Former Addict Knows Well About Problems

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Bill Bethune, who will speak at a youth meeting on drugs and drug abuse at Aycock Junior High School this afternoon at 3 p.m. knows what he's talking about — he's a former alcohol and drug addict himself.

Interviewed in his office at the Alcoholic Treatment Center at Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro, Dr. Bethune was eager to talk about drug use and about the generation gap which he thinks accounts for much of the drug problem.

"Parents who are more interested in material things than in showing their children by words and actions that they love them are pushing their children into doing things to shock them and things of which they disapprove. It may come out in wearing long, unkempt hair or, if the world the young person sees is ugly enough to him he may decide to take the drug route."

Bethune was already a doctor when he himself took the alcohol and drug route. "I have been on hard drugs — heroin — and I know what it's like to go through cold turkey. I even know what it's like to be in cahoots with organized crime in order to support my habit. Now I feel I must tell parents and young people what drugs can do and what causes drug experimentation and addiction. I have spoken to one group or another for the past 57 nights."

"I like young people and I listen to them. The girls at Peace College gave me a ovation — standing in their seats — not long ago. That meant a lot because I apparently had reached them. But having a young person look me up to talk about the things that really matter to him means more, especially if that person has tried drugs or alcohol or has been tempted to," Dr. Bethune said.

"His rapport is about the greatest I have ever seen," Mrs. Lib LeConte, executive director of the Pitt County Mental Health Association said. "Whether he speak to you on a one-to-one basis or as part of a group, he holds you spellbound with his honest appraisals of society today and of himself as a former 'hooked person.'"

"We are urging young people from all over the county to come meet Dr. Bill. Leaders of church and school groups especially should give their groups this opportunity. Parents who want to understand their children and what they're up against should attend, also," Mrs. LeConte said.

China Enters Space Age With Launch Saturday

By CHARLES R. SMITH
HONG KONG (UPI)—Communist China announced its entry into the space age Saturday with a 380-pound satellite broadcasting a revolutionary anthem titled "The East is Red" to a world wondering what military use Peking would make of its leap into the heavens.

The Chinese, who invented the rocket almost 1,000 years ago and became a nuclear power in 1964, said the satellite was orbiting the earth every 114 minutes on a looping course that took it as high as 1,365 miles.

U.S. officials in Washington said the feat indicates Communist Chinese scientists have made significant progress toward developing an intercontinental ballistic missile which could threaten the United States. The Chinese successfully tested a missile with a nuclear warhead in 1966.

The Chinese accomplishment was expected to add fuel to arguments of those in the United States urging the Nixon administration to bolster U.S. defense against missile attack.

A scientist who served as a colonel in the U.S. Air Force in World War II, Chien Hsuehshen, was believed the driving force in the Chinese space program. He was a member of an American team sent to study German rocket development at the end of the war.

The satellite launching made China the fifth nation to launch an earth orbiter with its own booster. The other full fledged members of the space race are the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Japan. Britain, Canada, Italy and Australia have flown earth satellites with American help.

Japan beat China to the punch two months in becoming the first Asian nation in the competition, launching an 84-pound satellite with a Lambda 4S5 rocket.

Radio Peking's announcement on the launching gave few details. It said the satellite was hurled into space Friday night, that it weighed 173 kilograms (380.6 pounds), that its angle to the equator was 68.5 degrees and that it was broadcasting its "The East is Red" tune on a radio frequency of 20,099 megacycles.

The Soviet Union, Peking's arch rival in the Communist ideological struggle, reported the launching in a brief eighteen dispatch without comment. Russia was the first nation in space, putting a 184-pound Sputnik into orbit in October, 1957. The United States was second with the 30.8-pound Explorer 1 in January, 1958.

The Soviets announced Saturday they had launched another in their series of Cosmos satellites—the 335th in a string dating back to 1962. The Soviets were also the first to put a man in space—Yuri Gagarin in April, 1961.

After announcing the launching in its evening newscast Saturday, Radio Peking played the revolutionary tune beamed from the satellite to China's millions still ignorant about the two successful moon landings by American astronauts.

Peking hailed the feat as a great accomplishment of Mao Tse-tung, the founding father of Chinese communism. "The East is Red, the sun is rising," the song trumpeted. "In the East there emerges a Mao Tse-tung. He is striving for the happiness of the people. He is the great savior of the people."

So far as could be determined in Hong Kong, it was China's first attempt to put a satellite into orbit. Diplomatic analysts in Hong Kong, without attempting to downgrade the military implications of the launching, said its biggest impact was psychological and political.

These analysts suggested that it may do much to improve China's image and status as a world power and should help the Peking leadership regain domestic control, still weakened by the internal struggle which raged more than two years ago in the so-called "Cultural Revolution."

The broadcast gave no indication of the site from which the satellite was launched. China's main missile and rocket testing site is located at Shuang Cheng-tsu on the rim of Ala Shan Desert and about 500 miles east of the main nuclear testing base at Lop Nor. China has three missile test ranges in the western part of the country, according to the best information here.

Scientist Chien, the man believed responsible for Chinese rocket development, was once a star student at the California Institute of Technology and later served as a professor and researcher at the Institute's Guggenheim Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

He was once the youngest professor in the history of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. During World War II he was the director of the rocket section of the U.S. National Defense Scientific Advisory Board headed by the late Gen. Henry "Hap" Arnold.

Cambodian marines aboard gunboats and landing craft began towing an estimated 150 homes from the Phnom Penh's "floating village" to relocate at least 1,000 Vietnamese. Police-men supervising the relocation said although the Vietnamese families were not Viet Cong suspects that they were being removed as a precautionary measure.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Vietnamese have been reported slain by Cambodians in recent days in apparent retribution for attacks by North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops.

On another front Saturday, military sources said Cambodian air force planes parachuted supplies to at least three government battalions isolated by Communist forces near the Vietnamese border.

The Cambodian infantrymen were operating near Memot and Komachai Mea, both within 10 miles of the South Vietnamese frontier, and Khom Damber, 20 miles northwest of Memot.

At Angtassom, UPI photographer Toshio Sakai reported continuous fighting through midday Saturday around the district headquarters compound. Angtassom sits astride National Highway 3, and an access road links it with National Highway 2 which runs east to the provincial capital of Takeo.

Field reports said at least 15 Cambodian soldiers were killed and 18 wounded in fighting at Angtassom which started Thursday when Viet Cong units attacked a 100-man government force. About 1,500 Cambodian reinforcements have arrived since, including three battalions of paratroopers and one battalion of infantry.

Cambodians Fight 500 VC For Highway

By JACK WALSH
PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI) — Cambodian commanders Saturday rushed reinforcements to the town of Angtassom where government troops battled a force of 500 Viet Cong in the third consecutive day of fighting for control of a highway junction only 40 miles south of Phnom Penh.

"The Viet Cong have been everywhere since we arrived here two days ago," said Lt. Muong Sarin, 34-year-old commander of the 1st Paratroop Battalion at Angtassom. "The situation looks quite serious. We have been fighting all day."

Loss of Angtassom would pose a serious threat to Phnom Penh, and steps were taken in the capital Saturday to shore up its security.

Retaliate For Shelling

By United Press International
HAITIAN police, retaliating against the shelling of the presidential palace by rebelling coast guard vessels, arrested 200 persons and captured "an important arms cache" in Port-au-Prince, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

Haitian President Francois Duvalier himself called the revolt a "little problem" he will easily solve.

In a telephone interview with the French radio network Europe No. 1, Duvalier said Saturday "the presidential palace has not been hit. It is an unconquerable fortress."

The president said "if a small group of the navy mutinied, it is simply because sailors do not think."

The United States, he said, had not refused to help him but "U.S. intervention anyhow would resemble direct military intervention, while we are perfectly capable of solving this little problem."

Duvalier said "we have solved many other problems since Haiti has been living under my enlightened leadership."

There had been no street demonstrations and order is firmly maintained, he said.

My militia stands by at this very moment in all the provinces and the capital. The militia, the famous militia called Tonton in the vulgar fashion, in fact are the army's best troops. They are in the streets in the provinces of the republic."

Nevertheless, Haiti Saturday partially isolated itself by restricting telephone communications and closing the Port-au-Prince airport. Only official calls were being accepted by Haitian telephone operators.

In Washington, Haitian Ambassador Arthur Bonhomme said after talking to Port-au-Prince that he had heard the three or four ships that fired on the palace Friday were fleeing toward the Windward Passage, apparently in the direction of Cuba or the Bahamas.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, the San Juan Star said it had learned the attack apparently was led by Col. Octavio Cayard, commander of the Haitian coast guard.

The newspaper El Caribe said in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, the revolt apparently resulted from a purge begun by Duvalier that was to include "the major officers of the traditionally submissive Haitian coast guard."

Haiti's five coast guard vessels are its only navy.

Justice

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Justice Department said Friday it has chosen Charlotte as one of six cities in the nation which will participate in a research program to improve criminal justice from investigation and arrest to imprisonment and release.

A three-man research and development team will start work in the city this year on the five-year project. About $500,000 a year will be spent in the city.

The program will be paid for and administered by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. This is a Justice Department agency responsible for allocation of funds authorized by the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The selection of Charlotte was announced in Raleigh Friday by the Governor's Committee on Law and Order.

Bloodmobile

The next to the final visit of the Pitt County Bloodmobile for the 1969-70 blood collection is scheduled for East Carolina University on April 27 between 10:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

"Ordinarily," commented chairman Douglas Morgan, "we do not ask people from the community to go to the campus to donate blood, but since we are so far behind, more than 500 units short, we are urging Greenville citizens to take time to go to ECU campus to donate."

Morgan said in "judging from past experience, the students at ECU will come across with more than their assigned quota. They have always responded splendidly."

The ECU April 27 visit is sponsored by the AFROTC, with the Angel Flight and the Service League assisting. First Lieutenant Tom Page is in charge of the one day drive. The blood donation center will be set up at Wright Auditorium.

After this visit, only one more, scheduled for June 4 at the Mosse Center, is planned for the collection year ending June 30.

'Clean-Up, Fix-Up' Week Begins For Greenville And Ayden

By BLANCHE HARDEE

The week of April 26-May 3 has been designated as "Clean - up, Paint - up, Fix - up Week" in Greenville and Ayden and officials in the two municipalities are making an effort to get all citizens to participate to make the two communities more attractive and cleaner.

The Greenville program is being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association while in Ayden, the project is being sponsored by the Ayden Economic Council. The mayors of both towns have made the week official, by issuing "Clean - up, Paint - up, Fix - up Week" proclamations.

"We are making an intense effort to clean up the city, clean homes and streets and work toward more attractive store fronts," James L. Harris Jr., chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee sponsoring the project said.

Harris said, "we urge everyone to cooperate in raking their yards and putting all debris on the side of the street and calling the street department to pick it up."

"More things that can be done will be announced during the week," Harris said. "We hope all citizens will participate to make Greenville, a beautiful place to live."

In Ayden, the clean up campaign is one of five activities required in the Governor's Award Program in which Ayden is participating, according to Dillon Watson, director of the economic council.

Upon successful completion of this campaign and other designated activities, Watson said, Ayden will receive the Governor's Award in an official presentation by Gov. Scott.

There will be an element of competition between Ayden and Greenville during the week. Representatives from each town will tour the municipalities today, then will ride the same route the following Sunday to designate which town did the best job.

In a suggested schedule released by the Chamber of Commerce, today has been set as "City - Wide Survey Day" when citizens are asked to look at their own property and to ride around the city to see what needs cleaning, painting and fixing.

Under the schedule, Monday is "Plan - Up Day" when plans for getting the needed improvements accomplished should be made, while Tuesday has been set as "Business Clean - Up Day" when business and professional men are urged to clean up the businesses, both inside and out.

"Residential Clean - Up Day" has been scheduled for Wednesday, when homes and yards should be cleaned; then Thursday, "City - Wide Paint - up, Wash - up Day," citizens should start paint jobs, with those not wishing to begin painting to wash and clean.

Residents are urged to give special attention to yards, gardens and lots on Friday, "Paint - up, Trim - up, Mow - up Day," then on Saturday "Check - up Polish - up Day," residents should make a final check to make sure the community looks its best for the judges and other visitors on Sunday.

Under the proposed plan, May 3 will be "City - Wide Inspection Day". At that time, judges will tour Greenville and Ayden to select winners, and citizens are urged to ride around the city to see what improvements have been made during the week.

The special week received an early kick off Monday when members of GAP, a local activist organization, began picking up litter along 14th Street. The group will display the accumulated rubbish in a pen at the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets during the week.

In observance of the week, sixth and ninth graders in the Greenville city schools will write essays on "Clean - up Paint - up, Fix - up Week." Students at Rose High School are also eligible to enter the contest. All participating students will receive pencils. The selected winners will receive special awards.

Seventeen Candidates Speak At Public Forum Friday Night

Mrs. Philip Clark, moderator for the first League of Women Voters forum, achieved a minor miracle of statesmanship in keeping each candidate confined to five minutes of speaking and three minutes of questions and answers.

The occasion was the Friday night public forum appearance at the County Courthouse by 17 of the 27 candidates seeking election to local and state offices.

Each candidate appeared in the order listed in the "Know Your Candidates" directory, which had been prepared by the Greenville Provisional League of Women Voters.

Leading off the group of speakers were a Republican, a Democrat, and an American Party candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives. Incumbent Congressman Walter Jones was not able to be present.

—R. Frank Everett, Republican candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives, said "the greatest deterrent to development in eastern North Carolina is the one party system. To have a progressive section . . . we must have a two party system." In reply to questions, "why did you leave the Democratic Party?" Everett said, "I stayed with the party until it left me, until it was taken over by a group of funny men. Everett made reference to his fight to get East Carolina University its university status. "I spent over $1,000 of my own money to get the bill reconsidered," he commented.

—Gene Leggett, the single American Party candidate on the roster, concentrated on law and order. "We need educated men in the law enforcement body," he commented, "but it should not be federally controlled . . . we need to bring law and order up to date, and this can be done only by education."

Leggett made no point not mentioned by any other candidate in numerous references to development of eastern North Carolina. "It's possible to open up New Bern and Washington to shipping," he remarked. When asked if he opposed bussing of school children, Leggett said, "if a person lives in a community, he should go to a school in that community."

It's 'That' Time

For some, it's a welcome change. For others, it so completely fouls up their workday, it leaves nothing but exasperation and the hope for October.

Call it the businessman's advantage or the farmer's headache.

Whatever it is, to whatever segment of the population, it has taken place regardless.

This morning at 2 o'clock daylight saving time officially began.

Thousands of individuals across the nation and the state happily or grudgingly moved up their clocks one hour before going to bed.

Though for centuries men have desired to "turn back" the hands of time, they have never been able to do so. But the federal Uniform Time Act in 1966 made it possible and a requirement for men to "move up" the hands of time.

Forty-seven states including North Carolina, made the annual switch from standard time to DST this morning.

For those nightowls complaining today because they lost one hour of sleep — don't worry. You'll get it back Oct. 25.

"It's possible to open up New Bern and Washington to shipping," he remarked. When asked if he opposed bussing of school children, Leggett said, "if a person lives in a community, he should go to a school in that community."

—L.C. Nixon, the third candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives to speak, told the audience "I really don't know what I am, but I know for sure I'm a people's candidate."

He added, "I'm devoted to putting people back into government, and I stand for the involvement of people in government." Admitting he had no previous political experience, Nixon informed a questioner "I have worked with Congressman Henderson and other candidates behind the scenes for 20 years. On the matter of bussing, he said "I believe this is a matter for community control."

Next to follow were the two candidates for Seat 1 in the North Carolina State Senate.

—Incumbent Julian R. Allsbrook, after explaining the various amounts of money involved in state government expenditures, commented, "Government in North Carolina is big business and requires responsible handling."

Mentioning the advancements of recent years at ECU, Allsbrook said, "It's been a challenge, but it's wonderful to see the work being done at ECU." Stating his views on the repeal of the death penalty Allsbrook told his questioner, "We cannot afford to repeat until life imprisonment actually means life imprisonment."

—Jerry Paul, at 27 the youngest of the slate of candidates, stated his belief that "we need now to encourage diversification of agriculture. One way to do this is to encourage farmers to raise more vegetables for the local markets. We also need a system of cooperative markets." Tying this need in to environment, Paul declared, "We need and can get a balanced economy without spoiling our environment . . . this means we must plan now for eventual urbanization . . . with firm, fair and reasonable rules to prevent pollution."

Two candidates for Seat No. 2 of the North Carolina State Senate were in attendance at Friday night's forum.

—Marvin Blount, Jr., another young candidate, mentioned his age, 30, as a point in his favor. "I am not a seasoned politician," he remarked, "but I'm concerned about this county, the state and the nation . . . our state senate needs young people . . . experience is necessary, but flexibility is very important."

Blount indicated "off-hand, maybe it's a little early to support a public kindergarten system," when questioned about this issue. Among the issues he mentioned as "pressing issues" without going into specifics, were "tight housing, public assistance, and the drug problem."

—Vernon E. White, present state senator for Seat 2, referred to his long association with the problems and growth period of ECU. "I asked to serve on the Appropriations Committee, especially for the purpose of helping ECU," White remarked. A supporter of the public kindergarten program, White, when asked what the state could do in regards to violence in high schools admitted "we haven't been able to help. In this matter, I think my views are rash, as I'm a believer in law and order. The school administration should be given authority to deal with these problems effectively."

For Seat Number 1 in the N.C. House of Representatives, two candidates were on hand.

—H. Horton Rountree, the incumbent, directed most of his time to medical care for eastern North Carolinians. Rountree said, "Our chief problem . . . is medical care. We are not getting care to people who need it. Rountree also said, "People here are sadly lacking in technical and vocational education. These two issues are our basic problem. We must educate our people and get them in good health."

—Charlie H. Tyer, making a first bid for office, skipped over his background qualifications, saying "the question is, what are you willing to do rather than what have you done." He presented factors which he says "I've been asked most often about — education, constitutional government, gasoline taxes, and high interest rates." On the matter of law and order, which was a primary subject throughout the forum. Tyer said, "Respect for law and order starts at the top, not from the bottom." Tyer was one of several candidates expressing support for a four cents sales tax.

Three candidates seeking Seat No. 2 in the N.C. House of Representatives had an opportunity to speak.

—Sam Bundy, long time school principal, claimed, "I'm as educationally oriented as any person could be. I would give my wholehearted interest to all phases of education, from kindergarten to medical school." Replying to a question about plans for more effective drug laws, Bundy noted, "The best thing to do is to institute proper education." On the issue of incorporating Black Studies into North Carolina schools, Bundy commented "I would, as a cooperative thing, but not as a separate matter."

—David E. Reid, Jr., referred to his "active role in the fight against the tobacco tax and the planning fund on a curriculum for a school of medicine at the local chamber said his office will act as an employment agency for students during the week.

"If students would like work to do during that week, such as mowing grass, trimming shrubbery and hedges, painting and other cleaning, they should call and leave their name with our office," Creech said. "Also, any Greenville citizens who would like to employ student help, should contact us."

"We will try to find jobs for these students during the special week," Creech noted. In addition to soliciting the help of East Carolina University students, elementary and high school students, Creech said his organization urges all business, civic, fraternal groups, as well as garden clubs, state highway commission, railroads, fraternities and sororities, departments of the city, and others to work during this week to help make Greenville a more attractive place.

"With the cooperation of our businesses and citizens, we can improve our city," Creech remarked. "If each citizen does something to improve his business or home during this week, Greenville will see a big improvement."

Some improvements suggested by Creech include: planting trees and shrubbery, working in flower beds, trimming hedges, mowing lawns, cleaning vacant lots, painting, washing windows, clean sidewalks and alleys, replace burned out lights, and pick up litter in their area.

ECU." Mentioning Rountree's remarks, Reid said "I'm convinced that a medical school in eastern North Carolina is a must . . . health is our number one problem." Reid, like others, was asked for his view on abortion laws. "There must be a liberalization of the laws, for over population if for no other reason," Reid told his questioner.

—Frank Steinbeck, the Republican candidate for Seat 2, declared, "My ambition is to raise the economy of eastern North Carolina." One question posed for Steinbeck was about deficit financing for education. "I couldn't operate my business in the red," Steinbeck commented, "and I believe schools should be run on the same principle." Steinbeck also mentioned the surplus state funds, adding, "These should be spent for teachers and classrooms if for nothing else."

Three of the four candidates for Pitt County Commissioners appeared in the forum.

—Alton Gardner commented: "This is the first time I've had the privilege of running without opposition." He explained in reply to a query, that "we've been working with the board of trustees at Pitt Memorial Hospital to determine what is the most feasible way to provide effective hospital space. It will take a lot of money." In reply to a question about Greenville's deficit school budget and county assistance, Gardner informed his questioner, "The County Commissioners have always worked with the Greenville Board . . . we've never turned them down."

—J. Vance Perkins, another incumbent commissioner, reviewed progress made since he first served as a commissioner 19 years ago. After mentioning that "funds had been invested for 8 percent interest," Perkins was asked — "then why is there a shortage to cover school needs?" "Part of that money was funds used to build new schools," Perkins answered. On raising property taxes, Perkins commented, "Property taxes are as high as they should be, we need higher sales tax."

—Robert L. Ramey, said "sales tax increase would have been most beneficial." Devoting most of his allotted time to hospital needs, Ramey stated, "There is a pressing need for hospital bed space. We should have a new hospital rather than a new wing. We should construct to meet the needs of the next 10 to 20 years." On being queried about medical school teaching space in a new hospital, Ramey remarked, "A new hospital building would be to serve the people, not the university."

Candidates for the Pitt County coroner and Pitt County sheriff were the last to appear as speakers in the forum.

—E.W. Harvey, Jr., coroner for the past 11 years, drew the loudest laughter of the evening by declaring "no issues are involved in my candidacy." Harvey also read the legal description of the duties of a coroner.

—Ralph L. Tyson, incumbent sheriff, stated "to do a good job law men need good equipment." He also commented, "We are beginning to see a new problem, a drug problem. We now have started a drug squad." When asked what was most needed for good law enforcement, Tyson replied, "the cooperation of all citizens to involve themselves and their children, to talk to their children . . . this is a vital need."

City Clean-Up

The city of Greenville will be participating in the "Clean-up, Fix-up, Paint-up Week" during this week.

According to Harry Hagerty, city manager, the city plans to paint all posts within the city limits that need painting, including sign posts, traffic light posts and parking meter posts.

The city workers also plan to freshen up the traffic lines on the streets Hagerty said.

"The garbage trucks will be picking up everything that is placed out on the curbs," Hagerty explained. "The trucks will work all areas each day and will pick up an extra load. After picking up their usual routes, the workers will go back and pick up what trash has been set out for them again."

Hagerty said it will not be necessary to call for trash pick up. The trucks will be coming by all areas each day.

"Special attention has been placed toward cleaning up city-owned property," he explained. "The city property has been mowed and workers are working on the shoulders of the roads and in park strips."

The city will make every effort to pick up all trash and litter placed on the curb, he said. "Boy scouts, sororities, fraternities and other groups will be cleaning various areas in the city as the week goes by," Hagerty explained.

"We support this clean-up week and will do everything we can to spruce the city up," Hagerty said.

$15,000 Fee Firebombs Devastating For Sen. White

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)—The North Carolina Ports Authority voted Saturday to pay $15,000 in legal fees to former state Sen. Tom White, who is a member of the state Advisory Budget Commission.

The money is payment for services White provided in settling a waterfront dispute with a Morehead City firm three years ago.

Woodrow Price, the newly appointed chairman of the Ports Authority, said his policy would be to use the attorney general's office for all legal work, as state agency's usually do.

Price said that White, of Kingston, had been retained by the authority in 1964 because the attorney general's office was understaffed at that time.

"Now the staff has been beefed up," Price said, "and Robert Morgan (North Carolina attorney general) intends to do all the legal work. I am in complete agreement with him."

The waterfront dispute was settled in 1967 with the payment by the state of $50,000 to Lloyd Fry of Morehead City. Fry, whose roofing company is on the waterfront, was compensated because the extension of state docks by 1,100 feet cut off his direct access to the ocean.

White is now serving an unprecedented fifth term on the Advisory Budget Commission. He was first appointed in 1961 and has been chairman since 1963.

Retired from the legislature in 1968 after serving in the House from 1953 to 1957 and in the Senate from 1961 to 1967. In the 1969 session he was Scott's legislative liaison man (obvies) and was paid $14,000 for that by the state.

Board To Check Crash

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)—A Naval board of inquiry will be convened soon to investigate the crash of a Phantom F4J fighter, which went down in a remote area of Currituck Sound Friday, just south of the Virginia-North Carolina line, killing both men aboard.

The craft, based at Oceana Naval Air Station here, was piloted by Lt. Douglas J. McCarty, 27, of Oceana. The radar intercept officer aboard was identified as Lt. (j.g.) Gary T. Armstrong, 23, of North Caldwell, N. J.

A Navy spokesman said a witness reported seeing the plane flying normally about noon Friday before it suddenly banked to the left and crashed into about 25 feet of water just southwest of Corolla light.

No parachutes were spotted before the crash, the Navy said.

Friday Wrecks

A five-year boy was injured here Friday in a head-on collision on E. 14th Street.

Investigating officers said Jeffrey Allen Wilson, 1615 E. Wright Road was injured and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment when the car in which he was a passenger, driven by Mr. Blanche Hill Wilson, 1615 E. Wright Road, collided head-on with a second vehicle operated by James Warden Early, 19, Alexandria, Va.

Officers charged Early with careless and reckless driving following investigation.

Damage was set for both automobiles at $1,000.

Mary Jeanette Forbes, 53, 110 Ninth St., was charged with failing to yield right of way in a second traffic mishap here Friday.

Police reported that the accident, which occurred at 5:16 p.m. at the intersection of Reade and Fourth Streets, involved a second car driven by Carolyn Youn Daniel, of Henderson.

Investigators placed damage for both cars at $200.

A Quick Find

It took the Greenville Police Department exactly one minute to locate and recover a stolen car after the car was reported stolen here early Saturday morning.

Ironically, the recovery was made in the front yard of a local police officer, but under unusual circumstances.

Robert L. Lawson, of 1821 Joyce St., Greensboro, reported to police Saturday at 1:30 a.m. the theft of his parked automobile from the corner of Fifth and Hudson Streets, Chief T. E. Gladson said.

One minute later, officers called the department to report a traffic accident at 1228 Davenport St. involving a car owned by Police Officer Eddie James Wallace Jr. parked in the yard of his home and a second vehicle immediately identified as the stolen car belonging to Lawson.

Chief Gladson said traffic officers were chasing the stolen car when it turned onto Davenport Street and into the yard of Officer Wallace, and hit Wallace's car.

Driver of the car jumped out and ran, according to investigating officers and has not been identified.

Damage to the Wallace car amounted to $150 while no damage was reported for the Lawson car.

Charged With Rape

Melvin Ray Jenkins, 16-year-old Negro of 1801 South Pitt St. has been charged with raping a 12-year-old girl here late Friday night.

Chief of Police T. E. Gladson said the warrant charging Jenkins with the violation was signed by the girl's mother early Saturday morning. The incident allegedly took place near the girl's South Pitt Street home.

Firebombs Devastating

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—Two firebombs which caused a $100,000 blaze at a Stanford University research center had a devastating impact on work by 10 scholars, Stanford officials report.

The blaze in the predawn hours Friday came a few hours after police evicted a group of anti-ROTC demonstrators from another campus building.

Stanford officials said an early assessment indicated the most tragic loss was destruction of a lifetime of research data by M.S. Srinivas of India, regarded as one of the world's leading sociologists.

Srinivas, a sociologist from the University of Delhi, was not available for comment, and a colleague, University of Chicago anthropologist Sol Tax, pleaded: "Don't disturb him. His mother just died this week and now his entire life's work has been destroyed."

Elsewhere on campus, demonstrators caused an additional $40,000 damage smashing windows at numerous buildings.

Loss in the fire at the Research Center for Advanced Study of Behavioral Sciences was figured at $100,000, but this did not include the scholarly losses, which educators termed "incalculable."

Srinivas is one of nine visiting scholars whose work was damaged or destroyed.

There were unofficial estimates that as much as 75 years of work might have been damaged.

Center Director O. Meredith said Srinivas' office apparently was hardest hit.

"What was burned was a life," he said. "An entire life totally destroyed by people bent on blind, mindless destruction. This man has done nothing but good to anyone and now he is ruined because of a childish social tantrum."

The window-smashing spree followed arrests of 22 persons among more than 100 who held an anti-ROTC sit-in for 12 hours in the Old Student Union Building.

The 22 were arraigned Friday afternoon on charges of criminal trespass. Bail was set at $125 each.

Fire Chief Frank Jurian said the fires in two separate wings of the center were started simultaneously by what appeared to be a flammable substance thrown through windows.

PEN POWER AND NATIONAL POLICY

It's nothing new for voters to take pen in hand and write to their congressmen on matters they feel strongly about. That's one way grassroots democracy asserts itself.

Reports tell of a deluge of letters descending upon Washington from both friendly and irate citizens. In fact, the League of Women Voters has issued a booklet, "When You Write to Washington," offering helpful hints for effective letters.

It stresses that the first letter "can be the beginning of a long and fruitful relationship with your elected representative." But, it advises, write legibly, be brief, include business, family or political connections that may be relevant, and include pertinent editorials.

The booklet also has some "don'ts." Don't begin with the righteous "as a citizen and a taxpayer." Don't apologize for taking the man's time. Don't be rude or vague. Don't threaten. And most important, don't send mimeographed or carbon copies.

Although writers often get form letters in reply, and traditionally get heartiest responses when they commend rather than disagree with the stand taken by their senator or House member, the influence of constructive letter writing has a strong bearing upon national policy.—Florence (S. C.) Morning News

THE IDEAL

The foreign minister of South Africa says his country is striving toward a human rights ideal just like the United States, but contends the situation in his country is "more intricate" than the situation in America. Apartheid as a formal official doctrine is about as far as your average ole country is likely to get from a human rights ideal, short of slavery, which the United States itself shed as a formal doctrine over a century past.—Little Rock (Ark.) Arkansas Gazette

DIALOG ON CAMPUS

One of the big issues on the college campuses today is freedom of speech. In essence, this means a chance to hear controversial speakers.

The American Association of University Professors, reporting on recent investigations, lists the University of Mississippi, the University of Oklahoma and Indiana State University as places where there is too stringent limitation on this part of academic freedom.

Those who control the campus rules on speakers do have a responsibility which cannot be ignored. But it would be well to recognize that banning a speaker sought by some small campus group of students often creates more controversy than his appearance would.

Academic freedom applies most directly to the classroom, but in today's educational world the campus has become the classroom. Prudence should rise above prejudice.—Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

ALSO TO BE FEARED

Our thinking has become so involved concerning drugs that it was quite a jolt to read a headline in the Christian Science Monitor that read—"Alcohol No. 1 Problem." It says that alcohol is a greater problem among teenagers than drugs in S. C. This conclusion was arrived at through a poll of 13,000 members of the state's graduating classes. It showed that only 1.85 percent of those questioned had ever experimented with drugs.

On the other hand 75 percent said that they had experimented with alcohol in some form. And 14.4 percent said that the had had a drink at least once or twice a week. The South Carolinians are worried. They have stepped up their guidance work considerably. Again, this could happen here.—Winter Haven (Fla.) Daily News Chief

LATE TO WORK

Tardiness in arriving at the scene of labor has become epidemic among white collar workers, according to a survey of employers. It has reached the point of defiance, according to one office manager, who attributes the trend to availability of jobs.

That supply and demand figures in this trend is apparent in a news item in the Wall Street Journal, which reports this problem is disappearing in brokerage houses since they started laying off employees because of the stock slump.—Monroe (La.) Morning World

AGE OF MATURITY

While listening sympathetically to the pleas of all classes and ages of persons for better representation, we have not yet become convinced of the wisdom of cutting the voting age from 21 to 18 years of age. Granting that many a youth of 18 has more sense than some gaffers of 65, and conceding that extension of the franchise might not really make much difference in the outcome of elections, we still have a feeling that somewhere a minimum age is in order. Otherwise why discriminate against bright youngsters of 17—or younger.—Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, April 26, the 116th day of 1970. There are 249 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1607 Captain John Smith landed at Cape Henry, Va., with the first group of colonists who would establish a permanent English settlement in America.

On this date:

In 1783, 7,000 Tories sailed from New York for Nova Scotia.

In 1785, the American naturalist and artist, John James Audubon, was born in Haiti.

In 1865, Abraham Lincoln's assassin, John Wilkes Booth, was captured on a farm near Port Royal, Va.

In 1925, Paul von Hindenberg was elected president of Germany.

In 1945, Bremen, Germany, fell to British forces during World War II.

In 1954, a nationwide test of Salk antipolio vaccine began in the United States with 900,000 children scheduled to receive injections.

Ten years ago—The National Assembly in South Korea adopted a resolution demanding the resignation of President Syngman Rhee.

Five years ago — U.S.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said that more and more North Vietnamese troops and arms were moving into South Vietnam despite air strikes against the Communist supply routes.

One year ago — Additional British troops were airlifted into Northern Ireland, where there were bitter disputes between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

A Conservative View

What Is Meant By Term 'Strict Construction'

By J.J. KILPATRICK

Almost a year ago, in his memorable press conference of May 22, President Nixon explicitly stated his intention to nominate "strict constructionists" to the Federal bench. He has used the phrase several times since then, most recently in reference to Judge Harry A. Blackmun, and the question arises anew: What do we mean by "strict construction" on the Constitution?

One workable definition might be derived from reading a recent speech by former Attorney General Ramsey Clark before the American Enterprise Institute. If you could plot Clark's position as due west on a compass, you could then locate "strict construction" as due east, or 180 degrees around to the right.

Clark is perhaps the most extreme exponent of the flexible school of constitutional theory. In his eyes, the Constitution is "an old piece of parchment," filled with "mere words" and "antique phrases." In truth, he contends, "there are no immutable words" in the Constitution; there are only general principles, to be broadly applied to the needs of each generation. The important thing, in Clark's view, is to divine the "spirit of the Constitution" and to move on from there.

