Going Down, Head First

TAKING A SHORT - CUT - Most people descending from the fifth floor of a hotel take the elevator. Ross Collins made his trip more quickly. He dove from a fifth - floor window of the Eugene Hotel (Eugene, Ore.). Collins is a performer with the Shrine Circus, and the leap was a promotional stunt for the circus. Out of sight in the picture, but essential to Collins' act, is a foam rubber "sponge" in which he landed. (AP Wirephoto)

Rains Arriving In Indochina

Saigon Reinforces Armies In Twin Cambodian Drives

By BERT W. OKULEY

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese commanders reinforced their armies in Cambodia by 7,000 men Saturday in a double-barreled offensive that drove west toward the beleaguered town of Tonle Bet and south to the outskirts of the main seaport at Kompong Som.

No U.S. troops were involved in the twin thrusts but Saigon communiques reported 13 Americans slain and 14 wounded in attacks by Communist forces in Cambodia's Fishhook area near the South Vietnamese border. This raised the U.S. toll in the three-week campaign to 190 dead and 731 wounded.

Monsoon rains swept wide areas of Indochina Saturday, working against both sides in the war. Thick clouds severely hampered U.S. air strikes against the Communists' Ho Chi Minh Trail in northeastern Laos but the rains turned long stretches of the route into seas of mud and bogged down trucks.

The rains were beginning to cover the length of the border areas of both Vietnams, Laos and Cambodia. Heavy rains fell on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh, and military forecasters said it would be less than a week before daily downpours soaked the lower portions of South Vietnam and regions to the west in Cambodia.

The rainy season generally works to the advantage of Communist troops because it hampers the mobility of allied units and restricts American air power.

The South Vietnamese build-up increased Saigon's commitment in Cambodia to 47,000 men, and underscored South Vietnam's determination to press on indefinitely despite U.S. pledges that all American forces will be withdrawn from Cambodia by July 1. About 10,000 Americans remain in Cambodia.

A battalion of North Vietnamese infantrymen defiantly flew a Communist flag over Tonle Bet Saturday as a South Vietnamese task force of 13,000 men led by tanks closed to within 12 miles of the town on the east bank of the Mekong River.

Tonle Bet, 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh and just across the river from Kompong Cham, fell to the Communists last Saturday after they withdrew from Kompong Cham, Cambodia's second largest city.

To the south, along the Gulf of Siam, elements of the 21st South Vietnamese Infantry Division were reported six miles east of the port at Kompong Som (formerly Sihanoukville) in a drive aimed at choking Communist supply lines by sea.

UPI newsman Tran Dai Minh said the South Vietnamese column stopped just outside Kompong Som to await orders from the high command in Saigon on whether to move into the port and seal it. U.S. and South Vietnamese warships have imposed a limited blockade of Kompong Som and other seaports along the Cambodian coast.

The South Vietnamese drive toward Kompong Som was reported to have seized a cement factory built by Communist China during the reign of Prince Norodom Sihanouk. An estimated 15 Viet Cong were killed in fighting for the plant which had been in Communist hands since April 28.

Merger Deadline Creeping Up

Teacher Groups Meet, Disagree

RALEIGH (AP) — Directors and liaison committee members of North Carolina's Negro and white teachers organizations failed to reach agreement Saturday on merger of the groups during an all-day session.

The white North Carolina Education Association and the predominantly Negro North Carolina Teachers Association are under a mandate by the National Education Association to merge by July 1.

The organizations face possible expulsion from the NEA unless they merge by that date.

Dr. A. C. Dawson, executive secretary of NCEA, said in a statement authorized by his directors that a proposal by the NCTA for approval of a two-thirds majority rule "would be undemocratic and totally unworkable."

The NCEA said in the statement, "Such a rule would have the effect of giving one - third of the members of the proposed new board of directors veto power over any action of the new organization.

"Since Negro members are guaranteed eight positions on the proposed new 21 board of directors, they would present an effective veto on any question."

NCEA representatives said, "Such a change in the already agreed upon merger plan would require that the NCEA take this provision back to its membership for an every-member vote, a patent impossibility prior to the July 1 merger deadline."

E. B. Palmer, executive secretary of NCTA, said in a brief statement it is up to NEA now to resolve the issue.

The NCEA contended that the two-thirds majority question was settled March 2 when the joint NCEA- NCTA boards approved the recommendations of a special committee headed by State School Superintendent Craig Phillips.

The NCEA statement, said, "The special committee was appointed to resolve the question of the two-thirds majority question and the procedure for amending the constitution. At that time, all members of both boards signed a compact which pledged good faith and which was a part of the agreement."

The NCEA directors went on to say its organization has approved "a new constitution which guarantees black representation at every level of the proposed new association and which guarantees that black members who feel their rights may have been abridged can take their complaints to either or both of two committees composed of an equal number of whites and blacks."

Eight Thousand March In Sweltering Atlanta

By JAMES K. CAZALAS

ATLANTA (UPI) — Eight thousand persons walked behind a mule-drawn wagon through the sweltering streets of Atlanta Saturday to "break the back of discrimination and aggression" in a march reminiscent of Dr. Martin Luther King's funeral.

"America, we are not your enemies," cried King's widow, Coretta, from the same shady campus at Morehouse College where her husband's funeral eulogies were read two years ago.

"Your enemy is the force of oppression which would silence dissent by any means possible," she said.

Temperatures in the 90s beat down on the marchers, who stretched at one point from the beginning of the walk at King's tomb to the campus itself, a distance of one mile.

Leading the march was a creaking wagon drawn by a mule and a horse and behind that 10 men carried two empty, black-draped caskets. Mrs. King walked in the front row of the march with Sen. George D. McGovern, D-S.D., the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who succeeded King as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Atlanta Mayor Sam Massell and Leonard Woodcock, new United Auto Workers president.

About 30 per cent of the marchers were white, some from Atlanta's large hippie community, others from across the nation. One white youth came shirtless, with a Viet Cong flag painted on his back and flowers painted on his face and chest.

Abernathy read a list of the "nation's 10 most unwanted politicians," beginning with Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., and ending with President Nixon, and said, "The problem in this country is that we've got too many wrinkled old souls in position of high public trust, and what we need is some young soul power to drive them out of office.

"We are tired of old folks running this country," he shouted. "We are calling upon the young to answer the bullets of repression with a courageous movement of justice and equality."

McGovern's speech was devoted to ending the Southeast Asian War.

"One of the reasons I am here today is to ask your support in urging your senators" to vote for an amendment to "restore to the Congress the right to decide issues of war."

He said Nixon's "Southern strategy is an insult to the decency of the South and the honor of America. It is a strategy of bigotry."

Mrs. King, in a brief address, said, "The blindness of hatred and the bitterness of racism is tearing our nation apart. When will we ever learn that no man is free until all men are free, and that injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere?"

Buildup In Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — A Miami television station reports a Soviet military buildup in Cuba and has shown pictures of missiles purported to have power enough to reach the U.S. intelligence has said in the past that Cuba has missiles, but none capable of reaching this country.

The pictures, telecast Friday by WTVJ, were taken from the Spanish magazine, Gaceta Ilustrada. The station said the photos were smuggled to Spain via Czechoslovakia.

One picture was said to depict Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro "watching an exhibition of ground-to-ground missiles that can be launched from a boat."

The station said: "The Spanish magazine claims that these missiles are capable of hitting the Florida coast."

Urge Keeping Colleges Open

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—The Texas Association of School Administrators has adopted a resolution calling upon college and university leaders to keep their institutions open "for those who want an education" despite student protests and strikes. The association's resolution spoke of "those who are threatening the foundations of our democratic government."

West Virginia Senator Falls In Behind Spiro

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A high-ranking member of the Senate Democratic leadership followed Vice President Spiro T. Agnew Saturday night in criticizing news media, and said the "gutlessness" of some college presidents has contributed to campus violence.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., a member of the powerful Senate Appropirations Committee, said Congress and federal agencies "should review very carefully the federal appropriations now being made for higher education."

Byrd, the third-ranking Democrat in the Senate leadership, made the comments in a speech prepared for delivery at Bluefield, W. Va.

His criticism of both college faculty and news media came a day after Agnew's latest attack on the news media and what Agnew called "a small hardcore of hell-raisers" on college campuses. Agnew spoke at Houston, Tex.

Byrd said revolutionary leaders on campuses preach a "doctrine of destruction" and draw encouragement from factors within the university system, including "the iron-clad guarantees of tenure for leftwing instructors, who might not be competent to hold positions off the campus."

"And certainly the gutlessness of some college heads is a factor," Byrd added.

He acknowledged security forces overreacted in some campus disturbances "because the provocations which they have had to endure have been enormous."

Parade Despite Cries For Mao

By HUBERT J. ERB

BERLIN (AP) — The Western allies paraded in West Berlin today behind a shield of police who held off antiwar demonstrators.

Hundreds of students and youths yelled "Mao! Mao! Mao Tse-tung!" played the Communist anthem, the International, over loudspeakers and cursed and shouted as U.S. British and French troops paraded by to mark the 25th anniversary of World War II's end.

Both the allied military bands and the applause of the populace were drowned out in the vicinity of the Technical University where the protesters gathered. A huge poster of Mao, Red China's leader, fluttered across the university's main building. The word "pigs" was scrawled on windows.

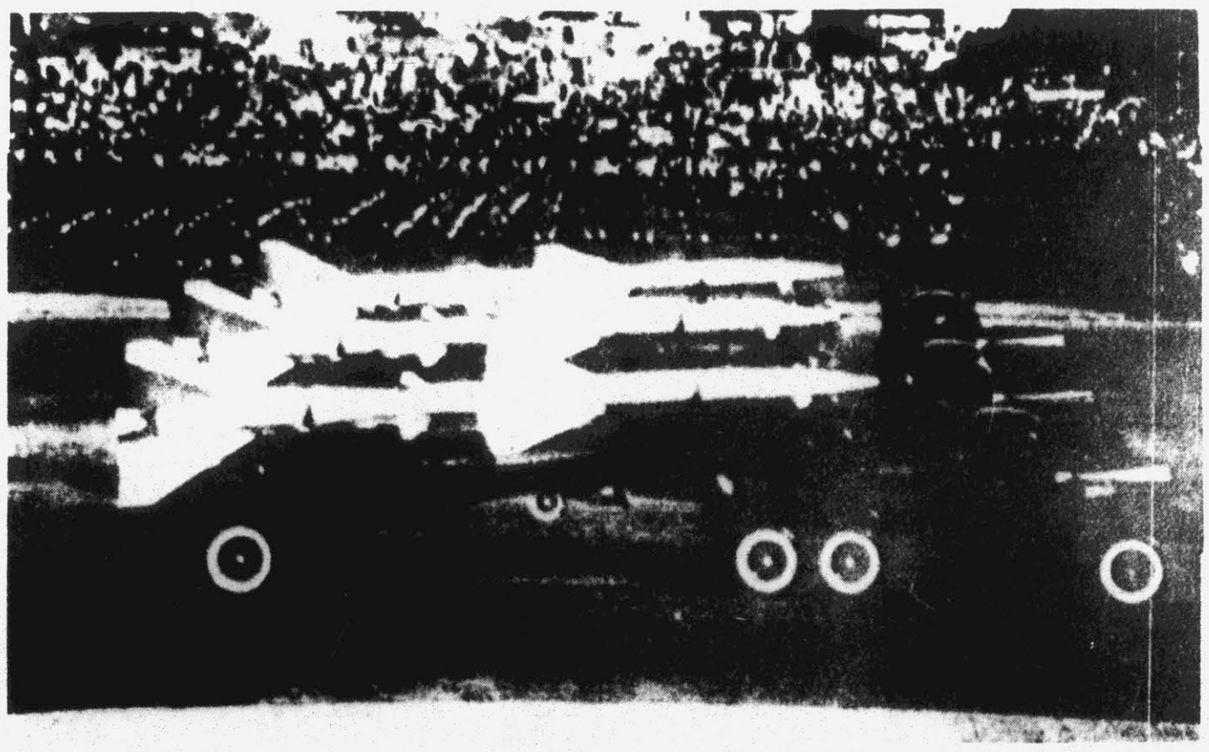

With 12,000 men, police outnumbered the 5,000 or so allied troops who marched up the broad 17th of June Boulevard, named after an East German uprising against Communist rule in 1953.

The parade itself was free of major incidents of violence, although bottles, rocks, firecrackers, and paint bags fell on the boulevard as soldiers on foot and aboard jeeps and tanks passed by.

Cleanup Will Close Downtown

BOSTON (UPI)—Downtown streets will be closed to traffic for 12 hours Sunday for the biggest one-day cleanup in the city's history.

More than 63,000 feet of cross-walks and lane guides and 325 traffic poles will be repainted. In addition, 551 new traffic signs and 42 street signs will be installed.

Missiles Paraded In Havana

Germs Alive After 3 Years On Moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists have discovered that a harmless germ from earth returned alive after three years on the moon with a television camera.

It soared into space aboard unmanned Surveyor III, which landed on the moon April 20, 1967.

Apollo 12 astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean set down close to Surveyor for their moon walk in November and retrieved the camera.

Apparently the micro-organism, known as streptococcus mitis, survived the Surveyor launch, a three-day voyage to the moon in the vacuum of space and 950 days in the hostile moon environment.

Frederick Mitchell, a microbiologist at the Lunar Receiving Laboratory here, said the germ was found by scientists in the course of a five-month study of the Surveyor camera.

It was described by Dr. W. W. Kemmerer, head of the space center's preventive medicine office, as "a benign bacteria that rides around in all of us."

Switching Is For The Birds, Cracks Governor

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Bob Scott took a thinly-veiled crack Saturday night at U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. of Virginia who recently switched from Democrat to independent.

"I'm proud to be a Democrat," the North Carolina governor told Virginia Democrats. "I'd rather fight than switch.

"As a matter of fact, I think switching is for the birds."

In a talk prepared for a Jefferson-Jackson Day fund-raising dinner, Scott pointed to Virginia's recent election of a Republican governor in noting that the "days of the 'one-party system" in the South are over."

Scott returned Saturday from a visit to France where both he and Virginia's Republican Gov. Linwood Holton were guests of the French government.

Scott referred to the Republican party as the "greedy old party" and as a "party of opportunism in our area."

He added that the Republican part in the South has been a party that has "taken advantage of the contemporary problems which face us" and often "has charted a course which has left a disturbing mark on the political stability of our region."

In this situation, Scott said the Democratic party has three alternatives.

It can do nothing and "leave to future generations nothing more than the remains of another era, or, "we can fight one extreme with another."

"Certainly," he said, "Either of these choices would be disastrous, because the Democratic party is not, and never has been a party of extremism.

"I do not believe we should undertake any action which would automatically exclude any individual or group from full participation in the Democratic party," Scott added.

"The third alternative I have to suggest to you is one that goes by many names, such as moderation, and adaptability, and flexibility," Scott continued.

"What it means is the ability of a political organization to respond to the changing needs of the people."

Signature Day

RALEIGH (AP) — Maj. Gen. Ferd Davis, commander of the North Carolina National Guard, announced Saturday the guard and the North Carolina Jaycees will cooperate in observing Signature Day on June 18.

On that date, guardsmen and Jaycees will seek to get the signatures of all Tar Heels on petitions calling for better treatment of U.S. prisoners of war in North Vietnam.

The petitions will be addressed to the "Washington ambassadors of seven nations which have represented themselves as possessing influence in Hanoi"— Denmark, France, India, Poland, Romania and Sweden.

Davis said national guard armories throughout the state will be opened to the public on June 18 for citizens to sign the seven petitions. He said persons who will be unable to stop by an armory on June 18 should call the armory or contact the Jaycees to make arrangements to sign the petitions in advance.

"Competent evidence exists that American POW'S have been subjected to deliberately inhumane treatment by Hanoi," Davis said. "They lack proper medical care and adequate food and have been subjected to solitary confinement without cause."

Pedestrian Was Injured

A local predestrian, George Spain, 25, 1905 Kennedy Circle, was injured here Friday in a 9 p.m. traffic mishap at Kennedy Circle.

Police, who said Spain was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries, reported the accident involved cars driven by James Russell Dickens, 26, 1813B Norcott Circle and James Mack Little, 35, 1924 Norcott Circle.

Officers charged Dickens following investigation of the accident with parking in the travel lane and Little with failing to see his movement could be made in safety.

Damage set for the Dickens car amounted to $50 while no damage was reported for the Little car.

Noah Walter Reid, 51, Rt. 2, Box 176 was charged with operating under the influence and no operator's license following investigation of a second traffic accident here Friday at 8:08 p.m. on NC Highway 11.

Investigating officers identified driver of the second vehicle involved as Julius Harold Manning, 50, Rt. 1, Box 219, Ayden.

Damage was set at $50 for the Manning vehicle and at $500 for the Reid car.

Undeterred If Sales Off

ATLANTA (UPI) — Leonard Woodcock, new president of the United Auto Workers, said Saturday a drop in automobile sales won't affect negotiations with the car manufacturers because the UAW will be bargaining for the future.

Woodcock, here to take part in a protest march against alleged "represssion," said in an interview General Motors stockholders were told GM has "high hopes for the 1970s and so we want those high hopes reflected in the settlment we make.

"We are bargaining for a two or three-year period into the future."

Woodcock said key goals of the union would be amending the pension plan to provide retirement "after 30 years of service regardless of age, $500 minimum monthly income, a substantial wage increase and restoration of the cost of living that we had in the old contract up until 1967."

He said he told the union's Ford council Friday the agriculture implement industry had "outdistanced" the auto industry in benefits "there's no reason why the automobile industry can't give its employes those same benefits..."

House Lost To Fire Saturday

A wood - frame house located on a lot owned by the city Redevelopment Commission was destroyed by fire here early Saturday morning.

Firemen said the unoccupied dwelling was already engulfed in flamed when they arrived.

Alarm for the fire was sounded from Box 322 at 1 a.m.

Moderate smoke damage resulted here Friday in a kitchen fire at Montclair Drive Apartments, No. 4, occupied by Thad Lewis.

Firemen, who reported the fire out on arrival, said the fire began from overheated grease in a frying pan.

In addition to smoke damage, the kitchen cabinets to the apartment were burned in the 6:15 p.m. fire.

Students Report On A Future For Greenville In Their Study Project

Past and present urban development trends within the City of Greenville is the theme of a Urban and Planning program entitled "1970 Simulated City Planning Report for Greenville, North Carolina" to be presented Wednesday by 20 students of East Carolina University.

An invitation is extended to all interested citizens to attend the presentation of this final report prepared by students of the Urban and Regional Planning Program which will be held in Room 308 of Wright Annex, beginning at 2:00 p.m. and continuing until 5:00 p.m.

The report will concentrate on findings and accompanying recommendations relative to the future development of Greenville as envisaged by the students. Courses forming the basis for the study are ones offered within the Department of Geography at ECU.

A large variety of studies are encompassed within the simulated Greenville report, including history and regional setting; physiographic study; population study; land use analysis; housing conditions analysis; land use plan, and the community facilities analysis plan.

A jury of experts representing academic and professional fields related to planning will critically evaluate the findings and recommendations contained within the studies.

Individuals on the jury are: Dr. Robert E. Cramer, chairman; Dr. Ralph Birchard, associated professor; and Mrs. Palmyra Leahy, assistant professor; all of the Department of Geography at ECU.

Also on the jury are persons in professional fields within the city and county. These include — C.A. Holliday, city engineer; John Messick, project manager, Greenville Redevelopment Commission; Roy Beck, director, Soil Conservation Service, Pitt County; Thomas Rivers, Rivers and Associates; Boyd Lee, Greenville Recreation Department director; and Dr. Ralph Steele, of the Recreation Program, ECU and also member of the Greenville Recreation Commissioner.

The entire project is under the direction of William W. Hankins, director of the Urban and Regional Planning Program within the Department of Geography, ECU.

Laird Vows Deadlines Will Be Met

MOSINEE, Wis. (UPI)— Defense Secretary Melvin Laird pledged Saturday that the Nixon administration's withdrawal dates for troops in Southeast Asia will be met.

"We've already had three increments of troop withdrawals announced and we've met every date," Laird said. "We will meet the new reduction which has been announced by President Nixon and we will meet the troop withdrawals in Southeast Asia as far as Cambodia is concerned."

Laird, here to speak at the dedication of the Central Wisconsin Airport, said there will be no Americans in Cambodia as advisors or combat forces after June 30 and "there will not be a credibility problem as far as any announcement by this department of this administration.

"The deadline will be met," he said.

Laird, a native of nearby Marshfield, said that since he became secretary of defense he had tried to change the debate of "why Vietnam" to one of "why vietnamization."

"Why is it necessary for us to reduce American presence in accordance with the Nixon doctrine for Asia?

"The Nixon doctrine for Asia means less involvement for American ground forces in Asia," he said.

Laird was asked about his son, a student at Eau Claire State University and sometimes a demonstrator against the Vietnam war.

"I don't tell my son what to say and I don't tell my wife what to say," he said. "I think that they should speak for themselves."

Jaycee And Jay-C-Ette Officers Installed At Banquet Last Night

Bill Hobbs, president of the North Carolina Jaycees, was the featured speaker Saturday night at the annual Jaycee Installation Banquet and Ladies Night held at the Moose Lodge.

Sam Keel, area vice president of the North Carolina Jaycees, assisted with the installation of incoming officers of the local Jaycees and Jay - C- Ettes for the 1970-71 year.

Jaycee officers installed were Jack Wall, president; Bruce Thompson, internal vice president; Dave Gordon, external vice president; Doug Mewborn, ways and means vice president; Andy Warren, secretary; John Bell, treasurer; Ricky Miller, assistant treasurer; and John Jackson, state director.

New directors installed included Roger Collins III, Kelly Barnhill, Jack Cox, Glenn Fisher, Charles Hargett, Warren Stroud, Bill Hudson, and Don Parrott.

Jay - C - Ette officers and directors installed were Adell Prescott, president; Molly Keel, vice president; Karen Turner, recording secretary; Helen Parrott, corresponding secretary; Etsil Gordon, treasurer; and Barbara Wilkerson, reporter. Directors are Ann Reese, Mary Ann Barnhill, Jeanie Adams, Dot Fisher, and Melba Hargett.

Etsil Gordon was named Jay - C - Ette of the Year and Melba Hargett was recognized as the Most Outstanding New Member. Outgoing Jay - C - Ette President, Lib Layne, gave a resume' of the club's activities over the past year.

Outgoing Jay - C - Ette president, Lib Layne, gave a summary of the club's activities over the past year.

Outgoing Jaycee president, Jim Lesley, presented a report on the Jaycee activities which included 56 different projects. Certificates of Merit were awarded to 58 Jaycees for their service as officers, directors and - or project chairmen. In addition, 15 Jaycees were recognized for completion of the state requirements for the Speak - Up Award.

Bill Howard and Don McGlohon, former members of the local chapter, conducted a "passing out" ceremony for four Jaycees who became "exhausted roosters" by passing the 36 years old age limit. The four were Curtis Hendrix, Les Turner, Billy Ross, and James Shirley.

Clears Way For Giants To Merge

By GEORGE GUDAUSKAS

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)— Connecticut Insurance Commissioner William R. Cotter cleared the way Saturday for the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT) and the Hartford Fire Insurance Co. to combine in the largest merger in U.S. corporate history.

The commissioner gave permission to ITT to make a $1.5 billion offer to holders of Hartford Fire stock.

Cotter had vetoed a previous attempt to merge the two companies last December.

There has been criticism of the proposal, although company officials for both firms have testified the merger would strengthen both companies. They also assured employes they would not lose jobs through the corporate marriage.

Among the critics of the merger plan was consumer advocate Ralph Nader and corporate gadfly Mrs. Evelyn Davis of New York City.

Cotter vetoed the last merger proposal Dec. 13, 1969, but suggested a marriage of the firms through a voluntary tender offer of stock.

Holders of 22 million shares of Hartford Fire stock stand to gain $12 a share on the value of their holdings with a favorable decision by Cotter.

Nader claimed the merger would allow ITT to force its employes to buy Hartford Fire Insurance policies. He also said the merger would "doom" the remaining independent insurance companies in Connecticut.

Mrs. Davis, who testified in the three days of hearings Cotter held on the proposal last March, asked the insurance commissioner to investigate favors done by ITT for government officials.

"Promises of merger-minded corporations, and this includes others as well as ITT and Hartford, mean about as much as those of politicians standing for office," she said.

Others cited the possibility that ITT, a $4 billion conglomerate, would be freed to make "raids" on the assets of the insurance company.

Hurricane 'Regrouped'

MIAMI (AP) — Remnants of Hurricane Alma, which lost its strength after pounding eastern Cuba and Jamaica with torrential rain, regrouped Saturday and formed a weak tropical depression in the western Caribbean.

The National Hurricane Center said the depression showed no immediate sign of intensifying as it moved northwestward at 10 knots about 75 miles south of Cuba's western tip.

Although there was little threat from its winds, the storm was expected to bring more rain to Cuba.

In a broadcast Saturday Radio Havana said torrential rains in eastern Cuba had forced the evacuation of 3,000 persons to safe ground in Oriente province.

Evacuated Five Via Helicopters

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. (AP)—Coast Guard and Navy helicopters evacuated five injured workmen from the Dismal Swamp Saturday afternoon after a high-voltage power line tower under construction fell near the North Carolina-Virginia border.

Lt. Cmdr. Louis Jacques, a Coast Guard doctor, said four of the men were critically injured. They were taken by helicopter to the Portsmouth, Va., Naval Hospital.

The accident occurred some two miles south of Portsmouth Airport. Two Coast Guard helicopters from Elizabeth City and a Navy helicopter from Oceana, Va., were used in the evacuation.

The workmen were erecting the tower to carry a high-voltage line.

Hold Americans On Drug Charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Foreign countries now are holding 522 Americans on drug charges, which according to the State Department is 400 per cent more than a year ago, it was disclosed Saturday.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass. released the figures from a letter he received from the State Department. It read, in part:

"We believe that many young Americans who go abroad do not realize that they are subject to the laws of the countries which they visit."

Conte, a member of a House appropriations subcommittee dealing with customs and drug matters, urged the nation's young to "think carefully about possible consequences of drug use. "The penalties can run over 10 years in places like Turkey or confinement in a mental hospital in Lebanon" he said.

"I have seen some of these so called prisons, and they make U.S. jails look like hotels," Conte said.

Mexico led the latest list with 145 Americans in custody. The State Department reported. Other countries holding considerable numbers were Spain 63, France 33, Japan 26, Jamaica 25 and Sweden 23.

Gov. Scott Taking To 'Commencement Trail' This Week

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott will go on the commencement trail this week.

At 9:30 a.m. Saturday, he will have brief remarks at graduation exercises at North Carolina State University.

He will stage a repeat act Sunday, May 31, at 10:30 a.m. at graduation exercises for the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and at 3 p.m. that day at Charlotte for graduates of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Scott, who will return to his office this week after a 10-day visit to France, will begin his official duties by presiding at a meeting of the University of North Carolina trustees in Greensboro at 10:30 a.m. Monday.

At 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, Scott will preside at a meeting of state department heads in his conference room and at 1:30 p.m., he will attend a news conference called by the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Scott will attend a North Carolina Awards banquet at the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

At 1:30 p.m. Thursday he will attend a meeting of the Coastal Plains Regional Commission along with Govs. Robert McNair of South Carolina and Lester Maddox of Georgia. The session will be held in the governors conference room.

At 3 p.m. Friday, Scott will attend the first meeting of the Governor's Committee on State Government Reorganization. This session also will be held in the conference room.

Cambodians Expect Guerrilla Warfare

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The Cambodian military command said Friday there are strong indications that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese are "abandoning major military operations" in favor of guerrilla warfare.

A military briefing officer said the Vietnamese Communist forces are "so disappointed at not taking Kampong Cham, Takeo and other towns leading the Phnom Penh" that they are giving up on big actions.

A study of the general situation during the past week, the spokesman said, showed a considerable decrease in fighting, with the Cambodian forces taking the offensive in the eastern and southern regions.

The spokesman said the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will find guerrilla tactics in Cambodia more difficult than in Vietnam because of obvious ethnic differences between Cambodians and Vietnamese.

No Leakage As Tankers Collide

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The 32,602-ton Danish tanker Eli Maersk and the 1,147-ton Russian tanker Narva collided in a fog near the Landsort lighthouse, about 25 miles southwest of Stockholm early Saturday. There was no serious damage and no oil leakage, the Coast Guard said.

Two Persons Injured In 2 Traffic Accidents

Two persons were injured in traffic mishaps in the city here yesterday.

Taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries received in a 5:35 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive 150 ft. south from Third St. was 16-year old James Lee Blount of 302A Conley Street.

Investigating officers said Blount was thrown from the bicycle he was driving when he was hit by a car driven by Sarah Spain Dixon, 37, Rt. 4, Box 3.

Officers, who are continuing their investigation of the accident, set damage for both vehicles at $10.

James Nichols, 33, of 511 B. Church St., was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for injuries he received in a collision at the intersection of NC 11 and Airport Road.

Police reported the mishap involved cars driven by Nichols and George Leonard Williams, 49, 1606 Dickinson Ave.

Officers charged Williams with operating under the influence and placed an estimated $600 in damages on the Nichols car and $200 in damages on the Williams car.

Years Of Work In CBD Plans

Greenville's Central Business District redevelopment project has been carefully planned with the backing of the voters through more than one municipal election.

The CBD project has been in the planning stage for a number of years. It has gone through the Redevelopment Commission, Planning and Zoning Commission and the City Council. As required by law, there have been two public hearings on the completed plans.

A number of elected and appointed city officials have spent long hours with federal agencies getting the project approved so that federal funds would be available to carry it out.

In total the project has been planned as something that will benefit all Greenville citizens at the least possible cost to them. The project, as approved, will mean a four lane loop street to feed traffic into the core area. A part of the loop is already there, on Reide, which gives a good idea of how it will eventually look. The troublesome Dickinson Avenue leg of Five Points will be eliminated and a park - like area created there.

A pedestrian mall will be provided on Evans Street with traffic parking behind the present stores on each side of Evans.

Downtown streets will be renewed and broken sidewalks replaced. The entire area will be beautiful and opened up so that future generations won't face the polluted canyons that characterize present day cities.

The project has been planned carefully to comply with state laws and at the same time to provide these magnificent improvements at the least possible cost to local citizens.

Despite any temporary obstacles, we have no doubt that Greenville citizens, who have so long supported this project through their elected representatives, will soon be seeing the Central Business District plans come to life.

Belonging To All Tar Heels

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — "Gee whizz! Wouldn't it be great to own a picture like that?"

The exclamation came from a group of school children touring the North Carolina Museum of Art, stopped before Winslow Homer's painting, "Weaning the Calf."

"You do," said the man with horn - rimmed glasses, "that picture is yours. It belongs to all the people of North Carolina."

Mouths gaped in astonishment, then eyes brightened and smiles of understanding spread over the young faces. They looked again at the painting of 19th century farm boys holding an unwilling calf from its mother, this time with a proud sense of possession.

Charles Stanford, museum director since April 1, told the story to illustrate a primary point in his philosophy. The museum and its multi - million dollar collection of paintings, sculpture and art objects is the property of the people of North Carolina, and must be used for their benefit.

"All the people of North Carolina," he emphasized. "There is something here for everybody, for education and appreciation."

Stanford takes a dim view of the "Oh, isn't it beautiful" school of aesthetics from the 19th century. "I don't want this museum to be just a storehouse, visited by the select few. It must be a living, working institution. It must reach out to the people, and it must draw the people in to it," he said.

"This is one of the great educational institutions of the state," he added. Paintings from the past are not just beautiful pictures; they are a record of life as it was lived, with something to tell about history, sociology,medicine, law, the whole range of human activity.

"Few people could read and write at that time," he reminded. "Paintings were a means of instruction and communication, both in the church and elsewhere. We could think of art as the television of that day."

Stanford is the first North Carolinian to serve as museum director, and in his 40's, by far the youngest. His predecessors, the late W. R. Valentiner and Dr. Justus Bier, both were natives of Germany, men of international reputation who came to the position from a lifetime of art scholarship.

Stanford had served as the museum's curator of education for 12 years when the trustees of the Art Museum selected him this spring to succeed Dr. Bier. Regrouping the museum staff is one task facing him as director. His old position as curator of education is vacant, and it is likely there will be other positions to be filled.

Undoubtedly he will look for those who share his enthusiasm for innovation in relating art to people in the context of today.

Perhaps the prize example of his innovative approach is the Gallery for the Blind, a section of the museum where art can be made real through touch and sound to those who cannot see. It has attracted wide attention in museum circles, both in this country and abroad. Stanford told about it in Moscow at an international museum conference. It has been paid the ultimate compliment of being copied in a number of places.

A one million dollar appropriation by the North Carolina General Assembly in the late '40s was the genesis of the Art Museum, only state - supported art museum in the nation.

Short of an auction there is no way accurately to evaluate the collection's worth today. A figure often used is $12 million, but in light of the current art market it could easily be twice that or more.

As a North Carolinian, Stanford is proud of the museum's remarkable rise to prominence. He feels other Tar Heels should share that pride.

His family roots are deep in North Carolina. He uses 18th century decanters which belonged to an Orange County ancestor who served in Congress. His father, who died only recently, was the college roommate of the late Governor Kerr Scott.

After graduation from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Stanford spent four years at Princeton University studying art history and archaeology. A classmate and friend there was Thomas Hoving, now director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Stanford, loquacious and persuasive in projecting the museum's future, takes the 1961 law setting up the Art Museum as a state agency for a guide. "The law says the museum shall acquire, preserve, and exhibit works of art for the education and enjoyment of the people of the state," he said.

"Acquire, preserve, exhibit, educate," he summarized. "I'm going to do my darndest to follow that."

There are many ramifications to each. One word is the key to all — communicate: to make art speak to the people, and to draw people into the dialogue which art offers on the life and culture of yesterday and today.

Another Step For City Park-Building Program

Cheerful news, indeed, is the announcement by Congressman Walter B. Jones that a grant has been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for a Greenville park.

The 25 - acre park will be located on Hooker Road. The grant was in the amount of $50,394. Included in the park area will be a football field, two softball fields, a junior sized ball park, four tennis courts, a tot lot area and picnic facilities.

This means another step in providing recreational and park areas in the city before it is too late to do so.

The Hooker Road park is a step in the right direction, even though much more remains to be done.

Greece Versus World Bank

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A flagrant effort by the military dictatorship of Greece to exploit a new World Bank loan as evidence of rising international support for the Junta has been categorically denounced in a private letter from an official of the bank.

Notwithstanding this letter, however, the loan of $20 million to the National Investment Bank for Industrial Development of Greece has raised new questions about lending policies of the World Bank, particularly in Western Europe where the military Junta is under sharp and rising criticism.

The April 8 loan was announced routinely here by World Bank officials, with no allusions to possible international political implications.

In fact, top World Bank officials specifically sought and gained a pledge from the military Junta in Athens that no effort would be made to exploit the loan as indicating approval of internal Greek government policies.

