Blow Aimed At Sanctuary In Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a stunning turn of policy, President Nixon has launched a surprise offensive by U.S. and South Vietnamese troops against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong sanctuaries in Cambodia.

He declared the assaults were essential to save American lives, continue his Vietnam troop withdrawal program, and help end the war.

Nixon announced his controversial decision to the nation Thursday in a dramatic televised speech in which he acknowledged it might make him a one-term president but argued the stakes were too high for political considerations.

"Whether I may be a one-term president," he declared, "is insignificant compared to whether by our failure to act in this crisis the United States proves itself to be unworthy to lead the forces of freedom in this critical period."

His decision was immediately assailed by a number of leading senators, although some others praised it. In the immediate aftermath of the speech there was no doubt Nixon faces a bitter and prolonged battle in the Senate.

A White House official said the thrust into Cambodia should last six weeks to two months. Thousands of U.S. and South Vietnamese troops are engaged against an estimated enemy force of 40,000.

Nixon charged the Communists in the last two weeks have been overrunning Cambodia and turning it into a vast springboard for attacks into South Vietnam. He promised that "once enemy forces are driven out of these sanctuaries and their military supplies destroyed, we will withdraw."

But no one in Washington could predict how much of a fight the enemy forces would put up or how long the new, expanded phase of the war would continue. The reactions of Moscow and Peking, apart from expected angry outcries, were also admittedly unpredictable.

In words which seemed to recognize the risks of Russian and Red Chinese counter-actions, however, Nixon said:

Critic Affirms Goals Are The Same
PTI Decision Posed For County Voters Tomorrow

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Voters here tomorrow will have the opportunity to decide whether Pitt Technical Institute will become a community college.

To establish Pitt Community College and Technical Institute, voters must vote "for" on the ballot, thus giving the Board of County Commissioners the authority to appropriate funds, either from non-tax-revenues or from a special annual levy of taxes (not to exceed seven cents per $100 valuation), or from both sources, for the financial support of the Pitt Community College.

A vote "against" marked on the ballot would not affect the operation of Pitt Technical Institute as it is now operating, but would simply reject the institution's bid for community college status.

Community college status for

PTI essentially would add a two-year college transfer program to the technical, vocational, adult education, extension and community service programs offered presently.

Offering the first two years of college would enable students to transfer from one program to another on the same campus as their interests or needs demanded, and would allow students to attend a two-year college without having to bear the extra cost of attending college away from home.

At present there are about 170 Pitt County students attending Lenoir Community College at Kinston. They could receive the same courses at PTI if it were a community college.

Several persons, including at least one member of the PTI Board of Trustees have spoken out against the establishment of a community college here and have openly opposed the change.

A.B. Whitley Jr., a member of the PTI Board of Trustees said, "Over the past several weeks, it has seemed that I have been at complete odds with the administration of PTI."

But he said, "I want to emphasize that all of us involved in this discussion have the same goal — the betterment of education of a large group of Pitt County citizens."

Whitley noted that differences arise over three questions: "What is the proper field of endeavor for PTI? Will technical education be best served by conversion of PTI to a community college? And is there a need for a community college in Pitt County? All of these questions are inter-related."

The past few years have seen struggles in higher education "for small colleges to become large colleges and then to become universities," the board member pointed out. "When East Carolina was granted its deserved university status, every state supported college in North Carolina rushed to become a 'university' for the purpose of prestige and status."

The North Carolina General Assembly created a group of technical institutes, Whitley explained, "because of a great need for improving work capabilities of large numbers of North Carolina citizens who could not or did not desire a college education."

Saying that over the past several years many of these institutions have "graduated" to community colleges, Whitley questioned, "It is true that there is more prestige in the field of higher education in being a community college rather than a technical institute, but do these two organizations have the same purpose?"

Mayor Prepares Complaint

Mayor Frank M. Wooten, Jr. confirmed this morning that he and other citizens will file a complaint against the City of Greenville, the Redevelopment Commission and the Greenville Utilities Commission on the recently approved plans for the Central Business Development project.

Questioned about this, Mayor Wooten disclosed that he had asked members of the City Council and the City Manager Harry Hagerty to meet with him last night.

"My reason for asking the councilmen and the city manager to meet with me," Mayor Wooten said, "was to inform them in advance that action to file a complaint is contemplated."

Mayor Wooten stated, "The final draft of the complaint is now being reviewed, and it is likely that it will be signed next week, making it an official action."

Indicating that the text of the complaint will be made public once it is completed and signed, Mayor Wooten added, "I will have a full statement for the public at that time explaining my reasons for taking this action. I realize this will create controversy, and I regret that I am convinced this action on my part is necessary."

Jones said that estimated cost of the project is $300,000. Bids will be opened on June 12. A total of 240 working days will be required to complete the project according to estimates, Jones said.

The building will be used to meet needs of government agencies in the Greenville and Pitt County area for additional or more adequate office space. A new postal facility located several blocks from the old up-town location was opened last year with increased facilities.

U.S. Troops Setting Up
For Assaults On HQ

SAIGON (AP) — About 8,000 U.S. combat troops swept into Cambodia 70 miles northwest of Saigon today and began setting up bases for assaults on the headquarters zone of the supreme Communist command for South Vietnam operations.

It marked the first time in the nine-year-old Vietnam war that an American ground force has extended its operations into Cambodia, at least in force.

About 55 miles to the southwest one of four South Vietnamese task forces that invaded the Parrot's Beak area of Cambodia Wednesday linked up with Cambodian troops defending the provincial capital of Svay Rieng. This force had thrust 30 miles into Cambodia along Highway 1.

Scores of U.S. B52 bombers and nearly 100 artillery pieces blasted the way for the American assault force accompanied by some 2,000 South Vietnamese troops and hundreds of tanks and armored personnel carriers.

Enemy resistance was light and scattered in the area known to the military as the Fishhook, and advance units stabbed 20 miles into Cambodia.

One U.S. C130 cargo plane dropped a 15,000-pound four miles inside Cambodia to blast away jungle land for the building of a base called Fire Support Base Center.

The mission to set up bases indicated that the Americans plan to stay a while in Cambodia. While initial U.S. Command reports indicated only light ground action, Associated Press photographer Charles Ryan reported from four miles inside Cambodia that American transport helicopters lifting in troops ran into heavy enemy groundfire.

Ryan said a score of helicopters were hit. Pilots told Ryan that five of the helicopters were shot down and crashed.

A crewman told Ryan that one pilot was shot in the head while flying his helicopter at tree-top level, and the aircraft immediately crashed. A radio transmission said the pilot was killed, but the U.S. Command in Saigon said it could not confirm this.

If confirmed, it would mark the first American serviceman killed in an offensive operation on Cambodian soil.

The U.S. Command said that by dusk Friday, 99 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops had been killed, most of them by helicopter gunships, and one supply truck destroyed.

Initial reports from the U.S. Command said six Americans were wounded.

Sources said the operation, the biggest in nearly three years, is aimed at smashing North Vietnamese and Viet Cong supply lines, communications networks and storage and staging areas used for attacks into South Vietnam.

Show ECU And Greenville Talent

"CARMINA BURANA"... rehearsals are conducted by Paul Aliapoulos in preparation for Saturday night's concert by The University Chorale in conjunction with the Collegium Musicum.

East Carolina University and Greenville talent will be on the roster for Saturday night's performance as The University Chorale and the Collegium Musicum join forces in the fourth of five concerts making up the ECU Spring Music Festival 1970.

The concert at 8:15 p.m. Saturday night, will be at the School of Music Recital Hall on 10th Street.

Under the conductorship of Dr. Paul Aliapoulos, the chorale combines the talents of Georgia Mizesko, soprano; Virginia Linn, mezzo - soprano, Clyde Hiss, baritone, and James Rees, narrator.

Two of ECU's outstanding young pianists - Mary Louise Spain and Jac McCracken, will furnish basic accompaniment, along with a percussion ensemble under the direction of Harold Jones.

Saturday night's program is a notable departure from the three earlier programs of modern music during the week in that it deals with music of the 10th through the 13th centuries.

The Collegium Musicum will open the two part program with an ancient air "O Lovely Image of Venus" from about 900 A.D., to be followed by a longer composition, a 13th century motet in two parts "El Mois de Mai" and "De se Debut". The Collegium will illustrate the secularization of a cantus firmus in this performance.

Kathleen Daughtry is vocal director of singers in the Collegium Musicum; John Tyson is instrumental director. Members of this group come from the university, and from the local high school.

The major selection of Saturday's performance will be Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana." A scenic oratorio, it takes its name from a group of some 200 songs discovered in 1803 in the Bavarian Benedictbeuern monastery. Orff, a contemporary German composer, selected 24 of these songs and set them to music for "Carmina Burana."

In addition to the soloists and the mixed voices of The University Chorale, Saturday's performance will also include Greenville school children from Cub Scout Pack 9, Den 3 and Girl Scout Troops 394 and 97. Children scheduled to sing in this concert are: Mary Mattheis, Kimberly Carpenter, Diane Woodley, June Lord, Tina Miller, Teresa Sanderford, Christopher Knight, Christopher Aliapoulos, Joey Mattheis, Edwin Hardy, John Richards, Drew Smith, Derrick Forrest, Brad Brown and Gavin Ray.

This is a free recital. Persons attending will be seated on a

A Fashion Note From The College Shop and Pappagallo Gallery

Ladies:

For the past few months you have questioned us on the street, at the super market, the beauty shop and other places. The question? Hemlines—of course. Quite a bit has been said on this subject and we too have done some "research" on the matter. In fact we have just returned from two of the major ladies buying markets and would like to share with you our observations.

There is no need to panic—your things from last fall are not obsolete. We viewed many lines for early fall as well as winter and found very little difference in skirt lengths in general. Most manufacturers have added one or two of the longuettes in coats or skirts but the greater percentage of their lines features skirts with hemlines still well above the knee. You may want to try a longer style with boots but we feel that the above the knee length is here to stay. How far above the knee is up to you. Choose whatever looks best on you. You are the fashion leaders and if you refuse to wear the mid-calf lengths the manufacturers will not make them, after all they are not in the business to lose money.

So it seems that for fall and winter there will still be a variety of lengths, most of them—above the knee. Pick yours and stop worrying!

Sincerely,

Penny Smith

'Can Stomach' His Own Work

ASPEN, Colo. — Some people gaze at their navels to achieve tranquility, but Paul Soldner puts his belly button to work.

The potter and teacher has made a plaster of Paris cast of his navel and stamps the signature into the bottom of his pots.

Soldner will appear on the special, "With These Hands: The Rebirth of the American Craftsman," to be televised on May 8 which will explore the life and work of eight American artists.

"One day I thought, 'Why do you always stamp clay?' It's an identification, that's all."

"So why not use something that's very personally yours, in this case, my belly button?"

Soldner does not limit his signatures to navels. He also uses an animal bone and a horse's tooth.

Single Status Suits Marlo Of 'That Girl'

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Marlo Thomas sat in her hotel suite surrounded by a dozen baskets and bouquets of carnations, roses, tulips, grape hyacinths, baby's breath. No, the floral offerings did not spell out e-n-g-a-g-e-d, insisted the vivacious actress.

"They were sent by many admirers, not by one man. I'm single by choice," she added — as if she could be single for any other reason.

Marlo also plays a single girl in her television show, "That Girl." The situation comedy which depicts a romance with a boy friend named Donald, now in its fourth year, is extremely popular, especially among teenagers.

"There was a possibility that we might change my single girl status on the show, but the kids didn't want us to," she says, laughing. "When I told a big rally of fans that I just might marry Donald on the show, they screamed 'no' in a chorus, so I'll remain single on television, too."

Marlo's expressive eyes — large and fringed heavily with lashes — always provoke comments.

"People have told me that you can always tell a Scorpio by her big eyes. But in my family everyone has big brown eyes, and my mother is a Pisces and my father (Danny Thomas) is a Capricorn."

"I try to fight astrology, but it fascinates me."

"Scorpio people are great homemakers," she continues. "It is true, I'd rather be home than at any other place. After a 14-hour work day, I can't think of anything more wonderful than sitting at home with friends or eating breakfast, lunch or dinner outdoors." She did that all last summer.

Her house is set up to suit her many moods. She can eat in every room.

"I have a dining room that seats 14 people. When there are only six people, we can eat at the refectory table in the same room. When there are two people, we eat at a game table in the living room. I love a nice quiet evening at home and then I eat in the bedroom where I have a 48-inch gateleg table. It is so cozy and relaxing."

