Scott Pushed Academy For Criminal Justice

RALEIGH (AP) - A committee of two dozen state and local officials will begin work soon on creation of a North Carolina Academy for Criminal Justice, which Gov. Bob Scott says will be a "major training and educational facility."

need for improved training in all phases of criminal justice, including law enforcement, the corrections system and the courts. The governor indicated he would expect the academy to begin by providing training for personnel of state agencies and then develop programs for local agencies.

Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan suggested that the governor might create the academy by executive order, rather than wait until the legislature meets, and Scott said he would consider that. "My concern is that this might end up as another longrange study on a shelf somewhere if we don't go ahead act right away," Morgan said.

working on development of the academy. The institute at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has been conducting training programs for law enforcement agencies for years. Attending the meeting with Scott were heads of all state agencies involved with criminal justice and several local law enforcement officials, including Catawba County Sheriff T. Dale Johnson, Onslow County Sheriff Tom Marshall, Martin County Sheriff W. R. Rawls, Washington Police Chief Phillip Paul, Thomasville Police Chief Paul M. Shore and Raleigh Police Chief Tom Davis.

Court Rules

RALEIGH (AP) - The State Supreme Court - apparently acutely conscious of the lack of decorum in the recent trial of the Chicago 7 - is taking no chances in a new set of rules for North Carolina's Superior and District courts. Agencies Reported To Greene Board

SNOW HILL - The Greene County Board of Commissioners Monday afternoon heard routine reports from the various agencies in Greene County. Discussing budgets for their departments for the coming fiscal year were: George Taylor, superintendent of Greene County Schools; Fred Speight, Civil Defense director; Horace Moore, county fire marshal; P.L. Barrow, sheriff of Greene County; and Mrs. Rachel Payne Sugg, Greene County Welfare director.

352 Voters Registered

A total of 352 Greenville School District residents registered last Saturday for the special registration now taking place for the forthcoming referendum election to be held on June 27. The referendum election, approved in a resolution passed by the Pitt County Commissioners, is to determine whether or not residents in the Greenville School District will up the supplemental levy for school operating costs from the current 25 cents level to the maximum 50 cents level permitted by North Carolina law.

The budget requests will be taken under advisement and considered by the board of commissioners in their total budget planning. Greene County Extension Chairman Walter Johnson informed the board that Joel Harrison, who was recently named assistant agriculture extension agent, began work Monday. The board approved an agreement with the North Carolina Local Government Employee Retirement System for extension of the death benefits for Greene County employees. The extension was adopted last year for one year and had to be approved by the commissioners again to be in effect this year.

He reported that someone entered the house through a window and stole assorted household merchandise and personal items valued at $227.40. Arrested Monday afternoon was Jesse James Odom, 21, on charges involving the May 26 break-in. Sheriff Tyson said that $137.68 of the merchandise had been recovered.

Fear Staggering Toll Peru Government Rushing Relief To Devastated Coast

LIMA, Peru (AP) - The Peruvian government rushed aid today to the 600-mile stretch of coastline devastated by a massive earthquake over the weekend. The confirmed death toll passed 1,000, and officials expressed fear that as many as 30,000 may have died. The quake Sunday afternoon lasted only 40 seconds, but destroyed thousands of buildings and almost totally demolished a number of towns. Pilots of military observation planes reported entire villages "erased from the map" by earth slides or floods from Andean mountain lakes. Official figures put the number of known dead at 630 in Huaraz, 175 miles north of Lima, and at 200 at the port town of Chimbote, some 35 miles to the northwest. Reports from dozens of other Peruvian cities raised the confirmed total of dead to more than 1,000. Government spokesmen said more than 200,000 persons were homeless; with winter setting in the Andes, there was fear of pneumonia and other illness as sleet and rain plagued those seeking shelter. Twenty army paratroopers from Lima were to be dropped today into Huaraz, a city of 22,000 high in the Andes that suffered 95 per cent destruction in the quake. After the paratroopers established communications, more air drops were to deliver provisions, doctors and medical supplies. Huaraz then will serve as a center of relief operations for the surrounding area. The navy training ship Inde-pendencia was sailing today to Chimbote to serve as a hospital ship for that area. The navy cruiser Bolognesi, which took President Juan Velasco to Chimbote Monday night, was returning to Lima with 300 injured persons. A battalion of army engineers was en route by road to begin removing rubble from highways and rebuilding bridges. Army communications men were setting up a radio network to replace the ham operators who have been the only communication channel with much of the stricken area. Landslides blocked roads, bridges were down, and fog rolled in over mountain passes, making air access almost impossible.

Housing Board To Push For Additional Space

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer Housing Authority commissioners last night decided to pursue the idea of adding a separate administration and maintenance building to the proposed plans for the NC 22-6 (Newtown) housing project. Earlier proposals had maintained that a storage area in the project be located on the lower floor of a two-unit building with the area conforming to the appearance of the other units. It was agreed last night that the maintenance building was vitally needed but some question arose as to the feasibility of having administrative space. Executive director A E Dubber noted that such space is available in the Kearney Park section and although the facility is only used one or two days during the month for actual administrative purposes, it is utilized by Pitt Technical Institute every day for instructional purposes within the project.

the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1969, calls for the monthly rent of residents in the housing areas not to exceed 25 per cent of their gross family income as determined by the HUD office. Lamm noted that the amendment affected only 83 of the total number of residents in the housing projects and involved very little change in current rent standards. The amendment was officially implemented June 1, he noted, and would be retroactive to March 24. No retroactive payments are expected to be made, he said, since the

Continue Plan

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer Pitt County Commissioners this morning, voted to continue participation in the retirement system death benefit agreement carried on a trial basis for the past year. The death benefit agreement is coupled with the County Employees Retirement System upon death of a county employee, pays beneficiaries an amount equal to the past years salary, up to a maximum of $15,000. Cost to the county is .56 per cent of an employees salary (.34 per cent for firemen and law enforcement officers). Commissioners also approved an audit contract for the fiscal year audit. The contract was awarded to Worsley, Farley and Prescott of Greenville for a total not to exceed $4,800. The accountant firm's audit of the county's books last year totaled $4,497. In other business this morning, commissioners heard reports from various county agencies and departments, and heard a request for $1,500 for support of the Pitt-Greenville Council On Aging. Commissioners took no action on the request for funds pending budget study sessions to be held in the near future. The board was expected to discuss this afternoon a request from Pitt Memorial Hospital's board of trustees to hold a referendum on whether to issue bonds for construction of expanded hospital facilities.

Reports Church District Growth

Greenville district Methodism - which came into being as a separate administrative unit six years ago - has made significant gains according to the report of the Rev. Willis R. Stevens to the Methodist Conference this afternoon. Stevens, who has served as the first superintendent of the district, told delegates that since 1964 a total of 4,605 members have been received in the 70 churches of the district; a total of $1,160,613 raised for missions and benevolent causes and a total of $5,925,550 raised for all purposes. The district embraces Pitt, Greene, Beaufort, Martin, Lenoir and Hyde counties. Significant changes were made in church property with new sanctuaries being built at St. James, Greenville and Pink Hill; new educational buildings at St. James, Westminster, Kingston; and Pink Hill with the present educational facilities at Jarvis Memorial and St. James, Bethel and Nobles Chapel renovated. Churches at Bath and Nobles Chapel were also renovated. New parsonages were brought at Aurora and Holy Trinity plus two at Saint James for the pastor and associate pastor. Parsonage renovations took place at Hookerton, Washington circuit, Williamston and Pink Hill.

The Greenville district was carved out of the old New Bern, Goldsboro, Rocky Mount and Elizabeth City districts. It was one of two new districts set up at the 1964 annual conference. Created at the same time was the Sanford district which has been served by the Rev. V.E. Queen. The Greenville District Methodist parsonage is located at 101 Martinsborough Road in the Lynddale section of the city. Stevens, leaving under the tenure rule which limits the superintendent to six years, will be re-assigned to a pastorate by the Bishop Friday.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: That 17-year-old boy who wrote, "the boy is not always the aggressor," knew what he was talking about.

I am a 17-year-old girl, and several times I have felt like going farther than I should with my boyfriend, whom I really like.

All of us have normal passions that get stronger during adolescence. Married people have an outlet for their sexual desires, but what about teen-agers?

In American society, we are expected to abstain from sex relations for years and years until we are married. Why? So many other countries like Samoa have relaxed marital codes. I can see logical reasons for not being promiscuous, such as danger of venereal disease and unwanted babies, but when two healthy people want sex and know how to prevent pregnancy, and disease, why the big "No No?"

Our society is way ahead in so many things, like science, but it leaves its natural urges to wither away by pretending they don't exist.

If there is any valid reason why two healthy people in love should refrain from pre-marital sex, I would like to know what it is.

TRUTH SEEKING

DEAR SEEKING: The big "No No" is not the relationship between two normal, healthy, MATURE, responsible people "in love"—it's the use of sex by the immature, irresponsible, confused adolescent who mistakes his first sexual stirrings for "love."

"Knowing" how to prevent unwanted pregnancies and venereal disease is not enough to prevent them—witness NO decline in illegitimacy even with The Pill—and in spite of all the education concerning venereal disease, it's still on the INCREASE.

When you are ready to accept all the responsibilities and commitments of "love" and a family, you will not ask me what is wrong with pre-marital sex.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and a diabetic. My doctor has me on a very strict diet, and I have to have my meals served promptly at certain hours.

For instance, I have to have eight ounces of meat for dinner every night with a vegetable and some starch, and for breakfast I have to have two pieces of bacon, one egg, a glass of orange juice and milk.

My problem is, I want to visit some friends of mine this summer at their cottages. How can I go about asking the parents of my friends to serve me special foods at a set time without sounding rude or selfish?

DIABETIC GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Since you obviously do not know the parents of your friends well enough to make such requests without embarrassment, if you want to visit them, I suggest you provide your own special foods, and also be prepared to cook for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I am involved in patient care in a hospital. We are frequently criticized as being "heartless" for asking the "next of kin" for permission to perform a post mortem [autopsy]. Obviously we cannot ask this question before the patient dies. Equally obviously we cannot wait until the grief has passed (a year or more—if ever).

If people understood that an autopsy is simply a careful examination of the body by specially trained doctors, perhaps there would be a greater acceptance of the procedure. No more "damage" is done to the body than is done by embalming which is required by a law in most states.

Even tho the cause of death may be known, much may be learned from an autopsy. [For example, "how the cancer spread" may help researchers find ways to reduce the suffering of future cancer patients. Or it may give clues to earlier detection of the disease.]

There is nothing to lose and so much to be gained from autopsies. If you print this, perhaps more people would be less horrified, and more understanding. Thank you.