That pledge was given to Munir P. Benjenk, a regional director of the World Bank, by no less a figure than Col. George Papadopoulos, prime minister of Greece and chief of the ruling Junta.

Despite the pledge, the information office of the Greek consulate in New York issued a public statement in mid-April that placed the loan in a blatantly political framework. That announcement stated that J. Burke Knapp, World Bank vice president and chairman of its loan committee, had said during the loan-signing ceremony that he was "particularly happy" about the loan because it "constitutes an indication of possible cooperation between the World Bank and Greece which had been delayed for reasons unconnected with the will of both parties."

Further, said the Greek Junta's information office, Knapp expressed "particular satisfaction with the economic progress that is taking place in Greece" and looked forward to more World Bank aid to Greece.

A leader of the anti-Junta Greek resistance movement in this country, Elias P. Demetracopoulos, bitterly complained to Knapp about these words attributed to him by the Greek information office. In a letter to Knapp, Demetracopoulos asked whether he had been correctly quoted.

Knapp replied on May 15 that the statement attributed to him was filled with "serious misrepresentations." Furthermore, Knapp indicated that a formal protest had been made to the Greek government.

Moreover, William Clark, the bank's director of information and public affairs, wrote a separate denial of his own.

Clark's denial went to the Greek - language newspaper National Herald in New York, which had published the statement of the Greek consulate verbatim. Wrote Clark:

"Since this ceremony was a private occasion I do not know the source of your misinformation, but it seems obvious to me that your account was intended to convey the impression that in extending this loan, the bank was making political judgments and endorsing the

Arabia Looks Ahead

By EDUARD KHAVESSIAN

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) —Saudi Arabia, sitting atop the world's largest known oil reserves, is looking ahead to the day when oil may be challenged by nuclear energy.

If that day ever comes Saudia Arabia expects to be ready. It is beginning to diversify its economy,opening a petro-chemical plant and urging private investment in cement, clothing, shoe and furniture factories, as well as sponsoring the exploitation of the country's other mineral wealth.

But in the meantime, oil money is still rolling in. Saudi Arabia is the fourth among the oil producers of the world, following the United States, the Soviet Union and Venezuela. Its reserves are estimated at 92 billion barrels. Oil production, begun in 1938, reached 1.17 billion barrels in 1969.

In cash this adds up to a royalty of about $1 billion. It also means big development projects, a better standard of living for 5.5 million Saudis, a great number of (mostly American) automobiles and the latest electrical equipment on display in the local market.

King Faisal Ibn Abdul Aziz, son of the famous Ibn Saud who conquered the Hedjaz after World War I and unified the Arabian Peninsula, took over the throne from his half-brother, Saud, in 1964. His aim has been to apply business principles to running a country where local tradition also must be taken into account.

The 65-year-old monarch put an end to the lavish era of his predecessor, balanced the budget and abolished slavery.

Saudi Arabia is the site of two of the holiest shrines in Islam — Mecca, where Mohammed is said to have been born, and Medina, where he died. In 1968, 375,000 pilgrims from other Moslem countries visited the two shrines.

For this reason and many others Saudi Arabia is a religious and conservative country. In some cities shops close down at prayer time. Women go around veiled. Alcohol is forbidden even to foreigners. There is no cinema. Women, including foreigners, are not permitted to drive a car. Marriages are pre-arranged and the young man often must give his word of acceptance before being allowed to see his bride.

While the giant oil revenues enable the nation to speed up its development, officials do not conceal the magnitude of bringing all of Saudi Arabia into the 20th Century. Twenty seven per cent of the 1969-70 budget of $1.326 billion was assigned to such projects as improvement of telephone service, water purification in Mecca and Riyadh, modernizing ports and airports and improving existing roads and building new ones.

Medical care and education are free. In the 10 years to 1968 the number of schools increased from 641 to 1492 and the number of students from 100,340 to 292,840. But female education was a much more delicate matter to tackle. Woman's place has always been in the home and in 1963 the king had to send the army to protect the school in the village of Buraida where the population opposed educating girls. There are now 271 schools for girls with an enrollment of 87,000, as compared with 16 schools in 1961.

Sunday Morning Notes

Dr. Al Chestnut, Morehead City director for the UNC Institute of Marine Science, discussed oceanography at the spring meeting of the Eastern North Carolina Press Association at Atlantic Beach last weekend.

He played some tapes of fish sounds. One was a series of grunts and groans attributed to some type of fish life.

"Sounds like a managing editor," someone commented.

Another was a series of clicking noises.

"Sounds like a star reporter typing," someone else commented.

Dr. Chestnut said that fish emit all sorts of underwater noises. During World War II sonar picked up noises in Chesapeake Bay and it was feared they were enemy submarines.

Turned out it was a school of Croakers coming in.

Sen. John Burney of New Hanover appeared on a panel discussion of court reporting at the meeting.

He recalled that when he was a solicitor he was occasionally called at one o'clock in the morning by a reporter concerning court cases of the preceding day.

One morning when Sen. Burney arose at 5 a.m. for a fishing trip he called the reporter and told him, "Something happened in court today I thought you ought to know about."

"After about the third phone call, he promised me he'd never call again," Burney chuckled.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Your columnist has an outstanding record of clearing out of Atlantic Beach either before or after the afternoon rush of automobiles fighting to get off the beach.

Last Sunday, however, Mother Nature conspired against me.

Around noon I was driving along the Salter Path road when a terrific rainstorm developed. I decided I might as well turn around and leave the island.

Trouble is so did thousands of other people and I found a steady procession of autos, campers, boats, trailers and other vehicles beating a hasty retreat toward the Morehead bridge.

At the Coral Bay Club the line stopped. A couple of hours later I was finally off the island.

To The Editor:

What is peace?

Is the conscientious objector for peace when he burns his draft card, yet he lives in this land of freedom with our patriotic boys who are dying in South East Asia that our freedom might be preserved?

Is the rioter proclaiming peace when he breaks windows and burns buildings to the ground because one of his lawbreaking fellow citizen's life ends from the gun of a law enforcement officer?

Four students are dead. Is their blood really on the hands of Nixon and Agnew? What right does one have to resist any form of law enforcement? Were they so young that they didn't recognize the danger that they were placing themselves in by being involved in a disorderly situation?

Can a demonstrator or a rioter expect his life to be safe when he, himself, chooses to act violently?

Should the lawmen of our country stand idle while he is shot and hurled with rocks and bottles? Does youth make a person irresponsible for his acts?

How odd it is that our society which cries PEACE so loudly is constantly destroying. Oh yes, police officers' lives are taken also. Note that the mature police officers do not burn out a neighborhood or march when a fellow law officer's life is taken by a drunken no good individual.

There are people left who respect the law and the decisions of our national leaders who have access to information which the public doesn't have access.

We know what has happened with the war. Only the God that Billy Graham speaks of and Nixon says he believes in knows what circumstances we would be living under if Southeast Asia didn't exist.

Peace under a different light!

WHY WAR?

Yes, why? With the world full of privileges and gifts, why do nations lunge at one another's throats? Nobody ever wins a war because war, whether "won" or "lost", creates more problems than it solves. One mistake or evil policy may be changed as the result of war but others arise to plague the victor as well as the vanquished.

We should have — and most sensible and patriotic people do have — nothing but praise for men who have fought our battles. It takes a lot of courage to go on a battlefield and perform as one is ordered to do. Mistakes are made, issues of all varieties arise as the result of conflict. Battlefield bravery is something to look upon with admiration and gratitude, but why we need to have battlefields at all is something no one appears able to answer in a satisfactory fashion.

All hail to the brave men who fight and have fought our battles. All hail to the anxious and sometimes widowed women who have suffered along with soldiers on the battlefield. There were men killed after the armistice was agreed upon in World War I. Hundreds of soldiers died in the battle of New Orleans, although the peace treaty had already been signed and was aboard a sailing vessel headed straight for our shores.

The more "civilized" we become, the more barbaric our methods of warfare. How can it keep on going this way? God help us to find out and correct our mistaken ways!

Moving Costs More, Or Less

By ELMER ROESSNER

America is the movingest country in the world, and it is costing more—or less—to move than it used to.

Among some of the nomadic tribes of central Asia, the percentage of the population on the move may be higher than among Americans, but the total number on the move is less than among Americans, and the distances are far less.

An American family thinks nothing of moving from Maine to Albuquerque to live in a warmer climate, from Buffalo to Los Angeles for a better job, or from Seattle to Fort Lauderdale for more sunshine.

Americans move readily because with the possible exception of Russia, there is no other country in the world in which it is possible to move so far and hear the same language spoken, to use the same money and avoid customs barriers. And Russia does not encourage moving except by ukase.

Up Goes The Price

The cost of moving is up because the Interstate Commerce Commission authorized a 6 per cent rise in rates for moving household goods from state to state, effective this month. The boost is subject to ICC review, and it applies only to point-to-point transportation, not charges for packing, storage, etc.

But the cost of moving may go down because a new company, U-Move, Inc., has been formed to permit families to move their own furniture. U-Move, a subsidiary of Rail-Trailer, Inc., will operate on a franchise basis. Franchisees supply the truck and professional advice and help to a family, then dad or a friend drive the load to the new home.

Service will be available in 17 cities from Chicago to San Diego by the end of this month and Richard A. Heise, president, says he expects it will be available in all major cities by the end of the year.

The fact that most moves in the U.S. are from east to west presents no problem, Heise said, because arrangements can be made to truck commercial products on return trips east.

Break For The Moved

And while the cost of moving by moving companies is up, the moved are about to get a better break.

In the past, families were often victimized because movers' estimates were not binding; truckers sometimes refused to unload furniture unless a higher price was paid on arrival; if the price were not paid the goods were placed in storage, forcing the customer to pay a month's storage bill plus the cost of moving from warehouse to home.

Consumers Union also complained that in 12 per cent of all interstate moves the van did not pick up the furniture on the date promised, and in 20 per cent did not deliver on time, often as much as a week late.

However, the ICC revised the regulations for movers completely. New regs limit charges to 10 per cent more than estimates, provide penalties for lateness, and prescribe new rules for weighing.

PRESIDENTS WANTED

If you've always wanted to be a college president, and if you can qualify for the job, now's your chance. The chief item on the agenda at the annual meeting in San Francisco of the Assn. of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges was "the recruitment and retention of presidents."

Among the approximately 2,500 institutions of higher learning in the nation there is an almost constant list of 200 to 250 vacancies in college presidencies. Some of the members of boards of governors, trustees and regents attending the meeting suggested that the job of today's college president has become too big for one man. Maybe, they said, a college should have two presidents, one handling administrative responsibilities and the other in charge of academic affairs.

No clear answer to the problem of recruiting college presidents emerged from the meeting. The problem isn't likely to be solved, either, until some way is found to put an end to students insurrections and other campus disorders. As it is now, anybody qualified to be president of a college is smart enough to think twice before accepting the job. — Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier

NOW WE KNOW

Tobacco addicts sat up and took notice when Tony Curtis dumped the weed. Why, if a person like Tony could quit cigarettes, anybody could. A lot of us were being nudged along by Tony's anti - smoking spots on television.

There he stood, president of the "IQ" ("I Quit") Society, being praised by his pretty wife. Self - consciously, we would stub our cigarette and vow not to smoke the rest of the evening.

We made it, one night, almost to bedtime. Tony's anti - smoking commercials almost had it made, too, until he arrived in England the other day. The customs people there busted him for possessing marijuana.

Tony, Tony, Tony. Why didn't you level with us, boy? Anybody can quit cigarettes when he feels THAT good! — Charlotte (N.C.) Observer

BETTER BUMPERS

Chairmen of both House and Senate insurance committees have put forth bills which would require new cars sold in Florida to carry better bumpers. The legislation would require bumpers capable of absorbing a five - mile - an - hour shock by 1973 and an impact of 10 miles per hour after 1975.

Here are the reasons why this is such a good idea: At a crash speed of 5 m.p.h. from the front, the average cost of repairing with current "cosmetic" bumpers is $200.28 for 1969 models; $152.80 for 1970s. At the same speed from the rear, the cost is $214.11 for '69 models; $133.09 for the '70s.

At a crash speed of 10 m.p.h. from the front, the repair costs zoom to an average of $652.46 for '69 models; $417.26 for the 70's. That's a bumper? — St. Petersburg (Fla.)

ANOTHER NUTTY LAW PROPOSED

If a law proposed in the Georgia Legislature were to be passed, tickets to music events in the state would carry this warning: "Caution: Excessive loud noise may damage future hearing."

According to Rep. McKee Hargett, the legislation is "needed" because some of today's rock music can cause serious injury to the inner ear.

This item surely deserves a place in that thick volume entitle "Nutty Laws I've Known" by John Q. Public. (What nest—sound level governors on radios?) But it is not so funny when it is viewed as a typical example of our whole approach to the problems of modern living.

No one is forced to attend a rock concert any more than he is forced to smoke. Yet Congress spends months arguing about a warning label on cigarette packages - while, at the same time, subsidizing the tobacco industry with your tax money.- Gastonia (N.C.) Gazette

NOT QUITE SO BRIGHT

The price of progress is reflected in a negative way through the report of a congressional committee which has been studying the effects of detergents on environment.

Some years ago, phosphates were introduced into detergents to give a "whiter and brighter" look to the family wash. This no doubt spruced up the family's appearance, but it played havoc with the nation's streams and lakes.

Algae thrive on phosphates and soon come to the point of clogging bodies of water. Dead algae use up the oxygen in the water, with the result that fish suffocate. All in all, according to the congressional inquirers, what starts out as a cleansing agent winds up making a gosh - awful mess.

Progress? No. Pollution? Yes. - Columbia (S.C.) State

OPEN AT OWN RISK

The President's postal reform plan is already coming under fire and one of the questions raised is why a higher rate increase was not proposed for so - called junk mail. Under the proposal, junk mail would cost the sender an average of about two cents more per item.

Assistant Postmaster General James W. Hargrove explained that any sharper increase would make it just about as economical for such mail to be sent first class, in which case it would get preferred handling.

So maybe the only deterrent to junk mail is to require a warning to be stamped on each envelope: "Caution: Reading This Piece of Mail Could Be Wasteful of Your Time." — Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

A Conservative View

Add Up To Faith, Odd Kind Of Charity

By J.J. KILPATRICK

A letter is at hand from a young woman in Massachusetts; the new book by Justice William O. Douglas still lies open on my desk; and the mail brings a text of the McGovern-Hatfield amendment to fix new deadlines in Southeast Asia. Together these three add up to faith, hope and an odd kind of charity; and together they propose a retreat from reality.

My 22-year-old correspondent in Brookline speaks for young people generally: "Our basic premise," she writes, "is that war itself is not a legitimate or necessary resolution of political hassles. Only defense of one's own shores legitimizes defensive force. My generation also assumes that as rational beings we can reason with our human brothers. . .

"History is made by men, unless men let history make itself by abdicating their responsibility for using reason. This is what your parents' generation did in World War I (for land and power gain) and what your generation did in World War II. My generation thinks we don't have to concede to 'historical processes.' It is our world now — if you want the carnage of war, YOU fight it — and leave us alone to build in peace with our more rational brothers."

Mr. Justice Douglas is 50 years older, but he echoes the theme: "Is our destiny to kill Russians?" he asks. "To kill Chinese? Why cannot we work at cooperative schemes and search for the common ground binding all mankind together?" At another point, denouncing the anti-ballistic missile, Douglas laments that "the voices and pressures of the military-industrial complex seem always to suffocate the pleas of the poor as well as the pleas of those who want to be done with wars and create a cooperative world pattern for the solution of international problems."

Finally, I remark the proposal now pending in the Senate to get us out of Cambodia in 30 days, to halt combat expenditures in Vietnam and Laos by December 31, and to require the withdrawal of all U.S. military personnel from Vietnam by June 30, 1971. The McGovern-Hatfield amendment has drawn some 20 co-sponsors, among them Majority Leader Mike Mansfield. In one form or another, some such deadline seems likely to pass the Senate.

What is one to make of all this? The several authors, I venture to suggest, are living in a dream world marked by the perfect clarity of Alice's orderly Wonderland. It is as if some Senator were to arise in the morning hour to make a perfunctory motion: "Mr. President, because nothing that has gone before is germane to what we do today, I ask unanimous consent that history be suspended."

"Hearing no objection," says the presiding officer, nodding in his chair, "it is so ordered."

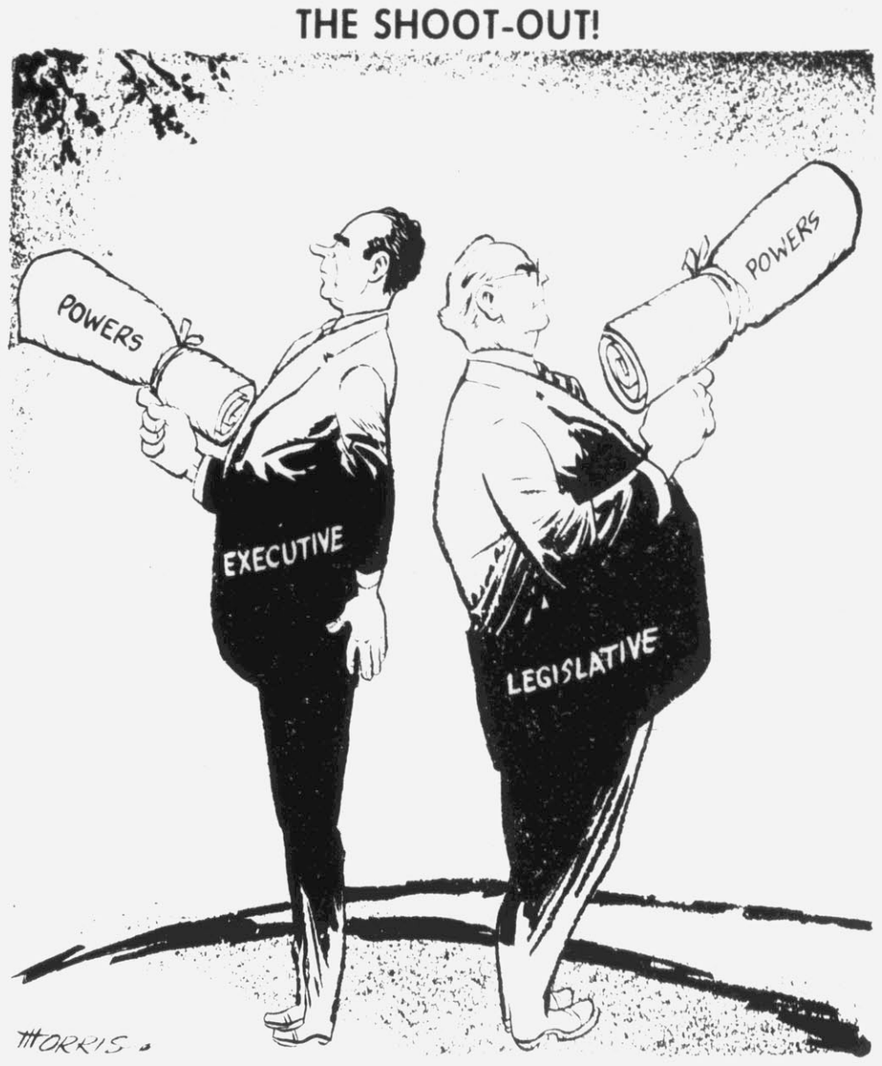

But neither ancient history nor contemporary reality can be so easily removed. My young friend in Brookline has faith that if her generation is left alone, they can build in peace by reasoning "with our more rational brothers." Justice Douglas, for his part, still hopes that wars can be abolished and a cooperative world pattern established. And the sponsoring Senators, in their charity, would give the Communist enemy, in effect, a free hand in Southeast Asia.

It won't do. History is just as Gibbon defined it — little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind. And so long as men are less than angels, men will make such history.

Goodness, rationality and reasonableness are very good qualities in men, but they provide very bad assumptions for the making of foreign policy.

Our nation is deeply committed in Vietnam, and by extension in Laos and Cambodia, as part of a continuing struggle, now centuries old, for the preservation of certain Western values. In a dream world, doubtless these values could be maintained by sweetness and by reason; in a dream world, neo-isolationism makes sense. Unhappily for young women, old Justices and eminent Senators, this is simply not the kind of world we live in — not now, and not ever.

THE SHOOT-OUT!

More Differences Are Appearing In U.S. And Canadian Relationship

OTTAWA (AP) — As Canada's foreign secretary, Lester B. Pearson said in 1951: "The days of relatively easy and automatic political relations with our neighbor are, I think, over."

The statement drew widespread comment, including some criticism, on both sides of the border. Today the same opinion likely would bring a what-else-is-new reaction.

In recent years, as Pearson forecast, the complexities of the relationship have spawned many issues between Canada and its neighbor. The issues range from the area of defense to Canada's proposal to curb Arctic pollution. Washington opposes the bill, now before Parliament, which would extend Canadian jurisdiction 100 miles seaward from the Arctic coast for the purpose of pollution control.

One ingredient in the new, more hard-nosed regime of relations between the two countries has been what some call a rising tide of nationalism in Canada. Another is the present time of troubles that the United States is going through, domestically and in Southeast Asia. J.J. Greene, Canada's minister of energy, lumps the two ingredients together in a cause and effect relationship.

"Part of the cause for the rise of that new Canadian nationalism and determination to build something unique rests inthe malaise that exists in your land — what appears to many as the sudden and tragic disappearance of the American dream which, in some ways has turned to nightmare," Greene told a meeting of U.S. oilmen in Denver last week.

This came toward the end of a speech in which he criticized Washington for imposing restrictions on imports of Canadian oil to the U.S. market. Canada did not find the controls "compatible with the traditional basis for trade and economic relations between the United States and Canada," Greene said.

Rightly or wrongly, the controls have been interpreted by many Canadians as part of a U.S. squeeze play through which Washington hopes to obtain Canadian acquisscence in a policy for developing the continent's resources.

In a speech at Buffalo Greene applied pressure to another trouble spot: Great Lakes pollution.

He said Canada is looking to the international boundary waters treaty of 1909 to insure that the United States acts to remedy pollution affecting Canada's half of the lakes.

Some Americans are unhappy with the inroads made into their automotive market by motor vehicles and parts made in Canada under the 1965 auto production pact. They would like some agreement changes, which Canada resists.

Other issues concern defense and related matters.

Canada has been marking time for three years on a Pentagon request for tanker refueling facilities in Canada for the Strategic Air Command, and even longer on a request that North Bay, Ont., be designated as an alternate headquarters to Colorado Springs, Colo., for the North American Defense Command.

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has publicly questioned the wisdom of the U.S. decision to proceed with an antiballistic missile defense system, though he has avoided condemning it outright.

There are continuing, nonofficial rumblings in Ottawa about failure to consult Canada on matters affecting North American security, though the two are supposed to belong to a cooperative partnership.

Canada protested against the U.S. nuclear test blast in the Aleutian Islands last year, on grounds that it might have set off an earthquake and in turn cause a tidal wave to British Columbia. The United States went ahead with the test anyway. There was no earthquake.

One irritant in relations, thoagf obably not a major one, has been the flow of U.S. deserters and draft dodgers into Canada and Canada's policy of allowing them haven.

Over-all, Canadians seem more preoccupied than usual with a perennial problem: how their country should go about trying to coexist with a neighbor which happens to be the most powerful state in the world.

Haywood Dail's Ballot-Diet Is Part Of The ECU Legend

By DR. LEO W. JENKINS

One of the most interesting and colorful legends about the birth of East Carolina University is that of Haywood Dail and his bit of ballot biting, if not ballot stealing.

It is legendary now 63 years later, but actually it is a well - documented and apparently completely true story about how the school was located in Greenville. The year was 1907 and Haywood Dail kept his promise to Gov. Thomas J. Jarvis that he would see that a proposed $50,000 local bond issue necessary to locate a new educational institution in Greenville would pass. Dail, a them farmer, was a booster of Greenville and Eastern North Carolina.

By his own later admission, Dail who was pollholder for the bond election chewed enough "No"ballots on election day to assure passage of the issue by 300 votes.

History does not record exactly how many of the negative votes Dail absent - mindedly stuffed into his mouth that day. But somehow he knew which were the "No" votes — and that there was considerable opposition to the idea of new local taxes in Greenville. And Dail was determined. He must have chewed vigorously.

He chewed only in the area on which the ballot had been marked — and put the wet paper wad in his pocket. Of course when time came to count the votes, those ballots had to be discarded.

In later years, Dail confessed. "I'm not sorry I did it," he said. "Because if I hadn't the issue wouldn't have carried. It was a long time before I said anything about it to anyone, but I'll be damned if I'm ashamed of it."

The fact is that Governor Jarvis had been concerned about the outcome of a bond issue to establish a new college if it were put to a vote. Dail however reassured the governor.

"I said, 'Governor, if you want that election I'll get it,'" he said. Dail insisted that the ballots be small with nothing more than "For Bond Issue" and "Against Bond Issue" printed on Fifty years later Dail said "none of us had any idea that the college would grow as it has. None of us had that much vision.

"We just thought it would be worth a great deal to Eastern North Carolina. If it takes vision to think that way about a thing then I guess we had vision."

Of course Haywood Dail had both vision and determination and these qualities which have been and now are embodied in the spirit of East Carolina University and those who support and defend it.

Mrs. Jenkins and I were privileged to attend a banquet the other night at which the 1970 Senior Scholarship Award was presented by Beta Gamma Sigma, the honor society of the University's School of Business

The winner was a young man from Zebulon, N.C. Kelly Stuart King. One of his professors explained that one of Mr. King's only two B's came in a course on international economics during a time when the student was working his way through college selling vacuum cleaners.

Well, working through school isn't unusual. Many thousands of students have to work. The point that is significant and which bears repeating is that it is possible to work and earn money for an education and at the same time achieve the highest scholastic honors. This too is in the spirit and tradition of our University.

Public Forum

To The Editor:

In answer to the letter by Mr. Jerry Paul: "The blood spilled at Kent State is on the hands of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew." If that is so, then all the blood on the highways, left by drunken drivers, is really on the hands of Henry Ford for making the automobile available to the common man. And it sounds like the convicted man blaming the police, the courts and the law. Not once does he blame himself. Never does he admit he is in jail because of something he did — he is there because of something the law did.

We could take the opposite view and say that the blood is on the hands of the students. If the students had not acted as they did, the National Guard would never have been called, shots would not have been fired (right or wrong) and no one killed (innocent or not).

You asked, "Can a nation live long that hates its young?" No, the future of a nation is in its young. I still qualify as under 30, but I ask can a nation live long that hates its leaders and its teachers, and rules itself by mob instead of by law and reason?

We still do not know what happened at Kent State. Who am I to say who is right or wrong? From what we do know, it appears that a little blames goes on all sides. The overemotional students panicked the young, inexperienced citizen - soldiers into overreacting. The guardsmen are civilians like the students, young like the students, and they really did not want to be there any more than some of the students wanted them.

Let us not judge from our personal inclinations but learn by the Kent State example and see that our National Guardsmen and our students are better trained and better informed and better understood, to assure that we and they do not repeat the tragedy.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, May 24 the 114th day of 1970. There are 221 days left in the year.

On this date in 1625, Peter Minuit of the Dutch West Indian Trading Company bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for $24 worth of goods and founded the colony of New Amsterdam.

On this date:

In 1819, Queen Victoria of Britain was born in London.

In 1839, the first passenger train in the United States began service between Baltimore and Elliott's Mills, 13 miles away.

In 1844, Samuel F.B. Morse transmitted the first public telegraph message--from Washington to Baltimore. The message read: "What hath God wrought."

In 1941, in World War II the German battleship Bismarck sank the British battle cruiser Hood, with a loss of about 1,300 lives.

In 1962, astronaut Scott Carpenter became the second American to go into orbit as he circled the earth three times.

In 1967, French President Charles de Gualee gave a boost to the separatist movement in Canada when he shouted in a speech in Montreal: "Long live free Quebec."

Ten years ago--A tidal wave caused by an earthquake killed more than 200 persons in Hawaii, Japan and Okinawa.

Five years ago--A truce was reached in Bolivia to end fighting between government troops and striking tin miners.

Coming Capital-Spending Cutback To Steepen Business Slide

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

A significant contraction in business spending for new plant and equipment now seems inevitable.

This will mean a widening and steepening of the business slide, now officially a recession, as measured by economic yardsticks. Capital spending for new plants, moderization and machinery has been one of the big contributors to the inflationary boom. And the coming softness in this sector will be felt throughout the economy.

The reason business will be cutting back on spending plans is the severity of the cost pinch on profits. Management had anticipated that profits would climb, on balance, this year, and would thus continue to be a major source of funds to finance capital outlays. But it isn't working out that way.

In this year's first quarter, corporate profits before taxes fell to an annual rate of $85.1 - billion, off 6 per cent from the rate of 1969's final quarter and a tumping 11 per cent below the first quarter of 1969. This is in sharp contrast to the optimistic profits forecast business was making last fall and early this year when it was shaping spending plans.

With profits under pressure and with the money markets tight, and likely to remain tight for months to come, business will simply be forced to cut back on its spending. There are many observers who feel that it will be a long over - due decision — that the rate of past spending was too fast to be healthy.

Labor costs add up to the most important factor making for the growing profit squeeze. In recent years, employers have been quick to give in to labor demands far in excess of any off - setting gains which come out of increased productivity. The hikes could be passed on in price increases. But now, stiffer consumer resistence is being encountered on just about every front.

A hard fact on costs is that the wages granted last year have not yet worked their way through the economy, despite the rapid rate of price climb which has taken place. And on top of this is the fact that this year's wage settlements are at even higher rates. This means that relief from the labor cost queeze is somewhere out in the distant future, if there is to be relief at all.

The capital spending - profit picture is merely a reflection of more general deterioration in the over - all economy. Some of the recent moves in business, especially the erratic behavior of the money markets, have been attritubted to such things as Cambodia, war protests and riots. These incidents play a part, of course. But the basic economic problem has its roots in the years of inflation - making fiscal and monetary policy followed by Washington.

For those who associate good times with deficit spending, there is little to be glad about in the fact that higher government pay and other costs have pushed Nixon away from his goal of a balanced budget. This deficit will mean that the government will be forced back into the market for "new money", unless Congress decides to increase taxes, which seems unlikely. What this means is that credit control will remain tight, unless the Federal Reserve Board wants to make a direct contribution to the still rising price inflation.

Unemployment is still rising. But it is significant that the number of people still working and drawing the highest pay ever is holding at record levels. What's happening is that job opportunities no longer come at a rate which can absorb additions to the labor force.

Currently, unemployment is nearing 5 per cent of the labor force. This is about the limit regarded as politically acceptable. It is bringing talk out of Washington about "made work," but no specific proposals. In fact, creating jobs of any type takes time.

Home building is still one of the real sick spots in the economy. There is plenty of demand for homes. But many would - be buyers simply can't meet financing demands. The Administration may be forced to some sort of emergency stop - gap program in this area in order to avoid an acute housing shortage.

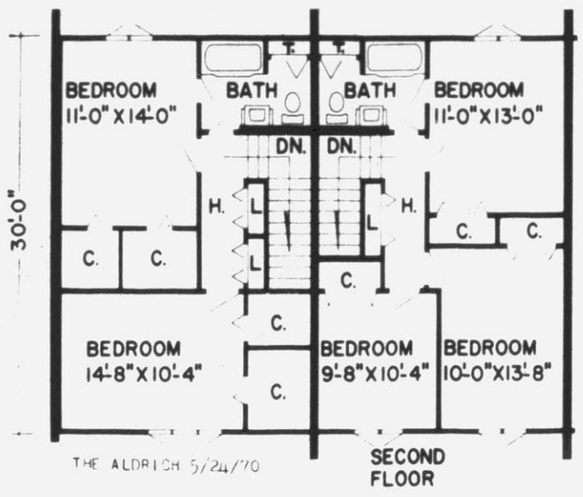

The problem is diverting loan funds from business and consumers to housing. The Federal Reserve Board is looking into the mechanics of just how this might be done. It may, in the end, take steps to discourage business and consumer borrowers with new restrictions on loan terms. But, here again, any shift in policy would take months to produce results.

One of the most disturbing things in the flow of business news these days is that the changes in the economy seem to come about faster and with wider impact than observers in and out of government have anticipated. It tends to re-enforce the view of those who believe that there is no painless escape from inflation, once it has become a political addiction.

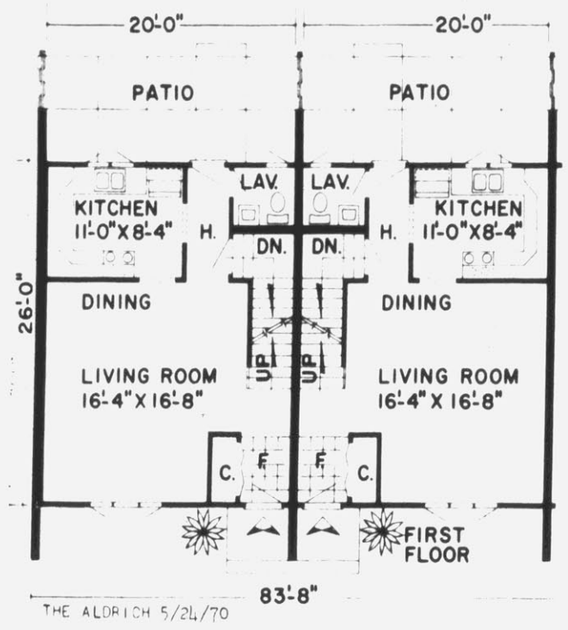

Many Amenities In Townhouse

LUXURY LIVING ON THE LINE — The Aldrich, designed by the Associated Architects, is an excellent floorplan for townhouse apartments. There are two and three - bedroom units and a building may contain from two to 100 or more units. Other features are one and a half baths, a living room - dining room combination, modern kitchen, foyer, full basement and patio.

By GERRY BISHOP

Real estate, especially rental property, is an attractive investment.

It offers tax advantages and provides steady income. Also, it's a perfect hedge against inflation.

Perhaps you have a piece of undeveloped land that could be converted to income property. If so, two-story townhouse units might be just what you're looking for.

The Aldrich, designed by the Associated Architects, features a flexible plan that can be built with as few as two units or as many as 100 or more.

Brick end walls divide each unit, insulating them against noise and providing a fire safety factor. They also add an aesthetic quality, blending with the front elevation which is vertical siding on the ground level and shingle on the second floor.

As pictured in the four-unit structure accompanying this article, the styling is contemporary, enhanced by red cedar shakes.

Spacious Basement

Each townhouse has one and a half baths and the end units have two bedrooms while the middle ones have three bedrooms. There is a full basement under each townhouse. This provides space for utilities, storage and a recreation room.

The main entrance opens into a foyer which has a large coat closet.

The living room-dining room combination is approximately 16 feet square and adjoins the kitchen.

A modern layout with appliances and cabinets arranged in a U shape give the kitchen all the qualities demanded by the modern homemaker.

There is a powder room across from the kitchen and convenient to the living room.

Patio Included

Behind each townhouse there is a patio, a much sought-after extra by apartment dwellers.