Women Will Conduct Clothing Sale

A clothing sale will be staged Saturday by the Women's Society of Christian Service and the Wesleyan Service Guild of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The sale will be conducted in downtown Greenville on the church property located at 510 S. Washington St. from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Proceeds from the sale will be used in the Women's Society's service-to-the church program.

Twenty ladies from the church who will be on hand during the day include Mrs. Bruce Clark, Mrs. Charles Cullop, Mrs. David Cobb, Mrs. James N. Galloway, Mrs. Joseph Goodson, Mrs. Phil Goodson Jr., Mrs. William S. Goodson, Miss Helen Hawes, Mrs. L. T. Jones.

Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, Mrs. Tom Loftis, Mrs. E.F.C. Metz, Mrs. Jack Moye, Mrs. Ray Spears, Mrs. Ruby Speight, Mrs. William H. Taft, Mrs. Ralph Tucker, Mrs. David L. Williams, Mrs. W.I. Wooten Jr. and Mrs. William Zachman.

If she does go out to dinner which is seldom, it is on a Monday night when "there is hardly anyone in the restaurant."

Marlo used to live in an apartment, where the motif of her favorite flower, the daisy, was sprinkled liberally on accessories. Now she has two big gardens of daisies — a 40-foot block in front of the house and a 30-foot block in the rear.

"When they're in bloom, I arrange fresh cut daisies in every room. You must keep cutting daisies so the garden doesn't look straggly, but the cut places fill in because daisies are so prolific," she says with authority.

She claims she is a one-house woman. "I couldn't stand to divide my affection between two houses."

Her recent movie debut in "Jenny" earned great notices. But this is nothing unusual. A few years ago, she won rave reviews when she played in the London stage production of "Barefoot in the Park." Marlo also has won five of television's highest honors.

But her acting career and her home aren't her only interests. She serves on the board of directors of the Inner-City Cultural Center in Beverly Hills and is actively engaged in fund-raising for the St. Jude Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. The hospital was founded by her father.

The inner-city project, headed by Gregory Peck, was planned with the purpose of opening vistas and new experiences in the theatre to high school students, particularly those in underprivileged areas. In the past year, it has led another project — to bring young people right into the theatre to see whether their interest might be sparked in some facet of the theatre work — from scenery design to backstage carpentry. It is a way to initiate goals," she explains.

"It is difficult for ghetto children to realize a goal if they haven't been exposed to such endeavors."

Marlo is national charmen of the annual teen-age march for St. Jude's Hospital which has made tremendous progress in Following luncheon, Mrs. Fore introduced Robert Pittman, president of the East Carolina Art Society. He spoke about the Greenville Art Center and its cultural advantages.

He emphasized the Sidewalk Art Show which will be held at the center on Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Donald Patrick presided at the business session. A proposed amendment to the constitution was read and members signed up for meeting dates for next year.

Helping Hand Was Wrong

HAMBURG, West Germany (WNS)—Tourist Susan Miller from Chicago offered to carry an old lady's heavy suitcase at the railroad station here. The old lady disappeared when a young man rushed up and grabbed the bag out of Mrs. Miller's hand. Seems that the bag belongs to him, and the German woman was trying to steal it.

Luncheon Dates Are Trying For Dieters

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Please write something in your column about people [usually women] who are trying to lose weight. It is their business what they eat in their own homes, but when they are at a friend's house for dinner or lunch, don't you think it's rude of them to pick at their food and to say, "I'm sorry, I'm on a diet and can't eat very much." Or even flatly refuse to taste your dessert!

When the hostess goes to a lot of trouble to make food attractive and tasty shouldn't the guest, out of courtesy to her, eat and enjoy it?

People should diet at home! It's like a slap in the face when these picky dieters come to your table and spurn good food.

INDIGNANT

DEAR INDIGNANT: Lucky you! Apparently you don't know how hard it is to lose a few pounds.

When a dieter is invited out, she should let her hostess know that she is watching her calories. I would not feel "insulted" if a guest tried to stick to his diet at my table. I would help him instead, by serving fruit and cheese for dessert, and I wouldn't coax him to eat more than he wanted.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for two years to a wonderful man, but something has come up which threatens our marriage.

I have three children by a previous marriage. The children's father has been sending support checks regularly since our divorce. He's never complained, but I know it has been a terrible hardship on him because he is now married to a woman whose husband deserted her and her three children, so he adopted her three, and is now supporting six children.

My children and their father have always had an excellent relationship. Now my children see their father's stepchildren at school and church, and they notice the disparity between their standards of living and that of their father's adopted children, whom they like very much.

Abby, my present husband is very well to do, and he doesn't need that support money from my "ex," but he says he is not about to let him off the hook.

It seems so wrong for us to continue to accept support checks from my "ex" who is struggling hard to make ends meet, when my children don't need it, and his adopted family does.

My children and I have talked it over and want to put a stop to the support checks, but my husband is determined to keep collecting until the children are all of age. What can I do, Abby?

WALKING A TIGHT ROPE

DEAR WALKING: Nothing. Your present husband for reasons of insecurity, probably resents your "ex" and is determined to keep him on the hook for child support. Or he could be, frankly money-hungry. Both are regrettable, but there is nothing you can do about either, unless thru persistent hammering you can finally get thru to him. Keep trying.

DEAR ABBY: That designing female who set up a candlelight and wine dinner to find out if that new muscle man in the office was as good a lover as he appeared to be sure got what was coming to her. Nothing! Poor guy was probably emasculated previously by another female before he was old enough to protect himself. His mother.

Do you know exactly what you have in your wardrobe today? If you do not, now is a good time to take an inventory. Use a note book. Put down everything you have, including colors. This list will reveal where your wardrobe needs strengthening.

It is always good practice to watch the magazine advertisements and to study the drawings of the garments being offered. However, there is one slant with which you should be careful. And that is the fad circle. Don't be a slave to fads unless you can afford to purchase a new wardrobe for each season.

Let's say that when you purchase a new suit or dress, make sure that the style you are selecting will look good during the ensuing years.

Heart Of Issue: PTL Service

One of the ballots which voters will receive tomorrow involves a vote for or against the appropriation of county funds not to exceed seven cents per hundred dollar tax valuation to support Pitt Community College and Technical Institute.

Every voter should understand that a vote against this proposal will not lower his taxes and a vote for it will not increase his taxes to any appreciable degree.

Funds are already being appropriated by the county commissioners for operation of Pitt Tech.

What the voters will be deciding is whether or not the services not offered by Pitt Tech will be expanded so that the young people who enroll there may obtain college credit for the academic courses that they take.

Experience has shown that elsewhere when a technical institute has attained community college status enrollment in technical and trade courses has actually increased. At Pitt Tech the board of trustees and the administration have pledged that there will be no de-emphasis of the technical programs at the institution.

There will be no conflict between the two-year college courses offered at Pitt Community College and Technical Institute and the programs underway at East Carolina University. Both President Leo Jenkins and ECU board chairman Robert Morgan have offered their support of plans for community college status for Pitt Tech.

A vote FOR community college status will mean that the young men and women who take academic courses at Pitt Tech will be able to receive college credit for them, which they can transfer to four year institutions if they decided to pursue a degree.

It will mean that many young people who are now having to drive daily to community colleges in other counties will be able to take college credit courses in their home county.

We feel that a vote for Pitt Community College and Technical Institute will broaden, rather than curtail, the programs being offered at the institution and this will be to everyone's advantage.

Community college status for Pitt Tech has already been approved by the state. It is very likely the opportunity will not come our way again, if we reject it. The community college status will go to some other technical institute.

We urge voters to cast their ballots FOR authorizing the appropriation of funds for Pitt Community College and Technical Institute.

All Our Voters Have Stake In The Results

A primary election and a referendum are being held tomorrow and it is important for every registered voter to cast his ballot.

The primary involves mostly a Democratic party primary registered Democrats only will be eligible to vote.

However, voters registered as Republicans and as independents should remember that they have a stake in the election tomorrow. All voters are eligible to vote in the referendum which will decide whether or not Pitt Tech will become Pitt Community College and Technical Institute.

In addition the county board of education election is no-partisan and all registered voters are eligible to cast ballots.

Thus every qualified voter should go to the polls tomorrow. Casting our ballots is one of our greatest privilege.

Other Editors Say Especially Welcome

(The Raleigh Times)

North Carolinians should be grateful for the opinions expressed by Attorney General Robert Morgan during a question-answer period at a meeting sponsored by the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union and the N.C. State Student Lectures Board. Morgan's answers showed his devotion to protection of the rights of individual citizens, and this is a devotion which is especially meaningful in someone holding the Attorney General's post.

In general, Morgan took a critical position on anti-crime proposals which threaten individual rights. This would be welcome at any time, but at this juncture in American history, it is especially welcome. There have been so many cries about law and order that pressure has built up to give police special powers that would do more harm to the rights of individuals than they would do to protect people. The Attorney General of the United States has been a leader in seeking such anti-crime legislation, and this makes Morgan's opposition especially welcome, since we have an official in our own State helping bring this matter back into better perspective.

Morgan, for example, noted that he agreed with North Carolina Senator Sam Ervin on the unconstitutionality of many provisions in such anti-crime bills. He commented: "I don't see how you can have preventive detention consistent with individual rights." Preventive detention is a provision in a proposal now pending in Congress which would permit denial of bond to a person charged with a crime if some official thought the person might commit another crime if he were out on bail.

The North Carolina Attorney General also had comment on the federal no-knock search proposal: "When you give that much power to that many people, it's dangerous... no matter how good the intention."

He emphasized his opinion.

To The Editor:

I am an educator, not a politician. I believe that too many people are trying to make education a political matter when it should be viewed only as America's greatest social asset.

I am aware and deeply concerned that some people are attempting to avenge personal vendettas, using the Pitt Community College issue as a scapegoat. In trying to satisfy their personal grievances, they are critically jeopardizing the educational future of Pitt County.

Those who wish to defeat this issue are not educators and have no valid comprehension of the tremendous need the community college would fill in Pitt County. They may see no need for it personally, but they have completely ignored the other citizens of this county who may not be so fortunate as to have the means and political prestige to send their children to any university they wish.

Having worked in the public schools, the community college system, and at the University, I believe I am acquainted with the scope of the educational deficiencies of Eastern North Carolina. The biggest void now existing in our system is the gap that a community college would fill.

I hate to believe that people are too selfish to give every citizen the equal chance to an education that is rightfully his.

Sincerely yours,
Jim Young

Strength For Today

LET US REFLECT
"I am frustrated."

Now isn't that interesting. Probably you are the first person in the world who has ever had that discomfiting experience. This thing known as frustration is usually treated today as a modern phenomenon which for the first time in world history has descended upon our generation to plague it. In some way frustration is supposed to be the outgrowth of the machine age. Left-wingers say that it is retribution coming upon a selfish capitalistic society. Psychologists link it to suppression.

But Washington was frustrated a hundred and fifty years or more ago when he was trying to overwhelm the British army with a handful of poorly trained soldiers. Columbus was frustrated when he tried to tell his generation that he could reach the east by sailing west and got laughed at for his pains. Or to go back further—Moses was frustrated when after lingering on the mount for forty days he descended to find the Israelites worshipping idols. Or further still—Noah was frustrated when he kept prophesying the flood and everyone called him a fool. Or to go back to the beginning—Adam was frustrated when Jehovah told him that he could eat of all the trees of the garden except one, and that the very one Adam wanted most. So let us reflect a bit before we complain.

By ART BUCHWALD A Great Day For Yale

WASHINGTON — "Good afternoon, everybody. This is Chris Schenkel speaking to you from Yale University on this beautiful June day. As you recall, after the tragic events of May when the students struck the university in sympathy with the Black Panthers, the authorities agreed to dispense with normal judicial procedures and hold the trial of the Panthers in the Yale Bowl with the students deciding the guilt or innocence of the Panthers by popular acclaim.

"The idea for the compromise was suggested by a professor of Roman history, who felt that this would satisfy both the legal requirements of the state as well as the complaints by the student body and faculty that the Panthers could not get a fair trial.

"At first the Connecticut courts objected to this type of trial, but when the students said they would refuse to go back to school unless their demands were met, the courts had no choice but to injunction against holding the trial in the Yale Bowl was given. Everyone knows the country cannot run without Yale.

"And so today I am sitting here in the press box on the top of Yale Bowl, which is packed with students and faculty, ready to decide if the Panthers did or did not kill a so-called police informer.