KANSAS CITY, KAS.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

THOUGHTFUL JUDGE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When hundreds waited in line at Louisville to buy their 1970 auto license plates before the deadline, County Judge Todd Hollenbach ordered hot coffee served to them.

The judge even told police to wait a couple of days before cracking down on motorists who failed to get their new tags before the March 1 deadline.

Hollenbach also admitted he overlooked purchasing a tag for the family car until one day after the deadline.

Safety Air Bag Refused By Ford Co.

By CHARLES C. CAIN
AP Business Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The Ford Motor Co. has given a flat "no" to a federal government proposal that 1973 cars be equipped with an air bag system to protect occupants in event of a crash.

Ford's unqualified rejection was the strongest voiced yet in the auto industry.

General Motors earlier had called the plan "technically feasible" but said there was no way of meeting the 1973 timetable.

Stuart M. Frey, chief body engineer of Ford, said Monday, "Ford is as anxious as anyone to halt the death toll on the highways, but even if we did have a developed air bag system, which we do not have now, we could not meet the proposed effective dates for installations in cars."

Ford's statement was issued in advance of a June 24 conference in Washington at which government and industry will exchange views on the air bag system.

Ford gave 50 magazine writers a first hand look at the system Monday.

A film clip showed a test car equipped with air bags colliding head-on with another car at 30 miles an hour.

The bag failed to inflate fast enough to keep a boy-sized dummy in the right front passenger seat from crashing into the car windshield.

"If that had been a real boy and a real collision, that boy would have been killed," said Frey.

A second test involved touching off an air bag system as newsmen gathered around the car. The noise, louder than that of a shotgun, was followed by inflation of the nine-foot balloon-like bag in a fraction of a second.

The force of the expansion of the bag, which was attached to the underside of the instrument panel, pulled the panel out of shape and the bag was shredded.

"You have to remember that the test you saw involved only an air bag system protecting one of the car occupants," said Frey.

"The federal government's proposal would have a separate air bag system for each occupant and thus when the system was touched off, the force released could damage the car interior considerably."

Action Pending On Board Okays 16 N.C. Candidates

RALEIGH (AP) — The names of 16 candidates who failed to file the required financial reports for their primary campaigns are in the hands of Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan.

Secretary of State Thad Eure sent a list of delinquent filers to Morgan Monday. The attorney general turns over all such cases to solicitors of the appropriate districts, who decide whether to prosecute.

Failure to file the reports is a misdemeanor, but no candidate has ever been prosecuted for failure to file.

Two candidates failed to file either the preliminary reports due 10 days before the May 2 primary or their second reports, due 20 days after the primary. The two are J. Shelton Wicker of Sanford and Paul L. Beck of Lenoir.

Eight candidates failed to file the second report. They are L. P. McLendon Jr. of Greensboro, Archie Taylor of Lillington, Herbert F. Pierce of Graham, Phil S. Edwards of Siler City, Frank Freeman of Dobson, W. Lindsey Stafford Jr. of Linwood, L. C. Nixon of New Bern and L. C. Flowers of Fayetteville.

Friday of Lincolnton, Archie Taylor of Lillington, John W. Twisdale of Smithfield, Fred Darlington III of Burlington and Herbert F. Pierce of Graham.

Try Two For Postal Theft

GREENSBORO (AP) — The trial of a woman postmaster and a man accused of conspiring to rob the Randleman Post Office of $50,000 in cash and stamps in October is scheduled to begin today in U. S. District Court.

The trial was postponed from Monday after an attorney for Mrs. Audrey Hester Cashatt Lineberger, one of the defendants, said he had been unable to obtain some information from the office of U. S. attorney William Osteen.

An attorney for the other defendant, Vernon Paul Kimbrough, said he had just been appointed to defend Kimbrough and had not had enough time to study the case.

Mrs. Lineberger told police after the Oct. 30 robbery that she went to the post office about 8 p.m. to get a Halloween costume for one of her children and that when she arrived two men were robbing the office. They bound her, she said, and left her in a restroom, where she was found.

Several weeks later, Kimbrough was arrested and charged with possessing $10,300 worth of stamps taken from the post office.

Mrs. Lineberger was suspended without pay and later a grand jury indicted Mr. Lineberger and Kimbrough.

Australia's state of South Australia is larger than Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana combined.

Miss Karen Miller Is Bride Of Ronald Tyndall

Miss Karen Suzanne Miller became the bride of Ronald Lee Tyndall in a private double ring ceremony in Hooker Memorial Christian Church on Saturday at three o'clock in the afternoon. The Rev. Robert G. Hufford officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Miller of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. James H. Tyndall of Greenville and the late Mr. Tyndall.

The church was decorated with all brass wedding accessories. In the background of the church were tall standards of emerald greenery, spiral and seven branched candelabra. Preceding to the altar were bouquets of white mums and gladioli. At the altar was a profile prie - dieu where the vows were taken and the bride and bridegroom knelt for the closing prayer and benediction. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Ruth M. Taylor presented a program of nuptial music. Mrs. Maurice Joyner, cousin of the bride, sang "Because" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina length dress of silk organza over peau de soie. The empire bodice, encircled with a band of satin accented with side bow, was fashioned with a batteau neck. A split caftan coat of scallop chanti - lace covered the "A" line silhouette and the bishop sleeves were enhanced with petite bows of satin, ending in ruffle flounce. She wore a strand of pearls given to her by her father from the far east.

She carried a bouquet of white miniature orchids and white carnations centered with a white cattleya orchid tied with long green and white ribbon streamers.

Her shoulder length bouffant veil of silk illusion was attached to a demi - hat of scalloped pearl petals and leaves with inserts of lace sprinkled with crystal stones.

Miss Jean Miller, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and her only attendant. She wore a ballerina length dress of blue chanti - lace over peau de soie. Her shoulder length bouffant veil of blue illusion was attached to a flat bow. She carried a colonial mosegay of mixed summer flowers tied with blue ribbon streamers.

James E. Tyndall, brother of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Arthur Lee Miller Jr., brother of the bride, and William J. Warbesky of Stamford, Conn.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Miller wore a pink street length dress. The bridegroom's mother wore a blue street length dress. Both mothers wore white cattleya orchids.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and is a senior at East Carolina University, where she plans to complete her education. The bridegroom is a graduate of Rose High School and is now serving in the United States Army, presently stationed at Fort Bragg.

Reception

Following the ceremony, a reception given by the bride's parents was held in the ladies parlor of the church.

The refreshment table was covered with a white satin cloth and was centered with an arrangement of white mums and carnations in a five branched silver candelabra. Bouquets of white flowers and greenery were caught on the corners of the table.

After the bride and bridegroom cut the first slice, Mrs. Daniel W. Early of Winston - Salem, aunt of the bride, served the cake and Mrs. Clifton Brock, sister of the bridegroom, poured punch. Presiding at the bride's register was Mrs. Terry Nobles of Cary, sister of the bridegroom.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a brown dress with a white coat and brown and white accessories. She wore a white orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet.

Bride-Elect Entertained

Miss Judy Langley, June 6 bride - elect, was honored Saturday night with a linen shower at the home of Mrs. Tommie Calhoun.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Calhoun and Mrs. Brenda Webber of Raleigh.

A pink and white bridal motif was used throughout the living room. The mantel was centered with a miniature bride and bridegroom under a bridal arch. End tables were centered with shoe string candles branching out from a single mid - point.

The bridal table, where gifts were displayed, was cornered with a paper bride flanked with white tapers. Candleholders were tied with pink bows. Arrangements of pink summer flowers and other white tapers were used elsewhere in the room.

Miss Langley was remembered with a yellow carnation corsage centered with a miniature bride and a gift of linen by the hostesses.

Mrs. Earl House of Dunn, a former student at East Carolina University, was matron of honor. Lt. Den Duskie of Concord and West Point, served as best man.

Honorary bridesmaids included Misses Ann. Megan, and Mary Reilly of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom.

The Rev. E. F. Moseley, acting rector of Chapel of the Cross, officiated.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception breakfast for relatives and close friends was given by the bride's Chi Omega sorority sisters in the parish hall of the chapel. The traditional bridal motif of white and mixed summer flowers in silver and crystal urns was continued throughout the hall.

Mrs. Yeats is a graduate of St. Mary's Junior College in Raleigh and a 1970 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She made her debut at the 1967 Terpsichorean Ball. Prior to her marriage, she was a volunteer teacher of children's special education classes at Butler.

Mr. Yeats is a graduate of Rose High School where he was vice president of SGA, received the Civitan Citizenship Award and was named one of Rose High's outstanding seniors. Annual May Luncheon Held By Garden Club

The Home Pride Garden Club held their annual May luncheon and installation Thursday at the home of Mrs. Bobby Boseman.

Mrs. Joe Clark was co-hostess assisted by Mrs. Frank Thompson and Mrs. Pat Duncan. The luncheon expressed themes from six areas of the world in table settings and centerpieces.

The hostesses' table used a golden ship on a golden pedestal hauling black and green olives arranged as grape bunches and christened the "USS Onassis" as a formal Grecian setting. A white circular linen cloth with lace insets with china, Weatherly, Lindley Platinum crystal and Mignonet sterling completed the settings.

Mrs. Jack Wedden, Mrs. Ted Ramsay and Mrs. Roger Hedorffer used an African theme. Centered on the table was a carved ebony gazelle with a bouquet of wild flowers and grass on a tray. Rattan place mats and bright napkins in enameled rings were used with settings of brown pottery and wooden handled utensils. Carved animals at each place were used.

A Mexican theme was carried out at the table by Mrs. Bob Dominick, Mrs. Lyman Daughtrey and Mrs. Larry Vacek. A blue linen cloth with hand - woven napkins folded in wooden rings were used with pottery place settings. Hand - woven rattan holders held water glasses. An arrangement of dried wild flowers decorated with miniature handmade Mexican hats was displayed in a hand-painted pottery urn.

A setting representing the Philippine Islands by Mrs. Gilmer Hulsey, Mrs. Fred Wagner and Mrs. Charles Brown was spread on a green handmade linen cloth with white hem stitching. White ironstone china, lotus bowls, wooden handled utensils and napkin rings were at each place with authentic Filipino dolls in native dress. The centerpiece was a lotus bowl holding yellow roses and ivy adorned with a butterfly.

A Dutch table by Mrs. Arthur Alford, Mrs. Tom Moran and Mrs. Phil Moore used a wooden show with mixed flowers and a Dutch doll as the centerpiece. The cloth and napkins were white with blue stitching. Settings were white ironstone, hobnail glasses and blue and white handled flatware.