Upstairs, the bedrooms have good dimensions. In the three-bedroom units, they range from approximately 10 feet square to 10 feet by 14 feet. They are bigger in the two-bedroom units, each containing approximately 150 square feet.

The main bath is located on the second floor above the powder room. This is an economy feature that saves plumbing expense.

There is 520 square feet of living area on the first floor, 600 square feet on the second floor and 520 square feet in the basement.

The outside dimensions for a four-unit structure are approximately 26 feet by 84 feet.

Increasing Demand And Other Pressures Have Jacked Up House Prices

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—You comb the real estate want ads for possibilities in your price range. You see: $50,000, a bargain, won't last; high $70s, good buy; $150,000, choice property.

Where are the $25,000 bargains, the good buys in the $30s and $40s, the $75,000 choice properties?

In many cases they are the same houses, back on the market after an interval of five or ten or more years—an interval in which increasing demand, a growing scarcity of choice land for building, and the pressures of inflation have pushed property values up and up.

It's a familiar enough story in the everyday residential market, but nowwhere is the upward spiral more evident than in luxury properties.

Browse, for example, through one of the real estate guides published by Previews, Inc., listing properties for sale throughout the United States and in far-flung parts of the world.

"Wishbook" browsing though it may be for most of us, it makes fascinating reading. And the stories behind some of the properties listed—those listed more than once by Previews, a national and international clearing house for real estate—trace clearly the rise in property values over the years.

A. P. Stevens, vice president of Previews' New England division, says the demand for choice land in this section of the country is so great buyers are "paying prices over and above what the experts in the real estate field would term the fair market value."

All the New England States, he said, are experiencing the fact that the demand exceeds the supply of residential resort property. People are realizing that no matter what the demand, no more choice acreage, lake and shorefrontage is being manufactured. Hence, purchases like these:

The 14-acre peninsula on the Maine seacoast, sold a few years back for $15,000; resold last year, with the addition of an attractive three-bedroom, two-bath house, for $160,000 to a purchaser from California. Or the 120-acre and 175-acre farms within easy driving distance of a new ski area in New Hampshire. Both appraised at under $20,000 a few years ago, both sold this year at a price averaging $85,000—all cash.

Private Island

Then, there is the private island, a sportsman's paradise, heavily wooded and operated as a shooting preserve with some 200 shooting paths carefully laid out. This sold in 1961 for $145,000, complete with two winterized residences, barn with storage sheds, a pier, 350-foot driven well, telephone service to the mainland and a 36-foot ocean cruiser. The property was resold in January this year for close to $300,000 with the addition only of a dock and a $7,500 swimming pool.

In the West—Montana—Previews sold a working ranch and recreation complex in June of 1963 for $180,000. At that time it included a single-story residence, ranch manager's chalet, four log cabins for guests, swimming pool, on 889 acres with animal compund, game paddock stocked lake and ponds. Add a horse barn, a gabled second story on the maine house, a little more than five years and the resale price: $250,000.

Farther afield—on the French Riviera—a luxurious property, frequently referred to as the most beautiful villa on the Riviera, was offered by Previews in 194 and sold for $80,000. Sold once in the interim, it was offered again through Previews in 1968 and sold for $1.2 million. The only real change—addition of a swimming pool.

Or the Bahama island retreat of a famous entertainer—a five-room main house, screened gazebo, one-room guest cottage, boat house and dock on four acres with white coral sand beach. In October 1966 it sold for $75,000. Today, gazebo enclosed to provide guest quarters; guest cottage converted for caretaker, it carries a $150,000 price tag.

Back to the U.S. East Coast—a prestige property on New York's Long Island, a 32-room residence and 16 acres of grounds, sold in 1939 for $100,000. The 14-bedroom house includes seven servants' rooms, an eight-bedroom guest annex. Other estate buildings include an eight-room superintendent's house, large heated greenhouse and garages for 18 cars. More than 20 years later, in 1961, the same property sold for $225,000.

Previews listsl too, up for sale today in northwestern Connecticul a "gentleman's farm"—a house on 247 acres with sold for $45,000, in 1942.

Sounds like a price you might be able to afford—and you'd love 247 acres of your very own? Today it is up for sale without a change—for $450,000.

Increasingly popular, too, are vinyl domes or pool shelters which serve to extend the swimming season by several months. There is a wide and growing variety available. In this category, too, is the pool heater to warm water, and the quartz lamp for patio and poolside heating in spring and fall.

Crabbe reports that today's typical pool owners are couples in the 30s or 40s with children—many of them in the $10,000-a-year income group. Families, he says, find that the backyard pool saves the wear-and-tear of driving to public beaches and, often, provides economical vacations at home, as well as an area for entertaining.

Poolside parties, Crabbe says, now are likely to be informal gatherings with all ages mixing, using the pool as a social and recreational center.

Here's The Answer

Q—I intend to nail 1-by-3 furring strips to the beams in our basement celing and then staple ceiling tiles to the furring strips. How far apart should the strips be?

A.—It depends on the size of the tiles you purchase. If they are the popular 9-inch size, then the center of each strip of wood should be exactly 9 inches from the center of the next strip. It is important that these measurements be exact and equally important to remember that the measuring be done from the centers of the strips, not from the edges. The strips nearest the walls necessarily will be less than 9 inches from the walls, barring the coincidence that they come out even.

For the sake of appearance, the last line of tiles at the four walls should not be less than one-half a tile in width. If you determine that it will not come out properly, start the first furring strip a short distance from where you originally intended. You can do this only if you carefully pre-measure everything. A simple way to do this is by laying out a line of tiles on the floor until the border tiles are where you want them. Then use the same arrangement on the ceiling.

Q.—Everything I have read about antique effects on furniture goes into the business of using a paint, then a glaze. But a former neighbor of mine used to use two different colored paints. I didn't pay much attention then, but now I'd like to try his method myself. Do you know anything about this?

A.—There are a number of ways to get so-called antique finishes without using glaze. The most common is to put on a base coat of paint, allow it to dry, then apply a different color with a small brush. The second coat is put on in a kind of dragging motion, with very little paint on the brush. The brush is dipped into the paint, then wiped so that very little paint is left on the bristles.

In another method, a coat of one color is applied. When it is thoroughly dried, a coat of another color is spread on the first. After waiting about 15 minutes, rub the surface lightly with steel wool, which will take off some of the second coat and leave both colors showing. Before you attempt either of this systems on good furniture, try them out first to determine whether they give you the kind of results you wish.

Watering Lawn The Hard Way

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Rickey Kneifel, 19, of Kennewick will water the fire station lawn here this summer the hard way—by hand and with water carried in buckets from the Columbia River a quarter of a mile away.

That, plus a $300 fine, was the sentence imposed by Justice Court Judge Albert Yencopal when Kneifel was convicted of shoplifting

"He's got to learn that a man must make some contribution to society," the judge said.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The response of readers to discussions of certain do-it-yourself topics is fairly predictable But several times a year there is a surprising intensity of interest in what had seemed to be minor subjects.

Who would have imagined, for instance, that an almost passing reference to the skin that forms on leftover paint would have produced an avalanche of mail?

It all started when a reader complained that, no matter what he did, a skin covering always formed on the top of paint he hadn't used for a few weeks or months. We suggested he shouldn't worry about it, but should merely pour the old paint into another container, using a piece of cheesecloth to strain out the unwanted particles.

Although this is a very common practice it apparently is regarded by many persons as a "cop-out" their feeling being that it isn't difficult to prevent the formation of skin on old paint. In other words, it isn't necessary to strain out the hardened paint covering; just don't let it harden in the first place.

Well, how do you prevent the leftover paint from developing coat? If we started listing the many different ways suggested by our readers, they would fill up this page and carry over to two or three others. Most of them we had never heard of; some we knew about but had tried without success; some were impractical because they ignored the fact that the skin formation results from the paint's contact with air; and some seemed worth a try.

While no tabulation of opinions was made, the most popular suggestion seemed to be that of hammering on the can cover very tightly, placing a piece of aluminum foil over the top half of the can and holding it securely with a rubber band. Also high on the list was the theory that, after placing the cover on tightly, the can should be stored upside down.

Some suggested that, with oil paint, a thin layer of boiled linseed oil should be poured over the paint before closing the can, and that the same thing should be done with water over latex paint. And the following interesting idea came from William Wack of Souderton, Pa.:

"I take a large piece of plastic wrap (the kind used for wrapping sandwiches) and place it on top of the paint, making sure that the edges of the wrap make contact with the sticky side of the can. This pushes out the air. The air on top of the wrap makes no difference because it does not touch the paint. I have done this many times, in some cases not opening the can for a year. The skin has never formed on the paint, there is no need to do any straining, and there is no waste of the paint of which the skin is comprised."

It sounded so good we are testing it. But we—and you—won't know the results for a few months.

Twelve-Hour Shift Is Put In By Military Police Of Bravo 6

By BARNEY SEIBERT

SAIGON (UPI)—On the military radio frequencies, the jeep threading its way through the garbage and noises of a seamy street on the outskirts of Saigon answers to the call of "Bravo 9."

It is a roving command jeep of the 716th Military Police Battalion. All of Saigon and its three million inhabitants are its beat.

Specialist 4 Peter McCann, 24, of West Babylon, N.Y., is the driver. He has 26 months in Vietnam, four as a rifleman and 22 as a military policeman.

"Over here are the girls," says McCann, gesturing with his left hand. "All sizes, shapes, descriptions, nationalities. Vietnamese, Chinese, Indonesian, Japanese and American.

"Over here are the pot parlors. You can get any kind of narcotics known to man."

Seat-Hardened Soldiers

Stuffed into "Bravo 9" this night, between the complex radio gear, steel helmets, flak jackets, M16 rifles and various emergency gear, are McCann, Staff Sgt. Robert B. Lingley, 28, Boston, Mass., and 2nd Lt. John F. White, 25, Kewanee, Ill.

Lingley is a regular; 10 years in the Army, a previous tour in Vietnam. McCann has extended his tour to get out of the Army sooner. White, a graduate of the University of Oklahoma ROTC unit, is new to Vietnam.

Pilots, tank drivers, helicopter gunners—anyone in Vietnam who must sit four hours in hard, cramped seats—say that a man is only as good as the durability of his posterior.

Five hours is considered fair, six good, eight excellent. If so, then the men of the 716th must be rated superior, for they ride the hard, cramped, uncomfortable setas of their jeeps 12 hours a day, seven days a week.

Night-Long Shift

The day's work begins at 7 p.m. and Bravo 9 cruises through Saigon's waterfront warehouse district, located on an island in the Saigon River. The MPs scan the buildings for evidence of tampering, for they contain material vital to the Allied war effort. They look for suspicious vehicles, boxes, crates, which might contain Viet Cong plastic explosives left with a time fuse to destroy the buildings.

Bravo 9 turns north and heads for the hotels and apartment buildings which have been converted into barracks for American officers and enlisted men serving in Saigon, and the homes of diplomatic and military officials.

In front of each is a sentry's kiosk in which a lonely member of the 716th spends up to 12 hours daily, guarding against terrorists. Each sentry post is checked at least once a night.

Snaring Curfew Violators

Near 10 p.m., the military curfew hour, Bravo 9 heads for the fleshpots of Plantation Road.

The largest concentration of U.S. servicemen in Saigon is found about two miles west of the vast Pentagon East Military Assistance Command-Vietnam (MACV) compound and Tan Son Nhut airbase.

The bars, each with their stable of "tea" girls, are door to door. If there are curfew violators and deserts to be found, here is where they will be.

Down a dingy nearby alley, Bravo 9 pulls up between two houses of prostitution. Two airmen loll in chairs just inside the door of the building nearest the driver. Protesting bitterly, the two are ordered outside and directed to produce pases. They have none.

Sin City

Lingley sniffs, thinks he smells marijuana, and the two men are searched. Both become abusive. One resists and is handcuffed. Another MP jeep is summoned and the two are taken to Tan Son Nhut to be turned over to the Air Police.

Bravo 9 rolls through "black market alley."

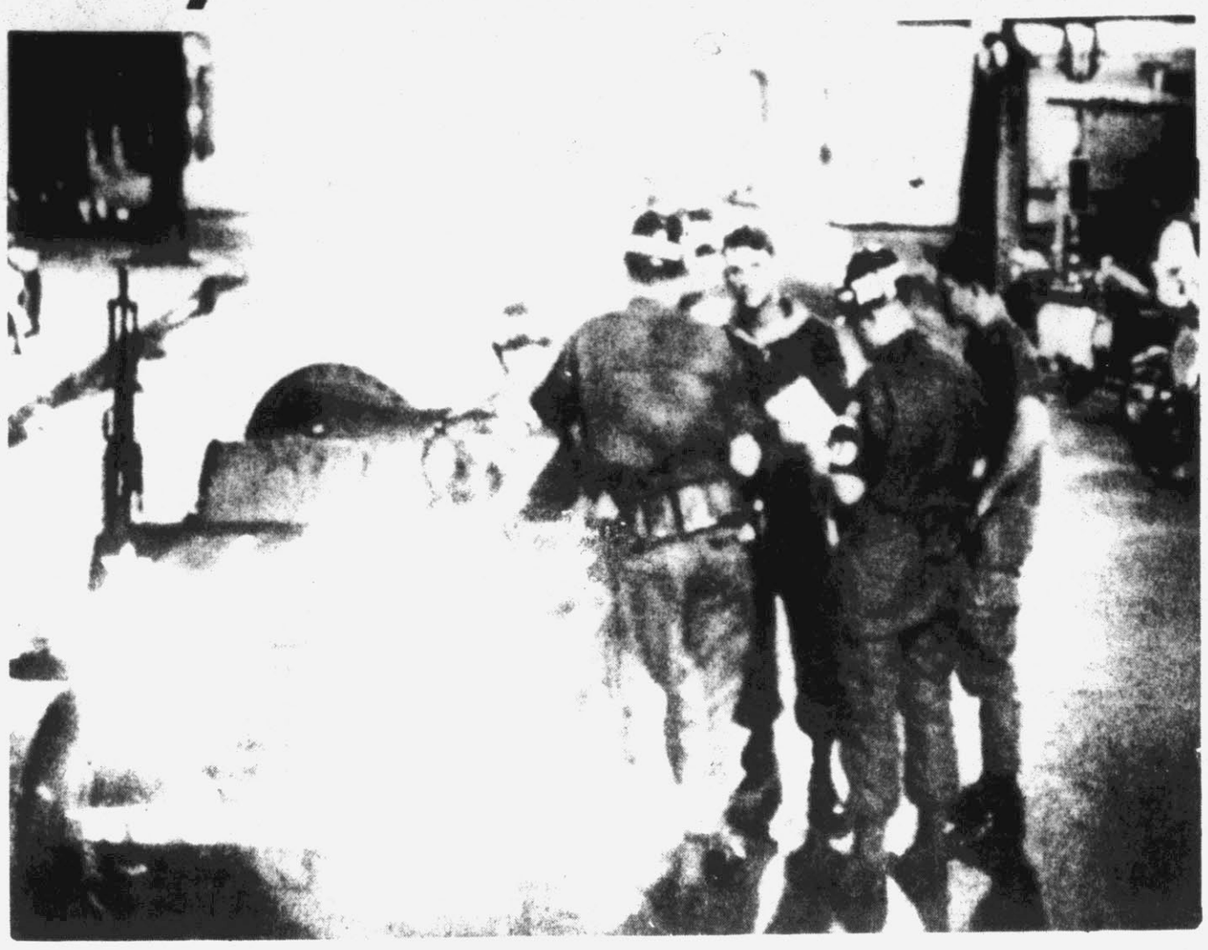

"If they haven't got it here," Lingley says, "they know where they can get it for you."

Turning onto another street, Bravo 9 passes a sidewalk soft drink stand. A man with his back turned, dressed in green fatigues, looks like a South Vietnamese soldier, but Lingley and McCann trade nods and halt. He is an AWOL American soldier. Off to the Air Police post.

At the Air Police station, the men of Bravo 9 learn that an Air Force plane has crashed on takeoff from Tan Son Nhut. Air rescue units have saved the only tw survivors. But someone must guard the wreckage until daylight, when crash investigators will remove secret documents and equipment along with the bodies of the victims.

Bravo 9, four other jeeps of the 716th and the company's only armored car are sent to the scene in open rice paddies a mile west of the main runway.

Dawn ends the watch but the promised relief is late and it is late morning when Bravo 9 can head back. The 12-hour day has stretched to 15. Not for the first time.

Teen Word Fads Change Quickly

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of high school campuses around the country has confirmed what most parents and their teen-age children well know—the existence of a language gap between the generations. And like the generation gap itself, the chasm appears to be widening.

"Words slip in and out of fashion as fast as women's styles," said New York youth pollster Elizabeth Weiner, who conducted a survey among high school students in 15 cities. "And if you are not a teen-ager you may need a scorecard to keep up with the changes in their language."

For instance, she said, a good party isn't just a good party anymore. It's a blast or a kickin' gig. It might also be called bad or insane; even a bust. On the other hand, a bad scene is called a bummer, and anything that is really good is dynamite.

A good phonograph record, she reported, is one that may really move, be good vibes, played by a together group and either smokin' or cool, depending on where you happen to be speaking.

Mrs. Weiner also reported finding phrases such as stud, neat and outasight coming up again and again.

A noted expert on words, Dr. H. Bosley Woolf, managing editor of the Merriam-Webster dictionaries, said teen-agers, as well as members of other "in" groups frequently create their own languages as a means of excluding outsiders. But, said Dr. Woolf, eventually the outsiders catch on and they may adopt words as part of their own language.

Sew what's new.

WASHABILITY, A NEW DIMENSION.

Can you remember when the only fabrics that could be "safely" washed were cotton and linen? And surely you remember what a problem bonded fabrics used to be? A trip to the dry cleaners often proved to be disastrous.

Constant research and new technology has created a "new dimension" in fabrics. "Washable" is now an every day word when it comes to fabrics on today's market.

Not only have newer fabrics acquired this dimension, but many of your past fabric favorites have as well. For example, let's take a quick look at one of them.

When your thoughts turn to evening or bridal attire, one of your first considerations has been Bonded Crepe. But this fabric favorite has also suffered many of the problems that other bonded fabrics have - - it too became "unbonded" on occasion.

But no more! Piedmont Fabrics has just introduced to its stores this classic fabric in a new, machine washable version - - in thirteen lovely colors at $2.99. Be sure the water temperature does not exceed 110 degrees. It still looks the same, feels the same and still needs no lining - - and is so washable. Come in and see for yourself - - I'm sure you will be as delighted as we thought you would - - we are.

Mrs. Rush Is Master Of Meal Preparation

MONEY IN HAND . . . children file past Mrs. Inez Davenport, (sitting) cashier at Wahl - Coates School, on their way to pick up their lunches. Mrs. Louise Rush, lunchroom supervisor, and Charles Ross, Wahl - Coates principal, look on.

VISITING WITH CHILDREN . . . is something Mrs. Rush enjoys whenever she has a spare minute in any of the lunchrooms of the schools she serves.

With The Women

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

What culinary miracle worker can consistently provide attractive, well - balanced meals for 30 cents apiece in this inflated era?

Few homemakers are able to, but Mrs. Louise Rush, lunchrooms supervisor and dietician for the Greenville City Schools, gives each of the 3,724 (an average) persons she serves a meat, two vegetables, bread, butter, dessert, and a half pint of milk every day. And the lunchroom service pays for itself.

One of her cardinal rules is to make use of all the commodities sent her by the federal government. She never knows in advance what commodities will be sent her, but there are certain staple items like flour and corn meal she can count on. The 500 bags of all - purpose flour she received this year have made a lot of biscuits, rolls, and cakes.

"We never buy anything ready - made that we can make from scratch," Mrs. Rush said. "When I began supervising the lunchrooms 17 years ago, the girls were making delicious biscuits, but a lot of the flour sent by the government was molding in storage, so I suggested we make rolls. They were astounded — 'We don't know how to make rolls.' 'I'll teach you' I said, and I did. Now we are making rolls as light as feathers and the girls say they'd just as soon make them as biscuits. They also make good all - bran muffins and good corn muffins.

"Since meat has become so expensive, this commodity has really been cut down on by the government. I even had to buy our Christmas turkeys this year. They're still sending ground beef in quantity, though, and this is good because there are so many ways it can be used.

Of course, all food for the school lunchrooms can be purchased wholesale. "I shop for the best quality at the best price," Mrs. Rush said. "When I can, I like to buy from local wholesalers, but if I can get a better price out of town I have to do it."

The state reimburses lunchrooms from four to eight cents for every plate they serve. There is also a liberal reimbursement on milk. The wholesale price is eight cents, but the state pays the lunchrooms four cents for each carton sold to the child at five cents a carton.

Lunch Charges

What must be paid for out of the 30 cents charged each child for lunch? A partial list includes food which must be bought, all wages, retirement, Social Security matching, utilities, and small equipment like dishes and other utensils, paper napkins, drinking straws, dishwashing soap, and the like. The Board of Education buys large equipment like ranges and dishwashers.

"We've really been hard pressed since the price of labor has increased so much along with the price of everything else. I have had to cut my girls' hours back to 35 a week, but we have found that this schedule allows plenty of time to get everything done. Also, some, like my secretary, Mrs. Geraldine Robinson, have to do more than one job. She works in my office and also serves as a cashier at Aycock Junior High during serving time.

"At Aycock, we have had to charge 35 cents per lunch. We set this price as soon as the lunchroom was ready for use in November because there we cannot stagger the amounts on plates and children in this age group must have large portions. In the elementary schools, we can serve the primary student smaller amounts with the understanding that they always can come back for seconds.

"At Rose High School this year we have served 'a la carte,' i. e. a menu is provided and the students pays so much for each item. However, we have not found this system satisfactory. There is a lot of waste; the cost of a good lunch is oppressive to many parents; and many of the students are not choosing balanced meals. I understand this system will be discontinued as of the end of this school year."

Last Year

This is Mrs. Rush's last year as supervisor. She had planned to retire last year, but the school administrators talked her into staying on to open cafeteria at Eastern Elementary School and Aycock Junior High School.

"I know that next Aug. 15 I'm going to be sitting down at Kure Beach worrying about how things are going here. I love my work and I hate to leave it, but I feel I owe it to my husband, Bill, to stay home with him. I don't know what I'm going to do with all that leisure time, except play bridge every chance I get. I do hope to get back into some church and civic activities I've had to give up for the past few years because of responsibilities of my job and my home. Also, Bill and I will visit the children often."

They have two daughters Mrs. Margaret Kenerly of Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Jean Wright of Plymouth, three granddaughters, a grandson, and a great granddaughter.

"It was June Rose who talked me into taking the lunchroom supervisor's job in 1952," Mrs. Rush said. "I have always prepared and served meals for the public. My mother and I operated the Friendly Dining Room here for 15 years. Then I began managing the American Legion Home dining room, the job I gave up to begin working for the City Schools.

"When I started, there were three school cafeterias in the city - at Agnes Fullilove, Third Street, and Wahl - Coates. The three were serving about 250 student." This figure doubled within two months after she began work.

"At first I got complaints all the time. Mothers would say to me, 'Mrs. Rush, my child at Fullilove isn't fed as well as my niece at Third Street,' and the other child's mother would vow that the food at Fullilove was much better. I decided a uniform menu for the whole system each day was the best solution to this problem and it has worked wonderfully well in facilitating buying and planning, also.

"We appreciate the newspaper and the radio stations publishing our uniform menu weekly. We like for the parents to know what their children are being served and mothers tell me it is quite helpful in their home menu - planning, also. Then the child doesn't go home and moan, 'Oh, Mom, I had spaghetti at school today and here we are having it again tonight.' "

Point Of Pride

Her lunchrooms' sanitation records are a point of pride for Mrs. Rush. All the city school cafeterias have ratings of 95 or better. Sanitary food preparation methods are used and all dishes are scraped, rinsed, washed, and sterilized in 180 - degree water before reuse.

"Many of the same women who began work with me 17 years ago still are with me," she said. They say they like me and I like them. In many ways, I think they consider me one of them, because I often go in and work right along with them. I used to even more than I do now, since there is so much more administrative work.

"Glenn Cox was surprised to learn not long ago that we have a record of the number of eggs used on any particular day.

"Much of my paper work has to with the free lunch program. The number served each month varies. In December 2,330 were served, while the number increased to 3,563 in January. Who receives lunches is determined by need. Some probably accept them when they don't need them, but these lunches are the only well - balanced meals many children get.

"We have breakfast programs at Third Street and Elmhurst. These morning meals are free to those who need them, also. Last month some 1,348 children were served breakfasts like oatmeal, orange juice, and milk."

Rusk's Daughter Teaches, Waits

By DOROTHY MARKS

COLUMBIA, Md. (WNS) — How goes it with Peggy Rusk Smith, daughter of former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, in the more than two and a half years since her surprise marriage to Guy Gibson Smith?

It goes "great, just great!" In a rare interview, Peggy, recently turned 21, told NANA, "Since I married Guy, life has been like one long, wonderful vacation!"

Not so great, she admits, is the fact that for the past ten months 1st. Lieutenant Smith has been flying "hues" (helicopters) in Vietnam. But he is due home the end of June and Peggy can hardly wait.

She had a few bad days in the middle of February too. "The phone rang in the middle of the night," Peggy recalls. "It was Guy's commanding officer. He said, 'Mrs. Smith, Guy's been wounded'. Then we were disconnected."

Arm And Lip

"Thank heaven, he called back a few minutes later to say Guy only had been shot in the arm and another bullet had nicked his lip while he was on a training mission in the Mekong Delta."

Then a few days later Guy called himself to report he was out of the hospital and back on duty. Peggy saw him last on a five-day "rest and recreation" leave in Hawaii after Christmas "where we both almost drowned off Wakiki Beach."

In the meantime, Peggy is living an active life alone in the new town of Columbia, Md., a planned, integrated community halfway between Washington and Baltimore.

Not exactly alone either since she shares her one-bedroom lakeshore apartment at Columbia with a Border collie, "Georgia," acquired when she and her husband were stationed in Savannah, Georgia, and a Siamese cat, "Huey," who hails from Texas where Guy took his helicopter training. Another dog and a de-scented skunk who bites are in the keeping of Guy's widowed father, Clarence Smith, a retired Defense Department senior employee.

Visits Parents

Peggy is the youngest of the Rusk's three children and the apple of their eye. A 29-year-old brother, David, has been working for the National Urban League, a bi-racial organization, and 23-year-old Richard is at Cornell University.

Several times a week Peggy stops by her parents' house in the fashionable Spring Valley section of Washington. The Rusks are busy packing up to move this summer to Albany, Georgia, where Dean Rusk will teach international law at the University of Georgia. Peggy sees nothing unusual about her marriage — her husband is bl ck—except that she did it so young. She likes to point out her mother was a teenager student in Dean Rusk's government class at Mills College in California when the two got engaged.

A love of horses and horseback riding brought Guy and Peggy together several years ago at the Rock Creek Stables here and horses are still very much a part of their life. At one point in their marriage they owned three, but after Guy left for Vietnam Peggy sold one to a friend and moved the others to a farm near Columbia where she pays only for stabling and takes care of feeding, exercising and grooming them herself.

Our interview was timed for Sunday noon since that was the only free time Peggy had. She tries to keep busy instead of "just moping around."

Peggy is a trim, five-foot-five brunette with a healthy color and sparkling brown eyes. She seems somewhat shy and has a smile that lights up her whole face.

Couldn't Lose'

Next to the wedding picture of herself and Guy on the desk stood an impressive gold horse trophy and two smaller ones she had won at the Western Pleasure Horse Show at College Park, Maryland, the day before. Riding Guy's horse "Navajo," a 13-year-old black-and-white pinto, she had come off with the grand championship award and two other prizes.

"Guy has trained that horse so well, you couldn't lose on him," she said proudly. Guy's father was expected to drop in at the apartment this week to photograph Peggy with the trophies to include in letters to his son. Between them Peggy said she and Guy have won over a hundred ribbons and trophies.

The Smith apartment is simply furnished with lots of fake fur pillows on a beige cut velvet sofa. A huge elephant's foot in one corner, some Oriental woodcuts, and a graceful earthenware jug in another were, she explained, gifts from her well-travelled mother and father.

A typical weekday for her starts at 6:45 a.m. when she climbs into a pair of bluejeans, drives her pickup truck about 15 miles to and from the stable to feed Navajo and the six-year-old gelding "Charlie" which Guy bought her last year. Back at the apartment shortly after 8 a.m. she showers, usually skips breakfast and then drives about 30 miles to northwest Washington where she teaches in a private school for special children. Afternoons she does errands and repeats the drive to the stables to work out for several hours with the horses. After a sandwich dinner en route she usually arrives back at her apartment around 9 p.m. "Guy and I try to write each other every day about this time," she said.

Where there is a Saturday or Sunday horse show to attend, she gets up even earlier—around 5:30 a.m.—to get the horses ready to show.

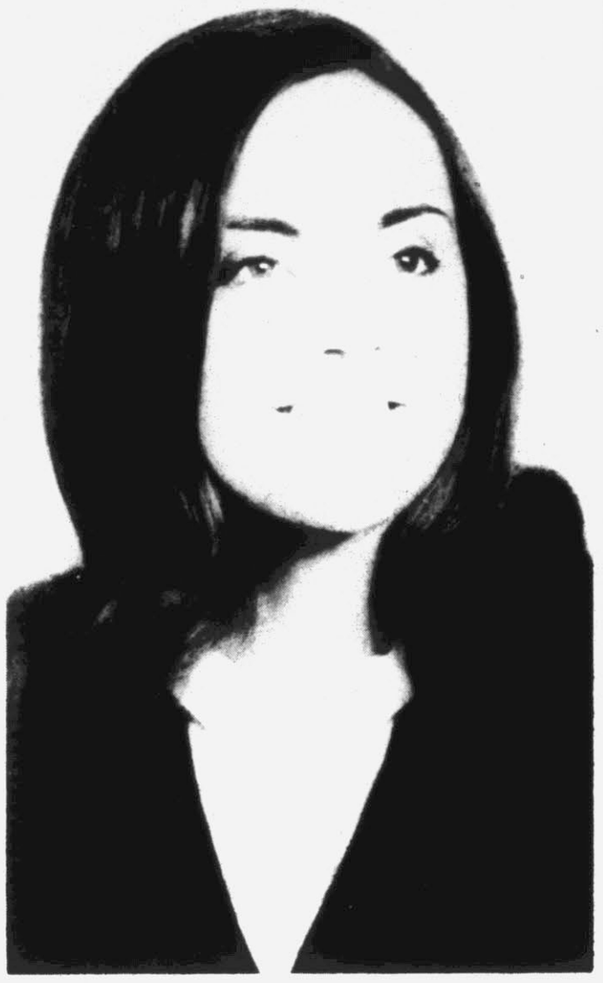

A history major during her two years at Stanford, Peggy had hoped to continue her studies at nearby University of Maryland this year but discovered at the last minute she would have to pay the high out-of-state tuition fees. Although both her parents and Guy's father offered to help out financially, the young Smiths refused a loan. She expects to stop her substitute teaching June 1 and to make college plans when Guy gets his new orders.

Meanwhile, she is looking forward to his 30-day leave. He'll be coming to Columbia. With the air of one who is pretty sure of the decision, she adds: "If Guy agrees, we might sell my Charlie to a friend and buy another green horse just to have the fun of training him together."

He's Made Women Flip Their Wigs

By CINDY ADAMS

NEW YORK (WNS) — It's no exaggeration to say women flip their wigs over Jerome Alexander. One reason is he's barely fortyish and he's gorgeous and he knows it. The second reason is he's a new millionaire and he's on The Best Dressed List and he'll make sure you know both. The third reason is he's the hotshot whizkid of the wig industry. Jerome Alexander wig boutiques inside major department stores are becoming as commonplace as the escalators.

Clawing through the perfect wave in his own thick, luxuriant, personalized haircut (which looks like it costs more than mine), Mr. Alexander nee Axelrod gave me the hairy facts of life. "My boutiques get prime locations in all top shops because wigs have become the number - one selling item in department stores. We're a billion - dollar industry. Last year I went public. This year I'll do 20 million."

Ex - G. I.

Definitely not one of the "hairdressers who walk lightly" variety, this ex-G.I. went to work pushing cosmetics for a beaty concern and brought wigs to houseparties for a gag. Along the line he became involved in wig factories in Hong Kong and Korea, took a vacation in Tel Aviv in 1966. There this nice Jewish boy from New York met Geraldine O'Doherty, this nice Irish lass from England. He married her and they're now living happily ever after on fashionable Beekman Place in New York City with a chauffeured Cadillac and a baby on the way and a large stack of newspaper clippings and ads from "Vogue" mostly featuring Mr. Alexander rather than his wigs.

"In America there are more balding women than men," he said as we shared an hour at a restaurant the other day. "Originally, 90 per cent of my business was to women over 40. I was the Dr. Scholl of the wig industry catering strictly to the Space Shoes Cadets around age 55. However, bit by bit wigs became part of the cosmetics business. It's like when a few years ago a gal glued on a pair of lashes and when she took them off she suddenly realized — WOW! — what a difference. Same with the wigs. She took the sample one off, looked in the mirror and gasped, 'Hey, who's this baldheaded chick?' And soon she became dependent on the lashes and the wigs and today wouldn't be caught dead without either.

"At first I hit the small towns like Whitefish, Montana with Shirley McDimple type curly wigs and I told the little old ladies, 'I can make you look 20 years younger' and they all said, 'NO! What would our children say? They're 17, 18, we don't want to embarrass them. Just make us look good.' My wigs weren't moving. Then I designed a long shaggy look which bombed all over but, by an odd coincidence, sold in just one place — Minneapolis. Seems there they'd trimmed them and were selling them like crazy. TO MEN!

Guardsmen

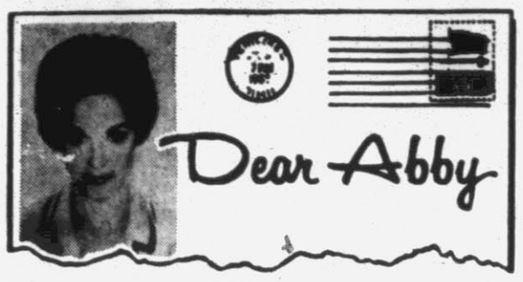

"Straight guys with long hair — and not hippie types, mind you — were getting lots of heat when they returned to their National Guard units. They were forced to cut their hair for the occasional reservist meetings. So some bought my trimmed shaggy wigs, shoved their long hair into a French twist like a woman would and used the snug elastic under the wig to pin the twist up. With their sideburns trimmed, things were perfect. Now they're even being bought by longhaired 'in' types who are getting turned down for jobs because they find executives don't hire men for executive positions if they have shoulder - length hair."

Jerry unleashed a few "military Wigs" out of an attache case and plunked one on the head of our fascinated waiter. "Naturally, my prime business is ladies wigs but I've even designed hair dresses and hair coats," said Jerry all the while unsmilingly draping and shaping the greyhaired waiter's new brown crew cut, totally concerned with business and totally unconcerned with the absurdity of the situation. "Someday I'll give up wigs and maybe just design clothes," continued Mr. Alexander, pulling a ringlet here and a curlycue there from the delighted waiter's second head.

