely in gold brocade and had a huge gilt wardrobe chest.

Three years ago when she died, the house passed to the nuns at Salvator Mundi, Rome's American-run international hospital. They sold it to La Mendola.

"It's perfect. We're not doing a thing to it architecturally," Savage said. He and La Mendola will live and hold shows there and use a connected annex to house workrooms for 20 people.

The house is L-shaped, with the long leg lying along Via Gregoriana. Room-width halls run the length of that side so that no traffic disturbs living quarters.

Has Ballroom

The marble halls, with 16th century wood paneling from a church, lead past a brocade-walled salon to the two-story ballroom. The artist and sculptor Canova used the room as a studio in the late 17th century. A headless marble female figure in the dining room is attributed to him.

La Mendola plans to leave the ballroom just as it is, with walls hung in red damask and a marble fireplace flanked by two-story gilt pillars from a 16th century church.

Here they will have their fashion shows in the most elegant showroom this side of the Pucci and Pitti Palaces in Florence.

A mirrored sunroom opens from the ballroom and looks onto a small formal garden with fishpond and dolphin fountain.

A modern dumbwaiter connecting subterranean kitchens and servants' oms to the ground floor serves a sunken Pompeiian dining room in a round Greek temple annex.

From the upper story La Mendola can lean out his bedroom window, pluck fresh lemons for dinner and look over the temple through a gap in the rooftops to the flag flying atop the presesidential Quirinale Palace.

Mrs. Savage Named To State Office

WINSTON-SALEM — The 17th annual convention of the N. C. Alpha Delta Kappa, honorary sorority for women educators, met at the Hilton Inn here April 17-19.

Mrs. Elizabeth Savage of Greenville was elected to the position of state vice president and will serve a two-year term. Mrs. Cotten Smith, also of Greenville, was named sergeant-at arms.

The theme of the convention was "Windows to the Sky."

Mrs. Elizabeth Savage

Featured were five windows: friendship; courage; love; community; and humanity.

The main business of the convention was the updating of N.C. bylaws in keeping with the changes made in International at the Kansas City convention; the division of the 34 counties in District Five into two districts, five with Greenville as center and six with Wilmington as center; and the election of officers.

Among the dignitaries attending were Immediate Past Grand President, Jean Measereau of California, Grand Vice President of North East Region, Betty Stackhouse of Pennsylvania, Grand Vice President of the South East Region, Gretta Kistter of Charlotte, Vice President of Province I, Olive Bennett of Columbia, S.C., and Past Grand President of International, Odell Smith.

Among other state officers elected was Mrs. Margaret Cogdell of Goldsboro, vice president of N.C. District V.

Those attending from Greenville were Mrs. Lillah Smith and Mrs. Savage of Alpha Iota Chapter and Mrs. Margaret Norville and Mrs. Cotten Smith of Alpha Nu.

Spring Luncheon Planned For St. Mary's Alumnae

NEW BERN — The annual spring luncheon of St. Mary's Alumnae Association will be held here on April 29 at the New Bern Country Club.

The Rev. Frank W. Pisani, new president of St. Mary's, will be the guest speaker. The luncheon will begin at 12 noon.

Ninth president of St. Mary's, the Rev. Pisani received his A.B. degree at the University of California in Berkeley in 1942. Following four years in the U.S. Army, where he served as a first lieutenant in the Infantry and Corp of Engineers, he worked as vice president of Pisani Paper Co., San Francisco, Calif. In 1948, he began work as an instructor at the University of Tallahassee, Gainesville.

In 1952, he entered Virginia Theological Seminary earning his B. D. degree in 1955. He served as rector of Church of the Holy Comforter in Tallahassee, Fla., from 1955-63. From 1963 until coming to St. Mary's Junior College last summer, the Rev. Pisani was associate dean at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Reservations should be made by April 24 with Mrs. Georgia Carmichael, 602 Pearson Circle, New Bern.

The price of the luncheon is $3.00 and checks should be enclosed with reservations. Mothers of prospective students are invited to attend.

Rev. Frank W. Pisani

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Briley request the honor of your presence at the marraige of their daughter, Virginia Diane, to Frank Charles Harrington Jr. on Saturday, April 25, at 3:00 p.m. at St. Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church, Washington Highway.

Interview Style All-Important Now That Job Crunch Is On

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — Memo to the college senior in your family: You'd be wise to learn how to look for a job in such a way that you put your best foot forward. For college graduated this year will find themselves having the toughest time in 25 years in their search for employment. Reason: the economic decline.

Here are some dimensions of this sudden change from years gone by, when college grads could almost write their own job tickets. Recruiters no longer are flooding the nation's college campuses. Job offers to new graduates are far below last year's. It's no longer a matter of the prospective job-holder having his pick from a host of jobs; it's the other way around.

In learning how to look for a job, keep in mind that the most important minutes are from the time you enter an interviewer's office until you leave it.

Veteran job - seekers ultimately get to know this instinctively, and learn to act accordingly. But the novice, the boy or girl looking for a job for the first time, should be told to realize that the impression he creates on the interviewer can win or lose the job for him. It's a period when he can't afford to make a mistake.

Don't Be Late

Here are some tried - and - tested suggestions on how to prepare for the crucial interview:

1.—Be on time. Arrive at least 5 or 10 minutes before the appointed time.

2.—Come to the interview alone. Bringing friends or relatives will harm, not improve, your chances. If the interviewer wants to speak to a parent, or to a wife or husband, he will tell you.

3. — Know the organization's background, products, location. Know why you are interested, and be prepared to ask a few questions about policy, training, programs, fringe benefits, etc.

4.—Be certain you have the interviewer's full name, and find out how to pronounce it if it seems difficult.

5.—Take inventory of yourself and know what you have to offer. Be prepared to tell your story in no more than two minutes.

6.—Be prepared to answer fully the interviewer's questions about your training, experience if any, philosophy, goals, etc.

Notes

7.—Bring a pen that works and note paper. But use them only when the interviewer asks you to make notes of some specific detail, such as an address, number, or name.

8.—Be appropriately dressed. A man should wear a pressed suit, a clean shirt, a tie; a woman should wear a tailored or semi - tailored dress or suit, use perfume moderately, conservative lipstick and nail polish. The placement director at one large Eastern college, incidentally, is urging his job - seeking students to stay away from excessively long hair and generally avoid the appearance of a non - comformist.

Here are some hints for the interview itself:

1.—Greet the interviewer with a smile, then take your cues from him. If he offers to shake hands, do so; if he says "Good morning," reply courteously. Don't sit down until he directs you to do so. It's always his move.

2.—Look directly at the interviewer. Listen attentively to everything he tells you about the company and its work. Show interest in the job for which you are applying. Don't beg, but don't act as if you're just out windowshopping.

Smoke

3.—Be honest and sincere with your answers. Be poised, yet at the same time try to be relaxed. Smoke only if you are encouraged to do so.

5.—Be responsive to any signal that the interview is over, and don't forget to thank the interviewer for the opportunity to have spoken with him.

After the interview, a few things should be kept in mind:

1.—Thank the person who made it possible for you to see the person who interviewed you.

2.—Analyze the interview, and think of the things that will improve your next interview.

3.—Follow up the interview with a letter unless you have been told specifically not to.

4.—Keep a notebook with the names of all prospective employers who have interviewed you.

Mousery Stratagem Did The Trick

HORNCHURCH, England (WNS) — Sylvia Hawlett, 26, who lives in a public housing project with her family, could no longer stand the mice that roamed the premises. Her form of action was to pack three dead mice in a box and send them to Alan Lee Williams, the local Member of Parliament. The shock tactics worked. "I was astounded," confessed Williams after laying down the law to the housing administrators. "I don't like mice in good health. It took some time to recover from dead ones."

Responsibility Of Individual

Today Earth Day is being observed on the nation's college campuses and in high schools. It is symbolic of an awareness that has spread throughout the nation of an environmental threat to life itself on our globe.

Already the emphasis is on reducing the amount of air and water pollution and the huge mountains of trash which are destroying our environment.

Laws are being passed to require industries to control the emissions into the air and water which in some highly populated areas have already destroyed streams and lakes and polluted the air.

The automobile is recognized as one of the major polluteres in heavily populated areas and the law will soon require even more stringent controls of exhaust fumes.

While we might all be in accord with the laws which require industries to control their pollution, every individual citizens should also recognize that he, too, has to make changes in his way of living if we are to preserve our environment.

All of us have a committment to see that our streets, highways, public parks and places and even our own property is kept clean and orderly. This means that we cannot allow ourselves the "luxury" of throwing out paper and bottles and cans along the highways and streets. It means that trash cannot be thrown on the ground in parks and public areas.

We are also going to find ourselves paying the price of cleaner air. Autos with exhaust controls are going to cost more and each of us will have a committment to keep the devices in working order. The high powered car, that currently has so much appeal, may be on the way out since the pollution potential is more. It may be that in heavily populated areas use of public transportation will be necessary to cut down on the number of autos entering the cities.

Cleaning up the environment is not somebody else's job. It doesn't belong exclusively to government or industry. All of us are guilty and all are responsible for seeing that the sources of pollution are eliminated.

Regional Planning Is The Logical Answer

Multi - county regional planning areas for the state will be announced soon, according to G. Irvin Aldridge, director of the state Department of Local Affairs.

"If we are to create life - enhancing surroundings in both the cities and the suburbs, the first requirement is the power to plan and implement programs which encompass the total problems of the metropolitan regions," he said.

Certainly there must be planning if North Carolina is to avoid the problems which have beset other highly populated areas. Too, often the needed planning cannot be done by individual municipalities or even by individual counties. Thus there is a need for logical regions to plan for industrial development, creation areas, highways and general development which will best benefit the people who live there.

The sooner such planning as this gets underway the better it will be.

Impressions In The Albemarle

Todays guest column was written by Loyal Phillips, Manager of The Sunday Advance, Elizabeth City, N.C.)

By LOYAL PHILLIPS

A couple of years ago when I moved here I knew only two things about Albemarle.

My early history books brought me the story of Virginia Dare and The Lost Colony. On several Miami to Boston cruises I learned firsthand why Hatteras is Called "The Graveyard of the Atlantic."

I did not know about the beautiful blue Sound and its many scenic and functional inlets. It was news to me to find that scientific cultivation of a million rich flat acres has made this one of the world's best agricultural areas. Large, well-kept farm houses surrounded by ultra modern agricultural machinery reflect a fusion of 19th Century customs with the automation of the 1970's.

In many respects each geographical section is different. However, we can truthfully say that the Albemarle is unique. Historically rich Edenton, conservative and colloquial Perquimans; quaint but noisey Pasquotank and tourist-oriented Dare complete a kaleidoscope of varied communities and customs.

My glance at twilight down Elizabeth City's narrow Poindexter Street with its antiquated buildings gave me a false impression. Instead of being a depressed area, Poindexter's good shops are well-patronized by customers who arrive in Cadillacs or Continentals, as well as by Shank's Mare from Southern and Roanoke Streets.

One of the pleasant surprises for the newcomer is provided by the area's restaurants. From Edenton to Hatteras, it is easy to find wholesome, tasty food, diversified menus and extremely low prices. Another never-to-be forgotten surprise is the amazingly warm ocean water is September on the Dare beaches. It's difficult to realize that September swimming is more comfortable at Nags Head than at Jacksonville, Fla., 600 miles to the south.

Other interesting first impressions of unique customs are these: Girls in their late teens shopping barefoot in downtown department stores. Waitresses wearing starched, neat whites always with a smile and an alert customer interest up to closing time! Mature waitresses addressing top executive and community leaders by their first names. Courteous well-poised policemen who speak pleasantly to strangers on the street.

The most law-abiding Negro community, with fewer Saturday night stabbings and bar-brawls; the so called cotton-field dialect has all but disappeared in this are.

In view of the apparent good feelings between the races it was a big surprise to find here an active Klan composed in part at least by stable and affluent old settlers with long records of compliance with our laws and conventions.

Just one unpleasant first impression lingers with this newcomer. I refer to the existing complacency regarding the low living standards of the area.

Not enough people seem to be genuinely concerned about better highways, better vocational schools or better jobs for our people.

Opinions In Brief

"Some of the officials responsible for enforcement of law have seemed over-preoccupied in recent years with concern for the rights of defendants in criminal procedures, as related to the rights of those injured or suffering property damage from the action of the criminal." — Fort Stockton (Tex.) Pioneer.