A Jamaican theme was carried out by Mrs. Ledyard Ross and Mrs. Austin Britt. The tropical border of Della Robia dinnerware by Vernon was accented with yellow and white grass placemats, olive stemware by Imperial glass and rust butterfly - shaped napkins in wooden holders. A woven basket filled with fresh fruit completed the setting.

The serving table held blue and white china trays and bowls accented by an arrangement of phlox, Queen Anne's lace and larkspur in a pewter chafing dish. Appetizers were served from a large ironstone bowl centered in a pewter tray holding greenery in the entrance hall.

Officers were installed by outgoing president, Mrs. Moore, who presented the gavel, a garden trowel, to Mrs. Thompson, president for the new year. Other officers include: Mrs. Duncan, vice president; Mrs. Boseman, recording secretary; Mrs. Clark, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Dominick, treasurer; Mrs. Hedorffer, historian; and Mrs. Daughtrey, chaplain.

Guests were Mrs. Frank Layne, Mrs. Andy Warren, Mrs. Lee Boseman, Mrs. Joe Johnson, Mrs. Bill Dawson, Mrs. Steve Coggins, Mrs. Julian Hamilton and Mrs. Tom Harwell.

Shower Given Miss Langley

Miss Judy Langley, June 6 bride - elect of Roger Hardee, was honored last week at a floating miscellaneous shower at the Elm Street Recreation Building.

Hostesses were Mrs. James Crawford, Mrs. Louis Perkins, Mrs. Donnie Bowen and Miss Debbie Crawford.

Guests were greeted by Miss Langley, Mrs. John Langley, mother of the bride - elect, and Mrs. Burney Hardee, mother of the bridegroom - elect.

The refreshment table and the gift display table were covered with white cloths and centered with arrangements of yellow summer flowers with greenery.

The honoree was presented a corsage of daisies by the hostesses.

No Medicaid Trouble In Pitt

Although 28 of North Carolina's 100 counties probably will not be able to meet their bills for Medicaid during June, fortunately Pitt is not among them.

Mrs. Dorothy Bolton, director of the Department of Social Services for Pitt County, has reported that Pitt will have no trouble paying its bills for Medicaid during June.

"At present, I see no problems at all," she said.

Pitt County has between 300 and 350 cases under the Medicaid program which is funded with county, state and federal funds.

It was reported last week that many counties were running into trouble with their finances for the program.

It was reported that if extra funds cannot be found in the affected counties druggist, hospitals, nursing homes, optometrists, chiropractors, dentists and other medical services covered by Medicaid in those counties would not be paid in full in June.

This would mean that the people who have been receiving these services might find them arbitrarily cut off, which would not be in the best interest of those who have come to depend upon them.

Like most such problems, we suppose some solution will be found in the counties which are affected.

It is reassuring, however, that Pitt County appears to be within its budget for the Medicaid program.

Signs That The Glory Days Are Nearing End

That the glory days at the Kennedy Space Center are ended is indicated by the fact that nearly 7,000 workers have been released in ten months and another 500 to 1,000 will leave next month because of a diminished launch schedule.

It has been well known that the space program has been undergoing a scaling down for some time.

It is not likely that our space efforts will be completely ended in the near future, however, and they should not be.

There are still more moon flights scheduled and they should be carried out. Perhaps they will furnish some answers as to how we should direct our space program in the future.

Wallace Plans His Boobytraps

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A booby trap of problems, carefully devised in this cradle of the Confederacy, will explode in the face of Richard Nixon and his Southern strategy if George Wallace wins today's primary runoff for governor.

Wallace, favored to unseat Gov. Albert Brewer, has far-reaching plans designed to give him the balance of power in the Electoral College in 1972 and keep Mr. Nixon on the embarrassed defense between now and then.

These plans, in fact, are intended to promptly begin erosion of Mr. Nixon's Southern gains and give Wallace momentum in Dixie for the first time since his strong third-party Presidential race in 1968.

Gambit No. 1 in the new Wallace plan is a hard challenge to Mr. Nixon dressed up as a political deal. The offer: if Mr. Nixon will send Congress a bill to legalize freedom of choice in school desegregation, Wallace will pledge not to be a Presidential candidate in 1972.

This gambit, in fact, was almost used by Wallace last February. A long, detailed memo from one of his top political braintrusts argued privately to Wallace that he should offer to withdraw from the gubernatorial race in return for the President's sending a freedom-of-choice bill to Congress.

The memo argued that Wallace should quote Mr. Nixon's 1968 campaign words in which he personally underwrote freedom of choice, then demand that the President redeem that pledge with legislation. Wallace finally rejected that approach because it would have put him in an ambiguous position for the governor's race and risk campaign contributions.

If he wins today, however, plans are for the gambit to be resurrected, with Wallace this time offering a pledge not to run for President.

It's a case of heads-I-win, tails-you-lose for Wallace. He knows that Mr. Nixon will not and cannot make any such deal; the Supreme Court has ruled freedom of choice unconstitutional.

This is just one of many political ploys Wallace has ready to undermine Mr. Nixon's Southern strategy and reassert Wallace control in the Deep South. The objective: a South increasingly antagonized over the school issue and a second Wallace Presidential run in 1972, not national in scope but, instead, concentrated on the South.

One such ploy will be a new state law constituting the governor, lieutenant governor, and the state legislature as a super school board for the whole of Alabama. If he can get it passed, that would create major new difficulties for Federal enforcement of school desegregation by making the entire state legislature the defendant in court suits. That's tougher to fight than some local school board or superintendent or even a governor as defendant.

Signs that Wallace can arouse the comparatively quiescent South again are everywhere. All that is needed is his victory today.

For example, Gov. John McKeithen of Louisiana, sensing a Wallace win, telephoned Wallace several weeks ago to knock down newspaper stories claiming that McKeithen himself yearned to lead the South in 1972.

Not so, McKeithen told Wallace (after his third telephone call was finally accepted by Wallace). McKeithen only wanted to play soldier in the ranks, following Wallace his leader.

As leader of the Southern bloc, Wallace's 1972 plan is a new "Southern strategy" of his own. Instead of running a national campaign as in 1968, Wallace plans a frankly regional campaign, his name on as many state ballots as possible but his campaigning concentrated in Southern and Border states.

That is intended to maximize Wallace's electoral votes, exceeding the five states and 45 electoral votes won in 1968. By campaigning hard in the North last time,

Are Weekday Votes Larger?

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH, N. C. — Losers in last Saturday's second primary races, casting about for the reasons for defeat, will ask themselves if the day of the week had something to do with it.

Did significant numbers of voters miss the polls because they went to the beach or made other out-of-town trips typical of an early summer weekend? Would a week-day primary bring a larger turn-out of voters to add their voices to the process of selecting party nominees?

Enough politicians and citizens concerned with voter apathy are answering "Yes" to make it a real possibility that future primaries will be shifted from the traditional Saturday date.

State Rep. W.S. (Sandy) Harris, Jr., of Alamance already has announced his intention to introduce a bill in the 1971 General Assembly to change the primary voting day to Tuesday. Response has been favorable, he reported.

"People have stopped me on the street to say they think it would be a great idea," he said. "I've had only one call from the chairman of a small precinct who was opposed."

Before Harris can introduce his bill, of course, he must get through the fall general election — which, naturally, falls on a Tuesday. Those who look favorably on the change in the primary day include Gov. Bob Scott, according to the Daily Times-News of Burlington. The Governor, in Alamance to vote in the first primary, indicated to the newspaper he would support the legislation proposed by Harris.

The time may be healthy for the change, said Executive Secretary Alex Brock of the State Board of Elections.

The matter has been discussed from time to time, he recalled. In the past, sentiment for retaining the Saturday date has been strong in the East, the largely rural section of the state where Saturday is traditionally the day to go to town, attend to business other than farming — and vote.

"The Board has taken the position that it would not be a constructive change unless it represented as nearly as possible the general consensus of all sections of the state," Brock explained. "Now, some of the main proponents are from the East, so there is the possibility this would be a healthy time to do it."

Several eastern legislators have discussed with Brock the merits of switching the primary date with a view to implementing the change at the '71 session.

Saturday as primary day became embedded in North Carolina political tradition because of the state's agricultural background. Declining farm population and changes in rural life patterns make it less a factor today.

Like all traditions, it yields slowly. Even though Tuesday presents no handicap in getting voters out for the general election, the feeling remains in some quarters that Saturday is the better day for the primary.

Allen Adams, Wake County Democratic chairman, is one who takes a dim view of the proposed switch.

"I'm for anything that will make it more convenient for voters to get to the polls," he said. "But I am not for making it inconvenient for some segments of the population in order to convenience those who want to go to the beach." There are still blacks and blue-collar workers for whom Saturday is the day off from work and the most convenient time to vote, he said.

Secretary of State Thad Eure, who said the change is immaterial as a personal matter, suggested that making Tuesday the primary date would give helpful uniformity in that Tuesday already is the general election day. Any confusion in the voter's mind on the day to vote, primary or general election, would be removed, he said.

A.A. Zollicoffer, attorney and former Vance County legislator, said he'd be inclined to favor the switch. "I used to be able to count 25 or 30 votes lost in a primary because of people out of town," he said.

The real cure for voter apathy, of course, rests with the candidates and not the choice of the day for the election. It has been shown that an active race will bring out the voters while they stay away in droves for a spiritless, waltz-type campaign.

Actually, this year's first primary turn-out compared favorably with the last off-year primary in 1966. Brock reported that the total vote cast on May 2 was 581,845, while the 1966 turn-out was around 576,000. That a 25 per cent turn-out, traditional for a primary lacking in statewide races,

Garden Of The Past

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Memory is the keystone to the greatness of human life.

A flower without a memory may be still a flower, but a man without a memory is no longer human. He is merely an ambulant vegetable, an echo of his instincts.

Happy is he who can enjoy the garden of his memories without too much sadness, recrimination, or regret. You've got a pretty extensive memory garden yourself if you can look back and remember when—

Film star Jimmy Cagney was a Broadway hooper, and Rex Harrison was selling automobiles in London.

You were coming up in the world if you ate in a restaurant that charged a dime instead of a nickel for a glass of beer.

Chorus girls were built more like heifers than ponies.

Mothers didn't have much to say on Monday night because their mouths were sore from holding wooden clothespins all afternoon while they hung up the week's wash to dry on the backyard line.

More horses in America were driven than ridden, and more farmers were gored by bulls than hurt in tractor accidents.

A man could go through life without being told by his doctor that what he needed was more exercise.

It was something of a disgrace for a fellow to lose his job, and if he changed jobs more than once or twice during his working career, he was suspected of being undependable.

No matter how much trouble a husband had with his wife, the neighbors tended to be on his side if he was what they called "a good provider." That was about the highest tribute a married man could receive.

The subject failed most often by high school pupils was Latin.