"If you'll forgive me for saying so, there is a Roman circus atmosphere here today as well as a sense of excitement. The crowd knows that they are making history, and all I can tell you is that after this day American jurisprudence will never be the same. To keep the crowd amused, a few minor trials have been held already.

A professor who decided to hold classes during the student strike was found guilty of racism and was thrown to a group of hungry lions which are now tethered at the 40-yard line.

Last Spring my son Bruce completed all but one of his courses for the Associate degree in electronics at Pitt Technical Institute. He completed the last course at Piedmont in Charlotte and had the credit transferred to Pitt Technical Institute this Winter term.

Although Bruce was accepted at three colleges in North Carolina, he decided on his own that he wished to attend Pitt Technical Institute. Both his mother and I were in agreement that the choice was his to make and that we only wanted that which was best for him. And so Bruce completed his work and received his degree.

This was probably the best thing that could have happened to our son. He received first rate training in his field to the end that he was immediately employable with A. G. Odell and Associates, the largest architectural firm in the South. He enjoys his work, has received a raise in pay, an advancement in rank and a fine Christmas bonus. My whole purpose in telling you this is to say that two very knowledgeable parents are exceptionally well satisfied with the education of their son and to say thanks to those responsible. I am especially indebted to Mr. J.M. Whitehurst, Mr. J.N. Hoover, Mrs. Marion Bunting, and Mrs. Jean Fletcher.

While Bruce is employed in Charlotte he is continuing to take course work, college parallel program, at Piedmont so that he can eventually transfer to UNC-Charlotte for a degree program in electronics. He is keeping up his interest in academic work.

Tyrant Boyle Dreams

NEW YORK (AP)—If I had my way—

Any American over 50 years of age who had never been on a public welfare roll would be given a gold medal.

Pigeons would wear diapers.

Congressmen would have to hitchhike around their home districts at least once a year so they'd really get to meet the people.

It would be against the law to have knives and forks on the table at a chicken dinner.

Anybody who ever asked another person during a cold spell how he was standing the heat wave would be compelled to jog a mile through the snow clad only in his underwear.

The name of pop art would be changed to unpop art.

Any advertising writer who wrote that something was as American as blueberry pie would get a free blueberry pie—right in his face.

All television comedians who joke about their wives and mothers-in-law would have to buy them equal time on a national network so they could tell what a crumbum he is.

Supermarket shopping carts would be equipped with rubber bumpers.

Every bottle at a cocktail party would self destruct five minutes after the party was supposed to be over.

Every person convicted of drunken driving would receive an automatic one-year jail sentence.

No man would be permitted to wear shoulder-length hair in public unless he concealed it under a crew-cut wig.

Anyone convicted of peddling narcotics would immediately have injected into his own person whatever drugs were found on him at the time of his arrest.

For sports fans who weary of the long baseball season, pro football teams would play two schedules—one in the spring and another in the fall.

All college faculty members would be free to join in a student picket line—but they'd lose their pay any day they did so.

Corporations which issue credit cards would have to print on the back of them this warning: "These cards are addictive and can lead to quick insolvency."

U.S. Trends Worrying Friends

By ELMER ROESSNER
There is a lot of graveyard-whistling in Washington about the prospects of the American economy, and some private economists are saying that everything will be in the last half of the year.

However, a lot of the nations we are doing business with are highly concerned over what will happen to their American markets.

This concern has been compounded by the further weakening of the stock market last week and by our increasingly isolationist posture.

The market dip spread fears that somebody in the United States knows something about the future that other nations do not know. The federal government's withdrawal of troops from Southeast Asia and demands for withdrawal of American forces from Europe have been doubly frightening. This trend will mean the loss of military markets for other nations, and the retreat to within our own borders seem to portend economic isolationism as well.

Other Alerts
The announced plans of all the U.S. auto companies to bring out even smaller cars is a threat to German, British, French, Italian, Swedish and Japanese exporters. Our present hassle with Japan over limitation of fabric and apparel we will accept as imports is worrying not only the Japanese but Taiwan, Hong Kong, Singapore and even Mexico and the Caribbean.

The Japanese fear if we are tough on how much textile goods we will allow from their countries, there may be movements to limit our imports of electronics and other goods.

This is underscored by the fact that whenever a nation enters a recession, it usually tries to restrict the inflow of foreign goods to protect the employment of its workers and to conserve its balance of payments.

Fear Markets Shrinking
Therefore in Europe as well as Japan far more than auto, textile and electronics exporters are worrying over their sales in the United States. In our surging prosperity of the last decade, many foreign companies have established or enlarged branches here. Their sales now seem threatened.

These fears could lead to demands that American expansion abroad be restricted. In fact, the U.S. is already confronted with barriers some foreign nations are raising against American produce.

Higher barriers can hurt us.

In the current issue of the Foreign Policy Association's Headline Series, Prof. Sidney E. Rolfe points out, "The output of the foreign subsidiaries of American corporations in 1969 was greater than the gross national product of either England, Germany or France."

And J.J. Servan Schreiber pointed out in "The American Challenge," that "the subsidiaries of U.S. corporations in foreign countries could, in 15 years, be the third largest industrial power in the world, lagging behind only the U.S. itself and the Soviet Union in size, but exceeding the output of the European Economic Community."

But not if we withdraw into a shell!

Solo Sailor Didn't Enjoy Being Alone

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "I don't like being by myself," mused 21-year-old Robin Lee Graham—having spent 57 months and 33,000 miles being just that to become the youngest person to sail solo around the world.

His 33-foot sloop, The Return of the Dove, the second of two boats he used on his long journey, eased into Long Beach Marina Thursday. Graham stepped ashore into the arms of Patti, 22, the wife he won on the other side of the globe.

"A nice hot bath," was his first fervent wish. "All I know is I'm glad to be home. It's better than being out there."

Out there was Honolulu, Sa-bean, through the Panama Canal to the Galapagos Islands and, starting March 5, the final 3,600 miles home.

Graham quit high school to make the voyage and had planned to continue his education through a correspondence course, but he was a bit busy. "There was too much to do aboard the boat to do much studying," he said, "but I did read a lot."

By RICHARD DAW
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — With only one statewide race on the ballot, a voter turnout ranging from very light in some sections to unusually heavy in others was predicted today for North Carolina's primary elections Saturday.

The prediction came from Alex Brock, executive secretary of the Board of Elections.

Brock said he had checked at least 65 of the state's 100 counties and had found political activity "running from extremely active, to moderate, to very little."

The lone statewide race pits incumbent Fred Hedrick, a blind judge of the State Court of Appeals, against Harry C. Martin, a Superior Court judge of Asheville, for Democratic nomination to Hedrick's seat.

With no candidate from any other party on the ballot, the winner of the Hedrick - Martin contest will automatically be elected in the Nov. 3 general election.

Voters will also choose party nominees for Congress, the General Assembly, Superior Court and a host of local offices.

Many candidates will coast through without opposition, automatically getting places on the general election ballot.

Battles for Congress, for example, will be waged in only three districts — the 1st, 4th and 7th. And 23 General Assembly candidates will not only get through the primary unopposed, but the general election as well.

Brock, the state's acknowledged expert at forecasting election turnouts, said he would not attempt to predict a number of voters because of the lack of statewide races.

"We take some pride in our predictions," Brock said, "and it would be foolish to try to try to come up with a number in an election situation such as this one."

Brock said his checks with local election officials had shown that some of the heaviest turnouts may come in counties with large fields of candidates for sheriff.

"We have an unprecedented number of counties with six or seven persons running for sheriff," he said. "No one recalls so many situations like that in the past 30 or 40 years."

Among the counties are Anson, Brunswick and Moore, all of which have Negro candidates for sheriff.

North Carolina has not had a black sheriff since Reconstruction.

Hotly contested General Assembly battles or other local races which have generated unusual interest will bring a strong voter turnout in various counties, too, Brock said.

All polls will open at 6:30 a.m. and most will close at 6:30 p.m. State law allows counties with voting machines to keep the polls open until 7:30 p.m. if the local board approves, but few are expected to do so.

Saturday, May 2, the Democratic voters of the First Congressional District will have an opportunity to cast their ballots for many important offices. WALTER B. JONES has served this District well and deserves your vote and support. Therefore, be sure to exercise your constitutional right to vote and nominate WALTER B. JONES to Congress on Saturday, May 2.

Dear Fellow Pitt Countians:

I want you to know that I consider it an honor to represent you in the Legislature. I have tried my best to be the kind of representative you want speaking for you in Raleigh.

During the last legislative session, I was most noted for my active role in the fight against the tobacco tax and in sponsoring the appropriation of funds for the development of a curriculum and staff for a two-year medical school at East Carolina University. However, this is not all that I was interested in. Many beneficial measures affecting all of our people were of real concern to me. Reasonable interest rates, consumer protection, control of pollution, better education for our children, better highway safety, and more effective law enforcement were just some of the many issues for which I actively fought. I have always tried to remember that, above all, I am your spokesman.

Better health care is one of our most urgent needs. This is why I so strongly believe that a medical school at East Carolina University is a must. Our battle is half won. In 1971 ECU will face the crucial test of whether we will realize our dream of a medical school in Greenville. This is why I want so very much to be re-elected. I WANT TO FINISH THE JOB OF SECURING A MEDICAL SCHOOL AT EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY.

I can do this only with your help. If you believe that my record deserves another term, please give me your vote and active support tomorrow. Thank you for your consideration.

Very truly yours,

DAVID E. REID, JR.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market continued to fall, but not so sharply as in early trading. Volume was moderately light.

At 11 a.m. the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 6.20 at 729.87, with most of the loss occurring during the first few minutes after the opening bell.

Declines outnumbered advances by more than 3 to 1. Analysts called the decline primarily a reaction to President Nixon's speech Thursday night on Cambodia. They pointed out, however, that the low volume indicates many investors are still waiting on declines.

Hold Registration And Orientation On Sunday

An orientation and registration program is being conducted Sunday at 3:00 p.m. at Aycock Junior High School for parents of students who will be at Aycock for the first time in the coming school year.

In announcing the program, John Jones, principal of Aycock, stated that Rev. W. F. Jones, president of Eppes PTA and Willie Pate, president of Aycock PTA, will be coordinators for the program. Dr. Cleet C. Cleetwood, superintendent of the city school, and Jones will also be present to talk informally to parents.

Beginning at 3 in a general session in the school's cafeteria, Rev. Jones and Pate will discuss with parents plans already taken, as well as future plans, in preparing students and parents for the merger of the coming school year.

At 3:30, those in attendance will be taken on group tours of the school's facilities, reassembling at 4 o'clock for another brief discussion period. A social hour with refreshments will follow at 4:30, at which time parents will be given an opportunity to register.

Principal Jones says he is especially hopeful that parents of students going into the seventh grade next year, and those of present seventh and eighth grade pupils from Eppes who will be going to Aycock, will come to the orientation and registration program.

The Sunday program is but another of many activities — past and future, planned jointly by the Eppes and Aycock PTA groups. Some of these to date have been:

—April 7-8 — Principals Alan E. Murrell and John Jones attended the state Junior High Principals Conference in Chapel Hill. Topic of the conference was "Integration in the Junior High School."

—April 13 — Administrative and guidance staffs of Eppes and Aycock met for formulation of plans and to set final dates for activities relative to the merger.

—April 14 — 40 members of Aycock Student Council were guests of Eppes Student Council for group discussions and for a band concert at Eppes presented by the State University of Elizabeth City band.

—April 16 — A joint meeting of the departmental chairman, Bob Sigmon and principals at Aycock.

—April 17 — A joint student council meeting at Aycock for officers and seventh and eighth grade homeroom representatives.

—April 20 — A joint staff meeting for both schools at Aycock. This meeting, from 4:00 to 8:00 p.m. was a dinner meeting and included remarks by Dr. Cleetwood.

—April 22 — A joint meeting of PTA Executive Councils.

—April 28 — Seventh and eighth grade pupils from Eppes were given an extensive tour of Aycock between 9:00 and 10:30 a.m., with a talent show presented by Aycock students.

In addition to the program planned for Sunday, two other activities designed to continue preparations for next year's merger are planned in May. These are:

—May 7 — Luncheon at Aycock for the Executive Councils of Eppes and Aycock PTAs.

—May 21 — Joint PTA meeting of Eppes and Aycock parents; with an election of officers for the 1970-71 PTA.

Eighteen Set For Run For The Roses

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

LOUISVILLE (AP) — A field of 18 3-year-olds, the lack of a solid favorite and Diane Crump. That's the mixture ready to boil over in Saturday's wide-open and history-making Kentucky Derby.