The strict constructionist takes a very different view. In his talk with reporters last May, Mr. Nixon groped to explain his understanding of the phrase by recalling the late Felix Frankfurter. There was no question that in his social and economic philosophy, Justice Frankfurter was a liberal, but he regularly upheld State laws of a conservative character. He was unwilling to substitute his own notions of desirable social policy for the expressed will of a legislative body.

That is surely one hallmark of the strict constructionist — that he recognizes the dignity and authority of other branches of government. Judges are not the only ones, of course, who take oaths to uphold the Constitution. Congressmen, Senators, Presidents and State legislators take these oaths also. And while the nine members of the Supreme Court necessarily are the final arbiters in disputed cases, great weight ought to be given to the will and the intention of other public

In the rulebook of the strict constructionist, "intention" counts heavily. What did the framers of, say, the Fourteenth Amendment intend to accomplish? What did the ratifying States understand they were accepting? The late Judge Cooley, whose name once was the most revered name in constitutional jurisprudence, used to describe intention as the "polestar." This was the light to steer by.

There was sound reason, of course, behind the Cooley doctrine. The principal virtue of a written constitution is precisely in that fact: It is written. Unlike Great Britain, the United States — in theory, at least — has based its supreme law upon a document that explicitly defines the powers of government and the rights of men. If these boundaries are to be changed, they ought to be changed, as the Constitution provides, by amendment only.

Alas, Cooley's rules of navigation have been just about scuttled. The amendment process is too slow for the impatient innovators who ruled the Court in the years of Earl Warren. If the Ramsey Clarks of this world have their way (and they have had their way in the Senate lately), it no longer will be necessary to look for judges learned in the law. We will look instead for soothsayers, skilled in communicating with the "spirit" of the old piece of parchment.

Those of us who stand due east, on the side of strict construction, would prefer judges. We want men of self-restraint, men of humility, men who understand that the Constitution belongs not to them, but to the people. We want Tenth Amendment men, who believe that the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

The Supreme Court, as Justice Black remarked recently, never was intended to sit as a constitutional convention, constantly in session. The Court's role is to interpret, not to amend. Permit us a small prayer, as Judge Blackmun comes on for confirmation, that he too sits on the eastern rim.

THE SHRINKING WATERHOLE!

Commencement Provides A Final Springboard For Grads

Commencement on college and university campuses across the nation is now just a couple of weeks away.

It is late Spring and the profusion of flowers, dogwood in bloom, green of the grass and softness of the air all signal that the time is near to close another academic year. Our campus at East Carolina has never been more beautiful.

Commencement means the symbolic and ceremonial closing of a period of formal education for those who are graduating and receiving academic degrees and honors.

It is a time which is both stimulating and challenging not only to the graduates but to the entire academic community. It marks the close of one period or phase and the beginning of another. It is a time to think, to reflect — and to look ahead. It is a time to reassess goals and objectives and to set new ones.

The idea is to give the graduating student a final springboard, an impetus, a booster rocket and motivation. There will be many, many of them during the next few weeks but whether in a high school gymnasium or a university stadium or coliseum, commencement addresses are important.

It will be announced shortly that Tom Jones — Dr. Thomas F. Jones — president of the University of South Carolina will make the 1970 Commencement address here at East Carolina University.

We are very pleased to announce this. Dr. Tom Jones is recognized as an outstanding educator, administrator and innovator. He is a man of ideas and action: He is a man who motivates — and gets results.

After only seven years as president of South Carolina, supposedly devoted to administrative problems and duties, he happened to be elected "Salesman of the Year" by the Sales and Marketing Executives Club in Columbia. The reason — he had "sold" the doctrine of modern higher education, innovation and particularly, the University of South Carolina, to the people.

He came from a small, rural town in Tennessee — incidentally the home town of country music singer Eddie Arnold — but won citations and medals from the U.S. Navy during World War II as a physicist. In 1947 he went to MIT to conduct research in computers, nuclear instrumentation and missile systems. His teaching led to new standards and practices in electrical engineering curricula all over the nation. At Purdue University, he developed a new curriculum, originated a special undergraduate program for honor students interested in research in engineering and greatly expanded graduate studies and research. He served four years as head of the school of electrical engineering at Purdue.

Such background and achievement is in itself inspiring and motivating which is the key purpose of Commencement exercises.

Now that men are reaching into space in search of new frontiers, we sometimes forget that there are still some unexplored frontiers here on the Earth. Chief among these, of course, is the sea.

East Carolina University has joined this exciting probe into the ocean. From a modest beginning at Manteo we hope to build a full-service marine science complex. The University has acquired a vessel which has been modified for marine research. Two fully qualified scientists use this as a base for exploration of the sounds and estuaries in and around Roanoke Island.

Dr. Stan Riggs and Dr. Mike O'Connor spend a considerable amount of their time probing the floors of the estuaries in search of aquatic life and sediment samples which will reveal more about the sea and its secrets.

These two professors are directly responsible for the development of this phase of our marine studies at ECU.

They spent several weeks during the summer of 1968 searching for just the right kind of boat for this work. They finally found what they were looking for in Yorktown, Va.

After months of work, they have now modified the boat to serve as a base of operations. It gives them mobility and a way to reach every area that they feel holds vital research materials. You can expect to hear a great deal more about East Carolina University's Marine Science Program in the near future. — By LEO W. JENKINS

Nearly Everybody Sees Some Kind Of Trouble With Southeast Asia

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

AP Special Correspondent Southeast Asia's situation has become so incredibly tangled that practically nobody can be confident of coming out ahead and practically everybody is in some kind of trouble.

The spillover of fighting from Vietnam into Laos and Cambodia, along with other developments, has created headaches for the United States, the Soviet Union, Red China, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Thailand, the Philippines and others in the area, not to mention the Indochina regimes themselves.

North Vietnam is lobbying in Paris and elsewhere against a French proposal for an international conference on Indochina. One reason for this probably is a Hanoi notion that the Americans will lose in South Vietnam by default. But there could be another good reason.

Peace now in Indochina could put North Vietnam into the middle of a Soviet-Chinese dispute over influence. One side or the other must win the ensuing struggle, and losers of such struggles often lose their heads as well.

It seems almost impossible for Washington to guess right on Cambodia's distress call for help against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese invasion. To respond may widen the war. To ignore the plea can mean the subjugation of Cambodia by Communist forces and a severe setback for the South Vietnamese regime.

President Nixon is going ahead with his phased withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam.

A continued U.S. military presence in Southeast Asia suggests at least implicit support for its nations against Chinese pressure. But there is a prospect that the presence will be greatly diminished or even dismantled, and some Southeast Asian nations are jittery.

Indonesia urgently wants an Asian conference on Cambodian neutrality. Ambassadors of Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand and the Philippines, members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, have been meeting on that situation. Several right now are contending with a new upsurge of Communist guerrilla activity, sponsored and perhaps materially supported by the Red Chinese.

A Communist takeover of Cambodia would raise the prospect of a long period of general instability in Southeast Asia. Unquestionably guerrilla movements in the whole area would be encouraged.

The Russians must be concerned about the possibility of widened Asian war. They worry that short of a big war, the Red Chinese will emerge the real winners in terms of influence. They have made noises suggesting a will to participate in an international meeting on Indochina. But the Kremlin barely dipped a diplomatic toe into the water, found it much too hot and hastily withdrew it. Somebody, possibly the North Vietnamese, talked Moscow out of it.

The Chinese are not without difficulties, either. Peiking is not out of the chaos created by years of "cultural revolution." It may yet have a violent power struggle. It could be tempting to a Maoist regime in such circumstances to kick up a fuss within the boundaries of safety, so as to rally the people behind the rulers. What with the tension on Soviet-Chinese borders, however, the question for Peiking ought to be: Just how much fuss is safe?

tried to drive Cramer out of his job as National Committeeman.

Within hours after the Senate rejected Carswell for the Supreme Court two weeks ago, Kirk was wooing some of Cramer's top campaign aides as the first step to getting Cramer out and Carswell into the Senate race. But Cramer's men stuck with Cramer.

Nevertheless, with Harry Dent's approval, Kirk and Gurney plunged ahead, itching to exploit Carswell's defeat and President Nixon's attack on the Senate, "constituted the way it is," for practicing "regional discrimination." The obvious way to cash in on Southern anger at this "discrimination," they reasoned, was to run Carswell himself as the Southern martyr and start changing the complexion of the Senate by seating the rejected Supreme Court nominee.

Kirk and Gurney, in fact, see far more than a single Senate seat in Carswell. As the victim of what Mr. Nixon called "malicious character assassination," and as the symbol of Southern Republicanism, Carswell, they think, has the broadest catcalls in Florida and might even bring in a Republican legislature.

But with Cramer displaying an unmistakable thirst for battle and with Carswell's wholly unknown virtues as a campaigner, it's still a gamble.

'Earth Day' Theme Invites Frustrations; Even A Depression

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Did you ever try to unscramble an egg?

It might be done, but it wouldn't be simple, like turning a tap, throwing a switch or putting a man on the moon. And the size of the appropriations by Congress wouldn't make much, if any, difference.

That, in a way, is what Earth Day was all about. The performances about the land clearly established repair and restoration of the environment as the popular issue of the times. It has that vital ingredient of something for everyone.

But a great deal of the oratory and many of the attention-getting acts were far from the mark. This is unfortunate, for promises that disappoint only lead to new frustration. It's OK to point to exhaust pipes, smoking stacks, sewage disposal, etc., as culprits. But it should be recognized that they, by and large, are the result, not the cause of pollution.

No matter how you slice the issue, the problem is people. And the problem is not in just the number, although that is important. The problem is in the mass of human needs, desires, wants, ambition, call it what you wish, that have been built through the generations by education, political and business leadership.

The system, the combination of a democratic form of government and a private enterprise economy, has lifted living standards in this country to a level that all other nations in the world are trying to achieve. High school is free to all and colleges are available to millions.

In hindsight, much of this has been achieved at a considerable disregard for environment. Maybe it all came about too fast. And maybe the time has come when the nest is being fouled in a deadly way. If that is true, there is no fleeing. The only option is to clean it up.

And that's where the howl will start. More is involved in smoking stacks and auto exhausts than business greed and conniving government.

Consider the new catch term "no growth economy." It sounds simple. The nation would live with what its gut until it can develop new ways of doing things. It has an appeal.

But what it means is a depression and a big one at that. It would be the sort of adjustment that would force major changes not only in living standards but in living habits.

Take automobiles, for example. Their present engines are the single greatest polluter in the country. These engines can be replaced, and in reasonable short order. But there would be a cost. Prices would mean that many people would simply have to do without a car. And many auto workers would do without jobs.

Electric utility companies wouldn't make such a mess in the air and in the water if they didn't make so much power for lighting, heating, cooling, etc. They can clean up, too. But there is a cost involved.

Paper pollutes, both in the making and in the use. This can be dealt with. But it means that the housewife will have to go to market with her own carrying basket or bag and bring home unwrapped groceries. It's done in Europe.

Note what's happened in Cleveland. The city was ordered by the state to do something about its sewage. It did. It stopped issuing building permits. That involves jobs as well as homes.

It's pretty obvious that even the most ardent of the anti-pollution forces want to go so far as depression conditions to clean things up. You couldn't hardly find a mule here in Pitt County if you were of a mind to replace your auto with a Hoover cart.

But the campaign is broadly based and its the sort of movement which appeals to many. For politicians, it's a fertile ground for promises. And for the far left, it's a ready made stump for striking out at the greed of capitalism. And there is no doubt that there will be some results.

But there is one thing to keep in mind; any change that has basic significance will not be free of costs. It will either be paid for in the cost of things you buy or when tax time rolls around—probably some of both.

Japan's Most Astounding Crime Committed By Poisoner In 1948

By ROBERT CRABBE
TOKYO (UPI)—The Shiina branch of the Teikoku Bank was a drab office in an undistinguished Tokyo neighborhood.

To its employees, Jan. 26, 1948, was just another cold day during the Allied occupation that followed World War II. Shabby, chilly and hungry, they shuffled through their jobs, unaware they would soon be the victims of Japan's most astounding crime in modern times.

An important looking little man walked into the manager's office and announced he was a sanitarian from the Tokyo health department.

He wore a business suit and an official armband. The visitor said he was dispensing "anti-dysentery powder" and that everybody must take it.

To the listless bank employees it was just another nuisance to be endured. They brewed green tea with the cheap tea things of a sort found in all Japanese offices. A few even offered mock tests as they washed down the powder the man had ordered them to take. Within minutes, all 16 lay writhing on the floor in agony. The powder the supposed official had given them contained cyanide. Twelve died.

The little man sped through the tellers' cages, scooping up the equivalent of U.S. $185. He walked out of the bank, and was lost in the Tokyo crowd.

The following August, police arrested an unsuccessful artist by the name of Sadamichi Hirasawa, 56, at the seaport of Otaru on Japan's northern island of Hokkaido.

Although he had no visible means of support, Hirasawa was carrying about $134 in yen, a fairly large sum for a Japanese at that time. Police said Hirasawa was unable to explain how he got the money. He bore a resemblance to the composite portrait of the robber drawn with the aid of surviving bank employees. His handwriting was found to match that on a business card the "health official" gave the bank manager.

Hirauawa was returned to Tokyo and put on trial. The prosecutor's office presented a written confession it said Hirasawa had signed.

He was found guilty and sentenced to death. After exhaustive reviews of his case, the Tokyo high court turned down what should have been Hirasawa's last appeal in 1955.

It remained only for the minister of justice to sign and seal the death warrant, and the state would be free to execute Hirasawa by hanging.

Today, Sadamichi Hirasawa, an old man of 77, sits in his cell in a prison at Sendai, in northern Japan, a short walk from the gallows room. Most

Educators Gathered Here For DISTAR Method Conference

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Educational innovator Siegfried Englemann was at East Carolina University Wednesday and Thursday for a conference on the DISTAR method he invented for teaching basic reading, language, and arithmetic skills.

The conference attracted pre-school and primary teachers and other educators from varied parts of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia. There are about 80 school systems in the three-state area now using the new method.

The method was designed by Englemann to teach low-performing children, but it has been proved to work well when revised with children of any performance level who still need basic education skills. One of his associates, Miss Margo Melnicove, said he worked first with children from the ghettos of Chicago who had been deprived of gaining even the most basic knowledge. "The reasoning was that if these children progressed well, the method could be considered successful," Miss Melnicove said.

The tenets of the method are direct contact, both in proximity and approach; repetition; the use of small groups; constant and immediate feedback, and short lessons.

may be as many as ten in a high-performing group. In an ideal situation, I would have aides to assist the children I am not working with at the time with other work.

"First, I would introduce the concept. For example, showing a picture of a child's shoe, I would ask, 'Everybody, what is this?' 'Shoe' they would probably answer in unison. 'Yes, I would say, 'this is a shoe. Let's say the whole thing. This is a shoe. Children, say the word two times.' After going over several identifying statements similar to this one, I would skip around the page asking different children what the pictures represent. I would praise those who do understand and would immediately give individual help to those who do not. The whole lesson would not take over 20 minutes. I would give the children 'take-home's about the lesson, both as reinforcement and as rewards.

"This type of teaching is hard work for the teacher, but it is rewarding because no child is left behind. Some do not progress as fast as others, but none fail. None are held back by others either. Obviously, this material is best used in a non-graded situation, but it can be used in the primary grades, in kindergarten, or even in special education classes, and in Headstart programs. It is applicable anywhere basic educational skills have to be learned.

Three levels have been devised by Englemann and his associates so far. Arithmetic and reading have already been published on the first level. Reading, arithmetic, language, and science have been devised on the second level, but only reading II has been published so far. The third level is being written now.

Miss Melnicove was taught the method while she was a student at the University of Illinois and she began working with Englemann after her graduation. She now teaches two weeks a month in the Chicago area and spends the other two weeks of each month teaching Sioux Indian children on the Rosebud Reservation in South Dakota. Like most of the teachers at the conference who are now using the method, she was most enthusiastic about it.

The Special Education Instructional Material Center in Grifton has the DISTAR material that has been published so far and it is now being used in special education classes at Grifton and at Belvoir Elementary School.

Prisoner Marks 79th Birthday

By CHARLES R. SMITH
HONG KONG (UPI)—James Edward Walsh, once described by the archbishop of Boston as "the finest missionary to go forth from America in my lifetime," celebrates his 79th birthday April 30—in a Communist Chinese prison.

The Roman Catholic bishop, who earned such high praise from Cardinal Richard Cushing, is on the downhill side of a 20-year prison sentence as an alleged spy for the United States and the Vatican.

He is the only foreign Roman Catholic missionary still in China.

Born in Cumberland, Md., on April 30, 1891, Walsh first went to China as a missionary more than 50 years ago. He spent almost two decades there before returning to the United States as superior general of the Maryknoll order in Ossining, N.Y. He returned to China in 1948 as executive secretary to the Catholic Central Bureau in Shanghai and has been there since, harassed most of the time and in prison for the last dozen years.

Perseverance Under Strain
"In the bright lexicon of the missionary, difficulty is only a synonym for opportunity," Bishop Walsh once remarked. For him the most difficult time began when the Communists took over in 1949 and began a crackdown on the Catholic and other foreign missionaries in the country.

Persistent and sometimes brutal mistreatment and harassment of the missionaries by the Communists rapidly reduced their numbers.

Walsh was seriously restricted in what he effectively could do to propagate the faith and help persecuted Chinese Catholic priests and converts. But it was not until April 30, 1955—his 64th birthday—that the Catholic Central Bureau was ordered closed. The Communists called it a "nest of imperialist running dogs."

At that time, and for the next three years, Walsh was kept under constant surveillance, although he was not completely confined. Harassment and worry had caused his health to decline. Particularly troublesome was rheumatism in his right hand, which forced him to write with his left hand.

Communist-controlled newspapers in Shanghai denounced him almost daily, describing him as "a representative of Wall Street and a stooge of Cardinal Spellman."

During these years, the Communist Chinese repeatedly offered to permit the bishop to leave China. He refused their offers, insisting that he should remain, if only as an inspiration for the Chinese faithful.

In 1956, after the Shanghai office was closed, he was moved from his quarters to the Christ the King rectory, located on the opposite side of China's largest city. At the rectory he was placed among priests who had deserted the church of Rome for the schismatic Catholic Church in China. He refused to say Mass in the church because of the way Holy Communion was being distributed there by the priests of the breakaway church. He said Masses in his room.

Appeals From Outside
His colleagues outside China tried to persuade Walsh to accept the Chinese offer of passage to Freedom. The Maryknoll superior general had a letter smuggled to him hinting that perhaps he should leave because of his health and his doubtful value to the church under the circumstances.

Walsh replied, "I cannot estimate the good I may be doing, apart from the settled missionary rule that kept me here. In any case a priest seldom knows if he is an asset to the church in his particular place at any time."

That Nickel Ain't What She Used To Be; But It Can Buy

By MIKE WESTER

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—Ever wonder what the value of the nickel is today?

In these days of rising living costs almost everyone has begun to worry about the purchase power of a dollar. It caused a Texas Tech University journalism professor to wonder just what the nickel will buy. He assigned a feature writing class the project of investing a nickel to purchase something—and then to write about it.

True enough the nickel is like the old gray mare—ain't what it used to be. But, as teacher Tanner Laine hoped, the students were able to use their imagination and come up with several values of the small coin.

A nickel can get earmuffs, chopsticks, napkin rings, spoons, bubble gum, old phonograph records, nails, a cigar and a live turtle. Possibly the most valuable things from a nickel today are happiness and experience.

One student used a nickel to purchase an ice cream cone for a little, ragged boy. She turned in a slip, "One Ice Cream cone - One Happy Boy."

Another offered a nickel for a thought, and learned that no longer could you get a person's thoughts for a penny—today they are a nickel.

One student bought a postcard, but was instructed it would have been worth more had it been used to write home for a $10 moneygram.

Another reported a lecture from a merchant about inflation and the dollar being worth only 67 cents. But at a foreign students' dinner she picked up a pair of chopsticks for only five cents.

One young man shopped a discount store until he came up with 79 nails. These he turned over to a little boy, helped him drag up scrap lumber and build a castle. He reported his five cents purchased the imagination of a small boy—the biggest thing of all.

But the winning purchase—and the "A" for the day in feature writing—went to the student who invested.

From the inflation-dominated world of the 1970s came one coed with a live turtle and a box of food, rented for one day. It turned into the larger investment, as the renting merchant hoped it would, when she decided not to part with the pet and went ahead and purchased it.

Although the days of nickel cups of coffee and five cent popsicles are just about gone, Laine proved that with a little ingenuity the students could get a lot for their money and come back with an interesting feature. What's a nickel worth to you?

The Art Of Karate Appeals To Young Women In Area

A TWO-MAN DEFENSE MOVE . . . against two assailants is practiced by John Roberts, right, Susan Keys of Herndon, Va., and Mike Lesem, as Bill McDonald looks on.

By ROSALIE TROTMAN

Reflector Woman's Editor

A group of young women in this area are involved in learning an unusual art — karate. The females are members of either the ECU Karate Club or taking the course through Pitt Technical Institute.

Instructor Bill McDonald says, "Karate is not only one of the most effective means of self-defense known to man, but it is also one of the best means of physical fitness. This is due to the fact that in all moves, each muscle in the body is utilized."

"Everyone should know some means of self-defense, both men and women."

McDonald recommends that girls or women learn the art due to the fact that it takes no physical size or strength due to size. The power in karate comes from focus, posture, speed and breath control.

According to McDonald, karate dates back to sometime before Christ and originated in India from Buddhist monks. The reason for karate is that these monks, because of religion did not have a lot of physical activity and did not carry weapons but had many sacred jewels and idols which they moved from temple to temple. When transporting these jewels, they were constantly robbed so in turn, a group of them went up on a mountain and fabricated a means of self-defense which took no strength or size to execute.

Many of these chosen monks supposedly spent many years deriving this means of self-defense. The knowledge traveled to China, Korea and Owinawa and was actually first publicized in Japan, where the first commercial studios were operated.

Karate Movements

"Some people compare or associate the movements in karate with ballet or dance moves because karate moves are graceful and have perfected form. This is displayed in kata, which is a prearranged fighting movement that the student goes through to show that he or she has perfected the movements and can execute them with proper balance and power."

"All the many females I have taught have been through the ECU club and Pitt Tech. To each one, it was or is something different — exercise, self-defense or confidence which they gained from the knowledge of such an art," McDonald added.

"The average female going into karate has an impediment — due to fear of losing her identity as a feminine being. This has a tendency to inhibit their ability to capture the art as it was intended."

"In order for a girl or woman to progress in karate, she must first enter the dojo (karate gym) with a desire to compete with male students on their level. Girls can progress just as men do when working for a belt degree. The females are graded just as the men and are not given any special favors," remarked McDonald.

"There are several misconceptions about karate which should be cleared up. One concerns the vulnerability of anyone who claims to know karate. Many people have mentioned stories about people who claimed to know karate but were badly beaten in actual fight. To state 'I know karate' is meaningless without some indication of the degree karate is 'known.'

A person who learns the scale on the piano can be said to 'know the piano,' but he or she would be badly defeated if he attempted to play Tchaikovsky's 'First Piano Concerto.'

"It takes years of practice to perfect karate and there are few experts in the United States. These people are not those found in bars openly broadcasting their knowledge of karate," said McDonald.

"Many people think that karate is nothing more than striking with the edge of the hand instead of the fist. That is not true. It should also be pointed out that conditioning the hands, making it possible to break boards or bricks, is not essential to the practice of karate. However, it does illustrate the remarkable effectiveness of karate techniques," he continued.

McDonald's interest in karate dates back to the time when his brother was in the Special Forces and was stationed at Fort Bragg. Then a student in high school, he went to observe drills and workouts in karate.

While a student at East Carolina University, McDonald worked out in the gym and was approached by several students, who wanted to know what he was doing. He then started instructing them in the art of self-defense and from there a club was formed with McDonald as instructor.

McDonald has also instructed SBI, ABC and police officers, college students, at the YMCA in Charlotte, professional wrestlers, business men, doctors and lawyers.

He has earned his third degree black belt and will be tested this summer for this fourth degree black belt. He has been an instructor for about nine years.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

A Greenville student, Miss Johnnie Lew Coughlan, flew to Russia yesterday to begin a three-week May term study tour of the Soviet Union along with 10 other North Carolina Wesleyan classmates.

Corbitt Rushing, assistant professor political science at Wesleyan, is the instructor-director of the study trip.

Concluding N.C. Wesleyan's new 4-4-1 calendar year, the May term (dubbed "minimester" by students) is devoted entirely to special one-subject projects, 26 of them campus-based and seven off campus.

The Russian tour is expected to offer a broad exposure to Soviet culture and society, thereby providing a better student background for academic work in comparative government and Russian history. The study trip will include Moscow during that city's observance of May Day celebration, Kiev, Leningrad and excursions to points of interest near those cities.

Other off-campus projects scheduled are "Western Man" in England, a minimester in Mexico, a field trip to Florida, a tour of German-speaking countries, an Old Salem workshop, Winston-Salem, and individual projects at the Smithsonian Institute, in senate offices and various government bureaus.

A junior political studies major at Wesleyan, Johnnie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Coughlan, 803 Willow St.

Miss Elaine Dawkins, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Howard G. Dawkins of Greenville, has been elected to two offices at Meredith College, Raleigh.

A member of the Astrotekton Society, she will serve the 1970-71 school term as first vice president. The society is one of the two service societies on the Meredith campus.

She will also serve as an upperclass dormitory hall proctor. A sophomore, Elaine is a music education major.

Also named an upperclass dormitory hall proctor at Meredith was Mary Emily Thompson, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Horace G. Thompson of Winterville.

Miss Claudia Barnhill of Rt. 1, Stokes, was elected by the student body to a major student office in campus elections at Meredith.

During the next school term, she will serve as secretary of the Interdormitory Board.

MISS SCARLETT MARLENE FORSYTH . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edison L. Forsyth of Raleigh, who announce her engagement to James Bedford Bryant, son of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Bryant of Kinston. The wedding will take place Aug. 9.

(The Truth About Chintz)

Someone coined the term "chintzy" purporting to convey the impression that this delightful material is cheap and flimsy. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Chintz is printed cotton, glazed or unglazed. It comes in a wide variety of patterns and colors. It imparts dignity and gaiety. It's used in the home as broad. A single room may employ to excellent advantage several chintzes, preferably of different patterns.

Chintz is perfect for upholstered furniture slip covers. These slip covers should be very carefully made, with particular attention given to the positioning of the pattern with regard to seats and backs.

Chintz curtains can bring a warmth to a room seldom attained by any other material. Several sets in different colors provide refreshing changes.

'Council On Aging' Is Topic For WSCS Meet

There's nothing wrong with becoming aged; the aged have so much to offer, stated Frances Gross, director of programs and organizations of the North Carolina Governor's Council on Aging for the Pitt County-Greenville area.

Now in its first year of programming, Miss Gross said a home has been provided on Greene Street and a source of good programming in literature, art and music is underway.

She said there are about 6,000 aged people to reach in this area and challenged the Women's Society of Christian Service members of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church to contact these people either by telephone or visit. "But," she said, "if you promise them you are going to do something, do it; if not, let them know why."

Miss Gross was the speaker at the monthly meeting for the Methodist ladies. She was introduced by Mrs. J. Knott Proctor Jr., vice president of the society.

Following a devotion led by Mrs. Adrian Brown and the speaker's talk, the president of the Women's Society, Mrs. William H. Taft Sr., gave a report on the district meeting of the North Carolina Methodist Conference held in Wilmington recently.

NCFWC Annual Convention Ended Friday

WINSTON-Salem—Delegates to the NCFWC Convention representing some 15,000 women met here for their 68th annual session.

They heard resolutions presented by the chairman of the Resolutions Committee, Mrs. Kern Holoman of Raleigh.

One resolution was the NCFWC recommend to the present governor that he keep in mind Justice Susie Sharpe's legal competence in her 20 years of private practice and 12 years on the Superior Court Bench and at a propitious time, seek her appointment as the first woman member of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other resolutions discussed were on Mental Health, community colleges, fine arts, continuing adult education, scholarships and conservation.

A highlight of the convention was the presentation of many state awards. The Greenville Woman's Club was second runner up in literature, drama and public speaking for the Zoe Kincaid Brockman Award.

The Williamston Woman's Club was second runner up in music for the Maggie Mae Jones cup.

New Woman In New Society?

PARIS (WNS) — "Is there a new woman for the new society?" Minister of Finance and Economy Valery Giscard d'Estaing asked the women's committee of his Independent Republican Party. Lawyer Evelyn Boye Carre, chairwoman, promptly answered after meeting with committee heads, "No, because there is not yet a new society. However, we are marching toward it and must be careful to keep the sweetness of life and its environment. Adapting to their new political and professional responsibilities, women must not forget their responsibilities as women. The new woman is the eternal woman. Feminine integration is acquired. Now it must be lived."

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor

Dr. J.W. Batten was keynote speaker at the 35th annual Fine Arts Luncheon held yesterday at the Woman's Club Building.

Chairman of the Department of Secondard Education at East Carolina University, Dr. Batten spoke on "The Time Is Short."

"The time is short, because in this busy world, you are privileged to have lived from the slow age to the space age — from the Model A car to jet travel.

" . . . sometimes people don't appreciate what you do. Time is short in which we have to make our mark. We must think of a functional way of writing and functional way of speaking," he remarked.

Dr. Batten is the author of four books, "Stars, Atoms and God," "Research As A Tool For Understanding," "Our Neighbors In Space," and "Soils." He was introduced by Dr. Ralph Brimley.

Mrs. J. O. Savage, chairman of the Creative Writing Contest, presented silver traveling awards to the following winners in the writing contest:

Elizabeth Savage bowl, for best elementary composition, Susan Tacker, age seven; Elizabeth Utterback award, best story for children and the Eunice McGee award, for best children's poem, Mrs. Ann Briley Grimes;

Hilliard Rogers bowl, for the best high school essay and Helen Jones Perkins award, for best high school poem were won by Miss Christie Speir;

James Orville Moye award, for the best high school story went to Donald Fleming; and Eva Berry Harris award, for best lyric poem, Jane Marston.

Two awards were presented to twin brothers, Ola Forbes Jr. for the best adult short story, received the Virginia Collier Tripp award, and for the best essay, Tom Forbes received the Janie Gold Starling award.

Mrs. Dink James, luncheon chairman, introduced special guests and recognized the following book clubs represented:

Round Dozen of Bethel; Entre Nous; Round Table; Atheneum; Clio; Inter Se; Chathan and Inglis Fletcher, all of Greenville.

Mrs. James announced that the annual Sidewalk Art Show would be held Friday and Saturday, May 1-2, on the grounds of the Greenville Art Center from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Mrs. George Clapp, president of the Greenville Woman's Club, gave the invocation and welcomed guests to the luncheon. The Author's Luncheon is sponsored annually by the Woman's Club.

A program of special music was presented by Miss June Laine, soloist, accompanied by Walton Ferrell, both students at East Carolina University.

I Dreamt I Dwelt In A Plastic Foam House

By KARREN A. MILLS
Associated Press Writer

MINNETRISTA, Minn. (AP) — Imagine living in an immense snow cave with rooms carved into irregular shapes and archways and partitions sculpted in free form.

As in a child's snow castle, curves form the basic lines of the James Littlejohn home.

The home, named Ensulptic, is made of plastic foam.

The home, named Ensulptic, is made of plastic foam.

There are no corners; the ceiling varies in height as in a cave; and most of the 10 rooms blend into one another. Two bedrooms and three baths are the only rooms separated by doors.

Ensulptic — Environmental Sculpture in Plastic — is made of polyurethane foam sprayed over burlap panels. The outside shell resembles a tent. Its central pier, made of concrete and steel, is way off-center.

The foam on the outside of the structure is coated with fiberglass. The inside is spray-painted to seal the walls, which have a rough, pebbly texture.

Ensulptic is designed to fit into its natural setting, a hilly area with a lot of trees about 25 miles west of Minneapolis. Its light brown soil color and rough texture do not detract from the scenery.

Littlejohn, who quit his job as an electronics equipment salesman and is now president of a company promoting the plastic houses, views foam as a popular building material of the future.

"It's more natural to live in a foam home than a house made of conventional materials," Littlejohn said. "Prior to this time, the shape of the building materials has dictated the shape of a house."

Littlejohn said the plastic material is very durable, and is much easier and cheaper to repair than wood.

"You may make a small dent in the wall if you strike it hard with your fist, but your fist will be a lot worse off," he noted.

However, he added, that the plastic can be damaged by sharp objects. His two cats like to run up and down slanting surfaces in the house, and their claws had marred the paint and dented the foam.

The plastic can be quickly patched with papier-mache or more foam, Littlejohn said, and the walls look like new after they have been fixed.

Real-Life Role Will Continue

LONDON (WNS) — Patricia Phoenix became acquainted with pubs by acting in a TV series in which she had to be continually popping in and out of one. Now that the program has ended, she has bought her own pub at Buxworth. "It is 200 years old, and I'm changing the policy slightly," reported the actress. "In addition to good beer, we shall serve coffee and soup for those who don't want a drink. I'm also putting a trailer in the backyard where those who have a few too many can sleep it off."

Family's Junk Saver May Need Medical Examination

(C 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)
DEAR ABBY: I am turning to you with a situation which has gone on for years, but now it's become unbearable. My mother's hobby is "junking." For years she's haunted thrift shops, stores where sales are going on, and also antique shops. She has found some items which she has restored and resold, which is fine, as it kept her busy and she's even made it pay.
 Now the problem is this. She keeps bringing me stuff I cannot use and do not want. For instance, partial sets of dishes, beat up pots and pans, and today she brought me a hideous orange knit dress which was apparently somebody's first attempt at knitting.
 My father tells me that she now goes to the grocery stores where sales are advertised and she lugs home large quantities of groceries. He says their basement is lined with 20-pound sacks of sugar. What would you do? Thanks.
EXHAUSTED

DEAR EXHAUSTED: I would get her to a doctor for a complete examination, after having alerted the doctor to what you've told me. Her behavior is symptomatic of a mental disturbance. And hurry, before her collection starts to collect rodents.