When a middle-aged patient in the 1920's came limping in with a twisted knee, the doctor knew without asking that he had been trying to learn that new-fangled dance—the Charleston.

America passed an unnoticed milestone on the road to plenty when the second family in the block decided to keep a second car—and put in a second bathroom.

A juvenile delinquent was a smart alec kid who sat in the front row during the era of the silent movies and threw spitballs at the lady piano player.

Nine out of 10 American working men felt they would never have a financial worry the rest of their lives if they could ever earn $100 a week.

Those were the days—remember?

Selling Out A Freedom

Responsible reform of the U.S. postal system merits a high priority on Capitol Hill, but the pending "compromise" bill is worse than no bill at all. This is no compromise. This is a sell-out; and the reforms the bill offers are not worth the price.

In the nature of things, primary attention has focused on a raise for postal workers: How much of a raise, and when would they get it? A great deal also has been written of a corresponding increase in postal rates: How much of an increase, and who would fix it? These issues are important, but they obscure the fatal precedent that is sleeping in this bill. Under the deal worked out between the Nixon administration and the AFL-CIO, it is proposed — fantastic as it seems — simply to sell out the freedom of thousands of non-union postal workers. The bill permits the writing of a union shop contract between the government and the postal unions; under such a contract, every worker would have to join a union within 30 days or lose his job.

It beggars belief that a Republican administration could have made itself party to this deal. The Republican platform of 1968 expressly reaffirmed the GOP's commitment to a right to join, or a right to refrain from joining, a union of public employees. The concept of a union shop in public employment was repudiated by President Kennedy in his day. Labor Secretary Shultz opposed the idea as recently as last November. Former Labor Secretary Goldberg once told a union convention: "I know you will agree with me that the union shop and the closed shop are inappropriate to the Federal government."

Why did Postmaster General Blount surrender? He was told, in so many words, that organized labor would throw its weight again any postal reform unless a union shop were authorized. He also was told that unless the impatient clerks and carriers got their raise, and swiftly, he could expect the postal strike to be resumed. Looking down this double-barreled shotgun, Blount caved in.

But one of the enduring facts of political life is that, while a President proposes, the Congress disposes. The agreement between Blount and George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, is not binding upon members of the House and Senate. They are free to reject this high-handed proposal not only on its merits but also for its effect upon public employment everywhere.

Meany, by his credit, has been utterly frank about his intentions. He told the House Post Office Committee in April that he views the

Other Editors Say Recess Isn't Needed

(Kinston Free Press) A proposal for a nation-wide college recess for two weeks next Fall before the general election has been urged by Sen. Warren Magnusen, Democrat of Washington, and the suggestion may meet with favor in some institutions and among certain politicians who seek to curry favor with college dissidents.

Frankly, we don't see the need for any such recess. Colleges and universities are not so rigid now in their class schedules that students cannot get away for weekends or other periods to participate in home town and home state elections. Sen. Magnusen even suggests that the students be given credit for their work in such elections.

We would be the last to contend that greater participation in all uses of the franchise in this country should not be encouraged at every level, and especially among newer voters who have just reached the voting age. However, we fail to see the need for a two-week interruption of college activities to permit political activity by the students as a group.

Citizenship is not a sometimes thing. It should be a part of our training and our allegiance at all times — not just before elections. That sort of citizenship can best be exemplified by encouraging all to vote and express themselves in a normal way. To call a recess for politics seems to be placing more emphasis on outward activity than it should and to downgrade the educational process which should be so firm that none would want to miss an opportunity to vote, regardless of when it comes or under what conditions.

We think the cause of education, and thereby better government, can better be served by refraining from any such recess.

Strength For Today

THAT DIFFERENT DAY

The Fourth Commandment deals with our remembrance of the Lord's Day: "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy."

There has probably been more disagreement over the meaning of this Commandment than over the meaning of any of the other nine. Some have kept it so literally that it has been a burden both to them, their families, their friends and the community.

The word "holy" means "set apart." We are to set apart one day in the week as a special day. It is not a day of ordinary labors. It is usually observed as a day on which religious services are held. In recent decades it has meant a day when people jumped in their automobiles and went to visit friends and relatives in far places.

There were, of course, no automobiles in the day when the Ten Commandments were set forth. There were no golf courses or tennis courts. External change with the passing years. The people who first received the Ten Commandments wore long flowing robes. There are some millions of people who still wear long flowing robes. Most of us dress in a quite different fashion, but we recognize the fact that the Ten Commandments apply to us and our behavior the same as to those who wore long flowing garments centuries ago.

Make the Sabbath or Sunday different is the basis of this Commandment. The conduct of one age cannot dominate the conduct of another. Certainly we should try to worship on Sunday. We should make it a different day — different in the best sense of that term.

By Earl L. Douglas

By ELMER ROESSNER

Unless the Treasury and the Federal Reserve pull a mighty big rabbit out of the national hat, the business turn-around will not come in June.

While President Nixon and Federal Reserve Chairman

ELMER ROESSNER

Arthur Burns has been making what many stock analysts have interpreted as bullish sounds, the Department of Commerce has released a report on a survey showing there was little change in consumers' plans to buy from January to April. (The day before Commerce

Secretary Maurice Stans had said, "almost every significant indicator tells us that our economy is powerful and it is stable.")

Nothing has happened since the survey to change consumers' outlooks. In fact, the May skid in the stock market has dampened the consumer outlook even more. Many people who do not play the market have become nervous and have cut expenditures.

The Commerce survey indicated that although there was an increase in the number of households expecting to buy a used car compared with the number a year ago, there was no corresponding increase in new car expectations.

No Housing Boom Commerce added, "Expectations to buy remain depressed. The index of expected purchases, based on both six- and twelve-month expectations, was 87.9 in April 1970, far below the 103.4 of April 1968.

The survey also reported that while 40 per cent of the households said their incomes had increased during the previous 12 months, 12.5 per cent said income had declined.

On top of this, there is the certainty of an increase in the unemployment rate.

Thousands of college students have already begun to pour into the labor market. Postpone of capital spending, as shown by the recent National Industrial Conference Board survey, will slow the seasonal rise in hirings. The decline in corporate profits is causing layoffs.

One layoff can lead to two counted as unemployed. When a husband is laid off, the wife often volunteers to find a job and, until she finds one, she is also counted as unemployed. "Kicked out of bed," is the term applied to wives joining the labor force. Some New Jobs

There will be some countervailing factors. The travel and vacation season will burgeon in June, creating many jobs in transportation, resorts, camps and roadside businesses. However, if people continue to sit on their wallets, the rise may be less than last year.

Farm employment will rise seasonally. Hiring for vacation replacements in offices may be less than usual, as profit-squeezed firms decide to reduce summer hiring. The rise in unemployment may add to unrest. Unemployed college youths may be inclined to continue to agitate for whatever it is they want. Minority groups, often having little seniority in jobs, will experience most layoffs. And when they are not the first to be dropped, white workers may accuse them of "taking our jobs."

Health Officers Hunt Way To Control VD Surge

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer
New York City is trying to "brainwash" doctors; Savannah, Ga., is starting an "epidemiological blitz," and if it could be done, Hollywood physicians would like to "build a wall around the city."

The purpose behind the activity is to try to stamp out venereal disease. It is an old problem but of new concern now because VD is again surging across the nation.

One form of VD, gonorrhea, is so widespread and out of control that public health officials say flatly that it is an epidemic.

And the American Social Health Association predicts a rise in infectious syphilis, after the rates of infection had dropped over the years. The monthly figures already are creeping up again.

The U.S. Public Health Service's Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga., estimates that there were at least 1.5 million cases of gonorrhea in the country last year, although only 494,227 were reported.

For syphilis, the estimate is about 70,000 cases, with only 18,679 reported.

This underreporting, mostly by doctors, makes it difficult for public health workers to track down much of the VD, specialists say. This aspect of the problem is so great that New York City Health Commissioner Mary C. McLaughlin said her department is trying to "brainwash" all doctors on the need for accurate reporting.

"Older doctors who have had patients for a long time try to protect them," she said. "We have a great deal of hope for the newer, younger doctors. We're trying to brainwash them all, but especially the newer doctors."

Savannah, Ga., has organized what it calls an "epidemiological blitz," reports William F. Schwartz, chief of educational services for the VD branch of the Communicable Disease Center.

Savannah, with a population of 150,000 in the 1960 census,

"has gotten completely organized to carry the message about VD to every house, and there are 62,000 houses," Schwartz said.

Six thousand volunteers will visit each home with information about VD. Three clinics, staffed by volunteer nurses and doctors, have been set up. A massive educational campaign is to be carried by newspapers, radio and television.

"If it works there," Schwartz said, "it should work in cities of up to one million population."

Dr. William J. Brown, head of the Communicable Disease Center's VD branch, said one reason for the spread of VD is the mobility of the population.

"These diseases spread rapidly," he said. "A New York City man may contract the disease and it may not be manifest until he is out in California. People are constantly on the move."

Los Angeles, for example, has fought VD by establishing health centers over the last 10 years and reports a considerable reduction among permanent residents. But there is a steady stream of newcomers and visitors who contribute to the problem.

At a Hollywood public health office, a spokesman agreed: "If we could build a wall around the city, or any part of it, we could lick venereal disease within 48 hours."

The Social Health Association said that if the proper steps of education, reporting and public health work are taken, the apparently rising syphilis problem can be controlled.

"Gonorrhea is a different kettle of fish altogether," the association said. "It's out of control."

Of all reportable communicable diseases in the country, the Public Health Service said, gonorrhea is No. 1.

Most of the gonorrhea, and the syphilis, occur in the 20-24 age group, followed by the 15-19 and 25-29 age groups.

Dr. James S. McKenzie-Pollock of the Social Health Association said a major reason for the spread of gonorrhea is that there is a reservoir of the disease in women.

Unlike the man, gonorrhea in its early stages can produce no symptoms in the woman. Unaware she has gonorrhea, a woman can infect others before discovery of any symptoms.

"A significant number of females are walking around with gonorrhea," McKenzie-Pollock said.

Another problem, he said, is that there is no simple blood test for gonorrhea, as there is for syphilis.

"The great need in research," McKenzie-Pollock said, "is for someone to come up with a test for gonorrhea to be done in the doctor's office. We need to pour money into this; it's a great need at the moment. We need to start doing mass screening of females."

Still another problem is the fact that some strains of the gonorrhea organism are building up resistance to penicillin.

Freer sex habits among women over the last 20 years also contribute to the increase, McKenzie-Pollock said. The use of contraceptive pills also is a factor, he added, with some people assuming that the pill protects against VD.

And, he said, there is less public awareness that there even is a VD problem at this time than at any other time in this century.