Uprooting The VC Chieftains

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

BEN LUC DISTRICT, Long An Province, South Vietnam—The only way this interminable war can be truly ended is by the constant repetition of a small but immensely meaningful episode that took place one recent afternoon in Ben Luc district, an erstwhile hotbed of Communist insurgency.

Acting on an informant's tip, national police cornered Vietcong querrillas in two concrete bunkers built into the dike of a rice field. Coming to the police's help, two Popular Force platoons assigned to the district surrounded the bunkers. After a brief fight, the Vietcong—three men and three women—crawled out to surrender.

The women were unarmed, terribly afraid, and later said they had been forced to become Vietcong nurses. The men were armed to the teeth, clothed, and much the worse for the wear after being pummeled by police. Unimpressive though they looked, their capture sent Col. Tu, the province chief, roaring down the road to Ben Luc district to conduct the interrogation.

The police knew they had big game when they noticed their prisoners wearing K-47 Chinese pistols, status symbol of the Asian Red bigshot. The suspicion: the men were members of what Americans call the Vietcong infrastructure (VCI)—the Communist government running the war in the countryside. Interrogation confirmed that all three were in the VCI, one of them finance and economy chief for sub-region III.

What makes captures of this kind so important is that the VCI, far more than the fighting guerrillas, constitutes the heart of the Communist insurgency. Even though erstwhile Vietcong strongholds such as Long An province are now physically controlled by the Saigon government, true pacification is impossible while the VCI survives.

That's why the fact that Communist combat forces have been pushed out of most South Vietnamese populated areas does not really mean the country is pacified. The VCI has just gone underground to await better days, perhaps after all the U.S. troops are gone. In that sense, South Vietnam will always be at war until the VCI is eliminated.

Herein lies a basic reason for residual pessimism in Vietnam despite incessant setbacks suffered by the Vietcong guerrillas. By any objective standard, the rooting out of the VCI (called the Phoenix program by the U.S.) is going badly. Although the VC guerrillas are cut to shreds, the VCI in large part endures.

Figures for Long An province indicate that the capture of three VCI in Ben Luc district which we witnessed is all too rare. While 629 VCI in this province are listed as killed or imprisoned, South Vietnamese intelligence has the names of 839 still at large and contends the true figure may be 2,500 (although U.S. officials feel that estimate is ridiculously inflated).

Actually, nobody knows that much about VCI. Picking them off is like shooting a moving target while blindfolded. From the intelligence roster of Long An province VCI, we picked one name at random: Phan Van Be, provincial party secretary. We were informed he has not been sighted since Feb. 3, 1969.

Where is he now? Perhaps over the border in Cambodia with other Communist brass. Perhaps underground but inactive. Perhaps just quit.

A major reason why the whereabouts of Phan Van Be and thousands of other VCI remains a mystery is the apathy and fear of the South Vietnamese villager. Even though the once substantial support for the Vietcong has all but disappeared, the villager is not about to finger VCI for a Saigon government he doesn't care for all that much and at the risk of deathly reprisal from the Vietcong.

For this reason, VCI in Hau

Strength For Today

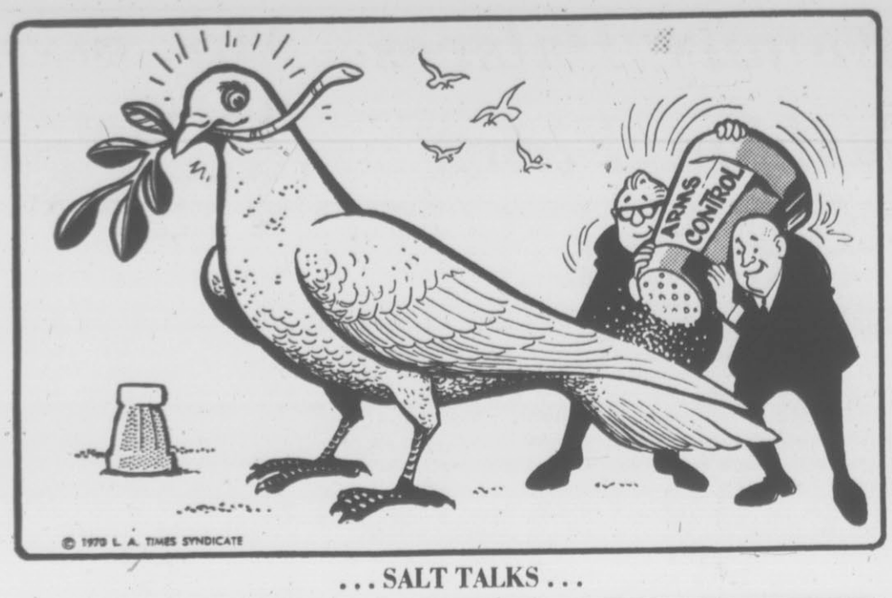

Hurricanes and Termites

A hurricane can quickly destroy a house; and so can termites. Little by little these insidious insects can eat the substance out of a dwelling until at last the beams become as ashes and the house finally plunges into ruin.

Character is sometimes destroyed by the hurricane of great events. Disappointment, financial loss, gross injustice, diease sweep down upon people and utterly destroy everything they are and have. But people are destroyed by the hurricane of events storms. More often than not, people lose their moral character gradually, unconsicously, over a long period of time, with some evil or a number of evils eating away the hearts and the moral life until everything crashes into ruin. Animosity and hate, cherished over the years, will do this. Covetousness, which robs the soul of all its spiritual values, is another of these insidious and devastating evils. We know that millions of people in this country gradually drink themselves into moral ruin, becoming what is termed today alcoholics.

Termites can destroy a building as effectively as can a hurricane. The long - cherished, long - practiced evils honeycomb the life until at last there is nothing to support it in dignity.

Turning To Ralph Nader

In the beginning God created Man, which according to all the latest birth control statistics was a big mistake.

And Man said, "Let there be light," and there was light, and Man called this light "fire," and at first it was used to warm him and let him cook his food and protect him from the wild animals. But Man discovered fire could be used to burn down a forest or burn someone else's hut or tree house or a witch at stake or soft coal or oil, which made the air turn dark gray and black. And this made Man start to cough and his eyes to run and his sinuses to hurt. And Man finally said, "God, what are you doing to me?"

And after God made the rivers and lakes and streams and oceans, Man dumped all the refuse from the earth into the waters and it killed the fish and the plants and even the oxygen, and the waters turned muddy and brown and smelled, and no one could drink from them or bathe in them, or even sail in them. And finally Man shook his fist at the heavens and said, "For God's sake, knock it off."

And Man created the wheel, and this was good because Man no longer had to walk through the forests or up and down the mountains or to school. And then Man created the engine which turned the wheels, and Man no longer had to depend on animals to pull him on the roads and paths. And Man called the new creature "automobile," and it changed the face of the earth, for Man was forced to cut down the trees and flowers and pour concrete on the land to accommodate the automobile, and drill into the earth and the sea to fuel it, and sometimes the ocean turned black and the air turned brown, and as the automobile multiplied there was less space to park it, and it was unable to move any faster than a horse, and Man behind the wheel screamed, "Good God, am I ever going to get home?

And Man created the plastic bag and the tin and aluminum can and the cellophane wrapper and the paper plate and the disposable bottle, and this was good because Man could then take his automobile and buy his food all in one place and he could save that which was good to eat in the refrigerator and throw away that which had no further use. And pretty soon the earth was covered with plastic bags and aluminum cans and paper plates and disposable bottles, and there was nowhere left to sit down or to walk. And Man shook his head and cried, "Look at all this God-awful litter."

And Man learned to split the atom and then he took what he learned and he put it in a bomb to defend himself from other men, and he set off the bomb to see if it would work, and it did. And Man was very pleased with himself because he was safe from other men and this was good. But other men learned to split the atom, too, and they put it in their bombs and

To the Editor:

Enclosed is a copy of the policy of Pitt Technical Institute, adopted by the administration on March 18, 1968, concerning visits of candidates for political office to our campus and buildings.

Political candidates may visit Pitt Technical Institute under the following conditions:

1. That no class be visited or other activity allowed which would disrupt the normal operation of the Institution;
2. That it is understood that any governmental candidate will be allowed the same privilege;
3. That a visit in no way explicitly or implicitly indicates that the Board of Trustees or the employees of this Institute endorse the candidate for office.

If there has been any violation of this policy by any candidate, it has been without the knowledge or permission of the administration.

We are sure that any deviation from this policy by any candidate was unintended and a result of misunderstanding.

In regard to a staff member talking to classes, I feel that it is the responsibility and duty of the chief administrative officer of an institution to inform all its students about issues of great significance to the institution and to them as individuals.

Thank you for your consideration of these policies and comments. If we can be of further service to you in any way, please let us know.

Sincerely,
William E. Fulford, Jr.

Hermit Career Calling

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Oh, when daffodils wave their golden banners and tulips lift their colorful cups to catch the sunshine and the rain, I get the feeling I'd like to be a hermit.

What a nice occupation that would be—at least during spring and summer. A hermit can get away from it all by being with it.

My idea is to be a sociable hermit not an unsociable one, to welcome all mankind but still keep it at arm's length.

I don't want to be a cave-dwelling hermit, because caves have an average year-round temperature of about 56 degrees, a mite chilly for antique bones. I want to be a hut-dwelling hermit and inhabit a comfortable stone hut in the shelter of vast trees by the side of a river on whose surface nothing would be allowed larger than a canoe.

The hut would contain a large meditation chamber, an open window, a perch for a singing bird, a mat by the fireplace for a hound dog to lie on, five bathrooms and three vice presidents.

Naturally a hermit has to lead an orderly life or else he'd go to pot like ordinary people do.

The way I've tentatively planned my schedule is this: Monday, Wednesday and Friday, available for public view and private consultation; Tuesday and Thursday, exercise days to be spent throwing rocks at my vice presidents; Saturday and Sunday, dedicated to deep thinking and watching fingernails grow.

Since it costs money to be a hermit, as it does to be anything else, I've decided to share my wisdom—at a price. Small questions asked by private individuals will be answered three for a quarter. Larger questions will be responded to at a flat rate of four bits each, paid in advance.

Large corporations, such as the Ford Foundation, will be charged a consultation fee of a million dollars a year, plus a $500,000 further fee for any idea suggested to it, whether accepted or rejected. I would limit myself, in any case, to no more than seven ideas a year.

At first I thought I would exclude the public from my weekend brooding sessions, but on second thought I decided that would be unfair to the tourists. So I'll let them in but erect a cautionary sign: "You're welcome to drop dollar bills in the wishing well, but, please, no coins. Their sound distracts the hermit."

When winter threatens I'll also put out a sign saying "Hermit in hibernation—do not disturb." Then I'll put my three vice presidents on public welfare, sneak out alone on some dark night and follow the sound of honking geese flying south.

I'm sure that in Miami Beach nobody would bother a hermit incognito tanning himself on the beach and letting the sands of time slip through his happy fingers.

Business Is Changing Tactics

By ELMER ROESSNER

Consumerism isn't just going to fade away. Business, government agencies and politicians are beginning to realize that it's here to stay, and there's a surge of attempts to cash in on it.

In this fall's elections, there will be precious few candidates who do not declare in favor of consumerism as well as motherhood. The Federal

ELMER ROESSNER

Trade Commission, the Food and Drug Administration and other government agencies are stepping up campaigns to protect the consumer. The President has a consumer advisor, Virginia Knauer.

Congress is considering scores of bills to increase consumer protection and Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., has emerged as a consumers' champion.

States and cities are creating or strengthening their consumer agencies. State attorneys general or their equivalents around the country are dusting off some almost forgotten laws and are asking state legislators for new laws and fresh money.

Ralph Nader, who a few years ago would have been considered harmless crank, is now a national hero.

Consumers Union reports that its magazine, Consumer Reports, has jumped in circulation from 958,000 in 1966 to 1,775,000 today.

Everybody Into The Act

And in every city, village and town, women's clubs, parents' organizations, civic clubs and almost every other type of organization with the exception of the Mafia are organizing, investigating, resolving and sometimes screaming for more laws, more protections and boycotts of suspected cheats.

Whatever the cause, sunspots, the population explosion or a contagious unrest sweeping the world, consumerism seems here to stay.

A remarkable change in business attitudes is occuring. When consumerism first raised its shaggy head, many businessmen took the attitude of the two hillbillies in the old story. They were dozing in the back of the store. One said, "Zeke, there's somebody out there in the store." The other replied, "Keep quiet, Hiram, and maybe they'll go away."

From Annoyance To Opportunity

But business, perhaps taking a lesson from the politicians who say, "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em", are beginning to capitalize on consumerism.