DEAR ABBY: Parents complain because their kids are bull-headed, won't listen, and refuse to profit from somebody else's experience. Well, here's a switcheroo for you. One of the parents died after a long and happy marriage, and the remaining parent is now getting himself into a mess like you wouldn't believe. It's sickening to watch. And nobody can tell him anything either. Kids at least have the excuse that they are young. But what's the parents' excuse? DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Second childhood, maybe? Or the same excuse the kids have—lack of experience.

DEAR ABBY: I am 49 and Henry (made up name) is 52. We've been married for 33 years.

A year ago Wilma, a friend and fellow worker of Henry's, lost her husband, so Henry has been driving a mile out of his way each morning and evening to take her to and from work. Wilma doesn't drive. She is well-groomed, attractive, always smiling and very friendly.

For some time now I have had the feeling that Henry has been enjoying Wilma's company too much. On his day off he seems restless and bored, and is constantly thinking up excuses to go to her house. [She has the same day off.]

When I ask him if there is anything between them he denies it, but he looks guilty.

She is 65, but looks much younger. How can I get him to forget her? Should I ignore it, or try to get to the bottom of it? JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: Ignore it. If she's 65, she should be retiring soon and the rides to and from work will cease. Out of sight. Out of mind.

DEAR ABBY: The envy of every woman today are the women who have saved their dainty shoes of long ago. In summer, like bootleggers, we pass the word along when we find a store with a supply of toeless, sling pumps and slim, graceful heels.

There was a day when I drooled over all the pretty shoes to buy and my closet floors were wall to wall with them. No more. I merely "nail" my one pair of "horse shoes" to the wall until the next day. JANE IN CHEYENNE

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

More Parents Reflect A Boom

NEW YORK (UPI)—Numbers of parents are on the rise, reflecting the birth boom of the 1950s.

The National Industrial Conference Board estimates that between now and 1980, the parent population will increase by 23 per cent. The pace is faster than during any comparable period since World War II. By 1980, nearly three out of every five families, totaling 35.5 million, will have a child living at home.

Hard To Believe Thieu As Inept As Detractors Say

By MARGARET A. KILGORE
SAIGON (UPI)—To meet President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam, it's hard to believe he is the inept figure his detractors claim to be the world.

He projects, in person, as a sincere, witty, articulate and above-average politician in the kissing-of-babies, glad-handing tradition understood by his Western counterparts.

Arriving in the delta village of Can Tho on a recent trip, he moved immediately into the crowd seeking out the venerated village elders for a special handshake and pat on the arm. His three security guards remained discreetly in the background giving him freedom of movement.

The Vietnamese are naturally reserved people and although the villagers responded to his greetings with smiles and handshakes, there was no effort to crowd around him or seek his autograph in the typical Western way of dealing with very-important-personages.

A Stern Ruler

There is no doubt that Thieu runs a repressive government, as witnessed by the fact he seizes individual editions of newspapers critical of his regime with great regularity and has a proclivity for jailing his opponents—particularly legislators and student demonstrators.

He defends these actions by saying that a nation with war on its soil cannot permit dissent the way the United States does.

Thieu seems perfectly aware of the criticism he receives both at home and abroad. Of his chief U.S. critic, Sen. J. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Thieu has remarked, "How would Fulbright like the Communists to take over the United States?"

But to his own countrymen and to American officials in Saigon, he has come under increasing criticism for his heavy-handed approach to problems and his aloofness from advisers.

Taxes Unpopular

Aside from the obvious war problems, Thieu made himself unpopular with the Vietnamese "man in the street" last fall when he instituted an across-the-board austerity tax program. High taxes coupled with inflation and a shaky currency make the economy probably his biggest domestic headache.

Thieu has indicated he will seek reelection in September of 1971, although he has said it is too early to decide. Those most prominently mentioned to oppose him are Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh, military hero of the coup which overthrew the hated Ngo Dinh Diem regime in the early '60s, Sen. Tran Van Don, respected leader of the opposition people's bloc, and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, who has been kept in the background in recent months.

At 47, Thieu appears younger and thinner in person than he does on television, but he is greying rapidly.

Rural Background

Born in the village of Ninh Chu on the South China Sea, Thieu, whose name means "one who ascends," was the son of a farmer and fisherman. His older brother, Hieu, a Paris-trained lawyer and the family's chief meal ticket, sent Thieu to school in Saigon and Hue.

Thieu had just finished high school when World War II began and the Japanese came. His first contact with the United States was an accidental bombing of Ninh Chu by American planes aiming for Japanese coastal installations.

He recalls that "everyone at the time believed that the Japanese had given us our liberty" from the French.

When the French came back in 1945, Thieu enlisted in the Viet Minh, the forerunners of the Viet Cong. He was a district chief, but his awakening came quickly.

Trained By French

"By August of 1946, I knew the Viet Minh were Communists. They shot people. They overthrew the village committee. They seized the land."

Thieu went off to Saigon and joined the merchant marine, winning an officer's rating. About that time, the French were opening their first officer class for the newly-created Vietnamese army. Thieu enlisted and graduated at 26 with a second lieutenant's commission and orders to take command of an infantry platoon in the delta.

From then on, he moved steadily up the military ladder. In 1956 and again in 1960, he was sent to the United States for specialized military training.

He served four years as commandant of the national military academy at Dalat, which has helped provide him with a reservoir of support from among many middle-grade officers.

Trusted By Diem

His entry into politics came in December, 1962, when Diem assigned him to the command of the 5th, or anticoup, Division, strategically positioned just north of Saigon.

Diem's trust in Thieu was misplaced, however. Only 11 months later, the young colonel led one of the 5th Division's regiments in the coup against Diem. In the wake of Diem's overthrow, Thieu won his general's stars and the secretary-generalship of the junta that took over.

A former Confucian Buddhist, Thieu converted to Roman Catholicism when he married a pretty delta girl, Nguyen Thi Mai An Won, in 1951. They have two children, a boy, Loc, and a girl, Anh, who are at school out of the country.

Marble Slabs On Ernie's Grave

HONOLULU (AP) — Visitors to Ernie Pyle's grave were ruining the grass, so the White House was asked what could be done about it.

Place marble slabs on the three sides of the grave, came the word from Washington.

Rampants Rally To Defeat New Bern

Homers Bring Indian Victory

CLEVELAND (AP) — Solo home runs by Tony Horton and Ray Fosse paced an 11-hit attack as the Cleveland Indians squeezed past the Chicago White Sox 6-5 Saturday.

Cleveland scored two runs in the first, third and fifth innings after Chicago jumped to a quick 1-0 lead in the first on Carlos May's second homer of the season.

The Indians went ahead 2-1 in the first as Ted Uhlaender reached on an error by Chicago starter Tommy John, advanced on Graig Nettles' single and scored on a single by Vada Pinson. Nettles scored when Horton bounced into a double play.

Nettles reached in the third on a force out, advanced on Pinson's single and scored on a single by Horton. Roy Foster doubled to score Pinson.

The White Sox scored twice in the fourth on singles by May and Bill Melton, a force out, a throwing error by Eddie Leon and a single by Bobby Knoop. Horton and Fosse hit their homers in the fifth, offsetting a two-run Chicago rally in the eighth that pushed the White Sox to within 6-5, on singles by Gail Hopkins, Ed Herrmann and Tom McGraw, a wild pitch, a single by Walt Williams and Luis Aparicio's sacrifice fly.

Beard Grabs The Lead; Player Faces Protest

By BOB GREEN
RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Frank Beard fired a four-under-par 68 Saturday and clung to a diminishing lead in the third round of the $150,000 Tournament of Champions while Gary Player was confronted with the first formal - and orderly - protest of his current American tour.

Beard, the 1969 leading money winner, had a 54-hole total of 202, 14 under par on the sun-splashed La Costa Country Club course.

He held a two-stroke lead over British Open Champion Tony Jacklin, who clipped one stroke off Beard's 36-hole margin with a five-under-par 67.

"This Beard is unbelievable," the personable little Englishman said. "It looks like you have to break 60 to catch him."

Masters champion Billy Casper, who had four consecutive birdies on the back side, had a 68 for 208 and was along in third place, six strokes back.

He was followed by Player, the defending title-holder in this prestige-laden event, who had a 69 for 209. Australian Bruce Crampton slipped to a 72 for 210.

Arnold Palmer moved up a little with a 69 and was alone at 211. Jack Nicklaus, 72, and Dale Douglass, 71, followed at 212. Lee Trevino, this year's leading money winner, shot himself out of it with a 77 for 218.

A Negro man, who identified himself as John F. Williams of San Diego, appeared on the course wearing a white shirt which bore the crudely lettered words: "No Ashe, No Player." Palyer has been the object of some criticism and rumored threats because of his nation's racial policies. H has been the subject of intense security precautions since his arrival in this country seven weeks ago.

He was followed by at least seven uniformed police, with plain clothes men scattered in the gallery.

Williams said he was not a member of a protest group and made the gesture only as a personal protest. He applauded politely when Player was announced on the first tee, then followed in the gallery, with a uniformed policeman lurking at his elbow.

"I had a chat with him Williams before the round," Player said. "A very courteous man. I'm going to have a cup of tea with him now."

Beard, who has had only three bogeys in three rounds over the 7,114-yard course, said "this is a game of the fewest misses." The soft-spoken, conservative man from Louisville spiked his round with an eagle three on the second hole, chipping in from 60 feet.

He birdied the fourth from eight feet and turned in 33.

But he bogeyed the 10th, three putting. Frank got the stroke back with a 20 foot iron the next hole and had a two-putt birdie on the par five 12th.

He missed the green and missed an 18 inch putt for a bogey on the 14th and canned a 15-footer for his final bird on the 15th.

Jacklin, who stayed at Beard's shoulder all day, had six birdies and a single bogey. He finally managed to chop one stroke off Beard's lead with a 15-foot birdie putt on the very difficult 18th hole.

"I'm going to have to keep an eye on Frank," he joked. "I think he's skipping some holes."

Rose Picks Up Third Conference Win, 7-3

Rose High School's Rampants picked up their third Division II, Eastern 4-A baseball victory Friday with a 7-3 romp over the New Bern Bears.

The victory boosted the Rampants mark to 3-1 in the loop and kept them hot on the heels of unbeaten Kinston, the next Rampant foe.

It was a tough game for the Rampants for the first four innings, but after that, they were in complete control as they pulled out into a good lead.

The Bears, however, had threatened to hand the Rampants their second loss (pending the outcome of a protest in the lone Rose loss), with early runs.

The Bears struck first in the opening frame. With one out, James Cayton singled to right and moved up as Jimmy Hill grounded out.

Chris Williams sent a sharp grounder through the hole between short and third, scoring Cayton for a 1-0 New Bern lead.

Rose came right back to tie it up, however. With two outs Joe West hit a long drive into right center and pulled up with a triple. Tommy Durham brought him home with a single down the first base line.

But New Bern proved hard to hold down. They came back with another run in the second. Harry Moser led off the inning with a walk. He was balked to second. Moser then moved into third as West lost a low pitch between his feet and couldn't find it in time to make the play. A wild pitch then brought him across for a 2-1 Bear edge.

It held that way until the bottom of the fourth despite Bear threats in the third and fourth. Then Rose struck for the lead, getting two runs. They never trailed again.

Durham opened the inning with a single to short left. Jimmy Paige walked, and Kim Harbin laid down a perfect bunt, beating it out to lead the bases.

Russ Smith came on with a single into short right, scoring both runners and giving Rose a 3-2 edge.

In the fifth, the Rampants added another run. West picked up a single into center with one out. Paige beat out an infield hit, moving West to second. He then scored on a single by Harbin.

Rose pushed over three more in the bottom of the sixth. With one out, Larry Hatton was hit by a pitch. Bill Lee reached on an error.

West sent a slow roller to third, and in the attempt to get Lee, the ball was played late, and thrown wide, scoring Hatton, and putting runners on second and third. Paige singled in Lee, and Harbin followed with his third hit, scoring West for a 7-2 edge.

Winning hurler Jimmy Bond got into a little trouble in the seventh before it was over, however. With one out, Cayton singled. Bond struck out the next batter, but then worked up a full count on Williams. He sent the next pitch into deep right center, scoring Cayton, and ending up with a triple. But Bond struck out the ex-batter to end the game.

Harbin and West led the Rose hitting with three each, while Durham and Paige each picked up a pair.

Bond struck out 11 and walked four in getting the win. He allowed six hits.

The Rampants travel to Kinston on Tuesday to meet the front-running Red Devils.

Oakland Sets Down Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck Dobson pitched a three - hitter for his first victory of the season as the Oakland A's blanked the New York Yankees 3-0 Saturday.

Dobson, who went into the game with an 0-3 record and a 9.20 earned run average, scattered three singles in going the distance for the first time. A sixth-inning double play helped the Oakland right-hander, a 15-game winner last season, out of his only serious jam.

The A's nicked loser Stan Bahnsen for a second inning run on Don Mincher's ground rule double and a single by catcher Dave Duncan, then pushed over two unearned runs in the fourth with the help of an error by Yankee catcher Thurman Munson.

A walk to Sal Bando, Dick Green's double and an intentional pass to Reggie Jackson filled the bases with one out in the fourth.

Center fielder Bobby Murcer then grabbed Duncan's short fly ball and fired a one-hop strike to the plate, but Bando jarred the ball out of Munson's glove. Dobson followed with a double, delivering another insurance run.

Bahnsen, 1-2, was lifted for a pinch hitter in the fifth after yielding five hits. His departure marked the 17th time in as many games this year that the Yankees' starting pitcher has failed to finish.

Spencer Wins Qualifying Race

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — G. C. Spencer of Jonesboro, Tenn., was the winner Saturday in a qualifying race that completed the 40-car field for Sunday's Virginia 500 stock car race.

Richard Petty of Randleman, N. C., will be at the head of the pack when the NASCAR Grand National event gets the green flag at 1 p.m., EDT.

Petty set a one-lap track record of 83.095 miles per hour in Friday's opening round of qualifying and won the pole position for Sunday's $50,000 race.

Petty, in a 1970 Plymouth, will be shooting for his ninth Martinsville Speedway victory in the 500-lap, 262 1/2-mile event on the .525-mile asphalt oval. He has won the circuit's past three outings here and five of the past six.

The three-time national champion, current leader in the drivers' standings that determine the season title, will share the front row with Donnie Allison of Hueytown, Ala., Friday's second fastest qualifier at 82.609 m.p.h. in a 1970 Ford.

Bobby Isaac of Catawba, N. C., and Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Donnie's brother, in a pair of Dodges, make up the second row.

In the third row will be Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., in the race's only factory-supported Mercury, and Dave Marcis of Skyland, N. C., in a Dodge.

Red Roy Yarborough of Columbia, S. C., who won a record $188,000 in purses last year, was a disappointed eighth in the Friday trials. His Ford shares the fourth row in the lineup with an independently sponsored Chevrolet driven by Friday Hasser of Chattanooga, Tenn.

In Saturday's 20-lap qualifying race, which determined 21st through 40th starting place, Spencer drove his Plymouth into the lead four laps from the finish, passing a Ford driven by Bill Champion of Norfolk, who finished second.

In another Saturday event, a 100-lap race for NASCAR's late model modified cars, Ray Hendrick of Richmond led all the way for his 10th Martinsville victory and his third in a row.

Jerry Cook of Rome, N. Y., finished second and Jimmie Hensley of Ridgeway, Va., was third. All three drove Camaros.

My Dad George Wins Derby Prep

By BOB COOPER
Associated Press Sports Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — My Dad George roared from last place to score a narrow victory over Terlago, surviving a foul claim along the way, in Saturday's Stepping Stone Purse at Churchill Downs.

Jockey Bob Whaley, aboard fourth - finishing Sailstone, calmed My Dad George bothered him as the Florida Derby winner zipped through a narrow hole at the quarter - pole en route to the front of the pack.

The stewards disallowed the claim, however, and left My Dad George's number at the top of the board.

Behind Terlago, in order, were Cassie Red, Sailstone, No No Billy and Hilkey Way in the seven - furlong Kentucky Derby prep timed in 1:23 3-5.

My Dad George, in the violet and white of Broadway producer Raymond Curtis, trailed by as much as 10 lengths with a half-mile to go but flew to the front when jockey Ray Broussard called for speed.

As Cassie Red, denied his front - running ways until the final half - mile, began to fade in the last 16th, My Dad George and Terlago ran as a team until the last 10 lengths.

Hilkey Way, a Derby nominee like the others but with only one victory in 13 career starts, set the early pace and forced Cassie Red into a faster start than usual.

Terlago, with Bill Mahorney subbing for Derby rider Bill Shoemaker, was held just a few lengths off the early pace and made his move to the front with 3/4ths of a mile left.

Henning Takes Tallahassee Lead

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — South African Harold Henning scorched the Killearn County Club course with a record-tying 64 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after the third round of the $50,000 Tallahassee Open Saturday.

Henning, who "cleaned up like a bus boy" on the greens, carded eight birdies as he came from five strokes off the pace to match the course record set by Larry Hinson in the 1969 Tallahassee Open.

His 54-hole total was 207.

Fred Marti was in second at 208 after a third-round 68. Marti had been bunched in a tie with five other players for second place after the second round.

Veterans Larry Mowry, Sam Carmichael, Joe Porter and rookie John Miller were at 210.

Second-round co-leaders Jack McGowan and Bobby Greenwood fell far back at 211. Both had putting troubles and shot one-over 73s Saturday.

The 36-year-old Henning had shared the lead the first day with McGowan, but soared to 76 Friday. He changed his putting style and it cured the problem that had plagued him during the first two rounds.

"I started putting back-handed," Henning said. "It's the first time I've ever done it, and I just regret I didn't start it 10 years ago."

On the front nine Henning birdied the fifth, seventh and ninth holes with putts of four feet, 18 inches and 15 feet.

He started the back nine with a four-foot birdie on 10, and dropped in birdie putts of 8, 3, 10 and 8 feet on the 13th, 14th, 16th and 17th holes.

The final 18 holes are scheduled Sunday for the tournament, a satellite event for the Tournament of Champions in California this week. The winner will pick up $10,000 first prize money.

Pirates Add New Grid Coach

GREENVILLE—With the hiring of 30-year-old Albert Ralph Ferguson of the University of Maryland, the football coaching staff at East Carolina University is now complete.

Head Coach Mike McGee announced the addition of Ferguson to the Pirate staff Saturday morning, shortly before the Purple-Gold Game kickoff.

"It's with extreme pleasure that I announce Al Ferguson has joined the East Carolina team," said McGee. "He will be in charge of the offensive line and represents a fine addition to our staff. Like the other assistants, Al Ferguson is a first-class person as well as being a winner on the field."

The only batchelor on ECU's six-man staff, Ferguson comes to the Pirates directly from the University of Maryland staff where he coached the defensive line. He also has coached at Washington University and DePaw following a very successful six years as one of the top high school coaches in Alabama.

A native of Joe Wheeler Dam, Ala., Ferguson played quarterback for Florence (Ala.) State and Auburn University. He graduated from Florence State with a degree in chemistry in 1962.

The other assistants are receiver coach Sonny Randle, offensive backfield and head freshman coach Henry Trevathan, head defensive coach Jerry McGee, and defensive line and linebacker coach Carl Reese.

Ferguson will assume his duties immediately.

David Reid Is Working For Better Highway Safety

Among many beneficial measures affecting you, David Reid is concerned with Highway safety. David Reid realizes that making our highways safe for motorists and pedestrians is one of our most urgent needs. This is why David Reid fought for a realistic implied consent law to curb drunk drivers. As a lawyer, David Reid believes in protecting the legal rights of accused drunk drivers, but more important — getting the drunk driver off our highways.

Bluegill Fishing Is Not Immoral

By JIM DEAN
RALEIGH — There must be something at least mildly immoral about catching bluegill bream and shellcrackers on a flyrod.

How else can you explain why the combination of panfish and flyrods produces such pure pleasure. It's so much fun, it must be evil.

No. Thankfully, there is nothing immoral about it, and if there were, I'd resign myself to a wicked, wicked life — especially this time of year.

Right now, the bluegills, shellcrackers and other panfish are on the banks in most ponds scooping out spawning beds. In fact, a great many are already spawning.

Over most of the state, anglers are already whipping the state's more than 60,000 farm and irrigation ponds to a froth. Most of them have discovered that it is still a couple of weeks early to really catch the spawners in good numbers on popping bugs. Some good strings have been taken on popping bugs, but generally speaking, it's a little early.

Don't let that discourage you from fishing for bluegills and shellcrackers with a flyrod, however. You can catch just as many — and probably more — using a "secret" weapon.

The "secret" weapon is nothing more than a black ant — the kind you see on cards in most tackle stores. These ants cost about 50 cents apiece, and are very simply made. They are usually tied with two humps of heavily lacquered black thread on the shank of the hook and several turns of black hackle feather tied between the humps to simulate an ant's legs. The most popular sizes are eight, ten and twelve. They also come in other colors, but black is my favorite.

To fish the ant effectively, you'll need a fly rod, of course, but it really doesn't make much difference what kind. After fastening about a five or six foot leader (I prefer eight pound test monofilament) to the fly line, then tie on an ant. I often fish two ants, one tied ahead of the other on a dropper.

The technique is very simple. You merely skulk along the edges of the pond, casting the ant up tight against the bank. Most of the fish will be within two or three feet of the bank, and if you don't fish close, you may not catch many.

After casting the fly to the bank, allow the ant to sink for a brief moment, then begin to draw the ant back toward the boat very, very slowly. Since you can't see the fish strike — as with a popping bug — you must be able to detect strikes in some other way. Keep your eye on the end of your fly line where the leader is attached. As you are slowly drawing the black ant away from the bank, you may see the fly line jerk backward an inch or two. Set the hook immediately. If you've been quick enough, you should have a fat bluegill or shellcracker hooked. Sometimes, you can tell that you've had a strike by the swirl in the water where your ant is. At other times, it is difficult to tell exactly when the strike comes, and learning to set the hook consistently may take a few minutes practice. Those who have fished nymphs for trout will recognize the similarity and catch on right away.

Although the black ant is a killer of a lure — particularly this time of year — it would be unfair to suggest that you can't catch fish without one. Actually, any small sinking fly will do the trick. A woolly worm, weighted rubber spider, nymph or wet fly may work just as well. The advantage to the black ant is that it is so durable.

This past weekend, I bugged the banks of a local farm pond for several hours, and in retrospect, it seems as though I must have had a bluegill or shellcracker on the cone constantly. I finally quit, having caught well over 50 nice fish. The two black ants I was using are just as good as the day they were new. Few flies can match that for endurance.

Why a sinking fly will outfish a floating fly this time of year is a mystery to me, but it certainly works more often than not.

The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has no creel limit or size limit on panfish. In fact, the Commission encourages anglers to take as many panfish as possible from ponds, leaving most of the largemouth bass. This will help a pond continue to produce large fish in good quantity rather than a profusion of runty critters.

So go get yourself some ants and have a picnic.

Two N.C. Areas Make 20 Best Site Chart

By JOEL ARRINGTON
The April issue of Sports Afield carries George Laycock's article titled "The 20 Best Areas to Fish and Camp." To Tar Heels, it's not surprising that North Carolina placed two areas in that list — the Cape Hatteras National Seashore and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Just how good is the fishing in the Smokies and on the Outer Banks? Here is what outdoor writers are saying:

—Chuck Meyer in the current Garcia Fishing Annual: The Cape Hatteras National Seashore is "drum country, par excellence. Any man wanting to land a black drum or red drum (channel bass), in the 40 to 50-pound class can't find a better spot than the North Carolina Outer Banks after the departure of the summertime tourist throngs. From April through June, and again from September through early December, this arched eyebrow of sand extending from Cape Henry, Virginia, to Cape Fear, North Carolina, is a fisherman's heaven."

—Jim Rutherford in the May issue of Camping Journal: "You will see streams." (in the Smokies) "More than 600 miles of them lace the park — cold, clear, sparkling. Many of them are well populated with brook, brown and rainbow trout which you may fish for but may not keep, unless you happen to hook a trophy fish of 16 inches or better."

"Outside the park there are many streams that offer good angling for stocked trout. To the south, Fontana Lake is famous for its bass and walleye fishing.

"The Cherokee Indian Reservation offers fine stocked trout fishing in approximately 30 miles of streams and two ponds, stocked twice a week April through October."

—Jerome Robinson in the May issue of Field & Stream: "... we were standing on the one stretch of beach where bonito are commonly seen in the surf. We were at Cape Hatteras, North Carolina, where the Outer Banks push close to the edge of the Gulf Stream and the southerly breeze is strong enough to bring in warm clear water from the offshore current. With the warm water come the bonito in unpredictable numbers. They appear late in April and during May in hit-or-miss surges that show up unpredictably for a few days here and there. Their visits are infrequent through the summer, but they hit the surf again in the early fall."

"One hotspot is the South Beach just under the point of Cape Hatteras. Diamond Shoals, a mile-long sandbar, juts into the belly of the Atlantic at the point where Hatteras Island turns from a north-south to an east-west orientation. Here waves clash head-on into one another in a violent chop that grinds shellfish into chum."

—Robinson in the April issue of Field & Stream: "Fishing with Captain Jessie Ethridge one morning in mid-April of 1969, photographer Hanson Carroll and I landed thirty-four strippers ranging from 2 to just under 7 pounds in three hours ... We trolled ... in and out of the pilings under the William B. Umstead bridge on Route 64 at Manns Harbor ..."

—Lea Lawrence in the April Issue of Outdoor Life: The Outer Banks "is probably the best area in the country to go to at this time of year for a crack at channel bass."

"However, channel bass aren't the only species in these seas. There are albacore, bonito, croakers, king mackerel and whiting, and some early action on billfish is possible."

—And Laycock in Sports Afield: "The year around fish of some kind are caught along the Outer Banks. Summertime anglers concentrate on bluefish, trout, flounder and mullet. Along the Outer Banks are several small fishing villages where charter

Rod And Gun: Weldon Hatchery Set For Eggs

By ROD AMUNDSON
The Wildlife Commission's striped bass hatchery at Weldon is scheduled to begin its annual operation on April 27 or shortly thereafter. The men who operate the hatchery hope that fishermen will bring in only roe strippers with "ripe" eggs. Immature eggs will be accepted, but anglers who bring them in must also provide ripe male fish. Immature eggs can be fertilized after they have been treated with a hormone, but anglers who bring them in will be paid on the basis of the number of eggs that hatch into fry.

The going rate for ripe eggs is $20.00 per million, and a large female can yield as much as $30.00 worth of eggs. The demand for stocking of striped bass will be diminished somewhat this year. Lake Norman has been stocked with fry and fingerlings for several years, but this year, in order to check on growth and age of strippers in that reservoir, none will be stocked. Otherwise, normal stocking procedures will be followed.

Glass container manufacturers, whose products often become litter along the country's streets and highways, may have suffered a slight twinge of conscience. They have formed the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, and the latter has instituted a campaign to buy used bottles and jars. Most of these will be used to manufacture new products. Those that are returnable will be channeled back to appropriate bottlers for re-use. The experiment is being conducted in the Greater Los Angeles area. Eight reception centers have been set up where the institute hopes family and school groups will bring in glass containers as a fund-raising project.

Glass not used for container remanufacture will be pulverized, mixed with ground-up auto and truck tires, and used in an aggregate for highway paving purposes. Pulverized glass can also be used in the manufacture of building materials.

boat are available for those who want to fish for dolphin, bluefish, marlin or sailfish.

Fresh-water fishing over most of the state has busted wide open. Bluegills and shellcrackers have finally become serious about spawning, and during the spawning period will take almost any small bait or lure offered them. Although females may not already have laid their eggs, spawning beds are being scooped out and the fish stay close to these. Offer your lure or bait over one of these spots and you are almost certain to get a strike.

Largemouths are going through the same procedure, but once eggs and milt have been deposited your chances of catching one are almost nil. Warm weather and spring rains have started white bass on their annual spawning activity. These are "free-spawners" in that their eggs are expelled in the lower reaches of tributaries feeding into reservoirs. Once an angler locates a school of white bass he can fill a creel almost as fast as he can get the fish off the hook.

In the coastal area, channel bass, or red drum, are already being taken from the surf and from ocean piers. May is usually the month of greatest red drum fishing. This is followed by a lax summer period and another good run of channels again in autumn. Although research is not complete, there is good evidence that these big coppery scrappers spawn in our river estuaries. Many a sea trout angler has had his line broken or rod permanently kinked by tying into a red drum in the 40-50 pound class.

As April fades into May, the weather along the coast will settle down to reasonable placidity, and both onshore and offshore fishing will be getting into full swing. Many surf-feeding and deep water game fish are migratory, and their northward movement will follow the warming of sea water.

Sailing Regatta Among Activities

WILMINGTON — Sailing regattas featuring both ocean racing and protected waters will be one of the major events during the nine-day, North Carolina's Feast of the Pirates on May 8-16 along the Azalea Coast.

Races in the Sunfield sailboat class are scheduled Saturday, May 9, in Banks Channel at Wrightsville Beach, with three races to be run between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Ocean sailing for the Soling and Cruising classes will be Saturday, May 16, starting at 2 p.m., offshore from Wrightsville Beach. Entries will race along a 10-mile course with the finish line to be in Banks Channel near the Blockade Runner motor hotel, if weather permits the entry of the large craft through Masonboro Inlet.

Kenneth M. Sprunt, vice chairman of the Feast of the Pirates and chairman of the sailboat races, said a number of entries already have been received. He said additional local, out-of-town, and out-of-state entries are welcomed. He said as many as 20 vessels are expected to compete in the offshore race, and with good weather, he forecasts an exciting finish in Banks Channel where thousands of spectators will be able to get an excellent view of the sailing vessels.

The Sunfish contest will include three races over a triangular course, with accumulative points to determine the winner. Trophies will go to first and second place winners in all classes; Sunfish, Soling, and Cruising.

The awards will be made at the Feast of the Pirates Clambake on May 16 at 7:30 p.m., at Lumina on Wrightsville Beach.

Waterway Chart Added To List

By JACK WOLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI)—From the ditty bag:

—A new small craft chart covering the Gulf coast area between West Bay and Santa Rosa Sound on the Florida west coast has been issued by the Coast and Geodetic Survey of the U.S. Commerce Department. This leaves only two areas of the 2,460-mile Intracoastal Waterway along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts not covered by nautical charts especially designed for recreational boaters. One section is between Barataria, La., and Galveston, Tex., and the other is from Aransas Bay, Tex., to Brownsville, Tex. The two areas are presently covered by the larger conventional charts.

gain in the use of fiberglass—reinforced plastics for hull construction. Of the 571 craft displayed, 80.5 per cent were of fiberglass construction, a gain of 4 per cent over the 76.5 per cent displayed in 1969. Wood construction dropped from 4.6 per cent in 1969 to 3 per cent this year, while aluminum hulls showed a gain from 7.7 to 8 per cent.

—The Pennsylvania Fish Commission has a program to provide public entry points at approximately 10-mile intervals along the state's major rivers and streams. Each access area contains a parking lot, boat launching ramp and, depending on location, a boat mooring area and comfort stations.

Poorest start by a 1969 PGA tour winner was the 74 shot by Ken Still in the Citrus Open at Orlando, Fla.

Pitt Tech Institute Holds Open House Today

ARCHITECTURAL DRAFTING

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING

Today Pitt Technical Institute is exhibiting its curriculums at an Open House from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. Demonstrations from Technical, Vocational, Extension, Adult, Industrial Training, and Community Service programs will be held.

Pitt Tech was created by a vote of Pitt County citizens in 1961 as an industrial education center. In 1963, the N.C. Community College Act was passed, converting the school to a technical institute. On May 2, voters will decide by public vote whether Pitt Technical Institute will become a full community college.

Pitt Tech now offers 12 two-year technical curriculums, such as Data Processing and Architectural Drafting; five one-year vocational programs, including Auto Mechanics and Commercial Art. Hundreds of courses through extension at locations throughout the county has resulted in enrollment of 7,000 persons since last July.

In addition, Pitt Tech has supplied training for Pitt County fire departments, rescue squads, hospital staff, and local and state law enforcement agencies. Personnel for Pitt County industries have been trained by Pitt Tech, both on-the-job and at the campus. Top major industries had in-plant training for over 500 persons last year.

Pitt Technical Institute is now seeking to expand its offerings with the addition of the two-year college-transfer program. This addition will make available the first two years of college at a cost and at a place convenient to all Pitt County citizens. According to officials, this can be done without losing any of the technical, industrial or other categories of training now in effect.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—It's a ninth season coming up for NBC's "The Virginian," and there will be some changes in the fall. James Drury remains in the title role, and Doug McClure continues as Trampas. Movie star Stewart Granger becomes the new owner of Shiloh ranch, succeeding John McIntyre, who succeeded Lee J. Cobb. Lee Majors of the late "Big Valley" series becomes a new ranch hand who will alternate with the others as central figure in the episodes. The time element will be advanced about a decade, into the mid-1890's.

It seems now that Jackie Gleason and Red Skelton will not be on the CBS roster next season, although there might be some sort of late compromise with Gleason. Someone has to be out of his network mind.

Jack Gaver

ABC has five new shows slated for the Saturday-Sunday children's programming for the fall. They are "The Reluctant Dragon and Mr. Toad," "Lancelot Link, Secret Chimp Hour," "Will the Real Jerry Lewis Please Sit Down?" and "Scooper and the Double-Deckers" on Saturday and "Jonny Quest," an oldie in a new spot, on Sunday.

Two other westerns, like "The Virginian," go on and on. NBC's "Bonanza" and "The High Chaparral" are in Hollywood production for the new season. Missing from the "Chaparral" family will be Mark Slade in the role of Blue, son of the ranch owner. He is being written out late this season in an episode that shows he has a future as an artist, a reason for him leaving the old homestead to seek fame and fortune in the outside world.

14-Year-Old Singer Now Millionaire

By WILLEM VUUR

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI)—Roll your tongue around this name and place—Hein Nicolaas Theodor Simons of Bleijerheide.

Does that sound right for a great pop star?