McKenzie-Pollock added still another reason for the growing problem: "Federal funding faltered."

The number of federally paid VD epidemiologists—public health experts who investigate and track down VD—has been cut in half across the country, from 800 to 400 in the past year because of funding problems, he said.

"The main detective force was halved in the past year. This and the rise are cause and effect but not the only one."

Today In Washington

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has assured 10-year-old Gordon Danesie of Essex, Md., that his brother went to heaven after being killed in Vietnam.

The brother, S. Sgt. Richard J. Hill, was killed Dec. 9, 1969, at the age of 24. He had won 13 medals for heroism.

"You asked me if Rick is in heaven. I'm sure he is," the President wrote in reply to a letter from Danesie, forwarded to him by Rep. Clarence D. Long, D-Md.

"He is also in another important place—in your heart and spirit. Don't ever forget what he died for."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ocean explorer Fred Dickson Jr. says he believes he has found remains of Christopher Columbus' flagship Santa Maria on a reef off northern Haiti.

He said Monday a three-man team will begin excavation June 15 at a spot where he found some ship debris in 1967.

Dickson, of Palm Beach, Fla., found two iron rudder clamps, pottery shards, wood, a copper rod and washer, a silver nail and a brass nail.

Experts say all but the rod and washer could have been made in Columbus time. Sponsors of Dickson's project explain more than one wreck could be at the site.

Historians say the Santa Maria ran aground in the vicinity of Cape Haitian on Christmas Eve, 1492. Some say Columbus' men dismantled the ship for the wood.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is setting up quick-response teams to clean up oil spills that the polluters can't handle fast enough, but ultimate responsibility for cleanup remains with polluters themselves.

Russell E. Train, chairman of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, said Monday that five federal departments and agencies are coordinated under a new plan to handle spills.

He said the Coast Guard would establish various national strike teams, and regional teams would be set up at major U.S. ports.

Train said a National Response Center has been established in Washington.

Burton Will Try Directing Film

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Burton is going to try his hand as a film director while also co-starring with his wife, Elizabeth Taylor, and Gregory Peck in "The Defector."

The screenplay, which Burton will write, will be the movie version of a novel by Charles Collingwood, chief foreign correspondent of CBS Television. The novel's locale is North Vietnam.

Egg Smacked Harold Wilson

LONDON (AP) — A heckler got Prime Minister Harold Wilson right between the eyes with an egg at a political rally.

The egg was thrown during a Monday night meeting in suburban Harrow, where Wilson was appealing for votes for his Labor party in the June 18 national election.

Wilson calmly brushed the egg drippings away and walked off to a nearby party headquarters.

Doctors Find Way That Helps Shrink Swollen Tissues Of Painful Hemorrhoids

... Caused By Inflammation And Infection.

An exclusive formula, Preparation H gives prompt, temporary relief in many cases from rectal pain, itching of tissues and actually helps shrink swollen hemorrhoid tissues caused by inflammation and infection.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients showed this to be true. Preparation H also lubricates to protect inflamed, irritated tissues and helps make bowel movements more comfortable. Ointment or suppositories. (Adv.)

Ice Cream In Big Buckets

RALEIGH (AP) — Tar Heel housewives will soon be able to buy ice cream in five-quart, reusable plastic buckets.

The North Carolina Board of Agriculture approved Monday a resolution to permit use of the new container Monday. The vote was 5-3.

Rep. Sam Johnson, D-Wake, Ben Kilgore of Pine State Creamery and Joe Ashcraft of Shamrock Industries argued for the resolution, saying the new package would benefit the consumer.

The action came during the first day of a two-day board meeting.

The board was to hold a public hearing this morning on the fertilizer grades to be marketed in the state during the coming season. Also today the board was to consider provisions of the state pesticide law which controls the use or re-use of containers for pesticides.

The board approved appointments of two new division directors in the Department of Agriculture Monday.

F. Carlyle Teague was named director of the publications division to succeed Mrs. Pauline DeCosta, who is retiring June 30. Dr. William Y. Cobb was appointed state chemist and director of the analytical division, succeeding Dr. E. W. Constable, who is also retiring June 30.

Bail Asked For Huey Newton

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bail has been asked for imprisoned Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton, whose manslaughter conviction has been overturned.

Newton, 28, has been in custody since Oakland policeman John Frey was shot to death with his own service revolver after he stopped a car Newton was driving on Oct. 28, 1967.

The California Court of Appeal overturned Newton's voluntary manslaughter conviction on Friday, holding that the jury was not instructed properly on Newton's claim that he was unconscious from a bullet wound in the abdomen at the time Frey was shot and a fellow officer was wounded.

Charles Garry, chief defense counsel for the Black Panther party, filed the application for bail Monday.

The state has indicated it will appeal the appeals court decision.

pending bill as "only the beginning." If he can win a union shop in the Post Office Department, with its 750,000 workers, he will seek the same kind of collective bargaining "for all civilian workers of the Federal government."

The AFL-CIO News added the obvious echo: "What's good enough for Uncle Sam ought to be good enough for every State, county, and city."

It is one thing for a private corporation to negotiate a union shop contract binding its workers to union membership; such contracts are forbidden in right-to-work States, but Taft-Hartley permits them elsewhere. In any event, a right to work for U.S. Steel is a qualified right.

But the right of a citizen to work for his own U.S. Government approaches an absolute right. It cannot be conditioned upon the payment of union dues. If a man is otherwise qualified to carry the mail, it is simply none of the government's business whether he wishes to belong, or not to belong, to a labor union.

Amendments to delete this intolerable provision from the bill were offered in committee, on both the House and Senate sides. The Amendments were defeated, but they will be back on the floor.

he reduced drastically appearances in North and South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, and Texas — and lost them all. By concentrating there in 1972, Wallace might collect twice as many electoral votes and hold the balance of power in the Electoral College.

That will be harder to sell in the South. It means conditioning Southern voters to a complicated "balance-of-power" strategy rather than a "win" strategy. Its benefits to Wallace — and its threat to Mr. Nixon and the two-party system — could be vast.

Jenkins Cites Area's Growth Of Methodism

Methodists from throughout the east and Piedmont were welcomed to Greenville Tuesday for their annual conference session which runs through Friday Sessions are being held at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, president of East Carolina University, was among those who spoke at the opening session.

He contrasted Methodism of a century ago "when not a single businessman of the community was a member of any church . . . Methodist or otherwise."

The report of the Methodist preacher assigned in the 1870's "was not a flattering appraisal to say the least," Dr. Jenkins reported.

"That was 1870 when the grass was greener, the apples sweeter, the people better and the church flourishing," we would be led to believe today.

Contrasting Methodism today with that of a century ago he said "Methodism penetrates every facet of community life and . . . is a potent force in Greenville."

In citing the growth of the denomination in the city he noted that in 1963 when conference last met in Greenville "there were two churches and 2,000 members." Seven years later there are three churches and almost 2,800 members, "a growth of almost forty per cent at a time when Methodism across the land is showing a decline in membership."

Jenkins is a member of the St. James Methodist Church here.

amendment did not affect anyone who has moved from the projects' since March 24.

The workshop, Lamm added, was sponsored by the Carolinas Council of Housing and Redevelopment.

All units in the Meadowbrook, Kearney-Park and Moyewood sub-divisions were filled during the month, Mrs. Streeter reported. Average monthly rent fluctuated slightly due to the implementation of the Brooke Amendment.

Dubber noted that the City Council is expected to act Thursday night on a proposal involving the city's payment of interest on local housing loans exceeding six per cent.

Currently, the Authority pays up to six per cent of the interest owed to the federal government for loans but the rates now exceed the six per cent the Authority pays. Hud has approved a change in the contracts allowing another body, (the city) to pay the excess on the loans.

Lamm said that at most, the city would pay around $1,200 a year but probably would be no where near that figure. In effect, the city is being asked to pay three-eighths of one per cent excess interest on current rates.

Economists refer to the American people as "Affluent Consumers." To the family breadwinner whose wife just told him of the latest series of price hikes at the supermarket, this is hard to believe.

The daily grind of trying to keep up with the rising cost of living doesn't give us time to think about other matters. Many of us feel we are racing ahead at full speed just to stand still. At times, it seems discouraging. But that's the price we pay for not curbing inflationary pressures by reducing unnecessary spending.

However, there is a brighter side to this dark picture of our economy. It might be encouraging to look at it. It should strengthen our determination to fight inflation.

At mid-year 1969 (the latest figures available) the American consumer was worth over $2 trillion! Seems hard to believe but it's true. Finance Facts, a monthly publication of consumer financial behavior, showed the breakdown of people's assets to be:

- $311 billion in currency and bank deposits
- $138 billion in savings shares
- $318 billion in insurance and pension reserves
- $128 billion in government securities
- $667 billion in corporate stocks and bonds

These are only our current assets. Fixed assets include: $588 billion equity in home ownership; $331 billion equity in durable goods.

When economists call us affluent consumers, they have some justification for the statement.

But because we are affluent—and own these assets, the burden for conserving them becomes greater. We must work harder to curb inflation. If we permit the purchasing power of the dollar to shrink, the value of our assets will drop accordingly.

Possibly, if we think of this aspect of inflation rather than the daily bout with prices in the supermarket, the affect of inflation will be brought home more dramatically.

The solution lies in an exercise of will-power. If we defer unnecessary spending and curb our tendency to buy on impulse rather than reason, we could flatten out the spiraling price increases. It stands to reason that if there is a reduced market for goods, production will be curtailed and prices will drop. As prices drop, the purchasing power of the dollar increases and we maintain the value of our assets.

People spend a lifetime acquiring some degree of wealth. It is almost criminal to see it dissipated by our own folly.

Robersonville In State Battle

The Robersonville Rams chase their second State Class A Baseball Title in the past five years Friday when they open a best-of-three series with Western champ Farmer.

The Rams will serve as the host team for the playoffs, set Friday through Monday. The games, Friday, Saturday, and if necessary, Monday, will be played each time at 8:15 p.m.

The Rams come into the series with a 16-6 record for the season. "We've been mighty lucky," Coach Noland Respess said. "We've gotten good pitching in the playoffs, and some timely hitting."

Respess will probably go with ace Glenn Forbes in the opening game, then come back with Benny Knox in the second. "Our pitching has really been surprising in the playoffs," he said.

Leading the Robersonville team at the plate has been Danny Stalls and Timmy James. Stalls was hitting at a .490 clip, while James was batting .378 going into last Friday's Eastern finals.

"But the team we're playing is a tough one," Respess said.

Farmer, coached by Woody Younts, has posted an 18-1 record for the season. "They have two outstanding pitchers," Respess said.