While bysitters watched, Mr. Alexander, gold cufflinks flashing, fluffed and backcombed the waiter's skull, all the while keeping up a running commentary. "These new wigs of mine are called Permastyle. They're made of a Japanese synthetic and they're drip - dry. Permanent press. You can shampoo them, shower in them, swim in them, get caught in a hot and heavy embrace and not only won't they budge but they won't snarl or frizz up or steam out."

The astounded waiter peered in my compact mirror and was gurgling happily as Mr. Alexander, with millions on his mind, paid him no personal attention but sped on combing and teasing and saying, "My new wigs aren't just for women. They're for men, too. If a Wall Street broker wants the Security Look, let him buy one of my military wigs. If a crew-cut G.I. wants a groovy night on the town, let him get one of my hippie wigs. If a bank clerk wants to freak out he can buy my flaming red do for 'The Boys In The Band' set. Listen, maybe a guy wants a straight look in the office and at Fire Island decides that blondes have more fun. With my wigs he can go!"

Remarriage Should Be Up To Father

By Abigail Van Buren

[© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: After mother died, our father lost no time in finding another lady to keep him company. She is 36. Dad is 57. Dad also said he doubted if he'd ever marry again, but 8 months after mother's death he was a married man. He said we would be the first to know if he decided differently. We were the last to know.

Don't say it's none of our business. We are his children and we love him, and it's very much our business. We just can't see dad marrying a woman who is the same age as his oldest daughter. Are we wrong to be. . . .

DISGUSTED WITH DAD

DEAR DISGUSTED: I think you are. True, since your father said you'd be the first to know should he decide to remarry, he should have kept that promise. But if you really "love" him, concern yourself only with his happiness. [P. S. If the age difference presents a problem between them, it will be their problem.]

DEAR ABBY: My husband [I'll call him Pat] has been acting kind of funny lately — moody and depressed and like that. I finally got him to tell me what was bothering him. Well, it seems he was feeling "guilty" about an affair he had last summer with my best friend [I'll call her Marge]. I was so hurt and heartsick I lost 10 pounds in 10 days.

Pat promised he'd never see Marge again, so I forgave him. But here's my problem:

Pat and I used to pal around with Marge and Mack [he's Marge's husband] and now I don't care to have anything to do with them. Marge told me she knew that Pat had confessed everything to me, and she didn't act one bit ashamed. She's all for continuing the friendship just like nothing happened.

Now Pat says if we don't keep seeing Marge and Mac, Mac will get suspicious and wonder why. Frankly, I don't care what he thinks. Pat says I'm being unfair because he and Mac are real good buddies now and I'm breaking up their friendship. Abby, I just don't want to see this couple any more. Am I wrong? PAT'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: No. Tell Pat if he wants to continue to be a buddy to Mac, he can do it on his own time, but to include you out. And to forget the foursome for the time being, too.

DEAR ABBY: To back up "OKLAHOMA WHITE": I'll ask, how many whites condemned to death could be trusted to go out and buy his burial clothes, be fitted for a coffin, say good-bye to his friends and be back at the appointed place at the scheduled time of his execution? There weren't many executions, but that is how they were carried out in the Creek nation. Indians ARE honorable!

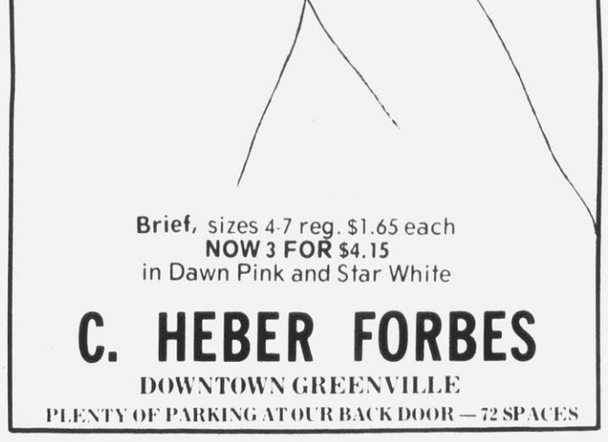

DILUTED CHEROKEE: AURORA, ILLINOIS

CONFIDENTIAL TO WINDY CITY: Don't expect to find an honest partner for a crooked deal.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Mrs. Dianne Davis thinks it is amazing that friends and acquaintances say she is "so clever" when they learn that she personally created the ensemble she happens to be wearing at the time.

As a fashion consultant, she tells all women and girls she meets in her travels to stores and schools that the desire to learn is the major ingredient in the making of a proficient home sewer.

Mrs. Davis

Mrs. Davis spent two days in a local store here this week promoting home sewing for "anyone who likes to sew." She travels with a fashion wardrobe which includes the latest sewing techniques, hints on use of threads and coutieur finishes.

Her demonstration begins with a 10-15 minute fashion show picturing latest fashions with varying hemlines, the pleasant look and the bare midriff look.

"I don't care for the midi look for daytime wear on some women — perhaps for evening wear on occasions. For summertime wear, its a time for the mini. However, I think every woman has to wear what looks nice on her regardless of what the current fashion dictate might be," said Mrs. Davis.

"Especially for summer and other occasions, I think the mini is here to stay. Women have been liberated — they are going to dress the way that looks most fashionable since they are out in the world. Fashion designers have said that the mini, midi and maxi are here to stay for a while and I agree," she remarked.

Despite some parental inferences that a college major in home economics might be desirable, Mrs. Davis entered the School of Business Administration at Ohio University at Athens and graduated with a B.S. degree in 1966. "While the business world seemed exciting and I was sure it was for me, woman's intuition led me to extra courses in textiles and clothing," she added.

Perhaps her most memorable sewing project was a gown she designed for her wedding to her husband, John. She, fresh from college, and he, a medical student at Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, found an apartment and she entered the world of business; first in a New York City bank and later, when her husband accepted an internship in Atlanta, Ga., in a firm of consultants in that city.

Her husband is now serving in the U. S. Navy and is stationed in Vietnam.

After Aug. 30, Jacki Moye will be able to compare life in two branches of armed service — the Army with the Air Force. She will wed Steve Alexander in August.

Jacki, who is a rising junior psychology major at East Carolina University, has traveled extensively with her parents which has included spending six years in Europe.

The reason for the travels — her father is a lieutenant colonel retired, U. S. Army.

A graduate student at ECU, Steve will graduate at the end of the summer session and will go into the U. S. Air Force for four years.

The couple was introduced by Jacki's brother, Sid, at an ROTC party. Sid and Steve were ROTC members.

Sylvia Foster of Raleigh and Jamie Barnhill of Stokes are planning a July 5 wedding at the St. James Methodist Church, Raleigh.

The couple started dating when she came back to ECU in September and they were introduced to each other by mutual friends.

Sylvia is a senior at ECU and is doing her practice teaching at Edwards Junior High School, Rocky Mount. Jamie is with the American Tobacco Co.

Hidden Medical Problems Signaled By Medic Alert

By ARLEEN ABRAHAMS
Associated Press Writer

Most questions concerning the state of one's health will elicit an answer of "fine," but rosy—cheeked, attractive Linda Collins Maurer thinks the answer is not that simple.

"That's one major problem in saving lives," commented the registered nurse titled amateur golfer, homemaker, and mother of three. "Most people never think about their hidden medical problems—allergies, diabetes, epilepsy, or even the fact that they wear contact lenses. Yet not being aware of these potential sources of trouble and, more importantly, not making others aware of these ailments may cost these people their lives."

Fourteen years ago, she recalled, she didn't have any idea that she was allergic to tetanus antitoxin. "I was about 14 and I remember gashing my hand. Being a doctor's daughter, I was aware of the dangers of infection. So I went to the local medical center—my father was not at home—and asked to have the cut treated. The doctor cleaned and bandaged my hand, then properly scratched a droplet of tetanus antitoxin into my skin to check for a reaction." Within minutes, Linda collapsed, struck down by the fatal allergic reaction.

After she recovered, her father worried about preventing a repetition of the incident. At first he taped a note to her wrist, put a note inside her purse and alerted everyone with whom she might come in contact. But when the time came for her to go away to study nursing at Stanford University, her father realized these precautions wouldn't be enough.

"First my father thought of tattooing me, but my mother and I vetoed that," Linda says with a smile. "Finally, we came up with the idea of a bracelet," she said, pointing to her chain—link silver bracelet with an eye—catching disk. On the front is a coduceus, the symbol of the medical profession and the words "Medic Alert." On the back is engraved the warning, "Allergic to Tetanus Antitoxin, Sulphur, and Aspirin."

Today, a similar bracelet (stainless steel instead of silver) or necklace is worn by 300,000 members of Medic Alert in the United States and in 11 foreign countries. The nonprofit foundation, headquartered in Turlock, Calif., is concerned, that this figure is minute compared to the total number of persons who have hidden medical problems.

Statistically, the American Medical Association estimates that 40 million Americans should be wearing such a medical signaling device. "And it's not only for people who have experienced some trouble," added Linda, who never has had to use the bracelet to save her life.

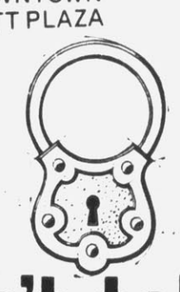

"In some occupations, like deep—sea diving, people may be likely to experience the bends. That's why they wear Medic Alert identification. Other people choose to donate organs. All this information should be made available in an emergency."

Linda points out that people who wear contact lenses have good reason to enroll in Medic Alert. Contact lenses shouldn't be left in for too long a time," she explains. "If a person is rendered unconscious in an accident, a doctor should know that the person wears contacts so they can be removed before any damage is done to the cornea."

Linda, her husband—a Palo Alto clinical psychiatrist—and her parents are very much involved in Medic Alert. Her father is president, her mother serves as secretary—treasurer and her husband as vice—president. Linda is especially concerned with incorporating the program into first—aid training programs spreading the word to law enforcement agencies, doctors, police, ambulance personnel, stewardesses and others who might be confronted with someone who has a hidden medical problem.

INTERIORS TODAY

(Unusual Wall Treatment)

Practically everyone has a yen to do a bit of interior decorating in order to try out a few pet schemes. Walls are excellent for such experimenting. Here is an unusual treatment which may interest you. Select a six by four foot outdoor-scene mural and mount in the center of an end or side wall. But don't stop at that. Mount a cornice above and draperies on each side to simulate a picture window. To complete the illusion, divide the imaginary pane into four sections, using three quarter inch molding placed over the mural.

Use draperies and cornice in contrasting tone to the wall. And you'll be delighted with the terrific charm impact this treatment delivers.

No More Festivals In Woodstock Style Soon

DON'T COUNT'EM, but more than 100,000 spectators fill a meadow in which the Aquarian rock festival started its three - day run. There are reasons why it probably won't happen in the Woodstock mold — at least not this year. (UPI Telephoto)

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The nation had never seen anything like it—and wasn't sure in the aftermath that it wanted to again—when 450,000 young people thronged to the Woodstock Rock festival in upstate New York last August.

"If it happened at Woodstock," singer Arlo Guthrie asked when it was over, "why shouldn't it happen again?"

There are reasons today why it probably won't happen again in the Woodstock mold—at least not this year.

A series of disastrous post-Woodstock imitations—particularly the Altamont free concert in California which ended with a youth stabbed to death on the stage—have marred the rock festival image.

State legislators, city and county officials, police and judges have acted to make sure hordes of young people would not descend on their communities. Also a number of announced festivals either never came off or failed to include the big name rock groups which sold the tickets.

"Successful festivals are going to be the exception, not the rule," predicts John Morthland, an editor of "Rolling Stone," the San Francisco-based magazine of the rock world.

"We just don't need them," says California State Sen. Clark Bradley, a conservative Republican whose colleagues unanimously approved a bill which would make it a felony to violate local ordinances regulating rock festivals.

In New York, site of the Woodstock get-together and the target of several promoters hoping to stage similar festivals, the legislature has passed a bill virtually prohibiting large musical gatherings.

Cities from Vassalboro, Me., to Los Angeles have passed special ordinances that set health, safety, insurance, policing and other regulations with standards so high that it is virtually impossible for a rock festival promoter to meet them.

Most communities don't want even a properly planned and staged festival.

They remember the massive traffic jams, hordes of long-haired young people, open dope peddling and widespread use of drugs, nudity and love-making which have been part of every big outdoor rock festival.

An Illinois judge, banning an announced three-day festival at Carbondale because promoters hadn't obtained state and county permits, said testimony indicated some fans behaved like "lower animals" at other festivals.

The few festivals which have been held in recent months have had their problems. By the time they got a site, it was too late to prepare the area properly, to acquire the promised bands or to break even economically.

Foundry Owners Deny Liberty Bell Crack Due Workmanship

By PETER J. SHAW

LONDON (UPI)—The original Liberty Bell didn't crack because of bad workmanship, insist the owners of the 400-year-old British foundry which cast it.

Should doubt persist in the former colonies across the Atlantic, the foundry is casting 2,400 scaled-down Liberty bells to mark America's bicentennary in 1976.

"I'll be most surprised if any of them crack," Douglas Hughes said.

Master Founders

Hughes and elder brother William are the master founders at the Whitechapel Bell Foundry in East End London's Whitechapel Road. The foundry marks its 400th anniversary this year and has been in the same brown brick building since 1738.

They're still making bells on the spot where the first Liberty Bell was cast by Thomas lester in 1752.

Big Ben was made there in 1858. But the foundry is perhaps proudest of having cast all the bells in Westminister Abbey—including two dating to 1583 and 1598.

"We're satisfied there was no flaw in the first Liberty Bell," Douglas Hughes said.

"We know it went ashore in America in good order."

How might it have cracked?

'Very Delicate'

"A bell is actually very delicate," Hughes said. "A piece of 1¼-inch thick bell held in the palm of the hand can be cracked with a hammer."

History doesn't record in detail what happened to the first Liberty Bell between its arrival in America in 1752 and its hanging in Philadelphia in 1753. But whatever, it cracked at the first strike of the clapper.

"It might have been dropped or improperly rung," Hughes said. "A bell must be allowed to speak (vibrate) when it is hit. If prevented from speaking, it might crack."

In 1570, a man called Robert Mot established the foundry just across Whitechapel Road from the present site. Over his door he hung a sign showing three gold bells, making his address in those days of numberless streets "at the sign of the three bells in Whitechapel Road."

THE ORIGINAL Liberty Bell didn't crack because of bad workmanship, says Douglas Hughes, owner of the 400 - year - old foundry which cast it. (UPI Telephoto) policies of the Greek government. Any such implication was erroneous and unjustified."

This swift World Bank reaction shows the sensitivity of allinternational organizations to the growing hostility in Western European Parliaments and the U. S. Congress to the Greek Junta. The Colonels were reprimanded last month in a unprecedented political resolution of the European Common Market, which warned that their association with the Market "must be" reconsidered because of their failure to adopt democratic procedures. Several members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are preparing an attack on the Junta for the NATO meeting at Rome next week.

Here at home, Republican Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois has just sent a letter to President Nixon warning that full-scale resumption of U. S. military aid to the Colonels (cut off three years ago when the Junta seized the government) "would be viewed by the Greek people as accomodation to the Junta." Findley recommends that the head of the U. S. arms mission in Athens be downgraded from major general to colonel to reduce the Junta's prestige.

But neither the Nixon administration nor the World Bank draw the political conclusions of these critics. Large - scale U. S. arms aid to Greece is now tentatively approved, with announcement set for after the Rome NATO meeting. And the World Bank, despite disavowals of any intent to help the Junta, will not change its lending policies unless its European critics get much noisier.

On The Young Side

By JANE JACKSON

Activities at Rose High School reached a peak this past week as students elected a new slate of Student Government officers for the 1970-71 school year.

Junior Ernest Adams will serve as SGA president next year. The new vice - president is junior Connie Minges, secretary, junior Susan Leggett, and treasurer, sophomore, Carl Faser. The students were chosen by a plurality vote Tuesday and Wednesday following an assembly Tuesday morning.

Each candidate for the various offices was allowed a campaign manager. Ernest's manager was Tommy Durham, Connie's was Suzy Stocks, Susan's was Vickie Morgan, and Carl's campaign manager was Steve Aldridge.

Skits consisting of everything from Adam and Eve to Abraham Lincoln to Hawaiian dances were presented by supporters of each candidate.

Six minutes were allowed for a campaign manager's speech, candidate's speech, and skit. If he did not choose to have a skit, a candidate was allowed three minutes for his presentation.

Following the assembly, to which all students attended at once, voting began. Everyone voted in booths during lunch Tuesday, after school, and before school Wednesday.

Busy Seniors

The recent days have been busy and will continue to be busy for seniors who realize graduation is only two weeks away. The Bacculaureate service held annually for seniors will take place next Sunday night in the Rose High gym at 8 o'clock. Practice will be Friday afternoon after school.

A little over a week later, on June 9, graduation exercises will take place. The program will take place at 8 p.m. at Ficklen Stadium.

Seniors will take exams early, Thursday and Friday (June 4 and 5) and will be excused from school Monday and Tuesday.

Twirp Week

Twirp Week is in full swing at Rose High right now. The annual event began Wednesday and will last through next Wednesday. A dance took place last night in the school gym with girls having the privilege to ask boys.

Members of the Chorus Ensemble, Chorus I, and Mixed Chorus, participated in a spring concert Friday night in the gym.

Jonnie Cassick, president of the chorus and winner of the Woman's Club Fine Arts Scholarship, will present a recital Thursday night. Jonnie's recital will take place at the Methodist Student Center.

Marshal For Graduation

BETHEL — Lenwood Scott Heath Jr. will act as Chief Marshal at the Bethel High School graduation exercises May 31 and June 4.

Principal W. C. Latham announced the Chief Marshal is chosen on the basis of his having the highest average over a period of two and two-thirds years of high school work. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lenwood Scott Heath of Rt. 2, Robersonville.

Six additional marshals, selected on the basis of their grade average being the highest in the junior class, were also announced.

They are Jacqueline Lee Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Carson Jr.; Brenda Kay Currin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Currin; Theresa Dewar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam D. Dewar; Janet Yvonne Griffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Griffin; Deborah Staton Weeks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Weeks; and Mary Charles Whitehurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Cadet Whitehurst.

Operation Sunshine Holding Open House

An "old - fashioned pounding" and open house will be held at the new home of Operation Sunshine, 313 W. Third St., Tuesday from 7:30 p.m. until 9:00 p.m.

In years past, neighbors brought a pound of butter, pound of flour, a pound of sugar, etc., to old - fashioned poundings. Today guests and well wishers should give an old chair, soap, two light bulbs, a window shade, folding chair, throw rugs or games.

Operation Sunshine, a community project supported by churches, civic and social clubs of Greenville, offers rich opportunities in the areas of arts and crafts, music, cooking, first aid, nature, outdoor camping, recreation and fellowship.

The program is directed toward enriching the individual child's sense of personal value through her relationships with others, building self respect and self confidence, developing skills in personal hygiene and social relationships and providing an atmosphere conductive to wholesome character.

The activity planned for Tuesday night will give Greenville citizens an opportunity to share in the project.

The public is invited to attend.

Benvenuti Retains Title In KO Win

UMAG, Yugoslavia (AP) — Nino Benvenuti knocked out Tom "The Bomb" Bethea with a quick combination of punches in the eighth round Saturday night and retained his world middleweight championship.

Benvenuti, combining experience and caution, was in control of the scheduled 15-rounder most of the way before he ended it with a left hook and a short right that sent the 26-year-old New Yorker down for the count.

Bethea had earned the title shot by stopping the Italian in the eighth round of a non-title fight in Melbourne, Australia, last March 18.

In that fight, Bethea had used a body attack to put Benvenuti down in the seventh round and leave the champion complaining that his ribs were broken when he quit in the eighth. It was the only time Benvenuti has been stopped in 89 fights, 84 of them victories.

Bethea, a stablemate of former welter and middleweight champ Emile Griffith, was making only his 17th pro start.

Once again, he tried to work on Benvenuti's body, but this time the champion foiled him by backing quickly away and using a flicking left jab.

Bethea, who has been plagued by cuts in his career, was cut above the right eye in the fourth round and Benvenuti kept working on the cut until he landed the left and right that ended the first world title bout ever held in an Iron Curtain country.

Benvenuti weighed the middleweight limit of 160 pounds as did Bethea who suffered his sixth loss against 10 victories and a draw.

Benvenuti, 32, won the title from Griffith in 1967, lost it back to Griffith the same year and then regained it in 1968. This was his fourth successful defense since regaining the crown.

Griffith was in Bethea's corner Saturday night.

The bout was held in an outdoor area especially constructed for it in this northern Yugoslavia town just across the border from Italy. It was beamed to the United States via satellite and was telecast on ABC's Wide World of Sports.

Benvenuti was guaranteed $100,000. Bethea's cut was $17,500.

Old Favorite Lloyd Ruby Avoids Wreck, Gains Place In Indy Lineup Saturday

By DALE BURGESS
Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A record smashing field for the 54th 500-mile auto race May 30 at the old Indianapolis Motor Speedway was filled Saturday, subject to one more six-hour session of 10-mile qualifying runs Sunday.

The 33 cars tentatively in the starting lineup—most of them at speeds unlikely to be challenged Sunday—averaged 167.091 m.p.h. The old record was 166.295 last year.

Nobody in Saturday's runs came close to the speeds of Al Unser, Johnny Rutherford and A.J. Foyt Jr., who filled the first row May 16 at speeds over 170 mph.

Lloyd Ruby, frustrated by six successive engine failures this month, finally got his Mongoose-Offenhauser perking and turned in Saturday's best speed of 168.895 mph.

Jack Brabham of Sydney, Australia, three-time world road racing champion, easily qualified in 166.397 in an Offenshauser-powered car of his own design.

Kevin Bartlett, another Sydney native, joined the field at 165.259, which could be under assault in Sunday's final trials.

Bartlett, Dick Simon of Salt Lake City, a former skiing and parachute jumping champion, and Greg Weld of Kansas City were the only speedway rookies who made the tentative lineup Saturday.

Veterans who moved into the field included Ronnie Bucknum, internation racer from Capistrano Beach, Calif., 166.136; Jerry Grant, Seattle, 165.983; Sam Sessions, Nashville, Mich., 165.373; and the second Bill Vukovich, Fresno, Calif., 165.753.

Weld did 166.121, Simon 165.548 and Bartlett 165.259.

Vukovich gave up his original Edmunds-Offy and qualified in the last few minutes of Saturday's session in a Brabham-Offy owned by Jerry O'Connell of San Jose, Calif. It will be the third start for Bill on the track where his father was killed in 1955 trying for his third straight victory in the 500.

Vuky's run eliminated rookie Tony Adamowicz of Torrance, Calif., slowest of the previous qualifiers.

Ruby qualified after missing disaster by inches.

Shortly before the Wichita Falls, Tex., veteran qualified for his 11th Memorial Day start, a car driven by rookie Al Loquasto of Easton, Pa., spun in front of Ruby in a practice session.

Ruby said, "I missed him about 8 inches."

Loquasto crashed into the outer wall but was not hurt.

"This has to be the turning point in my luck," said Ruby, who has had six engine Failures this month trying to qualify for the $850,000 motor classic.

His Mongoose-Offenhauser ran beautifully Saturday and his average was the sixth-best thus far. He turned one lap at a bristling 169.555 m.p.h. and had two others at identifical speeds of 169.046. He backed off a little on his final 2½-mile circuit to 167.942.

The 33-car field was filled before noon in the next-to-last qualifying session. That left only one way to make the race —to beat and "bump" one of the earlier qualifiers.

There were 27 qualifiers last weekend. The six who moved in Saturday, besides Ruby, and filled the field were Bentley Warren, a rookie from West Gloucester, Mass., 164.805; Sam Sessions, Nashville, Mich., 165.373; Ronnie Bucknum, Capistrano Beach, Calif., 166.136; Greg Weld, Independence, Mo., 166.121, and rookie Kevin Bartlett of Sydney, Australia, 165.259.

Then the bumping began.

Jerry Grant of Seattle made a run at 165. 983 and eliminated rookie Steve Krisiloff of Parsippany, N.J., who qualified a week earlier at 162.448.

While Ruby's luck improved, Jigger Sirois' remained sour. The Hammond, Ind., driver, whose crew called him in last year from a qualifying run that would have put him on the pole, crashed Saturday in another trial run.

Sirois did not appear to be hurt but the Lola-Offenhauser owned by Jack Adams of Memphis, Tennis., was damaged as it hit the wall.

Jack Brabham of Sydney Australia, three-time world road racing champion, easily qualified his Brabham-Offenhauser Saturday at 166.397. He has run off and on at the Speedway since 1961, when he introduced the rear-engine Grand Prix type car to the race and finished ninth.

Brabham's run bumped earlier qualifier Jim McElreath, a veteran from Arlington, Tex., who had done 163.592.

Dick Simon of Salt Lake City, a former ski and parachute jumping champion, qualified for his first 500 at 165.548, eliminating another rookie, Bentley Warren of West Gloucester, Mass., who did 164.805 earlier in the day.

Pamlico Stops Legion By 3-1

BAYBORO — The Greenville American Legion Baseball team opened its 1970 season yesterday with a 3-1 loss to powerful Pamlico County All - Stars, a semi - pro team.

The Stars are led by former East Carolina University great Lacey West, who hurled the victory for Pamlico.

He did not start the game, but came on in the second and hurled the remaining eight innings, allowing four hits, striking out 10 and walking one. At the same time, he banged out two hits, scored two of the three runs, and drove in the other.

Pamlico took the lead in the fourth inning welcoming Lee Galt to the mound. Jay Brown had hurled three scoreless and hitless innings before being lifted, as Coach Johnny Holt wanted to take a look as several pitchers in the game.

West led off the inning with a single and Monk reached on a walk. Mason then singled to drive in West with the go - ahead run.

In the second inning, the All - Stars struck again. Rea reached on an error with two out, and moved to second on the play. West stroked a single to bring him home with what proved to be the winning run.

Greenville, after several threats, finally got their lone run in the eighth. They had put men on second base in the first, second, fifth, and sixth without avail before they finally broke the ice.

Jimmy Bond led off the inning reaching on an error that let him go all the way to third. He scored when Joey Moore stroked a single. Moore later stole second, but died there.

Pamlico made up for the lapse with another run in the bottom of the eighth. West opened up with a walk, and moved to second on an error. He scored when Maston singled.

Greenville, which may schedule other exhibition games before the start of the season, will officially open the year on June 6, traveling to Ahoskie.

Kiwanis Still Unbeaten, 14-4

The Kiwanis kept up their unbeaten ways yesterday in the North State Little League as they pounded the Optimists, 14-4.

The victory boosted the Kiwanis record to 4-0 for the year, while R.C. Cola is second with a 3-1 mark. They are followed by Coca-Cola, 2-2, and the Jaycees, Lions and Optimists, all 1-3.

The Optimists took the lead in the game with a run in the first inning. Greg Lee singled and moved up on Ricky Robinson's hit. Ashley Bass reached on an error and B. G. Clark walked to force in Lee.

In the top of the third, the Kiwanis moved out by scoring two runs. Greg Dail walked and with two outs, Kelly Heath singled. He stole second and both runners came across when Ed Mayo reached on an error.

In the bottom of the third, however, the Optimists pushed over three more runs for a 4-2 lead. Robinson walked and moved to third on a pair of wild pitches. Clark walked and both scored when Gary Porter doubled. A wild pitch moved Porter to third, and he scored on Lee Spain's fielder's choice.

The Kiwanis tied it up with two more in the fourth. Chuck Ellis walked and moved up on a wild pitch. He moved into third on Dave Middleton's single, and another wild pitch put runners on second and third. Clayton Brock reached on an error, scoring Ellis, and Syd Ashby singled to score Middleton with the tieing run.

Then, in the fifth inning, the Kiwanis exploded for 10 runs to take the victory, Mayo led off with a single and moved up on a wild pitch. He scored on Steve Camp's double, and Camp moved to third on an error. Chuck Ellis singled in Camp, and Middleton got a hit. Greg Dail walked, loading the bases and Brock singled to score Ellis. Ashby reached on a fielder's choice that brought home Middleton.

Heath then capped the inning with a grand - slam home run, running the score up to 12-4. The Kiwanis then picked up two more before the final out. Mayo reached on an error and Camp doubled for the second time in the inning, scoring Mayo. Middleton singled to score Camp with the final run.

Middleton led the Kiwanis hitting with three, while Heath and Camp both had a pair.

No one had more than one hit for the Optimists.

Williams Leads Cubs Over Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Williams slammed two home runs Johnny Callison drilled a three-run double and Cleo James stroked three singles for two more RBI Saturday as the Chicago Cubs buried the New York Mets 14-8 under a 15-hit assault.

The Cubs raked Gary Gentry for three runs in the second inning and three more including Williams' leadoff homer in the third before knocking out the Met starter during a five-run fourth.

Williams opened the fifth with his 14th homer of the season and Jack Hiatt's seventh inning double produced two more Chicago runs.

Ferguson Jenkins, cuffed for 10 New York hits, including homers by Art Shamsky and Jerry Grote, staggered to his third victory in nine decisions with eight inning relief help from Phil Regan.

A walk, singles by Callison, James and Paul Popovich, and Jenkins' sacrifice fly gave the Cubs a 3-1 lead in the second. James singled home one of the third inning runs and Callison's bases-loaded double off Don Cardwell keyed the fourth inning explosion after Gentry was lifted with the bases loaded and none out.

Stars Win In Overtime, Stall Off Pacer Drive

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — The Los Angeles Stars beat the Indiana Pacers 117-113 in overtime Saturday, sending the playoffs for the American Basketball Association championship into a sixth game.

Indiana leads the best-of-seven series 3-2.

The Stars led for most of the overtime period after tying the score at 107-107 at the end of regulation play.

The score was tied 15 times during the game, and the lead changed hands 19 times.

Indiana opened up a commanding lead in the second quarter, leading by as much as 11 points, and led at halftime 57-49.

The Stars tied the game at 67-67 midway through the third quarter, but the Pacers came back for an eight-point lead early in the fourth period.

After that it was downhill for the Pacers.

The Stars scored 10 points in the overtime period, while the Pacers managed only six and four of those were on free throws.

The Stars jumped off to a 109-107 lead in the overtime, but Bob Netolicky tied the score for the Pacers at 109-109 and put Indiana ahead briefly 110-109 on a free throw.

Mack Calvin put the Stars back into the lead at 111-110 and Los Angeles never trailed again.

The Stars led 115-112 with 14 seconds remaining, and Brown had two free throws. He made the first but missed the second and Los Angeles grabbed the rebound.

The Stars scored again on two free throws by Calvin.

Brown led all scorers with 39 points, and Calvin led Los Angeles with 33.

The next game in the playoff series will be Monday night at Los Angeles.

Weiskopf Holds To Slim One-Stroke Lead

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Weiskopf faltered in the sweltering heat and grinding pressure of the back stretch Saturday but clung to a one-stroke lead after three rounds of the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

Tall Tom, five-under-par at one point and sporting a six-stroke lead, stumbled in with a one-under-par 71 for 204, 12 under for the tournament on the hilly, 7,053-yard Atlanta Country Club Course.

He held a one-stroke margin over disappointed Gary Player and Chuck Courtney.

Courtney, who trailed by one going into the round, matched Tom's 71 while the tough little Player forged a 69 despite missing eight putts of eight feet or less.

They were tied for second at 205.

At 206 was an imposing trio of Jack Nicklaus, who warned, "I've got it going just a little," veteran Tommy Aaron and dependable Frank Beard. The 1969 leading money winner. Nicklaus had a 68, Beard a 67 and Aaron a 70.

Weiskopf, a 6-foot-3 Ohio native who hasn't won since 1968, ran head-on into trouble starting at the 15th hole, which he double bogeyed. He closed with bogeys on the last two holes.

"I just hit bad shots on the holes I bogeyed or doubled bogeyed. "Tomorrow's another day. I'll be back then,' said Weiskopf, who has led or shared the lead all three days.

Locked at 207, nine-under par and just three strokes away, were Australian Bobby Stanton, defending champion Bert Yancey, Lee Elder, Dan Sikes and Canadian George Knudson. Sikes and Knudson had 68s. Stanton a sparkling 66, Elder a 69 and Yancey a 70.

Arnold Palmer, as always the gallery favorite, remained in contention with a 70 for 209, five away from the leader.

Weiskopf made the turn in 32, four under par in the humid, 90-degree heat, and went five under for the day with a two-foot birdie putt on the 11th.

That put him six strokes in front and it began to look like a run-away.

But Courtney and Player came to life and Weiskopf stumbled.

He put his drive in the deep rough on the right at the par four 15th, put his next in the water again to the right, reached the green in four and two-putted.

"I just hit a bad shot," he said.

Tom managed a par on the next hole, but on 17 he missed the green and failed to get up and down. And on 18, he again missed the green and two-putted for a bogey six.

Player, the Johannesburg rancher who is returning home to South Africa after this tournament, said he had "an absolutely unbelievableay.

"When I finished I felt like I'd been run over by a steamroller. I don't want to complain about my putting. People don't like to hear you complain. But you can draw your own conclusions."

He three-putted one green and missed seven other putts of eight feet or less.

Courtney said, "three straight three-putt greens, on eight, nine and 10, did me in."

He closed strongly, however, with birdie putts of 20 and 35 feet and two-putted for a birdie on 18.

Winter rules remained in effect with the players allowed to lift, clean and place on the fairways, still suffering from a severe winter.

The round was enlived a bit by a heated exchange between playing partners Bert Greene and Bruce Crampton. The controversy occurred in the scoring tent near the 18th green, with Green claiming Crampton had improved his lie in a hazard on the eighth.

Crampton denied it, heated words were exchanged, but tournament officials ruled in favor of Crampton and no penalty was assessed.

Crampton was a key figure in a scoring controversy last week which resulted in the disqualification of Harold Henning in the first round of the Colonial National Invitation.

Indians Slip By In 13 Innings

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jack Heidemann's bases-loaded single in the 13th inning gave the Cleveland Indians a 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Steve Hamilton hit Duke Sims with a pitch to open the bottom of the 13th and Larry Brown followed with a ground rule double. Jack Aker then replaced Hamilton and walked Ray Fosse intentionally, filling the bases with none out, and Heidemann broke up the game with a single to left.

Sims' second home run of the game, a two-out solo blast in the eighth, had tied it 3-3.

Sims homered with Tony Horton on base in the fourth to give the Indians their other two runs.

The Yankees took a 3-2 lead in the seventh on a run-scoring doubly by pinch hitter Frank Tepedino.

BULLETIN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Clyde King, manager of the San Francisco Giants, was fired Saturday, shortly after his team lost a 17-16 marathon slugfest to the San Diego Padres.

The Giants called a press conference shortly after the 5-hour, 29-minute game ended and announced that Charlie Fox a member of the club's organization for 28 years, would replace King Sunday.

Twins Sneak By Angels In Eighth

By PAT THOMPSON
Associated Spress Sports Writer

ST PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Holt doubled with two out in the eight inning and then scored Minnesota's winning run on a single by Leo Cardenas as the Twins topped the California Angels 5-4 Saturday.