William M. Batten, chairman of J. C. Penney, told a recent meeting of Penney executives: "Consumerism provides unprecedented opportunity for our company. It comes disguised as a problem."

Other merchants are taking the same attitude. They really love them, you know; without them they would be out of business!

Trade associations are urging members to become more conscious of the customers. William V. White, chairman of the Information Council on Fabric Flammability, a few days ago scolded retailers for not taking the lead in informing the public about product safety hazards. The National Retail Merchants Association has scheduled its first Conference on Consumerism and Marketing Controls in New York April 27 to 29.

And guess whom the Mass Research Institute has invited to speak at its annual meeting in Washington in May? Virginia Knauer and Ralph Nader!

Population Solution In Voluntary Sterilization

By NAOMI ROCK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a large metropolitan hospital, a 33-year-old woman who has just given birth to her eighth child is sterilized while still on the delivery table.

Across town in another hospital, an abortion-sterilization committee has voted to deny the sterilization request of a 30-year-old mother of two.

Nearby, in a doctor's office, a 25-year-old man, married and the father of two, undergoes a simple, 15-minute operation that he has been told will leave him permanently sterile.

In recent years incidents such as these have become increasingly common across the country, as an estimated two million Americans have chosen the safest, surest and, in the long run, the cheapest form of contraception.

This year more than 100,000 other Americans—better than 60 per cent of them men—will opt for voluntary sterilization. Some of these will find it very difficult to obtain the operation.

This is the nationwide sterilization picture outlined by the Association for Voluntary Sterilization. The AVS, a 33-year-old nonprofit organization headquartered in New York, is devoted to promoting both sterilization as a solution for family and population problems and medical research in the field.

A decade ago the subject of sterilization, like that of abortion, was seldom considered fit for mixed company. But while each year hundreds of thousands of Americans secretly resorted to illegal abortions, only a handful of others sought out sterilization, which was legal in most states.

Times have changed, however, so much so that in 1969 the AVS reports getting 3,707 requests for referrals to doctors who will perform the operation —quadruple the number of requests in 1966.

"There's a new awareness and new urgency today," AVS executive director John Rague says of sterilization's growing popularity. "The decline of American puritanism, coupled with the growing problems of birth control, abortion and the population explosion, have made increasing numbers of people at least consider sterilization."

Five years ago, Rague continued, most sterilization requests came from women, although the female operation was and is more delicate and more costly than for the male.

More women than men sought the operation, Rague maintains, for a number of reasons: women who bear both the children and the brunt of the burden of raising them, openly discussed sterilization among themselves; men largely ignored the subject because, historically contraception has been a woman's problem, and because "men have long equated sterilization with castration and dimunition of sexual prowess."

In recent years, Rague continued, more and more men began considering sterilization, as the myths perpetuated by rumor were dispelled by an airing of the facts.

In both the male and the female sterilization does not involve the removal of any gland or organ. It merely seals off the passageways which normally bring the sperm and ovum together.

Sterilization in a man, called a vasectomy, usually involves a 15-to-20 minute operation under local anesthetic in a doctor's office. The patient can usually go home immediately and to work the following day.

For a female, the operation is done in a hospital where the woman must remain for two or three days. Called a salpingectomy, the operation involves the cutting and tying off of the Fallopian tubes.

A vasectomy generally costs between $50 and $150, while a salpingectomy varies between $150 and $300.

Studies done by urologists, the doctors who usually perform sterilizations, have shown that neither in the man nor in the woman does the operation interfere with normal sexual responses. The only difference is that in a woman the egg is prevented from reaching the uterus, and in a man the sperm is prevented from reaching the semen.

Individuals seeking sterilization are warned that the procedure is considered irreversible —even though studies have proven up to 90 per cent reversibility for men and 65 per cent for women.

Although voluntary sterilization is legal for any reason in 49 states (Utah limits it to "medical necessity") and a recent Gallup Poll showed that 64 per cent of the country favors it for sociol-economic reasons, it is often difficult to obtain, particularly for women.

Rague says that doctors are to blame.

"So many doctors are ignorant of the facts," Rague maintains. "Some fears that the operation is illegal. Others fear they will be sued for malpractice, although sterilization poses no greater danger in this area than any other medical procedure."

Nevertheless, Rague continued, men can obtain the operation with relative ease. There's always some doctor who will do it, and the AVS itself makes referrals to 1,600 physicians around the country.

People-Mover Systems Eyed By The Cities

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As their streets and economic life become locked in traffic jams that sometimes grow tight as jigsaw puzzles, city administrators are now giving more serious consideration to revolutionary "people movers."

The term is perhaps not the best, but it does effectively encompass the wide range of conveyor belts, moving sidewalks, monorails, automatic railroads, subways and other means of moving masses of people short distances.

General Electric, Goodyear, Westinghouse and perhaps 100 smaller companies are involved. San Jose, Calif., is about to install a six-mile belt system. New York is considering a cross-Manhattan conveyor.

The primary problem of congestion remains associated with downtown areas of major cities, where dozens of roads disgorge thousands of automobiles that squeeze into a mass of noisy, polluted frustration.

At airports, where congestion already is bad, the situation could become almost impossible.

A hypothetical situation: A Boeing 747 terminates a flight and prepares for a return trip. About 400 passengers and crew get off and each is met by two persons. The total for one flight is now 1,200.

Double the figure because of those preparing to board the return flight. The total in one small area of the airport is now 2,400. But nearby, another 2,400 people are jammed at the gates because another 747 has landed.

The problem obviously cannot be solved by dispersing the people by automobile, because that would merely add to the congestion. The people movers say one of their systems is needed.

Goodyear, for example, is offering what it calls the Carveyor system, which consists of a series of small bubble top vehicles, capable of seating about a dozen people as they move along on an endless rubber belt.

At the loading point the cars slow to a speed of 1½ miles an hour, allowing a person walking at the same pace to step aboard easily. As the car moves onto a straightaway it speeds up to 15 miles an hour.

Westinghouse has a contract to build what it calls a Skybus system to the Tampa Airport. And a system called a Dash-A-Veryor, or automatic electric railway, is being considered for other airports.

Manufacturers of the new systems maintain there is an added advantage. Present mass transit systems, they say, are often unsuitable for large numbers of people, primarily the handicapped.

Computers For Cattle

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Computer dating has come to the cattle set.

Supposedly ideal matches between cow and bull are being arranged through a computer that is looking for the meatiest offspring.

The computer is being used by Patterson Land co., a large cattle raising corporation operating in North Dakota.

George Duemeland, vice president of the family firm, said top money now is in long line cattle with more meat and less fat. He said it will take a couple of generations to develop nationwide and should not be widespread for 5-10 years.

"We're looking for larger animals because cattlemen's costs have gone up, so we have to produce more meat," he said. "We don't at this time believe that we will have to reduce the quality of meat."

Duemeland said the new look cattle could prevent meat prices from rising quickly since the product sold to housewives will be meatier.

"We realize the housewife is right when she says meat has had too much waste fat," he said.

New look cattle, he said, should produce more rib steaks, T-bones and loin cuts and fewer brisket cuts.

BreakingGround In Stantonsburg

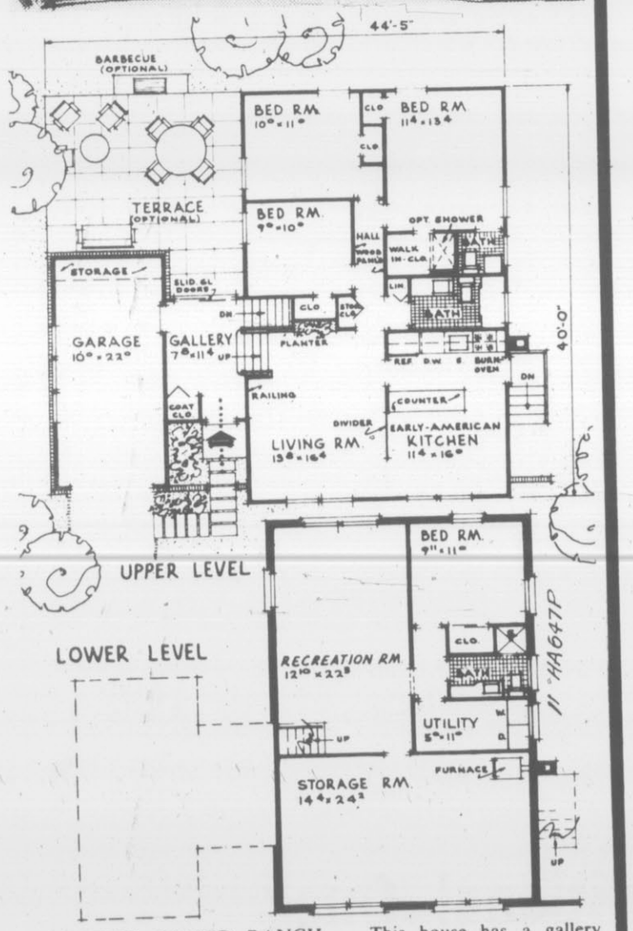

STANTONSBURG, N.C. (AP) — Groundbreaking ceremonies will be held Friday for a finishing and distribution facility for Sid Eagles Associates and Sea Corp. of New York City.

The $500,000 plant, which will employ 150 to 200 persons, is scheduled for completion by early fall.

Sid Eagles, president of the company, said the plant would serve as a finishing and distribution facility for several of the company's plants in eastern North Carolina. The firm makes girls' dresses.

Precious Violin Needs Care, As Beloved Item

By NAOMI ROCK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The young man with wispy sideburns reached for a nondescript canvas violin case, slid the zipper round to reveal the leather case within and unsnapped the fastenings. Gingerly, he lifted out his treasure, removed the striped wool muffler, and slipped the 235-year-old Guarneri violin from its chamois case.

"You really have to take care of it if you want it to be happy," said virtuoso violinist Michael Rabin, absently trailing his graceful fingers across the instrument's highly polished spruce top. "You care for this the way you'd care for someone you really love."

Like the owner of any other precious and irreplaceable string instrument—his violin is one of 75 of an original 200 violins made by the Italian Giuseppe "del Gesu" Guarneri—Rabin protects his instrument from the ravages of heat and cold, dryness and humidity, and foreign particles such as dust and resin.

In his sunny studio apartment overlooking the Hudson River, Rabin pampers his violin by using a vaporizer to provide proper moisture. To keep his violin "happy," he said, the temperature should hover between 60 and 75 degrees farenheit, and the humidity should range from 35 to 55 per cent.

"It's not that hard to take care of," Rabin said of the instrument he bought 12 years ago for $30,000 and that he believes is worth at least $50,000 today.

"The main thing is to keep it dry in humid weather and moist in dry weather. You have to wrap it in a muffler to protect it from cold which causes the wood to expand, from heat which makes the wood contract, and from moisture in the air which makes it logy or heavy and causes the violin to lose some of its carrying power."

The entire top of a violin, Rabin explained, is constructed to vibrate. The vibrations come from the strings, and are transmitted via the bridge to the body of the instrument.

Sound is emitted through tiny holes in the violin's upper surface. But it is these same holes that allow foreign particles to enter the instrument's interior.

"Dust and flecks of resin get in, but the holes aren't large enough to use a brush," Rabin said. "So I pour in ordinary rice which has just enough starch to pick up the dust, but isn't coarse enough to scratch the violin's insides. Then I turn the violin over and shake out the rice."

While the rice treatment is necessary only about once a year, Rabin continued, the violin's surface must be cleaned periodically with an oil-based solution to keep the wood in good condition.

Rabin himself is able to perform these simple tasks, but for more intricate "hurts"—such as open seams or damage to the wood—he seeks out a violin doctor. Of hundreds of such doctors in the United States, Rabin says he trusts his Guarneri only to five who live in scattered parts of the country.

Leyden To Commemorate Role In Pilgrims' Past

By WILLEM VUUR

LEYDEN, The Netherlands (UPI)—On April 29 the city council of Layden will listen—as a Leyden council listened several centuries ago—to the reading of a petition from John Robinson and other English religious nonconformists asking refuge in this Dutch city.

Thus will Holland begin its 350th anniversary commemoration of the Dutch part in the wanderings of the Pilgrim father that finally ended at Plymouth Rock on Dec. 21, 1620.

The Dutch chapter of the Pilgrim saga will be reenacted when the Leyden council—as its predecessor did on Dec. 2, 1609—grants Robinson and his Pilgrim followers permission to stay in the country to which they had fled from religious persecution in their native England.