The catalyst is Miss Crump, who will be the first girl jockey to ride in America's most famous horse race.

Lacking an attention - getting colt; such as Majestic Prince, this 96th renewal of the Derby at Churchill Downs soared in public interest when the 21-year-old Miss Crump was named to ride W. L. Lyons Brown's Fathom.

The first colt entered Thursday for the 1 1/4-mile, $125,000-added classic was Sonny Werblin's Silent Screen, the 1969 juvenile champion who has won only one of four starts this year, and the last was William C. Robinson Jr.'s Admiral's Shield, winner of Tuesday's one-mile Derby Trial.

Those whose names passed the entry box in between included Samuel J. Agnew's Terlago, the Santa Anita Derby winner and the early 7-2 pick for Saturday, and Raymond Curtis' My Dad George, the 4-1 second pick who won the Flamingo, Florida Derby and Stepping Stone Purse consecutively.

If all 18 leave the gate at 5:40 p.m., EDT, the gross purse will be from $171,300, with a record $128,800 to the winner. Coverage on television will be from 5-6 p.m. and on radio from 5:30-6 p.m. CBS will handle both.

The forecast calls for mild weather with a chance of thunder showers. The usual crowd—traditionally estimated by Churchill Downs at 100,000—will be on hand.

Also entered were the Ethel D. Jacobs pair of Personality and High Echelon, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Gary's Corn Off The Cob, Alan Magerman's George Lewis, Robert Lehmann's Dust Commander, Mrs. J. S. Dean Jr.'s Holy Land, Charles Engelhard's Protanto and Her-Jac Stable's Naskra.

Joining Fathom as field horses —horses grouped as one betting interest — were Lin-Drake Farm's Dr. Behrman, Steve Carson's and Irving Apple's Rancho Lejos, Dr. Richard Kuhn's and Walter Hickey's Robin's Bug, the Wolfson Brothers' Native Royalty and E. V. Benjamin III's and J. M. Jones Jr.'s Action Getter.

Bill Shoemaker will take Terlago out of the No. 14 post, with My Dad George just inside him under Ray Broussard. Bill Hartack will send George Lewis out of the No. 1 slot and Angel Cordero Jr. will leave No. 18 on Corn Off The Cob. Corn Off The Cob is the co-third favorite at 5-1, with High Echelon, No. 12, and Larry Adams, and Personality, No. 17, and Eddie Belmonte.

It was thought Belmonte might miss the Derby after a mount he rode at Aqueduct Wednesday was disqualified and he was faced with a 10-day suspension. The New York stewards ruled Thursday, however, Belmonte was blameless.

Other jockey assignments are Dust Commander, Mike Manganello; Holy Land, Hector Pilar; Rancho Lejos, Rudy Campas; Silent Screen, John L. Rotz; Robin's Bug, Leroy Moyers, the breeder of the colt; Protanto, Jorge Velasquez; Dr. Behrman, Chuck Baltazar; Action Getter, Mike Venezia; Naskra, Braulio Baeza; Admiral's Shield, Jimmy Nichols; and Native Royalty, no boy.

Miss Crump's chance at making racing history came after Brown overruled trainer Don Divine. Divine had said after Fathom's seventh-place finish in the Derby Trial he would not run in the Derby.

"Neither Don nor I wanted to enter him," Miss Crump said. "In the long run he'd be better off not to go in the Derby. Mr. Brown knows it's a big gamble, but he thinks we have a big chance."

Miss Crump is the only girl ever to ride in the Trial, the first of her sex to obtain a license in this country, the first to ride at a major American track, Hialeah, and the only girl to ride at Churchill Downs.

The Derby overshadowed Saturday's features at other tracks. Fast Hilarious is the early choice in an expected field of 10 in the $50,000 seven-furlong Carter Handicap at Aqueduct. No. double and Ack Ack head the probables in the $50,000 Los Angeles Handicap, also at seven furlongs at Hollywood Park.

Shuvee and Singing Rain top the likely starters in the $30,000 Golden Gate Handicap at Golden Gate Fields.

Coup Landing heads the field in the $20,000 Matt Winn Handicap at Washington Park. Irish Dude and Heat of Battle are expected to duel in the $20,000 Chickadee Handicap at Suffolk Downs.

Whitley, Davis Buc Co-Captains

Offensive guard Steve Davis and cornerback George Whitley have been elected co-captains of the 1970 East Carolina University football team.

Head Coach Mike McGee announced the results of the voting by all team members and said he was "extremely pleased" with the choice of Davis and Whitley. The players voted in secret early this week following the close of spring drills.

Davis, a 6-2 230-pound senior from Raleigh, is considered a pro prospect by NFL scouts because of his size and quickness. ECU coaches rate Davis as a "sleeper" for All-American honors this fall.

A graduate of Garner High School, Davis is majoring in business administration. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.P. Davis.

Whitley will be in third season as starting cornerback in the Pirate secondary. The 5-11, 185-pound senior from Huntersville, N.C., is one of the outstanding pass defenders in the Southern Conference. A math major, Whitley is the son of Mrs. Odessa Staton.

Pirates Chase Southern Title

East Carolina University's Pirates go after their third Southern Conference finals berth Saturday in a doubleheader with Davidson College in Davidson.

The Bucs, leading the Southern Division of the conference, post a 10-4 record with only the two with Davidson left. The only team that has any chance of catching the Bucs in Furman, currently 8-5-1.

East Carolina needs to win only one of the games, regardless of what Furman does, to claim the title. Should the Bucs lose both games, however, Furman would have to sweep its pair against The Citadel to take over first. A Furman loss would end it, regardless of the Pirate outcome.

Buc Coach Earl Smith said he plans to use ace righthander Ron Hastings in the opener against Davidson, but is unsure who will get the nod in the second game. He may split the duties between Sonny Robinson and Hal Baird. "We're going after them both," the coach said. "We want to win the title, then go into the conference playoffs on a winning note."

The winner of the Southern Division will meet the Northern winner for the overall conference championship, and a berth in the NCAA District 3 Regionals in Gastonia in late May.

Currently William & Mary and George Washington are tied for the lead. Both have doubleheaders set for this weekend, with a Monday meeting between the two to make up a rained-out pair.

Southern Looking To Expansion In Future

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)—Southern Conference faculty chairmen meet today to decide on pairings and a site for a seven-team basketball tournament next year now that George Washington no longer is a league member.

The indications were the regular season champion would draw a bye with the opening-day program consisting of three games. It also was considered likely the tournament will be returned to the Charlotte, N.C., Coliseum, where it has been held since 1964.

Commission Lloyd Jordan said, however, the conference will make an extensive study as possible future tournament sites of the Hampton Roads Coliseum and arenas under construction in Virginia at Norfolk, Richmond, Roanoke and William and Mary.

A 13,000-seat arena also is planned in Greenville, S.C., the home of conference member Furman University.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed the conference—down to seven members with George Washington—is considering expanding to 10 or 12 schools.

"It's a strong possibility we could move up to 12 members," Conference President Col. John G. Barrett of Virginia Military Institute said after a Thursday meeting of the executive committee.

No formal membership applications have been received, but Jordan said the conference would make a complete review of schools that would best fit into the league structure.

While Jordan named no prospective members, it was reported the University of Chattanooga and Marshall University are among the schools which have expressed an interest in joining the conference.

Also on tap today was a proposal from VMI that the conference allow freshmen to compete in varsity football and basketball as they do in other sports, but Col. Barrett said he doesn't think it has much of a chance.

Financial reports also were scheduled on the 1969 Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla., which matched the Southern Conference football champion against the Mid-American Conference winner, and the 1970 basketball tourney.

far, tied with The Citadel. Each team chalked up six victories. Play continues through Saturday.

Two Institutes Are Announced

The establishment of two summer institutes for teams for teachers, teachers aides, supervisors, principals and special education coordinators, with one of them to be located at East Carolina University in cooperation with the Beaufort County School system, has been announced by Dr. Craig Phillips, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Dr. Phillips received notification from Congressman Nick Galifianakis' office that a $200,000 Education Professions Development Act (EPDA) grant has been approved by the Department of HEW.

The involved school systems are those which operate the first State supported Kindergarten - Early Childhood Demonstration Centers.

In addition to the ECU location, the second institute will be at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, in cooperation with the Gaston County School system.

Sponsors of the project, covering 17 Kindergarten - Early Childhood Demonstration Centers, consist of the State Department of Public Instruction of The Learning Institute of North Carolina, The University of North Carolina at Charlotte, and East Carolina University.

The project is designed to provide in-depth experience for class - room teachers, administrators, supervisors, and special education leaders who will be conducting their own staff development activities in each of the State's educational districts.

The two institutes are planned for a four - week period beginning June 8 and ending July 3.

"This grant will provide a tremendous boost to North Carolina's Kindergarten - Early Childhood teachers and more importantly to the young children who will ultimately benefit from this specialized training," Dr. Phillips commented.

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch has denied the Nixon administration is on the verge of abandoning its massive welfare reform plan—a disclaimer shared by the senior Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.

"I think they want to push it right on through," Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., told a reporter Thursday after speculation was raised during committee questioning of Finch that the plan might be scrapped.

Finch, who was called back for a third day to testify today, entered a quick denial that the administration was giving up on the program, already approved by the House.

Williams also said he cannot support the bill in its present form.

Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., said at Thursday's hearing rumors were circulating the administration had decided to drop the plan. He said he tended to agree with the rumors because of what he called a lukewarm presentation by Finch and Health Education and Welfare Department officials.

Finch said the legislation is extremely complex and acknowledged it has been difficult to answer questions tossed at him, but he added his department will produce all the information requested.

A main flap in the hearing Thursday involved figures in the HEW presentation showing that, in some cases, a family could end up with less total income if the father or mother took a job than if the family head did not work and simply drew the expanded benefits.

The administration's bill sets a yearly $1,600 family income floor for a family of four and brings the working poor into the program for the first time. Other benefits push the amount higher. One of the main purposes of the bill is to increase the incentive to work to welfare recipients.

But Williams said the bill would do just the opposite in some cases.

For example, a Chicago, Ill., four-person family would have a total income from various benefits of $6,206 if the household head earned only $1,000 a year and a smaller total income of $6,109 if the father or mother had much higher earnings of $5,560, the HEW presentation showed.

A New York City family of the same size could have total income of $7,614 without any earnings at all, but only $7,743 if the family head had a job which paid $6,550.

The income in these cases included benefits from food stamps or commodities, medical, and public housing.

Williams said he believed one reason the HEW witnesses seemed lukewarm was that they had compiled this information for him on the eve of the hearings, and the figures probably surprised them. Finch and his associates agreed the figures were accurate but insisted they were not typical cases.

For one thing, they said, New York has far larger supplementary benefits than most states.

They also emphasized that they had no jurisdiction over food stamps and public housing.

Dear Mr. Fulford:

I was very pleased to hear that the North Carolina General Assembly has made it possible for Pitt Technical Institute to add a two-year college-transfer program to its existing services.

We are very pleased to see this as a new company entering the community, as it should not only provide an opportunity for the upgrading of educational facilities for the youth in the area, but should also provide us with a source of employees for some of our technical positions.

We certainly are pleased at this evidence of progress!

One of the nice things about concerts of new music is the possibility of hearing for the first time a piece of music which has the earmarks of becoming a future favorite.

Paul Cooper's "Variations for Violin and Piano" seems a likely candidate to be heard often in the future. It has much to commend it. At last night's concert, Paul Topper, violinist, and Karen McCann Hause, pianist, performed it with great sensitivity and empathy for the beautifully balanced parts for their instruments. The individual passages are lovely, but it is the totality of this composition which is its strength. "Variations" seems to relate strongly to Romantic music, despite the employment of current techniques.

"Summer Music For Saxophone, Oboe and Clarinet", by ECU composer in residence Gregory Kosteck is an infectious composition. The summer connotation is appropriate, as this work is full of golden sounds. One feels this is the sort of thing Bach would have written for these three instruments. James Houlik, saxophone, Eugene Isabelle, oboe and Joseph Distefano, clarinet, obviously enjoyed playing Kosteck's "Summer Music". Their performance sparkled.

For this listener, Michael Cunningham's "Trigon, Opus 31" for tenor saxophone and piano never quite congealed. Neither James Houlik's fine saxophone or Charles Stevens' incisive piano playing served to dispel a feeling that much is left unresolved in this composition.