The nationally televised game was delayed 54 minutes by rain in the top of the eighth and when the play resumed, the Twins broke the tie in the bottom half of the inning on the two-out rally.

Tony Oliva's slow-bouncing single behind the mound had driven in one run and then Oliva chugged home from first on Harmon Killebrew's double down the left field line to tie the score 4-4. in the Twin's fifth.

Six of the game's first eight runs were unearned.

California went ahead 2-0 in the second. Alex Johnson doubled and was safe at home as catcher Paul Ratliff dropped the throw from center fielder Cesar Tovar on Ken McMullen's single.

Jim Kaat then walked Jim Spencer and Tom Egan before Any Messersmith drove in the second run on a groundout.

The Twins tied it in their second. Killebrew walked, took second on a grounder and scored on Cardenas' single, which Johnson overran in left. Ratliff spanked a double down the right field line to chase in the second run.

But that was all the Angels got before rain held up the game with one out in the eighth.

Tigers Beaten

DETROIT (AP) — Ed Brinkman's fourth hit of the game drove in John Roseboro with the winning run in the ninth inning as Washington came from behind to beat Detroit 6-5 Saturday.

Exchange Tops Integon By 8-5

The Exchange slipped past the Integon, 8-5, yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League, winding up the fourth round of play in the season's slate.

The Moose lead the league with a 4-0 record, while the Graniteers are in second place with a 3-1 mark. They are followed by the Exchange and Pepsi - Cola, both 2-2, Integon, 1-3 and the Elks, 0-4.

In the top of the third, Integon Picked up its first run. Ricky Overman reached on a single and Worth Albea got a hit. Jack Bratton followed with a single, driving in Overman for a 1-0 lead.

But in the bottom of the third, the Exchange came up with a pair of runs to move into the lead. Mike Belton doubled and Darrell Roebuck got a single. He stole second, and both runners scored when Michael Brewington slammed a double.

In the fourth, the Exchange added two more runs for a 4-1 lead. John Cleetwood reached on an error and moved up on a wild pitch. Belton doubled him across, and then scored when Brewington got another double.

But Integon rallied for four runs in the top of the fifth to move back in front, 5-4. John Miles singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Ricky Overman doubled him home, and Albea walked. Bratton slammed a double to bring in both runners and tie it up at 4-4. A pair of errors, on the relay, let Bratton come the rest of the way with the go - ahead run for Integon.

It didn't last, however as the Exchange came up with four in the bottom of the inning. Gene Bunn singled and Ricky Armstrong got a hit. Bunn scored when Bobby Boseman doubled, and Belton singled to drive in Armstrong. An error on the play let Boseman come across and moved Belton to third. He scored on a wild pitch with the final run of the game.

Pirateland Sign

The first of a series of new signs welcoming people to Greenville, Home of the East Carolina University Pirates, has been put into place by the Kappa Upsilon chapter of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity at ECU. Dr. James Butler, left, advisor to the fraternity, and its president, Joe Balak, center, shake hands with ECU Football Coach Mike McGee in front of the sign. Other fraternities are expected to put up other signs.

Dream Comes True For W. L. Allen In Atlanta

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

W.L. Allen of Greenville has been on the golf courses for the past 35 years, but nothing will ever take the place of the round he played Wednesday.

For 18 holes, Allen was the envy of every golfer in Greenville, not to mention a couple of million more around the country. Those 18 holes were spent with the most idolized man in golf today, Arnold Palmer.

Allen, also with Reynolds May and Ercell Webb, was invited to play in the pro-am tournament of the Atlanta Classic by Leggett and Meyers Co. president, Milton Harrington, a Greenville native. They promptly accepted, but never in their wildest dreams did they think that two of their rank would end up playing with the legendary Arnie.

"Milton and W.L. both got paired with Palmer," May said afterwards, "and W.L. almost collapsed when he heard it. He's still walking around in the clouds."

Allen phrases it somewhat differently. "I didn't believe them," he said. The news came to Allen and the other three while they were playing a practice round at another Atlanta course. They were stopped by an Atlanta friend who came out on the course to give them the news.

"Guess what?" he told them. "W.L. and Milton have been drawn to play with Arnold Palmer."

"I don't believe it," Allen scoffed. "You're kidding. There would be just one chance in 100,000 that one of us would be drawn for Palmer, let alone both of us. I won't believe it until I see it in the pairings in the paper."

But there it was, finally, in black and white, and it was all Allen and Harrington could believe.

"It was the greatest moment in my life," Allen said. "I have never enjoyed anything as much. I'm still in a dream world. I never thought I'd play with anyone like Palmer, and he's a gentleman to the last degree."

Webb ended up paired with Harold Henning, and their team finished 14 under par. May, parred with Terry Dill, was 11 under, while the Palmer team finished only eight under.

"Palmer was going for birdies on every hole," May said. "But he just couldn't get his putts to drop. And W.L. made a shot on one hole that really was his moment of glory."

May said that there were some 25,000 people reported to be on the course at the time, and that a large percentage were following Palmer's foursome. "They really worship him. They cheer when he hits any kind of shot, and groan when he misses a putt. It's really awesome."

So when Allen and Palmer came to the ninth green, there were some 10,000 people around the green. Both had hit the par four green in two, but both were around 50 feet away. (Allen says 40 to 45 feet, May claims it was 75 feet). Palmer was outside, but Allen asked if he wanted him to hit first and let Palmer watch the ball's action.

"No," Arnie replied. "I'm back, so I'll go ahead." His putt stopped some three feet short.

"Arnie then helped to line up my putt," Allen said. "He told me it was uphill, with a little curl to the left, so it'll break about seven inches. He warned me to putt it hard.

"I did and the ball hit the back of the cup, bounced up, and fell back into the cup for a birdie. Since it was a handicap hole for me, it would down as an eagle for our team."

May reports, "The crowd gave him a tremendous ovation, and W.L. doffed his cap like a pro."

"The galleries were really something," Allen said. "At first, it kind of made me nervous to look out and see just hundred of yards of humanity lining the fairway. We had a good crowd when we started. We were one of the last off, so nearly everyone was along the 17 and 18th fairways when he finished, and you can just imagine the size of the crowd."

"And the most amazing thing is the attitude of the gallery. As you walk along, you can hear the noise of people moving and talking. But when you take your stance, the quiet is chilling. You could hear a pin drop, literally. It's really something to hear that silence."

While Palmer was having his putting troubles, Harrington came to the rescue. On the 16th green, he asked Arnie if he could help him line one up. "Sure," said the gracious pro.

Harrington looked over the shot, offered his advice, and Arnie dropped it in. "Let's do that again," Arnie said.

They did for another birdie at 17, and then just missed another at 18. Harrington was probably beginning to wonder about then whether he ought to give up his job as a tobacco company president to become a fulltime caddie for Arnie.

Following the 18th hole, Arnie, who had stopped dozens of times for autographs, took the Greenville party, which by now included W.L. Allen Jr. and Dan Wooten, into the lounge and chatted for about a half-hour.

"We talked about the Atlantic Coast Conference, Wake Forest, and some of the friends Arnie had in North Carolina," May said.

And while they talked, a number of other personalities wandered through. Among them were Dean Martin, Buddy Hackett, Vic Damone, Mike Douglas, Bear Bryant, Johnny Unitas, Norm Van Brocklin and Billy Graham.

And one topic of discussion might prove exciting for Eastern North Carolina golf fans. About every two years, Palmer plays an exhibition match in North Carolina to benefit the Buddy Worsham Scholarship Fund at Wake Forest. (Worsham was Palmer's roommate at Wake, and later was killed in an accident. Both were members of the Wake golf team.)

"We talked over the possibility of playing this September at Brook Valley," May said. "Arnie was enthusiastic about it, but told us to get in touch with Jesse Haddock (Wake golf coach) to try and set it up. While he didn't promise us, we feel there is a good chance we can arrange the match."

And W. L. Allen, who never thought that a round with Palmer would ever be a part of his life, is keeping his fingers crossed that maybe, just maybe, there might be another 18 holes with golfdom's biggest hero.

Rookie Leads Birds To Win

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rookie Terry Crowley, filling in for the injured Frank Robinson, knocked in two runs with a fifth inning double giving the Baltimore Orioles a 3-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Crowley connected with two out after a single by Elrod Hendricks and a hit batsman. Ray Culp was the loser despite holding the Orioles to just three hits in seven innings.

Paul Blair homered for Baltimore's final run in the eighth.

Jim Palmer picked up the victory, his sixth, scattering seven hits, never more than one in an inning.

Crowley was a late insertion into the line-up after it was decided to rest Robinson, who jammed his hand when he ran into an outfield wall Friday night.

The defeat was Boston's eighth straight on the road while the shutout was the first registered by the Baltimore pitching staff this season.

Chance Honored, Then Sent To The Showers

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dean Chance Night turned into a nightmare for the Cleveland right-hander with his Indians' teammates acting like strangers and the New York Yankees getting all the gifts.

Chance, obtained by the Indians from Minnesota over the winter, was the recipient of a welcome home night from his friends in his hometown of Wooster, Ohio, but lasted only three innings as the Yankees whipped the Indians 7-4 Friday night.

The 28-year-old Chance, was ripped for three first inning runs, including a two-run homer by Roy White but was victimized by a leaky Cleveland defense in the third when the Yanks added three more runs on three errors.

In other American League games, Baltimore ripped Boston 7-4, California edged Minnesota 3-2, Oakland nipped Chicago 9-8, Detroit edged Washington 3-2 and Kansas City thumped Milwaukee 6-3.

In all the Indians made five errors. All three third-inning runs off Chance, 1-4, who was rocked for eight hits in his brief stint, were unearned.

The Yanks, on the other hand, "were great defensively."

Bad Wreck Mars World 600 Prep

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Formula Ford driver Vic Mathews of Mechanicsville, Va., was seriously injured Saturday in a six-car crackup during the Piedmont 100 at Charlotte Motor speedway.

Speedway officials said Mathews had undetermined head injuries and a fractured leg.

As a crowd of 6,000 gasped the little 850 - pound racers scrambled coming out the tough No. 4 turn on the 1½ - mile speedway.

The half dozen open cockpit cars became as vulnerable as children's toys, spinning and skidding on the asphalt track.

Mathews' 103-horsepower No. 1 was in the middle, but onlookers were first attracted to two cars screaming piggyback off the straightaway in front of the grandstand with flames lighting the grass in their wake.

Surgeon May of Jackson, Miss., crawled from his little machine which was on top of the one wheeled by Jim Clarke, while the second pilot remained twisting in the fiery crash.

The wide - eyed crowd roared as Clarke managed to squeeze from between the cars and scamper away.

It was the limp Mathews who became the main concern after the smoke cleared. He had flipped at least four times, bouncing on his head with every rotation in the virtually unprotected race car.

Speedway safety equipment quickly extinguished the flames but it required almost 10 minutes to free Mathews from his car.

After he left in an ambulance the remains of his car resembled a burned pancake.

Jim Jenkins of Yonkers, N.Y., was in a fight for the lead with Nick Dunn of Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., when the mishap occurred.

It appeared that neither was involved in the wreck.

Mathews was taken to a hospital in nearby Concord while four other drivers were treated in the speedway infirmary.

The race was a warmup for Sunday's World 600.

Terps Top Clemson

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Maryland has won a berth in the NCAA District 3 baseball tournament by defeating Clemson 4-3 in a playoff for the ACC championship.

The Terrapins will play Mississippi State in the tournament, which begins next Thursday at Gastonia, N.C., and East Carolina will play Florida State.

Maryland waited until the ninth inning Friday to come alive getting all four runs of its then. Two errors, a bad hop and a wild pitch by Clemson helped seal the Tigers' doom.

Carolina Dairy, Home Builders and Planters Bank captured victories in the Babe Ruth League Saturday night.

Planters downed State Bank, 5-2, while Home Builders took a 10-0 win over Pepsi - Cola, and Carolina Dairy beat College View, 8-5.

In the opening game, Carolina Dairy pushed over three runs in the top of the third to take the lead. David Clifton walked and stole second, and came the rest of the way on wild pitches. J.C. Daniels also walked and Robert Carraway slammed a homer for the lead.

In the fourth, Carolina Dairy added another Ed Holland reached on an error and stole second. He scored on a single by Clifton.

Carolina added four more in the sixth and never trailed. College View picked up two in the fifth and three more in the sixth.

Home Builders got all needed in the second inning with one run. Beamon singled and stole second. He was sacrificed to third and scored on a wild pitch.

A home run by Lee gave them another in the second, and they broke loose for seven in the fourth. They picked up one more in the sixth.

Planters pushed into the lead in the first game in the first inning. Jerry Griffin walked and stole second. He scored on an error after Herb Wilkerson was safe on another miscue.

State Bank led briefly after Phil Dash singled and Roy Hudson homered in the fourth, 2-1. But Planters came up with four in the seventh to wrap it up.

Robert Brinkley walked and was sacrificed to second. Stanley Cobb singled and Anthony Phelps got a hit, scoring Brinkley. David Prewitt walked and Greg Coward reached on an error, and all three runners came across.

Moose Storm Past The Elks

The Moose remained unbeaten as they rolled to a 13-5 victory over the Elks Friday in the Tar Heel Little League.

The Moose are now 4-0, while the Elks fall off to 0-4.

The Moose pushed over three runs in the top of the first inning. Greg Sasser got it started with a home run. Keith Jones followed up with a single and Ross Hawkins got a hit. Both advanced on a passed ball, and Mike Weston's single brought Jones home. Don Hawley reached on an error, scoring Hawkins. In the second, the Moose added another run for a 4-0 lead. Sasser singled and moved to third on a pair of errors. He scored on Jones' single.

In the fourth inning, the Moose shoved over five more runs, upping their lead to 9-0. Jones doubled and scored on an error as Paul Farmer reached on a fielder's choice. A chain of mistakes allowed him to finish the trip around the bases for the second run of the frame. Hawkins reached on another error, and he was balked to second. Weston reached on an error and Hawley doubled in Hawkins. Micky Finn reached on another error, scoring Weston.

The fifth inning saw three more Moose runs score. Jones reached on an error and Farmer slammed a homer. Hawkins walked, and Weston doubled. Hawley was safe on a fielder's choice, scoring Hawkins.

In the bottom of the fith, the Elks finally pushed in their first run. Peter Hargett singled and moved up when Franklin Davis reached on a fielder's choice. Alex Kind doubled to bring Hargett across.

The Moose finished off their scoring in the top of the sixth, getting their 13th run. Sasser singled and stole second. He scored when Farmer doubled.

The Elks pushed over four more in the bottom of the sixth, but were too far back to rally. Murray Adams singled and Bobby Mosley got a hit. Ricky Skinner singled to load the bases, and Reggie Spain singled, driving in both Adams and Mosley. An error on the play let Skinner and Spain advance, and another brought them home.

Robersonville Advances As Creswell Falls, 7-3

EDENTON — The Robersonville Rams rolled to a 7-3 victory over Creswell Friday afternoon as they advanced to the Eastern semifinals on the Class A Baseball Playoffs.

Benny Knox hurled a four - hitter at Creswell, striking out 12 and walking three. Meanwhile, the Ram batters were cracking out 10 hits to push their seven runs across.

Robersonville spotted Creswell a run before they came to bat. Creswell scored once in the top of the first. With two out, Joe Lewis tripled, and then came home on Wayne Rogers' single.

But the Rams came right back to break the game open with six runs in the bottom of the first inning. Ed Warren led off with a double and Hal Knox walked. Timmy James reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases.

Danny Stalls followed, reaching on another fielder's choice that brought Warren across. Successive walks to Phil James, Bobby Rawls and Lang Hardison brought Knox, James and Stalls over for a 4-1 lead. Joe Pilgreen finished off the scoring with a single that brought Phil James and Rawls in for the 6-1 lead.

In the fourth, Creswell struck again, getting two more. Wayne Rogers walked and Alan Holton slammed a home run over the left field wall for the scores.

Robersonville added its final run in the bottom of the seventh. Timmy James singled, stole second, and scored when Stalls got a hit.

Warren and Stalls led the Robersonville hitting with two, while Lewis had two for Creswell.

Robersonville will meet the winner of the Lee Woodard - Saratoga game in the Eastern semifinals on Tuesday at a site to be determined.

Williamston Downs Vance

ROCKY MOUNT — The Williamston Green Wave swept over another hurdle on the way to another chance at the State 2-A Baseball Championship Friday. Greg Godard pitched Williamston to a 3-9 victory over Vance County.

Godard allowed only four hits in the shutout, striking out five and walking one. No one got more than one hit for Vance, although Ellington, the opposing pitcher, did tag Godard for a triple.

Williamston took the lead in the game in the first inning, pushing over a run. Raymond Andrews reached with a single and stole second. He moved into third base on Ken Haslip's ground out. Sammy Roberson banged out a single to bring Andrews home with all Williamston needed in the game.

But the Greene Wave added two more runs just to be sure, getting them in the fourth inning. Haslip singled and Mike Bundy came on as a courtsey runner for him. Roberson singled him to third and stole second. Denny Jenkins got a single, scoring Bundy and moving Roberson to third, from where he scored on a wild pitch.

Haslip and Roberson led the Williamston hitting, getting two each.

The Green Wave now moves on in the playoffs, playing again on Tuesday against an opponent as yet to be decided.

Man With The Golden Glove

Dennis Vick, East Carolina University's All-Southern Conference candidate at second base, is known as the Man With The Golden Glove among the Pirate fans. He is rated by Coach Earl Smith as one of the outstanding glove men around, and has blossomed this year into a fine hitter, leading the Bucs in hitting and in runs batted in. Vick will lead the Bucs into the District III NCAA Tournament Thursday at Gastonia, against top-ranked Florida State.

Dennis Vick Has Been Star For The Pirates

By SONNY LEA

Dennis Vick began this season just like his three previous seasons at East Carolina University, making dazzling plays in the field and taking his place quietly as No. 8 in the batting order.

The senior second baseman from Wilson always has been one of the top defensive infielders in the Southern Conference. But not until this season had Vick ever impressed anyone at the plate.

The base hits began falling for Vick this season. And they kept falling. And when ECU finished its regular season last week, Vick was hitting .337, fifth best in the Southern Conference.

This is a new thing for Vick, who in all modesty claims he never hit .337 before in his life — not even in Little League.

It didn't come easy for the 22-year old physical education major though. Through the first 14 games this season, he had only seven hits in 39 at bats for a not-so-good .179 batting average.

But in the next six games, Vick began to attack opposing pitchers with fury and went 10 for 20 during that stretch, hiking his average by over a 100 points to a respectable .288.

He attributes his success to many factors including "old lady luck" but he admits he gained more confidence with his bat this season.

"Down at The Citadel, I hit the ball well and even though I didn't get any hits my confidence was boosted," recalls Vick. "The next day we played UNC-Wilmington and I went three-for-four. I think that really started it.

"This season I've been a regular (Vick has started and played every inning of ECU's 31 games this season) and I know this has something to do with it. Last season I tried harder because I alternated with Jerry Rawls (now graduated) and I always tried to have big games at the plate so I could play more."

Whatever Vick wishes to attribute his success to, this season will do by Coach Earl Smith's standards.

"What can you say — he's having a great season," says the veteran of many Southern Conference baseball wars. "He got some clutch hits in some tight situations this season and won some ball games for us."

The 5-11, 175-pounder leads the team in base hits (32), runs batted in (15) and total bases (39).

Another interesting statistic on the blond senior is that he has not hit into a double play all season and has struck out only six times in 104 plate appearances. This means Vick fans on an average of only once every 17.3 trips to the plate. This is comparable to the performance of major leaguers like Luis Aparicio and Glenn Beckert, who are the toughest men to strike out in the American and National leagues respectively.

Vick has never worried about his fielding. He's always been confident he could make just about any play around second base. However, he admits he has always worried about his hitting — that is until this season.

He has lived up to his "Golden Glove" reputation this year. In 140 chances he has made only four errors for a .971 fielding average. His career fielding average for three seasons is .970.

ECU pitching ace Ron Hastings perhaps paid Vick the biggest compliment of his career when he said he didn't know what he was going to do next season when Vick wasn't out there to pick up everything hit to the right side.

"With Dennis gone, I just might leave too," jokes Hastings, a junior. "Without his glove, things might get embarrassing for us pitchers."

Leaders Get Help

Meadowbrook and Oakmont helped out the leaders in the cross - divisional play in the Church League Friday night. Meadowbrook beat Black Jack, 7-6, and Oakmont downed Trinity, 11-9, as both of the second place teams bowed.

In the American Divison, St. James holds the lead with a 6-0 record, followed by Meadowbrook and Trinity, both 3-2. Next comes Presbyterian and Gum Swamp, both 2-4, and Christian, 0-6.

In the National Divison, Grace holds the lead with a 5-0 mark. Second place is a four - way deadlock between Immanuel, Black Jack, Oakmont and Piney Grove, all 3-3, while Mt. Pleasant, 1-4, brings up the rear.

In the opener, Oakmont took the lead in the second inning pushing over seven runs. Trinity came back with three in its half of the frame, but Oakmont pushed over one more in the fourth to lead 8-3.

Trinity rallied for four runs in the fifth to cut the lead to 8-7, but couldn't quite catch up. Oakmont ran over three more in the top of the seventh, and then held Trinity to just two in its half of the final frame to hold onto the victory.

Cheek, Anderson, Carraway, Leggett, Fisher and Wood led Oakmont with two each. Donnie Bowen and Joe Sutton had three and Al Davis and Gentry Mills each had two for Trinity.

In the second game, Black Jack took the lead in the first with a homer by T. Adams, but Meadowbrook pushed over one in its half of the first to tie it up. Meadowbrook pushed ahead in the third, scoring twice more, but Black Jack regained the lead at 4-3 with three in the fourth.

Black Jack added another in the top of the fifth, but Meadowbrook came up with four in the bottom of the fifth to take a 7-5 lead. Black Jack came up with one more run in the seventh, but couldn't catch up again.

McCarter led the Black Jack hitting with two, while Wayne Nelson, Robert Garrett, Carl Powell and Benny Garrett each had two for Meadowbrook.

Cincinnati Continues Hot Streak With Win

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

The duel in the Dome didn't quite measure up to its billing, but Jim Merritt will settle for the same finish all summer long.

Merritt, Cincinnati's gifted left-hander, and Houston fireballer Larry Dierker, put 8-2 records on the line in an eyeballto-eyeball pitching confrontation at the Astrodome Friday night.

The Reds battered Dierker for 11 hits in seven innings, but Merritt weathered 10 in going the distance for a 5-2 victory that made him the first ninegame winner in the majors this season.

The victory, coupled with Los Angeles' 1-0 loss to Atlanta, gave the Reds a 6½-game bulge over the second place Dodgers in the National League West. San Francisco slugged San Diego 9-4; the Chicago Cubs topped the New York Mets 6-4; St. Louis defeated Philadelphia 6-3 and Montreal whipped Pittsburgh 6-3 in other NL action.

In the American League, Baltimore downed Boston 7-4, the New York Yankees beat Cleveland 7-4; Detroit edged Washington 3-2; California nipped Minnesota 3-2; Oakland outscored the Chicago White Sox 9-8 and Kansas City trimmed Milwaukee 6-3.

Merritt struck out six on the way to his third consecutive victory and eighth in his last nine decisions as the Reds handed Houston its fourth loss in a row.

"They just hit my mistakes," said the Houston ace, who struck out eight but was hit freely before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh. His earned run average soared to 3.08 while Merritt's dipped to 2.60.

Tony Perez and rookie Bernie Carbo each socked Dierker's mistakes for homers as the Reds overcame an early 1-0 deficit. Perez, ending an 0-for-11 famine, touched off a three-run Cincinnati burst in the fourth with his 14th homer of the year. Carbo's seventh homer, a tape-measure shot with the bases empty in the sixth, wound up the scoring.

Pat Jarvis stopped Los Angeles on five hits and Hank Aaron drove in the Braves' run with a third-inning single off rookie Sandy Vance.

Felix Millan's single, also in the third, was the only other hit off Vance in the seven innings he pitched.

Ken Henderson's second grand slam homer of the season, an eighth inning shot off Tom Dukes, wrapped up the Giants' victory over San Diego. Catcher Dick Dietz, who committed two run-costing passed balls in the first inning, bounced back with a two-run homer in the fifth that sent the Giants ahead to stay.

Jim Hickman delivered three runs with a homer and double as the Cubs subdued the Mets behind Jim Colborn's one-hit relief pitching over the final 4 1-3 innings.

Julian Javier snapped a 3-3 deadlock in the eighth with a three-run double, carrying the Cardinals past Philadelphia. The Phillies had tied the game in the seventh on Johnny Briggs' two-run triple.

Mack Jones' two-run homer and a two-run triple by Jim Fairey helped Montreal build a 6-1 lead behind the five-hit pitching of Bill Stoneman.

R. C. Defeats Lions By 11-7

R. C. Cola pushed over seven runs in the first two innings and coasted to an 11-7 victory over the stubborn Lions Friday in the North State Little League.

The win brought the R.C. record to 3-1, while the Lions fell off to 1-3.

R.C. scored four times in the top of the fourth inning. Jeff Bailey reached on an error and Gordon Sutton was safe on a fielder's choice. Both advanced on a wild pitch, but Ricky Bolonde was hit by a pitch loading the bases. Billy Ellington then cracked a grand - slam home run for the 4-0 lead.

The Lions struggled back in the bottom of the first to tie it up however. Harry Pair doubled and Jeff Smith reached on an error. Connor Merritt doubled, scoring Pair. Jim Averette got a hit, bringing Smith home. Wright Hooks got another hit, and that brought Merritt across and moved Averette to third. He scored on a wild pitch with the tieing run.

In the second, R.C. came up with three runs to lead 7-4. Bailey doubled and took third on a wild pitch. David Dixon walked and stole second as Bailey stole home. A wild pitch moved Dixon to third, and Sutton walked. He also stole second, and both scored on Bolonde's double.

In the bottom of the frame, the Lions tried to come back again, but got only one run. Pair reached on an error, going all the way to second. He gained third on a wild pitch and scored on a double by Smith.

R.C. added another run in the third. Mitchell Harris singled and stole second. Bailey slammed a triple, and that brought Harris in for an 8-5 lead.

The Lions added another run in their half of the third. Merritt singled and took second on a wild pitch. He scored on an error on the play.

In the fourth, the Lions closed the gap to 8-7 with another run. Dale Steele bunted his way aboard and Smith reached on a fielder's choice. Merritt doubled to score Steele.

R.C. closed out the scoring in the sixth with three more runs. Dixon walked and moved to third on a pair of wild pitches. Sutton also walked, and stole second. Ellington singled in Dixon, and an error let Sutton come in. Another miscue scored Ellington.

Bailey, Ellington and Harris each had two hits for R.C., while Merritt had three and Wright Hooks had two for the Lions.

Toomey In Peace Corps

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Years ago, before Bill Toomey won the Olympic decathlon Gold medal and set the world record, his dream was to travel the underprivileged nations of the world and spread the gospel of sports.

He's finally getting his chance.

Toomey, a 31-year-old school teacher, told The Associated Press by telephone Friday from his Santa Barbara home:

"I just got a personal letter from the President confirming my nomination and I'm ready to go." President Nixon's note congratulated Toomey for accepting the post of adviser of the sports program for the Peace Corps.

"You remember, years ago," he said, "I thought of a 'Sports Corps' of athletes who could go around the world and teach peace through sports. I know it sounds square but I think it can work."

Toomey said the Peace Corps' new director, Joe Blatchford, "has a good grasp of the situation—that sports guys have a lot to offer. We're planning a series of summer outings to other countries. Volunteers won't have to donate two whole years; just part of the summer."

As a coach for the Peace Corps Toomey may now be considered a pro and thus no longer an amateur. Even so, his interest in competing has apparently waned. He has won the national AAU decathlon title for the past five years but hasn't filed an application for this year's meet.

Toomey doesn't know his status for competition but indicated he may be through.

"I'm kind of sad about that," says the 6-foot-1, 195 pounder with a master's degree in education.

Pembroke Wins

WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP) — An excited Pembroke State University baseball team, champion of NAIA Area 7, will be packing its bags soon for a trip west to the national finals for small colleges.

Pembroke romped over Fairmont State of West Virginia, 6-1, Friday night to win the right to represent the area in the Phoenix, Ariz., tournament June 8-13.

The North Carolina team now has a 24-10 record, winning its last 10 games in a row. Fairmont finished its season with a 19-5 record.

Pembroke came up with a combination of hitting and pitching to defeat the Falcons. Preston Douglas, Tammy Ham and Vic Barberousse each collected two hits, and pitcher Ronnie Chavis scattered eight hits and struck out seven.

In afternoon games Friday in the double - elimination tournament Pembroke downed Pfeiffer of North Carolina 3-1 and Fairmont whipped Pfeiffer 7-0.

Flood's Desires Sought By Court

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What does Curt Flood want?

That's the question that has been kicked around this week outside the courtroom of Judge Irving Ben Cooper, who is hearing the suit against baseball in which the former St. Louis outfielder contends the sport operates in restraint of trade through the reserve system.

In developing their case, Flood's attorneys have called on Flood, Jackie Robinson, Hank Greenberg and Jim Brosnan, all former players, who condemned the reserve system for being weighted in favor of the owners and, therefore, unfair to the players.

Overlooked, generally, has been the fact that no one is calling for the total abolition of the reserve system—only modification. That's what Flood wants—a more reasonable and less restrictive system that corrects the owner-player imbalance.

During the week, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, the organization that is footing the bill for Flood's suit, took the witness stand and told the U.S. District Court hearing what the players and Flood want.

He did so by talking about the modifications that have been proposed by the players in contract negotiations with the owners. If this trial were to establish a ruling that ultimately led to revision of the reserve system it likely would take its form from the base of those suggestions.

The main provision calls for a clause that, instead of containing an option on a player's service for life, reduces it to a specific number of years, the player after that juncture "to be given an opportunity to establish his market value by obtaining bids from other clubs."

The owners contend it would cost the club that originally signed the player the money it had spent in training the player. They also contend that under that provision all talent would gravitate to the wealthiest clubs.

Miller has added two qualifying provisos to attack those problems:

After the player had established his market value, his original team would have to right to retain him—and, therefore, not lose its training investment—by matching the bid. And no one club would be permitted to sign more than a given number of players in any period of time.

Rod And Gun: Only One Admits Woodcock Hunts

By ROD AMUNDSON

Apparently there aren't many woodcock hunters in North Carolina — or if there are, they prefer to remain anonymous. Two weeks ago this column made an appeal for woodcock hunters to send their names and addresses to the Wildlife Commission to help out with a Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife surrvey of woodcocks and woodcock hunting. Thus far only one has sent in his name. There is still plenty of time, however. The questionnaires won't be sent out until late summer when the upcoming woodcock season and bag limits will be announced.

This little gem comes via the National Wildlife Federation's "Conservation News." A couple of quarts of oil were left running down the steps in wake of the Earth Day march on the Interior Department in Washington. Approaching a youthful member of the retiring crowd, a relatively high-ranking Interior official asked, "Are you going to clean up this oil?" And the youth replied, "Are you going to clean up the oil in the Gulf?" They both turned and walked away.

The 11th annual Conservation Roundup at Fontana Village last week was one of the meatiest ever held. As you would expect, the general theme was involved with the alteration of our environment. The papers were to the point and happily lacking in redundancy and the discussion was lively.

Ralph Andrews, former head of the North Carolina Recreation Commission, and now on the teaching staff at Western North Carolina University, came up with a bit of wisdom in his prologue address to the assembled scientists: "Let's not use the term 'termal pollution' until we are sure heat is really a water pollutant, and meanwhile call it 'thermal effect.'"

The Evinrude Motor Company, which ought to know, has a recommendation for prolonging the life of your outboard motor. Each time you use it, disconnect the fuel line where it attaches to the motor and let the engine run dry. This will clear the fuel line and carbureator of gasoline that might become stale before the next time the motor is used. On next use the gasoline coming into the motor will be fresh and clean, and will be easier to start.

In case you had forgotten, North Carolina has a law protecting sea turtles. Passed by the 1967 General Assembly, the law makes it illegal to molest any kind of sea turtles, their eggs, and their young from May through September. These sea-going reptiles lay their eggs along the beaches during late May and early June, and hatching occurs during August and September. Most sea turtles, especially the green turtle, are on the endangered species list.

And if you are a crow hunter, bear in mind that all hawks and owls are under complete legal protection. Hawks and owls are natural enemies of crows, and for years have been wantonly shot in connection with crow hunting. By implication the law prohibits the use of live hawks or owls as crow decoys.

If you think you are pretty handy with a fishing rod, you may want to enter the bass and rockfish angling tournament at Kerr Reservoir June 13 and 14. The Henderson Jaycees are sponsoring the event. Top prize for either striped or largemouth bass is a boat and outboard motor plus a 35-inch-high trophy. Entrance fee is $7.00, and you can get your entry blank and more details by writing Henderson Jaycees, Box 197, Henderson 27536. One of the prizes is an original painting of a striped bass done by the Wildlife Commission's Duane Raver, whose color illustrations on WILDLIFE IN NORTH CAROLINA and other magazines have made him nationally famous.

Governor Bob Scott is proclaiming the month of June as Recreation Month in North Carolina. Besides playing golf, swimming, hiking, picnicking, and other outdoor activities, several millions of Tar Heels will be fishing and boating. And the week ending July 4 is National Safe Boating Week, which reminds us that a safe return is the most important part of a boating trip.

String Of Bass

Baltimore Jones shows off this string of four bass he caught recently while fishing in the Tar River between Falkland and Greenville. The largest of the four weighed between seven and eight pounds. He used a Shuman fly and a number six hook for the catches. (Reflector Photo)

Tar Heel Outdoors: The Appalachian Trail

FONTANA DAM, N.C. — We had left Spence Field Shelter on the Appalachian Trail in a slow rain and dense fog. Three of us had hiked the five miles to Mollies Ridge Shelter, lunched on pemmican and beef jerky, and had set out again for our overnight camp at Birch Spring Gap shelter.

It was impossible to know whether it was raining or merely water dripping steadily from the trees. To our right, Tennessee fell away into the mist. On the left, North Carolina was convoluted mountains in the early burst of spring.

Sudden movement on the path ahead stopped Annette Rhinehart dead in her tracks. We just have seen them at the same time, because instantly I whispered for Julian Rhinehart, behind me, to stop.

Seven young, wild Russian boar rooted and frolicked directly in our path. Through the fog we could distinguish stripes that mark all inmature boar. Then, off the trail in thick cover, we saw the adults. Three of them. Great black hulking masses of bristled wild animal. Their deep gutteral grunts now rolled out of the fog and down the slopes. Incredibly they did not smell or see us.

With mouths agape we watched for several minutes — curious, but cautious — forgetting the cameras that hung from our necks. Then we rememberd and tried for shots through the fog. Someone made a noise in the brush and one adult raised her head, grunted and trotted away with her tail erect and the little tuft on the end wagging. The others followed in a sudden granting rush down the mountain.