Year-Long Exhibit

Before the 1970 council will be the original petition, with the consent written in a marginal note, authorizing 100 Englishmen to remain in Leyden.

The ceremony will be followed by the opening of an exhibit including a display of Pilgrim maps, documents and ship models. The commemoration will continue until Thanksgiving Day, ending with a special service in Saint Pieters Church at Leyden and a turkey dinner to which all American visitors are invited.

Dr. Aard van de Koopel, chairman of the Pilgram fathers commemoration foundation, said the Leyden ceremonies had the approval of Lee D. van Antwerp, governor general of the General Society of Mayflower Descendants, who predicted many Americans would visit the Netherlands and Pilgrim country this year.

British Expatriates

Offended by what they considered corruption in the Anglican church and persecuted by King James I, many devout nonconformists fled Britain, with the first contingent arriving in Holland in 1608. A group of them, with Robinson as their leader, left the urban life in Amsterdam in 1609 to settle in Leyden.

Despite diplomatic pressure from the English king, Leyden offered them freedom and protection. They remained here for 11 years. One of the Puritan leaders, William Brewster, founded a small printing shop from which many books secretly found their way to England. In the big house Robinson took for his family, religious services were held regularly.

There were problems, though—the Puritans were Englishmen. Their children were growing up and the elders feared they would become totally assimilated into Dutch life and religion.

After long negotiation, a group led by Brewster left Leyden on July 22, 1620, to join other would-be colonists bound for the New World. After false starts and troubles, the Mayflower finally sailed for America from Plymouth, England, in September, 1620. Robinson remained behind and died in Leyden in 1625.

Nghia province northwest of here—still one of the 10 worst Vietcong provinces—had been largely untouched until one recent chain of events. When a high-ranking VCI died in combat, papers on his body led to the arrest of seven other VCI. People of the district, feeling for the first time that Saigon had the upper hand, began turning in names of other VCI—raising hopes of breaking the back of the organization.

Similar chains of events occurring elsewhere may be the only hope for really breaking down the VCI. As the Vietcong's power to terrorize the countryside diminishes, the immunity of the VCI may fade. If it does not, the heart and brain of the Communist insurgency will pose an unending threat to peace to this country.

Despite Watch, Bad Food Items Do Get On Market

By G. C. THELEN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has initiated the voluntary market removal of 13.9 million servings of a nationally known soup mixture because of food poisoning danger.

Also since January, it has spurred industry recalls of 334,000 pounds of popcorn packed by a Milford, Ill., firm; of 24,000 nationally-distributed frozen strawberry pies manufactured by a Columbus, Ohio, baker; and of 2,000 cases of a name-brand candy. All were contaminated with insect or rodent material, or both.

Other food items recalled in the past three months because of contamination in certain brands and lots include dried eggs, anchovies, noodles, raisins, frozen fried chicken, peanut butter, pimentos, pizzas and cooked mushrooms.

The recalls are never totally successful, according to a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration. Some of the products are purchased and consumed. The agency can't specify how many.

"Today's scientific knowledge, working through good laws to protect consumers, assures the safety and wholesomeness of every component of the American food supply," says the FDA, and indeed the great majority of foods, health supplies and cosmetics sold to the public are safe and wholesome.

The National Academy of Sciences says, however, FDA inspects only 40 per cent of the 64,000 interstate food processing plants subject to federal checking, and the agency itself estimates that 20 per cent of the plants are in substantial violation of government standards.

The most spectacular recall this year has been the 13.9 million servings of these nationally distributed, cartoned, Lipton soups: Perky Noodle Soup Mix, Chicken Vegetable Soup Mix, Ring-O-Noodle Soup Mix With Real Chicken Broth, Giggle Noodle Soup With Real Chicken Broth—test marketed in New England only—Beef Flavor Noodle Soup With Vegetables.

All the soups were contaminated with a bacteria called salmonella that can cause food poisoning. The organism was traced to the manufacturer of the noodle soup used in the Lipton mixes.

Lipton is recalling the mixes from retail shelves, but the FDA estimated that between 15 and 20 per cent remained on the market as of last week.

The FDA's weekly recall reports for this year show such other health-related product defects as:

—21 instances of contaminated batches of cosmetics, versus 11 in all of 1969. Most of the contaminants found, among other places in eye liner and cologne, were bacteria that can cause skin infections.

—Candle holder whose base explodes when the candle burns low.

—Drugs of varying potency that were mislabeled, encased in tubes that leaked or lacked an essential ingredient.

—Such supposedly sterile hospital supplies as sponges, scalpels and catheters that were contaminated.

Tuesday night the FDA warned against eating a brand of prepared pizzas distributed by the Roman Inn Pizza Co., throughout the upper Midwest.

The FDA said mushrooms in some of the 80,000 "Roman Deluxe Italian Brand" pizzas produced this month are suspected of causing botulism, an acute food poisoning that can be fatal.

Roman Inn Pizza has been recalling the pizza, the FDA said, but "since distribution has been so widespread and has gone on for several weeks a public warning is considered necessary."

The 24,000 Mountain Top Frozen Strawberry Pies were recalled, the FDA said, because of "rodent contamination of fruit used as a raw material."

The recall of 2,000 cases of Russell Stover Candies distributed in Missouri, Nebraska and Indiana was caused by "rodent and insects infestation of plant and rodent and insect hairs and fragments found in samples," the FDA said.

The agency attributed the recall of the 334,000 pounds of popcorn to "rodent contamination of plant and product." The popcorn is packaged under these labels, according to the FDA: Buddy Boy Hulless, Premiere 404 Monarch Popcorn, Our Family Popcorn, and Richelieu.

A Combination Of Everyday Issues In Mail Strike

By MARK BROWN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For almost two centuries the grey-garbed men had lived by their credo, taken from the ancient Greece of Herodotus: "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night shall stay these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

And when, for the first time in the nation's history, the mails did not move, the U.S. Post Office could blame neither snow or rain nor heat nor gloom of night.

Instead, it was a combination of everyday issues—wages, working conditions and job advancement—that brought last month's mail-snarling wildcat walkout by 185,000 of the Post Office's 750,000 employes.

It brought into focus as never before the rickety postal system that affects every American who mails a letter, subscribes to a magazine, pays his taxes.

And it fueled a drive to drastically overhaul the Post Office Dehartment.

The House Post Office Committee opens hearings today on Nixon's plan to set up a new U.S. Postal Service "insulated from direct control by the President, the Bureau of the Budget and Congress."

But against the backdrop of coming postal reform—and the prospect of higher postal rates—Americans are asking questions:

What is wrong with the American mail service? What could make a letter mailed to an address fewer than 100 steps away take days to deliver? What makes magazines and newspapers arrive days and even weeks stale, packages reach their destinations late with contents often bruised or broken and vital business communications dribble tardily in?

"It's the system," answers Winton A. (Red) Blount, the tall, rawboned Alabaman whom Nixon appointed poastmaster general and assigned the task of reshaping the postal service.

The system Blount decries still retains vestiges of the Post Office created by the First Continental Congress in 1775 and entrusted to the first postmaster general, Benjamin Franklin.

Over the ensuing 195 years, the Post Office has become enmeshed in a snarl of rules, regulations and laws that places responsibility with the Postmaster General but the pursestrings with Congress, puts politics ahead of performance and has resulted in a postwar budget deficit of nearly $17 billion.

Faced with a mushrooming burden of mail—the volume has risen from 71 billion pieces in fiscal 1965 to 82 billion in fiscal 1969—the Post Office has responded by reflex: add more men.

While productivity in American industry has risen at an average rate of 3.4 per cent a year, postal productivity has inched along at two-tenths of 1 per cent a year.

One reason is a lack of work boosting machines. The average investment per postal worker is $1,145 while the similar figure for the telephone and telegraph industry is $35,630; for power utilities $151,710, transportation $25,053, manufacturing $7,170 and merchandising $2,836.

"Airmail was the last major innovation in the Post Office Department, and that was 52 years ago," said a postal official.

The massive increase in mail volume has forced postal officials to plug the service gap with substitutes and part time employes—most of whom are called in to handle the after 5 p.m. rush.

"Congress has passed a law setting a ratio of one career substitute for every five regular postal employes," said James Rademacher, head of the National Association of Letter Carriers. "There is now on the rolls one substitute for every 2½ regulars. Half of them are temporary. It's been going on for years."

Much of the Post Office's logistics problems can be traced to the public's mailing habits. More than half of a typical large-city post office's volume is received in the two hours after 5 p.m.

"When that after 5 crush hits, you've got to do 24 hours' work in two hours," said a Post Office Department spokesman.

Business, which accounts for 75 per cent of all mail, is the worst offender, department officials said.

The two centuries of neglect have fallen heavily upon those postal stalwarts whose functions have remained virtually unchanged from the days of Benjamin Franklin—the nearly 200,000 mail carriers and the more than 300,000 postal clerks who still sort by hand the letters and parcels they stuff into antiquated pigeon-holes. And among the first to admit it is the Post Office itself.

"Personnel relations in the Post Office are back in the 19th Century," said Kenneth A. Housman, assistant postmaster general for personnel. "Progressive, modern personnel relations have completely bypassed the Post Office.

"In the past the Post Office could count, by virtue of their no-strike status, on the loyalty of its people. It offered security. When you take away the right to strike, you must provide your people with the best possible personnel plan. Instead, they have been literally nickeled and dimed to death."

Before last month's strike, a starting postal worker made $6,176 a year—less than a New York garbage collector or a Washington, D.C. bus driver. Post-strike legislation gives postal workers pay raises totaling 14 per cent.

In stereotype, the mailman is in constant danger from unfriendly dogs and too friendly housewives. To the mailman, there are other dangers—and they're no joke.

Carriers in urban slums have been attacked and robbed of welfare checks or credit cards with increasing frequency. In New York they often arm themselves or walk their routes in pairs.

"Welfare day," lamented one New York carrier, "is pure hell."

In addition to low pay and physical danger, nearly three-fifths of salaried postal employes have risen only five steps toward the top of a 21-step career ladder.

Present Post Office officials blame the low-grade job cluster on past politics.

The walkout by Postal union workers—the first massive revolt against the federal government by its employes—shattered the indifference that usually attends postal matters in Congress; the negotiations that followed apparently convinced the unions collective bargaining with management can produce as good or better results as lobbying key congressmen.

Unlike Nixon's postal corporation bill of last year, the current reform proposal was shaped as much by the unions as the administration.

"I want this bill out this month, enacted this month and signed this month," Rademacher declared. "I hate to say this because it sounds like I'm trying to pressure Congress, but if we don't have a bill very soon, I'm afraid we'll have another uprising."

Considered the heart of the bill by union and Post Office officials alike is the collective bargaining provision. Strikes still would be illegal, but negotiating impasses would be settled through binding arbitration.

The reform measure crumbles another cornerstone of the prison confining postal operations—the inability of the Post Office to come up with money to finance modern physical facilities and introduce large scale mechanization.

The bill authorizes the postal system to sell up to $10 billion in bonds for capital improvements. Three years ago, when he warned "The Post Office is in a race with catastrophe," former Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien estimated a minimum of $5 billion was needed just to bring postal facilities up to date.

Most larger cities, where the bulk of the nation's mail is handled, have facilities built in the 1930s or earlier.

Conference For Young People Planned Sunday

A youth conference designed especially for all youth between the ages of 14 and 19 will be held at Aycock Junior High School Sunday at 3 p. m. The problem of drug use and abuse will be discussed.

Dr. Walter Savage of the Mental Health Center, will deliver the keynote address and will also serve as consultant for one of the group discussions.

Other group consultants include: Phil Clark of the Mental Health Association and Dr. William Bethune, Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in Goldsboro.

Combined Church Buildings Seen

NEW YORK (AP) — "By the middle of the '70s almost no one will be building single-use building spaces for individual congregations," says the Rev. Dr. Edward S. Frey, head of an architecture commission of the Luthern Church in America.

Most future church "building and remodeling and salvage will be carried out by clusters of congregations under consolidated denominational boards," he said, with separate denominational agencies left to concentrate on planning, education and ministries rather than buildings.

LOW DEMAND

DENVER (AP) — Kate Ferretti, a Denver milliner for almost 40 years, says the demand for women's hats is so low that she designed a collection of only 50 this Easter season, compared to hundreds in former years.

School Spokesmen Attended Meeting

Representatives from Pitt County Schools met with members of the Pitt County Good Neighbor Council at its Monday night meeting.