Leading the mound staff is Kendall Myers, who posted an 11-0 season this year. He struck out an average of two per inning, and allowed only six earned runs this year. The other top hurler is Randy Johnson, who has a 6-1 mark.

Farmer also has good hitting. Myers leads the team with a .360 mark, followed by Terry Johnson at .350, Randy Johnson .348, Junior Hunt .345, and Ronald Lanier .340. Hunt and Randy Johnson each have six homers to their credit this season.

"They are experienced," Respess said. "This is the fourth straight year the team has reached the playoffs. We look for a real tough series from them."

Graniteers In 8-2 Victory

The Graniteers inched out into the lead in the Tar Heel League yesterday with a 8-2 victory over the Exchange.

The win lifted the Graniteers a half-game ahead of the idle Moose, with a 6-1 record. The Moose are 5-1. They are followed by Pepsi-Cola, 4-2, the Exchange, 2-5, and Integon and the Elks, both 1-5.

The Exchange took the lead in the opening inning with a run. Mike Belton singled and moved up on Darrell Roebuck's walk and Mike Brewington's out. He scored from third on a wild pitch.

But in the bottom of the first, the Graniteers came up with six runs to put the game on ice. James Weeks singled and Howard Vainright walked. Jim Wilkerson singled, loading the bases. Walks to Macon Moyer and Joel Clark brought in Weeks and Vainright. Kyle Wills reached on a fielder's choice, but Wilkerson was caught at the plate. Jay Chenier singled to score Moyer.

and a walk to Chris Moyer brought in Clark.

Weeks, up for the second time, walked, forcing in Wills, and a single by Vainright brought Chenier over.

The Graniteers picked up another in the third. Chris Moyer singled and Weeks got a hit. Both advanced on a passed ball, and Vainright got a hit to score Moyer.

The final Graniteer run came in the fifth. Wilkerson reached on a fielder's choice and moved up when Macon Moyer doubled. Wills walked, loading the bases and H.L. Austin was hit by a pitch, scoring Wilkerson.

The Exchange scored its other run in the sixth. Brewington walked, stole both second and third and scored on a passed ball.

Weeks, Vainright, and Chris Moyer each had two hits for the Graniteers while no one had more than one for the Exchange.

Kuhn Unhappy Over 'Ball Four'

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Jim Bouton says he has no immediate plans to write another book ... but isn't sorry about the one he's already written, the controversial Ball Four.

"I'm glad I wrote the book," the Houston right-hander said Monday after emerging from a two-hour meeting with Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Kuhn reprimanded Bouton, in what amounted to a verbal slap on the wrist, with this statement to newsmen:

"I advised Mr. Bouton of my displeasure with these writings and have warned him against future writings of this character. Under all the circumstances, I have concluded that no other action was necessary."

Bouton's book, co-authored with Leonard Shecter, editor of Look Magazine, concerned his playing days with the New York Yankees. He made personal dis-losures of many players, including superstar Mickey Mantle.

The book has not yet been released, although excerpts of it have appeared in Look.

Bouton was accompanied at the meeting by Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association and Dick Miller, an association lawyer.

While they huddled, youngsters demonstrated outside with signs reading, "Kuhn Stop Repression And Harassment," "Jim Bouton Must Not Be Repressed," and "No Punishment For Exposing The Truth."

Bouton said he thought the demonstration was "terrific."

Bouton, who was to rejoin his team for a game tonight at the Astrodome, said he didn't expect any disciplinary action from club officials.

Murphy Gets Horse As Prize

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "I hope he doesn't eat too much." Big Bob Murphy wasn't talking about a newborn son, or about a long-lost uncle come to visit. He spoke of a thoroughbred he had just won playing golf.

Murphy won the yearling colt in Monday's aptly named Kentucky Thoroughbred Pro-Celebrity Golf Tournament at the Hurstbourne Country Club, dropping a six-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff to defeat Gay Brewer.

Both finished regulation play in three-under-par 69.

Murphy's quip was typical of the free-and-easy atmosphere about the tournament, sponsored by the Louisville Area Chamber of Commerce to raise money for Louisville General Hospital.

With comedians like Jimmy Durante and Pat Henry around, it was difficult for most of the pros to get down to serious business.

Each professional, including Memphis Open winner Dave Hill, Frank Beard, Julius Boros, Bobby Nichols, Tony Jacklin, and Lee Trevino, received $1,000 for his appearance.

Murphy's thoroughbred was sired by Kentucky Jug out of Miss Petare. His prize probably will cost him about $6,000 for a year's room and board.

Some of the celebrities playing or attending the tournament were singer Bobby Goldsboro, bandleader Les Brown, ex-jockey Eddie Arcaro, former Green Bay Packers Paul Hornung and Jerry Kramer, Al Hirt, Alabama football Coach Paul Bryant and actor Dale Robertson.

In With A Triple

Reeves Looks For A Tougher Cowboy Camp

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Danny Reeves has always been a level shooter.

You might think that since he's become part of the establishment of the Dallas Cowboys as a player-coach he would be less frank. Well—if anything—he's more candid.

"Our team faces more pressure than ever this year ... everybody is looking for something to happen," Reeves says. "We will have a very, very tough training camp."

Of course, the Cowboy playoff flops of the past four years are well documented. They were the two playoff losses to Cleveland the championship heartbreakers to Green Bay.

Reeves looks for Coach Tom Landry to be much more severe this coming season, because of the playoff breakdowns.

"I think Coach Landry feels maybe he has been lax on the players in the past ... thinks he should be more disciplined with the players," Reeves said.

"I'd hate to be in his shoes and make that decision. Maybe as a team as a whole we need to have a tougher attitude."

Reeves gives an inkling of what the Cowboy philosophy will be this year.

"I think there will be more stress on individuals beating persons man-to-man instead of on finesse," Reeves says.

"There won't be so much emphasis on trying to feel people. It will be up to the individual players to whip their man."

Landry's multiple offenses with its varied formations and other gimmicks isn't a dead theory, Reeves points out.

"I think Kansas City proved it's the coming thing in football when it won the Super Bowl," Reeves says. "It's the thing to do if you can't play somebody man-to-man. It makes sense to play a lot of power football, too, when you have somebody on the team like Calvin Hill."

You get the feeling talking to Reeves that there will be much more emphasis on the "coach" part of his title this year.

"I've got to play it by ear depending on how my knees do," he says. "I've been running and there is some fluid on them. It's a little discouraging."

The five-year veteran who was a free agent find from South Carolina suffered torn ligaments in his right knee in 1968. He hasn't been the same running back since.

"I'm real excited about my job as backfield coach," he says. "I know now it's eventually the line of work I wanted to go into. I'm fortunate to be associated with one of the smartest head coaches in football."

"You think you're pretty smart after a few years in the league as a player. But you get into the coaching end and you realize how much work is involved in learning the game.

St. James Is Still Unbeaten; Grace Loses

The National Division of the Church Softball League suffered three losses in four games last night in play, with one of the losers divisional leader Grace. American Divisional leader St. James, rolled on, however.

In the games, Gum Swamp nipped Immanuel, 11-10, Black Jack rolled to a 13-2 win over First Christian, St. James beat Piney Grove, 14-6, and First Presbyterian defeated Grace, 5-4.

In the American division, St. James is now 8-0, followed by Presbyterian with a 5-4 record, and Trinity at 4-3. Meadowbrook is fourth at 3-4, followed by Gum Swamp, 3-5, and First Christian, 0-9.

Grace leads the National Division with a 6-2 mark, while Black Jack is just behind at 5-3. They are followed by Oakmont, 4-4, Immanuel and Piney Grove, both 4-5, and Mt. Pleasant, 2-4.

In the first game last night, Presbyterian pushed over a run in the first inning to take the lead, and then came up with two more in the third for a 3-0 lead.

Grace came back in the fourth to score twice, and then added another in the sixth, tying it up. Presbyterian pushed over two in the top of the eighth, however, and then held Grace to only one in its half of the frame for the win.

Johnston, Briley and Knowles led the Presbyterian hitting with two each, while Sammy Pugh and Oscar Holloman had two each for Grace.

Piney Grove moved ahead of St. James with one in the first and two more in the third before the Methodists exploded. They picked up one in the third, then came up with six in the fourth to wrap it up.

St. James added three more in the fifth and more in the sixth for their 14-run total. Piney Grove picked up three more in the sixth.

Ronald Vincent led St. James with four, while Dave Wilcox had three and Roy Carawan, Joe Brown, Jim Smith and Rusty Jacobs had two each. No one had more than one for Piney Grove. Black Jack pushed over two in the first as Mills homered. They came up with six more in the second as Peele homered, making it 8-1 as Christian scored once in the first.

Black Jack added two more in the sixth, one in the sixth and two in the seventh. Christian picked up its other run in the third.

Mills, R. Dixon and R. Hardee led Black Jack with two hits each, while Castellow led Christian with three, and Howell had two.

Gum Swamp jumped into the lead in the final game with five runs in the first inning. Immanuel followed that up with four in its half of the inning. Gum Swamp added another in the second, and then picked up four more in the fourth for a 10-4 lead.

Immanuel scored once in the fourth, and again in the fifth. Gum Swamp scored its 11th and winning run in the sixth, then held off a rally by Immanuel in the sixth, as the Baptists scored four times.

B. Pollard, J. Tripp and J. Pollard each had three more Gun Swamp, while Coggins, G. Harris and Hathaway had two each. For Immanuel, Carroll had three, and Jenkins, Evans and Roberson had two each.

League Chiefs Testify Today

NEW YORK (AP) — The presidents of the National and American leagues were expected to take the stand today in the controversial Curt Flood baseball suit.

Chub Feeney, the National League president, was the only witness in day-long proceedings Monday. American League President Joe Cronin and Bing Devine, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, waited in the wings.

Feeney, who continues his testimony today, agreed Monday "it would be fair" to relax some rules of baseball's reserve clause. He said he would favor a change in the reserve clause, letting a player become a free agent at the age of 55.

Flood's suit against baseball and the major league owners is directed at the reserve clause, charging it is a form of slavery which binds a player to a team for life without individual recourse.

Flood, an all-star outfielder for the Cardinals for many years, brought his suit after he was swapped to the Philadelphia Phillies during the off-season.

Cross-examined by one of Flood's lawyers, Jay Topkis, Feeney was first asked if he would favor a change in the rules that made a man a free agent—a change the owners have steadfastly refused to grant.

"Yes," he retorted. "How about 55 years of age," Topkis asked, trying to get something on the record.

"That would be fair," Feeney said. He defended the stand of owners—that the reserve clause should not be abolished because it was necessary to baseball.

Feeney said farm clubs "would be the first to go under" if the clause was eliminated because wealthy teams would have all the advantages in the more costly competition that would follow.