Master Hein—or Heintje (Little Hein) as the Dutch call him—has sung his way into the millionaire class at only 14 with more than 10 million single records and albums sold, and starring roles in three German films.

All this has happened in only two years and mostly in two countries, Holland and Germany. When he begins to reach a wider audience—his English is improving fast—the Dutch believe he will be among the leading musical stars in the world.

But this depends on what happens to his voice when it "breaks," an inevitable milestone on the road to manhood. How much will he keep of the three octave range and distinctive tone that have made him a success?

Heintje realizes it may mean the end of his career but he is not worried.

"The change lasts a year at most," he said, "and I hope to come back after that. I love show business and I wouldn't want to have to do without it now. But if the public no longer wants me I'll start breeding horses. I've already got a race horse and five other horses in stables in Munich."

Recently Heintje received the Dutch record industry's "Edison" and in the nationwide television entertainment that accompanied the awards he sang his latest hit, "Ik Houd Van Holland" (I Love Holland). Maurice Chevalier, who presented the Edison to him, remarked:

"When I was a boy of your age I still had a lot to learn. You've mastered it all already."

Heintje is the son of a miner who was invalided by lung trouble and opened a tavern. His son, then 12, used to sing along with the juke box and not only impressed the customers but his discoverer and present manager, Addy Kleijngeld. He was entered in an amateur show as "a little boy with talent."

Heintje knows he is rich but hasn't seen much of the money since most of it has to be banked till he is 18, according to law. However some was used to buy his parents a bungalow and his father has now quit the tavern and is working for his son.

Heintje gets two guilders (56 cents) a week spending money.

Heller Didn't Write Script For 'Catch 22'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Novel-ist Joseph Heller was in town for a look at his baby, "Catch 22."

That's the wild, wonderful World War II novel which has become a modern classic—3½ million copies sold. Heller remained absent while Mike Nichols filmed the $14.7-million movie version which will premiere in June.

Nor was Heller included in the script writing, which was the work of Buck Henry—"The Graduate". This would seem to indicate remarkable forbearance for a man who devoted seven years of his life to writing a novel.

"When I speak at universities, I'm always asked if I had worked on the script," Heller said. "When I say no, there is always a shuffling of feet, indicating the students felt this was wrong. But then I explain to them that novelists do not necessarily make good script writers, especially of their own material. Nor do playwrights."

"Somewhere along about the third rewrite, Mike and Buck Henry showed me the script. I must say I thought it was fine. They had left in scenes that I felt would have to come out of the movie script."

"Catch 22" has had a curious history. Heller wrote the novel at night while he was writing advertising copy for a living. "But even though it took me seven years, I probably couldn't have written it faster if I had been a full-time author," he added. "I can only write about two hours a day."

"Catch 22" was finally published in 1961, three years after his deadline with Simon and Schuster. A few small journals greeted it enthusiastically, but most of the reviews were apathetic or hostile.

"The book never made the best-seller list," Heller recalled. "The publisher had never had a book that sold over 15,000 copies and didn't make the list. 'Catch 22' sold 32,000 in its first year, but it started slowly; only by the end of the year was it selling a thousand copies a week."

"Even the paperback edition wasn't big at first. But then about 1965 it started taking off. The Vietnam war undoubtedly helped. And the book started to be embraced by a whole new generation of college students."

Heller sold the film rights to Columbia before the novel had established itself. The price—$100,000 plus $25,000 as consultant—was not huge by standards of the time. But it was enough to make Heller realize that he no longer need write advertising copy.

Since then he has done remedial writing on the scripts of such films as "Sex and the Single Girl," "Casino Royale" and "Dingus, McGee," and he penned a play, "We Bombed in New Haven"—the writing of it was deceptively easy, then I got involved in the casting and production, which took a vast amount of time."

That delayed the arrival of novel No. 2. "I never felt the compulsion to write a second novel, but now I'm trying to put everything aside to get it done," he said. "If my kids go away for the summer, maybe I will."

Greenville Was Theme Of Show

BLOUNT'S FERTILIZER PLANT . . . is an old rich red color used in many of Ihrie's Greenville landscapes.

Greenville is the theme of a series of paintings and one or two watercolors by East Carolina University senior art student Ralph Ihrie.

"At the new quarters of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association on Evans Street, Ihrie this past week exhibited scenes of the city—familiar and unfamiliar places. Since the contrast to the peaceful solidness of the old familiar buildings. — Some skies are scrubbed in, others are recorded with short vertical strokes.

The brushwork is strong and masculine, amounting almost to an impasto treatment in several paintings. Strong highlights of white glow against the dark palette. Ihrie paints foregrounds with conviction. These have a pleasing flow in white and gray, evoking something of Vlaminck's masterful paintings of roads and lanes.

A native of Louisburg, Ihrie has had one man shows there, and has also been a representative for Louisburg College for shows in the eastern part of the state. Several of his paintings are owned by ECU and by local collectors.

The Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, by using this exhibit as an integral part of their inauguration of a new location, may have hopefully set a precedent in Greenville which could be an ideal way to add a new dimension to opportunities for artists in Greenville to bring their work to the attention of the public. — JERRY RAYNOR

Faculty Artists Learn Free Form Glass Blowing

GATHERING GLASS . . . from the furnace, Robert Edmiston uses a pontil rod.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Free form glass blowing is an art requiring the patience of Job, the lungs of an opera singer, and an intuitive eye for the exact moment of truth in visualizing a form.

It is also a science, involving elements of carpentry and mechanics in preparing basic implements and equipment.

In Greenville, the practice is being revived by a group of ECU faculty members, training under loose from the blowing rod, letting it fall gently on an asbestos pad. With asbestos gloves, the form is then placed in an annealing oven, which has been preheated to 1000 degrees F. "The heat is held at this degree for several hours," Edmiston said, "so that stress in the glass can be redistributed evenly." Temperatures are gradually lowered in intervals and eventually the oven is closed down to cool.

Time wise its a consuming process, from initial mixing of minerals and other materials to form the basic molten glass to the final cooling of the oven. It is indeed an art where heat and sweat are essential ingredients, but for those fascinated by the ultimate creation of a graceful form, it is all more than worthwhile.

Rodger Wood, ECU ceramist. Sculptor Robert Edmiston and his print - making wife, Sara; sculptor Ron Calhoun, and John Satterfield, whose regular field is jewelry, have formed a beginning group of trainees.

"Rodger has the experience," Edmiston commented, "and agreed to teach us." Edmiston and Wood explained construction of equipment before they could begin actual glass blowing. "We first had to build a furnace to hold the molten glass. It's gas fired, and contains two sections, one to hold clear liquid glass and the other for colored glass."

Wood demonstrated technique for gathering a ball of glass. For this he used a pontil rod. A nickel plated steel blowpipe is used for blowing air into the extremely hot ball of molten glass. "Speed and precision is essential," Wood said, "as it takes practice to control forming the ball into the shape desired."

Once a form is correctly blown, the next step is tapping it

Artist Concerned With Environment

By JANE KELLER
Francis Speight's great love for North Carolina is surpassed only by his love for America and concern for her problems and people.

As a minute—but significant — part of the emphasis on environmental pollution, Dr. Speight, East Carolina University's artist-in-residence, is exhibiting three paintings in ECU's Joyner Library. These are one man's view, a pictorial record of a problem which began many years ago and continues today.

Speight's awareness of pollution is exemplified in the three paintings—the 1932 "Coaldale, Pa.," "Coal Region" painted in 1934, and the later "Eden" of 1962.

The subject of "Coaldale, Pa." is a small, two-story structure at the foot of a huge pile of coal. The murky sky, reminiscent of a coal district, might be called "coal-gray" in color. Piles of coal spoiled the landscape. The 1934 "Coal Region" again shows enormous piles of coal slag, which form a contrast to the bright green trees and heightens the impact of sunlight and shadows.

In discussing "Eden", the artist related an interesting viewpoint. For some time he had been interested in painting the view of a house some distance removed from a large factory complex. Several times he had visited the hill on which the house sat. Each time the wind had been blowing industrial smoke away from the buildings. On this particular day, however, the wind blew huge billows of smoke between the artist and the buildings. This toned down the brilliant red of the factory in the background. The bright sunlight reflected on the house could not penetrate the smoke.

Speight's awareness of environmental problems can be seen in other paintings. Erosion of the land; deterioration of once beautiful homesteads; pollution of the landscape; are present in many of his works.

"It would stir me then and it continues to concern me now," he says, in commenting on the earlier works exhibited.

Speight is a realist. He sees beauty in green trees and sharp shadows of a brilliant sun in a clear sky. He sees ugliness in coal slag and industrial smoke. And he paints it that way.

Book News From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARGARET CLARK

New fiction this month includes an exciting espionage novel based on the controversial Pueblo incident. Elliot Arnold's CODE OF CONDUCT concerns intelligence agent Owen Quade and his wife who travel to Switzerland to recover from the tragic death of their son. They are invited to the home of an Austrian businessman who is actually a spy working with the North Koreans. His assignment: to capture and interrogate Quade, who engineered the Pueblo intelligence mission. Elliot Arnold brings his characters movingly to life in this superb and provocative spy novel.

HEIGA'S WEB by Jon Cleary is a novel of crime by a gifted story-teller. Set in Australia, this thrilling mystery of sex and extortion reveals the desperate lives of an ambitious government minister, a bankrupt TV producer, a captain, an aging tycoon — and their wives at a time of common crisis. Helga Brand's strangled body has been found in the basement of the unfinished Sidney Opera House and Detective Scobie Malone must entangle the web leading to murder — providing action, suspense, and romance.

Continuing the themes begun in his earlier novel, THE GRADUATE, Charles Webb looks inside a marriage and at the possibility of love in THE MARRIAGE OF A YOUNG STOCK-BROKER. Mr. Webb writes with shrewd insight into today's manners, morals, and dreams, and despite his comic irreverence gives a sensitive portrayal of the tensions and yearnings in a relationship between two people who want to be in love and need to find out if they are not.

Set in the tense atmosphere of a large university medical center, DOCTORS AND WIVES by Benjamin Siegel offers glimpses into the private lives of a group of new residents being taught the hard facts of life and death. For the young doctors, residency at Pearce Memorial is a much - sought prize. But for their wives it is a sentence to a limbo of ruined dinners, rationed passion, and fantasies. Taped interviews with actual residents and wives were used to frame the background of the novel.

If science fiction is in your blood, then you'll enjoy two excellent new anthologies. In ORBIT 6 edited by Damon Knight, the stories are not reprints from magazines — they are original stories appearing for the first time by outstanding authors in this field. In Robert Silverberg's SCIENCE FICTION HALL OF FAME, there are twenty-six of the best science fiction stories ever written, chosen by the Science Fiction Writers of America. Authors included in this collection are the men and women who have done the most to give form and substance to modern science fiction.

Photography is our business . . . and we make it our business to be as helpful as we can to all our fellow enthusiasts. That means we answer a lot of questions in the course of every week . . . questions you might have asked yourself.

This column is our answer . . . a way of getting together with you over our favorite hobby, answering some of the questions that are most often asked us, talking about new trends and directions in equipment and accessories, and about the basics of shooting good pictures, still or moving.

Most of the time we'll be talking to the photographer who has just got started and the amateur who's come a good ways toward being an expert, rather than to the professional. We'll touch on mistakes and try to throw some side lighting on the problems and possibilities that make photography such a fascinating and challenging hobby. Hope you'll focus on this spot each week for a visit.

Amenities In Economy Ranch

THE STERLING 4/26/70

EASY ON THE BUDGET—The Sterling, designed by the Associated Architects, is an economy model featuring three bedrooms, one and a half baths, a living room-dining room combination with a fireplace, a modern kitchen with space for washer and dryer, and a single-car garage. It has frame construction with battened vertical siding and a built-up roof of plank-and-beam construction with exposed beams in the ceiling. There is no basement.

By GERRY BISHOP

The housing need of middle-income families has never been greater.

Many builders have concentrated on higher-priced, luxury homes in recent years, leaving a vacuum in the low-price market.

Consequently, young couples are hard pressed to make that crucial move from an apartment to a house so they can start raising a family.

With these people in mind, the Associated Architects designed the Sterling, a one-story contemporary whose dimensions are tailored to a small lot.

Ideal Low-Budget House

This model would be ideal for a young, growing family and it would be a low-budget project. Not only could construction costs be held down, but maintenance would be a reasonable item as well. The Sterling's low sweeping lines would permit a "do-it-yourselfer" to handle many of the outside chores.

Despite its economical advantages, this ranch has many features usually reserved for more expensive homes.

For one thing, there's an attractive log-burning fireplace in the living room. And for another, the living room's approximate measurements of 24 feet by 15 feet are exceptionally large dimensions for a small ranch. Since the living room serves as a dining room too, the kitchen is adjacent to it. It is 11 feet square and would be an excellent workshop, with appliances and cabinets at the homemaker's fingertips.

There's space for a washer and dryer in the kitchen, which enhances its workshop layout. Powder Room

Another extra is the powder room which is strategically located near the living room-dining room.

The three bedrooms are clustered around the main bath which, like the powder room, is in the center of the house. This back-to-back plumbing arrangement is another money-saving feature.

The master bedroom measures approximately 13 feet by 14 feet. The other bedrooms are smaller but of comfortable size.

The single-car garage, which provides access to the center of the house, contains a storage room.

Battened vertical siding and a low-pitch (2-12) built-up roof are the principal exterior characteristics. The roof is made of planks and beams with the 4-by-10 left exposed in the ceiling.

Construction is frame on a concrete slab.

There are 1,244 square feet of living area plus 290 square feet in the garage. The dimensions are approximately 38 feet by 42 feet.

Victims Of Rising Rent Should Consider Move; Paying For Sentiment?

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Many older people are at their wits' end trying to make money ends meet so they can pay high rentals at the same old address. They are "going for broke" in the old neighborhood.

Why? Many older victims of the "inching rent syndrome" think they are too old to make a fresh start. They pull in their belts every time there is a rent rise.

One 65-year-old couple changed all that. They merely asked "why are we sticking." They looked and discovered that old-timers had been moving away for some time, but they had been holding out for sentimental attachments that no longer existed.

The old butcher shop and little grocery store had given way to the supermarket. The newspaperman and milkman were new to the neighborhood route every few months. The streets were there, but they were different. People didn't sit on their door steps and exchange greetings with neighbors. And it was difficult walking streets in winter—snow and ice were no longer removed promptly. They didn't feel comfortable taking an evening stroll.

They moved. And they're glad. You need not lower your standard of living because you seek a lower rent in another neighborhood, they advise. The selection of a new area takes time. Visit other towns, cities, states. Making new friends in your old age and acquiring a new zest for living may take years off your life, they explain.

This couple found a charming cottage in a resort area, where year round rents are cheaper than most places because of the long vacation season. The quiet off-season is a nice time for natives, and older people gravitate to such spots because the tax rate is more or less stabilized. Many use their savings to buy homes, in their old age.

Meanwhile, back at the city, many lonely older folk spend their later years trying to outwit the landlord.

One wary 83-year-old apartment dweller doesn't ask the landlord for anything "that isn't absolutely necessary."

"It's sort of like I'm hoping he forgets I'm a tenant," she says laughing.

She has had a lease in the same house for 30 years through rent controls, house management changes and some refinancing of her apartment. With other tenants, she has fought rent increases, and she is paying a low rent, considering that she has had four rent increases. Each day she lives in fear of another one. "I worked hard for 50 years, and I'm not going to turn my savings over to a landlord," she says.

She cautions older people signing new leases on homes to observe "sneaky clauses" that will escalate the rent.

If a refrigerator or range conks out, don't ask for a larger or fancier one. If the landlord suggests he'll give you a new color or new style appliance, don't accept it unless he agrees your rent will not be increased. And beware of the "new blinds gimmick."

Landlords rent their properties to make a profit. It is a business and they need money to maintain the house. They can't afford to be sentimental about old tenants when taxes and house improvement costs escalate. He must raise rents or cut services. He usually is in trouble no matter which way he goes.

Some older people are renting apartments for the first time as they can keep up large homes no longer.

How can they determine what rent they should pay?

A decade or more ago, many people figured a rental ceiling on the basis of the annual income. If one made $5,000 a year and had a small family, the monthly rental would run in the sixtieth dollars figure, somewhere between 15 and 17 per cent of the income, depending on the size of the family and other conditions. But now rents are out of kilter and it isn't always possible to find low rents in good neighborhoods.

Many people are paying two or three times the sum that normally should be earmarked for rent. To pay high rents on a small income—pension and social security—older people have had to cut back on just about everything from magazine subscriptions to popcorn at the movies (when they can afford to go to a movie.)

But at some point, they should look about their over-priced apartment or house in the familiar neighborhood and ask themselves, "do we need it?"

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—We have a small ranch house 15 years old. A water spot has developed on the ceiling of our living room, about 6 feet in from the outside wall. It's just damp in that area. There is no actual dripping. What can be causing this?

A.—Only a personal inspection can determine the cause of the trouble. If you have an attic, even the crawl type, get into it with a flashlight and see whether there is any sign of a leak. If not, you'll have to find the cause by inspecting every area where water might be entering the house. Start with the outside wall nearest the spot. Look for cracked boards and gaps around the nearest window, especially if there is one in the attic. Check the louvers. See whether there is a blockage of a nearby gutter or downspout. Be sure there is no opening at the back edges of the eaves. If a careful inspection reveals not even a minute opening, you'll have to continue your checkup with the roof. See whether all flashing is intact and whether any shingles are broken, missing or loose. There is no shortcut method of finding out what's wrong.

Q.—I have been thinking about installing a central air conditioning system in our house, but the water in our area is expensive. Is there any system which doesn't use water?

A.—Yes. There are air conditioning systems which use water, ones which use very little water and ones which use no water at all. You should be able to get an analysis and estimate for your house at no cost. The problem, if there is any, is fitting the desired type of system into the space available in your particular home.

Q.—In running drain tiles from the house to a dry well, how deep should the tiles be placed below the surface?

A.—They should be laid in a trench from one-to-two-feet in depth, slanted slightly in the direction of the dry well.

Bedrooms Come In King, Queen Size

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Queen and king size is the rule these days in bedding and builders now are beginning to offer bedrooms to suit.

In the mid '60s the "luxury revolution" in housing got under way, with living rooms coming in for initial attention. Then, with a general trend toward more formal entertaining, the postwar dining "L" or area was incorporated into the living room, and the separate dining room once again came into its own.

The kitchen was next on the agenda. The efficiency was out; the family kitchen in.

And now, according to Sally Ames of the Spring Air Mattress Co., Chicago, "builders are putting major emphasis on bedrooms—in terms of size as well as number."

"For all practical purposes, the two-bedroom home no longer is being built," she said. Three bedrooms are a minimum today, and more and more homes offer four, five, and six bedrooms.

"Traditionally, homes built in the northeast section of the country have had larger bedrooms than those in the west and southwest. And according to a recent survey of the nation's home and apartment builders this still holds true. However, even in the west and southwest, the survey tells us bedrooms are getting bigger."

Master Bedroom

Miss Ames, sleep design consultant to Spring Air, reports one of the most significant trends is the emergence of the master bedroom suite. This consists of an oversized bedroom, large dressing room and adjoining private bath. Previously limited to custom homes, such suites now are common in the merchant-built tract home.

Nationally, the study revealed the average size of the master bedroom in best selling home models currently amounts to more than 187 square feet, equivalent to a 12 by 15-foot room. Even the new apartments are featuring bedrooms of this size.

This same trend to more space also is seen in other bedrooms. Just a few years ago, Miss Ames noted, a 9 x 11 foot bedroom, big enough to hold one twin-size bed and a chest of drawers, was commonplace in new homes. Today, secondary bedrooms are 11 x 11 feet or larger, big enough for twin beds or a standard double bed, plus dresser and chest.

In the more luxurious master bedrooms, a 60-inch Queen or even a 76-inch King size bed will fit easily with room left for a comfortable seating arrangement along with the usual dresser, chests and such.

Among other luxury touches builders are including in bedrooms are His and Her closets, lavatories, and even woodburning fireplaces. Where climate permits, builders also are including sliding glass walls leading to private patios and sun decks.

"He can't even drive a nail straight," the commonly used expression to describe someone who isn't too handy around the house, literally applies to more of us than might be supposed.

Driving a nail straight calls for correct use of a hammer. And the hammer, the simplest of tools and quite possibly the oldest tool known to man, is often misused if only because there seems no way to use it incorrectly. But banged fingers, bent nails and marred surfaces testify to the fact that the hammer has a way of striking back when it isn't accorded at least a minimum amount of respect.

A common fault is to clutch the hammer handle somewhere along its length but not at the proper place, which is as far down as you can get without your hand overhanging. By holding the handle at its end, you take advantage of the leverage of the handle. The weight of the head is free to move by the force of gravity as you swing the handle.

There are three ways to deliver a blow with the hammer. The first is by a movement of the wrist. The second is by moving the wrist and the elbow. The third is by using the wrist, elbow and shoulder. Which of the three methods you use depends on the force of the blow to be delivered. When starting a nail in wood, hold it in place with the thumb and first two fingers of one hand. Tap it lightly to start it into the wood, then remove your hand. Damaged fingers occur when too much force is used for those initial taps and when hands aren't removed in time. Don't try to emulate the practice of some carpenters who make that first blow at the nail a heavy one.

Concentrate on driving the nail as nearly as possible with the center of the hammer face. When the nail isn't struck squarely, it either bends or the hammer face strikes the surface of the wood, damaging it.

If you aren't used to it, hammering can become tiring. Using a hammer suitable for the job can reduce arm fatigue. When purchasing one, it should weigh in the area of 12 or 13 ounces for general household use. Always test a hammer by grasping it and moving it around a little. Depending on the size of your hand, it will feel comfortable or uncomfortable. Select one that "fits" you. A good reason, incidentally, why you should purchase your own hammer and not send someone else to buy it for you.

A bell face hammer is slightly more convex than a flat or plain face hammer. With it, a nail can be driven flush or, when you get the hang of it, slightly below the surface, without leaving hammer marks on the wood.

When a nail is to be driven below the surface at least one-sixteenth of an inch so that it can be covered with wood putty or plastic wood, use a nail set for the last two or three light taps. It's a good idea to have about three nail sets in your workshop if you do much work of this kind in order to handle nail heads of different sizes.

Now 25 Years Since Mussolini's Dreams Crashed

By BARRY JAMES
MILAN, Italy (UPI)—The vain glorious dreams of a second Roman empire and the man who dreamed them came to an end 25 years ago this Tuesday (April 28) in a burst of submachinegun fire in the little town of Dongo north of here.

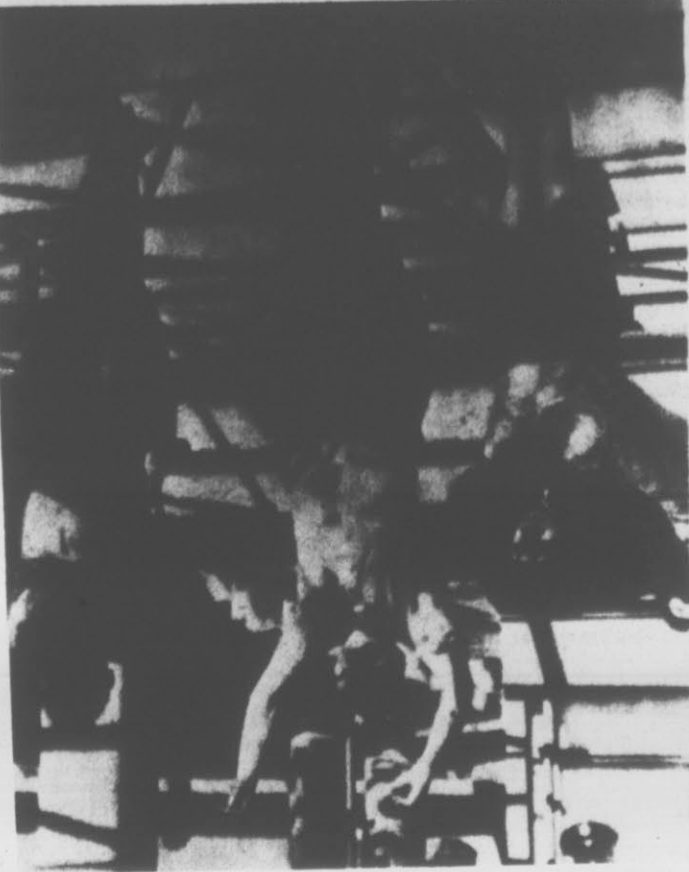

Benito Mussolini died as he had spent much of his life—in the arms of a woman. Claretta Petacci, the last of his many mistresses, cradled the 62-year-old dictator and shared the bullets of guerrilla executioners.

Their riddled bodies were taken to Milan and hung by the heels outside a gas station where they were reviled by Milanese citizens embittered by the war into which Il Duce—the boss—had plunged them.

Mussolini ruled Italy for 23 years as an ambitious, violent, vain, flamboyant, temperamental and uncultured man. His apologists in later years could lamely recall only that "he made the trains run on time."

Unlikely Beginnings
He was the son of a village blacksmith and ran away to Switzerland at 19 to escape the draft. Returning to Italy he began his career as a journalist, socialist and anticleric who often lectured on "the crimes of the Popes." The thousands of jobless, disgruntled and disillusioned World War I veterans filling the cities of industrial northern Italy provided him with many of his blackshirt followers.

Adopting the symbol of authority carried before Roman magistrates—an ax wrapped in a bundle of rods called the "Fasces"—Mussolini gave his movement a name and provided a new word for political dictionaries: Fascism. With a policy of extreme right-wing nationalism, the fascists attacked Communists, murdered labor leaders, broke up strikes. They won support from rich

THE VAINGLORIOUS dreams of Benito Mussolini came to an end 25 years ago on April 25. Mussolini (right) talks at construction of a new town in 1936, and industrialists, southern landowners, and even the army.

In 1922 Mussolini proclaimed a program of "law and order" to save Italy from Communism. He organized a march on Rome by his followers. He traveled most of the way from Milan by train and arrived in the capital clad in an ill-fitting black suit, celluloid cuffs, white spats over brown shoes and a canary-yellow straw hat.

King Victor Emmanuel received Mussolini and then turned the government over to him.

Rule Began Brutally
Law and order to the blackshirts meant the beating, murder and torture of antifascists, of whom an estimated 3,000 died in the first years of Mussolini's rule. Editors were horsewhipped, the free press stifled and opponents of the regime were jailed or banished to rural provinces.

Shortly after coming to power, Mussolini ordered the crucifix put back in state schools and later he married the mother of his five children in a bid to win

Roman Catholic church support. In 1929 he signed the Lateran Pact, which settled a long-standing, bitter dispute between the Vatican and the secular state.

In his years of power, Mussolini's vanity ballooned grotesquely. He liked to project a he-man image. He was photographed skiing, naked from the waist up. Another picture showed him feeding two lions. It was only later that the photographer revealed the lions had all their teeth and claws pulled out and had been fed on macaroni for months.

Violence Is Moral
After years of sword rattling, Mussolini's first step in recreating the ancient Roman empire was to attack almost defenseless Ethiopia in 1934 in defiance of the League of Nations. Ethiopian warriors armed mostly with spears, rusty rifles and 19th century artillery pieces were beaten back with poison gas, tanks and fighter planes. "Violence is moral when it is as sudden as a storm," Mussolini said.

Mussolini's dreams of aggrandizement led Italy into World War II at the side of Nazi Germany, but there was one defeat after another. In one North African campaign alone, the British army of Gen. Archibald Wavell took 133,000 Italian prisoners, including 19 generals and an admiral. The British drove the Italians out of Somalia and Ethiopia.

In the summer of 1943, the Allies captured Sicily. Mussolini was shouldered aside by Marshal of the Army Pietro Badoglio and on Sept. 3, 1943, Italy surrendered to the allies.

Defeated Twice
Germany immediately occupied Italy and set up Mussolini as puppet dictator. Then began the allied offensive into Italy, marked by such bloody battles as Salerno, Anzio and Monte Cassino.

The drive northward was aided by 200,000 Italian partisans in northern Italy, led by Gen. Raffaele Cadorna, who had served Mussolini's army for 20 years before joining the allied cause.

It was Cadorna who wrote the last chapter of Il Duce. On April 25, 1944, Cadorna met Mussolini for the first and last time in Milan to discuss capitulation of Mussolini's fascist regime.

At first Mussolini blustered, demanding guarantees of safety for himself, his family and his troops. But when he was informed that the Germans had been negotiating their own surrender with the partisans for the past seven days, and had even offered to disarm Mussolini's blackshirts, Cadorna said Mussolini blanched, gripped the table and stood up, beside himself with rage. "They have betrayed me!" he roared.

Tried To Escape
The meeting broke up with Mussolini promising to give an answer about surrendering in an hour. It never came. Instead, he called in Nazi S.S. Commander Gen. Karl Wolff for a dressing down and then headed north to Lake Como with a German escort and a reputedly large haul of valuables which have never been found.

When news came of Mussolini's capture, Communist partisan leaders Walter Audisio and Guido Lampredi asked Cadorna's permission to go up and try the dictator. Cadorna assented.

By his own account it was Audisio who felled both Mussolini and Claretta with a single burst of gunfire after the briefest of trials.

North Carolina is No. 1 when it comes to tax on gasoline. The 13¼ cents tax you pay on each gallon of gasoline is higher than in any other state in the nation.

Your neighbors in Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Georgia all pay less than you do. (Even your distant cousins in New York pay less!)

But it hasn't always been this way. It was the 2-cent-per-gallon tax increase voted by the 1969 General Assembly that boosted North Carolina to its No. 1 position.

We aren't happy about North Carolina's No. 1 rating on this list! We feel that gasoline is a necessity for many working people, and it should be as cheap as possible.

50,000 Pounds Of Ballet Props Sail To Japan

TORONTO (AP)—Fifty-thousand pounds of sets, props and costumes needed for the National Ballet of Canada's performances at Expo '70 are now making the 10,000-mile sea voyage to Japan.

The company will perform in Osaka in May.

Dancers, still in Canada, are rehearsing "Giselle" with guest choreographer Peter Wright, who is restaging the ballet for the company. Wright has restaged "Giselle" for the Stuttgart Ballet, the British Royal Ballet and the Cologne Ballet.

Leading roles will be shared by Lynn Seymour and Egon Maden of the Stuttgart Ballet and by National Ballet principal dancers Angelica Bornhausen, Veronica Tennant and Hazaras Surmejan.

Before going to Japan, the company dances a season in April in O'Keefe Centre, Toronto.

AND WHEN YOU FINALLY GET FIVE CARDS THAT MATCH— IT'S THE SMALLEST POT OF THE NIGHT, BUT NATCH!

Airlines' Maintenance Bases Keep Them Flying

By RICHARD M. HARNETT
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Speeding through the sky in a comfortable jetliner, you pause and wonder for a moment ... How is this huge machine kept flying, flight after flight after flight?

International Airport by United Airlines, typical of jetliner maintenance provided by air carriers around the country. When a Boeing 707 or Douglas DC8 rolls into the San Francisco base, the jetliner's seats are already gone—removed by a special crew.

Five-Day Process
During the next five days, the plane is stripped down to a shell and put through rigorous testing, adjustment and repair. United has a ground crew of more than 6,000 mechanics and engineers to service its fleet of 388 jets and the planes of nearly a dozen other airlines.

A support force of 2,500 other employees at the base runs the computers and other services which keep track of every part in every plane, recording every hour of flight time and signalling when service is due.

Broken Down To Parts
In the big jet "drydocks," engines, wing flaps, landing gears and other parts are removed and go to various shops for individual overhaul. The fuselage itself gets about 14,000 man-hours of attention during its five-day overhaul. Miles of wiring are exposed and examined. Metal is scrubbed paint-free and examined for signs of wear. A pint-sized mechanic crawls into the wing tanks to inspect and clean them. Typical of the painstaking work in the shops is the examination of wheels. Two skilled mechanics are kept busy all day checking the rims for cracks or signs of wear. They use sophisticated ultrasonic probes to detect flaws that never could be seen by the naked eye.

X-Rays And Almonds
In the engine shop some components are taken apart, serviced and put together. Other parts are checked by X-ray because it would do them no good, and possibly some harm, to take them apart merely because they have been in service a certain length of time, Mentzer explained.

example.
Tens of thousands of parts are stocked in the warehouse and can be ordered from computer terminals by anywhere on the base or at subsidiary service points throughout the country. The big San Francisco base currently is preparing for the new jumbo jets with a $50 million construction program. A new $11 million hangar 100 feet high and 320 feet deep will dock the Boeing 707 and Douglas DC10.

New Hampshire's state parks cover a total of 31,000 acres.

WHITE ELEPHANT SALE

NOTHING IS HARDER TO GET RID OF THAN THE REMAINING STOCK FROM A COLLECTION THAT HAS BEEN DISCONTINUED. But we are going to try. 1/2 price now on Bassett El Prado collection. Regular $300 Armoire chest in rich pecan, now $150. Also large pecan chest in same grouping. You would normally pay $200. Now $97.

THREE ITALIAN PROVINCIAL DINING ROOM TABLES. This table has had a rough time. We have nothing to match it. No one wanted to pay $180. It will go fast at $80.

OUR BUYERS ARE SLIDING. THEY PURCHASED TWENTY-EIGHT FOOT SLIDES. We still have twenty left. They were thinking of selling these for $20. We know they will sell at $12.88 in the box only.

THREE FOX SOLID MAPLE SOFA AND MATCHING CHAIR GROUPS. When we told our buyer he could not get $220, he laughed. Now he has tears in his eyes. $120 for both pieces.

ONE FIVE PIECE SPANISH BEDROOM SUITE. We'd like to toss the maker of this beauty into an inferno. He shipped it to us, then discontinued it. We bought the triple dresser, door chest, full or queen size headboard, commode night stand, horizontal mirror. Was $850. Now $499.95

ONE KROEHLER SLEEP-OR-LOUNGE SOFA. It's become such a good friend, everyone says good morning to it. With the beautiful green fabric and smart design, you would think someone would have picked it out at $360. How about $180

ONE WILLIAMS-BIRCH TRUNDLE BED. At $80 we could not do our thing. At $35 you can do your thing.