Acting Chairman Tom Mann, presiding over the meeting held at Wachovia Bank Building, welcomed Mrs. Katherine Lewis, Guidance Director of Pitt County Schools; Miss Carol Hardy, representing the new North Pitt High School; Miss Jean Wells of Farmville High School; and Mike Hazelton, who represented the new D.H. Conley School.

Mann outlined the function and operations of the council and explained how it tied in with the overall county operation.

Mrs. Lewis, as representative of the County Schools staff, told in detail the progress being made with student involvement committees which have been formed for preparations to merge the schools. She noted that topics such as school colors, class rings, and other relevant information were shared with the county council.

One of the decisions made at the meeting was to prepare and send to all Pitt County students a letter informing them of the function and action of the Pitt County Good Neighbor Council which is available.

Sammy Carson of Bethel expressed the council's appreciation to the students and school staff for the interest and concern they have shown in working on behalf of progress and growth in the county schools.

Dr. Andrew Best stated that Brook Hayes would be available to meet with the council or with any group for a discussion of problems facing Pitt County. The Good Neighbor Council encourages interested citizens and visitors to attend their meetings.

Youngsters Sit, Listen

Yesterday's "Music In The Library" program, the second of three presented by East Carolina University School of Music, under the direction of Eugene Isabelle, again proved to be a big affair for the children.

Paul Topper, violinist, Rodney Schmidt, violist, and Paul Kosower, celloist, three faculty members of ECU composing the ECU String Trio, played a selection from the music of Gregory Kosteck, ECU's composer - in - residence; a march by Mozart; a short string composition by Beethoven; and other pieces.

About 60 children sat on the floor, listening to the explanation of instruments, and the music of the three string players. "It's amazing how much the children enjoy these programs," Mrs. Margaret Reid, librarian for the Children's Department commented.

Group Endorses New PTI Status

AYDEN — The Ayden Good Neighbor Council has passed a resolution in support of Pitt Technical Institute receiving community college status.

Mrs. Annie M. Brown, chairman of the Ayden Good Neighbor Council, said after careful study, the group supports a "yes" vote for the referendum to be voted on in the May 2 election. The election will determine whether or not PTI will be granted community college status and to fix the tax limit at seven percent.

Counted Two Car Mishaps

An estimated $675 property damage resulted from two mishaps investigated yesterday by police here.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 3:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Meade Streets which involved vehicles driven by James Anderson Moses, 36, of Greensboro and Dennis J. Erber, 22, of Peoria, Ill.

Moses was charged with operating left of center by police who estimated damage to the cars as $175 each.

Mavis H. Cox, of 918 Legion St. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation a 5:19 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Third and Elizabeth Streets.

Officers reported the Cox vehicle collided with a car driven by Tessie Mae Spell Foskey, of 1114 Colonial Ave.

Damage was set at $75 to the Cox car and $250 to the Foskey auto.

Stereo Players Stolen From 3 Locked Cars

Three eight - track stereo tape players yesterday were reported stolen from three cars parked the 10th Street - College Hill Drive area.

Chief T. E. Gladson said reports indicated that the players were taken from locked cars parked in the area over - night.

Debra Hester, a resident of Unstead Dorm reported a tape player, speakers and seven tapes — valued at $125 — taken from her car, while Alpern Parker Gerard Jr., of Washington, told police an eight - track tape deck, 14 tapes and a pair of prescription sunglasses were taken from his car. The value of the Gerard items was set at $168.

Thomas Edwin Smith III of 219 Aycock Dorm reported a tape player and 11 tapes, valued at $160, taken from his auto.

Investigation of the thefts is continuing.

Nonpublic School Plight Under Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving cautiously in a controversial area, President Nixon has ordered a federal study into the plight of the nation's financially strapped private and parochial schools.

"Should any single school system—public or private—ever acquire a complete monopoly over the education of our children, the result would neither be good for that school system nor good for the country," Nixon said in a statement Tuesday.

He picked the members of the study panel from his Commission on School Finance and directed them to study the crisis of private and church-related schools and make "positive recommendations to me for action ..."

The panel is to complete its final report by March 5, 1972.

Calling private and church-related elementary and secondary schools an integral part of the nation's educational establishment, Nixon said they educate 11 per cent of all pupils—nearly 6 million school children.

Because of financial hard times and declining enrollments, they are closing at the rate of one per day, Nixon said, adding:

"If most or all private schools were to close or turn public, the added burden on public funds by the end of the 1970s would exceed $4 billion per year in operations and with an estimated $5 billion more needed for facilities."

Nixon did not suggest federal aid to private schools, nor did he mention the controversy raging in many state legislatures over the issue of state support for these institutions.

But he did caution the study panel to keep one main considerations in mind.

"Our purpose here is not to aid religion in particular, but to promote diversity in education within the Constitution," he said.

Brownies Tour Court House

Brownie Troop 451 toured the Pitt County Court House Monday. A tour, conducted by Mrs. Sandra Andrews, included the tax offices, fire marshall's office, the jail, the register of deeds office and the courtroom.

Brownie members on the trip included Virginia Baker, Susan Boudreaux, Debra Boyd, Cindy Buck, Lisa Butts, Kim Daniels, Pam Evans, Susan Hudson, Sondra Padgett, and Susan Tucker.

Leaders accompanying the troop were Mrs. Mavis Butts and Mrs. Doris Hudson.

Bicyclist And Car Collided

Carlton Louis Anderson, 26, of East Gum Rd. was injured yesterday when the bicycle he was riding collided with a car on Greene Street, 50 feet North of the Martin Street intersection.

Police said the Anderson bicycle collided with a car driven by Alton Glenwood Allen, 64 of Route 6, Greenville and caused an estimated $30 damage to the bicycle.

No damage resulted to the car and no charges were placed, in the 10:25 a.m. mishap.

Obituaries

Fleming

Mr. Benjamin F. Fleming, 81, died Tuesday at 12:25 p.m. after three weeks of illness. Funeral services will be conducted Thursday at 2:00 p.m. at the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by his pastor, the Rev. Edgar Bunch, Baptist minister of Windsor, assisted by the Rev. Willis Wilson, Free Will Baptist minister of Winterville. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Fleming was a retired builder and farmer and had lived in the Stokes community all of his life. He was a member of the Stokes Baptist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susie Ross Fleming, to whom he was married in 1912; three sons, Harold R. Fleming and Maurice F. Fleming, both of Miami, Fla., and Gerald R. Fleming, of Raleigh; a daughter, Mrs. Janie L. Zehfuss of Hollywood, Fla.; a sister, Mrs. Dora Rawls of Richmond, Va.; eight grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Walker

OXFORD, Ala.—T. Y. Walker, formerly of Greenville, N. C., died Monday at 10:30 p.m. here.

Mr. Walker moved to Oxford after his retirement as manager of the Pitt Theatre in Greenville, N. C., several years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Thelma Walker; and one brother, Clayton Walker of Oxford.

Joyner

FARMVILLE — Funeral services for Mr. Will Joyner of S. Barrett St., Farmville, died early Monday morning. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Planning-Zoning Meet Tonight

The Planning and Zoning Commission is meeting tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the City Council chambers of City Hall. Items set for the agenda are:

—Set public hearing on proposed neighborhood shopping center to be constructed adjacent to East Carolina University Post Office.

—Request for rezoning by Phillip Carroll—Mayo property.

—Acquisition of scattered housing sites.

BIBLE TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Bible Society has presented President Nixon with the symbolic 1-billionth copy of Scriptures distributed by the society since its founding in 1817. The book was a specially bound edition of the New Testament in Today's English Version, called "Good News for Modern Man."

3 Tourists Wounded

TEL AVIV (AP) — A terrorist hand grenade wounded three American tourists and a dozen other persons today in the main square of Nablus in Israeli-occupied Jordan, the Israeli military command reported.

Two of the Americans were identified as Sylvia Caplan, Andover, Mass., and her sister, Eva Labell, Everett, Mass.

Three other wounded also were identified as tourists from West Germany and South Africa.

The remainder of the wounded were said to be local residents, including three immigrants just arrived from Chile.

Michael Shashar, spokesman for the Israeli military authorities in the area, said he had no information on how the explosive was thrown. He said several persons were taken into custody for questioning.

Mrs. Cayton To Attend Raleigh Session Monday

Mrs. Beth Cayton, a member of the Governor's Committee on Recreation, will attend a quarterly meeting of the committee Monday in Raleigh.

Mrs. Cayton was named to the Governor's Committee under the Department of Local Affairs while she was active in recreation work in Wilmington, her hometown. Her term expires in 1972.

She is married to Greenville native, Alan Cayton, and now lives here. Besides being a homemaker and working in a downtown store, she is an East Carolina University student.

Governor Bob Scott is expected to proclaim June Recreation Month in conjunction with the meeting Mrs. Cayton is attending.

Earth Day . . .

and will recycle the aluminum for reuse.

In addition the company will have speakers at 15 high schools and universities to answer questions about its operations "and share with them our plans for a cleaner environment."

In Chicago, employes of Commonwealth Edison Co. and Abbott Laboratories, two companies singled out for criticism by antipollution groups recently, will give talks at various high schools and colleges.

In the nation's schools and colleges a variety of teach-in programs and demonstrations were planned.

Water fountains at the Coburn Elementary School in Elmira, N.Y. will be turned off all day to give the children an idea of what it might be like to be without fresh water.

Students at McGuinness School in Oklahoma City planned to operate a pollution room including a tub of water covered with a crude oil slick. They will be invited to dabble their hands in the water and "see how it feels to be a bird at Santa Barbara."

Earth Day grew from a suggestion by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., who proposed a nationwide "teach-in" on environmental problems after observing the support mobilized for the antiwar campaign last November.

A largely volunteer group in Washington has worked since January to coordinate efforts for today's event.

At a news conference Tuesday, its national coordinator, Denis Hayes, said the group, Environmental Teach-In, Inc., a nonpartisan group, will reconstitute itself as "Environmental Action."

It will begin moving into more direct efforts to improve the environment, encouraging local and regional groups to get involved in stock proxy fights, lawsuits, demonstrations and elections to win environmental battles, he said.

The White House said President Nixon had been following the events leading up to Earth Day.

"He, of course, feels that it should be more than a one-day event and that it should be a part of a beginning of a new and sustained public commitment to the environment," said Gerald L. Warren, deputy press secretary.

Public Hearing Slated Thursday

One item is slated for the agenda of the Greenville Board of Adjustments at 8:00 p.m. Thursday in the mayor's office in the city hall.

The board will conduct a public hearing on request for variance by Walter Carson of Bethel, who is seeking to obtain a variance from Zoning Ordinance No. 322 of Greenville in order to divide his property at 2410 East Third Street to construct duplex apartments on the rear section facing Sycamore Street. The property is zoned for R-6 usage.

To Review Mental Health Care Field

A review of mental health care in Pitt County will be held tomorrow by Mental Health Commissioner, Dr. Eugene Hargrove, at the Woman's Club Building here from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Dr. Hargrove is in the process of holding reviews of each of the 37 areas served by mental health clinics in the state. He will present his overview of mental health in the state and plans for the Department and will disclose a new plan for dispensing services called the "Area Concept."

Persons from all the community agencies and other community leaders have been invited to the meeting. They will participate in discussions of community services and how they promote and improve mental health and will hear Dr. Frank Badrock, superintendent of Caswell Center; Donald R. Dancy, program director of Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, and Dr. Frank James, superintendent of Cherry Hospital, discuss the services each institution provides for Pitt Countians.

The afternoon session will be devoted almost entirely to discussion. Some of the proposed topics include "Patterns of Mental Health Services," "The Most Urgent Problems in Mental Health," "Interagency and Intergroup Action for Mental Health," and "Social Issues that Affect Mental Health."

Probe Break-In At Rural Store

Pitt County deputy sheriffs are investigating a Monday morning break - in that occurred at the Fountain Braxton store on Rt. 5 Greenville.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the incident was reported around 6:40 Monday morning. Entrance to the store had been gained through a front door after thieves broke a window in the door, he said.

A watch display, containing both ladies and men's watches was reported stolen by the store owner. The merchandise was valued at approximately $200.

Postponed

The regional meeting of the North Carolina Home Economics Association scheduled for Friday, April 24, at East Carolina University has been postponed.

A new date for the meeting will be announced later.

Last Chance For Registration

GRIFTON — Saturday is the last day to register for the May 5 municipal election here.

Registration for the May 5 election is a new registration and persons previously registered, but who have not registered in the past few weeks, should re-register in order to be eligible to vote in this election.