I do not know how frequently boar are seen by Appalachian Trail hikers in the Smokies. Probably not often. However, on this trip, my first effort at backpacking, we saw boar sign almost constanly along the trail between Spence Field Shelter and Shuckstack Mountain near Fontana Dam where our hike ended. Again, just after leaving Birch Spring Gap shelter, we saw, just briefly, another herd of boar in good light but in dense cover.

Even without the boar, this trip would have been memorable. It was a new experience. The prospect of meeting the challenge for comfort, with 35 pounds of equipment and food on my back, was exciting and for a long time had appealed to me. But mostly there was the wish for wilderness retreat, the getting out and away for a time that unexplainably nourishes the inner man.

Experts advise careful planning before attempting an initial overnight trip on the Appalachian Trail. Better still, go with experienced backpackers.

My guides were Mr. and Mrs. Julian Rhinehart. The Rhineharts are enthusiastic campers and amateur naturalists. From their home in Atlanta, they are frequent visitors to the Florida Keys, the Okefenokee Park in Georgia and the Smokies. They always camp on these trips, but they prefer wilderness camping to the developed campground.

Like most amateur naturalists, the Rhineharts are photographers. They especially like to photograph wildflowers and have developed into competent bontonists through their hobby.

Every mile of our trip bought a new set of flowers. High on the ridges, where spring had just arrived, serviceberry bloomed. Farther down the early species gave way to pink lady slipper, May apple, jack-in-the-pulpit, violets, and showy orchis. As we descended Shuckstack we saw flame azalea and dogwood, Indian paint brush and Solomon's seal.

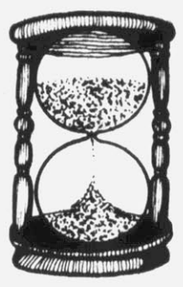

Backpacking equipment is a special kind of camping gear. The idea is to carry everything you will need for food, shelter and comfort with the least possible weight. My equipment is from Colorado Outdoor Sports Corp., P. O. Box 5544, Denver, Colorado. The basic gear includes a nylon pack, down sleeping bag with a foam pad, a mess kit and canteen. We did not need tents on this trip because we utilized shelters that are located along the trail at intervals of about a day's hike.

Most experienced backpackers are fussy about weight and insist that unnecessary items be left at home. One told me, in fact, that he cut the handle off his toothbrush.

Menu planning for a trip such as ours is most important. The Rhineharts handled this detail and provided us with tasty meals. Dinner one night was country ham and instant grits, split pea soup, Pop Tarts and coffee. We breakfasted on Start, instant oatmeal and raisens with Slim Jim sausages, and feasted one night on a freeze-dried delight called Lipton Chicken Baronet.

The Appalachian Trail Conference, 1718 N. St., N. W., Washington, D. C. 20036, is the source for information. For backpacking trips in Tennessee, North Carolina and Georgia, hikers should purchase "Suggestions for Appalachian Trail Users," at 35 cents.

Lone Sailor Making Return Trip To Japan

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) From the ditty bag:

Miyoshi Takeuchi, who sailed his 26-foot sloop Gametuya II across the Pacific from Japan to San Francisco last year, left recently on the return trip. This solo voyage, like the other, is expected to take months. The sloop has no engine, no refrigeration and very little food storage space. His water supply will be only 35 gallons. As Takeuchi explained it: "The water I must use very sparingly. It is not true that you can catch rainwater at sea and use it. By the time it gets down to the boat, it is already too salty."

Coast Guard requirements for mooring a boat in federal anchorages in New York and Miami waters give a pretty good idea of what's needed to moor a boat anywhere in tidal waters. Mooring and anchorage gear must meet these definite requirements before a permit is issued: 1. All anchor weights and floating mooring buoys must be connected by anchor chains. 2. Anchor chains must be at least three times as long as the mean high water depth in the anchorage. 3. Specific sizes of chain and weights of anchors are required for boats of specific lengths. 4. Mooring buoys must be white and bear permit number so it can be clearly seen. Buoys must extend at least one foot above the surface of the water.

—Latest small craft chart issued by the Coast and Geodetic Survey covers the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway in Texas from Stover Point to Port Brownsville. The chart shows a large potion of Padre Island, a national seashore preserve, and also includes the ports of Isabel and Brownsville. Aerial photography was employed in development of the new chart (898-SC).

—Johnson Motors has introduced a "115-plus" horsepower outboard motor designed for high-performance competition. Dubbed the "Stinger," the motor uses many of the components found on Johnson's stock 115 horsepower Sea-Horse. The exhaust system, race tuned for maximum efficiency, is an internal type that greatly reduces the noise usually associated with competition outboards.

—The Coast Guard reports that nationwide, boating accidents in 1969 declined slightly from the previous year despite an increase in boat registrations, but accidents, fatalities and property damage increased in the South Central region.

Eastern Plains All-Conference

Every team was represented in the All-Conference selections of the Eastern Plains Conference baseball team. Conference champ Greene Central had three players named, as did Hobbton, Southern Wayne, Charles B. Aycock, North Lenoir and Northern Nash.

Farmville had two players selected, while Southern Nash had one.

Selected to the team as pitchers were Johnny Johnson of Greene Central, who finished 7-1; Donnie Strickland, Hobbton, 4-3; Lin Griffin, Southern Wayne, 4-4; and Fred Sauls, Farmville, 5-4.

Infielders chosen were Larry Locknay, Hobbton, who batted .240; Robert Pittman, Aycock, .428; Cloyce Wilson, Farmville, .240; Robert Ivey, Greene Central, .348; Troy Eason, North Lenoir, .461; Buddy Davis, Aycock, .406; Tonny DeGrechie, Southern Wayne, .390; Frank Hedgepeth, Northern Nash, .442; Donnie Harris, Greene Central, .290; Greg Pope, Aycock, .320; and Bruce Maye, Northern Nash, .286.

Outfielders making the list were Lonnie Lucas, Southern Nash, .360; Cliff Cashwell, North Lenoir, .300; Randy Brigman, Hobbton, .340; Danny Price, Northern Nash, .370; Lloyd Earl Wiggins, North Lenoir, .320; and Bruce Sasser, Southern Wayne, .310.

Cobia Fishing Along The Coast

By FRANK SWANSON

Bogue Sound, and Newport River have been producing hard fighting cobia for many happy anglers these past few weeks. On Sunday, Robert Ball, Salisbury, boated a 61 pounder. A 48 pounder was pulled aboard by Henry Coltrain, LaGrange, at 59 bouy in Taylor's Creek, at Beaufort.

On Tuesday, Ken Nelson, Winston - Salem, had his fun with a 28 pound cobia from the Newport River Bridge. Veteran fisherman, Pete Allred, Morehead, put three in the boat last Monday, weighing, 44, 33, and 20 pounds. The anglers are using mostly spots and squid for bait.

Blue marlin are getting warmed up for the annual Blue Marlin Fishing Tournament, which will begin on Monday, June 15. Fishermen are anxious to get started, and so are the marlin! Col. H. V. Lundin S. Londonderry, Vt. boated Morehead City's fifth blue marline of this season, Thursday, aboard the Morehead City Yact Basin berthed, Tripoli, skippered by Del Willis. The marlin weighed in at 213 pounds.

Oceanana Pier operators report that the fishing has been good over the week - end. Max Lee, Clayton, N. C. landed a nice 10 pound blue fish on Sunday morning. Also Sunday, John Devane, Raleigh, a veteran king mackerel fisherman, made another hit with a 22 pound king. Sea mullets, spots, and large hog fish have been hitting well over the weekend. With good cloudy water, the sea mullets hit best from the ocean piers. Monday, pier fishing was producing sea mullets and spots.

Sports fishing on the party boats have been of mixed variety. King mackerel catches over the past few days have been from 10 to 60 per boat, depending on where the skippers took their boats. Big Blue fish were popular over the past several days, along with the hard - fighting amberjacks. The boats that did bottom fishing had several hundred pounds of sea bass and porgies. George Walton, Jr., Burlington, pulled in a 4 pound spanish mackerel Sunday. Offshore, dolphin and tuna spotted the catches.

Summer Sand And Sun– An Irresistible Lure

FIVE . . . swim gracefully on the broad Pamlico River.

THINKING OF EXAMS . . . Pat Fallon sits on the sand along the Pamlico River, lost in her thoughts. She later admitted her thoughts were on final quarter examinations for which she had been studying for the past several days.

Text By Jerry Raynor

Photographs By Stuart Savage

THE FEEL OF THE SUN . . . and the wind on her face pleases Pat as she pauses to enjoy the breeze which plays with her long blond hair.

Final examination time at East Carolina University, according to most of the nearly ten thousand students studying and reviewing almost around the clock, always seems to fall on the loveliest days in May.

Regardless of their dedication to the idea of getting the best marks possible on exams, there is still the call of the sun and air and sea which seems to be heightened as summer draws near.

One student at ECU who managed to "take a break" in studies for a short time is 19 year old freshman Patricia (Pat) Fallon. With only an afternoon to spare, Pat knew she could not possibly get to one of the more distant seaside resorts of North Carolina.

But Pat is a determined young lady, and hit upon the idea of spending a few hours at Swan Point, on the Pamlico River, a place near enough to travel there and back in an afternoon, and yet a spot with the atmosphere of the seashore.

As these photographs show, Pat is a water lover and a lover of living things. She was delighted that ducks came by for her to gaze at, and later offer scraps of food to.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis D. Fallon of Fayetteville, Pat is a native of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and has called Atlanta, Georgia and Fayetteville home prior to coming to Greenville for studies. She has not yet chosen her major field, but may decide on history.

A tall blonde, Pat admits to loving the sun, and is happiest when outdoors — swimming, diving or sun bathing in the summer time; or engaged in hunting in the fall and winter. Last winter she spent much of her spare time in the woods hunting, listing bob cats, wild dogs, fox, deer, and crows as the game she was seeking.

In fact, Pat loves all sports and activities connected with out doors sports. Just now she is taking a senior life saving course at the university, along with studies in Sapnish, Psychology, and English.

In high school she was a member of the diving team, and also was active in a non-sport field, as a member of the school drama club. Another pasttime she enjoys very much when time permits is pen and ink drawing.

Saying she has a little sister now 16, Pat commented "I call her 'Baby Sister', but she doesn't like it and gets mad."

Pat is just one of the many students at East Carolina University who is looking forward to the golden days of summer when studies and exams can be put aside for a few brief weeks. She and her compatriots will once more find joy and relaxation in the pleasantly warm Carolina sun on one of the many beaches which stretch along the coast line — or soak up the tanning rays of sun on lawns in spare moments of helping around their parent's home or business.

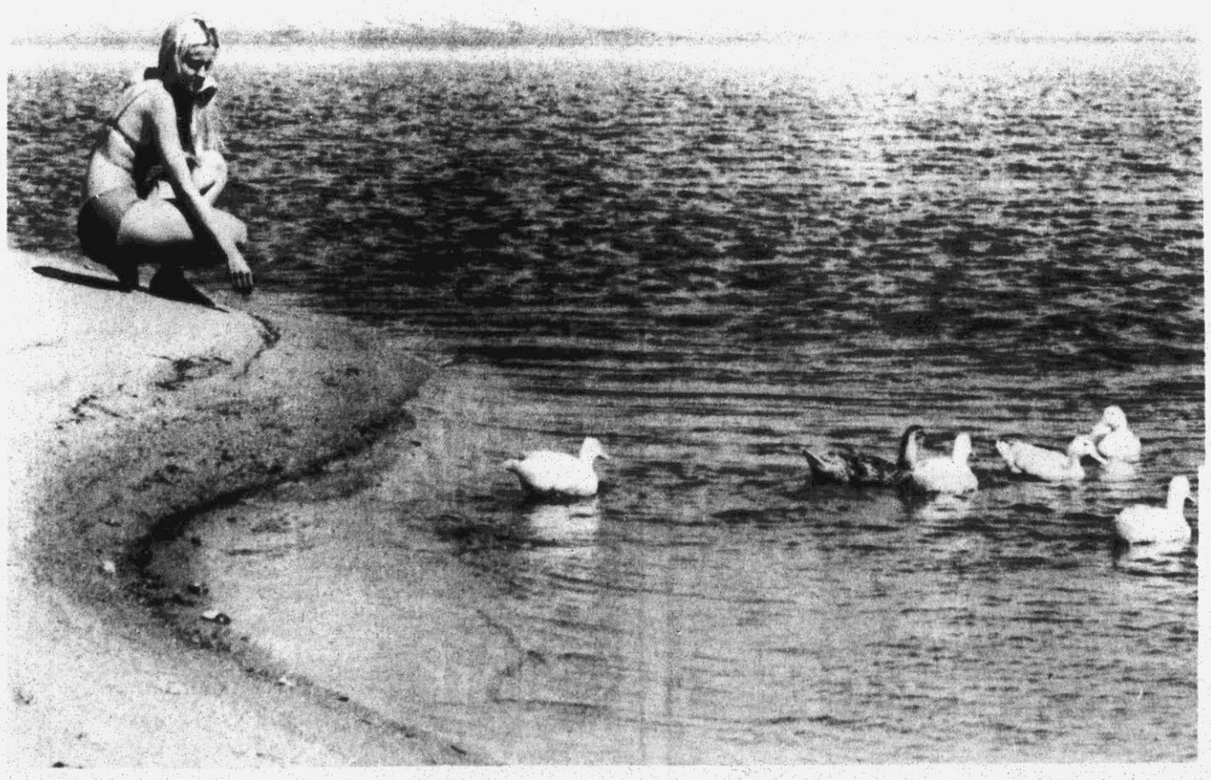

It is a wonderful time for young people — the last years before the demands of an adult life make summer time a season almost as busy as the other seasons of the year.

EXERCISING . . . even during an afternoon of relaxation, is important in keeping trim and in good physical condition.

SUN BATHING . . . is one of Pat's favorite way of passing time under the sunny skies of May.

TRYING TO GET ATTENTION . . . of the ducks swimming by, Pat calls to them gently. The ducks, however, at the moment seemed more interested in their swimming than in the promise of food.

After 26-Year Absence

Como Returning To Nightclub Scene

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — "Living is enjoying what you do," said Perry Como, the latest pilgrim to Las Vegas.

In his first night club appearance since he starred at the Copacabana here in 1944, the singer will open a three-week engagement at the International Hotel in Nevada's gambling capital for a reported $100,000 a week.

That's $99,250 more than he made at the Copacabana 26 years ago—but, of course, money isn't what it used to be. And it isn't just the money that is drawing Como back to a night club floor.

"To me life is fulfillment and acceptance," said Perry. "When you have been doing something for 30 or 35 years, it makes you feel good to find you're still accepted and welcomed at 58.

"In some careers, even bricklaying, you get too old.

"I like to work before a large live audience. I think it will be fun in Las Vegas. If not, I can always try the tables. If I gambled as much as I want to, I'd probably be the biggest bum in the world."

The greatest gamble Come ever made, however, was in 1933. He gave up a barbershop in Canonsburg, Pa., that was bringing him in $1 a week to become a singer for Tommy Carlone's band at $28 a week.

Over the years the easy-going singer won recognition as one of the best-liked performers in show business, a top star in radio, television and the recording field. Of the hundreds of records he made, a phenomenal 13 sold more than a million discs, including such hits as "Prisoner of Love," "Till the End of Time," "Sweet Sixteen," and "Ave Maria."

After 15 years of running his own television network variety shows, Perry wearied of the routine and the chore of running a production staff of 250 people. Now he picks his spots.

PERRY COMO

"I feel we had done just about everything," he explained. "Even when I cut my programs down to eight or 10 a year, I found that to get the kind of guests I wanted I had to make some trades—appear on their shows, too—that I was almost back on a weekly schedule.

"Getting the quality of guests I wanted just became too rough. If you want those people—the best you can get—you can't buy them. You have to do a trade with them.

"But I never did retire. I feel I'm too young to vegetate yet. Ideally, I'd like to do what I have been doing—do a couple of specials a year and a few guest spots and make more records."

Como sold his longtime home at suburban Sands Point and built a new one on the seashore a few miles from Palm Beach. He spends about 10 months a year there with his wife Roselle, fishing, playing golf and entertaining their six grandchildren.

Maggie's Oscar Is Baby's Toy

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL

ROME (UPI)—When they told Maggie Smith she had won the Hollywood Oscar as best actress, she said thank you and went back to bed.

Now that the Oscar statue itself has arrived, she lets the baby play with it.

It's not that she takes the award lightly. It's just that she still can't quite believe she won it. Nor can her husband, actor-director Robert Stephens.

"My major reaction was one of absolute astonishment. I didn't think there was a chance of winning it," she said, adding she expected it to go to a star, not an actress.

"It proves the Oscar is straight," her husband said.

The Stephenses, sure Maggie couldn't win, went to bed on the big night at their normal hour. Besides, they were opening the next evening in "The Beaux Strategem" at London's Old Vic.

Even when the Oscar came, they had to keep looking at it to believe it was there. "We put it in the kitchen, and in the bedroom. . .the baby plays with it," she said.

The couple was interviewed while celebrating the win in Rome for 10 days between appearances at the Old Vic.

Then it was back to London for rehearsals of a new production of "Hedda Gabbler." Work with England's National Theater will keep them tied up until the end of the year.

After that, it will be a toss-up on movies or theater.

"I do prefer the theater—it just depends what scrips come up," the actress said.

The bone-slim redhead, 36, grew up in Oxford and joined the school attached to the Oxford Repertory Theater when she was 16.

She said her husband is the main influence on her work. He played her lover, Teddy Lloyd, in her Oscar-winning "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

"We find it very easy to work together. We're always working things out together. It would be difficult to be married outside the profession," she said.

RAFER IN MOVIE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Rafer Johnson, former Olympic track champion, stars in "The Last Grenade."

Pirated Records Is Worldwide Racket

PALMA, Majorca (UPI)—The trail of the $100 million a year racket led through the United States, overseas to Iran and Taiwan and Hong Kong and the "detective" followed it with all the ingenuity of a James Bond.

But when a showdown came, as it occasionally does, he was unarmed and without even the force of law to help him.

The racket—incredibly almost unknown to the lay public—is the pirating of phonograph records and their illegal sale.

Your copy of the Beatles or the Rolling Stones or, for that matter, of Glenn Miller, Harry James or Doris Day—not to mention classical music—might have been pressed in a factory run by the Mafia in the United States, or by racketeers in the Middle and Far East.

You might have gotten it as a bargain but it could turn out to be an expensive bargain as time goes by if you are a music lover; the racket is growing so vast it is beginning to threaten the existence of the legitimate record industry and, of course, future recordings.

At the same time, this is depriving business composers and artists of some of the royalties they live on.

The story of the "record racket" and the fight against it was outlined before the International Music Industry Conference here by Adrian Sterlin, deputy director general of the International Federation of the Phonographic Industry, who remarked that some of the counter-espionage involved was reminiscent of the James Bond books.

CULP AS GUEST

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Robert Culp, co-star with Bill Cosby in the defunct "I Spy" video series, will guest star in an episode of "The Name of the Game."

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—NBC's "The Virginian" series will begin its ninth season in the fall under a new title, "The Men from Shiloh." James Drury and Doug McClure, program veterans, will remain as the Virginian and Trampas, respectively. Stewart Granger and Lee Majors will be important new players on a regular basis. There will be greater use of guest stars of major caliber. The time element will be advanced about a decade into the 1890s.

Film star Glenn Ford joins television's comedy-drama ranks in the 1971-72 season in a weekly half-hour series to be made by 20th Century-Fox Television for the CBS network. No title yet, but Ford will play a detective sergeant who operates a juvenile center.

Fred Astaire, who has has some television exposure this season in "It Takes a Thief," will appear in a western for the first time in one of the made-for-video films for ABC's "Movie of the Week" program. The film is a sequel to the recent "The Over-the-Hill-Gang" and is entitled "The Over-the-Hill-Gang Rides Again." Walter Brennan, Edgar Buchanan and Chill Wills of the first movie will appear in the sequel.

Works By Two Carolina Artists Added To Art Center Collection

BANARAS, INDIA. . .a holy town, is the subject of a black and white drawing in India ink by western North Carolina artist Phillip Moose.

Three works of art representing two well-known North Carolina artists—an easterner and a westerner — have recently been acquired by the Greenville Art Center for the permanent collection.

In the foreground, underneath a half-open waiting space created by overhead tracks, Dr. Speight shows several languid figures — standing, seated and lounging against a wall. This structure frames a short street leading to a rose-red brick building in the center background. The feeling is one of contemplation induced by a sense of relaxation. The subdued colors are hazy rich, like a late summer day.

Acquisition of this large oil from East Carolina University's artist - in - residence, noted for his paintings of rural North Carolina and the series of Pennsylvania scenes, was made possible by the contribution of funds by several members of the Greenville Art Society. Dr. James Stewart, faculty member at ECU, and Mrs. Nancy Monroe, sculpture wife of Dr. Edward Monroe, spearheaded the drive to make possible the purchase.

An India ink drawing of "Banaras", one of India's holy cities and a "Nail Construction", both by Phillip Moose of Blowing Rock, are now in the permanent collection as a gift from the artist. Moose recently had a successful one-man show here of paintings, drawings and constructions — based to a great extent on sketches he recorded on a round the world trip and views from his mountain home. A former teacher of art at Queens College in Charlotte, Moose now devotes his full time to art. The "Nail Construction" represents a new style for Moose. A background base of metallic colored composition resembling textured concrete is contrasted with a circular form of bright nails, a center cluster with the heads projecting and an encircling ring laid on their side. The nails in turn are surrounded by satiny black pebbles Moose picked up from a stream in Japan. This construction has textural beauty. The glint of silver in the nails, unadorned nature in the pebbles, and the pitted composition furnishes a marvelous contrast and is done with assurance. The other Moose gift, a hillside scene of Banaras showing the river and riverfront in the foreground, reveals the talent and experience of the artist in drawing. In black and white India ink, the teeming quality of an Indian religious retreat city is clearly felt in this work.

"We are very pleased to have these works in the center's collection," Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the center, remarked. "They add so much to our efforts to broaden our collection, and it is especially gratifying to have these examples from native North Carolina artists." — JERRY RAYNOR.

BOOK NEWS

Whatever the condition of the movie industry today, we can certainly thank it for making household words of the titles of many of our most enjoyable library books. For example, before United Artists began filming, whoever heard of Chitty Chitty Bang Bang? Answer: only hundreds of car-crazy kids and James Bond fans. But now that the movie is out, millions of people know this magical car by the catchy title tune. Whether or not you've seen the movie version, Ian Fleming's book will prove to be a fantastic story in the typical Fleming style — full of brilliant imagination, fast asides, and humorously accurate details.

Contrary to popular opinion, the Walt Disney Studios did not make up the story of the one hundred and one dalmations. English novelist Dodie Smith (of I Capture the Castle fame) published the book called ONE HUNDRED AND ONE DALMATIONS in 1956. Dog lovers of all ages will enjoy reading about the exploits of dalmations Pongo and Missis as they search for their fifteen 'dognapped' puppies and successfully return to their human 'pets' with nearly a hundred puppies! And no reader will ever forget the wonderful dog magic of the Twilight Barking.

Walt Disney is also responsible for the renewed popularity of an old children's favorite — Mary Poppins. Pamela Travers' book of the same title relates the remarkable things that transpire during the time Mary Poppins served as nursemaid for the Banks family. This astonishing person blew in with an east wind and stayed until it changed; after that, life was never the same for Jane and Michael Banks. This is the kind of delightful nonsense that defies an age boundary of appreciation.

For anyone who has ever dreamed of turning his back on "Civilization" and living off the land, My Side of the Mountain provides that vicarious experience. The movie was entertaining, but the book, by Jean George, is much more than that. Written in diary form, young adventurer Sam Gribley emerges as a true personality. It is a convincing story of Sam's struggle for survival, his dependence on nature, his animal friends, and his ultimate realization that he needs human companionship.

Finally, here is a reverse twist to the movie from book theme. Some years ago, Hollywood writer-producer Joseph Krumgold made a documentary film in New Mexico about a boy named Miguel Chavez. After it was all finished, Krumgold found that there was a lot more he wanted to say about Miguel than he could get in a picture; so he wrote a book called . . . And Now Miguel. The resulting book is a memorable and deeply moving story of a family of sheepherders in which Miguel, neither child or man, tells of his great longing to accompany the men and sheep to summer pasture, and expresses his need to be recognized as a maturing individual.

Music In The N.C. Mountains

BURNSVILLE, N. C.—"Music In The Mountains" is being added to the growing list of cultural activities providing outlets for musical groups in the mountains of Western North Carolina.

This non-profit organization has it's focal point in Yancey County and is under the honorary chairmanship of Mme. Lili Kraus.

Four musical weekends with outstanding artists is planned for the summer season. The weekends are designed to bring together persons from the eastern U. S. who are interested in chamber music — either as performers, students or listeners, and for informal playing.

This summer's scheduled program is the first step in what is hoped will become an annual rendezvous of chamber music lovers in the area.

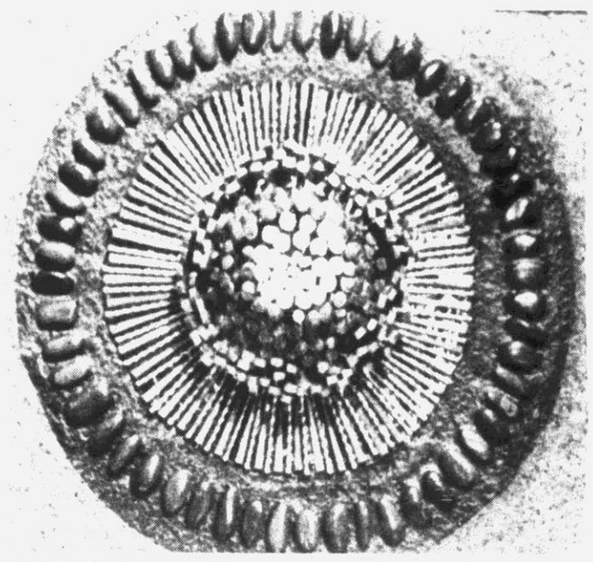

"Music In The Mountains" will not be competitive with other music camps in the area as emphasis will be on small group ensembles. The only other place such activity is currently offered in the U. S. is at Marlboro, Vermont.

Weekends slated for the summer music series are July 18-19, 25-26, and August 1-2 and 8-9. Each weekend will be climaxed by a free, informal concert performed by well known musicians on Sunday afternoon in Burnsville. Full details will be announced later.

Persons interested in becoming a patron or to participate professionally or as a student are asked to write to Mrs. Joan Reeve, Box 803, Burnsville, N.C. 28714 or telephone 682-2578.

Art Festival Reception Rescheduled

The public reception for Pitt County School children at the first Pitt County Festival of Arts will be held today from 2:00 p.m., until 5:00 p.m., at the Greenville Art Center, weather permitting. The program, scheduled for last Sunday, was cancelled due to inclement weather. County Superintendent Arthur Alford will M.C. the children's program of dance, music and art. The public is invited to attend.

Two From ECU At Symphony Auditions

Mrs. Jackie Rausch, soprano, and Mrs. Betty Aldridge, mezzocontralto, both voice students at East Carolina University's School of Music, were among the many music students, vocal and instrumental, appearing at the N.C. Symphony Young Artists auditions held recently in Chapel Hill.

The auditions, which are held each spring, are designed to hear high school and college music talent for selecting three finalists to appear with the N.C. Symphony Orchestra in the following concert year as soloists.

The three selected this year were all from the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston - Salem. They are: Marsha Pobanz, from Hawaii; Cynthia Mechem of Kingsport, Tennessee, high school sophomore pianist; and bass - baritone John Prince Williams of Raleigh.

Since the first auditons were held in 1946, more than 100 young musicians have been given the opportunity to perform with the symphony. Pianist Jac McCraken, a senior at ECU, was a recent winner in the finalist selections and appeared with the orchestra in Greenville and throughout the state.

One out of every 10 automobiles in the United States is registered in California.

Collegium Musicum Plays Renaissance Music Today

The emphasis is on Renaissance Festival music this afternoon as the Collegium Musicum presents a concert of all European music at 3:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

"Much of the music will be old English music," John Tyson, director of the instrumental section observed. "There will also be French, Italian and Spanish selections in our program. We have planned a group of songs for the public which we feel will have an immediate appeal."

The Collegium Musicum at East Carolina University has been one of the most consistently active groups of music makers in Greenville. Composed of young players and singers from the university and with a few from the community, this group has appeared at art openings, at ECU theater productions, and in various other community and university affairs in music recalling the glory of medieval pagentry.

Kathleen Daughtry is director of the vocal group, which includes male and female voices. For today's concert, the vocalists will be supplemented by members of ECU's Women Chorus under the direction of Miss Virginia Linn.

"Since today's concert is a family affair, with selections which we feel will please children as well as adults," Tyson commented, "the players will be dressed in traditional Renaissance costumes. As usual, they will be performing on historical instruments which were typically used in European music circles in the days of the Renaissance.

These include the "soft" instruments recorders and viols; and "loud" instruments the shawm, a forerunner of the oboe; the zink, sackbutt, an early type of trombone, and rankett, a type of bassoon. Other instruments will include the krumhorn, kortholt, and recorders and viols of various sizes and ranges.

Titles of selections planned for the concert are themselves intriguing and reveal subtle changes in the English language in the last few centuries. An example is "Susanna Fair Sometimes Assaulted Was..." Others are a French chanson "I Cannot Conceal It," "El Grillo" (the Cricket) by Flemish composer Josquim, Weelkes' English madrigal, "To Shorten Winter Sadness," and instrumental pieces such as a group of dances called "Terpsichore," a galliard "The Frog Galliard;" and an English conzonette by Thomas Morley "See Mine Own Sweet Jewel."

There is no admission charge to today's Collegium Musicum concert, and the public, including children, are invited to attend.

Greenville Day Trip Still Has Openings

There is still space available for a few additional art lovers to sign up for the Wednesday "Greenville Day" trip to the N.C. Museum of Art in Raleigh. James Cheatham III, chairman of the "Greenville Day" says "we can still take a few more reservations for the day-long trip." The group will travel to Raleigh by chartered bus, and will be the guests of the staff of the museum during the day. Included in the one day itinerary is luncheon at the Raleigh City Club, with a special guided tour of the museum at 2:00 p.m. Miss Jane Hall, native of Greenville and presently Art Editor for the News and Observer, is to be the honored guest of the group from Greenville. Anyone interested in joining those who have already signed up for "Greenville Day" are asked to call the Art Center, telephone 758-1946 between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and noon, or 2:00-5:00 p.m. Fee for the trip is $10.00.

GRADUATE TO BETTER PICTURES

One of the nice things about photography is that it can be enjoyed on any level from the simplest family pictures, record of special events, on up to the sophisticated demands of the professional art.
That's why photographic gifts go hand in hand with graduation. There's an appropriate gift for the graduate from junior high or high school, college or graduate school on our shelves . . . and there's no better time than these stepping stone days of change to begin a photographic hobby . . . or graduate to a higher level of the art.
Aside from gifts, be sure to make good use of that camera as a record of graduation days, in stills or motion picture film. Here are memories that can fade all too quickly as the young graduates scatter into new lives. Pictures make memories always fresh and green.
For that graduation gift for any young man or woman, boy or girl, you'll find the right selection in our varied displays, from the simplest automatic models to the finest precision equipment for the budding expert.

WHAT REALLY IS DRUG ABUSE?

Although commonly used by authorities to describe the indiscriminate use of those drugs associated with "turning on," "kicks," and "trips," it also is the unwise use of any drug. Too much aspirin, constant use of a nose spray excessive dependence on a cough syrup would all be good examples of drug abuse.

Actually, you abuse your body when you rely too much on over-the-counter, non prescription medications when you are sick. Rely instead on the knowledge and experience of your family doctor.

CHRYSLER Outboard
NEW FROM CHRYSLER!
MAGNAPOWER POWERHOUSES

Here they are—two of the hottest performing, smoothest operating out boards in the water—both featuring a trio of big-bore cylinders, and Chrysler's exclusive MAGNAPOWER ignition. This power pair will outrun anything in their power class. And MAGNAPOWER ignition makes them doubly dependable. With MAGNAPOWER, it's no work and all play, because you get easier starts and no miss idling. And, you can forget about spark-plug fouling. No other outboards combine this kind of power with smooth, quiet running performance. Come in and see the 120, 70, and our complete line of Chrysler outboards.

SOMETHING NEW:

In this day when franchising is reaching the good reputation it enjoys — it's great to find a truly good franchise that actually gives the franchisee a sound investment. One that offers him a very high and fast return on his investment dollar, without tying up the enormous capital that most franchises do. We have, unquestionably, the best opportunity for the small investor in a long time. You can work either part or full time and earn exceptionally high earnings. You do need at least $1895.00 cash to start. For further info., write including telephone to: Franchise Directors, P. O. Box 566, Salt Lake City, Utah. Dept. 588.

Hundreds Of Species Of Animals Face Extinction

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—If man is really propagating and polluting himself out of existence as many scientists say, he is pushing hundreds of species of animals over the edge into extinction first.

The federal government estimates that 76 kinds of mammals, birds, reptiles and fishes in the United States alone are either threatened with extinction or reduced to a perilous fraction of their once-vast numbers. Conservation groups estimate the number worldwide at more than 800.

They include such familiar animals as the American alligator, the eastern timber wolf, the giant California condor, the grizzly bear, the whooping crane, several varieties of whale, and even the national emblem, the bald eagle.

There are less than 100 California condors still in existence, and less than 70 whooping cranes left in the wilds.

Only a few hundred grizzlies still roam the mountains of Colorado, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. No one knows how many alligators are left, but poachers in the Florida swamps are killing them off at a perilous rate.

Heavy hunting has reduced the eastern timber wolf to about 300 to 400, all in Minnesota. Pesticides kill off the brown pelican. The whooping crane started dying when man took over its habitat. Ranchers shoot the bald eagle, mistaking it for the golden eagle, a threat to livestock.

Americans have already killed off one species and nearly stamped out another in some of the most awesome wildlife slaughter in history.

Once millions of passenger pigeons flew over parts of the continent in such numbers they darkened the sky. Tens of millions of American bison roamed the plains.

About 50 years ago the last passenger pigeon died in a zoo, and bison were reduced to a few hundred stragglers. The species was brought back from the edge of oblivion by a concerned public.

David Brower, president of the militant conservation organization Friends of the Earth, says worldwide the number of species and races known to be in danger of extinction is 861, and 131 have become extinct in the last 300 years.

Many Problems

These wild creatures face many problems: the loss of space to live, death through pollution and hunting, capture of specimens for zoos, the pet market and large scale research.

"If you add into this already unbalanced equation the incredible demand for skins, fur and feathers, prompted by the fashion and interior decorating market, then the outlook for wild creatures is very grim indeed," Bower said.

In the interest of saving these imperiled creatures, some of America's most fashionable women have sworn off furs in a pledge drive started here recently by Brower's group.

More than 1,500 persons have signed the pledge to stop buying the thousands of fashion and home products made from the skin, fur, feathers and horns of wild animals.