Another Cooper composition, "Sonata for Flutes and Piano", performed by Anne Searl, flutes and Gregory Kosteck, piano, is "my most highly organized work in terms of pitch and the relationships of duration of pitch," according to the composer's notes. Pitch is developed effectively through the use of three different flutes. Mrs. Searl's admirably managed what must be a very demanding performance. One innovation noted was the pianist, Gregory Kosteck, playing the piano by strumming and plucking the strings inside the piano in a number of passages — thus the piano served both as piano and harp.

The major work on last night's Pi Kappa Lambda Concert, the second of five concerts in ECU's Spring Music Festival 1970, was the Dvorak "Serenade in D Major, Opus". Robert Hause conducted the 11 member ensemble. The "Serenade" is typical of Dvorak's music in which he manages to project great beauty of feeling and formance was a bit cloudy, but was marked by some beautiful oboe playing by Eugene Isabelle and Brenda Dugger and clarinet playing by George Knight and Joseph Distefano. In the third movement, Paul Kosower violoncello and Linda Latosek, double bass, had a chance to display their instruments to great advantage.

According to Whitley, "A community college is apparently a two year college for those who can't meet the educational standards of our state colleges and serves a very worthwhile purpose in giving these youths a chance for a college education," and he pointed out, "two excellent community colleges exist in nearby towns, within day-student range."

"More than 2,500 freshmen are admitted annually to ECU," he continued, "College admission is available locally to those who desire it."

"It is my feeling that PTI was established for a different purpose, and it is my fear that if it is made a community college, the prestige arts and science courses will be pushed forward and the much more needed vocational courses will be gradually de-emphasized."

Pointing to such as TV repairmen, auto mechanics, electricians, plumbers, carpenters and well-trained secretaries, Whitley questioned, "Is there a need for an institution which offers training to enable a manual laborer to increase his job skills and become a skilled workman? These are the things that PTI should be concerned with and there is plenty of room for improvement here to keep all of its faculty and facilities busy for years to come."

Another opponent of the move is Dr. Ray D. Minges of Greenville, who said, "With community colleges in Kinston and Goldsboro, I think to put one in Greenville would be duplicating facilities already available to our citizens. This duplication is too expensive for the minimal number that it would help."

According to Dr. Minges, "I feel we have to work with our neighboring counties. . . I think we should operate on a regional concept."

"I feel a 'C' student should have a chance at an education," the surgeon noted, "but I can't see spending money to duplicate facilities."

Both East Carolina University president Dr. Leo Jenkins, and the chairman of the University's board of trustees, N.C. Attorney General Robert Morgan, have endorsed the community college concept.

Dr. Jenkins this week said "the addition of the college-transfer program here would give all our citizens the opportunities they deserve to pursue higher education. We at East Carolina are constantly striving for academic excellence and service to the young people of the region, but we cannot teach them all."

By having a community college in Pitt, Jenkins noted, "we open the academic doors to all our people."

Morgan said a community college would "provide one more road . . . for many young men and women to obtain the first two years of college, who for one reason or another, would not be eligible to attend the university."

Fred A. Coe Jr., president of Burroughs Wellcome and Co., in a letter to PTI president William E. Fulford Jr., expressed his support for the proposed change also.

Coe's letter, dated April 21, said: "I was very pleased to hear that the North Carolina General Assembly has made it possible for Pitt Technical Institute to add a two-year college-transfer program to its existing services."

"We are very pleased to see this as a new company entering the community, as it should not only provide an opportunity for the upgrading of educational facilities for the youth in the area, but should also provide us with a source of employees for some of our technical positions."

Julian R. ALLSBROOK —Candidate for—
STATE SENATOR
Fourth Senatorial District
(Halifax, Warren, Pitt and Edgecombe Counties)

Eastern North Carolina needs the experience, concern, and interest of its state senators. Julian Allsbrook has these qualifications, having served 14 years in the Senate and two years in the House of Representatives, plus two special terms. He serves every county in his district with equal vigor. He has always represented Pitt County well.

1. He vigorously fought for legislation supporting university status for East Carolina University.
2. He has supported the Life Sciences and Community Health Center for East Carolina University.
3. He was one of the introducers of legislation providing the money to build and establish an alcoholic rehabilitation hospital and treatment center in Greenville to serve Eastern North Carolina. This same legislation made funds available for rebuilding a similar hospital at Butner, North Carolina.
4. He supported legislation increasing appropriations for capital improvement at East Carolina University, including the building of a Teacher Training Laboratory for students majoring in education, thus enabling them to complete their training at Greenville.
5. He introduced legislation seeking to increase appropriations for Pitt Technical Institute and other technical schools of North Carolina.

The above are just a few of the reasons why Pitt County should vote to reelect Julian Allsbrook to the State Senate.

In view of the above set of circumstances, I am not sure that you should allow recent statements attributed to Dr. Leo Jenkins and Mr. Robert Morgan to try to influence you to vote "YES" on the community college question.

A "NO" vote now can easily be changed later if circumstances warrant. A "YES" vote now will be most difficult to change even if the program proves worthless.

directed at the security interests of any nation. Any government that chooses to use these actions as a pretext for harming relations with the United States will be doing so on its own responsibility and at its initiative and we will draw the appropriate conclusions."

Congressional leaders were briefed by the President and some Cabinet members immediately before the speech. There was no evidence they had been consulted before the decision was made.

Nor was there any evidence that U.S. allies, other than South Vietnam, had been consulted. Informed officials said Premier Lon Nol of Cambodia, who had asked Nixon for arms and military supplies, had not asked for U.S. troops. In fact, Cambodian officials said the U.S. action would be protested.

Nixon's decision drew immediate fire from Senate advocates of disengagement from the war and from foes of any expansion in such criticism as "unbelievable," "reckless" and "sad."

But Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania called on the nation to "trust the President who alone has all the facts."

Nixon himself said one Republican senator has told him the Republican party had now lost all chance of winning the November elections and that others were saying he would be a one-term president.

The President announced his fateful decision in these words: "In cooperation with the armed forces of South Vietnam, attacks are being launched this week to clean out major enemy sanctuaries on the Cambodian-Vietnam border."

The first attack started and had already been announced Wednesday. It was an offensive by South Vietnamese forces, with U.S. air and logistical support and about 100 American advisers, into a projection of Cambodian territory, known as "the Parrot's Beak," that reaches to about 35 miles from Saigon.

It was the second attack Nixon announced as starting Thursday night, Washington time, which carried the wallop of massive surprise.

None of the advance hints about his speech, even from military sources, had envisioned a decision to send U.S. ground troops across the Cambodian border.

But Nixon said he had concluded a combined American-South Vietnamese operation was necessary.

"Tonight, American and South Vietnamese units will attack the headquarters for the entire Communist military operation in South Vietnam. This key control center has been occupied by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong for years in blatant violation of Cambodia's neutrality."

The area is known as "the fishhook" because of twists in the Cambodian-South Vietnamese border. It is about 50 miles from Saigon and northeast of "the Parrot's Beak." It has been known for several years as the site of Hanoi's "Central Office for South Vietnam"—COSVN—a large command and supply complex.

"This is not an invasion of Cambodia," Nixon said in apparent anticipation of dispute over whether he was violating Cambodia's territory and neutrality.

"The areas in which these attacks will be launched are completely occupied and controlled by North Vietnamese forces. Our purpose is not to occupy the areas..."

A White House official said the offensive had been under consideration for about 10 days. Military necessity was advanced as one reason why the President kept the consideration secret.

Nixon said that in the last two

JERRY PAUL FOR STATE SENATE

We, the undersigned scientists, support Jerry Paul in his campaign for the state senate. We do so because he has demonstrated to our satisfaction that he believes conservation to be an important issue. Furthermore, he has shown by his willingness to consult the scientific community that his conservation position will be based on the best facts available. This approach is to be especially commended in an age when public officials all too frequently derive their facts on conservation from those with special interests around them. As scientists, we commend Jerry Paul for his obvious effort to take a balanced approach to the conservation issue.

Campers Advised Make Plans Well In Advance

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
NEW YORK (UPI)—Warm weather will lure a record number of campers into parks and other campsites this spring and summer and some of them will be disappointed if they fail to plan in advance.

Nothing can be more disheartening after a long day's journey than to find campsites filled. Families so caught generally go to motels, which may charge five times the rent of a campsite.

The seasoned camper makes reservations ahead when such privileges are offered. There are several franchised camping systems which have sites across the country at inexpensive rates.

Franklin S. Riley, Jr., a New York public relations counselor who moved his headquarters to Burlingame, Calif., took his family across the country with a tent camper and had a great time.

Riley, his wife and two daughters had been taking

"Then, cut it in half. Believe it or not, this formula works short camping trips in the northern United States and parts of Canada for more than 10 years but their New York-to-California journey was their first long haul.

He advises campers, especially those who will be going out for the first time this year, to become familiar with their equipment so they will be able to strike camp quickly under all conditions.

"Make a check list that you can check against for each trip, thus preventing leaving something behind," Riley said. "I started using a conventional list you find in camping magazines and added to it each year and finally last summer made my own. It contains 215 items from medicine to a popcorn popper."

Riley said one of the first mistakes he made was taking too many clothes.

"A good rule of thumb is to lay out on a bed what you think you ought to take," Riley said.

perfectly."

He said he made several "dry runs" with his tent camper, a compact trailer that folds out at destination and sleeps up to eight persons in some models.

"We took several weekend trips to get acquainted with loading," Riley said. "We did the same with the tent when we tent-camped."

Before setting out on their cross-country trip, the Riley family had a conference to assign chores.

"Children should take turns doing dishes and drying them," Riley said. "Our girls actually made their own K. P. chart and stuck to it. No problems whatsoever."

He said those campers who have trailers with a built-in icebox should check the drain daily.

"It is easy for it to stop up, or for the plastic hose to come loose, causing melted ice to flow everywhere," Riley said.

Families who take the dog with them should keep a quart or two of tomato juice along in the sad event that rover has an encounter with a skunk.

Thorough saturation of the dog's body with tomato juice will neutralize skunk odor and it can be washed off later.

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—Wall Street keeps getting swamped with new problems these days before it is able to rise above the old ones.

Perhaps never before has there been such a confluence of muddy issues spilling onto the desks of analysts, problems with which even the State Department foreign affairs specialists would have difficulty.

The threatened escalation of the war in Indochina is giving nightmares to analysts who based their hopes of a rising market on a reduction of hostilities in that area. Their theory in recent weeks has been this:

"War might have been good for industry in the past, but it surely isn't anymore. Look at those terrible profit statements. And see how war has brought inflation. A cool Southeast Asia would warm the stock market just enough."

Although one war is one war too many for analysts who understand balance sheets but not balances of power, these securities scholars are also being forced to keep an eye on the confused and potentially explosive Mideast.

Foreign affairs are very much a factor in this market, but analyses of foreign affairs by securities men lack credibility. Few investors are willing to buy stocks because of a military or political forecast by a securities analyst. And so they remain almost cataleptic.

Domestically speaking, it is also difficult to determine the thinking of those who guide the American economy. High interest rates were supposed to curtail heavy spending. But something has gone wrong with that theory.

Capital spending plans—the plans of business of remodeling and expanding—were supposed to be falling off by now. Instead, business seems to be raising its intentions to spend.

That, at least, is the opinion of some private economists who have surveyed the field, and whose conclusions include a simple forecast of still higher interest rates and a prediction of a possible money panic.

Eliot Janeway, an author, economic consultant and financial adviser, has been warning for some time about the possible panic. He sees business and government locked in a battle to borrow from an insufficient supply of lendable funds. He suggests credit controls, and possibly a continued market dip.

The continued demand for money by corporations is explained partially by their need to modernize in order to make themselves more productive and thus offset the higher costs of inflation. But in so doing they contribute to inflationary pressures.

This isn't the only thing that confuses analysts trying to predict the future of the market. The entire Nixon program to half inflation is now being second guessed. The administration maintains that results will begin to show soon; but impatient investors are uncertain. They're not in the mood to believe.

And then there is the big, big question that is highlighted by the demonstrations at annual meetings. Will the need to improve the environment be reflected in lower corporate profits? Who can answer with assurance?

It isn't only the solvency of other companies, or of the entire economy, that concerns many analysts today. Their own firms are in trouble, many of them anyway, and this fact contributes to a lack of investor confidence.

It seems reasonable to assume, for example, that a small investor who reads of mismanagement, paperwork problems and thefts in brokerage houses isn't going to be enthusiastic about turning over his money for investing.