Describing his dealings with players as a general manager, Feeney said, "Contract negotiations are very real. The club needs the player as much as the player needs the club."

Dodgers Battle Rain, Cubs, And Come Out On Top With Victory

By HAL BOCK Associated Press Sports Writer

The skies over Chicago and Don Sutton's career record against the Cubs weren't the very best recommendations for Los Angeles to start Monday's ball game. But Los Angeles went ahead anyway and, like most things have lately, everything turned out well for the Dodgers.

Sutton, who had lost 13 of 14 career decisions against the Cubs, waited out an hour and seven minute rain delay at the start for another shot. Then, after the Dodgers rallied for three runs in the sixth inning, Sutton sweated out another hour and 32 minutes of rain before the game was called and the Dodgers won 5-4.

In Monday's only other game, Pittsburgh trimmed San Diego 5-1.

San Francisco's game at St. Louis was postponed by rain and all the other major league clubs had the day off.

Billy Grabarkewicz ripped a two-run homer in the sixth, climaxing the Dodgers' comeback rally against loser Bill Hands, 7-3. Hands had held the Dodgers hitless after being tagged for three straight hits and two runs at the very start of the game.

Then, with LA trailing 4-2 and the skies looking ominous, Willie Davis opened the sixth with a triple. Wes Parker doubled him home and Grabarkewicz followed with his fifth homer of the season and second in as many days.

Sutton, 7-5, retired the Cubs in the bottom half of the sixth and then the rain washed out the remainder of the game.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Dodgers and moved them into second place in the National League's Western Division.

Dock Ellis, 4-4, scattered six hits and scored two runs himself, helping Pittsburgh whip San Diego.

Matty Alou and Willie Stargell each cracked a pair of doubles for the Pirates and Ellis' leadoff single started a two-run rally in the third inning.

Altitude Again Sports Problem

By CHARLES GREEN Associated Press Sports Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Soccer's 1970 world championship in Mexico has renewed the old altitude controversy, a controversy Mexicans thought was put to permanent rest after the 1968 Olympic Games.

But the altitude—all the games will be played more than a mile in the sky—does cause problems, does cause controversy and does provide a convenient excuse for a loser.

Dr. Roger Bannister, a retired British miler, predicted before the games of the 19th Olympics in Mexico City in 1968 that this city's 7,347-foot altitude could possibly kill some distance runners and would definitely be an obstacle to record performances.

Yet the athletes in the games bettered 96 world records and 483 Olympic records. The totals in Tokyo four years previous were only 42 and 354. And then all went home alive.

The 16 nations which are competing in the final rounds of the tournament for sport's most prestigious trophy, the Jules Rimet Cup, are divided into four groups. The groups play at:

- Mexico city—7,347 feet above sea level.
- Guadalajara—5,500 feet.
- Leon—6,500 feet.
- Toluca—8,300 feet.
- Puebla—7,000 feet.

The latter two cities are considered one site with the teams in that group alternating games between Puebla and Toluca.

Bannister, not convinced by the teams of reports made by hundreds of doctors after thousands of tests before and during the Olympics, has again predicted trouble with the altitude and again criticized soccer officials for selecting Mexico for such an important event.

Some of the coaches agreed with him but they point out the altitude will affect everyone, not just the English, and for some of the teams the heat, not the altitude, will be the biggest problem. Tournament play opened Sunday in Mexico City when the Soviet Union and Mexico played to a scoreless tie. Three more games were set for this afternoon—in Guadalajara, Puebla and Leon.

"The altitude hurt us," said Soviet Coach Gavril Katchalin after the first match. "We have been here 20 days and we are still not back to our best form. But the altitude affects every team equally. It is just something we must adjust to."

There is less oxygen in the air at this altitude so athletes become short of breath quicker and, more important, their muscles get less oxygen from the blood stream than at sea level.

Sir Alf Ramsey, coach of the defending champion English team, is more concerned about what happens to a player after a game than during competition.

Sir Alf took his squad on a four-game tour to Bogota and Quito, South American cities with an even higher altitude, to tune them up for the title defense. In the first match he played 11 men for the game's full 90 minutes.

"After the game they appeared to be no more exhausted than normal after a match," he said. "But what surprised us was the length of time necessary for recovery. Four days later against Ecuador it was clear they had not fully recovered from the previous match."

This becomes vitally important because the World Cup matches are scheduled with three or four days of rest between games. If a team's best players cannot regain their top form during this rest period, the team is likely to be in trouble. So teams such as England, which came to Mexico with the starting line-up pretty much settled might be forced into making wholesale changes. Players might leapfrog from game to game, playing one match, resting one match and then playing again.

Trevino Gives A Free Lesson

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Golf Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Notes from the pro golf tournament trail:

Lee Trevino was talking about the way he hits the ball, low and with a slight fade. "Most of the guys out here are hookers," the talkative Trevino said. "I hit it with a fade, just like a lot of nine-handicappers do."

"The only difference is that I aim it left and it winds up right in the middle of the fairway. The nine handicapper tees it up, aims it down the middle and it's in the woods."

"And he won't learn. He'll do the same thing next time and he's back in those woods again. If he'd aim it left he'd be down the middle. But that's why he's got a nine handicap and I'm playing for $100,000 a week."

Singer Glen Campbell, as many show business types, is an avid golf fan and player. But he has to hold a record of some sort. In the first 20 tournaments this year, he played in eight pro-ams, from California to Florida.

Jack Nicklaus was explaining his thinking in planning to play in the Kemper this week and skipping the prestigious Western Open in Chicago next week.

"I've played in the western three years in a row now," Nicklaus said, "and I haven't played in Charlotte for some time. I just thought it would be more fair this way."

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave Metchik's two second-half goals gave the Atlanta Chiefs a 2-2 tie with Hertha Berlin in an international soccer match in Atlanta Stadium Sunday night.

In addition to Perez, the list of nominees in the NL includes the following leading hitters: Roberto Clemente, Pittsburgh right fielder, .346; Denis Menke, Houston shortstop, .335; and Richie Hebner, Pittsburgh third baseman, .331.

Such long-ball hitters as Milwaukee outfielder Danny Walton (38 RBI) and San Diego first sacker Nate Colbert (17 homers) need the write-in vote.

The National League's top ten has six who were not nominated. In addition to Carty and Grabarkewicz, they are Dick Dietz, San Francisco catcher, .350; Clarence Gaston, San Diego outfielder, .337; Ken Henderson, San Francisco outfielder, .335; and Art Shamsky, New York Mets' first baseman-outfielder, .331.

Now, automation has taken over and Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's face may be red because of it. Computer cards with a slate of candidates drawn up during the spring training to allow for printing and distribution show some glaring omissions.

Alou is clubbing the ball at a .344 clip for the Oakland Athletics and Johnson is hitting .366 for the California Angels. Other American League non-nominees in the top ten are Cleveland's Vada Pinson, .336, and veteran Al Kaline of Detroit, .329.

Omissions On All-Star Blank

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball returned the all-star voting to the fans this year—the first time since 1957 when Cincinnati Reds fans stuffed the ballot box.

Now, automation has taken over and Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's face may be red because of it. Computer cards with a slate of candidates drawn up during the spring training to allow for printing and distribution show some glaring omissions.

Such top hitters as Rico Carty, Bill Grabarkewicz, Felipe Alou and Alex Johnson were not included and need a heavy write-in vote for the July 14 starting team at Cincinnati.

Meanwhile, Ken Harrelson, out all season so far after a spring training injury, and Mike Shannon, sidelined most of the season by a kidney ailment, are listed.

The voting on the candidates began last Saturday and will run through June 28.

A check of the top ten hitters in each of the two leagues through games of Monday, June 1, shows that 10 of the 20 were not nominated by major league managers and player representatives during the spring.

One of the most embarrassing omissions from the list of nominees is Carty, the Atlanta Braves' slugger who tops the National League with a .431 mark, or 42 points better than any other regular (at least 125 at bats) in either league.

Carty, who hit .556 during the past week, also has 14 homers and 45 runs batted in.

Grabarkewicz, a rookie surprise for the Los Angeles Dodgers at third base, is batting .373.

The Worry Clinic Jealous Mate Feels Inferior

Nita was almost insane with jealousy. Yet jealousy merely advertises to the world the fact that its victim feels inferior to others of her own sex. It intimates that, "I'm below par. I don't have what it takes. So other women can outbid me. Ergo, I must watch my husband like a hawk!"

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M.D.

CASE N-515: Nita P., aged 26, is an insanely jealous wife. "Dr. Crane," her innocent husband exclaimed, "Nita will not let me out of her sight, almost literally.

"At church or any social meeting, she sticks to me like a leech.

"And if I happen to be delayed 10 minutes due to heavy evening traffic, she accuses me of having taken some girl home en route from my office.

"Yet she is a very pretty girl, so what could make her so exceedingly jealous?"

Jealousy is usually a sign of a sexual inferiority complex.

For the jealous person is unsure of herself, despite the fact she may have perfect "measurements" and facial beauty.

For the jealous woman thinks constantly:

"I'm below par as a woman! I haven't got what it takes to hold a husband's undying devotion.

"Therefore, I must constantly be suspicious and jealous.

"For if I am inferior, that means other women are superior to me in feminine charm."

That dangerous but chronic thought flits through the mind of a jealous woman constantly.

For jealousy not only indicates this feeling of inadequacy.

But it also shows a selfish concern for one's own satisfaction and a narrow focus of attention on SELF.

Unselfish persons are thus not likely to be jealous, even if they lack the Hollywood perfect "measurements" and facial beauty.

Nita later confided to me that she suffered from a mania to have a baby.

"Dr. Crane," she wailed, "we have been married for 5 years, but I have never become pregnant.

"And all my girl friends have babies!"

Alas, sometimes a wife's great yen to have a baby is not just because of her unselfish wish to care for a defenseless infant.

No; it may often be at least partially a desire to prove to herself and also the public, that she "is all there as a woman," as West opened the queen of hearts and South won the trick with the king. Observing that he had 10 top tricks—three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs—declarer decided to establish dummy's club suit in order to bring the total up to the required twelve.

A diamond was led to North's queen and a club was returned. East followed with the deuce and South finessed the jack. If West wins the trick, the contest is over, for when declarer regains the lead—he cashes the ace and king of

Super-Mice In London Noted

LONDON (AP) — Super-mice, reportedly tougher than the super-rats already identified on the Welsh border, have been noted in London.

These mice, increasingly resistant to the poison warfarin, invaded Westminster Palace and it took two years with a new poison to bring them under control. But public health officials have been besieged by calls for help from hotels, food factories, hospitals and private homes—

British Cooling Toward Common Market Entry

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG
LONDON (UPI)—The six European Common Market countries have set June 30 as the date for opening talks with Britain on her membership bid. After two French vetoes the way suddenly looks clear for Britain to join.