They include such names as actresses Lauren Bacall and Tammy Grimes, model Mimi London and Mrs. Jacob Javits, wife of the Senator from New York.

"We feel strongly that wildlife is of immense importance as part of the ecological community," said Joan McIntyre of Friends of the Earth.

"By cutting off the demand for wild animal products at the point of sale, we may achieve the time necessary to evaluate the world wildlife picture."

"Our only course if we wish to save the lives of wild creatures is to dissolve the market," said Mrs. John Fell Stevenson, daughter-in-law of the late Adlai Stevenson, and one of the signers of the pledge.

It takes a lot of animals to make just one item. It requires 12 baby ocelots to make a coat, 10 lynx, 25 opossums and up to 40 raccoons.

Accountable If Under Influence

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—LSD users are legally responsible for any crimes thay commit in Texas while under the influence of the drug.

The state legislature has voted not to allow persons to be excused for crimes on grounds of intoxication or insanity brought on by use of dangerous drugs.

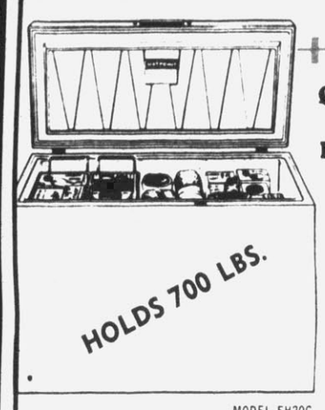

Brussels Plans Unite Police

BRUSSELS (UPI)—Police of Brussels' 19 neighborhoods are to be placed under one command after a wave of armed holdups in the Belgian capital in which at least one gang got away because of lack of coordination among the city's independent police forces.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR MRS. RICHARD NIXON

What can I do as a mother to help my nation?—Mrs. Mildred Power, Darautte, Ga.

● Become involved. Wherever human needs exist, there are vast opportunities for service. You and your family possess the gifts of time, talent, and willing effort to give to those people in need of them.

FOR GEORGE P. CRESSMAN,

Director, U.S. Weather Bureau

Which of the 50 states has the greatest annual precipitation?—Ann Brady, Biloxi, Miss.

● Louisiana has the greatest average annual precipitation, 56.85 inches. Averages vary from about 60 inches in the southeastern portion of the state to about 50 inches in the northwest. Wetter than any part of Louisiana, however, are the coastal areas of western Washington and southeast Alaska, where the normal fall exceeds 90 inches per year. The wettest spot in the world is Mt. Waialeale, Hawaii, with an average annual rainfall of 460 inches.

FOR JOE CRONIN,

President, American Baseball League

What reasoning prevails that denies a batter credit for an R.B.I. when hitting into a double play?—J. Gallagher, Lancaster, Pa.

● Until approximately 15 years ago, a batter grounding into a double play was entitled to a run batted in if a runner scored on the play. The rule was changed because the opinion was finally accepted that a batter hurt his team more than he helped it in such instances.

FOR BARNABY CONRAD,

author and bullfighting expert

In a bullfight, why is it that the bull never charges the matador, even at times when the matador is standing in front of the muleta?—Tim Rhodes, Midland, Texas

● Over a period of 15 years I, personally, have received from bulls' horns two broken ribs, one goring that fractured my right knee, another of nine inches that traversed my upper left leg, and assorted minor punctures, plus the fact that several fellow bullfighting friends have been killed. Therefore, I can only assume that one of us has been misinformed somewhere along the line.

FOR J. EDGAR HOOVER,

Director, FBI

I would appreciate your opinion as to how extensively the efforts of the Communist Party have contributed to the riots, both on and off the campuses.—Vernon Roberts, Jr., Carmichael, Calif.

● The recent riots in our country have resulted largely from the activities of a number of extremist individuals and groups who have little regard for our laws. Among such extremist groups have been the Black Panther party and the Students for a Democratic Society. The Communist Party, USA, has been intensely interested in such riots and works constantly to exploit them to its own advantage.

FOR LIZ CARPENTER,

author of "Ruffles and Flourishes"

If a married woman is ever elected President, will her husband be called the "First Man?"—Margaret E. Fish, Manchester, Conn.

● Maybe so—but to me, at least, the sobriquet will only rightly belong to Adam.

FOR ALDEN BERBER,

Chief executive, Boy Scouts of America

Are there Boy Scouts in all the states? What is the total? Which state has the fewest?—Mrs. J. Stoneman, Durham, N.C.

● There are Scouts in all states and 95 foreign countries. Total U.S. membership of Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers is more than 4.5 million. Wyoming has the fewest boys registered in Scouting with 6,663.

What in the World!

Hollywood Put-On Actress Brenda Vaccaro was the 129-pound body beautiful seductress in "Midnight Cowboy." But for her new part as Elliott Gould's spouse in "I Love My Wife," Brenda has to lose her shapely charms and put on extra pounds to show she's a good mother, housekeeper, and cook. To achieve her instant-frump look, Brenda was fitted out with padded undergarments, a disheveled wig, and even special cotton padding to fill out her naturally slim cheeks. By gaining the weight, Brenda almost loses her husband in the film and has to reverse the whole process to achieve the alluring look for which she is known.

Help Foreign Visitors with English Once a week, all over the country, some 2,500 Americans get together for an hour's chat with foreigners in English. It's a nationwide volunteer program called English-in-Action, specially designed to help foreign-speaking people brush up on our language. More than 40 groups meet in churches, schools, libraries, or wherever space is available. Although it's essentially a group activity, pairs of people sit down and just talk about anything they wish. The foreigners, from more than 90 different countries, all read and write English but because of their associations with universities, firms, or consulates here, need to improve their command of our language. What's in it for the volunteers? According to the director of the national headquarters of English-in-Action (1 East 54th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10022) ". . . some wonderful friendships have evolved, several marriages, not to mention international understanding." More volunteers are always needed.

Dutch Babies In Holland, 40 percent of all deliveries are performed by midwives, according to Medical World News. The infant-mortality rate is half that of the U.S.—13.4 per 1,000 births. Sixty percent of deliveries are in the mothers' homes. No drugs are prescribed, only vitamin-fortified milk and a low-salt diet. No anesthesia or interference is the general rule. New mothers are not allowed out of bed for four days; and they are provided with special "household helpers-practical-nurses (kraamverzorsters) for the first 10 days. That's socialized medicine, Mom.

Well-Matched Cruisers Although they don't actually use a computer to get the right girl-boy balance, the Windjammer Cruise organizers come close to it. For more than 20 years they have used computer-type figuring to get an even number of guys and gals on each of their three sailing ships which ply Caribbean waters. The Miami-based company assembles its passengers in Martinique, French West Indies, before taking to the high seas. Officials scan the passenger lists to make sure each ship's 60 passengers represent a good male-female balance. After all, it would be a shame to leave a lady on board alone while the other passengers were out dancing under a tropical moon.

Programmed for sailing fun

"Excuse Me, But Mia

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

Member of a famous family, actress Tisa Farrow

DESPITE all the benefits of being a member of a famous family, Tisa Farrow finds it tough at times.

Who else can say that Frank Sinatra was her brother-in-law, that Mia Farrow is her sister, that famed composer-conductor André Previn is practically a member of the family, and that her mother, Maureen O'Sullivan, was "Jane" in the famous Tarzan movie series?

But it puts a severe professional burden on this 18-year-old actress to make just as big a name for herself. Or does she really want to have a "big" name?

Sometimes she thinks she does, and her first film role, in Cinema Center's "Homer," may just do it. In the meantime, Tisa is vacillating between writing and acting and trying to step out of her sister's giant shadow.

Tisa and Mia Farrow are closer now than when they were youngsters, but Tisa resents being questioned about her famous controversial sister. "When Mia was married to Frank Sinatra, people would always ask me, 'How's Frankie?' and things like that. I don't think that's fair," says Tisa.

And Tisa has been asked even more questions about her sister's current affair with André Previn. Mia recently gave birth to twins, and Previn acknowledged he is the father. "I think they will get married," says Tisa, "they really love each other."

I visited Tisa at her mother's Central Park West home in New York. After years of boarding schools, it wasn't surprising that she got her

End the Problem of Dry Skin

Unless you take particular care, low humidity, both indoors and out can easily rob your complexion of the precious moist oils quicker than the oil ducts of the skin can replace it, thus resulting in dry skin and the formation of wrinkles.

A little extra attention should be taken at this time of year by smoothing Oil of Olay over the face and neck daily before applying make-up. Oil of Olay is recommended because of its special properties that help nature to maintain the natural oil and moisture balance of the skin.

Beauty, the glow of a healthy complexion and protection of your skin from dryness are yours all year 'round when you use this unique tropical oil regularly. Skin beauty specialists are also recommending that Oil of Olay should be smoothed over the face last thing at night before retiring to give your skin the added benefit of nighttime care.

You Must Be Farrow's Sister" is struggling to achieve an identity of her own own pad in New York and lived alone until she was robbed not once, but twice. She then moved in with her mother.

Arriving a bit early, I ran into Tisa's boy friend, a pleasant young man named Terry Dene who, with Steve North, produced "Homer."

Tisa, whose real name is Theresa, but who is called Tisa by her friends and "Baby" by her family, is the youngest of seven children. She also considers herself the homeliest. I couldn't understand why. She has very pretty brunette hair, an angelic face with just enough freckles sprinkled over it, a well-proportioned and curvaceous figure, which is in such contrast to Mia's boyish appearance. She's 5'6" and measures 36-24-36. "But of course, all my weight is in the wrong places,'" she contends.

"Mia, the oldest of us girls, is the strongest and straightest. Prudence, who's now 21, is the spiritual one. She recently married and is working with Maharishi Mahesh Yogi in India. And Stephanie, two years older than I, is a model and lives in Manhattan." A brother Patrick, 26, is an artist. He's married and has two children and is presently working at a ski lodge in Vermont. Brother John, 23, is producing a movie in California. The oldest boy, Michael, was killed in an airplane crash in 1958.

The independence of the Farrow children can be traced to more than just changing times and the generation gap. Their father, the late John Farrow, former commander in the Canadian navy, writer, and film director, was an iron disciplinarian. Rebellion might have been inevitable, even without his untimely death when Tisa was 13 and Mia 18.

Growing up was not easy for Tisa. Born in Los Angeles, she was introduced to show business at an early age. Her mother became famous as "Jane" to Johnny Weissmuller's "Tarzan." John Farrow took his family with him wherever he traveled to foreign film locations. Thus Tisa received much of her education abroad.

She started her schooling when she was six, in Spain, where her father directed "John Paul Jones," and attended the American School in Madrid. Within three weeks she was asked to leave. "Every day a little boy boxed my ears," Tisa recalled vehemently. "So I screamed a lot! And finally, when that didn't work, I fought back!" As a result, Tisa was sent off to a convent school.

Once she was free of school, Tisa went about living and learning—her way. Lying about her age, she managed to get an assortment of jobs, which paid for acting lessons.

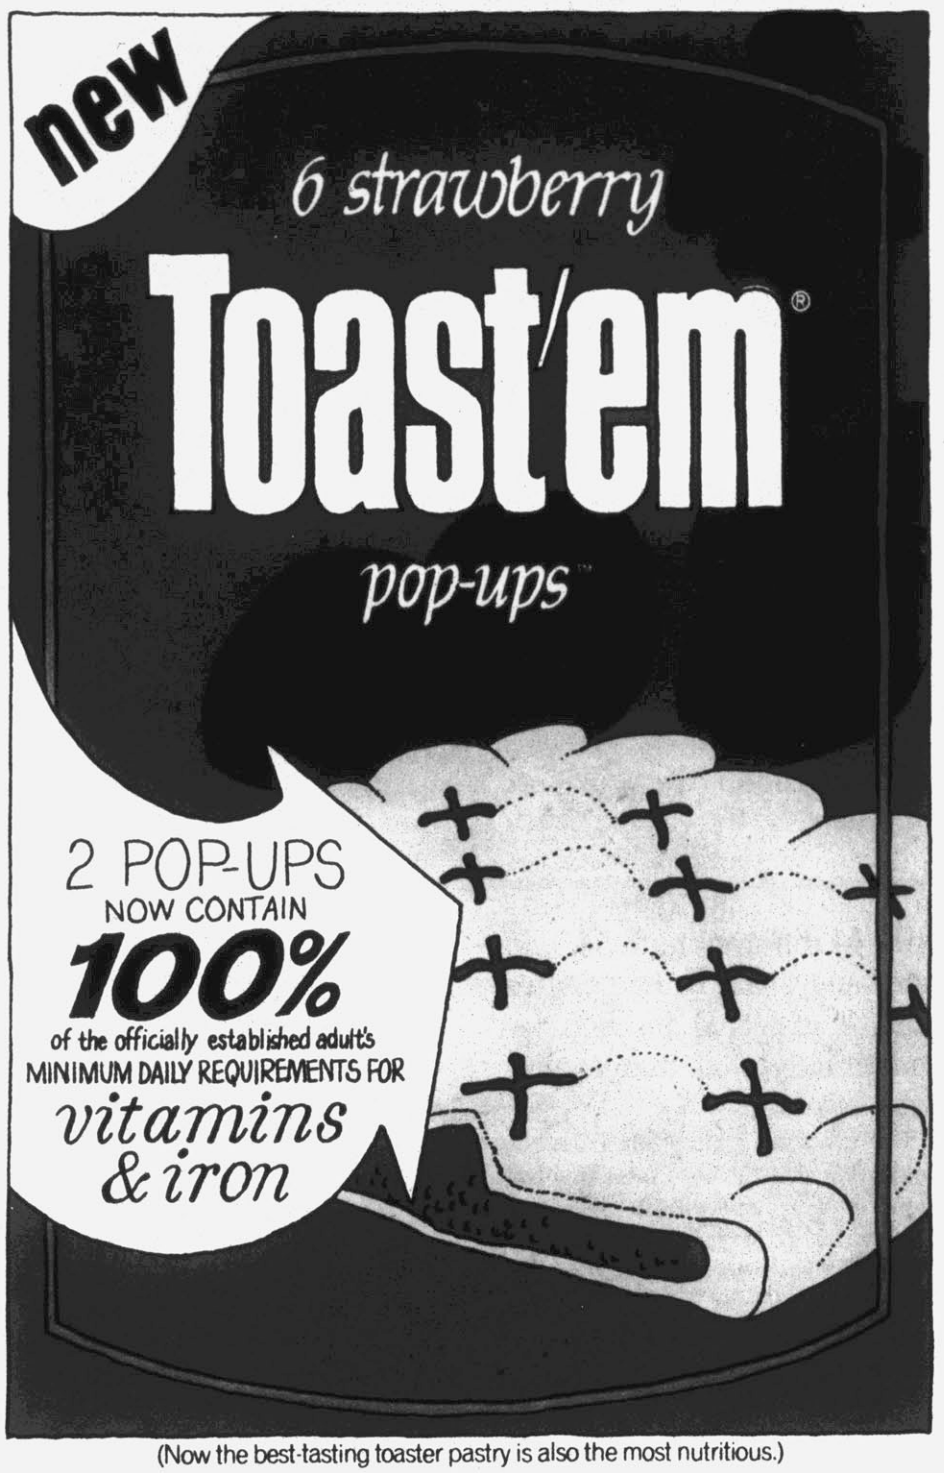

But Tisa would rather talk about the movie role in "Homer." She plays the girl friend of a Wisconsin farm boy who is alienated from his family. The conditions under which the film was shot were anything but easy.

"The first scene was shot outside, in freezing weather," Tisa recalled. "I was supposed to stand still while a real spider crawled up my arm and across my shoulder. And I was supposed to act like I didn't know it was there!"

And following the current movie trend, there is a nude scene in the film. Tisa was quite concerned about that, being a bit weight conscious as well as shy about appearing nude. "I knew about the scene when I took the part," Tisa said, "But I was still petrified. So the director agreed to shoot it on the last day, and then with only him and the cameraman around. I think they did it in good taste."

Today Tisa is delighted with the way things are working out, careerwise. Romantically, she's also content. She doesn't know whether she wants her relationship with Terry Dene to get to the marriage state or not, although she insists she firmly believes in marriage.

Tisa refuses to assume she's headed for stardom on the basis of the one film she has made and the three more she has signed to make. Certainly, she'd like to continue in movies. But if it doesn't work out that way, she insists it won't bother her. She's young, energetic, and has a whole life ahead, during which she can cast off the "Mia-Farrow's-sister" image and develop her own personality. ◆

CONGRESS VS. THE PENTAGON

Do We Need More Aircraft

As Congress considers another nuclear-powered flattop, two Senators present the

YES

By Sen. HARRY F. BYRD, Jr. (VA.)

Congress has been asked to approve funds for a third new nuclear carrier, under a five-year construction program to replace World War II-vintage aircraft carriers. Construction of the first of these Nimitz-class attack carriers began in 1968, and Navy officials warn that delays at this point could cause production shutdowns that would make the third carrier more costly.

In debate last year over appropriations for the second of the new carriers, critics charged in Congress that the Navy unnecessarily seeks to keep a fleet of 15 attack carriers because 15 was the number of battleships allotted the pre-World War Navy, and the carrier has become the new capital ship in the admirals' eyes.

Pentagon spokesmen deny this. They say the Navy is required to maintain five carriers overseas at all times, and normal peacetime rotation means one carrier undergoing overhaul and another conducting training exercises for each one "on station."

The controversy affects not only our national security but our foreign policy as well.

TODAY many argue that the United States is overcommitted around the world. I am in basic agreement with that line of thought. We have mutual-defense agreements with 44 different nations. I do not believe the United States can be expected to shoulder indefinitely that many overseas burdens.

For example, I have felt from the beginning that United States involvement in a ground war in Asia was a grave error of judgment.

But I also believe in a strong defense. This country must not be put in the position of being forced to be inactive on the world scene because of weakness; on the contrary, we must be able to defend not only our own nation, but also our real interests abroad. No arm of our defense is more important than a modern Navy. I strongly agree with the statement last year by Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, who declared that "whoever controls the seas will control the overriding question of peace or war."

American troops ought not to be committed overseas except in the most extreme circumstances. But sea power is far more than a means of protecting troops abroad: it is our means of insuring that sea lanes of the world stay open to us, whatever the threat that is posed.

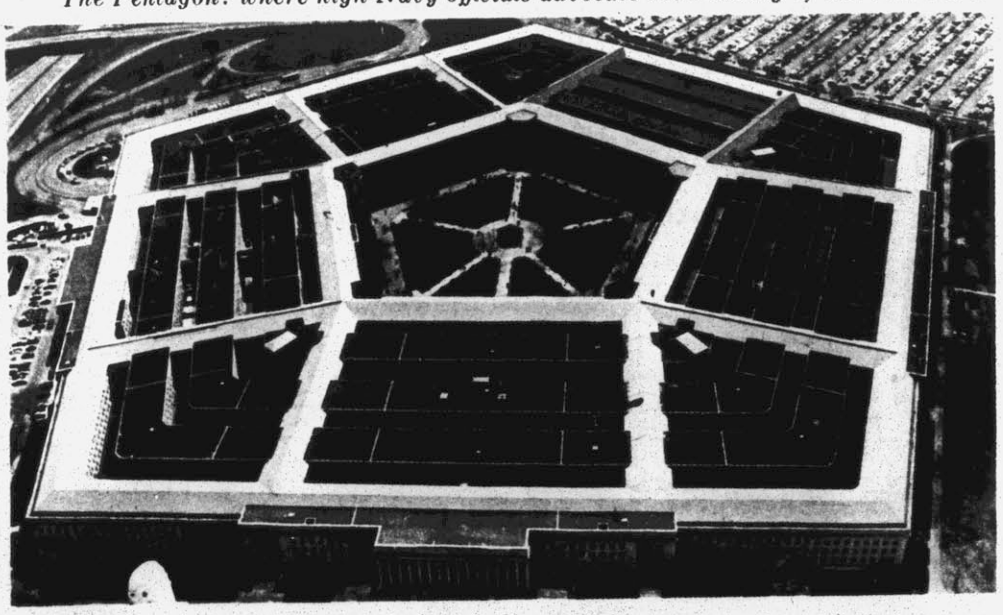

Within the fleet, the aircraft carrier is of supreme importance. It is our margin of superiority over the rapidly expanding Soviet Navy and our primary means of defense against missile-launching ships, submarines, or aircraft. Not even the opponents of new aircraft carriers contend that the United States can do without tactical air power. The real question is this: how do we move the aircraft into position when they are needed?

There is reason to doubt that land bases for tactical aircraft always will be available. When the Communists overran all of our bases in South Korea, the only sustained tactical air power available was carrier-based.

Since 1954, the United States has lost two-thirds of its overseas bases. The most recent loss is Wheelus Air Force Base in Libya, a fresh reminder that large investments in overseas installations can go down the drain without a shot being fired. The Libyan government simply demanded that we leave. Carrier-based aircraft will be important in filling the resultant gap now left in Mediterranean air cover.

Carrier-based planes have played an important role in Vietnam, and now that we are withdrawing our forces from Southeast Asia, I wonder what will happen to all those air bases we built over there. They cost us a lot of tax dollars.

The Pentagon: where high Navy officials advocate the building of more carriers.

Regardless of how you calculate the cost of overseas bases, they certainly involve a large outflow of dollars. And that adversely affects our balance-of-payments situation.

Arguments recently have surfaced to the effect that carrier-based tactical air power is two to three times as expensive as land-based planes. But this conclusion is based on false assumptions: namely, that we will have unchallenged access to the sea lanes, overseas base availability, prestockpiling of weapons, and an assured fuel supply—all at no cost.

But considerations of cost are by no means the whole story. The aircraft carrier is well suited to the new posture of the United States, the so-called "low profile." We must remember that carriers operate on the open sea, while the commitment of an air wing to a foreign base involves at least 5,000 men, in addition to the facility itself.

The carrier is a very versatile weapon. Its use is certainly not confined to the so-called "brushfire" conflicts but is adaptable—indeed, is essential—to maintaining our general superiority at sea. As the Soviets continue to focus their naval technology on advanced-weapons systems, we must retain the ability to outrange their missile threat with our carrier-based aircraft. Unless we wish to get out of the sea-power business entirely—and that would be to surrender our freedom of action as a nation—we had better keep modern carriers in our fleet.

Sometimes it is argued that the carrier is too vulnerable. It must be admitted, of course, that it can be attacked, just as any other ship can be attacked. But the carrier is the toughest of all our ships: not only is it protected by its own aircraft and escorts, but it is built to withstand attack. The fact of the matter is this: if we cannot protect the aircraft carrier, we cannot protect anything at sea and we may as well write off all sea transport, both Navy and Merchant Marine, both of which are vital to successful overseas strategy.

Opponents of new carriers contend that the main issue in the aircraft-carrier field is the size of the force—specifically, whether or not we need 15 carriers to protect our interests around the world. But I do not argue as to whether we need eight, 10, 12, or 15. The real question is whether or not we need a modern Navy.

Surely all agree by now that building aircraft carriers with conventional propulsion would be a serious error. We must have nuclear-powered carriers. Today the Navy has only one nuclear-powered carrier, the Enterprise. The Nimitz is being built, and a second Nimitz-class craft—the Eisenhower—was approved last year. Now funds are being sought to begin work on a third Nimitz-type carrier, and I believe they should be approved.

Some people have inveighed against the high cost of carriers. I do not deny that they are expensive, but sometimes the cost is exaggerated. It should be borne in mind that the cost of carriers during the 1962-1970 period totaled about $184 million per year. That is 10 percent of the Navy's ship-building account, and only 1 percent of the Navy budget.

Congress has an obligation to cut the fat out of any military budget. Last year I voted to reduce military spending by $6 billion. But in cutting the fat, we dare not cut the muscle. To weaken our carrier force would be to cut the muscle of our Navy. That would be a tragic error. ◆

NO

By Sen. WALTER F. MONDALE (MINN.)

LAST YEAR'S Congressional debate over military spending demonstrated to many Americans that the Pentagon spends billions of dollars to continue programs based on questionable and unchallenged assumptions. I am convinced that one of the most glaring examples of this policy is the Navy's insistence that it needs a minimum of 15 attack carriers.

While I do not question that some carriers are necessary, I have serious reservations about the Navy's claim that 15 is the minimum. Because of the Navy's belief that the role of the carrier has not changed substantially since World War II, Congress is now being asked to appropriate $152 million to start construction of a third Nimitz-class nuclear attack carrier.

More than adherence to tradition is at stake here. Money, and a great deal of it, is involved.

Rather than give the Navy a blank check for additional carriers, Congress decided in 1969 to reassert its constitutional responsibility for military affairs by asking hard questions about the need for a 15-carrier fleet. As a result of an amendment that I introduced with Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey, no additional carriers can be funded until Congress completes a study of the program.

I believe our carrier fleet is much too large now, and reducing its size will provide substantial savings to the taxpayer without endangering national security. With the advent of Minuteman and Polaris missiles, the attack carrier is no longer part of our strategic nuclear forces. Its main role today is to provide air cover for such limited war missions as bombing enemy supply lines and supporting ground troops. There are several reasons why a 15-carrier fleet is not called for:

First, deploying carrier task forces overlaps and duplicates our land-based air power. The Air Force maintains 23 wings of tactical aircraft at home and abroad. The geographic spread of overseas bases, either operated by the United States or available to us, provides ample facilities for bringing our air power to bear wherever it is needed. This is especially true in the Mediterranean and the Western Pacific.

Furthermore, we have an almost limitless capacity to create new bases when required. The Air Force reports that there are at least a thousand civilian airfields around the world that could be converted to fully equipped bases in three days' time.

Second, carrier air power is far more expensive than land-based air power. A nuclear carrier task force, including escorting destroyers, costs at least $1.4 billion. Since two more carrier task forces must be held in reserve, according to Navy spokesmen, this means that it costs a minimum of $4.2 billion to provide us with one carrier "on station."

In comparison, we can build an airbase in the Pacific for $53 million or convert a civilian airfield into a base for approximately $26 million.

Third, their high degree of vulnerability to attack makes carriers far less effective than land bases for our jets. Half of the cost of a carrier task force is for its defense.

Its tremendous investment in a carrier task force gives the Navy an understandable reluctance to commit the carrier to combat until assured its area of operations will be reasonably safe. Once committed, the carrier cannot effectively launch air strikes when attempting to evade enemy attacks. And advanced antiship missiles render the carrier's position untenable in any encounter.

Fourth, the carriers that have joined the fleet since the mid-1950's —eight Forrestal-class, the Enterprise, and the two Nimitz-class ships that will enter the fleet in the next few years—are nearly twice the size of our older carriers. They are equipped with more modern aircraft that deliver a greater punch.

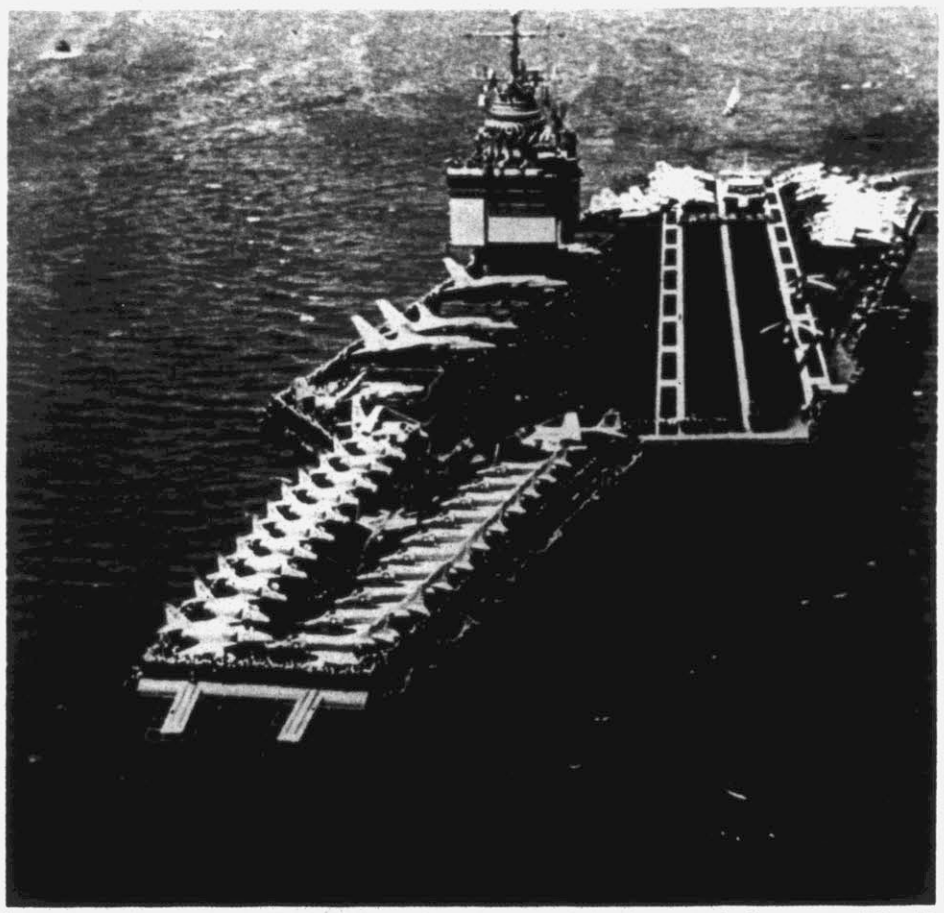

Fifth, we are told that 15 carrier task forces are necessary to keep five continually on station, two in the Mediterranean and three in the Pacific. Five more are in training and the remaining five are undergoing overhaul at any one time under this schedule. Naval spokesmen acknowledge that, except for the need to relieve the crew, a carrier task force could remain on its station longer.

The Navy has dealt with this problem in Polaris submarines by rotating two crews for each submarine that is on duty.

Finally, the fact that our adversaries and potential adversaries do not have attack carriers further weakens any justification for keeping our carrier fleet at its present level.

In addition to questions of the efficiency and effectiveness of aircraft carriers, the use of these vessels has serious implications in the field of foreign policy. The Navy contends that the carriers' main advantage is that they can be employed unilaterally without involving third parties or relying on treaties. We are told they can take positions off a nation's coast and possibly influence events by their mere presence. The Senate has an obligation to debate whether it is in our national interest to have this many carrier task forces poised for unilateral action. Such a debate is needed to make certain that foreign policy determines our military expenditures, not the reverse.

In calling for Congressional vigilance over military spending, I am well aware of the high priority of national defense. But approving questionable items in the defense budget does not serve our defense. When military forces cost more than is necessary to do a job, our inefficiency may force us to abandon other policy commitments in the areas of education, health and welfare, housing, urban and rural development, and protection of our environment. At a time when our people are bearing an overwhelming tax burden and inflation demands economies in Government spending, we must take a closer look at the carrier program. ◆

Patio Supper

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ For the long holiday weekend ahead, plan casual suppers when at home. The attractive kraut mold may be prepared a day in advance. Allow the filled loaf of bread, wrapped in foil, to wait in readiness before adding the tomato slices and popping the loaf into the oven. Frost and fill the cupcakes when time permits, and refrigerate them until serving. Be sure to keep tall glasses filled with plenty of ice and lemony tea throughout the meal. Have a fun-filled holiday.

A decorative gelled layer of sauerkraut crowns a layer of diced chicken and Vienna sausage in a well-seasoned aspic for this delightfully zesty molded loaf.

Kraut and Chicken-Layered Loaf

3 env. unflavored gelatin
1½ cups cold water
4 cups chicken bouillon or broth
3½ teaspoons instant minced onion
1½ teaspoons celery seed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups diced, cooked chicken, chilled
1 can (4 oz.) Vienna sausage, diced
¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 cups drained sauerkraut, chopped

1. Pour ½ cup of the cold water into a saucepan. Sprinkle gelatin from 1 env. over the water. Dissolve gelatin over low heat, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

2. Stir in 1 cup of the bouillon. Remove and set aside one-third cup for garnish (see note, Decorative Garnish); mix into remaining two-thirds cup, 1 teaspoon of the minced onion and ½ teaspoon of the celery seed. Set aside. (Have ready a bowl of ice and water.)

3. Meanwhile, sprinkle gelatin from remaining 2 env. over remaining 1 cup water in a saucepan. Stir over low heat until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat and stir in the remaining 3 cups bouillon, 2½ teaspoons onion, 1 teaspoon celery seed, salt, pepper, Worcestershire, and lemon juice. Chill over the ice and water until slightly thickened. Remove and fold in chicken, sausage, and green pepper until well mixed. Set aside.

4. Over ice and water, quickly chill until slightly thickened, the two-thirds cup bouillon which was set aside in step 2. Remove and blend in kraut; set aside.

5. See note, Decorative Garnish, and quickly prepare the garnish layer.

6. Turn kraut mixture into the loaf pan over the partially set garnish layer. Turn the partially set chicken mixture onto the kraut layer. Chill until firm, about 6 hrs.

7. To unmold, carefully run a knife to bottom around sides of mold. Turn onto a chilled platter. Garnish as desired.

Decorative Garnish: 1. Cut thin slices of radish or carrot into "flowers" and thin strips of green pepper into "stems" for a floral design. Spoon into a 9x5x3-inch loaf pan, 3 tablespoons gelatin-bouillon mixture from the one-third cup which was set aside in step 2 of the loaf recipe. Place over ice and water. Arrange "flowers" and "stems" in a floral design in gelatin on bottom of pan, placing design upside down (see photo). Remove from ice and water.

2. Carefully spoon remainder of the one-third cup gelatin-bouillon mixture over design to hold it in place. Immediately continue with step 6 of loaf recipe. 8 servings

Seasoned French Bread with Filling

A 1-lb. loaf French bread
Spread (see recipes)
Sweet onions, sliced
Tomatoes, thickly sliced
Bottled Italian-style salad dressing

1. Cut loaf into 1-in. slices almost through to bottom. Using a sharp-pointed knife, cut out and remove alternate slices*, leaving ¼ in. of the crust at bottom of the loaf. Place loaf on a long piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil on a baking sheet.

2. Spread the Seasoned Butter or Cheddar Cheese mixture generously over the cut surfaces of each slice and in between slices at bottom of the loaf.

3. Into each cavity between slices, place vertically a slice of sweet onion, a thick slice of tomato brushed with the salad dressing, and (if using the Seasoned Butter mixture instead of the Cheddar Cheese Spread) a slice of sharp Cheddar or Swiss cheese.

4. Set the filled loaf into a 400°F. oven and heat until either the cheese mixture or slices of cheese begin to melt, about 10 min.

5. Remove from oven. Using a very sharp knife to cut through the bottom crust, separate loaf into individual portions, keeping loaf intact.

6. Pull up sides of foil and lift into a long bread basket or onto a serving tray. Loosely overlap foil to keep bread warm during serving. Use tongs to serve.

Seasoned Butter Spread

Blend thoroughly ½ cup butter or margarine with 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 2 teaspoons prepared horseradish, and 2 tablespoons chopped parsley.

Cheddar Cheese Spread

Blend thoroughly ½ cup butter or margarine with ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 2 tablespoons catsup, 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, and 1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese.

*Removed slices may be spread with either mixture, put onto the foil with the filled loaf and served hot.