In attempting to establish the dummy's hand, South—the declarer at six spades—overlooked a simple discard which would have greatly facilitated development of North's club suit.

West opened the three of hearts, the deuce was played from dummy and East put up the nine which was covered by declarer's king. A spade was led to the queen and a spade returned to the ace. When East showed out on the second round, South drew the last trump with the king.

Work was begun next on the clubs. The ace and king were cashed and a third round ruffed in the closed hand. The suit failed to divide evenly, however, and the queen remained outstanding. South played the ace of hearts and led a diamond.

The defenders were in and returned a diamond forcing North to ruff with his last trump. South discarded another diamond on the queen of hearts, however he was left with a losing diamond in his hand and the defense subsequently scored the setting trick in that suit.

The odds did not favor an even division in clubs and declarer should have made his calculations accordingly. He could, in fact, have arranged to begin his ruffing one round earlier and thereby improve his chances considerably. This could have been accomplished by first cashing the top hearts in his hand and then discarding a club on North's queen of hearts.

After drawing two rounds of trumps with the queen and ace, it is suggested that South leave the jack of spades outstanding for the moment, play the ace of hearts and then cross over to the king of clubs to discard his remaining club on the queen of hearts.

He can now ruff a small club on the second lead of that suit while West is still obliged to follow suit. Now the North hand is reentered with the king of spades drawing West's remaining trump, the ace of clubs is cashed and another club is ruffed to establish the long card in that suit. A diamond ruff subsequently assures dummy of the entry required to cash the high club on which South's last diamond is discarded.

Office of the President
To the Citizens of Pitt County:

On Saturday, May 2, you will have the opportunity to do your part in providing complete and comprehensive educational opportunities for all citizens of Pitt County. You will be asked to vote only on the question of authorizing Pitt Commissioners to support the addition of a college-transfer program at Pitt Community College and Technical Institute.

Addition of the college-transfer program will expand enrollment in technical and vocational programs. This fact can be verified by enrollment data from Wayne and Lenoir Community colleges. The college-transfer program will enable Pitt Tech to be more responsive to the total educational needs of its citizens by closing the educational gap between the university and the high school. A comprehensive Community College would make Pitt County unique in the East in terms of the educational opportunities it provides its citizens.

No increase in Pitt County taxes will be necessary. This is not a bond issue! Cost to the county will be approximately the same whether the school is a technical institute or a community college. The institute receives approximately 92 per cent of its funds from the state while the county contributes only about 8 per cent of the total budget.

Other technical institutes in the East are seeking the college-transfer program. Only a few technical institutes will be provided with state funds to become comprehensive community colleges. If you do not vote "yes," it could be years before the state will again provide Pitt County the funds to support a community college.

We wish to thank the many persons who have contributed to help make the public aware of the facts regarding community college status.

We pledge to you our best efforts in giving Pitt County a comprehensive community college with continued emphasis on vocational and technical programs. We earnestly seek your support and your vote.

Sincerely,

William E. Fulford Jr.

'Celebrity Parade' Inaugurating 19-Hour Telethon

The Celebrity Parade, featuring TV stars, singers, nightclub performers, and a host of local talent group and personalities, will inaugurate a Cerebral Palsy Telethon for a 19 hours period over three North Carolina TV stations beginning Saturday night and continuing through Sunday afternoon.

Three television stations — Greenville's WNCT-TV; Raleigh-Durham's WRAL-TV; and Wilmington's WECT-TV have all given their air time beginning 10:30 Saturday until 5:00 p.m. Sunday.

Mike Rudisill, producer of the Greenville portion of the telethon, says "this is a wonderful gesture on the part of the TV stations relinquishing time for a public service."

"This is the first year of total effort for this drive," Rudisill, a program manager from New York, commented. "Auditions were held in Greenville to line up people and talent to participate in this massive telethon. The result is about 50 local acts, including gospel choruses, children choirs and community citizens to appear on the program, some as part of a VIP panel."

Between two and three thousand people in North Carolina will be taking part in one capacity or another during the 19 hour air drive to collect funds.

Rudisill explained "Seventy five percent of all funds raised will remain in North Carolina to be used in direct services. This includes home services, day care and similar direct help to cerebral palsy victims. The other 25 percent goes into research and grants."

Out of state talent slated to appear on the 19 hour affair are Johnnie Whitaker, ten year old boy who plays the role of "Jody" on "Family Affair," the CBS-TV show; TV, night club and recording songstress Ruth McFadden, who recently toured in France, Italy and the Caribbean; cowboy star David Canary, "Candy" in the "Bonanza" cast on NBC-TV — Canary will use his vocal talents on the telethon; young TV singing star Johnny Tittotson, known for his recordings of "Poetry in Motion" and "Talk Back Trembling Lips;" and the singing Smiths, Jack and Eileen. The Smiths, who are not related, have been co-hosts for more than 50 cerebral palsy telethons around the nation over the past four years.

Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum on the campus of North Carolina State University is the site of the entertainment portion of the telethon.

Slim Short (Robert Allen) will be one of several MC's at the coliseum. In Greenville, Hal Moore will be MC for the telethon originating from WNCT-TV.

JOHNNIE WHITAKER... who plays "Jody" in "Family Affair", is one of several stars on the Cerebral Palsy Telethon.

The 1969 appointment of R.A. Fred Hedrick as Judge of the North Carolina Court of Appeals received universal approval when it was announced by the Governor. People all over the State knew Judge Fred Hedrick as an excellent lawyer and an experienced trial judge. The legal community recognized Judge Hedrick as an outstanding member of their profession.

Judge Hedrick's work on the Appeals Court has added new luster to the record and to the judicial system of North Carolina. His experience is the kind the people of North Carolina want and deserve.

Sesame Street Opened Doors

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — To those interested in presenting better television entertainment for children, this has been the season of "Open Sesame."

Nothing has hit the field of children's programming with the impact of "Sesame Street," the highly original show for preschoolers that has been educational television's biggest hit. It combines animation and live action to teach the alphabet and other basics.

"Because of its success, producers now have a much better chance of selling quality shows to the networks," says Norman Prescott, head of the Filmmation production company.

"Before 'Sesame Street,' there wasn't a chance of interesting the networks in anything beside pure entertainment. I know, because I tried."

Filmmation is a new giant in the animation field. Founded in 1965 by Prescott, Lou Scheimer and Hal Sutherland, the company grew so fast that it was wooed for a merger by several acquisitive corporations. Filmmation chose to align with Teleprompter because of the promise it held in future cable television.

The quick rise of Filmmation was due to the fast expansion and rapid change of television programming for Saturday morning.

"Saturday morning programming was a hit-and-miss affair until about four years ago," Prescott said. "It had been the garbage pail of the networks: anything swept off the network nighttime might be dropped in Saturday morning."

"Then about 1965, CBS became conscious of the fact that from 9 1/2 to 10 per cent of its total revenue from television programming was coming from Saturday morning—about $45 million."

That's when CBS became more aggressive in shows for kids, and the other networks followed suit. Alas, in the battle for ratings the shows became more and more violent. Filmmation entered the field with a new cartoon version of "Supermen," which Scheimer described as "the least maligned of the action shows."

With the killings of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert F. Kennedy and the nation's revulsion against violence, the networks scrambled to tone down the violence.

"Fortunately, we were sitting with a property in the new mold — 'Archie' said Prescott. "It became the most successful show on Saturday morning. And I'm sure we never would have sold it if there hadn't been an anti-violence wave."

Not did Filmmation hit the jackpot with the "Archie" show. It also spawned a music enterprise for the company, including a record, "Sugar, Sugar," which reportedly sold six million copies worldwide.

Next season Filmmation will have two other shows on the networks: "the Jerry Lewis Show," an animated version of the comic; and "Sabrina and the Groovie Coolies," starring a covey of monsters.

While the shows are non-violent, they're not exactly educational.

"We've tried to interest the networks in shows that might inform children," said Filmmation Scheimer. "One would have taken the great figures of American history and shown what they faced as youngsters. So far we haven't had any luck."

Violent Crime Becomes British Political Issue

By GODFREY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — A year's jump of 22½ per cent in violent crime has pushed the law and order issue to the forefront of British politics.

Crimes of violence and robbery on subways and double-decked buses are up by more than half. Claims for state compensation by victims of criminal assaults rose 9 per cent for the first quarter of 1970 over the same period last year.

Indictable offenses "known to the police" reached nearly 1½ million last year. Only 42 per cent of them were cleared up. And nobody knows how many crimes were committed without ever getting attention of the law enforcement men.

The police force may be having its worst time since the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "Pirates of Penzance" disclosed to the Victorian public that "a policeman's lot is not a happy one."

The chance of a bobby's being attacked while pounding his beat is now about twice what it was five years ago. He has only his nightstick for defense.

The blue-helmeted bobbies complain they are overworked and underpaid. Campaigns to draw a better class of recruits meet only partial success. The bid to get nonwhites into the ranks seems almost a total failure.

Sir John Waldron, 61, commissioner of metropolitan police, blames society in part for the rising crime figures.

"This part of the day and age of permissiveness," he told a gathering of Fleet Street crime reporters, "the age of fiddling,

Will Study In England

Richard C. Taft of Greenville, a second-year medical student at the University of North Carolina, is one of 18 American students selected to participate in a summer study program in Great Britain.

The program is sponsored by the Division of Community Medical Care at UNC and is funded by the Duke Endowment.

The American participants will learn about the British National Health Service under the auspices of the King Edward VII Hospital Fund. In addition to learning the history and philosophy of the NHS, the students will visit general practitioners, specialists, hospitals, midwives and other facets of the British health care system.

The summer course is designed to give American medical students a comparative experience with another medical system besides their own so that they may evaluate the pros and cons of each system realistically.

Taft is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taft of Greenville. He is married to the former Cheryl Jean Lee of Greenville.

A graduate of Duke University, Taft is currently serving as the treasurer of the student body of the medical school.

of everyone living up to the hilt. There is little pride today, little dignity, no stigma if you appear in court—no shame."

In face of an attitude of "What can I get away with?" Waldron feels the only alternative to capital punishment abolished since 1964 is heavy sentences for serious crime.

The lord chief justice, Lord Parker of Waddington, 70, is thinking on much the same line.

He asked last week for a national police force and tougher punishment. He also proposed the abolition of specified sentences, so the courts can have more freedom. Sentencing here is by the judge alone. The jury's task is limited to deciding the guilt or innocence of the accused.

The chief justice feels that the 1967 Criminal Justice Act, which insists on suspended sentences for certain criminals, is a failure. It had been intended to help men go straight and relieve congestion in the prisons. But the reconviction rate among men getting suspended sentences is high.

"Mandatory sentencing is iniquitous," says the lord chief justice. "It always leads to trouble."

At present, the prisoner doing a life sentence for murder has a shrewd idea of how long he must serve. It could be only 10 years with credit for good conduct.

The crime rate remains proportionately far below that of the United States. London's police chief says:

"People can still walk across London, across its parks at night, without fear of violence, which is more than one can say for other cities in the world."

But even here changing crime patterns threaten to end those pleasant evening strolls.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Advocates of radical change whose battle against "the system" includes attacks on age-old sexual standards are not of the same sturdy mettle that characterized genuine revolutionaries of history.

That's the conclusion of Dr. Vernard Eller, professor of religion at Lavern College, a Church of the Brethren institution in California. Consequently, he adds, today's convention-defiers offer "little promise for the future."

He says that "some of the most successful social revolutionaries" of the past, which sought justice and righteousness, also demanded adherence to strict sexual codes.

But the "libertine revolutionaries," belittling sex disciplines, floundered, he notes, accomplishing little. "They are found today only as footnotes in the dusty history books."

He sees a parallel between them and some modern youths who, in challenging social blights such as war, poverty and racism, also assail standards of sexual restraint as among the oppressions to be displaced.

Their "revolution is on very shaky ground, lacks power at the core," he writes in the Christian Century.

To back his case, he cites the "hard-nosed view" against sexual permissiveness characteristic not only of the colonial New England Puritans in defying the British establishment but of many other powerful reform movements.

These, he said, included the 16th century Protestant reformers John Knox in Scotland, John Calvin in Geneva, the radical Anabaptist peasant uprisings in northern Europe, and the grandfather of all puritanism, Old Testament monotheism.

"Each of these groups represented not the cultural establishment but the revolution," he says. And each shared a common attitude—"what we have called a hard-nosed view regarding sexual permissiveness."