But opposition now is boiling up in Britain itself. The market issue could well become the most explosive in Britain's general election June 18.

The six market countries—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg—swept aside the last roadblock when they agreed on April 22 on how to finance their farm policies.

On May 12 they set June 30 as the date to start talks with Britain and three other countries which also have applied to join—Ireland, Denmark and Norway.

Under present plans a ceremonial opening session will take place June 30 at Luxembourg, capital of the Common Market's smallest member country.

A first working session is likely in July. Then the ministers will go home for their summer vacation, leaving serious negotiations until the fall.

But now from the British side the picture is far from clear. True, Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Conservative opposition leader Edward Heath—with just three weeks now left to them in the election campaign—have stated repeatedly they want to take Britain into the booming six-nation community from which she was barred twice by former French President Charles de Gaulle. But Wilson and Heath recently have started hedging their statements around with qualifications that they will take Britain in "if the terms are right."

The highest point in Hong Kong is atop Tai Mo Shan (Big Hat Mountain) 3,140 feet above sea level.

Wilson told Parliament March 26 "we are negotiating with determination to get in—on the right terms."

Heath declared on May 3 "the six must show themselves ready to allow Britain to join on terms which are tolerable in the short term and clearly and visibly beneficial in the long term."

Both have stressed that, if necessary, Britain could stand on her own feet outside the market.

Although all three main British political parties—Labor, the Conservatives and the Liberals—officially support joining, opposition to it has erupted right across party lines.

Up to 60 left wing Laborite members of Parliament have spoken publicly against joining. At the Conservatives' annual rank-and-file convention last October about one-third of the delegates voted against market membership.

The designation of East Carolina as a test center for these examinations will give prospective teachers in this area an opportunity to compare their performance on the examinations with candidates throughout the country who take the tests, Whitley said.

Househunting families with small children should make sure that electrical outlets in the nursery or children's rooms are controlled by an out-of-reach switch.

This advice is offered by the American Wood Council to help families get the most home for the money. Small hands have a way of investigating dangerous places such as night light outlets. If the home builder has included electrical safeguards in a house it's a good sign he has used similar care in the construction of the rest of the home.

ECU To Be Test Center

Last year more than 107,000 candidates took the examinations, which are prepared and administered by Educational Testing Service of Princeton, New Jersey.

Plan Action To Retain Buyers

WILSON, N.C. (AP)— Representatives of 16 small tobacco-selling towns voted Monday to finance legal action in an attempt to prevent Imperial Tobacco Co. from withholding buyers from the markets.

R. Frank Everett, a tobacco warehouseman from Robersonville, said the marketers have retained attorney Welsh Jordan of Greensboro and he expected the first litigation—a request for an injunction—to be filed next week.

He did not know where it would be filed.

Imperial, a British company with its U.S. headquarters in Wilson, has announced it will withhold buyers from the small markets as an economy move.

Everett said this would weaken competition on the markets and lower their prices.

He said he has talked with Imperial officials both in Britain and the United States. He said the only reason the company gives for its plan is "business reasons," and he added this "seems odd to us" because Imperial is adding buyers on larger markets.

He said the company might be attempting to install the Canadian system of buying in the United States. Under that system, all tobacco is sold on only three markets, whereas in the United States it is sold on 94 markets throughout the tobacco-growing areas.

Everett said that in addition to the litigation, the 16 markets will seek legislation to thwart Imperial's plans, but this would take too long for immediate relief.

He said 44 persons attended Monday's meeting, including representatives of the commissioners of agriculture in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. He said he received a telegram supporting the 16 markets from Phil Campbell, U.S. undersecretary of agriculture. Half of the 16 marketing towns are in North Carolina. Six are in Georgia and there is one each in South Carolina and Virginia.

By JOHN S. LANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defects and improper maintenance on American railroads are major causes cited by government safety experts for derailments which have soared 105 per cent in seven years.

The derailments—sometimes involving trains hauling dangerous cargoes—increasingly threaten towns and cities along the tracks with economic disaster and evacuation of entire populations.

Records show authorities have ordered 53 communities evacuated since 1964 after derailments of trains carrying hazardous materials. Twenty-five of the cases were last year.

The evacuation—causing derailments left 12 persons dead, 155 injured and property losses totaling millions of dollars.

"It is obvious that in railroad transportation we are facing a new dimension in accident exposure," Chairman John H. Reed of the National Transportation Safety Board told a congressional committee last year.

"...The railroad safety picture is serious, particularly in light of higher speed, longer and heavier trains, the possibility of a major catastrophe is ever present."

An Associated Press study of government records on train accidents disclosed:

—The number of derailments increased from 2,671 in 1961 to 5,487 in 1968—all but a handful involving freights. At the same time train miles traveled declined 5 per cent.

—Derailments blamed on defects or improper maintenance of rights-of-way and structures soared 210 per cent, from 577 in 1961 to 1,800 in 1967, the last year for which that data was available.

—Railroads estimate hazardous materials now compose 5 per cent of their freight, but the government says the figure is closer to 10 per cent.

Railroad safety standards are not comprehensively set or regulated by the federal government. Instead, they are overseen by the Association of American Railroads (AAR), the American Railway Engineering Association (AREA), and by each individual line.

"Right now, the government has no authority over 95 per cent of the causes of most railroad accidents," says a Senate committee staff member who helped draft legislation requiring the Department of Transportation to set safety standards for the railroads.

The bill was passed by the Senate in December and cleared a House committee last week.

The increase in derailments is minimized by the Association of American Railroads. Says spokesman James A. Schultz: "I think we are headed for a plateau and possibly moving downward in the number of derailments."

Schultz also contends that many of the evacuations were unnecessary.

The AAR says railroads spent $1.5 billion last year for maintenance of rights-of-way; $2 billion for maintaining equipment and $1.5 billion in capital improvements.

"That's not enough money," says Schultz. "But this was all we could scrounge up. We would like to have spent twice as much."

In citing the need for legislation to make railroads safer, Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., a sponsor of the pending bill, told the Senate of his personal inspection of many roadbeds.

"I have pulled spikes out with my fingers. I have picked up some of the ties which are like driftwood. I have observed that bolts are missing on connecting rails."

"I have witnessed first hand a situation where ... you could look underneath the rail—supposedly fastened to a tie—and see your shoes."

Jenkins Begins Annual Series

Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina University, began his annual series of high school commencement addresses Friday night at Scotland Neck High School.

His schedule includes five more addresses, at Lillington June 3, Bethel June 4, Emporia, Va., June 5, Wayne Community College June 7 and Littleton High School June 8.

During his tenure as ECU president, Jenkins has delivered more than 200 high school commencement addresses.

Texas plans to spend $340,000 on tourist advertising this year.

Dr. Ebbs Is Named Judge For Awards

Dr. John D. Ebbs, East Carolina University faculty member, has been appointed a regional judge for the National Council of Teachers of English Achievement Awards program for 1970.

The judging committees, composed of teachers of English in both college and high schools, will have the task of evaluating the writing skills and literary awareness of over 7,500 selected high school students.

Finalists are announced in November and are recommended for scholarship aid to all colleges and universities throughout the U.S. Award winners generally receive from 50 to 75 letters from various colleges offering scholarship aid or encouraging application for admission.

The National Council of Teachers for English (NCTE) is a professional organization of English teachers whose membership and subscribers include more than 135,000 teachers ranging from primary grades to graduate schools.

Farm Scene

By HENRY C. RIDDICK

Now that we are through planting peanuts, we can look back and see that we really missed the boat. Because of wet soil and lateness of soil preparation, only a small percentage of our peanuts were planted before May 8. This is where we went astray because this year the best planting date we had was April 20, and we always like to have them in the ground by May 1.

It is hard to say exactly what this late planting will do, but as a general rule we can expect a reduction of about 200 pounds per acre for each week delay in planting beyond May 1. So far, though, we have had a real good growing season and the weather from now until harvest time will determine how much the late planting will affect yields. With near ideal weather, like we are now experiencing, it is possible to have an early and bountiful crop.

This is also the time of the year to have already thought about controlling weeds in peanuts. This year our growers are attempting to reduce both production cost and labor in part. Past experience and experiments have shown that a few dollars spent now in buying weed control in a can can save a big chopping bill later in the season.

It is fairly well accepted that no single or combination herbicide at any one time will provide season long weed control. The problem is to select the proper combination of preplant incorporated, preemergence, cracking state and post emergence herbicide to provide adequate control at the lowest cost. Where broadleaf weeds are a problem, the use of Dynap, Enide-Dinitro or Dinitro improves the control of weeds over a single application of Balan or Vernam three times. The choice of herbicide in any crop depends on the grass and weed problem to be controlled and the relative cost of each material. But the most important factor about any chemical is to READ THE LABEL, and follow instructions.

TornontoBeaches Pollution-Free

TORONTO (UPI)—Pollution control and new sewers have cleaned the water off Toronto's West End beaches to such a degree that, for the first time in 10 years, signs warning swimmers away will not have to be put up this summer.

In the last five years the city has spent 154 million on sewer reconstruction. Pollution controls also have been in force on the Humber River.

Plan Conservation District Meeting

The Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District will have its first annual free planning supper Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Simpson Community building.

The meal will be served by the Simpson Home Demonstration Club.

Arch J. Flanagan, chairman of the Pitt Soil and Water District, said the meeting is being held so that Pitt can maintain a strong conservation program on farmlands.

Other items that must be done include:

—make application and begin planning a Resource Conservation and Development Project for North Carolina's Planning Area Q.

—get Chicod Creek Watershed Project under construction.

—get Little Contentnea Creek Watershed Project ready for construction.

—get the survey made for Swift Creek Watershed Project.

—strengthen the woodland conservation program on privately owned land in Pitt County.

—assist the several Planning Commissions in Pitt County to use the Pitt County Soil Survey information now available.

—improve the fish, wildlife and outdoor recreation opportunities.

Flanagan urges interested farmers and other individuals to attend the meeting so that the above goals may be met.

Thimbles Same Since 79 A.D.

NEW YORK (UPI)—In this era of "a new model every year" it's hard to believe that a product could remain basically unchanged for nearly 20 centuries.

Yet, according to Dritz-Scovill, there had been no real change in thimbles since 79 A.D., the first recorded date of their use, until the debut of its adjustable fit-all thimble. The 1970 A.D. model can be custom-fitted permanently to any size finger, and has a "top," actually an open side, that permits the finger to "breathe" and leaves the nail uncovered to prevent its breaking.

Eastern nations manufactured steel items long before the Christian era, says the National Geographic.