OUR CARPET BOY JUST MADE A SPECTACULAR PURCHASE. Genuine Ozite Indoor Outdoor Carpet to sell at $4.50 sq. yd. We have now put our buyer outdoors and the new indoor price is only $2.49 sq. yd. Just try and beat this value.

IT SEEMS LIKE THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR SINCE THESE COLONIAL ROCKERS ARRIVED. Our buyers had thought that these would bring $50, but we must retreat back to $25. Our defeat, your win.

JUST SIX DOOR MIRRORS. Values to $16.00. See yourself as others see you or better at $7.50

Sale Begins at 8 A.M. Sharp

Sale Ends Saturday, May 2 at 6 P.M.

A SAD STORY

Some 12 months ago, we purchased two rolls of 6 foot bathroom carpet; we ordered 1 roll blue and 1 roll of green. We received 1 roll of white and 1 roll hot pink. We had planned to sell this for $7.95 sq. yd. Now you can buy this carpet for $3.99 sq. yd.

A GOOD CUSTOMER OF OURS ORDERED A COMFORTABLE RED SWIVEL ROCKER AT $140; now he has left town and you can buy this chair for $65.

Now spring is here. And here is so much new furniture we would like to display and sell. But we can't. . . not until we rid ourselves of these and many more misfortunes. Now we have 3 solid maple Temple Stuart Deacons Benches. We thought they would sell at $49—Would you believe $29 now?

At these prices, please don't ask us to deliver small accessory pieces for nothing as we usually do. A few pieces may be sold at higher prices (we sincerely hope) before this ad runs.

READ ON DEAR FRIENDS—THE LAUGH'S ON US!

OUR BUYERS THOUGHT SPANISH WOULD BE THE RAGE and purchased 5 Spanish 3 piece groupings to sell at $400. Bostic-Sugg's management is now in a rage—these just haven't moved at all. So you can rave at the savings. All 3 pieces now only $240.

KINGSDOWN WROUGHT IRON BUNK BEDS . . . We purchased 3 to sell at $60 . . . We still have 3 . . . So these metal bunk beds are a steal at $30 each.

WHO SAYS PRINT FABRICS ON BOSTON ROCKER CUSHION SETS don't sell? We do! We thought the colorful 2 piece sets would sell at $6.50, so we purchased 24 sets. Now only $4.49

ONCE UPON A TIME THESE BASSETT CREDENZAS sold for $100, but not now. We haven't sold one in the past twelve months. If you need or can use one of these, you can save 1/2 . . . We thought these would sell for $100 but we gladly sell these credenzas for $50 a piece.

STANLEY $110 TRADITIONAL LOOSE PILLOW BACK CHAIR. We purchased this chair in '67 but as they say "If you are not winning the game, get rid of the coach" That's what we are doing at $45.

Clean-Up Campaign Is Continuing Effort For City

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

While special emphasis is being given this week to the Chamber of Commerce - Merchants Association's clean-up, fix-up, paint-up campaign, the Greenville Public Works Department is continuing its daily efforts to keep our city clean and litter-free.

All areas of city maintenance, from grass cutting to garbage and debris collection, comes under the control of the department. The sanitation aspect of the work is perhaps more familiar with the public.

Public Works director, C. Kenneth Beatty, noted that although nothing special is planned by the department during the clean-up week, personnel there will make an all-out effort to clean, fix, and paint-up everything that needs attention.

Referring to the routine trash pick-up procedures, Beatty said that "we will haul away all the trash that we can move."

The director added that city ordinance legally restricts the size of things put out to be hauled away. Trash such as shrubbery and tree trimmings, he said, should be no longer than four feet and weigh no more than 75 pounds. The public rarely complies with this ordinance, he added.

As part of the sanitation aspect of the department, large "packer" trucks, nine with 18 cubic feet capacity and two with 23 cubic feet, are maintained for city-wide garbage pick-ups.

The two larger "packers," Beatty said, are used primarily for picking up trash and garbage at businesses throughout the city and handling the heavy commercial garbage requirements at the large department and grocery stores.

Here again, city ordinance requirements call for all boxes and similar garbage to be broken down and disassembled but Beatty noted that only a few businesses observe that requirement. Legally, action could be taken.

Residents of the city have become accustomed to the smaller "18-yard packers" that are used to service the residential areas.

Beatty said that approximately 250 dumpsters are owned by businesses in the city with capacities ranging from two to four cubic yards of garbage each.

"These containers are handy in that the large packer trucks can pick them up and dump the whole contents without spilling debris on the ground," he said.

The trucks have been equipped with an attachment to lift the containers, dump the contents and lower it back into place. Hydraulic pumps push the packer into the trash and compress it into one end of the truck.

The containers are now being made here in Greenville and are available to buyers who wish to use this service, he said.

In addition to the packers, several open trucks are used to collect trash such as shrubbery and tree trimmings in the city. Supt. Tom Adams said that calls are given priority over other pick-ups and an effort is always made to pick up everything that is left on the side of the streets on a regular schedule.

Another aspect of the continuous sanitation and maintenance campaign being waged by the department is the mowing of grass on city-owned lots and along the city streets.

Beatty said that the department has one "side-mower" for mowing the street shoulders and several other mowers for cutting grass in the city.

An example of the grass cutting being done by the department involves the area beyond first street north from Greene to just south beyond Reade (Shore Drive).

In addition, the lot bordered by First, Greene, Washington and Second Streets was cut last week by department personnel and other areas of the city in need of mowing will be handled by the Public Works.

Painting is also a major job for the department. Adams pointed out that the turning and dividing lines in the streets as well as signs posting various city regulations are painted at the department shops located just off West Third Street.

Beatty said that a good deal of painting will be done within the city during the summer months with light poles, parking signs and signal lights needing the GARBAGE . . . scenes like this face city collectors every day as they make their rounds to residential and business areas. City ordinance requires each store to break down its boxes before putting them out for pick-up.

Highway Commission Helping

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina State highway Commission, which has a continuing program to keep the appearance of state-maintained thoroughfares inside the Greenville city limits in good order, will cooperate with local officials in putting forth extra effort during the clean-up, fix-up, paint-up campaign scheduled to get under way this week.

Donald J. Woodcock, landscape supervisor with the State Highway Commission, said in addition to their normal operations, Commission employees will work with a group of boy scouts Saturday in cleaning litter from roads leading into Greenville and from the right-of-way of state-maintained roads within the city limits.

The scouts, according to Woodcock, include some 40 boys from Troop 362, sponsored by the Greenville Moose Lodge, who along with Scoutmaster Thomas Butts, volunteered their time and personal equipment to help in the litter pickup program.

In addition, Woodcock said, the Commission will use its trucks to pick up litter collected by other groups along the state right-of-ways. "If the litter is placed in piles along the side of the roads, we will pick it up," he noted.

Normal appearance-improving activities carried out by the highway commission on state-maintained streets in Greenville, as well as on highways outside of the city limits, includes use of street sweepers on all curb and gutter sections of roadways, litter pickup when possible, and mowing all grassed medians, islands and shoulders.

"The highway commission," Woodcock explained, "keeps a sweeper running full time. It covers eight counties, about 300 miles of work for one machine, but we try to sweep once every 30 days."

"Medians, islands and shoulders are mowed once a week which includes about 35 acres of land in the Greenville area," he said.

Litter pickup is limited and at best sporadic, Woodcock said. "Litter pickup is done," Woodcock explained, "when it can be worked into the regular maintenance schedule at odd times because there is no specific litter pickup money available."

Woodcock said the litter program was "mostly a summer job" when the Highway Commission can employ youth corps enrollees to do the work.

CLEANING VACANT LOT . . . Members of Boy Scout Troop 362 remove litter from a vacant lot on Tenth Street in observance of "Clean-up, Paint-up, Fix-up Week" to be held today through Sunday.

Around Home, It's Time to Modernize, and Improve

Home improvement is bound to give the family more comfort and convenience for a long time to come. But the benefits don't stop there. American mobility being what it is, chances are the homeowner won't keep his present house forever. When the time comes to sell, the improvements the family has made—and enjoyed—can mean a quicker and more equitable sale.

Estimates are that one-fifth of the country's 60 million householders change residences every year. In the face of these figures, remodeling becomes important not only for immediate needs but also to improve the sales value of the house.

Meeting one of these goals need not mean compromising the other. The family and a potential buyer will be interested in the same things—an attractive home that offers long-term protection, comfort and convenience with minimal upkeep.

Wise planning and careful selection of quality building materials can satisfy both. An improved home also builds equity, and modernization costs can be more than realized in the eventual selling price.

These are some aspects to consider when viewing remodeling from a dual vantage point:

Homeowners Get Answers To Cost, Quality Questions

By EDGAR V. HALL,
Executive Director,
National Home Improvement
Council, Inc.

Last year we Americans spent more than $12 billion on repairing and improving our homes.

When that amount of money is spent, it's pretty obvious that millions of families these days prefer to remodel their dwellings rather than to move.

Why? For many reasons. They like the neighborhood in which they live and the convenience of shopping in familiar stores. They hate to leave old friends and are reluctant to place their children into new schools of unknown quality.

So, staying put and fixing up has become an important part of the American Way of Life.

But, unfortunately, many, many families who don't move, don't plan to improve their present homes. They are afraid that the prices for remodeling will be too high, the materials of poor quality, the workmanship shoddy.

Actually, the average homeowner need have little fear in fixing up his home to his and his family's complete satisfaction. Reliable contractors exist to perform the work.

Let's examine three common misperceptions of home improvement and how you as a prudent homeowner can avoid missteps:

1. The price for remodeling your home will be too high. It's true that construction industry costs are rising rapidly, because of labor charges, not because the remodeling contractor is waxing rich. (Most contractors are small businessmen whose incomes are not out of line with other wages in the community.)

You can be certain of getting a fair price if you take the trouble to shop around and get bids on your job from at least two or preferably three home improvers.

Remember also that a remodeling job usually enhances the value of your home, particularly in these days of steeply rising values. So, consider your remodeling an investment rather than an expense.

2. The remodeling materials will be of poor quality. Here again, as a prudent homeowner, you can guarantee against shoddy goods by working with a contractor who applies brand name products.

3. The remodeling workmanship will be poor. One way to be fairly certain of good workmanship on your job is to ask for and then check a contractor's references before you hire him.

Go look at some of his other work. In this way you can judge for yourself whether you are dealing with a reliable remodeling businessman.

OUTSIDE WALLS—Emphasis should be on durability and easy care. There are many new prefinished sidings, as well as traditional materials, that meet these requirements. If paint is preferred, choose a quality product that will last for many years.

HEATING—A good unit with an effective distribution system is worth the cost. It assures home comfort, and can save hundreds of dollars in fuel and service bills.

ROOF—Choose materials that offer long life, minimal maintenance, and maximum protection against heavy weather abuse and other hazards. As a natural focal point of the house exterior, the roof is also a perfect place for color and lasting beauty.

Heavyweight asphalt shingles—which have a minimum weight of 290 pounds per applied square—are a good choice. They are designed to give from 20 to 25 years of service with virtually no upkeep, carry the Underwriters' Laboratories label for fire-resistance, and come in a wide range of colors—including pastels and blends.

The self-sealing variety, with factory-applied adhesive that bonds each shingle to the one below, bears the UL label for effective wind-resistance.

ELECTRICAL SYSTEMS—Outlets and capacity should be sufficient for future as well as present needs. An increasing number of home appliances demand electricity, and a system that can't handle them is a potential fire hazard.

PLUMBING—Another area where quality and quantity are worth the cost. Repairs are inconvenient and expensive. Be sure plumbing facilities, including water heater, are adequate for present and future demands.

KITCHEN AND BATH—These two areas still top homeowners' "most wanted" improvements list. Discussion of family preferences and needs with a home improvement contractor, a plumbing supplier, an appliance dealer can help to define costs, firm up plans and clarify best use of space.

Out Of Doors

Any garden club whose members are mostly admiring the greenery of one another's thumbs is dying on its vine. Luckily, such a problem can be easily weeded out through cultivation of a more beautiful community.

The size of the town or club doesn't matter. It's the degree of dedication, the amount of interest, the willingness to work that counts. Keep America Beautiful, Inc., the national anti-litter organization that is dedicated to the ideal of a cleaner, more beautiful country, has collected hundreds of case histories that show how garden club initiative has blossomed into community pride and achievement.

Of course, any individual or group can start the ball rolling, but garden clubs are in a unique position to spearhead local beautification programs, according to Allen H. Seed, Jr., executive vice president of Keep America Beautiful. They know quite a bit about horticulture and landscaping, he said, and they already have an organization.

Mayor Gives
"A good way to start is by organizing a de-littering campaign," Mr. Seed said. "Chances are the town could use a good cleaning anyway, and besides, it helps get people working together."

Suggesting that the mayor's office is the best place to begin, Mr. Seed recalled with a smile that one mayor had gone so far as to donate his salary to a citizen's movement.

"It was in Taylorsville, N.C.," he said. "The Redbud Garden Club there stirred up a two-week campaign that drew the enthusiastic support of just about everybody in town."

"Topping it off, the mayor pledged his $100-a-month official salary, plus $25 of his own money, to a fund reserved for litter prevention, and beautification of the town."

It is free at lumber and building supply dealers, or send 25 cents to cover postage and handling to: Dept. MNS, Filon, 12333 South Van Ness Avenue, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

STRESSING COLOR

"Design 70" line of carpet patterns presented by Johns-Manville features unusual abstract patterns and bright, vivid colors. Carpet, in continuous filament nylon level loop construction, has high density commercial rubber backing.

Another mayor, J. E. Suduth of Lake Charles, La., was overwhelmingly re-elected through what his opponents called his "flower power," an appellation earned by close association with and support of local beautification programs.

There are some 16,000 garden clubs in the United States. They have conducted thousands of anti-litter and beautification campaigns.

Millions of bulbs, flowers, shrubs and trees have been planted during local improvement programs.

"Garden clubs have done a great deal," says Mr. Seed, "and we count on them to do a great deal more, in the continuing effort to Keep America Beautiful."

touching-up.

Currently, the Public Works Department employs approximately 110 persons, the director said, with that figure reaching about 120 during the summer months when additional personnel is required for various areas of maintenance.

"Our clean-up campaign is underway the year-round," Beatty said, adding that the cooperation of the public is essential in order to do an efficient job of public service.

Modernizing Renews the Home

REMODELED KITCHEN SHOWS OFF GOOD LOOKS AS WELL AS working convenience. Owner of this home, who had used redwood paneling in remodeling living and dining rooms, decided to continue the redwood right into the kitchen, for walls, cabinetry and trim. Ample cabinet space is provided in a relatively small area, while rich warmth of redwood assures a distinctive effect. Photo by Robert Brandeis.

All Have Plans For Kitchens

When it's time to remodel the kitchen, then it's time to call a family conference. Naturally, everybody has a real interest in the kitchen, the source of all that good food. But family concern for the kitchen goes beyond this basic.

A well-planned kitchen is a room the whole family can use, so it's wise to get opinions at the outset.

What should the new kitchen include?

Decor Counts

The food preparation area, the food storage area and the clean-up area come first, of course. Good kitchen design brings dishwasher-sink, refrigerator-freezer and oven-surface cooking units together in close harmony.

What's more, modern work-saving appliances pay attention to color and design, in ways that fit any decor. And that leads to another point. The kitchen should be attractive.

Family preferences come into play here. What shall be the color scheme? Shall the walls be paneled, painted, papered? What should be done about floor and ceiling?

Discussion — with some compromises, no doubt — should help the family come up with a general plan. To some extent, decorating will be determined by the other functions of the kitchen.

If space is available, choice may be a kitchen that doubles as a family room. The family room-kitchen is a favorite in many new homes, and it's often possible to create such a setting in an older home.

Appliances Help

A desk-study area, which Mom can use for household planning and the youngsters for homework, is another possibility. Even the smallest kitchen should have room for a bulletin board and message center.

An informal dining area continues to be one of the most popular kitchen additions. In the smaller kitchen, the choice could be a breakfast bar.

Some extra attractions of the kitchen come from modern appliances — for instance, a range with its own hot water tap or a refrigerator-freezer with an exterior

Now Sinks Get a Lift

Do home remodeling plans include everything but the kitchen sink? Now something can be done about it, too.

Here are five suggestions from the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

1. Replace old sink with a two- or three-bowl type to multiply its simultaneous uses.
2. Check faucets, and replace if necessary. New models are virtually leak-proof.
3. Consider a faucet aerator. It creates multiple bubbles in water, causing soap to suds up faster, easier. It saves water, too.
4. Get a spray attachment. One with a flexible stainless steel hose is now available.
5. Replace old drain plug with a "remote control" stopper installed next to the faucet.

dispenser for chilled water or ice cubes.

To create the custom look, there are a variety of wall ovens and cooktop units. And a new dishwasher comes with a decorator front.

At this point, the family conference should probably adjourn in search of information from dealers in appliances and building products.

Such information can be a guide to final decisions, budgeting and the distribution of work — what is to be professionally done and what can be do-it-yourself.

BUILT-IN FOOD preparation center installs in a kitchen cabinet, and comes with a variety of cooking aids and appliances, operated by its own power module. It's Ronson's "Foodmatic."

CLEAN A HOUSE in nothing flat? That's advantage of new built-in central vacuum system. Lightweight hose plugs into wall receptacles in various rooms. Power unit can be located in basement or garage. By General Electric.

CONTROLLING ODOR

Scenrol system, new from Honeywell, provides automatic control of objectionable household odors. While removing unpleasant odors, the system's counteractant also leaves a slight trace of fragrance in the air — Mint, Orange Blossom, Floral Bouquet or Mountain Air. Scenrol looks like a portable radio and can be installed in heating-unit ductwork or wall mounted.

Auto Spray Paints Jazz Up Re-Do, From Lamps to Picture Frames

Do-it-yourself painting takes a new twist, as amateur decorators turn an innovative eye on auto body paints, available in aerosol cans for handy home use.

Kandy Apple, created for finishing custom show cars, turns a lamp base, a picture frame, a piece of outdoor furniture, the wall of a bathroom or kitchen or an outside door into a conversation piece.

Three coats are required — the first, a gold or silver base. Over this is sprayed a coat of transparent color through which the base coat filters.

It is then finished with a clear, glass-smooth top coat.

One-shot Mini-Flake, a paint with a metallic-like glow, sprays on and dries in less than 15 minutes. Like Kandy Apple, it can be used on almost any surface —

Oak Floors Changing To Colorful Themes

For homeowners considering a new floor, oak flooring comes up with a new advantage — color. Solid colors, stripes or stenciled patterns in one color or multicolors are now both available and practical.

Happily, color can be applied to oak floors now in the home, just as it can to new floors. The floor is simply sanded clean, then thoroughly vacuumed to pick up dust before refinishing.

Until recently, staining was the primary method of coloring oak floors. But stains have one drawback. They're sensitive to light.

New colored penetrating sealer is recommended by the National Oak Flooring Manufacturers' Association.

Colored penetrating sealers soak into the wood's fibers and become a part of it. Sealer and color wear only as the wood wears — with no fading. In addition to the many colors available, special shades can be blended.

Oak flooring is offered in four basic types. Most used is strip flooring, narrow pieces no wider than three inches.

Plank oak flooring dates from the days when wide planks were hewn from trees and smoothed by hand. Today, planks are up to nine inches wide and metal nails or screws, instead of wood pegs, hold them to the sub-floor.

Glued-on wood plugs may simulate the pegs.

Parquet or patterned floors are made up of short individual pieces cut to exact dimensions so they will match perfectly the other pieces in the design.

Block flooring, the fourth basic style, is a form of parquet.

Strip and plank flooring comes in three grades, all similar in strength and durability but differing in surface markings.

"Clear" flooring is almost entirely free of surface blemishes. "Select" grade flooring has only slight imperfections.

"Common" grades vary in color and contain streaks, checks and knots — all natural wood characteristics. For homeowners who consider complete uniformity and perfection boring, "Common" grade oak flooring can be a bargain.

Central Vacuum Is Available — at a Price

Can today's homemaker find happiness with a central vacuum cleaning system — or is the cost out of sight? An average installation, in a six- or seven-room house, would now cost from 500 to 600 dollars. Not inexpensive, certainly, but still within dream-come-true range.

A built-in central vac can be permanently installed in older — as well as new — homes. Power unit, in basement or garage, connects by tubing to wall receptacles in various rooms.

To vacuum, the homemaker plugs a lightweight hose into the wall receptacle.

How to Enhance Floor with Carpet Tiles

Carpet tiles might be the bright idea for the new floor treatment on the re-decorating list.

If so, here are a few tips which will go a long way toward making a carpet tile floor an easy yet professional-looking do-it-yourself job in every respect.

First, draw a diagram of the room on graph paper, laying out the proposed pattern either straight-line or diagonally. This will serve as a guide to the number of tiles required in each color or pattern.

Preparing the floor is the next step. Eliminate loose or creaky floorboards by nailing them down with spiral-grooved flooring nails. Then, thoroughly clean the floor.

Remove any wax build-up, and make certain that the surface is completely dry before beginning the installation.

Now, stack the carpet tiles face down within easy reach of work area. Making individual stacks for each color in the pattern will also save time and reduce the chance of making an error in the

BEFORE APPLYING carpet tiles, clean surface thoroughly. Make individual stacks of tiles for each color or style in pattern. Tiles should be stacked carpet-side down and within easy reach.

One of the newest methods of making a permanent or semi-permanent installation is to use an aerosol adhesive, such as 3M Company's Spram-Ment Multi-Purpose adhesive.

Easy-to-use "glue in a can" is simply sprayed on the edges of the carpet tile and then sprayed diagonally.

WHEN USING an aerosol adhesive, shake well before using. Hold the can eight to 12 inches from the tile and spray along the edges and then diagonally from corner to corner. "Glue in a can" is easy to use.

Position each carpet tile so that corner and edges meet firmly but don't buckle. Should a tile need to be re-aligned, the adhesive will allow it to be picked up. If, however, adhesive has been allowed to dry more than five or six minutes, it will be more difficult.

As each tile is set in place, press down firmly, applying pressure over the entire area. There is no need to use anything other than the hands for pressure.

It's Boom Time For The Bath

There are at least nine bathroom trends influencing builders, new home buyers and those who plan to remodel existing homes.

They're listed by the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

1. People have become disenchanted with small bathrooms and are asking for larger and more luxurious ones. Many are now at least 8x10 feet in size, compared with the 5x7 average of the past few years.

2. Off-the-floor water closets, already popular in public washrooms, are being installed in more homes.

3. Bathroom vanities with two lavatories are enjoying a boom. The bedroom vanity with running water is also a "comer."

4. The trend to colored fixtures is continuing, with many homes having one white bathroom and the others in color.

5. Decorated fixtures — with flower, fruit, abstract, Grecian, Early American and other designs reminiscent of great grandmother's bowl and pitcher — are gaining many fans for bath and bedroom vanity lavatories.

6. It's predicted there will be a bathroom for every bedroom in virtually every new home within 7 to 10 years.

7. Mudrooms, built off the kitchen or in the basement to divert the traffic pattern and trap dirt before it gets into the rest of the house, are making strong gains. A typical mudroom is equipped with a lavatory, water closet, shower, work counter and a place to put damp clothes and boots.

8. Bathrooms are being specialized to the needs of users — for example, "juvenile" fixtures for early training of youngsters, "teen-age" bathrooms, and specially-designed fixtures for disabled or senior citizens.

9. Bidets, whirlpool baths, home steam baths and automatic temperature controls for the bath and shower are growing in popularity.

BUTANE LIGHTING

Butane decorative light for both indoor and outdoor use is offered by Ronson Corporation. It's the "Varaflame BU-T-Lite," which looks like a candle inside a frosted, heat-resistant glass shade.

Check Room Air Conditioner To Keep "Cool" in Summer

When the room is air conditioned and people still get that all-too-familiar "clammy" feeling, the first reaction may be, "We need a bigger air conditioner."

Actually, the reverse could be true, says George A. Godfrey of Chrysler Airtemp.

That "clammy" feeling comes when the room air conditioner is more powerful than needed, resulting in insufficient humidity control.

True summer comfort takes forethought, care and planning. The following points are offered as a guide to maximum cooling pleasure from a room air conditioner.

The cooling capacity of the unit is the first priority. A unit that has too small a capacity will never provide enough cooling output to adequately cool the room.

A unit that is too powerful will not provide adequate dehumidification. That's because a thermostatically-controlled air conditioner will "stop" cooling and dehumidifying when the desired temperature is reached.

A too-powerful unit will never be "on" long enough to sufficiently dehumidify the area.

Three factors must be considered in selecting the room air conditioner with the correct output — size of room, the room's exterior exposure and the insulation above the room.

As an example, a living room with 228 square feet of living space (19 feet by 12 feet) would need a unit with 7,500 BTU (British Thermal Units) cooling capacity, if the room had an east exposure and if the ceiling was under an occupied room or an insulated attic.

That same sized room with a west exposure and an insulated ceiling would require a unit with 11,000 BTU.

Selecting a correct-sized room air conditioner should not be a haphazard decision. It is wise to consult a reputable room air conditioner retailer who can help determine the correct size for the room.

The Association of Home

Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM) and various individual companies make available specially calculated charts and selection guides which the homeowner may want to obtain.

In short, consult with someone who knows. Don't just get the same capacity unit that a friend has. The room in question may have a different exterior exposure and entirely different needs. Size is not the only important factor when selecting a proper room air conditioning unit. There are several other things to consider.

Make sure the unit has true flexibility of air direction and movement. You may want to direct the air to adjoining rooms, and you don't want uncomfortable blasts of air or inadequate air throw.

Can the air be thrown straight ahead? To the right? To the left, or in two directions at once? These things should be taken into account when buying the unit.

Operating sound level is an important ingredient of comfort, but it is difficult to determine how loud a unit will be until after it's in use. This can't be judged by the physical size of a unit, and hearing the sound of a unit at the showroom can be misleading.

Ask the retailer about insulation, cushion-mounted moving parts, and choice of fan speeds.

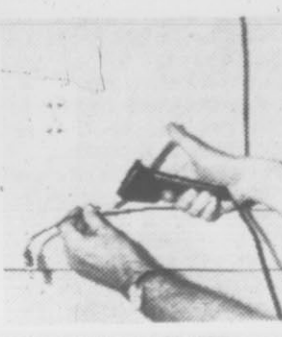

Inspect the size and shape of the filter and insure that it covers the full air return area. Also make sure that it can be easily removed, cleaned and reused.

The unit will be prominently displayed in the home, so it should be aesthetically good-looking and compatible with the surrounding decor.

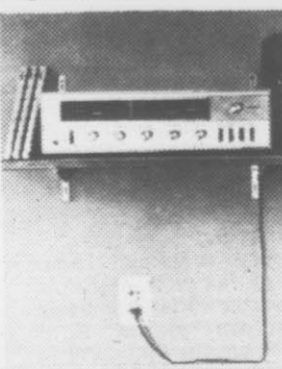

DISHWASHER BRIGHTENS MOM'S DAY by saving her about eight hours a week. Now, a new decorator-front dishwasher brightens her kitchen, too. Mom can match new curtains or wallpaper just by covering panels of quarter-inch plywood that fit the chrome trim strips of the dishwasher front. It's by Maytag.

Money Drips Away

"Pay for what you use, not for what you lose," suggests the American Water Works Association.

What's lost in a water leak? A slow drip, says the association, wastes 15 gallons a day — a one-eighth inch stream, 400 gallons!

As representatives of local water utility people, and proponents of better public water service, they offer these tips for stopping costly, annoying drips.

Faucets often drip because of worn washers. Replacing a washer is simple.

Shut off the water before beginning work by turning the valve under the sink or in the basement. Use a smooth-jaw wrench to loosen the "packing" nut under the faucet handle. Pad the jaws of the wrench or wrap the nut with tape.

Sometimes, the packing nut is covered by a canopy and it's necessary to remove the faucet handle to get at it. The screw that holds the handle may be concealed beneath a knurled disc or a cap that can be pried out.

Some handles are held on by concealed set screws. Loosen with an Allen wrench.

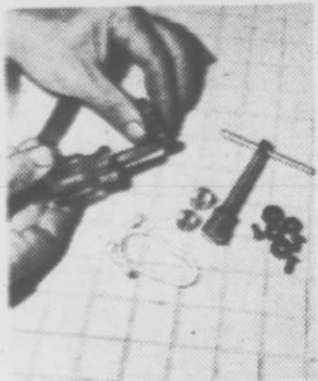

With the packing nut off, lift out the faucet stem. At its end there's a small screw holding the washer. Remove the screw, pry out the old washer and replace it with a new washer.

Packages of assorted washer sizes are available at hardware stores.

Sometimes a washer can be salvaged by flipping it to its other side. Some faucets have diaphragms instead of washers. Replacement procedure is similar to that for washers.

Frequently, faucets drip and washers wear out quickly because of the roughness of the seat against which the washer is compressed.

A faucet-seat dressing tool can be used to smooth the seat. The tool is very inexpensive, and instructions for its use come with it.

Many newer faucets have neither washers nor diaphragms. If they drip, leak, or operate stiffly, repair may often be made by replacing the entire faucet "cartridge." For a single-lever or push-pull faucet, get a "repair instruction sheet" from the faucet's manufacturer or a plumbing dealer.

If water leaks around the stem of the faucet, tightening the packing nut may be all that is required. Otherwise, remove the old packing material inside the nut and replace it with new — also available at the hardware store.

Alternatively, some cotton string wound counter-clockwise around the stem just inside the packing nut may effectively stop the leak.

Toilets have an inlet valve that controls the filling of the tank. A ball float shuts the valve off when the tank is full. If it doesn't shut off completely, the toilet will "run."

If the water flow into the tank shuts off when the ball float is raised manually, the ball may be waterlogged. Unscrew it from its rod and shake it.

If there are sounds of water sloshing inside, a new ball is needed.

If the ball is good, the rod connecting to the valve may need attention. By bending the rod slightly at the middle, the ball can be lowered enough so that it will shut off the water before it reaches the overflow level.

If the water flow into the tank doesn't shut off when the ball float is raised manually, the trouble is usually with the valve washer.

A valve has a washer just like a faucet. After shutting off the water supply, disassemble the valve and replace its washer, which is at the end of the valve plunger.

If a toilet's running can be stopped by jiggling the handle, the trouble usually lies with the stopper ball or its lift mechanism. The stopper ball is what controls the toilet's emptying when it is flushed.

If the stopper ball is badly deteriorated, replace it. If the seat on which it fits is corroded, use steel wool to smooth the seat.

The stopper ball may not be landing squarely on its seat. Check the position of the lift-wire guide. It should be located so that the ball is dropped dead-center. Some replacement balls are designed to compensate for being slightly off-center.

If it's necessary to keep the flush handle compressed to complete flushing, it's usually because the lift-wire guide is too low. It may have slipped. Try raising it about one-half inch.

If the ball sticks in lifted position, check the lift wires. If either needs replacement, get yellow rather than red brass ones. They last longer.

FOR INSULATION
Easier application and better performance are aims of new fiberglass insulation products introduced by John Manville. Water Tastes, Looks Bad? Filter May Be Answer Simple, compact filters end the need to put up with drinking water that tastes bad, smells bad, or looks unclean.

Filtered water is not only better to drink, it makes better coffee, tea, and other beverages. It enhances the flavor of reconstituted frozen juices, soups, and gelatin desserts. It makes better ice cubes.

The newest filters are small, relatively inexpensive, and are designed especially to improve the water used for drinking and cooking.

Typically, they are of clear plastic and have replaceable cartridge inserts. Preferably, they are connected to a separate drinking-water faucet. This insures maximum life for the filter cartridge. On average water, and in average use, a cartridge will last three to four months, or longer.

Typical cartridge filters sell for $25 to $35, with replacement cartridges $3-$7.

Filters are basically of two varieties. One variety is a "clarifying filter."

It is the key to crystal-clear clean water, and is especially good for use with well water. It removes sediment, precipitated iron, sand and dirt. It ends "red water" from suspended iron or rust. Its cartridge is of woven cellulose acetate, which is known familiarly as household plastic wrap.

The second filter variety is a "taste and odor filter." It removes metallic, stale, swampy tastes and the objectionable flavors of decaying organic matter. It removes chlorine and medicinal tastes.

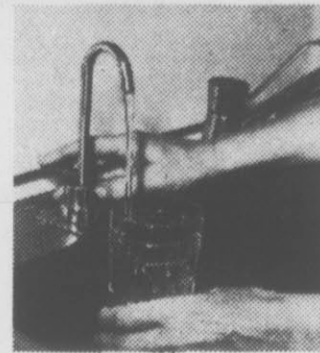

Typically, its cartridge contains activated carbon.

If water tastes and smells bad, and is also turbid or dirty, a clarifying and a taste-and-odor filter should be used in combination, with a clarifying filter first on the line.

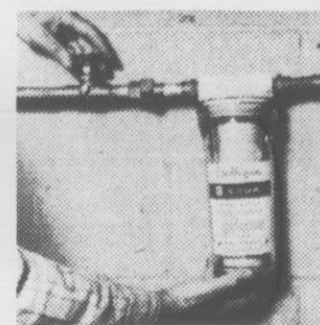

Installation of a filter is simple. It goes easily under the sink and is attached to the cold water line. Or it can be installed in the basement on the pipe leading to the sink.

A shut-off valve permits easy cartridge exchange. For filtration of hot water, special filters are available.

GOODBY, CRABGRASS
Crabgrass, biggest weed problem, is easily licked even before it appears on the lawn by applying a pre-emergence chemical crabgrass-killer once during March or April.

WHEN TAP WATER is low in quality, a separate faucet for filtered drinking water can be the simple answer.

COMPACT FILTERS such as this one can be installed under sink or on the water line leading to the sink.

Lubricants Solve Sticky Problems

Ever try to open a door and suddenly found it was jammed or stuck? Bothered by a schizophrenic window that won't go up or down? Do kitchen cabinet doors squeak, locks fail to lock or unlock?

To keep things moving freely, many specially designed household lubricants are now available.

The Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, makers of lubricants, offers some suggestions:

Balky windows, drawers or doors should not be planed or scraped. A household lubricant that looks like a stick of crayon is available. Rub it in like a crayon. It takes the stick out and puts the slide back where it belongs.

For sticky locks, try a powdered graphite lubricant.

For appliances such as vacuum cleaners, power tools or the chain on a bike, a few drops of a wet silicon lubricant help. Hinges, casters and rollers also keep their free movement with a small amount of the lubricant.

Now Storm, Screen Doors Are Updated with Wood

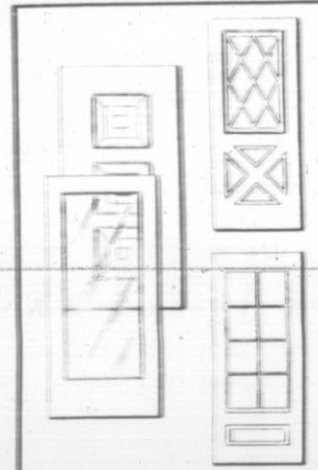

If the present storm door is old-fashioned, unattractive and needs seasonal maintenance, it's time for a change. Modern wood combination storm and screen doors can add to home beauty and subtract upkeep chores.

These new combination doors of ponderosa pine are especially designed to blend with wood panel entry doors. The wood units can be painted or stained to match the entry.

They are readily available at local lumber dealers in stock sizes and in a variety of Colonial and contemporary styles.

The doors are permanently installed and require practically no maintenance. Factory-treatment with a chemical preservative guards against weather abuse.

Because the doors are fitted with interchangeable glass and screen panels, a few turns of the screwdriver are

In New Rooms, New Heating Meets Need

When home improvement means adding a room, there comes the question of heating. Chances are, the existing heating system was designed for the home as it now is, so new additions call for additional heating.

One method of heating a new room is with electric ceiling heat. This can be done either with cable imbedded in ceiling plaster, or with the heating element as an integral part of 4 x 8 gypsum boards.

With either system, nothing shows but the thermostat on the wall.

The ceiling seems to be a large radiant heating panel, warming the area below, notes the Electric Heating Association.

Another answer might be electric baseboard units.

Heating elements are enclosed in slim metal containers, generally installed along the outside walls of the room. Cool air enters close to the floor and is warmed as it provides evenly-distributed warmth throughout the room.

Adding or remodeling a bath? Usually, more warmth is desired here, and it's convenient to be able to increase that heat quickly.

Electric grille, fan-type wall heaters or radiant panels that mount on wall or ceiling add supplementary bathroom heating.

Final decisions can be made in consultation with remodeling contractors and/or heating specialists at the local electric utility.

For appliances such as vacuum cleaners, power tools or the chain on a bike, a few drops of a wet silicon lubricant help. Hinges, casters and rollers also keep their free movement with a small amount of the lubricant.

Now Storm, Screen Doors Are Updated with Wood

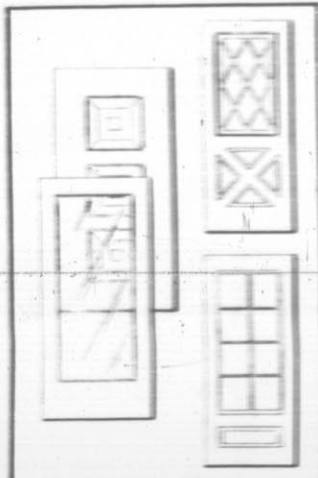

If the present storm door is old-fashioned, unattractive and needs seasonal maintenance, it's time for a change. Modern wood combination storm and screen doors can add to home beauty and subtract upkeep chores.

These new combination doors of ponderosa pine are especially designed to blend with wood panel entry doors. The wood units can be painted or stained to match the entry.

They are readily available at local lumber dealers in stock sizes and in a variety of Colonial and contemporary styles.

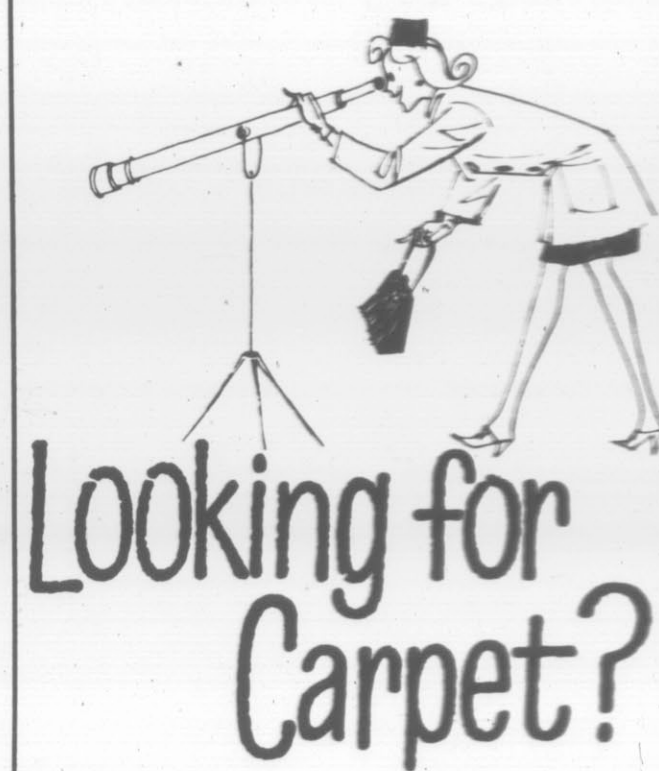

The doors are permanently installed and require practically no maintenance. Factory-treatment with a chemical preservative guards against weather abuse.

Because the doors are fitted with interchangeable glass and screen panels, a few turns of the screwdriver are

In New Rooms, New Heating

Meets Need

When home improvement means adding a room, there comes the question of heating. Chances are, the existing heating system was designed for the home as it now is, so new additions call for additional heating.

One method of heating a new room is with electric ceiling heat. This can be done either with cable imbedded in ceiling plaster, or with the heating element as an integral part of 4 x 8 gypsum boards.

With either system, nothing shows but the thermostat on the wall.

The ceiling seems to be a large radiant heating panel, warming the area below, notes the Electric Heating Association.

Another answer might be electric baseboard units. Heating elements are enclosed in slim metal containers, generally installed along the outside walls of the room. Cool air enters close to the floor and is warmed as it provide evenly-distributed warmth throughout the room.

Adding or remodeling a bath? Usually, more warmth is desired here, and it's convenient to be able to increase that heat quickly.

Electric grille, fan-type wall heaters or radiant panels that mount on wall or ceiling add supplementary bathroom heating.

Final decisions can be made in consultation with remodeling contractors and/or heating specialists at the local electric utility.

"Roofscape" Has Views To Beauty Above All

"Roofscape" is rapidly on its way to becoming a household word to homeowners who see roofs, not merely as a cover on the top of homes to keep out weather, but as a major factor in the overall attractiveness of the home.

Today warm, earthtone colors in asphalt shingles bring new beauty to roofs and permit their color and design to be tailored to other exterior materials and finishes on a house. "In many homes, the roof is the part of the house that makes the biggest impression as one looks at it," says R. L. McMurry, home roofing expert with Celotex.

"Now that the homeowner has a wide range of colors, designs and built-in features available, the roof appearance has become a major factor in home design and remodeling."

Tests indicate that the specially-treated shingle will retain its white color for 20 years or more.

WINDOWS ON THE OUTDOOR SCENE use white plastic panels to decorate a home's exterior, with minimum maintenance. Panels are vacuum-formed by Gladwin Industries, using Cycolac brand ABS thermoplastic from Borg Warner's Marbon division.

Acoustical Ceiling Offers Way to Suspend Noise

A suspended acoustical ceiling installs quickly, easily and helps a do-it-yourselfer put new luxury in any room. To modernize a room, the new ceiling can be lowered to any height or can be installed within two inches of the existing ceiling.

In a basement gam. room, for example, the suspended ceiling can cover overhead plumbing, wiring and ductwork. The existing ceiling does not even have to be level, and Fiberglas panels can be cut with a knife. No preliminary carpentry work is needed.

Panels are supported by self-locking metal framing members that snap together to form a grid system. The grid is supported by heavy gauge wires attached to the ceiling above.

The lightweight panels have a tough, washable vinyl facing and are available in several decorative patterns in 2'x2' and 2'x4' sizes.

Plus new beauty, the system adds new quiet. Fiberglas acoustical panels absorb up to 85 per cent of noise striking the surface, according to tests by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation. Measure the room carefully. Dimensions may vary from wall to wall. Then draw a sketch to determine which panel arrangement gives the most pleasing appearance.

A long, narrow room can appear larger and more nearly square if rectangular panels 2'x4' are installed at right angles to the length of the room.

Plan lighting fixtures at this point.

Glare-free lighting panels take the place of acoustical panels in the grid and are available in flat lighting or prismatic patterns. Two-tube fluorescent fixtures are suspended above the translucent panels.

After determining the amount of materials needed, simply:

- 1) Nail L-shaped wall angles to the sidewalls being certain each is level.
- 2) Fasten suspension wires to the existing ceiling or joists with screweyes and crimp wires along a guide wire stretched between wall angles for accuracy.
- 3) Connect wires at the crimped point to grid members which are snapped together and put panels into place.

Panels can also be lifted out for easy access to wires and plumbing.

Fix-Up Can Be Fast For That Broken Window

FAST FIX-UP for a broken storm-door window starts with an acrylic sheet, trimmed to size and set in place. It's Plexiglas acrylic.

To glaze a storm door window opening, follow these instructions:

1) Purchase a 125" (1/4") thick sheet in a size as close as possible to the storm door window opening. Keep in mind that the sheet should have 1/8" clearance on both sides and on top when installed to allow for thermal expansion.

2) If the sheet requires trimming to required size, use a sabre or hand jig saw with at least 14 teeth per inch. Guide the saw along a straight edge. A band saw may be used with at least 10 teeth per inch. A circular saw with at least 8 teeth per inch is also ideal for straight cutting.

Set the blade height slightly above the thickness of the sheet to prevent chipping. Hold the sheet down firmly when cutting and do not force feed.

3) Sand the sawed edges by hand with medium-grit (60-80) paper.

4) Set the sheet into the storm door frame and replace retaining clips. If firmer retention is required, use small wood or rubber wedges, or replace existing clips with spring tension clips, available at hardware stores.

It's In to Check On Outside

Guttering, Siding Exams Are Due

When the season signals "clean up, fix up" time, a thorough inspection of the home is in order.

A good place to start is with the home exterior. Of course, it's what people see first, so its appearance is certainly important.

Home protection, as well as first impressions, begins with the exterior. Its condition is vital to family comfort.

In an exterior inspection, both siding and guttering should get attention, notes the Monsanto Company, supplier of vinyl siding and other home improvement products.

The following checklist for siding examination is recommended:

1. Presence of moisture. This can lead to termites and rotting wood.
2. Fungus and mildew. They indicate the presence of moisture.
3. Condition of paint. Blistering, chalking or peeling indicates a need for replacement or repainting.
4. Dents can mar the appearance of the home.
5. Cracks, breaks or splits. Replacement is indicated.
6. Openings around doors and windows. Air conditioning and heating are less effective if cool or warm air is allowed to escape.

Gutters and downspouts on older homes should be carefully checked:

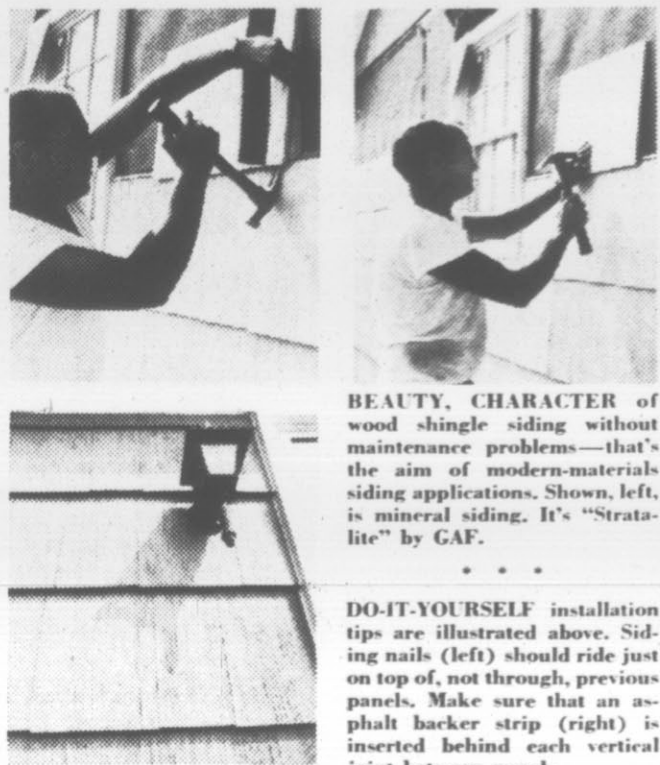

1. Look for rust spots on the under surface of guttering and where it is closest to the house.
2. An accumulation of leaves in the guttering can result in paint blistering, created by an acid condition.
3. Ice build-up during the winter can cause unsightly distortion of guttering.
4. Check sections of guttering where they are joined. Ice and normal expansion and contraction may have caused the guttering to pull apart and leak.
5. Peeling or blistering paint can detract from the appearance of the house.

Many new homes do not have guttering. During a heavy rainfall, water can run off the roof and severely damage a lawn or cause leakage in the basement. The cost of installing guttering can offset the cost of replacing an expensive lawn or pumping out the basement.

An inspection of the house should be made before a home improvement contractor is called. If replacement of siding or guttering is required, the homeowner should be extremely selective

Putting On Happy Face

Putting on a happy face—for the home exterior—is, nowadays, as easy as saying, "siding."

Where once the care of the house outside was a burden to the homeowner, now siding makes it a blessing—because there's no, or little, care.

With easy-to-care-for, modern-materials sidings of mineral fibers, aluminum, asbestos cement and solid vinyl, the homeowner can be freed of continuous upkeep for the outside of his home.

Stone, brick and simulated masonry sidings add a rustic look. Advantages of these new, easy-care sidings are color selection, weather and fire resistance, low cost installation. Most offer concealed nailing. Attractive siding improves appearance and increases value.

Heating Has Key To Quick Change For Interiors

Nine out of 10 home improvement projects will require heating.

With this fact as a basis, homeowners planning improvements can make the job easier by considering heating at the outset, suggests the National Better Heating-Cooling Council.

Updating the heating system can work wonders in an older home, with no structural changes needed. Modern hydronic (forced hot water) baseboard heating panels update room appearance and add decorating freedom, too.

Because baseboard heating panels are thin (they protrude only a few inches from the wall) and are mounted at ankle height, much space is liberated, for furniture can be placed against the heating panels without fear of scorching or of blocking off the heat.

This warm-but-not-hot characteristic of hydronics also permits draperies to hang to floor, carpeting to be laid wall-to-wall.

REGULATING COMFORT
New Comfort Control Center from Honeywell can regulate up to five separate home-comfort systems. The compact unit can combine all switches and indicators needed for home heating, cooling, humidity, air cleaning and odor control.

Home Improvements Can Cool Off, Too

There's no better time to add central air conditioning to a home than during remodeling.

This essential ingredient in any home modernization program makes good sense economically, because the cost of installation can be added to the home improvement loan, and central cooling represents an investment that usually is recovered when the home is sold, notes the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

Air conditioning is overwhelmingly accepted by nearly everybody today, with one of every three new homes built to include it; it is, in fact, considered a "necessity" by two out of three Americans, according to a recent survey.

What about costs? Since every home is unique in its cooling needs, there's no way to pre-determine costs without help from an expert, says ARI.

Estimates Needed
Estimates should be obtained from several reliable contractors who will visit homes, study heating systems, orientation to the sun, insulation and other factors. Nearly any home, whatever its age, size, or design, can be air conditioned, but costs do vary. If the house already has a warm air heating plant with heating ducts that can carry cooling in the summer, the homeowner saves money—paying only for cooling equipment and installation.

If ducts must be added, costs will increase. If there is hydronic (hot water) heat in the home, the cooling system will require its own means of air distribution. This is less formidable able than its sounds, because modern equipment is compact, can often be located in the attic, or in basement, crawl space, or even in a closet.

Savings of interior space are considerable when a "split" system is installed, with the evaporator coils placed inside the home and condenser-compressor located outside. About 80 per cent of residential central cooling installations utilize the "split" system.

Compare First
Before reaching a decision to go ahead with central air conditioning, compare written proposals from contractors. Check that the contractors have specified using the same size equipment.

Check whether equipment recommended carries the ARI Seal of Certification. This emblem certifies that equipment has been manufactured and capacity-rated according to industry-wide standards and has been rigidly inspected and tested.

THREE WAYS to install air conditioning ducts are illustrated here. Ranch style with hydronic heat, at top, has ducts in attic. Split level has short duct runs, centrally located. Two-story house, bottom, has ducts in attic for the second level, ducts beneath floor for main-level rooms.

Automatic Ice Making, Big Capacity Highlight 1970 Food Center Models

This new refrigerator-freezer features Hotpoint's exclusive Exterior Ice Service and will fit almost anywhere.

Hotpoint's refrigerator-freezer line for 1970 features five completely new Food Center side-by-sides, including two with thru-the-door, automatic Exterior Ice Service, and one in the popular 19-cubic-foot size.

Hotpoint also is offering for the first time an automatic ice maker kit which can be dealer-installed on many deluxe models at the time of purchase or later by the do-it-yourself oriented consumer.

Exterior Ice Service is being featured on the 21.2-cubic-foot CSF21K and the 23.9-cubic-foot CSF24K. These models have a dispenser door on the outside of the freezer compartment which pulls down to a 45-degree angle to provide ready access to a bucket containing ice cubes.

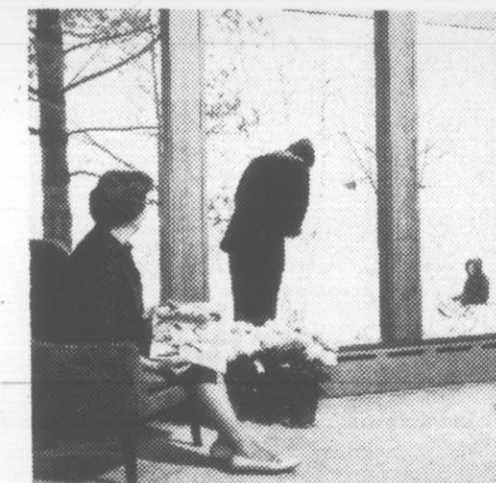

Even without opening the freezer, the five-pound capacity bucket can be easily removed from the dispenser door and taken to a drink-preparation area.

Small, cylindrical ice cubes are made automatically and dispensed into the door-mounted bucket. A photoelectric cell senses when the bucket is full, the freezer door is open, or the bucket is not in place, and turns off the automatic ice maker.

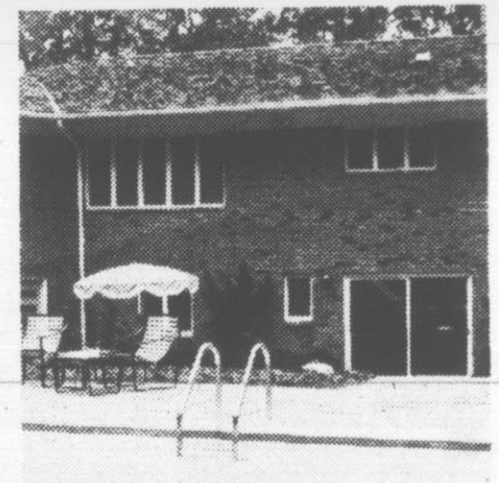

Both Food Centers are completely frost-free. The CSF21K takes just 33 inches of wall space, and the CSF24K only 35 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

Similarly featured side-by-sides without Exterior Ice Service are available. The other side-by-side is the new CSF19E. Hotpoint's first in the popular 19.0-cubic-foot size and the most compact of the five Food Center models at only 30 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide and 64 inches high.

About Ceilings
Acoustical ceiling systems are available from several manufacturers, with the dual advantages of decorative looks and sound control. Ease of installation adds a third benefit.

acoustical properties might be of special interest to the do-it-yourselfer, since such ceilings make it easy to cover up overhead plumbing, wiring and ductwork.

Lightweight yet sturdy, easy to cut to size and glue into place, such beams and posts provide a quick way to luxury and elegance in home remodeling.

Remodeling Wins in Two-Way Stretch for Space, Savings

Today's expense may be tomorrow's bargain — when it's money spent for home improvement.

Adding a room, or converting the basement or attic, increases property value as well as living comfort. And it's still more economical when the homeowner undertakes some of the work on a do-it-yourself basis.

Walls, ceiling and floor are all points to be considered, in the two-way stretch to make both money and space go further.

Paneling Walls
Wall paneling is an example of the type of remodeling the average do-it-yourselfer can handle.

Hardboard panels are durable, yet lightweight enough to be handled by one man. They can be cut or worked with ordinary carpentry tools, and are easily installed over furring strips, or in some cases, right over the existing wall.

Ready-made accessories such as matching moldings and waterproof, cartridge-type adhesive for nailless application simplify the job and give professional looking results.

New Devices Safeguard Homes

During home improvement time, it's a good idea to take a look at how safe the home is. With other repairs going on around the house, now is the ideal time to assure the safety of the home.

Manufacturers of products for home security have developed highly sophisticated devices to alert occupants that someone is attempting to break in, a fire may be starting or smoldering or someone is tampering with doors or windows.

By inquiring at local locksmiths, homeowners can plan for security economically and thoroughly at this remodeling time. Many devices are low cost, take less than one hour to install, in new or older homes.

The home is perhaps the largest single investment a family will make. These devices will protect that investment.

The Home Security System, a complete protection method, blasts out a piercing signal when a window or door is being forced open, notifying the occupants that something is wrong.

The system can be adapted to cellar doors, garages and secondary entrances, with no trouble.

A pre-entry lock system, designed to scare away intruders who try to pick or force the lock or door, is hooked up to a solid-state alarm system which blasts when tampered with.

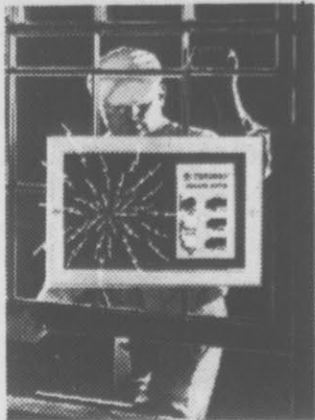

SMOKE DETECTION unit, installed in ceiling, reacts to smoke density with a shrill alarm. It's by Interstate Electronics, a division of "Automatic" Sprinkler Corporation.

The alarm sounds before the door is actually opened, notifying the inhabitants that someone is trying to gain entry.

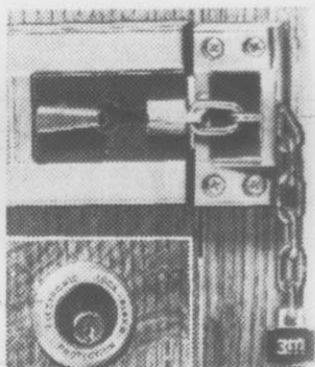

Another element in home protection is guarding against fire. A smoke detection unit, usually installed in ceilings or high up on walls, reacts with a loud shrill when smoke density approaches the danger level.

The system should be placed between living rooms and sleeping areas to best warn of encroaching fire.

The smoke detection installation requires only simple wiring, like that of a doorbell.

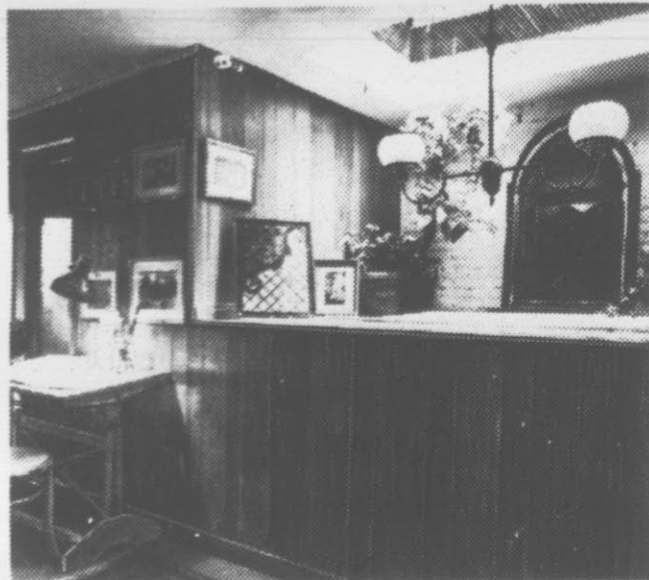

HOME SECURITY system blasts out a piercing signal when a window or door is forced. This one is by Thomas Industries.

PRE-ENTRY LOCK alarm system combines quality lock and solid-state alarm. Any attempt to pick or force the lock or door sets off alarm. It's the 3M Lock Alarm.

HISTORIC HOME, BUILT IN 1856, GETS a roomier, remodeled basement with help of modern building materials. Studio area preserves original brick wall, left, while other walls, ledges are sheathed in Early American siding. Bi-fold metal doors conceal gas and electric meters, and ceiling system covers network of pipes. Indoor-outdoor carpeting helps combat dampness. Doors, siding by U. S. Plywood; Weatheron carpeting, ceiling by Armstrong.

SPACE STRETCHING STARTS AT THE TOP, too, as illustrated by work area on top floor of remodeled 1856 home. Paneling, moldings define area and also enclose unique architectural feature, a stained glass dome. Home is located in a New York City district recently designated historic by the Landmarks Preservation Commission. Paneling, moldings are U. S. Plywood's Weldwood Charter Pecan.

Old Homes Offer Special Features

There's nothing new about remodeling a basement for additional living space. But to start with an area 5'4" high and dig down through earth and gravel to gain an additional 2'4" of height is a bit unusual!

That's what happened when Mr. and Mrs. Richard Flusser tackled the job of remodeling a home built in 1856.

Careful planning, lots of hard work and a choice of modern building materials resulted in a relatively roomy basement, complete with studio for Mr. Flusser, an opera stage director.

On the top floor, there's a work area for Mrs. Flusser, a graphic artist and former television set designer—who actually did most of the remodeling work.

The Flussers House is located in New York City on the site of the Bouwerie (farm) of Peter Stuyvesant, last director general of the Dutch Colony of New Netherlands. The district was recently designated historic by the Landmarks Preservation Commission.

Thus the Flussers, while modernizing for more space, naturally wished to retain the fine old features of their historic home.

The original brick wall is a highlight of the basement studio, where a combination sheathing-siding plywood with water-resistant glue-line was the choice for other walls and ledges. Metal bi-fold doors enclose furnace and meters.

The highly textured, Early American wood paneling and creamy white louvered doors complement the brick wall.

Indoor-outdoor carpeting was a practical choice for flooring, and a ceiling system conceals ugly pipes.

Beth Flusser's work area dramatizes an architectural feature—a stained glass dome between floors.

Footage could have been gained by eliminating the dome, but to preserve this feature, she defined the tiny area by pulling it together with Charter Pecan paneling and moldings.

To the left are stairs leading to the roof, and on far days light from the open door and skylight provides a sun-drenched artist's studio.

'Watch Bottom Row!' That's Rule for Success in Siding

The key to an attractive siding job is the application of the bottom row.

So says Bill Hammond, siding manager of the Building Products Division of GAF Corporation.

Make sure that the bottom row is applied level to a chalk line. If it is, the rest of the application job is easy since the bottom row will function as a level base and all subsequent rows are applied upon it.

For do-it-yourself application of mineral siding, here are the basic steps.

First, using a chalk line and level, establish the lower edge of the surface to be sided at the point where it meets the foundation wall.

Next, cover the surface with an asphalt-saturated felt. This type of felt is today's standard covering for home sheathing material and adds waterproofing protection should any wind driven moisture penetrate the joints of the siding.

Start at Corner

The felt is applied from rolls horizontally with a slight overlap, starting from the bottom of the house and working up.

Next, draw a horizontal chalk line around the entire structure to be sided. Nail a wooden lath along the bottom edge of the surface to be sided at the point where it meets the foundation.

For the first row, start at the corner with a full panel and apply the siding panels in a row, with the top edge lining up parallel with the horizontal chalk line. Nail the bottom of the panel into the wooden lath.

After each panel is nailed into position, insert an asphalt backer strip behind the end of the panel.

These backer strips, which are inserted behind each vertical joint between panels, add extra protection against penetration of moisture.

The second row also starts at the corner, but with a half panel of siding. Once this panel is in place, apply full panels, making sure that the nails ride just on top of, not through, the previous row of panels.

Starting with the third row, merely repeat the procedure, beginning row three with a full panel and then alternating the first panel of each successive row between half and full panels.

Can Be Cut

If a panel does not fit exactly at the end of a row, or around a projection, mineral siding can easily be cut with a saw to the required form.

If individual metal corners are used, apply them upon completion of each row, making sure flanges are securely hooked at the bottom and that the top is firmly nailed.

Complete the siding application by nailing the last or top row at the bottom as usual and also at the top. To insure a good, secure siding, also top-nail those panels which are applied beneath projections such as windows and overhangs.

To finish the job, and to make certain of a weather-tight application, caulk all points where siding panels end-but into such projections as door and window casings, interior corners and all openings made in panels to allow for passage of pipe, conduit, electrical fixtures.

For an attractive application, use matching caulking.

CONTROLLING LIGHT

General Electric designs a 600-watt solid-state fluorescent dimmer which can control from four to 12 4-watt fluorescent lamps. It provides smooth control of light from "Off" to full brightness.

Lighting Has Bright Ideas To Better Living for All

"Home improvement" means to most people new appliances for the kitchen, new wall-to-wall carpeting for the living room, a second bathroom, or a family room added to the house.

More homeowners might keep in mind the one way in which they can improve every room in the house by adding a single ingredient—improved lighting.

When parents realize that in their child's schoolroom or a modern business office, there is probably 15-30 times as much light as in the home living room, for instance, and that outdoors on a sunny day the light level may be 500 times that in the home, homeowners can see why it's a safe guess that more light is needed—in every room of the house.

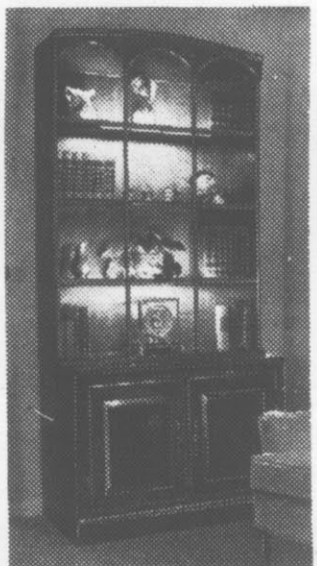

How about a really good study lamp for the teen-age student's room?

How about fastening some simple fluorescent fixtures to the underside of the kitchen wall cabinets to give better light on countertops?

Why not make TV viewing more comfortable by fastening a tubular or regular light bulb, about 25-60 watts, to the back of the TV set to provide necessary "surround" lighting?

Wouldn't it be easier to put on make-up in the bathroom (or for the man of the house to shave) if there were lights on each side of the mirror and a ceiling fixture directly over the front edge of the sink?

And in the living room

LIGHTED SHELVES dramatize collections of books, art objects. Here, 13-watt fluorescent bulbs are tucked away at the back of every other shelf, and recessed so that lamps are completely out of view. Suggested by General Electric.

there are lots of little lighting "tricks" that can make a great big difference in the overall attractiveness of the room, say General Electric lighting specialists.

Lighted valances over windows will "wash" draperies with light, accentuating material pattern and color and texture.

A chain-hung decorative lighting fixture will create an unusual point of interest in a corner area.

Hi/Low Ranges Set The Pace In Modern Electric Cooking

An attractive addition to any kitchen is this 30-inch double-oven electric range with self-cleaning master oven.

Two stylish Hi/Low electric ranges with pyrolytic self-cleaning master ovens are featured in Hotpoint's 1970 appliance line.

Both ranges have full-width opaque black glass windows in the upper oven which become "see-through" when the oven light is turned on. There also are window doors on the master oven.

Among the many convenience features of these new ranges are infinite-heat rotary surface unit controls which permit selection of an unlimited variety of heats to serve all cooking needs, timed and standard appliance outlets, two high-speed surface units, a rimmed, no-drip cooktop, and a two-level built-in exhaust system which removes vapor and cooking odor from the kitchen.

Also standard are removable trim rings, and new reflector pans which can now be cleaned simultaneously in the self-cleaning oven.

The more delicate of the new Hi/Low ranges (model RHV-786) has some extra-special features to make life easier for the homemaker. The oven panels in the eye level oven can be removed and cleaned in the self-cleaning lower master oven, and there is a Rota-Grill retainer which cooks meat up to one-third faster than by roasting.

A meat thermometer in the master oven alerts the homemaker when her roast has reached the desired degree of "doneness," while a Supermatic 3-in-1 surface unit adapts itself to just about any size pan.

Hotpoint, the oldest name in electric cooking, also offers two Hi/Low models with conventional ovens, and two high-oven only models.

All six models are available in Avocado, Copperstone, Harvest and White.

How to Be Lawn Smart with H²O and Grow It Green

By MAXWELL SMART

Would you believe that I know the secrets of successful watering?

Here they are:

Water when the soil is dry two or three inches below the surface. Check it. Don't wait for plants to wilt and droop! Dig down a couple of inches, take a handful of soil and squeeze it. If it forms easily into a soil ball that does not crumble, do not water. If it does not form up and crumbles easily — then it's time to water.

After a good rain-soaking, watering shouldn't be necessary for about five days. But hot sun, low humidity and strong winds all have a quick drying effect.

Sandy soil will absorb water readily—but dries out fast. Clay soil will not accept, or lose water, as quickly as sandy soil. So sandy soil calls for watering frequently — little and often. Clay soil calls for less frequent watering but more water each time.

Watering must be thorough. "Surface only" watering can do more harm than good. Proper watering means soaking the soil to a depth of several inches . . . which means running your sprinkler for several hours. It means not rushing. It means adjusting the faucet to stop too much water from rushing out, running off and flooding the top-soil away.

Newly seeded lawns need moisture every day. Deep, fine, slowly-sprayed water to establish good roots.