To the list might be added the strong, religious-moral orientation of the American revolutionary leaders, of Gandhi's followers in resisting colonial rule in India, of the early Christians in their endurance against persecutions of a licentious, declining ancient Roman Empire.

Dr. Eller, citing the Reformation period revolts and the ancient Hebrew struggle against the fertility cult of Baalism, said each resisted governmental intimidation and control, each established some form of participatory democracy and preventing wide gaps of economic and class distinction.

"Nowhere else can there be found better models of what the contemporary revolution aspires to," he says. And "the sexual puritanism of all these groups was an integral part of their respective revolutions."

"None of it was 'Victorianism,' none of it a sophisticated, prissy, effete disdain of sexuality. Quite the contrary, all of these puritan movements were marked by a certain earthiness and intimacy with life."

"These peoples were tough-gutted as well as hard-nosed; they were not celibates; they had no illusions (or hangups) about the reality and character of sex. Their puritanical posture was motivated not out of fear or delicacy but precisely out of respect and honor for the power of sex."

10 Per Cent Wage Hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 650,000 workers covered by major labor-management collective bargaining settlements have won average wage hikes of more than 10 per cent so far this year, the Labor Department reported today.

The report said the first-year pay hikes of 10.8 per cent covered electrical equipment, construction, clothing and retail trade industries.

Large construction pay increases considerably boosted the average.

Most of the labor contracts were negotiated for two years or more and wage hikes over the life of the contracts averaged 8 per cent because the largest increases were in the first year of the agreements.

The first-year wage hikes of 10.8 per cent compared with 9.2 per cent for the full year of 1969 and the over-all 8 per cent average was up from 7.6 per cent in contracts negotiated last year.

OVER THE TOP

Eddie and Jake have been buddies since they could toddle. Together they hiked, fished, argued and leap-frogged the years away. If they weren't at our house, they were at Eddie's. Sundays, Eddie came along to church with us.

They did everything together, dated, played football, went to college. When they joined the Army, they went together.

Jake is coming home next week, but not Eddie. His mother brought his last letter over today. We cried together.

"Dear Mom," Eddie wrote, "Things are pretty bad. I'm glad Jake is here. We talk about home, about God, too. I know you and Dad never cared about church and all, but I think you'll be glad to know I've learned a lot about God from Jake. Whatever happens, I feel close to Him. I'm not scared."

Faith in God is your child's heritage. Take him to church today.

Washington, D.C. Transit Problems Just Multiply

By LEONARD CURRY
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Six years ago a $189 million highway circling the nation's capital was dedicated with the expectation it would cure the city's rush-hour traffic problem.

Proponents of the 66-mile "Capital Beltway" claimed many of the cars clogging downtown streets belonged to Maryland residents trying to get to their jobs at the Pentagon, CIA and other federal installations in suburban Virginia or Virginia people trying to get to such suburban Maryland job centers as Andrews Air Force Base and the Goddard Space Flight Center.

They reasoned that the Beltway would help these motorists go between home and work without going through the city. To no one's surprise, their thinking was enthusiastically seconded by manufacturers of road building supplies, tires and autos who make up the "highway lobby."

No one can deny that the capital's traffic probably would be snarled beyond belief if the Beltway had not been built. But it is also true that traffic jams did not end with its dedication. In fact, the Beltway apparently encouraged many commuters to switch from public to private transportation.

Need Rail Transit

Before the system opened, an estimated 35 per cent of the area's workers used buses. In 1968 that figure had dropped to 30 per cent, according to the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority.

Now coming into being is another proposed solution to the traffic problem that plagues not only Washington, but most urban centers with populations over a million—rail rapid transit. Backers hope it will reverse the trend toward autos and prevent even more fantastic traffic congestion in the future.

Four Presidents have recommended and worked for high speed, mass transportation in the Washington area. The proposal is just now off the drawing board.

It's coming—By 1980

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe broke ground for the system in December and the first diggin was started last month. By 1980, the nation's capital will be linked with its Maryland and Virginia suburbs by 98 miles of tracks.

Prolonged, Bitter Wrangle

Because Washington is the seat of the federal government, the struggle for efficient, low cost, rapid transit lasted longer and involved more bitterness than it probably would have in any other city in the United States.

The concept of a "subway" surfaced first in 1909 and festered fitfully until 1959, when President Dwight D. Eisenhower called for a study of traffic congestion in the metropolitan area.

Before the depression of the 30s and World War II, Washington was a slow paced city with a small town atmosphere. The far western section even had a few small farms.

But depression and war brought new responsibilities to Washington. The bureaucracy grew from 129,314 employees in 1939 to 329,701 in 1968. The population doubled in 20 years, from 1,006,014 in the 1940 census to 2,064,090 in 1960, then grew to an estimated 3 million this year.

Terrific Congestion

Phenomenal growth, coupled with general prosperity, has swelled the number of cars in the metropolitan area to 1.2 million, based on 1969 registrations in the District of Columbia, Virginia and Maryland. Local planners estimate another 100,000 cars here belong to military, congressional and other federal personnel who register them in other states.

Tourism also adds to traffic congestion. The Metropolitan Washington Board of Trade said Washington drew more than 17 million visitors in 1969 and that the figure will climb to an estimated 18.2 million this year. With an average of one car for every five tourists, that puts another 30,000 to 40,000 cars a day on the streets.

But most tourists come in the spring and summer and there may be as many as three million cars operating in the metropolitan area during the peak of the season.

Public Pressure Mounted

Despite the obvious need for better ways of getting people to and from work, the rail rapid transit system was stalled in Congress for 10 years. Many blame what they call the highway lobby—parking lots owners, insurance companies and auto, tire and concrete makers.

Whatever the justice of these charges, the battle over freeways versus rapid rail reached a peak last year that Rep. Richard McCarthy, D-N.Y., calls "a turning point in mass transit."

It started in 1959 when Congress authorized construction of a new interstate and city highway system. The District of Columbia government, whose top officials are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, rebelled.

The local government claimed that 5 per cent of the city's population would be displaced by the plan and that 17 per cent of the property in the federal area would be lost to highways.

House Ignored D.C.

Congress shrugged off the protests and ordered the roads built. But the road building came to a halt in February of 1968 when a U.S. District Court ruled that rights of the citizens had been violated because there were "insufficient" public hearings before the order to construct was given.

Now Congress was bristling. The House counterattacked by adding a rider to the Omnibus Highway Act of 1968 that ordered the District of Columbia to construct its freeways "regardless" of any court order. President Lyndon B. Johnson was critical of the rider, but signed the bill in the final weeks of his term because it was so important to the rest of the nation.

When it became apparent early last year that the District of Columbia government was going to try to eliminate part of the highway program, freeway backers in Congress played their trump card.

House Members React

The district government is dependent on Congress for its budget. Although the city raises 80 per cent of its budget through local taxation and other sources of revenue, the balance comes in the form of a federal payment for non-taxable land used by the federal government. Congress also decides how much the city spends for what.

To make sure the road would be built, Rep. William H. Natcher, D-Ky., threatened to withhold money for rail rapid transit construction. Natcher, a graying lawyer from rural Bowling Green, had the power to back up his threat. He is chairman of the Appropriations Committee's subcommittee on the District of Columbia.

Rep. Joel T. Bryhill, an Arlington, Va., Republican, wrote an amendment into the 1969 budget bill that would have withheld the $105 million federal payment unless the freeways were built.

Fund Threat 'Saved' Freeway

"That was the club that finally shook it loose," said one local official. "The city couldn't operate without 20 per cent of its budget."

But the battle against freeways in the District of Columbia is having ramifications.

President Nixon, who signed the bill authorizing the federal government to contribute $1 billion to the Washington rail rapid transit system, proposed a $10 billion mass transit bill for the nation in February. Congress seems receptive.

Rep. McCarthy says the fight in Washington probably has convinced highway people everywhere that "priorities are being reordered."

Bloops And Bleeps Can Mean Reading For Blind

By ROBERT C. MCONACHIE
VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI)—The dark world of the blind may be a little brighter in the '70s following the recent development of an "audio reading machine" at the University of British Columbia.

For the first time, the sightless may be able to "read" a typed page, using their ears instead of their eyes.

The machine that makes it possible is the lexiphone—a combination of the Greek words for "word" and "voice"—which converts letters, numbers and punctuation marks into coded sounds.

"It is a major breakthrough," said the inventor, Dr. Michael Beddoes, 45, associate professor of electrical engineering at the university.

Works 11 Years

For 11 years, Beddoes, a native of London, worked on the lexiphone. But it was not until 1969 that he could unveil a workable model.

The main body of the machine, a green box measuring 11 inches high, eight inches wide and eight inches long, is a miniature computer.

A flat, metal surface extends from the bottom of the box on which there is a hinged sheet of clear plastic. The reading material is placed under this spotless plastic cover.

The reading instrument, a vertical row of 54 photoelectric cells, is supported on a metal arm protruding from the front of the box and is drawn across the printed page on friction-free plastic rollers.

The photoelectric cells trace the outline of each letter, distinguishing between the black letter and the white background, and transmit the image through 54 wires to 54 amplifiers in the box.

Letters Converted

The letter is then converted into the digital signals of a computer—1 if the cells are reading black, or if white—and processed into a coded sound. A single oscillator controls the pitch.

Dr. Beddoes singled out the letter "v" to demonstrate how his invention works.

As the photoelectric cells pass slowly over the "left arm" of the letter, Dr. Beddoes said, the pitch starts very high but gradually drops to a low "bloop" at the bottom. As the reading instrument moves across the right arm of the letter, the sound rises in intensity until it reaches the original high pitch.

The bloops and bleeps coming through the lightweight headset are like background music for a science fiction movie.

Sound A Bit Confusing

"It does sound a bit confusing," Dr. Beddoes admitted, but he added Braille is even more confusing to learn.

He said that an experienced blind person averages only 80 to 100 words a minute reading with Braille, while the fastest of the three sightless girls he has been teaching to use his machine can already read more than 50 words a minute after only one year's lessons.

Dr. Beddoes readily admits that reading machines are not new. The first, called an "optophone," was invented in 1914 by a young Frenchman, Fournier d'Albe.

However, because of the complicated code system it used, the machine proved impractical and further improvement was abandoned, he said.

Strive To Save Venice Treasures

By RAY MOSELEY
ROME (UPI)—There are marble art works in Venice so badly damaged by humidity, old age and pollution that one can put a finger through them as though they were cheese.

Paintings are literally disappearing. Old churches and palaces are cracking apart. Every now and then a piece of a statue that once formed part of the glory of Venice crashes to the ground and is destroyed. Venice is also threatened with permanent flooding. Housing is so primitive that thousands are fleeing to less artistic but more comfortable cities on the mainland.

All this has been going on for years and no one has been doing much about it for most of this time.

But in the past two years, Italy and UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Social and Cultural Organization, have been working on the problem and have made surprising headway.

By the end of this year they hope to have ready a definitive plan for the salvation of Venice. After that, an international fund-raising campaign will be undertaken, similar to the UNESCO campaign a few years ago that saved the Egyptian temples of Abu Simbel. The cost is likely to run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Publicity about Venice's problems has tended to emphasize the danger the city will sink into the Adriatic Sea some day. But experts agree this is not so urgent a problem as the threat to art works.

"Venice will not be allowed to sink into the sea," said Prof. L. J. Rollet-Andriane, chief of UNESCO's Rome office. "But the paintings and stones are deteriorating at a frightening rate, and they could be lost."

Venetian authorities estimate all will be lost in five years unless something is done. Other experts regard this as too alarmist. Fifty years might be closer to the truth, they say.

A Beginning

To begin tackling the problem before it is too late, UNESCO has made detailed inventories of 800 churches and palaces and 16,000 art works in the city. Recently it obtained funds from a private committee in France to begin restoration of the church of Santa Maria della Salute, and is seeking funds from other countries for urgent repairs to nine more monuments.

"The problem of Venice is that it has been neglected since the fall of the Republic 200 years ago," said Rollet-Andriane. "If restoration and maintenance had been done regularly, there would be no problem. But some monuments are now irreparable."

Venetian cultural organizations such as Italia Nostra blame smoke from nearby mainland industries for much of the damage to art works, but experts say this is less of a problem than humidity combined with old age, and of coal burned for heating in Venetian homes.

The solutions are simple—invisible resins injected into marble and polyester shields fitted into walls to strengthen them. But ideally, the walls also need electric heating units that fan warm air from floor to ceiling, and this is expensive to install and operate. So far the funds are not available.