Patio Party Cupcakes

1 pkg. (17½ or 18½ oz.) devil's food cake mix
1 can (16¼ or 16½ oz.) ready-to-spread chocolate or chocolate fudge frosting
Thawed frozen whipped dessert topping

1. Prepare cupcakes from the cake mix; spoon batter into lightly greased, 2¾-in. muffin pan wells (14 to 16), filling each about ⅔ full. Bake as directed on pkg. Cool on wire rack.

2. Generously ice tops of cooled cupcakes with the frosting.

3. Put about ½ cup remaining frosting into a bowl and, by spoonfuls, blend in thawed dessert topping to desired fluffy consistency for a delicately chocolate-flavored filling. If desired, blend in a few drops of almond extract.

4. Carefully cut off frosted tops of cakes and cut remainder crosswise into halves. Generously spoon filling onto cut surfaces, and sandwich slices together, finally putting the tops into place. Poke 3 or 4 colorful plastic or frilly cocktail picks into each for a festive touch and to hold filled layers together.

OH, MY ACHING BACK
Nagging backache, headache and muscular aches and pains may come on with over-exertion, emotional upsets, or everyday stress and strain. If this nagging backache, with restless, sleepless nights, is wearing you out, making you miserable and irritable, don't wait, try Doan's Pills – an analgesic, a pain reliever. Doan's pain-relieving action on nagging backache is often the answer. Get Doan's Pills – not a habit-forming drug but a well-known standard remedy used successfully by millions for over 70 years. See if they don't bring you the same welcome relief. For convenience, always buy Doan's large size.

FASTEETH is alkaline—won't sour under dentures. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get FASTEETH today at all drug counters.

The Body Prints

By ROSALYN ABREVAYA

PRINT DESIGNS are bursting out all over this season. They're as likely to distinguish the lines of a jumpsuit (as seen on our cover) as a sophisticated ball gown.

Watch their spirited mien in tiny peasant florals or folklore scenes, in Byzantine to Far Eastern inspirations, in clean-lined geometrics.

The shape of these clothes you may be wearing? They take a relaxed line, are cut closer to the body—many in lithe knits in every length from just-above-the-knee to midi to ankle-grazing. These are the clothes to latch on to for drifting, romantic evenings right now! ◆

Cover: Jumpsuit, midi-wrap skirt by Mr. Mort Sport
Hairdos arranged by Chany
Scarves by Ray Strauss Unlimited

PHOTOGRAPHS BY HAL OKUN

Oriental folklore highlights an acrylic knit mini dress with wrapped twin-print midi skirt. Allen Silverman for Alamor.

Tiny peasant floral adorns wool challis, string-belted with covered buttons. Rodriguez for Peter Clements.

Offer ends May 31st.

You have until May 31st to get all the travelers checks you want—up to $5,000 worth—for a fee of just $2.00 At banks everywhere.

Opportunity to save up to $48.

Because we want you to discover the advantages of First National City Travelers Checks, we're offering you the opportunity again this year — during the month of May—to buy up to $5,000 worth for a fee of only $2. (Plus the face value of the checks, of course.)

The normal fee for travelers checks is a penny per dollar. But now, just in time for your summer vacation, you can save up to $48 (check the chart) during this unparalleled offer. (Less than $200 worth will still cost you less than $2.) So, don't miss this May only opportunity!

Amount	Usual fee	May fee	YOU SAVE
$ 300	$ 3.00	$2.00	$ 1.00
500	5.00	2.00	3.00
1,000	10.00	2.00	8.00
1,500	15.00	2.00	13.00
2,000	20.00	2.00	18.00
3,000	30.00	2.00	28.00
4,000	40.00	2.00	38.00
5,000	50.00	2.00	48.00

Welcomed Everywhere.

First National City Bank has been in the travelers check business for over 65 years. Our checks are known and accepted in more than a million places around the globe. You can spend them as easily in Madagascar as in Massachusetts. As easily in Copenhagen as in Cleveland. And, by the way, they're just as convenient on a weekend outing as on a worldwide tour.

Refunded Everywhere.

When money is lost or stolen, it's gone forever. If First National City Travelers Checks are lost or stolen, you can get your money back fast. We have over 28,000 refund points worldwide—thousands more than any other travelers check. That's why our checks are like cash. Only better.

To locate our nearest refund office anywhere abroad (plus Alaska and Hawaii), just ask at any principal hotel. They're all regularly supplied with an updated list of all First National City Travelers Check refund points in their area. To locate our nearest refund office anywhere in the Continental U.S.A., dial Western Union Operator 25. Or call, toll-free, to: 800-243-6000.

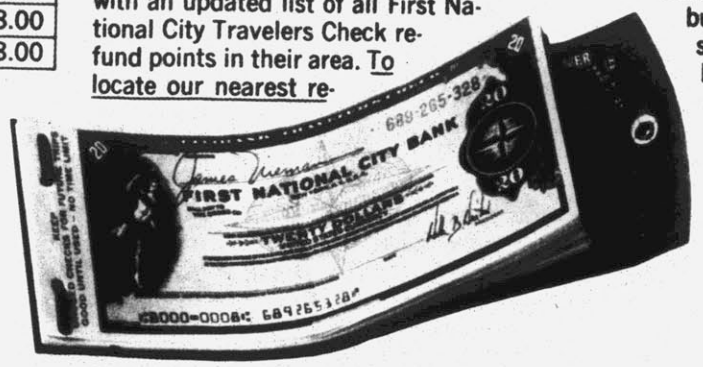

Buy now. Travel later.

Even if you're not planning a trip before May 31st, you owe it to yourself to buy First National City Travelers Checks now at these substantial savings. Many people, in fact, keep our travelers checks on hand all year long against the time when they may need cash for an emergency.

Offer good only in the United States and Puerto Rico...ends May 31st, 1970. So, act now to protect your cash from loss or theft. Get your supply of First National City Travelers Checks at banks everywhere. And save!

Note to all banks and savings institutions:

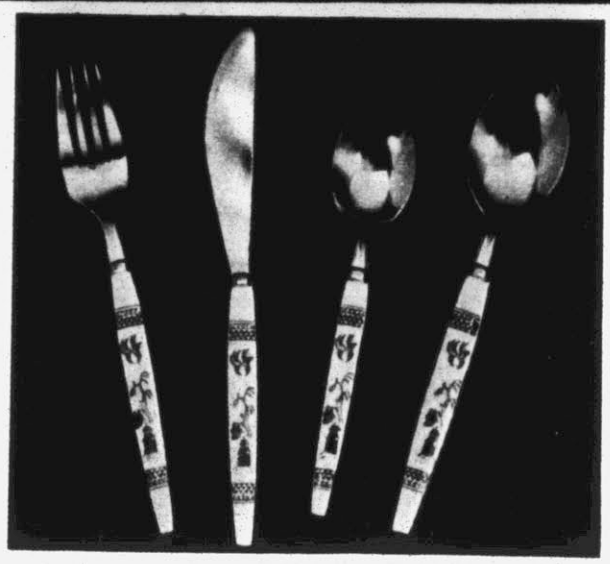

During the month of May, we're making this unusual introductory offer to your customers at no cost to you. Your customers get the savings, but you earn the commissions you would normally have received.

Barnabas' Music Box

PLAYS "JOSETTE'S THEME"

The music box given to our favorite vampire Barnabas by his fiancee, Josette Dupre. Barnabas need only lift the delicate filigree cupola to invoke its supernatural powers and release the bewitching "Josette's Theme." He uses it to project himself forward . . . backward in time and to transfer his identity or that of any member of the bewitched Collins family. Now you can hear the hauntingly beautiful melody faithfully reproduced. An authentic, scale-model reproduction. Beneath the lid is a compartment for milady to keep prized pieces of jewelry or other secrets. Plastic, 4".

Jules Jürgensen.
Not just another pretty face.

There are 7,258,204,800 reasons why the next watch you buy should be a Jules Jürgensen.

That's the number of seconds in 230 years.

And Jules Jürgensen has been a great name in watches all that time. Most any brand you can think of is a johnny-come-lately compared to us. You have to make a very fine product to have people buy it year after year after year.

You've got to have beautiful faces, of course. But the face is there for everybody to see. It's easy to choose a watch by its looks.

You've got to be beautiful on the inside, too. Beautifully running. Beautifully lasting. Beautifully accurate.

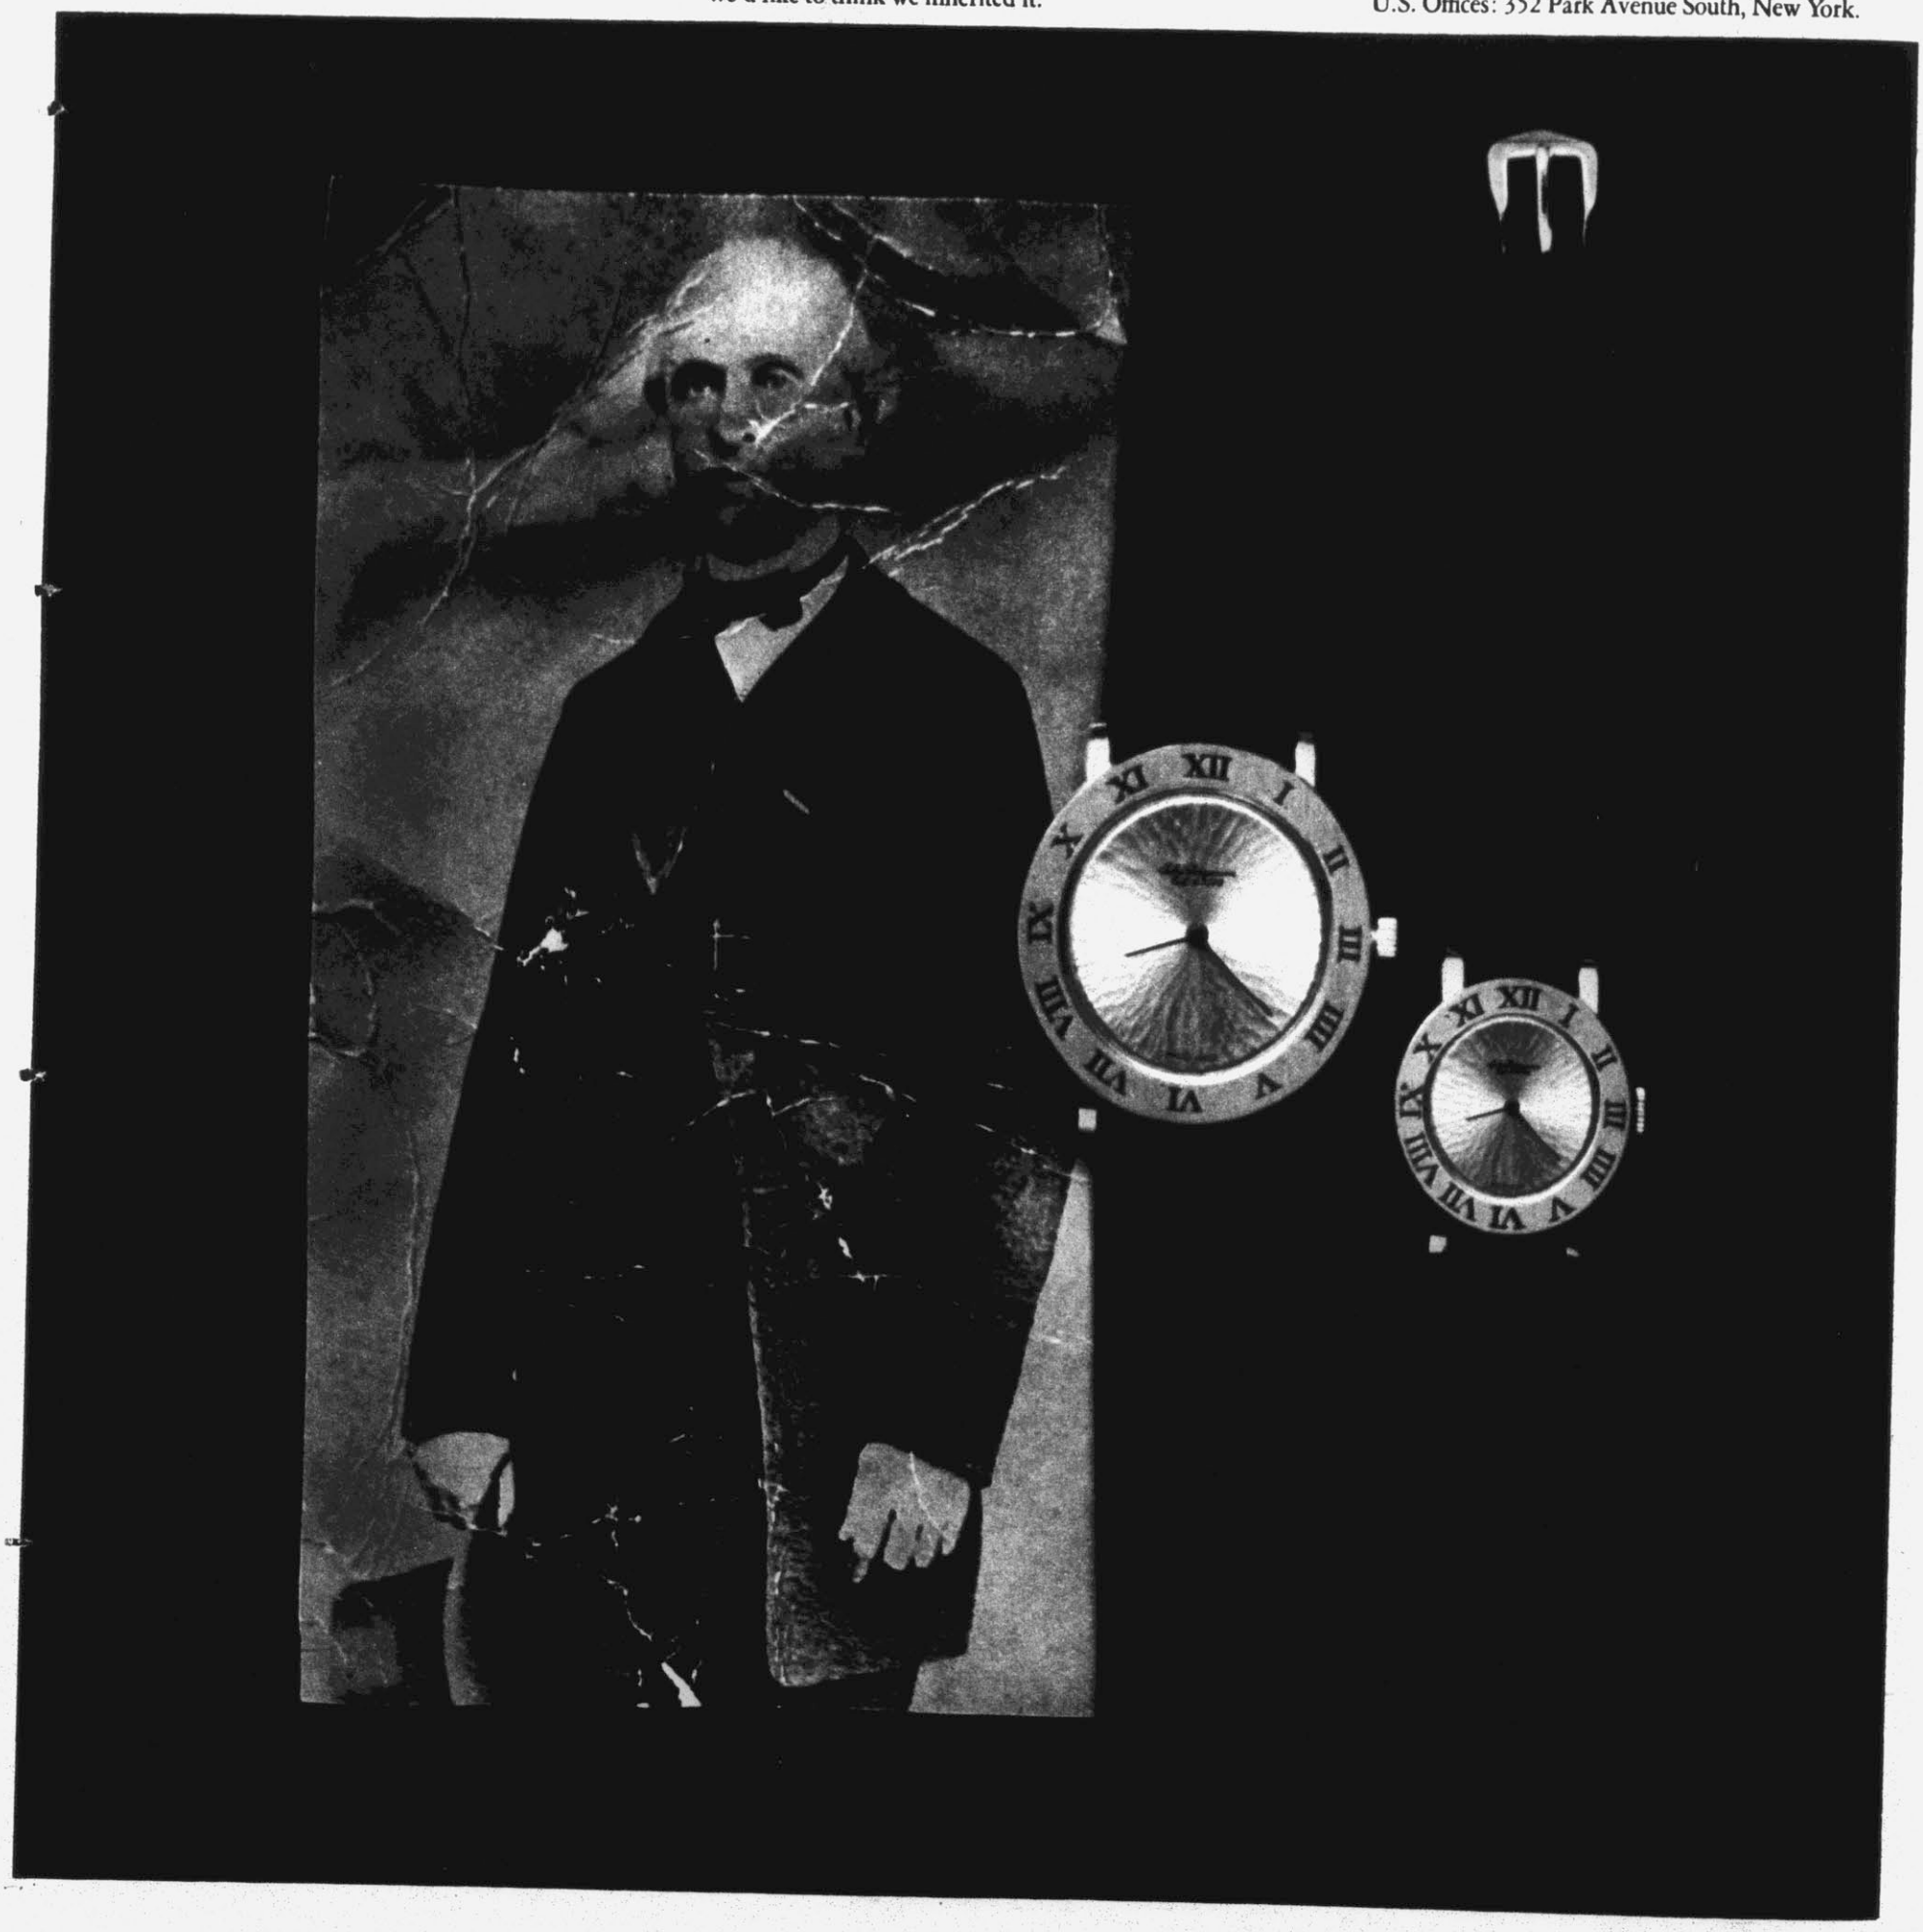

We think there is an inner beauty in a precision-made watch. That's why we're such fanatics about the tolerances of our jeweled movements—about the way they're checked and inspected—about the way they perform under brutal testing conditions.

Centuries ago, the other Swiss watchmakers said that Jules Jürgensen had a compulsive urge for perfection. We'd like to think we inherited it.

Here: the Count for him, the Contessa for her. 17 jewel movements in classic 14K gold cases, with Florentine yellow gold dials and graceful Roman numerals on the outer rim. The Count, about $155. The Contessa, about $135. Other Jules Jürgensen watches from $80 to $10,000 at fine stores everywhere. Write for an illustrated brochure and name of your nearest authorized dealer.

Jules Jürgensen Corp. since 1740, makers of superlative watches and chronometers.

U.S. Offices: 352 Park Avenue South, New York.

What Makes You Tired?

SOME PEOPLE only get tired now and then, others get tired frequently, and still others are "tired all the time."

Whatever category you fall into, you'll be interested to know that science has been looking into the matter and has come up with some fascinating findings on the subject. This true-false quiz gives you the opportunity to compare your own knowledge of what makes you tired with science's discoveries.

1. If your job makes you tired, the odds are that you're probably working too hard.

2. You're actually less prone to accidents when you're tired because instead of rushing, you tend to move more slowly and deliberately.

3. When you say, "That person makes me tired," it's literally true.

4. You can perform mental work better when you're fresh than when you're moderately tired.

5. Tiredness resulting from hard physical labor takes longer to recuperate from than fatigue caused by mental work.

6. Frequent rest periods actually make you more tired at the end of the day.

7. Regardless of the kind of work they're doing, neurotic people get tired quicker than those with well-balanced personalities.

8. There's nothing good about fatigue at all.

ANSWERS

1. False. The odds lie in an entirely different direction. If your job seems to you particularly fatiguing—if you're appreciably more tired than your colleagues at the end of the day—it isn't likely you're working too hard. The chances are that you're a round peg in a square hole, that your job doesn't provide opportunity for the expression of your talents.

2. False. You're much more likely to have an accident when you're tired—whether you're a driver or a pedestrian. Studies at Pennsylvania State University have shown that when fatigue was induced in subjects, their reaction time was slowed 57 percent.

3. True. When you react to another person's presence with unpleasant emotions, this produces actual nervous fatigue, which is the hardest type to recuperate from. A few minutes with a person you're allergic to can tire you out as much as hard work.

4. False. Studies at a leading university have demonstrated that people engaged in mental work perform significantly better when they are moderately tired than when they are fresh. However, as workers progressed to further stages of fatigue—"considerably tired" and "very tired"—their efficiency suffered.

5. False. Studies show that we recover quickest from fatigue caused by muscular activity. It requires more rest and relaxation to replenish energy expended in mental work.

6. False. Consensus of studies shows that brief and frequent breaks not only reduce fatigue but make for better performance as well.

7. True. Studies show that people with neurotic tendencies are much more subject to fatigue than others. They often wake up tired even after eight hours sleep. The reason that their energy supply is exhausted quicker is because much of it is dissipated in inner conflicts.

8. False. As Dr. David B. Dill has noted, in summing up the findings of leading studies on the subject: "Life without stress, and the resultant fatigue, is uninteresting and unhealthy. The man is fortunate whose work tires him, gives him a good appetite, and finally promotes a good night's sleep."

QUIPS AND QUOTES

A man who was very much interested in old books recently ran into an unbookish acquaintance of his who'd just thrown away an old Bible which had been packed away in the attic of his ancestral home for generations. He happened to mention it.

"Who printed it, do you know?" asked the book lover quietly.

"Somebody named Guten-something," recalled the man with an effort.

"Not Gutenberg!" gasped the book lover. "You idiot, you've thrown away one of the first books ever printed. A copy sold at auction recently for over $400,000."

The other man was unmoved.

"My copy wouldn't have brought a dime," he announced firmly. "Some fellow named Martin Luther had scribbled all over it."

An eighteen-year-old young man was noted for his complete lack of interest in the opposite sex, so everyone wondered whether a hitch in the Army had changed his outlook. Seated on the front porch with his cousin, he was telling about his military life. Suddenly he stopped talking and looked with interest at four pretty girls coming down the street.

He watched them intently until they were out of sight, then turned back to his cousin and said:

"One of them was out of step."

Unit Pricing: Will It Pare Your Grocery Bill?

Consumer spokesmen are pressing for a price-per-measure listing on almost all items in the food store

Commissioner Bess Myerson Grant checks prices in market.

ONE THIRD of the average family's income each year is spent on food purchases. More than 10 percent of that is wasted because wrong selections are made on what the shopper thinks are the best values.

Can you tell which size and brand of a certain item will give you the most for your money? By reading the label of a bottle of cooking oil, for instance, can you determine whether the larger size will really be a saving? Or, for that matter, which loaf of bread is the best buy?

The answer is probably "No," because grocery shopping is still something of a bewildering experience, and consumers all over the country are registering complaints. There's a clear need for some easy way to make package size, weight, and price comparisons in the grocery market.

In New York City, the Consumer Affairs Department's solution is "unit pricing." Bess Myerson Grant, the department's commissioner (you might remember her as Miss America of 1945) says: "Everyone knows that under the current marketing conditions it is impossible to make food selections on price. Even the man who is a computer analyst will have difficulty."

Her department conducted some tests several months ago. Shoppers were asked to try to select familiar items offering the most quantity at the lowest cost. From 40 to 50 percent of their choices were wrong. These miscalculations cost the consumer about 10 cents on the dollar.

Mrs. Grant says, "The purpose of unit pricing is to see that the consumers get as much information as they need in order to know how much they are getting for their money."

New York City's "Regulation 49," formulated by Mrs. Grant's department, requires all meat and fish, cereals, cooking oils, soft drinks and beer, facial tissues, napkins, and bread to carry a price per pound, quart, or per 50 sheets of tissue. The unit price is to be posted beside the selling cost on the package, on a shelf marker, or as part of a chart listing brand, package size, and price per measure for each item in that particular category.

In other words, while a small box of corn flakes in the past has only been marked 22 cents, the new regulation requires showing that its eight ounces are being sold at a price of 44 cents per pound. This then can be compared quickly with a 12-ounce package marked not only 31 cents but also 41.3 cents a pound, revealing that the larger size here is the better value. But the larger size is not always the best buy.

Although conversion cards given out to shoppers have been tried in some stores, most often, shoppers don't have the time even to do this figuring. Some shoppers have difficulty with the cards and figuring out the three unit prices for, say, bathroom tissues in 325, 500, and 1000 tissues per roll. Then, too, they come packaged in eight roll, two roll, and four-roll packages.

But many grocers disagree, and some New York City stores opposed to unit pricing are seeking to prevent its implementation. Originally, Regulation 49 was scheduled to go into effect last Nov. 20, but was then extended 90 days to give supermarkets time to rearrange their pricing systems. Now the retailers have filed a suit questioning the authority of a consumer-affairs department to enforce such a requirement. Retailers in New York City contend that a city council or state legislature has such jurisdiction, not Mrs. Grant's department. And also they contend that it would be just too expensive to post the information.

Counties and states are beginning to take action.

Long Island's Nassau County has prepared a similar unit-pricing bill; New York State Rep. Gordon Burrows (R) has introduced a bill in the Assembly; a bill was also introduced in California in February. Legislation is being contemplated in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Ohio, and now a bill is being drafted in Michigan.

In Richmond, Calif., the Associated Cooperatives have been experimenting with price-per-measure on groceries in odd size and numerous package sizes for seven years. The Hyde Park Cooperative Society in Chicago, Ill., uses price -per- ounce labels on 2,000 items. They are inserted into metal shelf runners.

In their 49 New York metropolitan stores, Daitch-Shopwell uses charts to indicate unit price on cereals and bread. But by far the largest user of price-per-measure is Jewel in its 250 Chicago area stores. Begun as a test in three stores in January, the experiment was expanded in March and includes unit-price shelf tags on 1,000 food items.

Many food-store operators feel that unit pricing is inevitable but not necessarily the answer to every consumer's dream. Then, too, there is a certain amount of resistance even from shoppers themselves who associate the change with a further complication of their lives. Time and trial will tell. If unit pricing can save even a few cents weekly on the shopping budget, it will be a sure success.

You're in the thick of every sea and amphibious battle in the Pacific, Mediterranean and Atlantic. Discover hundreds of little known facts about World War II . . .

- Why the Pentagon sent out the alarm of an impending Pearl Harbor attack by WESTERN UNION.
- Why MacArthur's air force was caught grounded on the airfields of Manila 8 hours after Pearl Harbor.
- How Nazi subs sank our merchant ships before the horrified eyes of sunbathing vacationers in Florida.
- How the Navy suffered more losses in a single 2 hour battle than it did in World War I and the Spanish American War combined.
- How the defense of the Philippines starred a weird U.S. "Battalion" of stray aviators, marines, and native Filipinos in wild psychedelic yellow uniforms.
- How romantic "Bali Hai" of South Pacific fame was a hellhole of malaria that drove out U.S. engineers before they could complete an airfield.
- How a handful of U.S. Navy planes chased away an entire fleet of Japanese battleships even though they had no bombs to drop.

This 600-page book has many extra features: 25 pages of photos. 52 charts and battle maps. A 15 inch foldout map. A dictionary of military terms. 2,500 word Index. Two Ocean War retails for $15.00 in original publisher's edition. CAREFUL, STOOP! HEAT'S EXPLODED MOST OF THAT MACHINE GUN'S AMMO, BUT THERE ARE A FEW LIVE ROUNDS LEFT.

THE RED CHINESE HELICOPTER CRASHES ON TOP OF THE TRUCK. TERRY AND BIG STOOP RESCUE KARSOV FROM THE RESULTING FIRE.

TOO LATE TO DO ANYTHING ABOUT THE PEOPLE IN THE CHOPPER, ANYWAY... UGH! U TU WAS NOT A VERY NICE FELLA, BUT THAT'S THE HARD WAY TO GO.

OOOOH! SAVE YOUR SENTIMENTALITY, LEE. I RIDDLED THAT AIRCRAFT THOROUGHLY. THERE WERE NONE ALIVE WHEN IT HIT.

WELL, WELL! IVAN, THE TERRIBLE'S REJOINED US. LUCKILY THAT CHOPPER'S BOOM ZONKED YOU ON THE HEAD, COLONEL. YOU COULD HAVE BEEN HURT OTHERWISE.

LEAVING THAT TRUCK WITH THE ENGINE RUNNING, IN GEAR, HAD THAT SPECIAL KARSOV STYLE.

NO TIME! IT WAS NECESSARY TO PUNISH U TU FOR HIS TREATMENT OF A SOVIET OFFICER WITHOUT REGARD FOR THE CONSEQUENCES.

YEAH! THE SAME WAY YOU WENT AFTER THOSE HIJACKERS ABOARD THE JAPANESE AIRLINER! THAT RECKLESS STUNT COULD HAVE ENDED UP MESSILY, TOO!

THOSE BLASTED HIJACKERS!

THEY WERE THE FIRST CAUSE OF THIS INTERRUPTION IN MY TRAVEL. THEY NEED ALSO TO BE TAUGHT RESPECT...

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY HAROLD R FOSTER

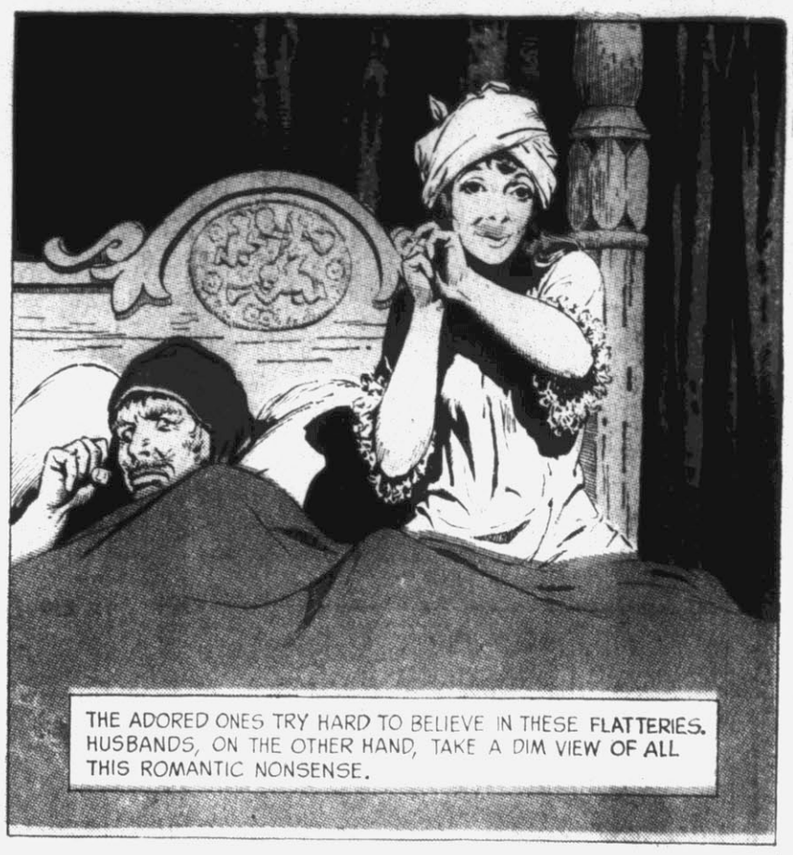

Our Story: CHIVALRY, THE AGE OF ROMANCE, ENVELOPS CAMELOT LIKE AN EPIDEMIC. KING ARTHUR FINDS THIS NEW IDEAL USEFUL. YOUNG KNIGHTS ARE WILLING TO ACCEPT EVEN THE DULLEST QUESTS IN ORDER TO BRING HONOR TO THEIR LADIES.

THE LADIES FIND IT PLEASANT TO BE SO WORSHIPED EVEN THOUGH THEY MUST LISTEN TO MUCH BAD POETRY IN PRAISE OF THEIR EYES, THEIR GRACE AND OTHER ASSORTED CHARMS.

SLEEP TOO IS INTERRUPTED BY FORLORN GALLANTS WHO SING OF UNDYING LOVE FOR THEIR FAIR LADIES, VIRTUOUS AND UNATTAINABLE. BALLADS THAT SEEM ENDLESS AND NOT ALWAYS IN KEY.

THE ADORED ONES TRY HARD TO BELIEVE IN THESE FLATTERIES. HUSBANDS, ON THE OTHER HAND, TAKE A DIM VIEW OF ALL THIS ROMANTIC NONSENSE.

IMPETUOUS YOUTH MAY FOLLOW THE WILL-O'-WISP OF ROMANCE JUST SO FAR BUT, IN LATER YEARS, FIND IT MORE COMFORTABLE TO SETTLE DOWN, NOT WITH THE IDEAL LADY, BUT SOME COMPETENT WIFE WHO HAD PLANNED TO GET HIM ALL ALONG.

HER TWELFTH BIRTHDAY HAS PASSED AND KAREN HAS PUT AWAY HER PLAYTHINGS AND IS READY FOR ROMANCE. SHE HAS DECIDED TO BECOME DALE'S UNATTAINABLE LADY FAIR, AND PURSUES HIM LIKE A HUNTRESS.

TO MAKE MATTERS WORSE ALETA, TO CURE HIS INFATUATION FOR HER, IS TRYING TO INTEREST HIM IN A MAID HIS OWN AGE.