Lawns of course are thousands of grass plants. All lawns need more water than other garden features — and a sprinkler hose is almost an absolute necessity.

Why a sprinkler hose? It covers the lawn effectively. In a soft, rain-like spray pattern. It can be turned around corners, along curves and down hard-to-reach strips.

Lawns and flowers and most plants generally are best watered in the morning. Not in the afternoon. Not in the evening. Grass and leaves of plants left wet overnight are susceptible to fungus.

Don't miss the flower beds when gardens are watered. A soaking is what they — and their root-soil need: lay the sprinkler hose down between the plants and adjust the water flow to cover the flower bed only.

Roses are special. Keep the foliage of roses dry. Splashing water carries black spot disease of roses. Get the water into the soil around the plant. Use a sprinkler upside down to soak roots thoroughly.

And water roses in the morning only. Roses in full bloom are most thirsty!

Sweet corn, beans and tomatoes all need plenty of water in the critical growth period. But tomatoes and musk melons will tend to split if they've overwatered during the final ripening stages.

On the other hand, strawberries need water to hold good moist roots.

In dry spells even carrots, turnips and onions, which normally get by on average ground moisture, need a soaking.

Roughly speaking, shallow-rooted crops need a 3-inch watering once a week; deep rooted, 12 inches.

Groups of shrubs have a collective thirst. Satisfy this with a good soaking. Big plants use plenty of water — and a light sprinkling means little or nothing.

Rhododendrons and azaleas, with their shallow roots may call for more watering than other shrubs. The surface of the soil should be moist.

Water a tree by punching holes about a foot deep into the soil in a circle around the outer rim of branches. Let the water trickle down the holes to the tree roots.

Newly-set trees and shrubs need about two years to establish deep root systems. Water them well.

When grass doesn't grow under trees the reason is usually lack of water — because the trees are stealing it! To provide for this, water for an extra half hour under and around the trees.

Roots get oxygen-starved and suffocated by too much water. Root growth is retarded too when the sun cannot warm the water-logged ground to a comfortable heat.

Don't overdo the water. No coarse spray power that will wash away topsoil and seeds. No endless drenching! Don't be a water-logger.

The well-drained foundations of buildings are often too well drained for good plant growth. Plants near buildings are sheltered from the rain they might need — and sometimes heated by the sunlight reflected from walls.

Water these plants well (soak ground 12" to 18" deep) once a week to keep them in the peak of hot weather condition.

MAXWELL SMART, in real life Don Adams of the CBS comedy series "Get Smart," tells the facts about lawn care. He is a special agent for Monsanto, supplier of garden hose and other lawn care products.

Paneling Proposes Way to Renew Room

Take some hardboard paneling. Add a few tools. Then all it takes is a free weekend and a little imagination to renew a room.

"How To" of paneling starts with these tools:

- Hammer
- Hand saw and/or power saw
- Sharp pencil (for marking areas to be cut)
- Keyhole saw and/or electric sabre saw
- Nail set
- Caulking gun
- Level
- Tape or folding ruler
- Scriber (to achieve a tight panel fit)
- Block plane
- Screwdriver

Carefully measure the area to be paneled. If wall is 20 ft. wide by 8 ft. high, five 4 ft. by 8 ft. panels will be needed to do the job.

Before installation, condition panels to home temperature and moisture. For a few days, let air circulate around panel backs and fronts. Transferring panels from a sometimes-damp warehouse to a dry-temperature home can result in panel expansion or contraction.

For more details about do-it-yourself paneling, write Abitibi Corporation, 1400 North Woodward Avenue, Birmingham, Mich. 48011.

DOUBLE CHECK measurements. If panels must be cut, use sharp tools: look ahead for possible trouble areas such as wall outlets. Apply panel adhesive with caulking gun.

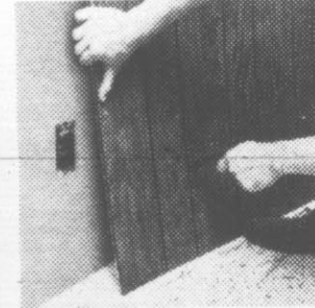

PLUMB THE PANEL, making sure it is vertically straight. If this first panel is plumbed correctly, the do-it-yourselfer should have no problems with any of the remaining panels.

SPACE THE PANELS, allowing one-fourth inch between panel top and bottom, and drawing a line with a color-keyed marker or crayon between panels, as installation is continued.

DRIVE NAILS (6 to 8 per 4 ft. by 8 ft. sheet) into grooves, especially on panel top and bottom. Angle nail in toward panel, minimizing face nailing as much as possible.

TO CUT WALL outlets, use a sharp saw or other sharp tool and double check measurements. It's best to plan ahead for such potential problems, thus simplifying the entire job.

PUTTING ON TRIM, select prefabricated, color-coordinated moldings, available for every panel style. Step-by-step paneling instructions, presented by Abitibi Corporation.

SMALL YARDS OF GREEN TO ACRES AND ACRES of rolling lawn can be handled efficiently with the proper equipment. Rotary mower (left) with vacuuming action will cut and bag clippings during spring and summer and also mulch and bag autumn leaves. If lawns exceed one-quarter acre, a tractor mower (right) may be the thing to ride through lawn chores. Rotary mower with Key-Lectric starting and tractor mower by Toro.

Mower Power Can Give Grass That "Putting Green" Trim

A prospective buyer of a lawn mower is faced with a wide and sometimes confusing variety of equipment. The mower chosen will be a working partner for many a summer, so it pays to match it carefully to the size and shape of the lawn.

The king of powered mowers is definitely the rotary. About 10 rotary mowers are sold for every reel mower. The most popular width is 21 inches, followed by the 19-inch model, according to Claude Morris, director of marketing for Toro.

The rotary mower enjoys greater popularity because its blades are easily maintained in good condition. Rotary mowers do an excellent job of cutting tall grass and weeds as well as being highly effective for fine and coarse grasses.

Easy to Operate

Some rotaries have a special vacuuming action which will mulch and bag autumn leaves as well as cut and bag grass clippings.

Increasing in popularity is electric key-starting. This can mean an additional $40 to the cost of a walking mower, but insures a simple, sure start.

Fully electric rotaries are particular favorites with women, since they don't have to be filled with gas and are the easiest models to operate. They simply plug in and go.

Reel mowers are the answer on fairly evenly-graded land in need of that putting green look. Blades can be set to cut to one-half inch or less.

Sitting Down

Testing has shown that a reel mower is best for steep slopes or terraced lawns but not effective on rough terrain. Sizes for the homeowner are generally 19-inch and 21-inch.

Reel and rotary mowers come in both hand- and self-propelled models. Self-propelled models are, of course, higher priced, but they do cut mowing time and make the whole job easier.

More and more homeowners are sitting down on the job when it comes to grass-cutting. A riding mower represents a time-saving, efficient and labor-saving method to mow large areas — a lot of at least a quarter acre.

Tractors for home use are commonly divided into lawn and suburban categories, with horsepower rating providing the dividing line. Seven h.p. or below is the lawn class.

Saves Shifting

Tractors maintain a large mowing area and also clear away snow, plough, till, fertilize and cart.

Another development is hydrostatic transmission for tractors, completely eliminating gear shifting. Since so much of yard care involves backing and filling, this can be an important time and work-saver. It adds about $200 to the price tag.

No matter what type mower is chosen, the best guide to satisfaction is to buy from a reputable, servicing dealer and get the best mower the budget affords.

Since a mower will be in use for several years, a quality machine with high overall performance is a good investment.

Check on Pipes, Drains Can Help To Prevent Tree Root Troubles

Plan to buy a new home this summer? Make sure that the underground pipes and drains are of durable, watertight material.

Tree roots "instinctively" spread in the direction of nearby water. Once there's a leak or break in inferior piping, destructive roots will invade it and clog the line, notes the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. Cleaning out clogged lines can be a complex and expensive proposition, depending, of course, upon the extent of the damage, the location of the pipe and other factors.

The most effective method, which requires the knowledge and tools of a plumbing contractor, is cutting out the roots with a flexible auger that can be reeled into the lines.

The contractor also has special root solvents that can be flushed through the lines to retard further growth.

Storage Is Must For Improvers

Storage space is a must for the remodeled basement, be it workshop or family room. One handy answer could be brightly-painted pegboards, which hold tools, hobby equipment or whatever.

Shelf systems fit a wide variety of needs, and some of the new ones use tension poles to avoid the need of any wall, ceiling or floor installation.

For still more storage space, a walk-in cedar closet might be built into the walls or under the stairs of the newly-remodeled basement.

SHELF SYSTEMS

New shelf system eliminates need for attachments to walls, floors or ceilings. Stanley "Flaire" shelving systems use tension poles and bookcase frames as basis for creating shelf arrangements and room dividers.

ABOUT DANDELIONS

Unlike most weeds, dandelions are not easier to kill when they are growing actively. Dandelions respond better to chemicals during summer when they are in bloom, report agronomists at Amchem Research Farm, Ambler, Pa.

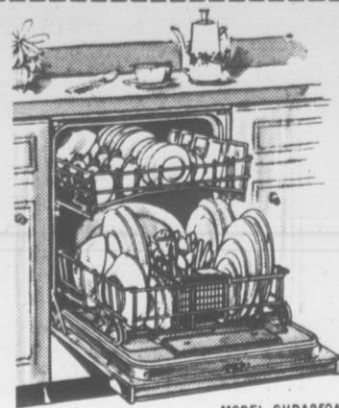

REEL MOWERS provide manicured "putting green" look for small areas of grass. Both hand and self-propelled models are available. Self-propelled reel mower by Toro.

Pesty Weeds Get Push In Play Areas

Are ugly weeds and unwanted grasses invading the patio, barbecue or poolside area? There's no need to waste weekends pulling and digging them out.

These family recreation areas can be kept free of pesty weeds throughout the year with a simple application of a soil sterilant, non-selective weed-killing chemical.

Such a herbicide destroys all vegetation on which it is sprayed, desirable as well as undesirable grasses and plants. It also sterilizes the soil to prevent further weed invasion.

This kind of weed killer is perfect for removing all unwanted grasses and broad-leaf weeds from terraces, sports areas, playgrounds, driveways, building foundations, fencelines and similar areas.

Under Control

One application of a non-selective herbicide eliminates pesty plants for the entire summer. About a week after treatment, the weeds start to turn white or brown. As a rule, most are dead in about three or four weeks.

This formulation may be applied any time when vegetation is growing actively. If weeds or grasses have already captured favorite backyard spots, cut them back to the ground. Use the non-selective spray when re-growth appears.

For best results, be sure the air is calm when you spray, according to agronomists, at Amchem Research Farm, Ambler, Pa. Spray drift from this type of general weedkiller can injure or destroy grasses, flowers or ornamental plantings.

Be Selective

Most non-selective weed killers will not spread out to damage desirable grasses or ornamentals growing next to treated areas. Nor will they soak down to where there are tree or shrub roots.

It's wiser to control lawn weeds with selective weed killers to save grass.

Once again— our fashions have been “discovered.”

By ROBERTA NASH

(Breathlessly) "...because I'd been looking everywhere for this certain dress and I mean everywhere, you know, and yesterday I was in Penneys and I found exactly what I was looking for, isn't that fantastic?"

Fantastic? No, not even astounding. Not even unusual. If I had a dollar for every girl who "discovered" Penneys fashions yesterday, I could fly to Paris for the week-end and "discover" Maxim's restaurant.

Dacron® takes to pleats

...beautifully. Making the most of the fluid look in smashing prints of Dacron® polyester Ultressa®. Both are softly sashed, skirted in flippy crystal pleats. The jewel neck in blue, red or green, sizes 7 to 15, the shirt look in mostly blue, sizes 10 to 18, $18

Ask Them Yourself

FOR MELVIN LAIRD,

Secretary of Defense

What are the Congressional Medal of Honor entitlements?—Robert Kaslyn, Wood Ridge, N.J.

● Recipients of the Medal of Honor are eligible for entry on the Medal of Honor roll. They may elect to receive a special monthly pension of $100, in addition to other pay and emoluments or pensions to which their service entitles them. While the special pension is more than nominal, it does not pretend to measure fully our debt to these heroes. Additionally, the award distinctly enhances the recipient's opportunities, whether or not he remains in the military service.

FOR DR. F. WAYNE KING,

Curator of Herpetology,
Bronx Zoo

Is it true that snakes in captivity must be fed live rodents? What is the biggest snake you have in captivity and what is it fed?—Mrs. G. R. Preston, Canton, Ohio

● Not all captive snakes are fed live rodents. Some snakes feed on lizards, some on fish, and some on birds or mammals. Most can be fed dead food items. The biggest snake in the Bronx Zoo is a 21-foot-long reticulated python, which is fed dead whole chickens and rabbits.

FOR MARY BROOKS,

Director of the Mint

Is it true that the Treasury is melting silver coins?—Ralph Angelillo, Edison, N.J.

● The critical shortage of silver in the United States, which necessitated the change to "clad" coinage, has also necessitated the melting by the Treasury of silver dimes and quarters. These coins are withdrawn from circulation as they flow back to the Federal Reserve Banks and branches through normal circulation channels.

FOR VINCENT PRICE

What are your favorites among the many horror movies you have made?—R. D., Birmingham, Ala.

● "The Fall of the House of Usher" and "The Fly."

FOR ERIC SEVAREID, CBS News

In a recent tv commentary, you emphasized the intrinsic value of friendship and reiterated your friendship for a controversial public figure. Do you have a personal definition for friendship?—H. Aune, Dana, Ill.

● I have none, but surely it includes bearing in mind a friend's total life and works, not just one incident—whether a mistake or not.

FOR TINA COLE of "My Three Sons"

Did you personally select the three boys who play your sons in the show? They are superb.—Ann Hoover, Huron, S.D.

● Not by myself. The triplets, Guy, Garth, and Gunnar Swanson, were selected by Don Feddersen, executive producer; Ed Hartman, producer; Virginia Martindale, casting director; and me.

FOR JIMMY DURANTE

Just when did you become a star and under what circumstances?—Thomas Wiley, East St. Louis, Mo.

● There is never a "date" when a performer becomes a star. It is a lifetime of hard work, experience, and luck. I became a night-club "name," however, in New York during the 20s.

FOR GUY LOMBARDO

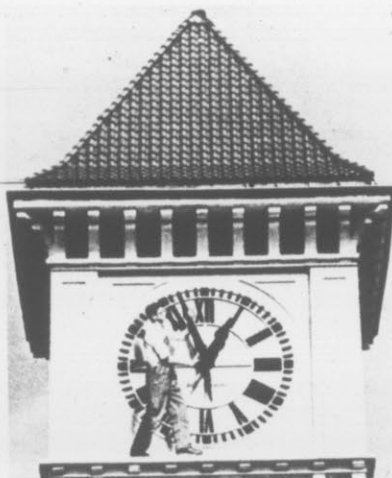

Why did you name your band "The Royal Canadians?"—William Christie, Lowell, Mass.

● We got the name when we were getting started in Cleveland many years ago. One of the men there suggested that since Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians and Al Lyman and his Californians were doing all right, we might do well as Guy Lombardo and the Royal Canadians.

Want to ask a famous person a question? You can through this column, and we'll get the answer from the prominent person you designate. Send question, preferably on a post card, to Ask Them Yourself, Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We cannot acknowledge questions, but $5 will be paid for each one used.

What in the World!

Old Timer Daylight Saving Time was first instituted in 1916 as a World War I measure. This steeple clock in Thomaston, Conn., was 103 years old then. The clock is still in use today. So is Daylight Saving Time, and this weekend marks the beginning of its 1970 season. Setting your clock hands may be easier for you than it is for the Seth Thomas man to push these giant ones—but just as hard to remember the chore. So, don't forget to check all your clocks.

Young Men Honor the Old Celebrating the 50th anniversary of the U.S. Jaycees, the Chattanooga, Tenn., chapter points with pride to the Towers. That's their nonprofit, 204-apartment, fireproof building for the elderly, which has lounges, library, and a 24-hour emergency-call service. Residents must be at least 62, with a maximum yearly income of $4,185, to rent an $80-a-month efficiency or a $122 one-bedroom apartment. The project took the Jaycees four years to complete, from their first awareness of the need for middle-income housing for the aged. The chapter is so pleased with the results that it has purchased adjoining land for an eventual second building.

Dopey Plant Did you know that there is a common plant which can be anesthetized? The mimosa is so sensitive that, if touched, the leaves fold at once. According to Ware T. Budlong in her new book, "Performing Plants," it is also so sensitive that it responds just as a human would to chloroform! The mimosa plant, if placed in a tight container for a half hour with the anesthetic in a small dish nearby, will no longer respond to touch—not until the effect of the chloroform wears off.

Tennis Through History Some of the early tennis dresses would be right back in style today—but not for tennis. Eastman Kodak points out three from their pre-wash-'n'-wear collection, beginning with the 1880s: that lady wore boots, pantaloons, petticoats (including a bustle petticoat to fill out the dress), designed full-length in a tiny flowered print, popular this season. The 1900s Gibson Girl wafted about the court in long, flowing sleeves and tie—a look that's again in fashion. In the '20s, the Duchess of Windsor chose a striped midi-skirt with hip-sash—and saddle shoes. The footwear hasn't made it the second time around, but the length sure has.

Jules Jürgensen. Not just another pretty face.

There are 7,258,204,800 reasons why the next watch you buy should be a Jules Jürgensen.

That's the number of seconds in 230 years.

And Jules Jürgensen has been a great name in watches all that time. Most any brand you can think of is a johnny-come-lately compared to us. You have to make a very fine product to have people buy it year after year after year.

You've got to have beautiful faces, of course. But the face is there for everybody to see. It's easy to choose a watch by its looks.

You've got to be beautiful on the inside, too. Beautifully running. Beautifully lasting. Beautifully accurate.

The Fun and Profit of a Vacation

Growing numbers of Americans are finding them a sound investment

By THEODORE IRWIN

DO YOU dream of having a hide-away mountain cabin, seashore cottage, or A-frame ski house of your own?

For at least three million American families, this dream has come true, and this year another quarter-million are expected either to build or buy a second house.

The weekend or vacation home, once a symbol of wealth and status, has now become a fervent goal of those with moderate incomes. A University of Michigan survey reveals that fully half of American families want a second home, and one out of 10 is saving for it.

Bill and Martha Carroll, for example, for years had gone to Cape Cod for summer weekends and vacations, staying at inns, motels, and rented cottages. Gradually the Carrolls realized that, like the average U.S. family, they were spending as much as 10 per cent of their income on recreation and leisure activities. Last year, they bought a small cottage, then rented it for three months to help pay for needed equipment.

Behind the great demand for away-from-it-all places are several factors: the increase in leisure and vacation time, better roads and highways that make seasonal homes easily accessible, and the growing urge for relaxation in our high-pressure society.

More and more, too, people are learning that it's possible for a second home to pay for itself, at least partly. That is, if you start by figuring what it would otherwise cost for vacation stays at hotels or motels, weekend trips, summer-cottage rentals, and, perhaps, camp for the youngsters as well.

Besides these actual savings, other features—often overlooked—usually make a vacation house a good investment.

First, the value of a well-built house is likely to increase about 5 to 10 percent a year, especially if it is in a thriving region with such recreational amenities as swimming, fishing, or skiing.

Many seasonal homes have doubled in value during less than a decade. For my own lake-front cabin in Connecticut, I was recently offered 40 per cent more than I paid for it five years ago. My neighbors around the lake have had similar offers through real-estate agents. As good vacation property becomes scarcer, the upward trend continues.

Dr. Richard Lee Ragatz of Cornell University, who made a far-reaching analysis of the vacation-home phenomenon, points out that increasing the equity in a house, while enjoying it, is "an important criterion for consumers with limited resources." This growth in equity is regarded by most economists as an effective hedge against inflation.

To cover a substantial part of what it takes to own the house—taxes, maintenance, and mortgage payments—many a second-homeowner rents out his house for part of the season and off-season.

At one Gulf Coast beach resort in Florida, an owner recouped his entire investment in four years through rentals. Around Vermont ski slopes, vacation chalets rent for as much as $350 for a seven-day week or $100 a weekend. More than one property owner has used this income to build another bedroom and bath.

A third, though indirect, way of making a vacation home pay for itself rests on the concept of "leisure now, retirement later." Among middle-aged couples, Dr. Ragatz found, the mortgage on their primary residence may have been paid off, and they see in a vacation house a way to invest funds that were previously allotted for monthly mortgage installments. Later, when the children are grown and on their own, the large primary house is sold and the vacation house is refined for comfortable year-round living. Then the retired couple settles down to a simpler, less expensive way of life.

Lately, the pattern of vacation homes has been shifting from the isolated retreat to the planned community. That's where rentals and appreciation in value are more favorable to the homeowner.

A developer smooths your path to a seasonal home by finding the land, installing essential services, exploiting the recreational potentials, and often creating a few that nature overlooked. Financing a vacation home there is easier; banks in the area are more inclined to grant mortgages in established resort areas.

For another type of vacation getaway place, mobile homes are also increasingly popular, particularly on Maryland beaches. Financing is as easy as buying a car. One disadvantage is that while a house rises in value over the years, a mobile home depreciates.

Much newer is the idea of living on a vacation houseboat, which can be financed with only 25 per cent down and seven years to pay. You'll see them in Kentucky's vast network of interconnected lakes, in Florida, Georgia, and on the rivers and deltas of Northern California. They are for the adventurous who glory in the joys of waterfront living. However, neither the houseboat nor mobile home can ever be expected to pay for itself.

Before picking a more conventional vacation home, get to know the area

Florida vacation homes, like these in Port St. Lucie, can serve full time after retirement.

before buying by spending weekends in the neighborhood and talking to residents about local conditions. Consider travel time: the place should be far enough from your city apartment or suburban house to provide a total change of scene, yet not so far that driving to it becomes a chore.

To command decent rentals and ensure your investment over the long run, the house must have good kitchen and bath facilities. Bedrooms may be small, but living spaces should be generous, with some kind of outdoor porch, deck, or terrace.

You can start with a small house, adding to it as the family grows. Many people are buying land and putting up an economical pre-fab, shipped from the factory in sections, with wiring and plumbing.

Evidently, the need to escape from the stresses and strains of urban living is universal. As one couple wistfully remarked to a realtor the other day, "We don't want much, as long as we have a view, a stream, and some rocks." Once you find your getaway retreat and learn that it can almost pay for itself, the rewards of relaxed living are infinite. ♦

DR. SPOCK: From Child Care to

The "nation's godfather" is again in the news, this time with some provocative views on sex, marriage, and morality

THE COUNTRY'S most publicized pediatrician, Dr. Benjamin Spock, has just written a new book called "Decent and Indecent—Our Personal and Political Behavior." The book had only been on stores' shelves a few hours when an indignant Philadelphia woman charged back to where she had earlier made her purchase and indignantly demanded her money back:

"I raised my Arnold on Doctor Spock's theories. I agreed wholeheartedly with his sentiments about ending the war in Vietnam. I wept with joy when his indictment for helping others to cope with the draft was overturned. But this is just too much! My goodness, there's a new Doctor Spock—he's a sexual reactionary, and he favors hypocritical enslavement of women!"

She then showed the startled saleslady several sections of the book that had enraged her:

● "For decades," writes the peace-nik-pediatrician, "I was an uncompromising civil libertarian and scorned the hypocrisy usually involved in the enforcement of obscenity laws. But recent trends in movies, literature, and art toward what I think of as shock-obscenity, and the courts' acceptance of it, have made me change my position. . . . I would now join a majority in favor of new laws which would determine guilt simply on the basis of judges' and juries' sense of shock and revulsion."

● "When a husband tells his wife about his troubles at the office, he wants her to sympathize with him in his feelings of frustration. He does not want her to tell him how easily she herself would have surmounted these difficulties."

● "It would be fairer if they (women) were brought up at home and educated in such a spirit that they would enjoy, feel proud of, and be fascinated by child-rearing rather than frustrated by it."

Other passages of the book are equally provocative:

● "Americans can now talk boldly or jokingly about sex in mixed company—though I think there is often a forced quality to this."

● "Man can be the most affectionate and altruistic creature, yet he's potentially more vicious than any other. He is the only one who can be persuaded to hate millions of his own kind whom he has never seen and to kill as many as he can lay hands on in the name of his tribe or his God."

● "Most Americans who consider themselves thinking people are disillusioned but are not conscious of this feeling. They are not disenchanted with the physical aspects of civilization. They are proud of spaceships and artificial hearts. What they have lost is a belief in the dignity of man."

"My family settled in New England long before 1776," he said, "and as long as I can remember, we were rock-rib Republican. My father was a lawyer for the New Haven Railroad. He believed that you could best serve mankind by being physically fit—that it was your moral responsibility to keep in shape."

Spock "keeps in shape" by bicycling. We accompanied him on a cycling trip around New York's Central Park. While pedaling vigorously in a cold, wet wind, he told us that he was sent to Andover, the classic preparatory school for Yale and then to Yale itself. There he made Scroll and Key, one of the most exclusive clubs, and pulled an oar on the rowing team that went to the 1924 Olympics. He decided to become a doctor and attended the Yale Medical School and the College of Physi-

He has no explanation for its phenomenal success. The message was simply love your baby, observe him sympathetically to see what he needs and wants, enjoy him, trust yourself. Somehow, it answered to the condition of large numbers of mothers. The phrase "Dr. Spock says . . ." became a tender shield against other, more rigid doctors. A large part of a whole generation of babies was fed when hungry, cuddled when they cried, and allowed to crawl and play in the mud.

Doctor Spock's babies grew up to throw him a rough challenge. "Just because 23 million copies of my book were sold doesn't mean everyone who bought it did what I said," he remarked a little plaintively. "Some wouldn't or couldn't. I had no idea I was going to be charged with organizing a new life style, nor did I intend to do so."

Nevertheless Doctor Spock has been blamed for the hippies and the yippies, the flower children and the "Hell's Angels" and for some college rebels. He has participated in dozens of peace demonstrations, and in every one of them there has been at least one gawky youngster who carried a sign that said, "I was a Spock baby."

"Usually," says Doctor Spock wonderingly, "when the mothers who claim they raised their children by my book see their youngsters marching down the street, they begin to cry. I don't know why. I've been told I'm a Pied Piper, but the fact is I've never made any strong pitch to these kids—they made it to me."

In the early 1960's, scientific material passing across Doctor Spock's desk made him feel increasingly concerned about the dangers of nuclear fallout. He spoke out against nuclear-weapons testing and soon found himself drawn into the total anti-war protest.

"I know it upset a lot of parents that a baby doctor could take a controversial stand," he told us. "But if they hold me responsible for having a lot to do with bringing their children up, I have to ask what's the point of doctors and parents working and sacrificing to bring up healthy, well-adjusted children if they are going to be incinerated?"

"If a baby gets to be one year old,"

Dr. Spock, child authority for thousands of mothers, examines hospitalized boy.

Doctor Spock's new book will surprise many parents who learned to love and trust him and whose children are "Spock babies." We found out that the doctor defies being put into a convenient slot when we recently traveled with him, talked with him, listened to the man who has changed more parent-child relationships than anyone in the country.

Doctor Spock feels that his radical response to the Vietnam involvement was dictated by his own parents. "They used to counsel me," he told us, "'choose the right way and not the easy,' and, 'accept service to others as a moral obligation.'" cians and Surgeons of Columbia University. In 1927, while still at medical school, he married Jane Cheney, a pretty Connecticut girl. They have two children, both boys.

Spock studied pediatrics and psychiatry. He was one of the first American doctors to complete residencies in both fields. When the demands of World War II inducted Spock into the Navy, the mothers of his patients begged him to write down instructions on child-rearing that would cover everything but emergencies until he got back. That's how the popular book, "The Common Sense Book of Baby and Child Care" he continued, "it's chances of dying before age 21 are only 1.5 per cent. Does anyone think the risk of nuclear war is that small? And does it make sense to present to your lovingly reared child a society that is confused about sex, callous about brutality, prone to violence?"

It was then that he decided to devote his energies full time to speaking to young people who are concerned with serious social problems. Thus far, he has spoken at more than 100 colleges and universities across the country. He doesn't receive a lecture fee—it all goes into a fund that helps young men who are in legal trouble with the draft.

We went with Doctor Spock to the State University at Stony Brook, New York, where 2,500 students gave him an ovation as he clambered onto a shaky platform composed of folding tables. Still ram-rod straight and lean and six-foot four, he looked at the hirsute male faces and told how he had ordered his son Michael 20 years ago to shave off his beard. "I was wrong," he admitted as he fingered a heavy watch chain that ran across his vest. "I wouldn't do that now," he laughed. The students cheered.

More serious, he went on to describe his angry disillusionment with former President Lyndon Johnson. "I campaigned hard for him," he said, "because he promised he would not escalate the war. Among others, I helped to get him elected. A day after his election, he telephoned me and said that he hoped he could live up to my faith in him. Then a few months later he did escalate the war. I'm very ashamed that I worked for him. But I suppose a man can be a humanitarian at home even if he's a war monger in Vietnam! I wrote him letter after letter. No use!"

Doctor Spock said, "Pretty soon I learned that the F.B.I. was questioning the doorman of our apartment house about my comings and goings. I laughed. Who could be interested in an aged pediatrician? Next thing I knew I was indicted."

Spock's Federal indictment followed the so-called "Whitehall Caper" in New York City. Accused of abetting draft resistance, he brought his case to court by breaking through a police line that was formed to protect the Whitehall military induction center from a demonstration.

"It began," he said, "when I tapped a policeman on the shoulder and said, 'Excuse me, I want to break through your line to commit civil disobedience. . . .'"

The rest is recent history. Spock, with others, was tried and convicted. But he was subsequently acquitted of the charges. "Many parents wrote to me during that time," he said. "They told me that they were sorry they had used my book to raise their children. I couldn't figure it out because the young men and women who said they were Spock babies seemed absolutely great. It was really very strange. It was as though the babies had read my book and raised themselves."

The man who has been called the "nation's godfather" decided to write a book that would help adults understand themselves. He sailed around the Caribbean on his 35-foot sloop Carapace until he had finished the new book.

At a recent reception, Spock discussed the book. It turns out that he isn't all that permissive. He's against rock-throwing and locking up college deans. He offers a lesson on how to organize a peaceful and effective protest movement and says the first thing is to pass out leaflets and call a meeting. He says he would join a revolution only under extreme situations—if the President abrogated the Constitution. He is against obscenity and brutality in books and movies and especially in reality. He's against sexual promiscuity and warns us that it produces a callousness that eventually blunts the sex experience. But he thinks we'll eventually have to accept sincere, unmarried love.

Right or wrong it would be hard to dismiss the kindly gallantry of the doctor who has been hissed, kicked, jailed, and vilified in the course of his concern for society. We asked him if he had a message for young mothers. He answered with his now-classic first line from "Baby and Child Care": "You know more than you think you do." ♦

The Real Meaning

A child's playthings are steppingstones to healthy,

By KEVIN V. BROWN

AT A RECENT party, a group of mothers were discussing their children.

"My little boy seems fascinated by different colors."

"Mine likes anything he can grab."

"And I'll bet anything he grabs, he puts in his mouth, just like mine."

"Well, my Johnny just likes things he can bang on."

All of these mothers were right, in a way, probably without knowing the real reasons why children are attracted by some objects more than by others, why they prefer playing with some simple toys and ignore more expensive ones, or even why they would rather bang on a kitchen pot with a soup spoon than play with a new toy that just came from the store.

Psychologists have proved that children know exactly what they are doing when they react to their environment, including toys, in often-puzzling ways. And it is a wise parent that studies the reasons behind some of this behavior to help the child progress smoothly and effectively through his several levels of learning.

A judicious selection of toys can help immeasurably. From the beginning, toys can be necessary stimuli. According to Dr. Lee Salk, clinical associate professor of psychology in pediatrics at Cornell University Medical College and brother of Dr. Jonas Salk, the discoverer of a polio vaccine, "Toys can be more than diversionary playthings. They can be a vital factor in the growth of a normal child."

A child is born into the world with five senses that need development and a mind and emotions that need nourishment and confidence. Even lying in a crib, an infant is learning. He probably discovers his body first of all. The simple, normal act of putting his thumb in his mouth provides two stimuli, one to the mouth and one to the thumb, and he learns that his thumb is part of him.

The next thing he puts in his mouth, perhaps a teething ring, teaches him there are other objects that are not part of him. He then begins to distinguish between himself and objects that are not part of him and to distinguish other objects from one another. "As the child grows and learns to use his hands, rubberized rings can serve several purposes," Dr. Salk says. "He can grab it, touch it, feel it, put it in his mouth, and gum on it and taste it."

The more objects he is exposed to, the more "inputs" this wonderful infant of a "computer" will receive, the quicker his senses develop. And the more confidence he builds in himself, the more comfortable he feels in this brand-new world.

So-called "mobiles," dangling conglomerations of miscellaneous items that hang from strings and balance one another and sway in the breeze, can stimulate his sight with movement and color, his ears with tinkling sounds, and, if he can reach it, his sense of touch.

Goldfish can also be an effective substitute. They can be placed at the head of his bed, encouraging him to raise his head when on his stomach and exercise his neck and back muscles, and fascinate him with their colorful, random movements.

When he is old enough to sit up and reach for things, objects of different sizes and shapes that he can pick up and handle—odd-shaped teethingers, multi-colored balls, rattles—delight him because these are all new touch sensations. And it is a natural instinct to put any or all of them to his mouth not because he's hungry but because the taste or the massaging of his gums is another new sensation. If the toys can be shaken to make noise, all the better, otherwise don't be surprised to see the child deliberately throw them to hear the sound when they hit.

The next step in the development of a child, aided immeasurably with thoughtful selection of toys, is when he begins manipulating his environment not just to feed his senses but to use his new-found confidence and exercise some power over his surroundings. "When he begins to crawl," says Dr. Salk, "his environment becomes a factor. He learns he can move around and manipulate the things around him. He learns he can change his environment and is not a prisoner of it. His play materials should be something that he can handle and do something with."