Since last summer, Italy's National Council of Research and a governmental engineering body have had hundreds of experts at work on the second aspect of the Venetian problem—saving the city from the sea.

They are making the most extensive scientific surveys of the Venetian lagoon ever undertaken and expect to announce in about two months a plan to prevent Adriatic high tides from sweeping into the lagoon.

Informants say the most likely solution is the construction of dams and locks some distance from the city.

Beyond all this, there is the problem of saving Venice as a living city so it does not become simply a vast, uninhabited museum.

40,000 residents and is down to 119,000 population. Most of those remaining are old people, so Venice has the lowest birth rate in Italy and one of the highest death rates. Studies show most people leave because housing is so primitive, "as bad as India," as one expert put it.

Three per cent of inhabited Venetian houses are a public danger, 16 per cent are in a "deplorable" state and 47 per cent "mediocre," says a municipal report. Seventy-four per cent of apartments lack a bathroom, 3.7 per cent lack a toilet and 14 per cent have the toilet in the kitchen. Ninety per cent lack central heating.

About 16,000 Venetians live on ground floors subject to frequent flooding. And rents are higher than the Italian average.

A bill is now before Parliament to exempt Venetian property owners from taxes for several years if they pledge to use the funds to make improvements.

Beyond that, the question must be decided of what kind of city Venice will be—a city supported by mainland industry, by tourism or by cultural establishments such as universities of international repute.

In Venice itself, this is a subject of fierce dispute. Cultural groups fight with industrial leaders over whether industry on the nearby mainland should be throttled and whether a new ship canal should be built. The disputes spill over into politics.

On top of this, government ministries fight among themselves over areas of responsibility for the Venice problem.

For example, the Venice superintendent of monuments is responsible not for the city alone but for a wide area extending all the way to the Austrian border. By law, no tree in that area can be chopped down without his written permission. So he spends his day signing literally hundreds of petitions from people wanting to remove trees and has little time for the monuments of Venice.

Despite such formidable problems, Italy has gone from total neglect of Venice to genuine progress in just two years and UNESCO is confident the city can be saved.

"The problem now is one of management," said Rollet-Andriane. "And it should be at least 10 times easier to save Venice than to go to the moon."

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—University of Pennsylvania student Bob Lackmeyer plans to teach a course in panhandling at a newly organized free university on the campus.

The free university features a program operated by Penn students in which anyone is free to teach anything. About 100 courses are being offered, including folk dancing, self-awareness and comic books.

Lackmeyer said that on the first day of registration for his "panhandling for fun and profit" course, six persons signed up.

North Carolina has the highest gasoline tax in the nation

When it comes to paying state gasoline tax, North Carolinians are No. 1 in the nation. You pay more than any of your neighbors in bordering states. (In fact, you would have to drive all the way to the state of Washington to pay taxes anywhere near what we have at home.)

Forty-one of our 100 counties in North Carolina border other states. Gasoline taxes are lower in these states.

Service station operators in these border counties are especially unhappy about this. Because they have to collect 13¼ cents tax on each gallon of gasoline they sell, their prices have to reflect this higher tax.

Yes, the petroleum industry in North Carolina is unhappy about this state's high gasoline tax, because being No. 1 in the nation causes us a lot of problems. But what bothers us even more are the problems it causes in your pocketbook.

Law Enforcement Is His Ministry Of Service To People

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — John Joel Stowe III ended a line extending through five generations when he turned down a prayer book and pulpit for bullets and a badge.

But the Lawton policeman still considers himself a minister. And his father, a Tulsa pastor, agrees.

"John is simply approaching it from a new angle," said Dr. J. Joel Stowe Jr., pastor of the Rose Hill Methodist Church in Tulsa. "Law enforcement is a ministry of service. It has value and place, just like the ministry of the pulpit."

The Stowe family ministry began in 1924, when a young farm boy named John B. McFerrin decided to become a minister while attending a Tennessee camp meeting.

The family carried down the tradition through Dr. Stowe but then it took a different turn. Or maybe it didn't.

"Others interpret it differently," the police sergeant said, "but I can see law enforcement work as a ministry of love, helping society, as when an officer restrains a drunken driver or counsels with school children."

The younger Stowe became a police officer in 1964. He's currently sergeant of the police traffic division.

The Rev. Dr. Stowe said no pressure was placed on his son when it was time to choose a profession.

"Perhaps our family keeps producing ministers because of a lack of pressure to become one," he said. "The father doesn't recruit. It is always the son's decision."

But Stowe's interest in police work isn't too unusual. His father started the chaplains corps for the Oklahoma Highway Patrol in 1951 while in Hugo.

And the Rev. Dr. Stowe seems to have a soft spot in his heart for police work.

"The patrolman forces a mixture of emotion, from fear and confusion to mile after mile of

WHEN BENZADRINE WAS LOOKING FOR DATES, SHE SAT HOME TWIDDLING HER THUMBS PRACTICALLY EVERY NIGHT—

BUT NO SOONER WAS SHE OUT OF CIRCULATION—

nothing," the minister said. "He must be a good judge and listener, ready for every need from driving at breakneck speed to changing a light bulb or tire."

"John is a licensed Methodist minister, which means he can give sermons and has taken a vow not to drink or smoke. It all holds him in good stead," The Rev. Dr. Stowe continued.

"A Highway Patrol trooper once told me his call is to be a minister. I believe he was correct."

Her Love Went With His Hair

WALTHAMSTOW, England (UPI)—Ted Yeaton grew a beard, let his hair grow long and became a pop singer. And Susan Ayton fell in love with him.

Then he changed his name to Auguste Eadon, shaved off the beard and had his hair clipped to a neat trim when he joined another pop outfit. And Susan called it all off.

"It might seem silly," she said, "but I realized he just wouldn't be the same person."

Parole Hearing For Wife-Killer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dr. Bernard Finch, convicted of murdering his wife in 1959 in a sensational case replete with sex and money, is scheduled for a parole hearing next Monday or Tuesday.

The regular two-day meeting of the Adult Authority Board to consider paroles will be closed, as usual, and Finch himself is not expected to appear.

The board's decision will be announced later.

S.C. Observing 300th Birthday

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina this year celebrates its 300th birthday with pageantry from the mountains of the Piedmont to the historic "low country" along the coast. To highlight the tricentennial, the state has built multimillion dollar exposition centers at Greenville, Columbia and Charleston.

The most spectacular center—the Greenville building—sits atop a peak in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Designed by R. Buckminster Fuller, who created the United States' pavilion at Canada's Expo '67, the 200-foot-high alu-

Coins, Paper Money Be Exhibited Here 2 Days

Money is the big attraction of a two-day show to be held at the Moose Lodge in Greenville on Saturday and Sunday.

Opening at 10:00 a.m. Saturday and continuing until 10:00 p.m. the show will again be on view Sunday from 1:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m.

Sponsored and mounted by the 89 regular and 15 junior members of the Pitt Coin Club, coins and paper money, as well as related items, will be shown to the general public.

U.S. coins and paper money from many nations are being exhibited both by local members and by guest exhibitors from out of town. Among the latter will be G.G. "Tom" Sawyer, with his collection of paper money; V.H. Rowe showing U.S. coins; James Pheagin with a collection of primitive coins; and Mrs.

Geraldine Petty, who will exhibit type coins.

Coin dealers from North Carolina and Virginia will be operating 30 tables displaying material, giving collectors and opportunity to add items to their collections.

The Pitt Coin Club, founded in January 1969, began with 52 charter members. In a little over a year, the club has grown until now it numbers 104 members — double the original number. The purpose of the club is to encourage interest in numismatics, to cultivate friendly relations among collectors, and especially to assist amateur collectors by providing a time, and a place to buy, sell or trade coins and to discuss coins and methods of collecting. The club meets on the second Friday of each month at 7:30 p.m. on the third floor of Wachovia Bank Building. Membership is open to anyone interested in collection coins, medals and tokens. Wendell Smiley is president, and Bob Scism is vice-president of the club.

In addition to coins and paper money being shown by members and out of town collectors, Mrs. Glen E. Wicker, secretary-treasurer of the club, states that local banks are furnishing various U.S. Treasury exhibits and collections.

The public is invited to attend the two day coin show, for which, no admission charge is made.

Firefighters Designed Suits

EVENDALE FIREMAN models his suit which puts him right into the space age. A number of innovations were worked out by the firemen themselves. (UPI Telephoto)

By TERRY FLYNN
 CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI)—Firemen in suburban Evendale have designed a new fire-fighting uniform for themselves that brings them right into the space age.

The new uniform is called the "Evendale Standard." Evendale Fire Chief Edward Gassert said the 17 men in his unit worked for about two years to perfect the jacket and pants—made from the same material incorporated in the suits used by moon-walking astronauts.

"We studied dozens of fabrics with consideration to their safety and design before adopting the aluminum-beta glass," Gassert explained.

Gassert said the department's long, black rubber coats have been standard fire fighting equipment for over a century and the latest improvement, zip-in wool liners, was introduced in 1945.

"Basically, all they are is a heavy raincoat," Gassert said. "A change is long overdue."

The Evendale Standard consists of a jacket and pants made of the aluminized glass cloth and incorporating a number of innovations devised by the firemen as they designed the suit.

The jacket has several pouch-like pockets for carrying tools, removable liners for the pockets, an extra-high collar to extend to the fireman's helmet over his neck for additional protection, and an additional zip-in liner for use in extremely cold weather.

The jacket is much shorter and lighter than the traditional rubber slicker.

"We made them as light as possible, but did sacrifice weight for protection whenever the choice came down to that,"

Gassert said. Buttons and snaps were eliminated wherever possible to reduce the possibility of snagging or catching on something while working close to a fire. Pockets are closed by an adhesive material on the lip of the pocket flap.

Evendale is not a particularly large community, but it is highly industrialized and includes the sprawling General Electric jet engine plant.

This concentration of industry and the inherent danger of chemical or "extra hot" fires was directly responsible for the suit's invention.

Girls' Program

A weekly activity program each Saturday from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. is to be conducted as a Girls Recreation Club. This activity will begin Saturday, and will be held at South Greenville Recreation Center. All interested girls are invited to attend.

To The Public

Subject: Do We Increase Our Taxes and Lose Our Vocational School for a Community College?

Dear Friends:
 I still do not wish to embarrass anyone concerning the proposed tax referendum to be used to convert Pitt Tech to a community college.

But you have been SNOWED with misleading information.

According to a letter from the office of PTI requesting support of former students, it is stated that the average funds received from the county in the past 3 years has been 8.1c per $100 property evaluation. A "yes" vote would limit this to 7c per $100 property evaluation. Is 7c per $100 more than 8.1c per $100? Dr. Humber says they need an extra $6,000.00 which they can get by the 7c per $100 evaluation. The truth is that the real per centum has been 4.1c per $100 evaluation.

The report of how your tax dollars are spent, that we all received with each tax statement, and verified by the county tax office, stated PTI received the following monies of the Property Valuation

Tax Dollar:
		1967	4.0
1963	1.6	1968	5.9
1964	6.4	1969	4.6
1965	3.0
1966	3.8

Average for the last 7 years is 4.1c.

And Pitt Tech Staff tells you that approval of a 7c per $100 property valuation tax could lower our taxes. According to these facts, it's impossible!

Face up to it. Any additional funds must come out of county tax money. With not enough money available to pay the county school budget now, this extra $6,000.00 will of necessity be another deficit. The deficit can only be erased by increased taxation.

They say that without becoming a community college, courses at PTI cannot be accredited in transfer at ECU! Then how did the Technical Institute in Martin County get this done?

If PTI becomes a 2 year community college, what will be the next step? We started as a vocational school—next we changed to a Vocational-Technical Institute—now a 2 year Community College. Will it be a 2 year Junior college? A four year Junior college? A Major college? And what about future entrance requirements, will we be left without any place for our less privileged to get an education?

Have you noticed that those who are trying to "snow" you on voting "yes" are nearly all people interested or connected to "Higher Education". Can't we emphasize training for those who cannot make it to college?

Raymond E. Tew, placement center director at NC State University in a newspaper article stated the market for liberal arts graduates with teachers certificates are glutted. The demand for people with "now" skills is in high demand. These courses COULD be obtained at PTI.

In a recent Adv., it was stated that 7,105 students have taken courses at PTI since July, 1969. These people are being prepared for useful employment now. Let us keep it that way!

Thanks for reading, and I hope I have contributed to your understanding of this tax issue.

Sincerely yours,
 A. B. Whitley, Jr.
 Pitt Tech Board Member