Three incumbent commissioners, Ed Bright, John H. Coward Jr. and James F. Hudson have filed for re - election to their posts. They have no opposition for their two - year terms.

Man Jailed In Cutting Incident

William Henry Hunt Jr., 25 - year - old Negro of Darden Dr. has been jailed in connection with a Saturday night cutting incident here.

Hunt is charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. He allegedly entered the home of Louis Gilder at 412 West Third St. Saturday night, cut Gilder on his legs and neck, and stabbed and cut Mrs. Gilder about the left chest and left body.

Few Hunting Accidents

The number of hunting accidents, both fatal and nonfatal, reported to the Wildlife Resources Commission during the past hunting season dropped to a 10-year low.

Pitt Wildlife Protector R.S. Wright said no hunting accidents were reported in Pitt County, during the year.

The commission has collected reports on bona fide hunting accidents since 1960, Wright explained. These statistics include gun accidents occurring while hunting or traveling to or from a hunting area.

Six of the 41 mishaps reported state - wide last season were fatal, Wright noted. Three of the six victims were youths from 12 to 15 years old, and three of the shooters were young hunters, 13 to 15 years old. One of the youthful fatalities was self-inflicted.

Careless handling of guns resulted in the accidents. The reasons listed on the reports included: horseplay, stumbled and fell (with safety off), victim moved in line of fire, victim mistaken for game, and trigger caught on brush.

Will Speak At Kinston School

"Earth Day" will be the theme of two talks to be presented to students at Grainger High School in Kinston today by Dr. Susan J. McDaniel of the Biology Department at East Carolina University.

Dr. McDaniel, an assistant professor, will discuss man's relationship with his living and non- living environment. A University of Oklahoma graduate, her research interests are vertebrate ecology and animal behavior.

Rampants Stomp Goldsboro, 11-2

Rose High School rolled to an 11-2 victory over Goldsboro here yesterday in an Eastern 4-A Division Two baseball game.

The Rampants took full advantage of seven Cougar errors as they rolled up a 7-0 lead in the first two innings of play.

Rose, with the win, boosted its record to 2-1 in the conference, although the loss is under protest, and still must be ruled on by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

Russ Smith tossed the win for the Rampants, giving up six hits to the Cougars. He struck out nine and walked two in going the distance. One of the two runs was earned.

By the time Goldsboro finally did score, however, the game was already out of reach.

Rose started off with two runs in the first inning. Larry Hatton led off, and struck out, but reached first when the catcher errored the ball. He stole second, and Russ Smith walked. Tommy Durham grounded back to second, but the ball got by there and Hatton came all the way to score while Smith moved into third. Jimmy Paige brought Smith across with a sacrifice fly.

The Rampants then exploded for five runs in the second to boost their lead to 7-0. With one out, Byron Dickens singled to right. Joe West followed with a grounder which was errored as it went through the infield. The ball was also misplayed in the outfield, and Dickens came around with West on his heels as they crossed the plate with the first two runs of the inning.

Hatton followed with a double. Ronnie Leggett's grounded in back of second and beat out the play, which was also thrown away. Hatton came around on the error, and Leggett moved into second.

Leggett then stole third, and when the ball was thrown away again on the play, he came home.

Smith wound up the inning with a drive to deep left, which landed in the track far from home. Smith trotted leisurely home with a four-bagger before the ball could be relayed back into the infield.

Rose added another in the fourth. Smith bunted his way on board and stole second. He moved to third on a wild pitch and scored when Kim Harbin sacrificed with a fly to left center.

The Cougars got their first run in the fifth. Mike Sterner singled and was safe at second when Jimmy Parrs grounder was thrown away in the double play attempt. Mike Myrick then singled to bring Sterner home with the first Goldsboro run.

Rose came right back with two in its half of the inning. Dickens walked and advanced on an out. He moved into third when Alan Pate struck out, but reached when the ball got by the catcher on a wild pitch. Pate was replaced by Chip Lambeth as a pinchrunner, and he stole second. Bill Lee singled down the first base line, scoring Dickens, and Lambeth scored on a sacrifice fly by Smith.

Pickoff Attempt

East Carolina's Wayne Post fires the ball to first baseman Skip Taylor in an effort to pick off a courtsey runner for N. C. State's Mike Charron in yesterday game between the Bucs and the Wolfpack. State rolled to a 5-0 win over the Bucs, limiting them to only two hits in the afternoon. The Pirates were to play host to Davidson in a doubleheader today. (Reflector Photo by Forrest)

'Pack's Charron Holds Bucs To Pair Of Hits

North Carolina State University took advantage of timely hitting and five East Carolina University errors to roll to a 5-0 victory over the Bucs yesterday.

Mike Charron tossed a two-hitter at the Bucs, which didn't help the Pirates in their bid for victory. Only four Bucs reached base during the game, two on singles and two others on walks. Len Dowd reached on a walk in the first inning, but the Pirates didn't get another on until the sixth, when they had their best scoring opportunity.

Stu Garrett got the first Buc hit in the sixth, hitting one between short and third. Doug Whitley drew a walk to follow him, but a double play erased Whitley before the inning was over.

The only other runner was Roy Coble, who singled as a pinchhitter in the ninth. He, too, fell in a double play.

East Carolina didn't have that bad a pitching in the game, giving up only seven hits. But coming at the right time, with errors helping out, brought about the loss. Two of the five state runs were unearned, as three Pirate pitchers saw action during the game.

Starter Tim Bayliss struck out the first three men to fact him, but Tommy Smith opened the second by reaching on an error. A passed ball moved him to second, and the unnerved Bayliss walked Danny Paker. Dennis Punch singled when his attempted sacrifice bunt went unplayed, loading the bases.

Baylis then uncorked a wild pitch, scoring Smith with all State really needed to win. The other runners also advanced on the play. Darrell Moody brought Baker in from third with a sacrifice and Bill Glad walked.

That signaled the end for Bayliss and Wayne Post came on in relief. He was tagged for a single to left by Charron, scoring Punch for a 3-0 lead before the next two men went down.

Post held State off the bases until the fifth, when another error put a man on base. This time, it was Charron, whose grounder to third was booted. Then, with one out, Post added to the troubles, fielding an attempted sacrifice, and overthrowing second in the attempt to get Charron. Chris Cammack followed with a single scoring Charron, and bringing on Whitley in relief.

State got another runner on an error in the sixth, but no damage occured. The Bucs also stopped State after a walk and a single in the seventh.

In the eighth, however, it was a different story. Baker led off, singling into left. Punch attempted to sacrifice him up, but the bunt was errored, allowing both to reach safely. Moody also laid down a sacrifice, but for the second time, the ball was not played, and all runners were safe, loading the bases. Glad hit a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Baker, but Punch was cut down attempting to reach third on the play.

State had one more chance, in the ninth. Randy McMasters singled to open the inning, and was bunted to second, but died there.

The Pirates play their last Southern Conference series at home today. They were scheduled to play Davidson in a double header at 1:30 p.m.

Crowell's Clothing Comments
by Campus Corner,

(Select Clothes You Feel Good In)

When you are well-dressed, you project your best.

Psychologists tell us that you can think better, carry out your various duties better, act better, feel better, and enjoy life better, when you are dressed in clothes that do you justice.

But what are the clothes that do you justice? They are the clothes that you feel and look best in. You select a spiffy suit. When you try it on, something magic transpires. The mirror does not lie. The fabric, cut and hue of the coat give you a distinct lift.

You feel a surge of confidence as you carry on your bit of self-modeling. There is no doubt about it—something has clicked.

McGee Chosen All-Star Coach

Ten years ago this summer an offensive guard fresh out of Duke University co-captained the College All-Stars in their game against the Baltimore Colts in Chicago's Soldier Field.

On July 31st of this year that same person will return to the annual Soldier Field spectacle—this time as a coach of the All-Stars.

His name is Michael Burnette McGee, the 31-year-old head football coach of East Carolina University.

McGee was personally picked by Otto Graham, head coach of the All-Stars, to coach the college boys' offensive line. His job: got the Stars prepared to block the Kansas City Chiefs awesome Front Four, a task not even the Minnesota Vikings were able to accomplish last year as the Chiefs rolled to the Super Bowl Championship.

"I personally look forward to the challenge of preparing a squad of young men to face the Chiefs," said McGee, who is the only coach from the South named to Graham's blue-ribbon staff. "And I might add its's a great honor to be given the opportunity to work on Otto's staff."

McGee will report to the Northwestern University campus in Evanston, Ill., along with the rest of the All-Star staff and squad, about July 10.

"Most All-Star teams you have for a week or less of practice," said McGee. "We will have three weeks—which really gives you a chance to work with and get to know your players and accomplish something from the coaching standpoint."

The Club Championship is also going on at the Farmville Golf and Country Club, where Hillard is the defending champion. First round play in the tournament will continue through Sunday.

Match play is being used in the tournament.

Ayden Romps To RemainUnbeaten

AYDEN—Ayden High School spotted Winterville a three-run lead and then came back to roll to a 12-5 victory over the Wolves last night.

The Wolves picked up three in the top of the first for the lead. Webb led off with a single and Smith reached on an error. Worthington was also safe on an error, scoring both Webb and Smith. Glisson also reached on a miscue, and that brought Worthington around.

Ayden came back with two in the bottom of the first. Dail Griffin doubled and Alan Wilson followed up with a home run.

Winterville and Ayden matched one-run efforts in the second and third to put the Wolves into a 5-4 lead after three. Winterville's run in the third came on a long homer by Carraway.

But in the fourth, Ayden pushed over two to take the lead. Debro Blount walked and stole second. Jerry Pierce doubled him across to tie it up, and then Mike Griffin doubled in Pierce with the go-ahead run.

Ayden went on to add four in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

The win left Ayden with a 10-1 overall mark and a 6-0 Pitt County record. Winterville's conference record is now 4-3.

Greene Central Downs Farmville Nine By 6-2

SNOW HILL— Greene Central rolled to a 6-2 victory over Farmville High School here yesterday.

Johnny Johnson tossed a two-hitter at Farmville, striking out nine and walking three.

Farmville pushed over one in the second to take the lead. Fred Sauls walked and stole second. He reached third on a wild pitch and scored on another after Frank Styers had walked.

In the second, the Red Devils picked up another run for a 2-0 lead. George Burnett reached on an error and scored when Cloyce Wilson doubled.

But Greene Central came up with four runs in the bottom of the third to move ahead for good. Robert Ivey reached on an error and moved to third on Ronnie Creech's single. Creech stole second and Red Harris reached on an error. Bob Scott singled in Ivey and Creech, and Tim Kearney singled to score Harris and Scott.

In the sixth, Greene Central added two more. Creech was hit by a pitch and moved up on a walk. Tim Kearney walked and Billy Allbritton singled to drive in both runners.

Greene Central is now 5-3 in the Eastern Plains Conference.

Plymouth Nips Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Plymouth knocked Williamston out of a chance to move into sole possession of first place in the Albemarle Conference. Plymouth took a 4-3 victory in the game, as Ahoskie, tied with Williamston also was beaten.

The two thus remain tied at 6-2 in the league.

Williamston pushed over a run in the second to take the initial lead. Greg Godard reached on a fielder's choice and was sacrificed to second. O'Neal was hit by a pitch and Bowen singled to score Godard.

Plymouth came up with two runs in the fourth inning, however, to move into the lead. Powell doubled and Hall singled. Browning reached on an error, scoring Powell. Hall then stole home with the go-ahead run.

In the sixth, Williamston came up with two to move back in front. Haslip singled and Roberson walked. Jenkins singled to load the bases. An attempted pickoff at third was errored, and both Haslip and Roberson scored.

But Plymouth rallied again, pushing two over in the seventh to take the win. Hardin doubled and Rea reached on an error. Powell then tripled to score both runners.

Grifton Crushes Bethel By 17-2

BETHEL — Grifton High School rolled to a 17-2 victory over Bethel's hapless Indians yesterday in a Pitt County Conference game.

The win increased Grifton's record to 2-4, while Bethel is now 0-6.

Grifton pushed over one in the first inning to take the lead. David Whaley walked and Drew Harper reached on an error. The miscue allowed Whaley to come around with the run.

In the third, Grifton added two more, enough to win it. Mike Coles reached on an error and scored on Harper's double. Jim Herring singled and Jerry Little got a hit to drive in Harper.

Harper helped out some more with a two - run homer in the fourth, and another run came across in the frame to extend Grifton's total to six.