It involves not just observing and absorbing his stimuli but controlling it. He begins to push, pull, twist, turn, put one object on top of another, and tear them down again, and fit pieces together and take them apart. He's now at the stage when push-pull toys that make noise or strange movements, blocks that fit together in multi-colored patterns, or noise-making toys that can be hit and be made to do something are all fascinating to him.

About this time, it often puzzles parents when the child is more fascinated by, say, the box a toy came in than he is in the toy itself. The box may be newer to him than the toy. It's a new texture he has never felt before, and he may be able to tear it apart and make two pieces from one.

Further development through toys begins when the child not only observes, then controls, his surroundings but creates ideas of his own toward them. He is now at the age where he wants to use toys and other objects for a purpose. He begins to sort, match, select, and fit things together.

It is also at this period that paints and crayons and sand and water begin to fascinate him because he can construct things with them creatively. And recognition for his artistic talents—essential for his growing confidence in himself—is vastly important. After drawing a picture or building a sand castle, it's instinctive for him to show it to someone, his mother or father usually, for the much-needed praise, "See what I did!"

The period of imitation comes along, too, when girls mimic their mothers with dolls and toy dishes, and boys mimic their fathers with toy cars.

Dr. Salk interprets this as a period when the child begins to see results and becomes interested in working toward an end product.

All of this miniature-toy activity, however, will not be enough to fill up all their days because their young bodies will cry out for physical activity and competitive games. Then the parks and playground become their second home with their swings and slides and "firemen's gym" that they can climb all over.

It is a wise parent who sees, through the proper selection of toys, that the child gets enough of the right kind of stimuli.

"Children need toys and playthings the way adults need books and music and the performing arts," Dr. Salk concludes. "They stimulate the child the way the arts stimulate adults." ♦

Every Woman Wants the Gift Of Complexion Beauty

If every woman in the world could choose just one gift of beauty, nine out of ten would ask for a lovely, flawless complexion. Of all feminine beauty assets, this is the one that is most desired, most cherished.

Today, simply by smoothing a tropical moist oil over your skin, you can at last lavish the very ultimate of loving attention on your complexion. The discovery of this rich, remarkable fluid has made it incredibly easy to cherish and beautify the skin so that it holds its lovely appeal for years and years to come.

The moist oil helps the complexion to keep always at the peak of its perfection. Its special enriching constituents of oil and moisture exert an isotonic pressure to balance easily with the skin's own fluids, helping to alleviate wrinkle-dryness, smoothing the complexion to a velvety softness and successfully capturing a radiantly lovely bloom.

When skin protective processes begin to slow down with the passing of time, or become inadequate in effect due to the influence of a hot sun, drying winds or biting frost, the complexion very often suddenly finds itself in dire need of supplementary care that will encourage and guard its basal cellular functions. The purpose of the revolutionary tropical moist oil is to assist nature when necessary to boost these natural fluids and so give your complexion a fuller measure of health and beauty.

An invisible film of moist oil applied daily to the face and neck besides serving as a sub-foundation for make-up, will promote nature's efforts to conserve precious dermic moisture, for its perfect blend of oil and moisture is homologous to the skin's own fluids.

This unique moist oil is available in Europe and other parts of the world. In America it is available from druggists as Oil of Olay, the phenomenal discovery of our time that reconfirms the eternal truth that an exquisite complexion is the most essential criterion for beauty.

Beauty Skin-Care Consultants Recommend

For sheer loveliness in complexion beauty, consultants are now recommending that a film of moist tropical Oil of Olay should always be smoothed over the face and neck before applying make-up. This will cherish and beautify the skin as well as protect it against the drying effects of wind and weather.

Towards maturity cherish your skin with a little extra care to smooth wrinkle-dryness and help keep facial lines at bay. Before retiring, apply a generous film of Oil of Olay, massaging it with the fingertips in circular movements that spiral upwards and outwards.

To keep your lips soft and pretty, give them a generous quota of the beautifying moist oil when you do your face. This light film of Oil of Olay will also act as a foundation for the smooth and lasting application of your lipstick.

SHELLEY WINTERS: The World's Her Stage

Shelley Winters and Robert DeNiro in scene from new film, "Bloody Mama."

SHELLEY Winters was not one of the scheduled guests on a recent tv talk program. She was just a member of the audience who had come to enjoy the show. But the two-time Oscar winner just couldn't contain herself.

Shelley voiced her opinions from the audience on subjects ranging from peace marches to rebellious youths in a loud and dramatic manner. She shouted out her feelings to host David Frost and debated violently with guest William Buckley, Jr.

That's Shelley Winters. Actress cum laude, social protagonist, mother, and everybody's next door neighbor.

She has just opened in a Broadway play on the life of the Marx Brothers, called "Minnie's Boys," as well as having completed four movies in a year's time.

Unlike many actors who live in a show-business world, Shelley Winters is actively involved and interested in politics and society in general.

She lives with her 16-year-old daughter Tory, who is the center of her life and draws a strict line in raising her.

The reason behind Shelley's great concern for her daughter is probably based on her own experiences. Shelley has been through a lot of marital crises. "After two-and-a-half marriages, I've come to the conclusion that most men feel that their wives must always be where they are."

"During the War I was married to a navigator. I hardly knew him. We didn't even recognize each other when he came back; I had the marriage annulled."

Shelley's marriages to Italian actor Vittorio Gassman, Tory's father, and then to actor Anthony Franciosa were less than successful experiences.

"My life had been marvelous," she said, "until I got married. For instance, Tony and I acted together four years. Then we got married. I would often ask myself, 'What am I doing here?' We couldn't work together any more."

Making her way to Hollywood, Shelley persevered until she landed a contract with Columbia Pictures, which tried to turn her into a glamorous starlet. One day she heard George Stevens was looking for an actress to portray the role of the factory girl in "A Place in the Sun." She read for the part and got it.

The actress has won Oscars for her roles in "The Diary of Anne Frank" and later for "A Patch of Blue." The good roles keep coming, and Shelley keeps commuting between Hollywood and New York. Her other most recent films are "Arthur! Arthur!", "How Do I Love Thee?" and "Nobody Loves Flapping Eagle," which are scheduled for release this year.

Shelley knows what it means to work unselfishly for something—she knows how to get outside herself and become involved in a cause rather than be just a spectator. Perhaps that's what makes her the fine actress that she is, and the one and only—Shelley Winters. —TERRY SCHAEDEL

Now! MOTALOY gives your car's rings and valves a replating job while you drive!

HERE'S HOW MOTALOY WORKS!

SEE HOW ONLY $6 WORTH OF MOTALOY RECONDITIONS YOUR ENGINE — HELPS PREVENT THE NEED FOR $100 RING & VALVE JOB!

JUST DROP 4 Motaloy tabs into your gas tank... and you've started your engine rebuilding job! Each tab is a scientifically compounded alloy of 9 metals and elements. As you drive, tiny Motaloy particles are released into the fuel. These Motaloy molecules are carried through the fuel line into the combustion chamber... where the intense heat of ignition activates them to soften, then remove carbon deposits. Then, Motaloy starts metal-plating pitted and worn surfaces of cylinder walls, piston rings, valve seats, and stems.

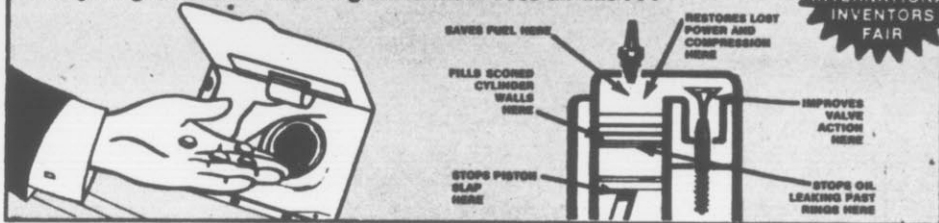

A SINGLE MOTALOY TREATMENT DOES ALL THIS FOR YOUR ENGINE!

The more you drive, the more protection Motaloy deposits in the form of a fine, anti-friction metal plating that rebuilds, smooths, and protects vital surfaces! As Motaloy continues to plate and re-plate, engine compression is increased without a ring and valve job! Gas mileage improves, your engine eats less oil! And over fifteen years of use by over a million motorists — some of them with cars that have clocked over 100,000 miles after a single Motaloy treatment — prove that Motaloy can keep your engine running younger and peppier... for years longer!

PROTECTS NEW ENGINES... REJUVENATES OLD ONES!

Getting a new car? Start it off with a Motaloy treatment — 6 dollars of protection that can mean invaluable extra engine life for your car. Can actually help maintain full factory compression for the life of your car... so you'll get better performance for years longer... and a better trade-in or resale price whenever you decide to sell! And Motaloy's track record on cars that have rolled up 50,000... 70,000... even 90,000 miles shows fantastic results in improved compression, lower gas and oil consumption, better pickup, smoother running — just as if the engine were years younger! Give your car's engine a new... and longer... lease on life with amazing Motaloy! Remember — a single Motaloy treatment lasts for the life of your car! And Motaloy cannot harm even the finest engine in any way!

Here's all you do and you do it only once! Just drop 4 Motaloy Tabs into your gas tank and this single treatment does all this...

WINNER OF THE GOLD MEDAL OF THE INTERNATIONAL INVENTORS FAIR

"About 1960 I put some Motaloy tabs in my gas tank, and I have driven this Mercedes-Benz 135,000 miles since!"

L.A.M., Sioux City, Iowa

"About 5 years ago I put Motaloy tablets in my Cadillac. I drove this car 125,000 miles and it never used any oil between changes—1,500-2,000 miles!"

V.V.G., Cincinnati, Ohio

"My Chevrolet had 49,000 miles on it. It had noisy valves and other troubles. Motaloy corrected all this. It is running better than new."

L.F.M., Waterboro, S.C.

"After using Motaloy in my Chevrolet my compression increased an average of 31% pounds per cylinder, which to me is conclusive proof that Motaloy will do everything that is claimed for it."

W.P.C., Elkview, West Va.

"My Dodge used one quart of oil every 225 miles. After using Motaloy I drove 1,245 miles and did not have to add any oil."

G.W., Cincinnati, Ohio

"Since adding Motaloy I have driven more than 1,500 miles, and I must say that I am amazed about the wonderful results. My gas consumption improved 40%, and my oil consumption is practically nil."

W.G.K., Fort Atkinson, Wash.

TESTS BY TRINITY TESTING LABS PROVE MOTALOY RESULTS!

Radioactive Isotope Tracer Tests Confirm Motaloy's Plating-Action!

...The activation of the Motaloy and the subsequent tracing operations of the activated Motaloy was conducted by an independent research laboratory especially licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission to supervise the industrial application of radioactive isotopes.

Approximate Amounts of Activated Motaloy Deposited on the Surfaces (after approx. 60 hours of operation)

Piston Rings.....	Light
Piston.....	Light
Cylinder Walls.....	Light
Intake Valve Face.....	Very Heavy
Exhaust Valve Face.....	Heavy
Intake Valve Seat.....	Heavy
Exhaust Valve Seat.....	Medium

The above tracing of the radioactive Motaloy is positive proof of the actual transfer of the Motaloy particles from the gasoline tank on to the surfaces of the above surveyed parts of the engine.

TRY MOTALOY AT OUR RISK!

A complete Motaloy package (4 tabs) is only $6.00. Try Motaloy in your car for 30 days, to give its plating action a fair-chance. If at the end of that time your car's engine isn't running smoother... if you aren't using less oil... if your gas mileage hasn't started to improve (as it will continue to do until you've reached full factory compression)... if you don't agree that Motaloy has given your engine a new lease on life — just return the empty Motaloy package, and we'll send you back every penny of your purchase price!

If you do find Motaloy does all the wonderful things we say it will, tell your friends about it. They'll thank you for spreading the good word!

* Gold Medal, Naples, Bronze Medal, Brussels, 1964

You'll never need to buy another pair of socks again— for the rest of your life! (unless your laundry loses them)

These revolutionary
8-ply nylon socks are made of yarn so indestructible...
we unconditionally guarantee to give you FREE replacements —pair for pair—for any you ever wear a hole in!

6 pair
only $7.98
12 pair for $14.98

When our new merchandise man was offered an exclusive on these indestructible nylon socks, he called the manufacturer a liar.

"Can't be done!" he said. "If the socks are as strong and durable as you claim, they've got to be so stiff underfoot, they'll be unwearable!"

"Kitten-soft," said the manufacturer.

"Always come out like new," barked the manufacturer. "Permanent colors, lasting texture and shape."

"Or you'll weasel the guarantee," added our man, doubtingly.

"Unconditional!" snapped the manufacturer.

"What's the catch?"

"No catch, no secret!" said the manufacturer happily. "8-ply yarn of DuPont nylon—instead of the usual 4. Woven so closely, they make ordinary socks look like they're three-quarters air, by comparison! Styled by one of the world's great sock designers—for perfect proportion and fit. This yarn is guaranteed to wear forever, in normal use. That 'normal use' simply means regular ordinary wear—don't burn holes in them deliberately, or try to cut them with a scissors or razor."

We still had to be shown. So we got samples. And we wore them. And wore them. And machine washed them. And Laundromatted them. And tortured them. Like wearing one pair for a week straight—till we thought they'd drown in sweat.

Then we washed them—with no sweat! They looked and felt like new. The socks didn't surrender. We did. They're for real—and forever! So here they are. The forever socks. All black, or in a 6-pair assortment of smart solid colors to complement any wardrobe, 2 pair black, 2 charcoal, 1 navy, 1 loden. Ankle length, with elastic tops for snug fit. Fit any size 9½ to 13.

If you've got a slow laundry (or grown-up kids), take us up on our discount dozen offer... 12 pair—only $14.98. Same assortment (only doubled)... same forever guarantee!

I nearly turned into a banana sour-cream cake, before I lost 83 pounds

By Ellen Clausing Jepertinger — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Believe it or not, I began to cook at the age of seven. Not because my mother made me, but because I wanted to. And up in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, where I was raised, that meant hot rolls, cream puffs, baked bread, everything that was delicious and fattening. It was a great beginning for one who was to marry a Milwaukee, Wisconsin grocer and develop a wide reputation for banana sour-cream cake. Unfortunately, it was a terrible start for someone who wanted to be slim. The fact is, between my mother's cooking and my own, I ate myself into a size 22½ dress, which is a lot of body. 230 pounds in all!

Of course, I wasn't that heavy on my wedding day. Just good-and-solid. Changing my name from Clausing to Jepertinger also meant adding some hearty German dishes to my collection of recipes. Sauerbraten, cheese cake, chicken fried in beer, tortes — no wonder I had little success trying to diet.

The birth of my daughter didn't help my figure, either. And even after she was born, I continued to eat for two. This added 30 pounds in almost no time. When I look back now, I realize how wonderful my husband was about the whole thing. Never a sarcastic word. All he used to say was: "There's more of you to love." But in my heart, I wasn't fooled.

I went to the doctor more than once about my weight. Then I'd wind up with diet pills, but somehow I could never stick to them. The last batch was red, but my appetite got the better of them and I continued to eat. Besides, they made me feel nervous, so I finally stopped taking them and went back to baking banana sour-cream cakes. At least, they brought me praise. Even got me some newspaper publicity. You see, my cakes were very much in demand at school PTA meetings, where I was an officer. And they made a great Easter pastry special for the store.

Isn't it a shame that everything that tastes so good going down looks so ugly showing up on the scale?

I guess what really jolted me into reducing was a photograph, taken by a friend of mine at her son's confirmation. When my daughter saw it, she said: "Mother, you've taken up the whole picture." That did it. At last, I saw myself as others did. I'll always be thankful to her, because it made me do something about my weight, and faster than all the warnings I'd had about my health and high blood pressure.

It was my husband who remembered that my mother had used the Ayds Plan to lose weight. And I can tell you, she had a figure any woman would be proud of.

On the sofa is yours truly, all 230 pounds of me. Funny how I never saw myself as others did.

Now that I'm down to 147 pounds, you can see why I feel like strutting in my new clothes.

Well, I went to the drugstore and bought a box of the plain chocolate fudge Ayds. Though later on, I switched around and tried both the chewy vanilla caramel kind and the chocolate mint fudge. I took them like the directions say, one or two before meals with a hot drink. For me, it was coffee. And you know, it had the same effect on me that eating candy before a meal has on kids. I just didn't feel like eating as much when I sat down at the table. It actually helped me to cut back my appetite. Yet, this candy contains no harmful drugs, but it does have vitamins and minerals.

I might mention that in reducing, one other thing was working for me along with the Ayds Plan. My husband sold the grocery store and I took a job in an office. And having all those slim young girls around made me really want to reduce. So I not only took Ayds before meals, but also at my coffee breaks and while watching television in the evening. And I started to lose some weight.

That doesn't mean I stopped baking. I'm quite active in Job's Daughters and Eastern Star and we have lots of luncheon meetings and affairs where we sell food to earn money. So I still make my banana sour-cream cake, but Ayds keeps me so satisfied, I don't have that craving to eat everything I bake.

Of course, the most satisfying part of the Ayds Plan is the compliments. When I'd lost most of my weight, I went to a school meeting with my husband. Afterwards, Bob showed the principal his new model car. Then laughingly, but proudly, said: "Now meet my new-model wife." Having lost nearly 83 pounds, I'd gone from a size 22½ dress to a 14 and, believe me, that's some difference.

I just can't tell you how good it makes me feel to think about it. Especially since it's the first time in my life, thanks to the help of the Ayds Plan, that I weigh less than my husband.

QUIZ

How Much Do You Know About the Opposite Sex?

THE opposite sex is probably the most explored and talked about subject in the world. And yet men sometimes appear to be strange animals to their female associates, and women just as often leave menfolk in a state of bewilderment.

Here's a true-or-false quiz on the subject which gives you a chance to see how your beliefs stack up against the facts uncovered by scientific investigators.

1. Men are easier to understand than women.
2. Women are more subject to feeling "blue" and depressed.
3. Men spend more time thinking about sex than women do.
4. A man is more likely to have a guilty conscience than a woman.
5. A woman's glance takes in more territory than a man's does.
6. Women who are avid readers are likely to be antisocial creatures who prefer books to people.
7. Women have a better sense of direction than men.

ANSWERS

1. False. Psychological studies show that men are much more inclined to conceal their emotions, to keep their real feelings under wraps, than women are. Women, tests show, are more gregarious, more outgoing, more communicative, more willing to exchange confidences, and to reveal themselves to others.

2. True. In a survey conducted by the University of Michigan, when students were asked, "Do you ever get very depressed?" twice as many females as males answered yes to the question.

3. False. A battery of interviewers from the University of Colorado conducted a confidential survey, collecting data from men and women in an area-sampling technique encompassing nearly every strata of society. The question asked was, "What percentage of the time would you estimate that you think about sex?"

The findings showed that women spent just as much time thinking about sex as men did. As for how much time, this ranged from "never" or "hardly ever" to over 50 percent of the time.

4. False. Studies show that men are far more inclined than women to regard their conscience as something to outwit, and women are more prone to feel guilty—to listen to the "still, small voice," and to obey its counsel.

5. True. At the University of California, Los Angeles, the vision of over 17,000 men and women drivers was tested. Women demonstrated a significantly larger field of vision without even turning their heads or moving their eyes.

6. False. Women who get the greatest pleasure out of reading tend to be outgoing toward people.

7. False. Psychologists at one university administered special sense-of-direction tests to nearly 300 men and women students. The men averaged appreciably better scores than the women.

NOT DEAD BUT SLEEPETH
Before awakening Jairus' daughter, Jesus said, "She is not dead, but sleepeth." Of Lazarus, he said, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth." Later he said plainly, "Lazarus is dead." Paul refers to those who sleep in Jesus. Daniel says that those who "sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." The dead sleep neither in heaven, purgatory, nor a hell of torment. What Can You Do About Today's $54-a-Day Hospital Costs?

LIKE EVERYTHING ELSE, the cost of being sick or hurt has gone up sharply. The average daily cost of one day's stay in the hospital has tripled since 1952—from $18.35 to $54.08 a day. Experts say hospital costs will rise even higher, because everything hospitals buy today costs more, and they must make huge investments in modern, life-saving equipment.

These $54-a-day hospital costs have put millions of Americans in a dangerous spot, because their health insurance is no longer enough to pay the bills. They'll either have to pay the lion's share out of their own pockets—or buy more health insurance, using money they'd rather save for the future.

But now there's a remarkably different kind of money-back health insurance that solves this problem. This revolutionary plan takes the worry out of life because it returns money to you if you don't get sick or hurt.

Like ordinary health insurance, this remarkable plan pays you generous tax-free cash benefits if you do get sick or hurt. The cash comes to you direct-by-check, to spend any way you wish. It pays you regardless of other hospital, medical or surgical insurance you may have, including group.

People over 65 get the cash they need to help fill the gaps in Medicare.

One of two things will happen—you'll either get sick, or you'll stay well. You'll feel more secure knowing that, either way, you must get paid.

But unlike ordinary insurance, this low-cost plan means you no longer have to get sick or hurt to collect. If you stay well, you still get a big check. Instead of paying premiums which return no money if you have no claims, you get a cash refund of all your basic annual premiums at maturity. It's like having an extra savings account for your future pleasure and security.

You don't even have to stay 100 per cent healthy to get money back. If you collect less than what you paid in annualized premiums, you get a cash refund of the difference. So no matter what, you must collect. It's the sensible, "no-risk" answer for people who no longer want to gamble against today's rapidly rising medical costs.

This remarkable Money-Back protection is guaranteed by Bankers Life and Casualty Co. as part of the famous White Cross Plan protecting over 6,000,000 Americans. And the White Cross Plan also includes new low-cost protections to help folks over 65 fill the gaps in Medicare that could cost them thousands.

The story of this revolutionary health insurance that also pays you cash if you stay well, and special "Over-65" plans to supplement Medicare, is told in the Gold Book, an informative booklet offered free by Bankers.

NOTE: Readers of Family Weekly can get a free copy of "The Gold Book" by using the postage-paid reply card attached to this page. There is no cost or obligation.

THEY TAKE THE EAST FORK... YES... TOWARD THE FRONTIER.

SCOUT NUMBER THREE SHOULD OBSERVE THEM SOON. TELL HIM TO REPORT ANY MORE BREAKDOWNS. THE SLOWER THEIR PROGRESS, THE BETTER.

PATIENCE, BIG STOOPI! I, TOO, HAVE A GREAT WISH THAT WE FREE TERRY LEE. WE, ON FOOT, MOVE AS SWIFTLY THROUGH THE FOREST AS THEIR TIRED WAR CARTS CAN ON THE BAD ROAD. THE FATES WILL DECIDE.

LATER... REPORT FROM SCOUT FIVE, GENERAL LHASSA. THE CONVOY HAS LEFT THE ROAD AND IS HALTING IN A MEADOW FIVE KILOMETERS FROM THE FRONTIER.

HMMM... IT GROWS DARK, BUT IF THEY MERELY STOP FOR THE NIGHT, THEY WOULD HAVE CHOSEN A VILLAGE WHERE U TU'S TROOPERS COULD AMUSE THEMSELVES. WHY A WILDERNESS MEADOW?

EYIEEE! I BEGIN TO UNDERSTAND. AN AIRCRAFT CAN LAND IN SUCH A PLACE! SO CLOSE TO THE COMMUNIST BORDER! A RED AIRCRAFT! SO THIS IS U TU'S PLAN FOR TERRY AND THE OTHER!

WHILE IN THE MEADOW... AHHH! BRING MY FLASK. OUR JOURNEY IS OVER—AND PEKING'S EMISSARY ARRIVES TO TRANSACT OUR BUSINESS IN THE MORNING.

HA! THE YOUTHFUL WORLD-MOLDERS! JOIN ME IN TOASTING A SUCCESSFUL MISSION. SHORTLY, YOU WILL CLASP HANDS WITH YOUR COMRADES IN THE REVOLUTION—EH? SUCH SCOWLS! WHY?

YOU KNOW WHY—YOU PIG! I'M JUST GETTING THE PICTURE. DELIVERING THOSE SQUARES TO RED CHINA WAS MY IDEA—ONLY YOU'RE GOING TO STEAL THE CREDIT.

"HALF THE FAILURES IN LIFE ARISE FROM PULLING IN ONE'S HORSE AS HE IS LEAPING" —AUGUSTUS WILLIAM HARE

HAS THE PRESIDENT SEEN THE OLIVER WARBUCKS REPORT YET?

YES, SIR...AND HE'S MOST ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT THE POTENTIAL OF THAT AMAZING NATHAN!

"THAT AMAZING NATHAN" IS AN ADMIRAL'S DREAM COME TRUE! BUT IT COULD BE A NIGHTMARE... IN THE HANDS OF AN UNFRIENDLY POWER!

© 1970 by News Syndicate Co., Inc. World Rights Reserved

THIS IS THE FIRST SEA TEST OF THE WARBUCKS SHIPYARD'S AMAZING "INVISIBLE SHIP"... DEVELOPED AT THE REQUEST OF THE U.S. GOVERNMENT!

AN', "DADDY," SOMEBODY ON THE OUTSIDE STARIN' RIGHT SMACK AT US WOULDN'T BE ABLE T' SEE THE NATHAN HALE?

RIGHT, ANNIE! THIS SHIP HAS BEEN TREATED WITH A SECRET COATING WHICH REFLECTS AND ABSORBS RADIANT ENERGY!

SO IT'S INVISIBLE TO THE NAKED EYE... UNLESS ONE IS WEARING THOSE GAMMA GLASSES WHICH PERMIT THE WEARER TO ACTUALLY SEE THE ELECTROMAGNETIC SPECTRUM WAVES!

IF YOU WERE WEARING GAMMA GLASSES, THIS IS HOW THE "NATHAN HALE" WOULD LOOK!

AND CERTAIN REPRESENTATIVES OF AN UNFRIENDLY FOREIGN POWER ARE FRANTIC WITH UNSATISFIED CURIOSITY!

THERE IS SOMETHING THERE, WE ARE CERTAIN! THE WARBUCKS SHIPYARDS HAVE BEEN AT WORK ON A TOP SECRET PROJECT FOR MANY YEARS, OUR AGENTS REPORT!

BUT WHAT, COMRADE... WHAT IS IT WE ARE TRYING TO SEE??

IN PEACETIME, THE NATHAN HALE IS A FANTASTIC LUXURY LINER! IN AN EMERGENCY, BY THE MERE PRESSURE OF A BUTTON... WATCH, ANNIE!

...IT CAN BE CONVERTED TO A TROOPSHIP WITH A CAPACITY FOR 75,000 MEN... AND IT CAN TRAVEL AT SPEEDS OF OVER 100 KNOTS PER HOUR!

EXACTLY, ANNIE!!

ALL THIS LOOKIN'S WORKED UP AN APPETITE IN ME, "DADDY"...

I FIGURED IT WOULD... SO, WE PRESS ANOTHER BUTTON AND PRESTO!!!!

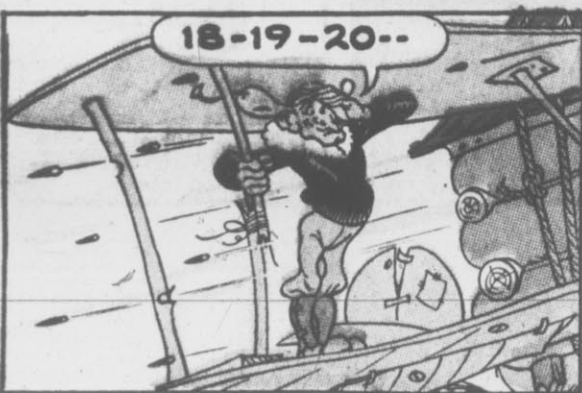

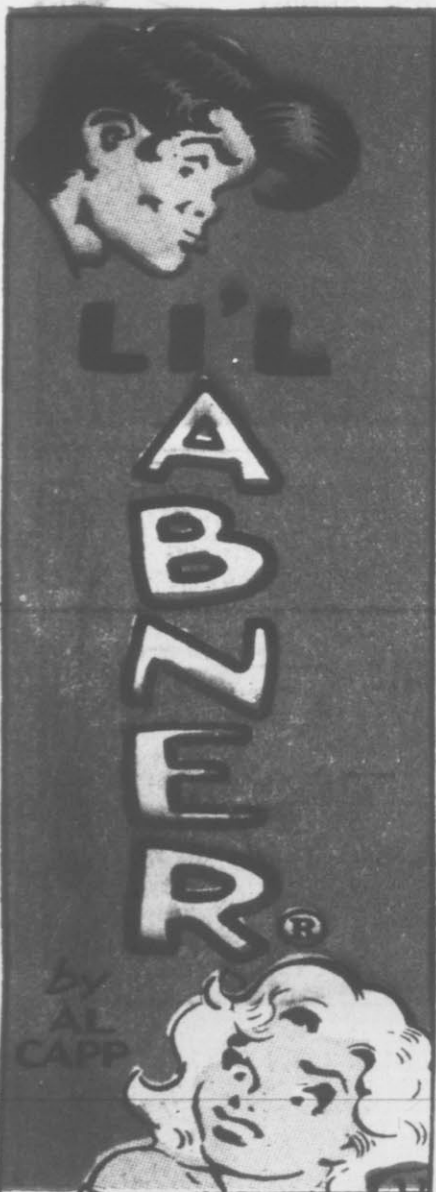

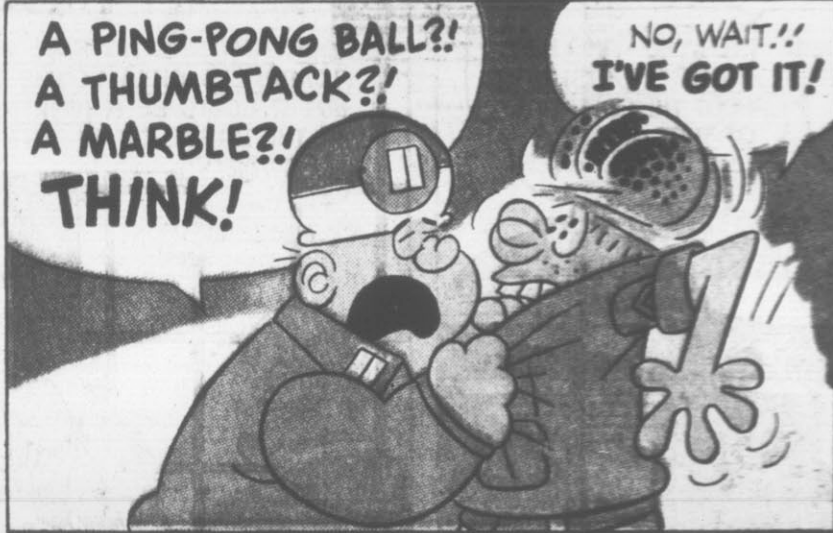

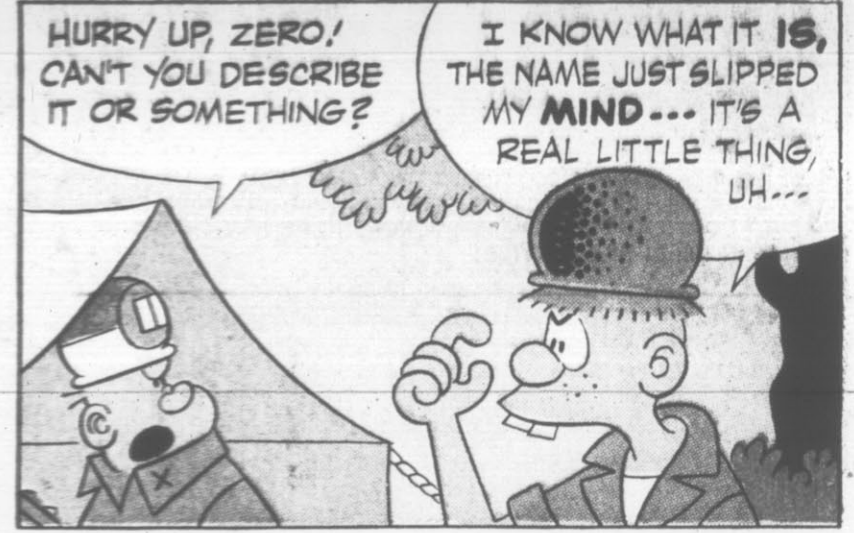

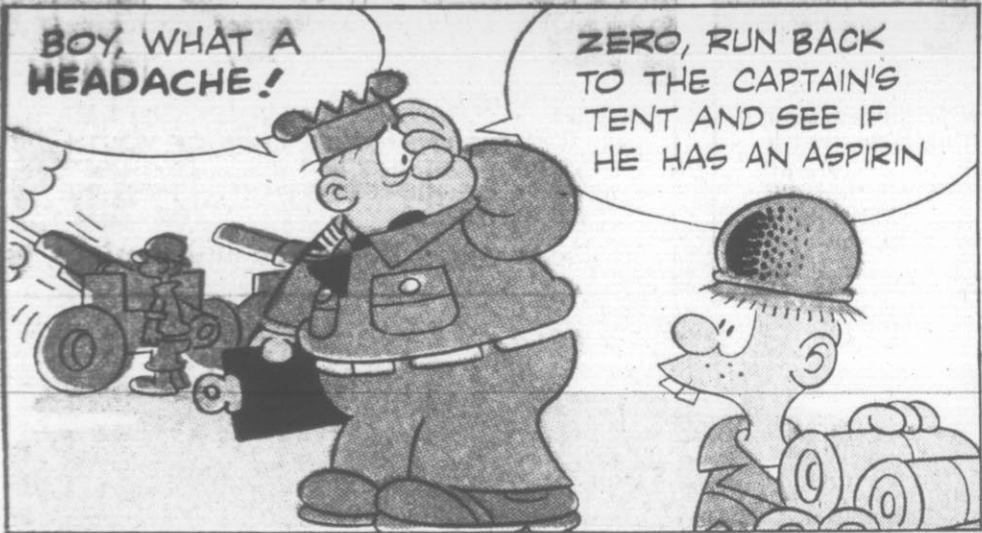

ONE THING STILL BUGS ME... WHO DOES THE DISHES??

NOBODY! THEY'RE SELF DISSOLVING! YOU SEE, ANNIE... MY STAFF THOUGHT OF EVERYTHING!