Grifton added three more in the fifth, six in the sixth and two in the seventh. Bethel picked up one each in the third and fifth.

Harper was the leading Grifton hitter with three, while Herring had two.

Rams Roll By Bear Grass

ROBERSONVILLE — Robersonville High School rolled to a 12-0 victory over Bear Grass here yesterday.

Doug James and Bobby Rawls combined to toss a one-hitter at Bear Grass for the Rams. James struck out eight and walked two in going four innings. He allowed the only hit. Rawls held Bear Grass hitless in three innings, striking out three and walking none.

Robersonville scored all they needed in the first inning, pushing over five. Ed Warren walked and moved to second on a pickoff error. Hal Knox singled and stole second. An error on the play let Warren score. Timmy James reached on an error and Phil James singled in Knox. James stole second, and Bobby Rawls grounded out, scoring Timmy James. Lang Hardison singled across Phil James, and Everett Jackson singled. He stole second, and another error let Hardison come in with the fifth run.

In the second, Robersonville added three more. Warren reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. He scored on Knox's single. Danny Stalls then singles, and stole second. An error on that play let Knox and Stalls both score.

Robersonville picked up three more in the fourth and one in the sixth.

Knox and Stalls led the Ram hitting with three each.

Robersonville is now 2-1 in the Martin County Conference.

Belvoir Nips Jays

FALKLAND — Belvoir - Falkland eeked out a 3-2 victory over Stokes - Pactolus yesterday in a Pitt County Conference pitching duel.

Belvoir's Timmy Tyner and Stokes' Wynn hurled the game. Tyner tossed a two - hitter for the win, walking four and striking out three. Wynn allowed only one hit in the loss, and struck out 11 Eagle batters.

Stokes scored first in the opening frame. Briley reached on an error and stole second. Wynn then singled to score Briley.

Belvoir came up with a run in the bottom of the second. Ben Joyner walked, stole second, and came in when the pickoff play hit his helmet and rebounded into center.

Stokes pushed back ahead in the fifth with a run. Jones was hit by a pitch and stole second. Congleton singled to drive him in.

But Belvoir picked up two in the bottom of the seventh to win it. Tyner was hit by a pitch and stole second. Clint Lewis reached on a fielder's choice and Joey Moore walked. Cobb then reached on an error, scoring both Tyner and Lewis to win the game.

Coon Edges To Win Over Aycock

WILSON — Coon Junior High School of Wilson edged past Aycock Junior High School, 4-2, yesterday in 10 innings.

Aycock pushed over a run in the first inning to take the lead. Steve Bostic walked and Howard Adams reached on an error. Adams stole second and Stanley Cobb singled to drive in Bostic.

Cobb helped things out again in the fourth with a homer, giving Aycock a 2-0 lead.

But Coon picked up two runs in the fifth to tie it up. Henry Dixon reached on an error and stole second. He gained third on a wild pitch and scored on Paul Bradford's single. Carroll Shely singled to drive in Bradford with the tieing run.

It continued like that until the bottom of the 10th. Dixon reached on a single to open the inning, and Bath homered, ending the game.

Cobb, who went seven innings, struck out 16 and picked up three hits. Wayne Bailey added two hits.

Aycock is now 4-2 for the season.

Conscience Set Controversial Preacher's Course

By RICHARD DAW
Associated Press Writer

WAKE FOREST, N. C. (AP) —For four years a white Baptist minister, the Rev. J. Wesley Shipp struggled with his conscience, searching the scriptures for some biblical support for racial segregation.

He found none, and then, "I had to ask myself whether I was really going to be a Christian."

His answer was yes, and pro-integration views became an integral part of his Christianity.

Thus it was that the Southern Baptist minister, a product of a segregated Virginia society, began walking a path that led to public ridicule and scorn, the firing of a shotgun blast into his home, dismissal from his pastorate, and, finally, toward the pulpit of an integrated church in Louisville, Ky.

Shipp will become pastor of the 23rd and Broadway Baptist Church in Louisville in June, leaving behind him in Wake Forest near Raleigh a simmering controversy.

The 38-year-old minister was dismissed by the Ridgecrest Baptist Church a day after a shotgun blast was fired into his home last December during a Christmas party to which his 16-year-old daughter had invited some black high school classmates. Screaming black and white teen-agers flattened themselves on the floor after the blast shattered the front window of the living room. No one was hurt and no arrests have been made. Gov. Bob Scott has announced a $2,000 reward for information leading to conviction.

Ousted from the church's parsonage on a few hours notice, Shipp remained in Wake Forest to finish his studies at the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, living with his wife and three children in a friend's home.

He graduates in late May, 14 years after beginning a seven-year course of university and seminary studies on a part-time basis.

The native of Virginia Beach, Va., says that despite the trouble which his views have brought him, "I suppose I would do it all over again. I couldn't do otherwise and be a Christian."

But, he added in an interview that the reaction against him in this quiet, rural town, "does hurt."

"If the attacks had come from outside the church, it wouldn't have hurt as bad," he said. "But when people who are supposed to be Christians turn against a man just because he is trying to live a Christian life, it is discouraging."

Shipp had been a controversial figure—in a minor way—during his nine months as pastor of the Ridgecrest Church, with its sparkling new brick building.

"In sermons from time to time, I had referred to my beliefs that racism and Christianity are incompatible," Shipp said. "It was never any secret that I was an integrationist."

"I'm not pessimistic," Shipp says of his experience. "But I am realistic. I hope that the institutional church can reform itself, and that racial and economic barriers can come tumbling down. But I have to admit the odds are not in favor of it happening."

The stocky, 260-pound minister says he leaves Wake Forest "with no regrets, but with a certain sorrow.

"I have a real sorrow for the black man who must remain in this community, because it is obvious that the white people aren't going to consider his feelings. He'll get only as many of the rights which should be his as he can force the white man into giving him. I hope he can do this forcing from a Christian perspective in a Christian manner."

Each Cancer Dollar Works Three Ways

"Each dollar given to the American Cancer Society goes to work three ways against a cruel disease," said Mrs. Percy Cox, Chairman of the April 1970 ACS fund-raising and educational Crusade now underway in Pitt County and Greenville.

Triple action against cancer in mobilized through the ACS programs of research, education and service to the cancer patient.

"The first part of the program is well known. The ongoing ACS research program, currently pegged at $21-million, is the largest such program of any private organization or of any health-related organization other than the Federal Government, she said. The American Cancer Society supports research projects and top-flight scientists in 125 colleges, universities, hospitals and institutes, some of these being located in North Carolina.

Education is approached in two ways—professional and public. American Cancer Society publications, films, lectures, and conferences bring cancer news and facts to members of the medical and allied professions. The ACS also assists physicians in acquiring the added skills necessary for cancer management through its clinical fellowship program.

The 58 Divisions and more than 3,000 ACS Units educate the American public to the importance of early detection of cancer, when prompt treatment could result in a cure. Cancer prevention also is emphasized. Television, radio, school programs, involvement of employee and fraternal groups are some of the means by which the ACS teaches.

The American Cancer Society provides service to the cancer patient in many ways. Volunteers make cancer dressings and chauffeur patients for treatment. Carefully trained volunteers help in rehabilitation efforts.

"You might call this a mini-review of the ACS program," Mrs. Cox added. "A mini-review of a tremendous battle. There's more to be said, but let me stress our Crusade slogan—'Fight cancer with a checkup and a check'—it says so much in so few words!"

April, 1865: Confederacy Virtually Ended In N.C.

By H. G. JONES
Dept. of Archives and History
Written for the AP

RALEIGH (AP) — During April in 1865, the Confederacy virtually came to an end in North Carolina.

Gen. William T. Sherman, camped near Goldsboro, was reorganizing his Union army and replenishing depleted supplies while awaiting word from Gen. U. S. Grant concerning the offensive against Richmond.

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, commander of the Confederate forces in the area, was encamped to the northwest of Goldsboro in and around Smithfield.

On April 5 the rumor began to circulate among the Confederates that Richmond had fallen. With this, optimism among Johnston's men was replaced by gloom. Desertions increased.

The news from Richmond reached Sherman April 6, and four days later his Federal troops started their march toward Raleigh. They passed They passed through Smithfield on the eleventh, meeting with determined resistance from the Confederates. That night Sherman learned of Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

Gov. Zebulon B. Vance appointed two former governors, David L. Swain and William A. Graham, to deliver to Sherman a written request for a personal interview for the purpose of "conferring upon the subject of suspension of hostilities. . . ."

They delivered Vance's letter to Sherman April 12 and found him ready to make an "amicable and generous agreement with the state government." In a return letter to Vance, Sherman agreed to cooperate to terminate the war and to see that the governor and other officials received respect and protection from the federal troops provided hostilities ended. Vance, however, expecting Swain and Graham to return to Raleigh on the same day they left, fled the city when they had not returned by midnight.

Sherman entered Raleigh April 13. He set up headquarters in the deserted governor's mansion at the foot of Fayetteville Street, which one of his officers described as "a musty old brick building . . . in derision called the 'palace'."

Having learned of the capitulation of the Army of Northern Virginia and being convinced that the Confederacy was doomed, Johnston, at a meeting of President Davis's cabinet April 13, was authorized to ask Sherman for a suspension of hostilities.

Sherman was agreeable to a discussion, and a meeting halfway between Durham and Hillsborough was set for April 17. As Sherman prepared to board a special train in Raleigh on that date, he received word of President Lincoln's assassination.

Fearing what effect the news might have on his troops, he swore to secrecy the depot operator who had delivered the message and proceeded to the meeting.

Leaving the train at Durham, Sherman and his escort set out on horseback for the appointed spot. They had ridden several miles when the white flag of the Confederates was seen in the distance. The two flag bearers met, word was passed back, and the two generals rode forward to meet for the first time.

After they shook hands and introduced their aids, Sherman asked about a place nearby where they could talk in private. Johnston knew of a small farmhouse in the area, and the two generals proceeded to the home of James Bennett. The two generals talked alone on the first day and finally decided to meet again at the same place the next day.

Johnston returned to Hillsborough, and Sherman to Raleigh. Both returned to the Bennett farm and their meeting resumed shortly after noon April 18. A generous plan of surrender was worked out. Sherman had often promised to befriend the people of the South once they laid down their arms, and at the Bennett farm house he lived up to his words.

Having urged speedy acceptance of his agreement with Johnston, Sherman was much surprised when Grant arrived in Raleigh April 24 with word that the federal authorities had turned down the agreement made at the Bennett farm. Sherman immediately wired Johnston of this turn of events and, in direct disobedience to the orders from President Davis, Johnston suggested to Sherman that the two meet again to discuss terms. After much discussion, a new agreement was reached at this meeting on April 26 at the Bennett House. Grant's approval brought to an end the bloody war, though some hostilities occurred in the mountain areas several weeks later.

Located west of Durham just off Interstate 85, the restored Bennett Place is now one of the state historic sites administered by the Department of Archives and History and is open to the public free of charge.

Arrest Woman In Knifing Incident

A cutting incident Monday at the William Earl Taylor night spot near Bell's Fork has resulted in the arrest of a Rt. 2, Greenville woman on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Carolyn Smith, 29, is charged with stabbing Taylor in the right shoulder with a butcher knife. Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that she was arrested after the owner signed a warrant.

Bond has been set at $300 and trial will be held on May 5 in District Court.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird estimates full costs of the Vietnam war for the fiscal year starting next July 1 will be "—

That was the reply printed in censored congressional testimony released today to a question from Chairman George H. Mahon, D-Tex.

Mahon said he realized the figure was hard to estimate but that, "of course, the public is entitled to know how much the war is costing."

Laird readily answered that the Vietnam war cost $28.8 billion in fiscal 1969, is estimated at $23.2 billion this fiscal year and added:

"For fiscal year 1971, the full costs of the war are estimated at—."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., asserting members of the Subversive Activities Control Board "may be the highest paid group of benchwarmers in the history of the federal government," says he will make another effort to cut off all funds for the SACB.

Proxmire noted that the board's five members draw $36,000 a year from the federal treasury.

A recent Supreme Court decision declared unconstitutional publication by the SACB of names of Communist party members. Proxmire said this left board members with nothing to do.

President Nixon earmarked $401,000 for the board in his budget.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., has expressed doubt the committee will approve any proposals to amend the Constitution to change the presidential election system.

The 17-member committee has agreed to vote Thursday on the proposals and Eastland said the outcome will be very close.

"I don't know what will come out," he said. But he added that some change in the present Electoral College system probably will be recommended.

The House approved last September an amendment to abolish the Electoral College and elect the president and vice president by direct, popular vote.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Draft calls could drop to as low as 12,000 a month as a result of President Nixon's decision to reduce American troop strength in Vietnam, Pentagon sources report.

Armed forces inductions had been expected to average more than 18,000 men a month. Officials said the predicted reduction would depend on ow soon additional troops are withdrawn from South Vietnam.

A total of 12,500 men were inducted in January, the lowest number of any single month this year. The recently announced May quota was 15,000 men.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An appeal for pardon by former Maryland Rep. Thomas F. Johnson has been rejected by President Nixon.

The White House said the application for executive clemency was considered by the President and denied.

Johnson, 60, a Democrat, faces a six-month prison sentence stemming from his conviction in 1968 of accepting $17,500 to persuade the Justice Department to drop a mail fraud charge against a savings and loan officer.

U.S. District Court Judge George L. Hart has refused to grant a preliminary injunction against an 1892 law prohibiting kite flying in the District of Columbia, saying, "The reason for this law may have long since disappeared. Yet it is up to Congress to repeal it."

Added Sales Tax Opposed

TARBORO — Jerry Paul told a forum of voters gathered here Monday night that additional sales tax would be "a very poor method" of increasing the state's revenue.

Paul, a candidate for state senator, said the state should seek to reform its tax structure to decrease the tax load borne by lower income groups.

The forum, sponsored by the Edgecombe County Farm Bureau, featured all candidates for state and county offices.

Paul said he did not think politics was the "rightful province" of "back - slappers and glad - handers." He said, "It is time for the people to be heard."

The Greenville attorney is opposing incumbent State Senator Julian Allsbrook of Roanoke Rapids.

Attacks Theory Of Evolution

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Taking time off from a campaign against miniskirted churchgoers, a local Anglican rector dismissed the theory of evolution as "mere mumbo jumbo."

Writing in his parish magazine, the Rev. Arthur Sexby of St. Michael and St. George's Church criticized "doctors, bishops, clergymen, lecturers and schoolteachers" who are "more concerned to be with-it than to witness the scientific facts. They are but a lot of intellectual chisellers."

Recently, Sexby caused an uproar in his congregation when he banned miniskirts from the church.

NOT A SUBWAY . . . but drainage tile is being installed under Elm Street near Greenville Boulevard. The work, which began last Friday, will take several more days, according to City Engineer C. A. Holiday, who stated that after the pipe is installed, the stream channel had to be dredged about 300 feet to get the grade down to that of the pipe. This is another of a continuing series of improvement projects underway in Greenville or planned for the immediate months ahead.

'Deal-Makers' Leading Movies

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Two events at this year's Academy Awards held special significance about the new state of the film industry:

When "Midnight Cowboy" was proclaimed the best picture of the year, the award was claimed by its producer, Jerome Helman.

When Gig Young won the Oscar for best supporting actor because of "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" he saved his most lavish thanks for the head of the producing company, Martin Baum.

Both Helman and Baum are onetime agents.

A few years ago, a local sage made the remark: "Blessed are the deal makers, for they shall inherit the film industry." His prediction appears to be coming true, at least in part. A glance over the production ranks shows that former agents are assuming ever-increasing power in movie production.

The head of the new Warner Brothers management team is Ted Ashley, who once ran one of the biggest talent agencies in show business. Since 1962, Universal has been run by MCA, which used to be called "the octopus" because of its control of film talent. By government decree MCA went out of the agency business after the studio purchase.

Martin Baum, agent for Gig Young, and other stars, now heads the movie enterprises of ABC. Herb Solow, vice president in charge of production at MGM, once worked for the William Morris Agency.

The agent once occupied the lowliest position in the Hollywood hierarchy. He was considered a necessary evil, a sharpie who hustled jobs for his clients and collected his 10 per cent commission in money or blood.

That concept began to change in the 1930s with the advent of Myron Selznick. Embittered because he believed the film bosses had bankrupted his father, Lewis J. Selznick, Myron sought revenge by demanding outrageous terms for stars and directors. He attracted a huge talent list to his agency because of his effectiveness.

MCA had even greater success in the years following World War II. The giant agency was able to set up picture deals in which the producer, director, writer and stars were all MCA clients. It was a natural step to assume control of Universal.

Some agents have become producers by going into partnership with their clients. That was true of Harold Hecht, who was long associated with Burt Lancaster. In the case of the late Martin Melcher, the client was also his wife, Doris Day.

Other agents have ascended to producership by putting together packages and selling them along with themselves. Among the most successful was Lawrence Turman, who produced "The Graduate." The device also worked for Ingo Preminger, producer of the current hit, "M+A+S+H."

Chosen For Girls' State

WINTERVILLE — Miss Brenda Dee Jackson, a rising senior at Winterville High School, has been selected to attend Girls' State in Raleigh this summer.

Miss Jackson has been active in school affairs. She has been a representative on the Student Council, a member of the Science Club, a cheerleader, a member of the Library Club, a vice president of the Beta Club and secretary of the junior class. She was chosen district president of the State Library Clubs for the year 1969-70. She has also participated in Junior Varsity Basketball.

BRENDA DEE JACKSON

Challenges His Congregation

KESSINGLAND, England (AP) — An Anglican rector who was criticized for delivering poor sermons has challenged his congregation of 300 to take the pulpit and see if they can do better. "If you feel you have something valuable to say, then the pulpit is yours," says the Rev. Bernard Morgan, 37-year-old rector of Kessingland's 15th century St. Edmund's church.

TINY CARVINGS

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Bill Smith, a junior high school industrial arts teacher, uses a needle stuck in a handle with the point sharpened into a tiny blade to carve such things as chains from kitchen matches.

Zeal Is Needed In Every Field

Superb teachers like Professor Barber deserve a special salute.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
ph. D., M. D.

CASE M-580: Prof. Margaret Barber teaches psychology at El Camino College in California.

That school has over 15,000 students!

"Dr. Crane," she began, "this is my 10th year of teaching the human relations type of course.

"The specific title of my class is 'Psychology for Living.'

"And I have begun to use videotaped interviews with prominent people to help widen the perspective of my students.

"For I have personally acquired a closed-circuit recording set-up, which I use with my various classes."

The late Dr. Glenn Frank, while President of the University of Wisconsin, lauded star salesmen.

But he didn't limit their number to the commercial or business fields.

No; he said a teacher, as well as a clergyman, should also be a star salesman of ideas.

Professor Barber thus deserves a salute for her own initiative and dedication to making psychology a vital force in the lives of her students.

Many of her pupils volunteer their admiring comments after they have finished her courses.

For she ties-in her classroom lessons with the everyday problems her students are currently facing in their social relationships, as well as with their future careers.

And that is superb pedagogy.

Alas, not all teachers (or clergymen, either) have the zeal and resourcefulness of Professor Barber.

Indeed, far too many college professors loll back and rest on their oars as soon as they attain what is called "tenure."

For after 5 years, many colleges grant their faculty members lifelong security, if they merely coast till they retire at 68.

And college "tenure" is as bad as "monopoly" in business or religion.

For our American world leadership is a direct result of the rugged competition by people who refused to coast along complacently.

Imagine a football player being given "tenure." That's to laugh!

On every athletic team, a player must continually surpass the others who compete for his spot, or else be demoted.

The moment a member of the second squad can outrun or outtackle or outpass anybody on the first team, that better player supplants the first string man.

College "tenure" is merely a neat way to "freeze" a man into a lifelong teaching salary, even if he deteriorates in his output.

Alas, it is probably the upper 25 percent who are the producers and star players, or stellar teachers, preachers and business leaders.

So the 75 percent eagerly seek a guaranteed lifelong tenure at their job, so they can coast.

For most people are not "money players" who do their best when the pressure is on them.

And they also grow hostile to those of the upper 25 percent who "show them up," which is why star teachers like Professor Barber, as well as leading pulpit orators like Bishop Sheen, Billy Graham, Dr. Peale and Rabbi Samuel Silver, are often damned by faint praise by their own colleagues.

Good teachers are also popular, for students soon recognize the lazy "tenure" boys vs. the pedagogues with missionary zeal.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣ South was able to land his four heart contract when West's completely passive defense resulted in East's being drawn into a fatal end play on the deal.

South was reluctant to play three no trump with a void in the opponent's suit. His rebid of four hearts was based on the hope that North held three card support in one of the major suits. Holding two doubletons, North reasoned that he did not have a true preference and he passed four hearts.

West opened the queen of clubs. The three was played from dummy, East signaled strongly with the jack and South ruffed in his hand. A heart was led to the ace and a diamond was returned and the queen finessed successfully.

The king and queen of hearts were cashed. Dummy discarded a club on the third round and when East did likewise, West's jack of hearts became the master trump. The ace of diamonds was played next and then East was given his diamond trick as West sluffed a club.

East, who had only black cards left, found himself endplayed. He returned a small club and declarer discarded a spade as West ruffed with the jack of hearts. The shift was to the four of spades. The seven was played from dummy and East put up the ace. This established North's king of spades as an entry to the dummy's good diamonds on which South disposed of his remaining spades. His losses consisted of one spade, one heart and one diamond.

West could have taken his partner off the end play and brought about declarer's downfall by ruffing the third round of diamonds with his high trump in order to lead another club thru North's guarded king. By forcing out South's last trump while East still retains the ace of spades as a reentry, West can establish his partner's entire suit and limit the declarer to but seven tricks.

A simple count would have convinced West that his partner had no more red cards, and that if East was permitted to go in with the king of diamonds—any exit would prove embarrassing.

Religious Press Circulation Off

LONDON (AP) — Statistics compiled by the Church of England Newspaper show that the circulation of Britain's 22 official religious papers has fallen by 60,000 over the past year. Total sales are now below one million. The two with the largest circulation are Challenge (interdenominational) and War Cry (Salvation Army) which both aim at gaining readership outside the organized churches.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the question of authorizing the appropriation of funds from non-tax revenues and (or) a special annual levy of taxes not to exceed an annual rate of seven cents (7c) on the One Hundred Dollar ($100.00) valuation of taxable property in Pitt County to provide for the financial support of Pitt Community College and Technical Institute will be submitted to the voters of Pitt County at a special election to be held on the second day of May, 1970, and the Resolution adopted by the Board of Commissioners of Pitt County is published in full below as a notice of said election:

RESOLUTION ORDERING A SPECIAL ELECTION IN THE COUNTY OF PITT ON THE QUESTION OF APPROPRIATING FUNDS FROM NON-TAX REVENUES AND (OR) A SPECIAL ANNUAL LEVY OF TAXES FOR THE FINANCIAL SUPPORT OF PITT COMMUNITY COLLEGE AND TECHNICAL INSTITUTE

At a special meeting of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners held in Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, on the 13th day of March, 1970; a quorum being present, upon motion of B. Alton Gardner, seconded by Vernon Cox, the Board unanimously passed the following Resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF THE COUNTY OF PITT, NORTH CAROLINA:

Section 1. That a special election as requested by Resolution of the Board of Trustees of Pitt Technical Institute dated March 13, 1970, and submitted to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners of Pitt County be, and the same is, hereby ordered and called to be held in the County of Pitt on May 2, 1970; it being the first Saturday of May, 1970, the date of the Primary, for the purpose of submitting to the voters of Pitt County the question of appropriating funds from non tax revenues and (or) a special annual levy of taxes not to exceed an annual rate of seven cents (7c) per One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) of assessed property valuation of taxable property in Pitt County to provide for the financial support of Pitt Community College and Technical Institute.

Section 2. That for said special election no new registration of voters of Pitt County is required and the registration books for the purpose of registration of new voters only will be kept open as provided by law for the Primary Election and shall be closed as provided by law for the Primary Election with the Challenge Days as provided by law for said Primary Election.

No person shall be permitted to vote in said election unless said person shall have been registered to vote in the registration books of Pitt County prior to the date said registration books are closed as provided by law for the Primary Election.

Section 3. That said special election shall be held at the same places and the poll books shall be open at the polling places that other County and State officials are to be voted on in all election precincts within the County in said Primary Election, which are the same places at which the last preceding election was held for members of the General Assembly, and the Board of Elections and the election and precinct officials are appointed and authorized to hold said election and to make return of the results thereof to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and shall incorporate in said return not only the number of votes cast for and against said order, but also the number of voters registered and qualified to vote in the election, from which return the Pitt County Board of Commissioners will canvass the returns and declare the result of the election.

Section 4. The form of Ballot to be used in said special election hereby called shall be substantially in the following form:
