Open New Front

S. Viets On Attack

SAIGON (UPI)—A 4,000-man South vietnamese task force opened a new front inside Cambodia Saturday, pushing across the border into a Communist stronghold softened up by waves of U.S. Air Force B52 Stratofortresses.

Military sources said the drive was launched by men of South Vietnam's 23rd Infantry Division who swept across the frontier into the Se Bang River valley, one of the few Cambodian border areas still untouched in the allied offensive against Communist sanctuaries which began April 29.

No fighting was reported in the first 12 hours of the new drive which concentrated in an area west of South Vietnam's Central Highlands opposite Darlac Province. The target was about 100 miles south of the point where the border of South Vietnam, Cambodia and laos meet—a region dominated by Communist forces.

Allied sources said the South Vietnamese task force, including armored units and artillery batteries, brought to 34,000 the number of South Vietnamese soldiers operating on cambodian soil. About 12,000 U.S. troops are operating in Cambodia, but president Nixon has said all will be withdrawn by June 30.

B52 crews dropped hundreds of tons of bombs on jungles in northeast Cambodia Friday night and Saturday morning in advance of the South Vietnamese thrust.

The push was largely a South Vietnamese show, but eight Americans were reported killed in another border area south of the new front as communist forces suddenly intensified opposition to the Allied campaign to destroy frontier bases.

It's Streamlined

British Cabinet Set

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI)—Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath, installed in office a bare 24 hours, Saturday announced a streamlined cabinet of top ministers including Sir Alec Douglas-Home, a former premier, as foreign secretary.

Heath had hurried to fill the leading posts before tackling the growing inflation problem he inherited when he toppled the Labor government of Harold Wilson in an election upset Thursday.

The new Conservative prime minister, cheered by crowds as he hustled about forming his government, had his day marred only by one incident—when a young woman carrying a baby threw a can of red paint at his car and splattered his suit.

The new foreign secretary, Douglas-Home 67, had been foreign secretary from 1960-63 and served as prime minister from October, 1963 to October, 1964.

Reginald Maudling, 53, deputy leader of the Conservative party and chancellor of the exchequer from 1962-64, was named Home Secretary.

Iain MacLeod, 56, who held many cabinet jobs in earlier Conservative governments, was named chancellor of the exchequer, equivalent to secretary of the treasury in the United States.

Quintin Hogg, 62, another former minister in several Conservative governments, was named lord chancellor. In this capacity he acts as speaker of the upper se, the house of Lords.

Lord Carrington, 51, formerly Conservative party leader in the House of Lords, was named defense secretary.

Police identified the woman who threw paint as Heath's car left No. 10 Downing Street for lunch as Angela Hilary Weight, a 26-year-old art editor. She was charged with threatening behavior willful damage and possessing an offensive weapon.

Mid-East Fighting Continues

By United Press International

Israel and Egypt smashed at each other's positions along the Suez Canal front Saturday in air raids that followed up a night of artillery duels. The Israelis said their gunners scored direct hits on an Egyptian munitions dump, blowing it up in flames.

The ground and air action came as seven Arab heads of state met in Tripoli, Libya, to celebrate the departure of the last American forces from Libyan soil and to assess the Arabs' escalating warfare with Israel.

Egyptian jets attacked an Israeli position on the Suez Canal central sector Saturday and wounded two Israeli soldiers in Egypt's third air raid in five days, an Israeli military spokesman said.

Israeli antiaircraft guns opened fire on the attacking planes, but there was no report that any were hit, he said.

The Israeli air force kept up its attack on Egypt's Suez line forces for the 30th straight day, military sources said.

A Cairo military spokesman said the Egyptian aircraft scored direct hits on Israeli bunkers, personnel shelters and artillery emplacements.

The aerial blows and counterblows followed an outbreak of artillery duels across the canal during the night.

At Democratic Convention

Winslow Re-Elected

By JAMES W. BUTLER

Hugh Winslow of Greenville was re-elected chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Convention at the biennial convention held Saturday afternoon in the Pitt County court house. For Winslow this will be his second term in the office as party chairman for Pitt County.

Walter B. Jones, First District congressman, also appeared on the convention program.

Following the new organization structure of the Democratic party in North Carolina, three vice chairmen were elected.

Mrs. W. F. Tyson of Stokes was re-elected first vice chairman on the first ballot.

Mrs. Anne W. Brown of Ayden was elected second vice chairman representing Negro voters; and Richard McLawhorn of Winterville, representing young voters under 30 years of age, was chosen third vice chairman. All the winners were elected by overwhelming majorities over opposing nominees.

By unanimous votes, Roger Johnson of Grifton was chosen to fill the office of secretary and Charles McLawhorn of Ayden was elected treasurer.

A 43-member delegation to the first congressional district convention to be held in Greenville next Saturday, and to the biennial state convention in Raleigh on Tuesday, July 14, was elected by precinct committees in a caucus and will be announced by Chairman Winslow.

Congressman Jones received "promises and performances" of the Nixon administration in government, and on economic and agricultural fronts. He called upon Democrats to give a responsive ear to the needs of the people in the Fall elections.

Citing the pressures of inflation, the rising costs of living, and falling farm prices as examples of "broken promises" of the present administration in Washington, Congressman Jones invited all Democrats to unite in behalf of a government under a Democratic party which is sensitive to the needs of the people and pledged to justice for all Americans and not concerned only with satisfying special interests.

Four other committees named during the convention Saturday are:

Judicial District: Judge J. W. H. Roberts and C. W. Everett, Sr.;

State Senatorial: Rev. Clarence Gray and Charles Cain;

State Executive: Miss Janice Hardison, Henry C. Oglesby, H. L. Lewis, John B. (Jack) Lewis.

David S. Reid recognized members of the General Assembly and other members of state boards and commissions.

M. E. Cavendish was convention secretary.

Chairman Winslow called for "alert and vigorous campaign efforts" on behalf of the Democratic party for the November elections. As he opened the 85-minute-long session, he introduced Dr. James W. Butler for the invocation.

An informal meeting of the county executive committee followed the convention. In this session several campaign plans were discussed.

Foam Is Poured On

Firemen Fight Oil Fire

By DENNIS MORABITO

FRANKLIN, Pa. (UPI)—Three trucks poured thousands of gallons of thick, white foam onto a raging fire at an oil refinery complex here Saturday and officials expressed cautious hopes the blaze was under control and would be extinguished without further incident.

Three men, including a volunteer fireman, were killed Friday in the initial explosions and fire which rocked three large fuel storage tanks at the Amalie Oil Co.'s refinery.

Mayor George Scanlon reportedly asked a specialist on the explosion of oil fires to come here with his work crew as a precautionary measure.

Fire officials had feared the blaze might spread to a yard of 10 huge tanks, posing widespread danger to this community of 9,400 persons. The flames, which shot as high as 100 feet in the air, had subsided and a thick, black shroud of smoke was disappearing.

"If the foam trucks cannot get to all of the burning tanks," Leslie Burrell, plant manager, said, "we will let them burn out. That may take between 12 and 24 hours."

One fireman, David di Pugh, was killed and two employes, William Wolford and Kenneth Dunlap, were missing and presumed dead since the fires were touched off Friday by an explosion in the main "still," an area where the oil is converted by a cracking process into gasoline. Six persons were injured.

Burrell said the largest fires were burning in two tanks, one which holds about 40,000 gallons of fuel and another with a 200,000 gallon capacity. Most of the burning fuel is gasoline, but about 25 per cent of the fire was feeding on "boiling base stock," he said.

The first explosion erupted near a small, empty open-topped tank in a distillation area where several welders were working, Burrell said. He declined to speculate on the exact cause of the explosion or the extend of damages. One of five buildings on the complex was badly damaged, he said.

If Supports Dropped

Food Price Rise Seen

By BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Consumer food bills will jump at least $6 billion a year if the government drops its $3 billion farm price support payment program, the chairman of the House Agriculture committee said Saturday.

"Even with these price support programs, producers are barely breaking even and many are not," Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., said in a statement.

"The money to finance modern farm operations has to come from some place. It should be perfectly clear that if it doesn't come from government programs, it will have to come directly from the consumer."

Poage said it probably would take at least $6 billion in higher retail food prices to replace the $3 billion in direct government farm subsidies because of the pyramiding of markups when retail prices are raised. In 1969, he noted, farmers were getting only 41 cents out of each consumer food dollar.

Poage's comments came in a statement accompanying release of a new edition of an Agriculture Committee publication entitled, "Food Costs — 1948 to 10.2 million today; the

The 113-page booklet is a primer of facts about agriculture, food and government operations designed to enlighten city people about basic economic conditions in agriculture, farm and food price trends, and similar matters.

The publication included such notes as:

The U.S. farm population has dropped from 24.2 million in 1948 to 10.2 million today; the number of farms from 5.7 million to 2.9 million.

Retail food prices in 1969 were 29 per cent above 1952, but farm prices were 4 per cent below 1952.

The minimum investment needed to operate a commercial farm now ranges from $100,000 to $200,000.

One farm worker now produces enough food for himself and 44 others. Only 20 years ago this ratio was one to 14.

The average American family now spends only 16.5 per cent of its take-home pay for food, a record low, compared with 25 per cent in Western Europe and nearly 50 per cent in Russia.

Rural Fund For Development Offers Program

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville headquartered North Carolina Rural Fund for Development will use its recent grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity to continue working toward improving the economic status of low income rural residents in 50 of the state's 100 counties.

According to the NC-RFD executive director, Royce C. Jordan, a grant from OEO is channeled annually into the organization's budget with the major portion of the funds delegated to work involving 20 Coastal Plains counties in the state.

This year, with the fiscal year ending in July, a $300,000 OEO allocation was supplemented by an additional $75,000 for work in 20 counties in the western part of the state.

"The main thrust of NC-RFD is economics through the involvement of low income rural residents in programs that will improve their economic situation," he pointed out.

Currently, the organization, originally funded in 1968 but actually put into operation in February of 1969, has a full - time staff of only four members.

However, Jordan pointed out, the group has contracts with other agencies to provide personnel in various capacities involved in the field work of the organization.

With Greenville serving as headquarters, the staff maintains field offices in both Edenton and Whiteville. Originally, headquarters was set up in Edenton but was moved here in August of 1969.

A move is planned in July to New Bern where the headquarters will be relocated. The Greenville office will be maintained as a field stop for members of the staff. Jordan noted that a full - time man will be in the office following the move to New Bern.

"We coordinate all our efforts in the various counties with the local community action organizations; extension services, Farmers Home Administrations, and other local agencies," he continued.

"We act as a catalyst to coordinate all existing programs to hopefully get rural residents involved. We do not provide help that is already available in the areas," he added.

Basically, representatives from the staff or personnel under contract of the organization go in and work with the existing community organizations in the counties in the areas of technical assistance, educational programs and in some cases, small loans and grants to get the programs "on their feet."

Many of the 30 counties in the eastern sector of the program already have the rural organizations set up and assistance is given in these instances. However, in cases where there is no county organization, help is provided to get one started.

"Generally, it takes three to five years from the time a cooperative is started in the county to get it on its own feet, able to pay a staff, set up bookkeeping and possibly carry out a training program of their own," Jordan said.

"Our programs are long - range with the idea of helping some of the low income residents improve their situation," he added. In some cases, setting up a feeder pig program and encouraging farmers to add crops in the vegetable line to standard crops such as tobacco and peanuts are suggested to help them get a little ahead financially.

Jordan noted that most of the situations in these 30 counties involve families with very little acreage on their farms and generally those with many children to support.

Surprisingly, overall, the racial balance averages about 50-50, Jordan said.

The executive director added that NC-RFD works closely with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

Eventually, the group hopes to expand its operations into all counties of the state. "The ideal situation would be to work ourselves right out of business," he asserted.

Reaching that situation would mean that counties and rural residents are without problems, a situation that seems unlikely at any rate, it was noted.

Currently, NC-RFD is working with 1000 individuals in cooperative programs and in excess of 9,000 in the credit union movement in eastern North Carolina.

Jordan added that the work of the organization is concerned mainly with helping the rural residents carry out the programs they decide are best for the various areas.

"Basically, we try to advise them, counsel with the local organizations, and help them coordinate their activities," he said.

Prison Improvement Need Underscored

MYRTLE BEACH, S. C. (AP) —North Carolina Gov. Bob Scott says the state needs to improve its prisons, because "we are many times turning out criminals more embittered and hardened than when they entered."

Scott told the North Carolina Bar Association Friday night the state lacks adequate prison facilities and personnel.

"A good job is being done with what we've got, but much more is needed," he said.

Scott challenged the lawyers to work for "better and more modern" prisons in North Carolina. He said, "You possess the skills and abilities to constitute a powerful lobby which could get things done."

The governor suggested formation of a commission "concerned with the correction system, where it stands, and where we want to go.

"We are making some progress the governor told the attorneys. "A new $1.3 million mental health center at Central (Prison) is under way; a new multi-story structure is under construction in Morganton; several units are being renovated."

In other business Friday night, Lindsay Warren of Goldsboro, the association's outgoing president, passed the gavel to new president J. Mack Holland of Gastonia.

A president-elect and other officers will be chosen today.

Scott told of his recent tour of prison facilities in the Raleigh area.

He said he saw cooking, making license tags or at work in the print shop, learning useful trades.

"This is good, but as the day continued," the governor added, "I learned that other trades they learn or improve upon while in the system are how to lie, to cheat, to steal; to assault, murder or rape; and to bribe, defraud, and corrupt. In other words, putting them behind bars does not prev...t other criminal acts — in many cases it promotes and increases such behavior."

The governor also told of visiting Death Row and seeing the gas chamber, which contains two chairs.

"Five died in one day, I was told, and one husband and wife team died together," Scott said. "I believe that we need quick, sure, and adequate punishment, but I just feel there is some better way than taking a life so cruelly."

Pitt Establishments Get Safety Honors

RALEIGH — Nine Pitt County industrial establishments are among the 30 firms in Wilson, Nash and Pitt Counties being honored this week for having made notable achievements in preventing accidents on the job during the year 1969.

The award-winning firms are being presented the "Certificate of Safety Achievement" of the North Carolina Department of Labor in recognition of their excellent accident prevention work last week.

The presentations are being made by Stanton L. Blaylock of Rocky Mount, safety inspector for the N. C. Department in this district. Blaylock is currently delivering the awards to representatives of the winning firms in the three counties.

Pitt County Award winners include: first year, Collins and Aikman Corporation, Bangor Division, Farmville plant; second consecutive year, Empire Brushes, Inc.; third consecutive year, Chapin Construction Company and The Farmville Corporation, division of the United States Industries;

Fourth consecutive year, Blount Fertilizer, Phelps Chevrolet; Fifth consecutive year, The Daily Reflector, Scott's Cleaners and Union Carbide Corporation (Consumer Products Division).

"It is a great pleasure to recognize the fine work in accident prevention which was done during 1969 by employers, supervisors and production workers of these 30 firms," Blaylock said. "Your North Carolina Department of Labor is proud of our outstanding work, and we look forward to a continuation of this excellent record in the years to come."

The awards are given for: operating a year without any disabling injuries; achieving a 40 percent reduction in injuries compared with the previous year; operating for a year with an accident rate 50 percent or more below the state average rate for the industry.

The safety awards are testimony to the awareness of management and workers of the need for safety in plant working operations, and to their willingness to do something about work practices and working environments in the interest of preventing accidents, Blaylock said.

High Arrests Are Reported

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Highway Patrol arrested a record number of motorists on drunken driving charges during May.

Patrol commander Col. Edwin C. Guy reported Friday that 3,096 persons were charged with driving while intoxicated.

It was the first time drunken driving arrests had ever topped 3,000 in a single month. The total was 43 per cent greater than the drunken driving arrests in May, 1969, and a 91 per cent increase over May, 1968.

Arrests during the first five months of the year totaled 14,069, a 45 per cent increase over the first five months of 1969.

Guy also reported that highway deaths in the state are between 30 and 40 less than last year's count and he hopes 1970 will be the second year in a row in which highway deaths have been lowered.

At least 701 persons have died in Tar Heel traffic accidents so far this year, compared to 742 at this time last year.

Guy gives at least some of the credit for the lower death toll to the crackdown on drunken drivers. "We definitely know that it's saving lives, preventing accidents," he said, "but we don't know to what degree."

Guy said conviction rates of drunken drivers range from 95 per cent in some counties to as low as 35 per cent in others. But he said the use of the Breathalyzer has unquestionably increased the conviction rate.

Guy said the rate of drivers agreeing to submit to the chemical test has gone up about 10 per cent — from 72 to 82 per cent — since the "implied consent" law took effect Sept. 1, 1969.

In May, 2,564 of the 3,096 drivers charged with driving while intoxicated took the breathalyzer test.

Buckled Rail Is To Blame

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. (AP) — A buckled rail was blamed Friday for the derailment of 18 cars of a Norfolk-Southern Railway freight train at Okisko in Perquimans County.

The derailed cars blocked a state road running between Okisko and U. S. 17. The State Highway Patrol said late Friday the road was still blocked.

The 82-car train carried military Jeeps and trucks and oats and barley. The grain was scattered over a wide area when some of the cars burst.

Sparks from the wreck set fire to woods along the tracks and firemen toiled most of the day to contain the blaze.

S. M. Maness of Norfolk, Va., a flagman on the train, said the wreck was caused by a "pinched" rail, one which had buckled.

Rep. Patman Says No

Penn Central Fails To Get Backing For Its Loan

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Top officials of the Penn Central Railroad tried but failed Saturday to win the crucial backing of Rep. Wright Patman, D-Texas, for a government guarantee of a $200 million loan to the fiancially troubled line.

The Nixon administration had intended to guarantee the loan through the Pentagon but did an about-face Friday and dropped the plan after Patman, chairman of the House Banking Committee, and other key lawmakers criticized the proposed deal.

In a surprise, previously announced meeting, Penn Central President and board chairman Paul Gorman and other members of the railroad's leadership spent about an hour ad 45 minutes with Patman in an attempt to convince him to endorse and revive the loan guarantee, according to a Patman spokesman.

Afterwards, Patman issued a statement saying he appreciated the "frank and open" discussion by the Penn Central delegation and the information it supplied him. But he added:

"As I have in the past, I expressed my deep concern that the government's interest be fully protected and that the taxpayers not be made liable for any financial losses resulting from a guarantee to this huge corporation.

"My position remains unchanged. I do not feel the Defense Production Act should be used to guarantee such a loan, particularly without any assurance that the government's interest is protected."

The Defense Production Act was the vehicle through which the Defense Department was to have guaranteed the loan that commercial banks were to make to Penn Central.

Without that guarantee, it appeared highly doubtful that the banks would be willing to take the risk.

Last Wednesday evening, Patman and the five senior Democrats on his committee wired the Pentagon, asking that the guarantee be held up until its legality was studied.

The act permits guarantees in cases where national defense interests would be served. The Penn Central, like other rail lines, transports military personnel and equipment.

Underlying the guarantee request was the suggestion that Penn Central would go bankrupt unless it quickly received an infusion of new money.

On Friday, eight Democrats on the House Commerce Committee asked Defense secretary Melvin R. Laird to delay signing the guarantee until there had been a thorough study of the deal, which they called of "extremely questionable legality."

Under the original plan, the guarantee would have been followed up by legislation—to be considered by the Commerce Committee—that would have opened the way for additional government help to Penn Central running into hundreds of millions of dollars.

A few hours later the Pentagon, citing the uncertainty of legislative prospects, announced it had pulled out of the deal.

Although the plan now appears dead, Patman still intends to begin public hearings Tuesday on the proposal, according to an aide.

Father's Day Founder Sees No Gap Today Between Generations

By ANDREW WILLIAMS

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI)— The woman who sparked the first celebration of Father's Day 60 years ago said Saturday the generation gap is nonsense.

"The rolls of children and their fathers have not changed," said Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, now 88, who credits her own father as her inspiration.

"Children are the same as they always were, just their darling little selves," she said.

"I don't know who started the talking about a generation gap, but I certainly don't think it applies any more today than it did in generations past."

But Mrs. Dodd thinks dad's job is more difficult than in 1910 when Father's Day observances were begun.

"I'm a pioneer," she said. "I think everybody had it easier in the old days. Love has become much more complicated since then."

Mrs. Dodd's own father, William Jackson Smart, was a pioneer farmer who raised her and five brothers after her mother died.

Her big idea came while listening to a minister commemorating mother's Day. She wondered, "why not a day to honor father?"

At first Spokane merchants couldn't see any sense in plugging a day nobody ever heard of. Even the governor, she said, told her in effect to stay home and tend to her knitting.

"Those were the days when fathers were pretty much in the doghouse. There were popular songs like 'Everybody Works But Father' and 'Father, Dear Father, Come Home With Me Now.'"

Eventually the Spokane Ministerial Association endorsed the notion. On the first celebration, June 6, 1910, Mrs. Dodd rode around town in a horse and buggy taking gifts to shut-in fathers who were mystified.

The idea caught on in 1916 when President Woodrow Wilson pressed a button in the White house to open a huge Father's Day program in Spokane.

Youngster Is Killed In Bicycle Accident

A 14-year-old boy was killed near Bells Fork Saturday afternoon when he was struck by a car as he rode his bicycle along a rural paved road.

Samson Ray Gorgon, Negro, of Rt. 1, Winterville, died of head injuries, Pitt County Coroner Coroner E. W. Harvey reported.

Gordon had been riding his bicycle along the road and collided with a car driven by Archie Lee Gardner, 25-year-old Negro of Rt. 1, Winterville.

Highway Patrolman Larry Thames said Gardner was traveling north along the road as Gordon rode his bicycle southward. The collision occurred, according to Thames, as Gordon apparently turned across the highway.

No charges were placed by investigating officers. Coroner Harvey said an inquest will be held, probably next week, in the death.

The bicycle was a total loss while damage to the car was reported as $100.

Gordon's death is the 13th traffic fatality in Pitt County so far this year.

Authorities Seeking Fire Cause

State and county fire marshalls as well as State Bureau of Investigation agents are working with local officials to seek the cause of the three fires in Greenville Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Police Chief T. E. Gladson said his department, as well as the SBI, sheriff's department, fire marshalls, and detectives of the Seaboard Coastline Railroad, are still investigating the fires which occurred in Greenville Wednesday and Thursday nights.

"The various groups are working together in an attempt to determine the cause of the fires," Gladson said.

Fire Chief Ray Smith said local fire officials are working with the other agencies in an effort to determine the cause of the fires.

Fire destroyed much of the Seaboard Coastline's warehouse facilities and damaged a storage building at Third Street School Wednesday night.

A third fire Thursday night destroyed the V-C Chemical Co., causing an estimate of $100,000 damage to the building and machinery.

Two Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $875 damage was reported by police in two traffic collisions investigated here Friday.

Heaviest damage occurred when cars driven by Thomas L. Powell, 25, of Rt. 2, Montress, Va., and Mary Everett Buck of Kinston collided about 4:30 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 100 feet south of the Sixth Street intersection.

Investigators, who made no charges, set damage to the Powell car at $500 and placed damage to the Buck vehicle at $200.

Mrs. Buck was reported injured in the mishap.

No charges were reported in a second accident which occurred at the intersection of Greenfield Blvd. and Ashton Drive, involving cars driven by Emma Teel Daniels of 103 Ashton Dr., and Drois Griffin Dixon of 106 Ashton Dr.

Damage was estimated at $175 to the Dixon car. No damage was reported to the Daniels vehicle.

Two Arrested Inside Store

The Greenville Police Department arrested to men inside Clark's Discount Store at West End Circle early Saturday morning.

James Earl Bullock, 19, and Charles Nathaniel Moore, 23, both of 1504 Fleming St., were charged with breaking and entering about 2:50 a.m. after officers reported they found them inside the department store.

According to Chief T. E. Gladson, officers were dispatched to the building when the firm's burgalar alarm went off.

Entrance to the building, the chief said, was made by removing the hinges from a side door.

Kennedy, Fulbright Scored

Agnew Assails Senators

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew personally assailed Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and J. William Fulbright Saturday as "apologists" for the Communist regime in North Vietnam.

Agnew also lashed out at former Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford, former Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien and Cyrus Vance, accrusing them of defeatism.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a Republican party dinner, the vice president recalled that Kennedy in 1968 had advocated a four-point program of a bombing halt and troop withdrawal to achieve a Vietnam peace.

"The senator's program and ideas were tried in their entirety and they have not moved the enemy an inch toward peace," Agnew said. "Yet the senator persists in blaming the continuation of the war on the lack of United States initiatives.

"Well, the President of the United States is not listening to the counsel of defeatists who blame every deadlock at the conference table and every impasse in negotiation on the United States."

Agnew charged that Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign relations committee, "is attempting to forge chains upon president Nixon's freedom of action—legislative shackles that would deny the President the authority and freedom he needs to protect American troops in the field and to win an honorable and just peace in Asia."

Agnew summarized his view of the two Democratic senators with these words: "It is not President Nixon blocking the road to peace; it is Hanoi—and Hanoi's most effective—even if unintentional—appologists today are not in Paris; they are in the United States—they are in high places, and their prese cription for ending the war amounts to surrender. . .

Of the other democrats, Agnew had this to say:

Clifford: "A late-blooming opportunist who clambered aboard the rolling bandwagon of the doves when the flock really started to fly."

O'Brien: "He will not march behind a commander-in-chief riding an elephant, but he will dash unhesitatingly into battle behind one perched on an ass."

Harriman: "As one looks back over the diplomatic disasters that have befallen the West and the friends of the West over three decades at Tehran, Yalta, Cairo—in every great diplomatic conference that turned out to be a loss for the West and freedom, one can find the unmistakable footprints of W. Averell Harriman."

Committed To ECU Program

Those who still have not grasped the fact that North Carolina is committed to developing a program for training medical doctors at East Carolina University should listen to Governor Scott.

At his June 3 press conference the governor was asked about President Leo Jenkins statement that ECU planned to enroll its first medical students in the fall of 1971.

The governor replied, "Of course, East Carolina has always been very aggressive in developing of its program as it properly should be. The statement by President Jenkins that they will soon be accepting their first students in their medical program is a part of that program which has been approved by the Board of Higher Education and this is anticipated.

"I think he was really trying to report that they are moving along with the program that has been authorized and that results can be expected," the governor said.

The 1969 Legislature moved to expand and strengthen the medical school at Chapel Hill. It also took steps to assist the two private medical schools at Duke and Wake Forest. At the same time, however, the Legislature appropriated funds for planning a medical education program at East Carolina University. As the governor said, the program envisioned has been approved by the Higher Board of Education.

Almost no one doubts that there is a great need for facilities to train additional physicians in the state. East Carolina has been improving its science facilities and establishing its Allied Health Professions School over several years. There should be no doubt that ECU and North Carolina are going ahead with the physician training program. It is time now for all regions of the state to support this program so that some progress can be made toward providing the physicians that are going to be badly needed in the years ahead.

Open Housing Has Obstacles

By PEGGY BIER
The Asheville Times, Staff Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — True open housing won't occur in Asheville — or anywhere else in the U.S. — until whites get rid of the avalanche theory.

That's the one that says if you let one black family into the neighborhood pretty soon all his brothers and sisters and uncles and cousins will come in after him and then the whole neighborhood will get run down, etc.

This is one of the conclusions drawn by a black man who has lived in Asheville four years and is now getting ready to move north.

He is Hills Norris, Jr., a Protestant chaplain at Oteen VA Hospital. He has been transferred to a similar job in Philadelphia.

Norris has done his private bit to help Asheville integrate.

He moved his family last summer into a house on the "white side" of Kenilworth Road.

"Four years ago I rode around in that neighborhood," Norris said. "I decided it was too beautiful; I'd never get to live there."

He was told by a black attorney there was a "conspiracy of whites" to keep blacks off that road. Norris bought a lot a few blocks away where the color line wasn't so strictly drawn.

Then came the unexpected opportunity. W.F. Talman, Jr., offered to rent him a place on Lakewood Drive in the heart of the "forbidden" neighborhood.

Talman, Norris said, is the "real hero of this operation. He told me, 'If you have the nerve to go in there, I've got the nerve to rent it to you.'"

Norris and his family moved into the house last July 1. They poked their hat around the corner on a stick first.

"We installed our furniture," he said. "But we stayed away for a week to see if there would be any crosses burned, any bombs thrown or windows broken."

There wasn't.

But there was a loud gasp from one neighbor who immediately caused to be installed a very high basket-weave privacy fence.

The children were called the usual names. There were some exchanges of rocks and blows among the younger set. But the woman in charge of the neighborhood park made it a point to invite the black kids there, and encouraged them to swim.

There were white adults who would speak to Norris by night, but not by day.

At night when he called on one family to straighten out a children's spat they were positively gracious, bending over backward to show they were not prejudiced. Norris left their house feeling he had found a neighbor with whom he could have rapport.

The next day the same man refused to speak to him; later looked both ways cautiously and nodded a very small nod.

Sometimes, Norris said, it was the things people didn't say — like "welcome." A preacher who was all praise when Norris had bought the lot on the black side of Kenilworth said never a word to him once he had made the white side.

Norris and his family have developed a slightly caustic sense of humor about the various ways in which his white neighbors treat him.

He grinned. "We tried to demonstrate we're easy to approach. I can only attribute their attitude to a feeling of inferiority toward us.

"People can be progressive in many ways, yet socially underdeveloped. These people must be helped through understanding, patience and good will."

But the tension is there and it seldom lets up. Norris said he and his family have become rather used to it.

"We make up for it by our relationships with white people other than our neighbors. This is how we've been able to carry on without it's doing much to us.

"We have asked our white friends to visit us by day, and not just after dark. It shows the neighbors the futility of their aloofness.

"We have not had as many black visitors as we did when we lived in the ghetto. I tried to speak to some militants and was not effective. The word was out that I was a traitor; I had left where the problems were.

"I was not quite black anymore, in their eyes. You get on sort of an island between the two worlds.

"It's not that I didn't want to identify with blacks. I wanted to demonstrate to them how we can escape the ghetto; to the young people, especially, that they have a chance to achieve the sort of status that cuts its own way."

Open housing — the real kind — has got to work in Asheville, Norris believes.

The terrain says so. There is not enough livable land, he said, "to afford the luxury of discrimination."

How long it will take all depends on the rate at which attitudes change.

Familiar Look To The Cost Of Living Index

The rise in living costs by four-tenths of one percent represents a slowing in the rate of inflation; however it indicates that inflation still has not been brought under control.

The government reported that costs of all major categories were up during the month with transportation and clothing up the most.

Despite measures to bring inflation under control living costs are continuing upward. The slight slowing in the rate of increase, though, gives some hope that the situation is improving.

Shirley Plays Her Own Game

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NEW YORK — The vicious infighting now tearing at the Democratic party here is dramatized by a "personal and unofficial" letter sent to selected party leaders on June 11 by Rep. Shirley Chisholm of Brooklyn, the party's National Committeewoman and the only black woman in Congress.

Mrs. Chrisholm's two-page letter is an extraordinary appeal for Howard J. Samuels, who is pressing hard against Arthur Goldberg in next week's (June 23) gubernatorial primary.

Samuels, who got no backing from black Democratic committeemen at the party's April convention at Grossinger's (where Goldberg won the endorsement for governor) is depicted in Mrs. Chrisholm's confidential letter as "the only candidate to take on the governmental and political system in this state."

Furthermore, claims Mrs. Chisholm, Samuels is backed by a vast array of black political leaders, including Massachusetts Sen. Edward Brooke, the NAACP's Roy Wilkins, black militant Dick Gregory, and Georgia state Rep. Julian Bond.

What gives Mrs. Chisholm's letter more than passing interest is not the obvious fact that it has infuriated the party's regular leadership, both white and Negro. That's only natural, in view of her status as the party's National Committeewoman.

The real significance of the appeal for Samuels (her long-time financial backer) is its harmful impace on state Sen. Basil A. Paterson's primary campaign for lieutenant governor. Paterson, a Negro, is not even mentioned in Mrs. Chisholm's letter, a fact that has raised deepest suspicions among party leaders — both black and white — that Mrs. Chisholm does not want Paterson to become lieutenant governor and displace her as the most powerful black politician in the state.

It was ostensibly in Paterson's behalf that Mrs. Chisholm astonished blacks and whites alike when she grabbed the microphone at the endorsing convention at Grossinger's last April and emotionally demanded that Paterson be endorsed for lieutenant governor. Since Goldberg's decision to do just that was already final, the real effect of Mrs. Chisholm's attack on the party's white leadership at Grossinger's was simply to light the backlash fires, a backlash that could only hurt Paterson's chance of winning the primary.

The fire from that racial backlash is now burning merrily along. For example, Democratic clubs in Brooklyn and Queens are quietly and completely cutting Paterson in favor of Jerome Ambro, Huntington supervisor in conservative Suffolk County, Long Island, who is running against Paterson in the primary.

Last Monday night Ambro was guest of honor at the FDR Democratic Club in Brooklyn, packed with local party leaders. In a low-key sales pitch, Ambro said the endorsed ticket of Goldberg-Paterson "disenfranchised the rest of the state" and was "oriented to just one borough" — Manhattan (which includes Harlem). The party must "open up this ticket," he said, for candidates "who can go to all of the people."

Asked whether he supported Goldberg, Ambro said

Strength For Today

"OR ELSE"

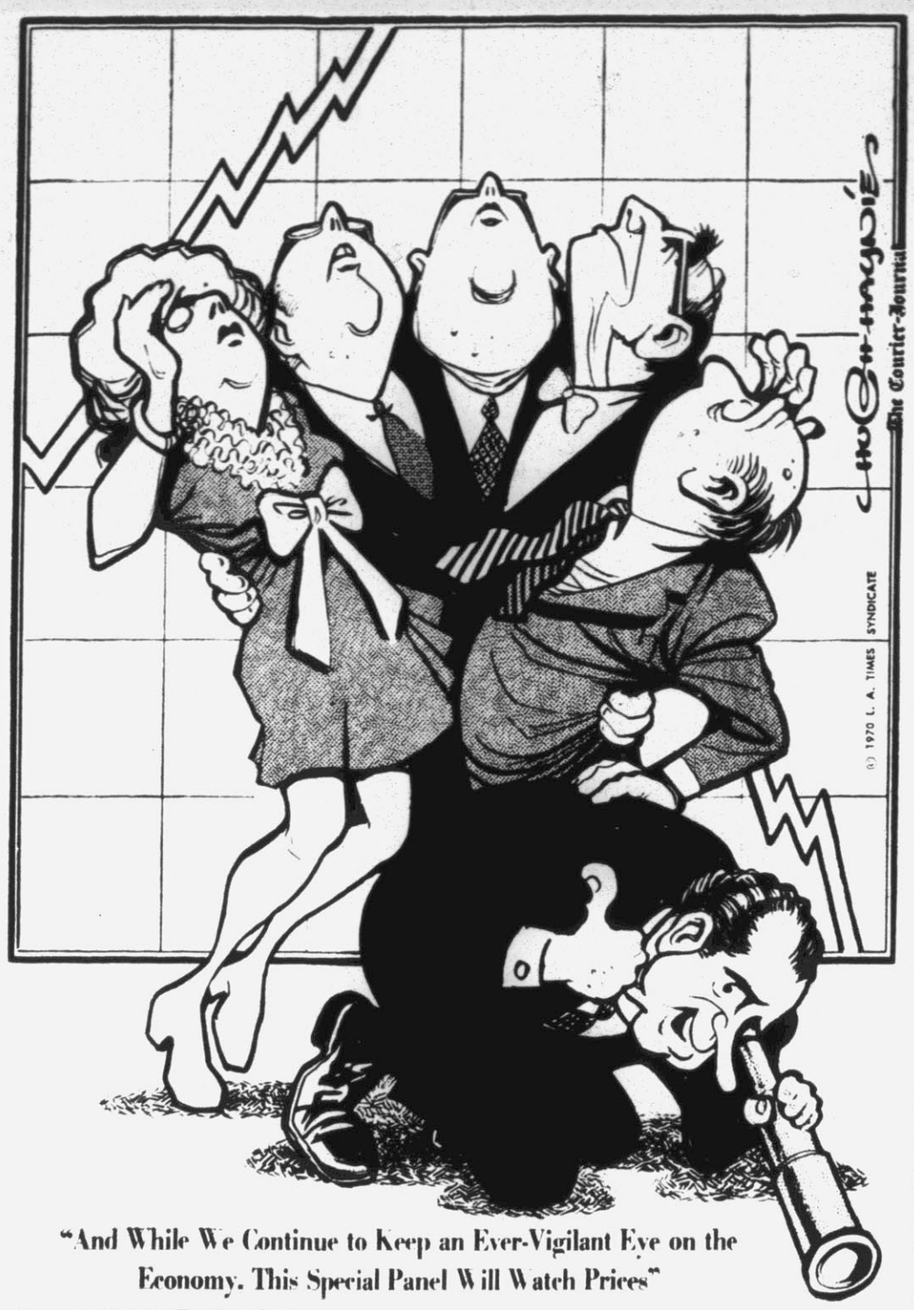

Obedience is not a popular word in a democratic and highly disturbed society. But it is an important word nonetheless. Every thought and act of our lives submits to some sort of obedience. We must obey the traffic signals. We must obey the government's demand for taxes paid on a certain day. We may like the party in power or dislike it, but we owe a certain obedience to government that cannot be sidestepped without involvement in trouble.

In the armed forces of all nations obedience is a requirement. The officer in charge of a certain number of men does not suggest that they do this or that but commands them. Whether we like war or dislike it, the fact remains that a strict discipline has to be maintained and that obedience is the keyword of military life.

The same things holds good as regards the living of our everyday life. The most compelling voice in the world is that still small voice within our hearts and minds which commands us to do certain things or to abstain from doing other things. Practically everyone would admit today that a lack of obedience on the part of the youthful generation has had considerable to do with social unrest. "Must" is not a particularly thrilling word, but when we fail to use it at the proper time we are getting ourselves ready for a pile of trouble.

Many people find it hard to believe that this old universe of ours is compelling in its demands. "Do this or else . . ."

Sunday Morning Notes

Staffer Jerry Raynor thought he had perhaps spotted a rare creature as he watered his flowers recently at twilight.

A bright red frog hopped by him.

He quickly picked it up and discovered that the frog was covered with fresh red paint.

Investigation showed that a young friend, who was painting cypress knees in the back yard had applied the paint brush to the frog.

"Have you ever tried washing fresh paint off a squirming frog?" Jerry asked.

Utilities commissioners stopped short when they walked into Director Charles Horne's office for their monthly meeting last week.

The place had changed.

New drapes, some paint and wallpaper with a scenic view gave the office a new look.

After everyone had complimented Horne on how well the office looked, he commented, "Actually its your office. I just stay here."

Circulation Manager Bonnie Hardee, who is also a volunteer firemen, reports that a fire truck on a call recently suddenly lost its power on Memorial Drive.

The vehicle coasted to a halt, with its red lights still blinking, as other fire engines roared by. The driver finally got the vehicle over to the curb and switched off the red lights.

And at the SCL depot fire last week, authorities were having trouble moving the crowd from a certain spot.

Finally a policemen pointed out to them, "There's a gas line running under here."

The crowd moved.

Other Editors Say

Voluntary Or Forced?

(Wilson Times)

There are but two ways to obtain controls. These are by self - regulation or forced regulation. The self - regulation is the democratic way, forced regulation the totalitarian way.

Now which shall it be? The President appealed to the principle of self - regulation and it is hoped the people will respond. If they do not there is only one path left open, forced regulation. And everyone knows how wage and price controls were abused during World War II.

This nation is experiencing uncontrolled inflation. And it cannot continue without dire effects. The present policy of labor trying to keep ahead if rising prices is fanning the fire. And there is now way to win by this policy and method. For profits are caught up in the squeeze and eventually expansion will cease and the entire system, which has worked so well in this nation, will fall by its own weight.

The President has asked for no new legislation, he sought no controls as such. He plans to buttress the strategy by naming two new commissions, one to seek ways to lowering prices through increase industrial productivity and the other by examining the government's contribution to inflation.

The President is on the right track in both cases. Government spending fans the fires of inflation, higher labor costs in excess of production increase the cost of goods and services. Only control by all concerned can remedy the situation.

As to the new steps, there is to be an "inflation alert" system to focus public attention on excessive wage - price settlements and to call on Congress to shore up specific weaknesses in the economy.

The other commission is to suggest ways of lowering prices through increased industrial productivity.

Then there is to be a new Regulations and Purchasing Review Board whose duties would be to examine the impact of federal purchasing and import policies on domestic price levels. This could be the most effective of the three suggestions. For there is more chance of pinpointing government influence on spending policies. Government spending is a major factor on inflation.

Now suppose the suggestions fail, what next? There will have to be forced controls. And if these do not work, our present sytem of government and the economy will fall, and this nation will go as have many others. But this is too drastic and tragic to anticipate. It is time for all to realize that any selfish gains at this time are bought at great price.

Cruise Against Habit

By DONALD E. MULLEN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Imagine a boatload of heavy smokers off on a two-week Caribbean cruise without a single cigarette available.

Would they be climbing the rigging the first night out? Pleading with the captain to put in to the first port? Start smoking their napkins?

What may sound like the scenario for a situation comedy is actually a real cruise designed to help those who want to quit smoking.

The tobacco-less voyage was thought up by the Institute for New Motivations (200 Park Ave., New York, N.Y.) a recently formed organization with a philosophy that people in a special environment can help each other break bad habits.

Smokless Holiday

The first two 13-day non-smoking cruises are scheduled for September and November, using the 20,000-ton cruise ship Santa Paula chartered from Prudential-Grace Lines. Except for special programs aimed at blowing away smoke dreams, the cruises will have all the partying and island touring of regular sea-going vacations, at prices ranging from $695 to $1,680.

The institute's medical director, New York psychiatrist William J. Nemon, thinks the idea of 250-300 confirmed smokers trapped on a smokeless ship will not only be peaceful, but a fun vacation.

"This is not to be a floating mental hospital, or a psychiatric clinic," Dr. Nemon said in an interview. "Nobody will be doing any black magic. Most of all it's a vacation in an atmosphere of positive thinking and having a good time.

"You can say 'I can really have fun, a good vacation without smoking two packs a day. I can have a meal without smoking, or a drink without smoking or dial a telephone without lighting a cigarette.'

Kicking The Habit

"We hope right from the time persons fill out their applications they'll be thinking in a positive way.

On board will be a medical staff including psychiatrists and psychologists. Dr. Nemon, who has helped smokers break the habit through hypnotism, said that sessions in self-hypnosis would be offered those who want extra help in kicking the habit.

"These cruises will be sailing into a new state rather than leaving the old state," he said. "For some the ship's environment will be enough. Some will have more problems and will need discussion groups. For others lecture groups will remind them that cigarettes are harmful to their health.

"In discussion groups persons get a great deal of satisfaction from hearing of others' cravings for cigarettes. They also get a feeling of self confidence when they find that food tastes better and things smell nicer and everyone else is experiencing the same thing.

On The Sneak?

"This is not real group therapy, and nothing like encounter or sensitivity groups — that would be the worst thing," he said. "We don't want an atmosphere of introspection. We don't want to get into anyone's deep psychological problems. But if we can get one person to talk with another person he will be helping himself as well as the other person."

Cities Will Provide The 'More'

By ELMER ROESSNER

Big - city mayors have raised their voices in chorus to beg, ask and demand more federal monies.

They have a point. Costs of operating cities are soaring because of inflation and it is the federal government that has created inflation not the city and state governments.

But they overlook a bigger point, the answer to the question of where the federal government will get these added billions? The answer, as well the mayors know, is from the cities. The people in the cities, the corporations headquartered there, pay the far greater share of federal taxes, perhaps three - fours of the total.

In that connection a calculation by the Tax Foundation shows that of the $19.6 billion in grants - in - aid to states and localities in 1969, $17 billion went back to the same states in which the federal government collected it.

The remaining $2.6 billion was taken the richer states and given to the poorer, or hungrier, states.

Good Old Delaware, New Jersey!

process, each paying $1.67 for every $1 they got back in federal largesse.

The amount paid by the next 17 states, according to the Tax Foundation calculations, for each dollar they got back was: Connecticut, $1.57; Maryland, $1.54; Indiana, $1.50; Illinois $1.46; Michigan, $1.39; Ohio, $1.37; Florida, $1.32; Wisconsin, $1.27; Pennsylvania, $1.18; New Hampshire, $1.14; New York, $1.12; Washington, $1.09; Kansas, $1.08; Massachusetts, $1.08; Iowa, $1.06; Virginia, $1.05; California, $1.01.

Note that 17 of the 25 largest cities in the country are in those states. Of the other eight, three are in Texas, which has been under special dispensation during the Johnson administration, but even then paid 99 cents for every buck it got from Washington.

The Gainers

Nebraska got dollar for dollar, and Oregon gave up 99 cents for every dollar it got back. The other states all got more than they paid, with Mississippi getting $1 for each 36 cents in taxes and Alaska, $1 for each 28 cents.

And, the Tax Foundation points out, the grants - in - aid will be almost $28 billion in the 1971 budget, a rise of $8.4 billion over 1969.

Detergent Industry In Hot Water Again

The detergent industry is in trouble again.

A few years ago it was the target of federal agencies and consumer groups because its foaming action continued long after the detergents flowed into streams and wells. It spent millions on research and came up with "biodegradable" detergents, those that broke down quickly under bacterial action.

How the industry is fighting charges that phosphates in detergents encourage the growth of algae resulting in a choking overgrowth in streams called eutrophication. A Senate subcommittee headed by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Me., has been hearing evidence on this charge, which is being stoutly denied by the chemical industry. Spokesmen say that sewage causes algae and that aeration of sewage is the solution.

Observations From Editorial Columns

BEING SEEN AND LISTENED TO

We have come a long way since parents took the position that children should be seen and not heard. Now we have come full circle until some children seem to believe they should not only be seen but listened to.

Vice President Agnew is not the only one who has denounced campus dissenters for demanding that they be heard while refusing at the same time to listen to their elders.

Last week Sen. Robert C. Byrd, a West Virginia Democrat, attacked both the "hard core of hell raisers" on the college campuses who preach a doctrine of destruction and the "gutlessness of some college presidents and professors with iron - clad tenure guarantees who have contributed to campus violence" resulting in the destruction of valuable public property.

Students insist that they have to resort to protest demonstrations often leading to arson because their right of petition guaranteed by the Constitution simply isn't getting results. They have asked for significant changes, and they haven't been made, or even promised. Their message, they believe, isn't getting through. They simply are not heard, they say.

This is not exactly true, of course. What they are saying is being heard loud and clear. But a great many people, younger people as well as older ones, do not agree with all that is demanded. They agree that change is necessary, and changes are being made. Anyone who considers only the past 10 years must realize that America certainly isn't the same today as it was in 1960 and never will be again.

The complaint that students are not being heard leads one to the conclusion that what some of them want is for others to do as they say. - Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel

SPEAKING OF SOUP

Ralph Nader and White House advisors on consumer affairs lead a considerable list of public watchdogs who seek out companies and products to take to the woodshed for alleged knavery in selling and - or advertising varied items to the consumer.

The most recent incident is the Federal Trade Commission hearing on allegations that a soup company has used misleading TV advertising by putting marbles in its soup bowl to make it appear to contain more vegetables.

We can't get too excited about this novel bit of subterfuge. Our coast - to - coast experience over the years has been that if you order "homemade vegetable soup" or "soup de jour" at various beaneries often enough, you will come up with a lot more objectionable things than marbles. - Birmingham (Ala.) FRIENDS OF ROTC

In the midst of the voluble, radical - oriented criticism of Reserve Officer Training Corps programs in the nation's colleges and secondary schools, the voices of support for ROTC have been muffled.

But recently 1,600 students at Harvard College, the scene of several antiwar demonstrations, petitioned that ROTC be restored.

Since we have been assured that this is a pluralistic, democratic society in which everyone has an opportunity to express his opinion, it's refreshing to hear from the other side. We hope that Harvard listens as attentively as it did when the protesters succeeded in getting ROTC abolished - Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

THE CHRONIC SAD

""Sadness resembles sorrow as the mist resembles the rain," wrote Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Sorrows come to all of us. They may never be forgotten but eventually the mists of sadness clear. Sadness is a kind of convalescence period during which kindly Nature heals our emotional wounds.

Melancholy is something else again. It is the pleasure some people take from sadness. They keep their wounds open to prolong it. For those around him, it constitutes a kind of blackmail in which the hurt person depends that others share his unhappiness.

If someone dear to you has experienced a great sorrow, be deeply, and sincerely sympathetic. If he retains his dejected spirits unreasonably long, gently take him off his diet of sympathy. Feed him hope. Help him to find new interests. Cure his sadness before melancholy sets in. Only the selfish remain sad! - Lakeland (Fla.) Ledger

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, June 21, the 172nd day of 1970. There are 193 days left in the year. This is Father's day.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1788, the U.S. Constitution went into effect as New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify it.

On this date:

In 1834, Inventor Cyrus McCormick obtained a patent for his reaping machine.

In 1898, during the Spanish American War, the first U.S. troops landed in Cuba.

In 1919, in World War I, part of a German fleet interned at Scapa Flow in Scotland was scuttled by the German crewmen.

In 1942, in World War II, 30,000 British soldiers were taken prisoner as the stronghold of Tobruk in Libya fell to the Germans.

In 1945, also in World War II, Japanese forces on the island of Okinawa surrendered to the Americans.

In 1963, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Milan, Italy, was elected Pope. He took the name Pope Paul the Sixth.

Ten years ago: An ideological split between the Soviet Union and Communist China came into the open at a Communist party congress in Romania.

Five years ago: Japan and South Korea resumed full diplomatic relations after 14 years of difficult negotiations.

One year ago: There was rioting in Uruguay during a visit by a U.S. presidential representative, New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

A Conservative View

Refreshing Sounds From The Academic Grove

By J.J. KILPATRICK

It seems too good to be true — it may yet prove too good to be true — but signs keep appearing of a changing wind in academic groves. For the first time since the dark night of campus destruction began three years ago, respected liberals openly are denouncing their irresponsible colleagues and demanding a return to reason.

Let me single out three such voices: Nathan M. Pusey, president of Harvard; Philip B. Kurland, professor of law at the University of Chicago; and Gardner Ackley, professor of economics at the University of Michigan. Each of them is a certified intellectual; each of them comes to the forum with impeccable credentials in higher education.

Pusey's eloquent address at a recent Harvard baccalaureate service has been widely quoted, but it will do no harm to underscore his charge of latter-day McCarthyism against the New Leftists. Among their number are "some faculty who for reasons not quite clear to me would like to see our colleges and universities denigrated, maligned, and even shut down."

"It is a shameful state of affairs," Pusey said. And he went on to speak of these militants and their techniques in words that cracked like whips: hateful, cunning, deceitful, ignorant, intolerant, sickening. He closed with his own confession of error. The inroads into academic life could not have grown so deep, he said, "had all of us to whom they are deeply repulsive been more ready to oppose them."

Kurland spoke on June 4 to the Women's Bar Association of Illinois. His theme was the politicization of the academy — the growing movement by which students and professors involve themselves actively in public affairs in the fashion of "Coxey's army and the oil lobby." Kurland denounced the process:

"The essence of the academy is disinterestedness. Its justification is disinterestedness. A university cannot be both a political force and an institution dedicated to the search for knowledge and its dissemination. As a university makes a political commitment it destroys its claim to academic freedom. And without academic freedom, the search for and dissemination of knowledge becomes more shadow than substance."

Kurland is bitter. He sees ahead nothing the destruction of universities as America traditionally has known them. In the "caretaker institutions" of the future, "answers will be substituted for questions, and indoctrination will replace education." This is the price, he said, "that America will pay for the cowardice of its university faculties."

Ackley, at Michigan, is no coward. In a recent address, he spoke scathingly of the weakness and permissiveness of Michigan's "own faculty and administration." The past academic year has taught the lesson, he said, "that violence and disruption either cannot or will not be punished by the university." Striking teachers are not punished; they are reappointed. Student vandals are not expelled; they are retained.

"Last Wednesday," said Ackley, "I watched the faculty of my own department, assembled in the chairman's office, discuss a demand that all classes in our building be shut down, or else. We discussed this while the entrances to the building were sealed, and while the halls outside the rooms in which we were meeting were patrolled by men carrying pipes and clubs. We sought guidance from the college, and were told: 'Do what you think best; you will have no protection.' And so we cravenly capitulated, in fear — if not for our own safety — for that of our students and employees. That day the truth lay in those clubs."

Pusey, Kurland and Ackley are not alone. One of the most powerful voices for reason in academia is being raised by Yale's Professor Alexander M. Bickel in the New Republic. Doubtless there are others; and in them lies the only hope for recovery of our tormented institutions.

It may be too late, as Kurland fears, to undo the damage. If so, the pusillanimous faculties must bear much of the blame. But if it is not too late, a rescue operation must be mounted swiftly by great teachers speaking to a great tradition, clearly, and unafraid.

SCHIZOPHRENIC POLITICS

More Unemployment Is Expected By Secretary Of Labor This Summer

By NEIL GILBRIDE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz says unemployment probably will climb above the 5 per cent rate recorded in May, the highest monthly figure since 1965.

The prediction came in Shultz' first interview since he was named by President Nixon to head a new White House superagency, the Office of Management and Budget. The change is due July 1.

Shultz told the Associated Press his department's weekly tally of unemployment compensation claims is still rising, indicating the number of jobless persons will go up in some of the coming months.

The secretary criticized Congress for failing to provide measures he said Nixon had requested to cushion the impact on employment from a cutback in defense and aerospace spending and the anti-inflation effort.

And he dismissed any likelihood of a conflict between himself and John D. Ehrlichman, the tough-minded presidential assistant named by Nixon to head the other new White House superagency, the Domestic Council.

The questions and answers:

Q: There's speculation your new job will concentrate a great deal more power in the White House in matters of domestic spending and the economy. Is that a fair judgment?

A: No, I don't think so. I think this question of where power is and how it is moving is very difficult to analyze. The fact is things are flowing in all directions. Things are flowing toward the White House, things are flowing away from the White House toward the Cabinet departments. We're making a great effort in the Nixon administration to move control of things more in the direction of the states and cities.

Q: Do you think this will give a more effective expenditure and management control?

A: Certainly that is the hope, and I expect—I feel confident— that we will be able to make the government operate more effectively. Now, that certainly doesn't mean trying to have more things actually done in the White House. The idea is to try to get greater clarity into the operations and we'll be trying to do that.

Q: There's been some criticism to the effect there might be overlaps and conflicts rather than clarification of responsibilities.

A: As between who and who?

Q: Between Erlichman and Shultz.

A: Sure. Well, the distinctions among what you do and how you do it and how well you do it, and so on—obviously those are words that do have content and meaning, and at the same time there's an awful lot of how, and how well, in any what. And there's an awful lot of what in figuring out how and evaluating it, so that these things are all connected.

Now, I think in addition to what formal lines of specialized areas we develop we also will have to work closely together as individuals. It would have to be practically on a day-to-day basis to be sure that things are clear and that each knows what the other is doing, and we're proceeding that way.

I've noticed that people have the idea—they seem to have the notion that one wants to draw activities to his operation, and my observation in the White House is sort of the reverse— that there's so much to do, and you're anxious to get it done well, and if you can find somebody else who can do it well and get him to do it, you're just that much ahead of the game.

yes. Paterson's name was never mentioned, but the point of the meeting was thunderingly clear —an appeal to receptive Italian voters of Brooklyn to dump Paterson.

Thus, in the view of the most responsible Democratic leaders from downtown Manhattan to deepest Harlem, Mrs. Chisholm and Ambro are an oddly matched duo dancing to the same tune, for completely different reasons.

These leaders don't like Ambro's code-word appeal to the ethnic backlash, but they admit, looking across the Hudson River to the blatantly racist mayoral election campaign in Newark, that it could be far far worse.

Their feeling is much harsher over the obstructionist tactics of their National Committeewoman, who is battling Goldberg and as of this writing had not lifted her voice once on behalf of Paterson since the endorsing convention.

The party has troubles enough anyway trying to nominate a gubernatorial ticket for the first time under a madcap primary law filled with booby traps. For example, if Goldberg and Paterson don't both win together in the primary, the Democratic vote in November cannot be added to the Goldberg-Paterson vote on the Liberal party line. That would automatically elect Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

No wonder, then, that behind their official silence on Mrs. Chisholm's tactics is something close to cold rage.

ECU Pilot String Project Points To Ultimate Success

The Pilot String Project of East Carolina University moves into its third year this Fall, having completed its crucial formative stage, and I am pleased to report that all indications point to its ultimate success.

This is one of the university's several culturally - oriented programs of which we are especially proud. In certain respects this is one of the most unique and most promising of these programs.

Imagine that after only two years of an admittedly-limited program more than 120 eager children between the ages of eight and 14 — most of them second and third graders — are playing violin, viola and cello, are learning music and music appreciation and, just as importantly, are involving their parents in this cultural pursuit.

We daresay that without the Pilot String Project far fewer than half of these youngsters ever would have learned to play a musical instrument or received even a basic appreciation for this form of art.

This is a seed crop project. Imagine the results which may be obtained in years to come when these children become young adults and light the spark of cultural interest and music appreciation all across Eastern North Carolina. Already we envision the possibility of a Youth Orchestra which would serve many counties and inspire many more young people to study stringed instruments.

Essentially, the Pilot String Project provides, free, the first year or two of instruction in areas of North Carolina which do not have string instrument instruction in the public schools. During the first two years this free instruction has been confined to the Greenville area and is conducted in only six elementary schools and two junior high schools. But there are exciting prospects for expansion with addition of more instruments and instructors and through initiation of string instrument instruction by neighboring public school systems.

Next year we believe the project will become full - blown with additional participating schools and more pupils. The nucleus of this growth has been established.

Two years ago when the project was launched under direction of the School of Music and Assistant Professor Rodney Schmidt, 82 children and their parents (a total of 164) were enrolled and completed the first year. The project requires that one parent attend and learn with the child and also that they attend classes at the School of Music.

The project utilizes instructional methods developed by Sinichi Suzuki of Japan. During the first year instruction is entirely by rote, by ear, without use of written music. The children begin by listening to records, by singing a series of tunes using the open strings of the instrument — simple, well - known tunes such as "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," "Lightly Row," "Blue Bells of Scotland," and "America." Then they are taught to use the open strings of the instrument to play these tunes, then to use each finger in turn.

These aurally learned tunes are learned as basic material for technical work by plucking the strings. The bow is introduced gradually with a good grip stressed for several weeks before it is placed on the string and used to create a sound. Instruction then continues with introduction of more complicated finger and bow combinations.

In the second year, music reading is introduced and supplementary material is taught through use of fingering and rhythym charts.

Several pre-school classes of three to five years old have been started. And it is expected to have a full junior high program going next year.

This, we believe, is the only music project of its sort presently in operation in North Carolina. But it is advancing and with continued interest and support we are confident that it will flower and spread, and in a few years the beauty of stringed music will be heard in homes, churches and music halls all across our region. — BY LEO W. JENKINS

The Good Idea Is Certain To Draw Opposition In Washington

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Any President who tries to impose what might be called a "national interest" discipline upon the Federal Government is in for some real trouble.

Thus, it should be no surprise that President Nixon's still unfolding plan to bring policy making together under a sort of super White House agency, the Office of Management and Budget, is the target of considerable resistence and more than the usual Washington-type nit-picking.

At this distance, but based on a rather close observance of the Washington scene which goes back to Herbert Hoover's inauguration, the Nixon move seems to make a lot of sense. This doesn't mean that it will meet with success. The casualty rate on good ideas in Government runs extremely high.

The chief complaint is that the OMB will center decisions too much in the White House and thus lead to still more "isolation" of the man at the top when it comes to making overall policy. In other words, it will downgrade the Cabinet and leave the departmental heads as administrators, not policy makers.

But any such objection hardly seems valid, on the record. It rests on the assumption that the Cabinet has functioned as sort of a national board of directors, voting on policy matters, with the majority setting Presidential policy. If this was ever the case, it isn't today and hasn't been during modern times.

Franklin Roosevelt, who set this government on the socialistic course, had his "brain trust"—Ben Cohen, Harry Hopkins, Tommy Cochrane and a huge staff of professors. Few in his Cabinet had influential voice in policy making. They directed programs. Harry Truman was much more apt to advise his Cabinet of policy decisions than to ask for policy from its members. He relied on a few close associates, which led to charges of "government by crony." When Henry Morgenthau, a holdover from Roosevelt, let it be known at the White House that he couldn't go along with a Truman policy, he was busy less than two hours later explaining his resignation as Treasury Secretary.

General Dwight Eisenhower started out giving his Cabinet a considerable weight in policy, but this soon ran out and Eisenhower turned more and more to a few close associates in and out of Government. His Administration brought few innovations, but it was a period of considerable tranquility and economic growth.

The Cabinet influence on President John Kennedy was chiefly from his brother, Robert, then Attorney General. Lyndon Johnson used his Cabinet sparingly, on matters of policy, with the exception of the Secretaries of State and Defense. This helped get him into the Vietnam debacle.

What's wrong with the Cabinet as a policy-making board of directors? Each member has been picked with great care and for a background which carries outstanding qualifications for a particular field.

The reason is not hard to come by. Each Cabinet Department is government, with few exceptions, has become an entrenched pleader for special, you might say vested interests. A new Cabinet member may take over with the all-important open mind. But, as a rule, it isn't long before they become captive of the intrenched bureaucracy they have inherited, along with the "special" interests which influence the Departments from the outside.

Thus, with the possible exception of the Attorney General and the Secretary of State, when the President turns to his Cabinet for help on matters of "national" policy, he is merely asking advice from a bunch of special pleaders, each under pressure from so-called voting blocs — farmers, unions, business associations, the poor, the ages, etc. The over-all needs of the nation become lost in the rivalery, usually for funds, between factions.

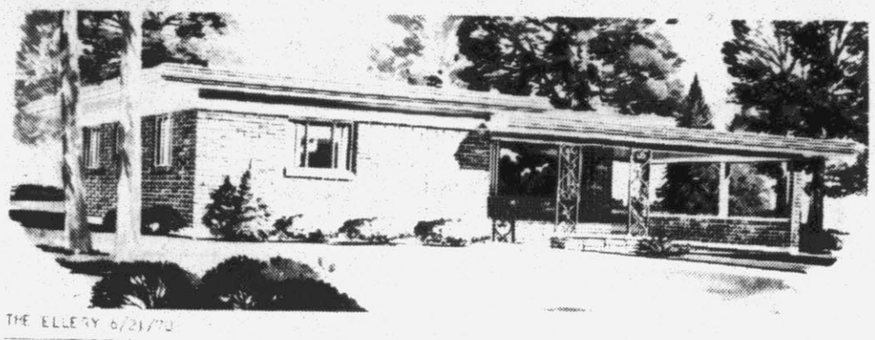

The late Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas once commented to this reporter along these lines: When you think about it, it is right remarkable how far this country has come the way things are done here in Washington. The problem is trying to get national interest ahead of special interest. All too often, this is done only when the two happen to coincide.

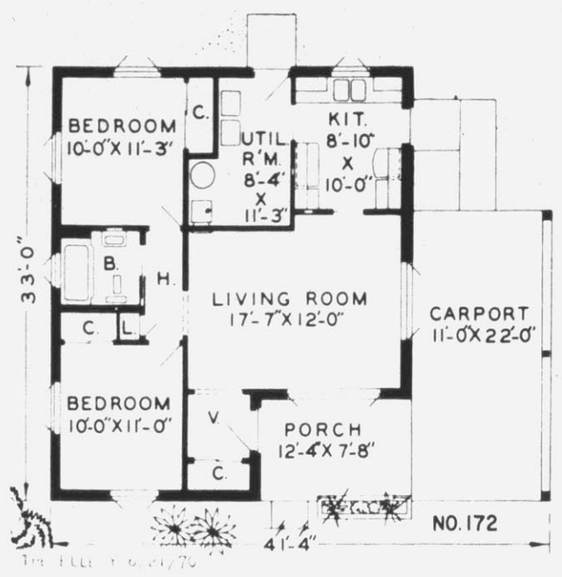

While Nixon has yet to flesh out the barebones of his new OMB, the major objective seems clear. His new agency, gathering information from the old agencies, will come up with recommendations for national goals and the order in which they are to be sought — a system of priorities.

This not only will make things tough for the empire builders inside government, who measure progress by the extra tax dollars they can get for their activities, but also for the special interest pleaders, lobbyists. In the case of the latter, it means they no longer simply need to convince a department they are in the habit of dealing with, but must contact a higher agency and one which probably will be harder to reach. They will turn more to Congress.

What OMB's success will be remains to be seen. As already noted, it sounds like a good idea, which in Washington is a guarantee of nothing.

Small Ranch Very Marketable

SOPHISTICATED AND COMPACT — The Ellery, designed by the Associated Architects, is a two - bedroom home that would be ideal for a young or retired couple. The ranch has a living room - dining room combination, one bath, a fully - equipped kitchen, utility room with space for a washer and dryer, carport, porch and concrete slab construction.

By GERRY BISHOP

For young couples starting out, or retirees who've raised their children, the two - bedroom home is ideal.

The Associated Architects designed the Ellery with that type of family in mind.

Not only is the Ellery compact and easy to maintain, but it boasts sophisticated styling that makes it highly marketable.

This is a home - construction project that a family on a tight budget could undertake successfully. Such considerations as concrete slab floors and the carport are economy measures. However, the carport could be closed in as a garage.

One - story living has many advantages, for the old and young alike. Maintenance can be handled easily by the owner, an asset in these times of costly service. And, if there's an illness, a ranch has its advantages.

But despite the economical advantages, this model has certain distincitive touches that make it an exceptional home. The planter and ornamental iron column along the front are two attractive features.

The styling is contemporary and the construction is brick veneer.

The flat roof blends with the one - story design, which is enhanced by a backdrop of trees.

Porch For Outdoor Enthusiasts

Another useful feature is the porch, which measures approximately 12 feet by 8 feet and would be a delight to outdoors enthusiasts.

A vestibule receives incoming traffic. Thre's a coat closet, one of many large closets in the Ellery.

The living room, approximately 18 feet by 12 feet, is located at the center of the house. It is handy to the sleeping quarters and kitchen. In fact, part of the living room is used for dining.

Cabinets and appliances are arranged in a U shape in the kitchen, a workshop of approximately 9 feet by 10 feet. Adjacent to the kitchen is the utility room where teh vurnace, water heater, washer and dryer are housed.

The two bedrooms are separated by the bath. Each bedroom is approximately 10 feet by 11 feet.

The carport is designed for one car and measures 11 feet by 22 feet. It could be expanded to two - car size if necessary.

Outside dimesions for the Ellery are approximately 33 feet by 41 feet. It could be built on a narrow lot.

Mortgage Lenders Are Putting New Value On Applicant's Potential

NEW YORK (UPI)—Young couples looking to buy a home may have more going for them than they realize. Mortgage lenders, taking a long-term view, have begun to give increasing weight to an applicant's potential earning capacity, along with a clean credit record.

These are among several new concepts in mortgage banking brought about by the changing economy, increasing costs of homes and the inflationary spiral, according to Emanuel M. Brotman, Board Chairman of the J. I. Kislak mortgage Corporation, and a member of the Mortgage Banking Advisory Committee of the Federal National Association (fanny May).

Today, says Brotman, many institutional lenders, in reviewing a young couple's ability to meet the costs of home ownership, give important consideration to the probability of future increased earnings. Their judgment is based on the probable growth pattern indicated by the applicant's background and his present position. The mortgage underwriter is also strongly influenced by the applicant's record in satisfying other financial obligations.

Some other views expressed by Brotman with regard to the current homebuying situation include:

SUPPLY: There are houses for sale all over the country, but the supply is short in relationship to the number of prospective buyers. This is one reason for higher prices, but there are others. Costs have skyrocketed for labor, materials, land and other essentials of new home construction. Yet, several million people managed to buy houses in 1969, and several more million will do so this year.

FINANCING: In the current tight money market, mortgage financing is tough to find, but not impossible. Such financing is usually obtained from mortgage banking concerns, which serve the real estate broker handling the sale.

Because conventional loans in most areas require sizeable cash down payments, young couples and other buyers who do not have substantial cash available usually buy their homes with government insured (FHA) or government guaranteed (VA) loans.

First reaction to the current 8½ per cent interest rate on FHA and VA loans may be that it is quite high. But, in comparison with the rates on conventionally financed mortgages, nationwide, it is definitely competitive and, in many cases, lower.

INCOME AND CARRYING CHARGES: Buyers must show a reasonable ability to pay the monthly carrying charges, which include principal and interest payments, local real estate taxes and property insurance.

For example, on a $27,000 house (the current national median cost) bought with a 10 per cent down payment and a 30-year FHA mortgage of $24,300, the monthly mortgage payment comes to $197. Add to this about $60 for real estate taxes and about $5 for property insurance. The total carrying charge would be $262 per month. There should be a reasonable relationship between this amount and the buyer's ability to pay it over the period of the loan.

If more money were available for a larger down payment, this cost would be reduced by $8.10 per month for each additional $1,000 of cash down payment.

FHA will now insure mortgage loans on one-family houses sold for up to $33,000. While the VA sets no ceiling on the price of a house which a qualified veteran can buy under its program, in today's mortgage market, institutional lenders have no ready market available for the sale of VA-guaranteed loans on houses costing over $40,000.

ONCE IN A LIFETIME? More adventurous, more sure of themselves and their future, and certainly more affluent, the current generation of young couples no longer look upon their first home purchase as necessarily their last. More homes are being resold more frequently as incomes grow, families change in size and job mobility increases. A revival of massive homebuilding when money eases will accelerate this trend.

In Brotman's view, it may be several decades before housing production can possibly catch up with the demands of an ever - expanding population. Thus, there will be a continuing market for homes sales and resales for the foreseeable future.

QUICK MONEY

HELSINKI (UPI)—Five per cent of Finaland's 5 million population needed money in a hurry in 1969 and went to a pawnbroker to get it, says the Pawnbrokers Association. The organization said it loaned 12.2 million marks ($2.9 million) to 230,694 customers during the year.

Builders are becoming more receptive to the idea of change, says one house-shopper, who claims she has at least gotten them to listen.

It may not be a bad idea to design a dream house. You might just get a builder to throw away his old molds now that he is taking a breather in this slow building market.

If you are looking for ideas, ask yourself whether a house needs to be complicated or do you think building, cleaning and repairing are good for the morale?

One house that comes to mind might give you some ideas.

It was one of those rare dwellings that seemed to have sprung up out of the ground to challenge the status-symbol houses of the neighborhood, although its additional charm was that it was screened from view.

The house might have been the successor to the cave, teepee or igloo, if man had stayed on that easy-care track, instead of building dwellings that are as outmoded as the trolley car is in this space age.

This dream house had a quonset hut roof with glass windows from the ground to the top of the roof. The living area was below ground, bedrooms were off a balcony on half of one side of the long house.

The living area was enormous with a floor of clay tiles with drains at strategic places. In the center of the living room, there was a brick fireplacebarbecue that was open on three sides at waist level for cooking and heating.

The kitchen section of the long room was separated from the main room by a Chinese-style beaded curtain. At the end of the long kitchen, there was a tall incinerator into which garbage, papers and boxes were dumped.

There were no curtains or draperies to clean—the enormous windows were covered by huge canvas sail-like blinds. You pulled the cords and the blinds turned like sails in a strong wind, letting in the sun, or you pulled the cord to enjoy the shade and cool of the room.

When the floor needed it, you could wash it with a garden hose. The walls were of rough sawn cedar with a wide ledge under the windows at ground level about six feet above the living room floor where a row of bright red geraniums added to the charm.

Upstairs off the balcony, there were bedrooms and bath. The floor of the balcony was built of logs that were set on end. Each log was about seven inches in diameter.

Bedrooms were panelled with built-in drawers for clothes, built-in overhead light and a light comfortable chair that was easily moved.

The sofa in the living room was a slab of foam rubber covered in black felt. It was set in a frame on legs. Several chairs were canvas set into metal frames. All furniture was moved easily when the room had to be hosed. In summer, there was no rug on the floor, but you could add one for winter.

A very long, slim table ran along the window wall. The legs of sturdy wood could be dried with paper towels after the hosing.

Men loved this house because it didn't require work. There was nothing to paint, wash, scrub, solder or polish. Women loved it because they weren't slaves to the mop, vacuum or broom. As for water, there were all those drains, in case of a leak.

The house did cost more, initially, than say a stucco, Colonial or split level with the same number of square feet. As for upkeep, the owner was home free, unless someone were to come through the window in a tractor.

A European architect designed the house, and while the quonset hut might have been an expediency—the house was built during World War II—the idea certainly provided an inspiration to try something new.

In the last three decades, American architects have also been trying to tell clients something. Their message seems to be: strip it, get down to the basic requirements of living—get rid of the clutter and whigmaleeries.

Status symbols may be an American hang-up. Too many people have been living in a way they don't like because they feel it is the thing to do. It might be a giant step out of the community mold to build a house that is your own brainchild.

It may be now, when builders have a lull, or never. If one builder discovers again that he enjoys using his carpentry tools instead of building the same sterotyped house with its many pre-molded parts, the idea may prove to be catching in the building trade.

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG

Q.—We have a two-car garage but only one car. The "unused" part of the garage is now jammed with a lawn mower, a lawn sweeper, dozens of garden tools and all kinds of outdoor equipment. I'd like to clear up the mess by putting up perforated hardboard panels along the wall, which is made up of concrete or cinder blocks, I'm not sure which. How should the panels be attached to the wall?

A.—Since the object of using perforated panels is to place hooks in the openings, there must be a space between the original wall and the hardboard. Attach 1-by-2 furring strips to the wall with concrete nails, special adhesive or masonry fasteners. Set the strips on 4-foot centers from the floor to the top of the wall line. Place horizontal strips at the top and the bottom of the wall and also between the vertical members at points just below the bottom row of holes in the paneling. The latter strips provide additional rigidity without blocking the holes.

When all the furring is in place, fasten the perforated boards to the strips with one-inch roundhead wood screws. The screws are placed on approximate 18-inch centers.

In purchasing hooks, get the types you need for the equipment that will be hung. The best way is to write down exactly what you expect to hang on the wall and take the list with you to the dealer, who can help you select the proper hooks.

Q.—We have had a red cedar closet for many years. It no longer has any cedar odor. Can the surface be finished with varnish?

A.—Yes—but why? Once you put any kind of coating on the wood, you destroy its moth-repellent qualities, which can be all or partly restored by sanding the wood thoroughly.

Q.—I recently bought a second-hand belt sander. It seems to work all right, but sometimes after finishing a job I notice that the surface in one place is higher than another. What is causing this?

A.—A belt sander generally is more powerful than what is called a finishing sander. Therefore, it is important, when sanding, that you guide it across the work smoothly. If you stop it for even a fraction of a second in one place, it may take off more wood than necessary in that spot.

One by one, the manufacturers of house paints are adding a comparatively new development to their lines—an exterior latex trim that dries to a gloss.

Just as the advocates of latex and oil paints swear by their choices, so do the supporters of gloss and non-gloss trim finishes. Some home owners who preferred latex or water-based paints for the bodies of their houses wanted glossy surfaces on the outside trim.

As a result, thousands of homes were painted with latex except for the trim, which was covered with a glossy oil paint. Now, thanks to superior acrylic emulsions, quality latex gloss trim is available, and the manufacturers are putting it out in a wide range of colors.

The trim paint has all the advantages of latex paints—quick drying, easy to clean up with soap and water, little odor and no fire hazard. The gloss levels are said to hold well, with good color retention and no yellowing of the whites. The new paint is recommended for use over aged, glossy surfaces as well as primed bare wood, and can also be used on brick, stucco and other types of masonry.

Since it resists mildew, chipping and discoloration, the paint may be used on outdoor furniture, shutters, panels, doors, railings, fences, dog houses and other surfaces outdoors where a gloss is desired.

The trim paint may be applied under both damp and dry conditions. The "open time" of approximately 10 or 15 minutes, during which working areas can be lapped into just-painted sections, can be further extended by wetting the surfaces before painting.

(For Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

If it is necessary to apply more than one coat of the acrylic latex trim paint in one day, there should be an interval of more than four or five hours between coats. This is true even though the paint may be dry to the touch in less time. In all painting, incidentally, it usually is safer to wait even longer than the manufacturer recommends before applying a second coat. Too many persons, seeing that certain types of paint require a 24-hour wait between coats, finish up the first coat late in the day and begin the second coat early the next morning, which is hardly 24 hours.

As with most paints, the new trim finish should not be applied in temperatures less than 50 degrees. Below that figure, the paint seems to dry all right, but actually does not fuse properly, leaving a coating that could wash off in the rain.

They still haven't come up with a paint that does away with the necessity of preparing the surface: cleaning off dirt, scraping loose paint, removing mildew, etc. A latex primer is good for bare wood surfaces before coating with the new trim paint.

Parks Feel Litter Cost

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The high cost of litter continues to rise in the nation's 752.2 million acres of federal parks, forests and lands, with the price tag for fiscal 1971 estimated at about $21,623,000.

That marks a hike of more than 12 per cent over the $19,257,000 spent for cleanup in fiscal 1970.

Rep. Julia Butler Hansen, D-Wash., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee that allocates money for the Department of the Interior and the U.S. Forest Service, said of the clean-up budget:

"I cannot resist again calling attention to the cost of messy Americans. A great many million dollars per year could be expended in useful construction and maintenance—or expansion of services—if huge sumes of money were not required to clean up the litter lefy by careless individuals who not only clutter but burn our national recreation acreas."

She added that litter costs far exceeded the entire $17,863,000 budget for the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

Allen H. Seed, executive vice president of Keep America Beautiful inc., cited the cost figures as "proof positive that every litter bit really does hurt, especially in the area of the taxpayer's pocketbook."

Some Guidelines On Surviving The Heat

CHICAGO (UPI)—Here are some guidelines from the American medical Association on how to remain comfortable and healthy through the hot weather months:

Wear lightweight clothing, either white or light in color to reflect the sun.

Drink plenty of liquid. water should be restored on an hourly basis.

Use extra salt on foods to replace sale lost by perspiration, or mix a little salt in your drinking water.

Do not wear plastic or rubber garments during hot weather.

Do strenuous work only during the cooler parts of the day, and when working or playing in hot weather stop occasionally and rest for about 10 or 15 minutes.

Carry a light sweater or jacket and when leaving hot weather and entering a cool, air conditioned building, put the garment on four about 15 minutes to allow your body to adjust to the cooler conditions. The same applies when leaving an air conditioned building. Put the garment on for about 5 minutes until your body begins sweating.

To be more comfortable in hot weather, eat lighter foods.

Sun bathing can be dangerous as well as painful. The AMA does not recommend sunbathing since it is believed repeated sunbathing can cause skin cancer.

Remember, you can get just as sunburned on an overcast day as on a bright day. If you are on sand or water, you can burn twice as fast since you get a reflection from below as well as above, creating double intensity of the rays.

Heat exhaustion and heat stroke are two hot weather dangers. Symptoms of heat exhaustion are similar to shock. A person with heat exhaustion will have clammy skin and appear confused. If conscious, a heat exhaustion victim should be given fluids, with salt diluted in them. The victim should be kept warm and lying down.

A heat stroke victim must be cooled immediately, since his temperature would be so high there might be a danger of brain damage. Submerge the heat stroke victim in cold water or wrap him in wet sheets or ice packs. A person with heat stroke requires immediate medical attention.

Crafts Session Attracts Versatile Women

CHAIR CANING . . . is done by Mrs. Tom Boulden and Mrs. H.F. Goforth as instructor Mrs. C. F. Debnam lends her assistance.

A two-day crafts workshop held on the campus of East Carolina University this week, attracted approximately 40 women including technical institute instructors, a recreation crafts teacher, home economics agents and housewives.

The workshop was sponsored by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service. Miss Marjorie Shearin, specialist in creative crafts at N.C. State University, Raleigh, was coordinator for the two-day session.

"The idea for this workshop stems from nine counties being invited to participate in the Arts and Crafts Fair to be held in Rocky Mount in November. The counties are Wilson, Edgecombe, Nash, Pitt, Halifax, Beaufort, Martin, Warren and Franklin. In turn, the counties were invited to participate in this workshop," said Mrs. Elizabeth Meldau, district home economics agent.

"Home economics agents in those counties did a survey in an attempt to find the interest in various crafts among the women. From this survey, we determined classes for this session," she added.

Classes taught during the event and their instructors included: chair caning, Mrs. C. F. Debnam, Rt. 2, Zebulon; knitting, Mrs. Frances Fuller, home economics agent, Louisburg; macrame (knotting), Mrs. Freida Terrell, area agent in creative crafts, Asheville;

Silk screening, Miss Shearin, Raleigh; seed pod beauties, Mrs. John L. Troutman, Rt. 8, Raleigh; and pine needle articles, Mrs. F. F. Fleming, Manson.

"The purpose of the craft workshop was to train leaders. The class participants will in turn teach persons interested in their particular craft within their own county.

"One of the ultimate aims of the workshop was to provide additional quality crafts for sale at the Arts and Crafts Fair," said Mrs. Meldau.

Another part of the training process for the fair was a session on jams and preserves conducted by Miss Iola Pritchard, food conservationist at N.C. State University. She will also conduct a session in July on pickles and jellies.

"For the past 10 years, the N. C. Extension Service has held crafts workshops at East Carolina University. During this time, the university officials have been very cooperative in helping with the workshops by offering their facilities. They roll out the red carpet," remarked Miss Shearin.

Participants in the workshop from Pitt County included: Mrs. Linda L. Burrell; Mrs. Mae Woodard; Mrs. Gail Jones; Mrs. Glenn Smart; Mrs. Dennis Hardy;

Miss Rebecca Rott; Mrs. Hazel Bright; Miss Mary Lee Paramore; Mrs. Nathan Smith; Mrs. Billy Wynne; Mrs. T. H. Ramsey; Mrs. Joseph E. Downing;

Travel Expert Says Always Pack Light

NEW YORK (AP) — Before you leave for vacation, do two important things, advises travel expert Gunther Less: "Cut your baggage in half and double your spending money."

Less, Olympic Airways executive and producer and host of the television travel show, "Journey to Adventure," travels enough miles each year to take him to the moon and back.

"I travel often," he agrees, "and I always travel light ... never take more luggage than I can carry myself. That way I can survive bellhops' strikes, scarcity of porters, and be sure in an emergency that I won't wrench my back trying to lift two-ton luggage."

"If you're going to take too much of anything, make it traveler's checks," he advises. "Having enough money on hand," he adds, "can take the worry out of the last few days of vacation."

Those planning on a European jaunt this year must plan more fully, according to Less. Here are 15 tips this seasoned traveler gives to make your vacation more pleasant.

1. Book accommodations well in advance, especially if you are traveling during peak season, or if you want less expensive rooms. They usually are taken first.

2. Consider the benefits of off-season travel. Often the weather is good, you save money and avoid the crowds. For example, Paris and London are fun all year round, and summer in Greece starts early and ends late.

3. Find out in advance what you can expect the weather to be like, so you won't greet 80-degree temperatures wearing an overcoat.

4. Leave enough time to secure passport and vaccinations. During the busy season, you may have a few weeks' wait before passport is processed. Get your vaccination in advance, in case you have a reaction to the shot.

5. Check with your travel agent or airline to see if a visa or additional vaccinations are necessary for your destination.

6. Take $10 in foreign currency with you for baggage service, taxi or bus fare when you arrive at the airport or harbor. U.S. banks prepare "tip packs," $10 worth of foreign currency, along with a card explaining the rate of exchange.

7. Consult with your travel agent, airline and foreign tourist bureau for information about your trip. Each has a wealth of knowledge to help you plan your trip.

8. Try to learn a few words in the language of the country you're visiting. Chances are, you'll get along perfectly well if you know only English, but "please" and "thank you" are twice as polite in the native language.

9. A foreign-English dictionary has often saved the day. Keep one in your pocket.

10. The fewer cities you see on vacation, the better. See only the ones you really want to, and get to know them in depth. The more cities you see, the less you will get to know each one.

11. If you take a package tour, take time to explore on your own. The quaintest restaurant, the most intriguing shop may be just around the corner.

12. The best way to first get acquainted with a city is on a bus tour. It gives you the feel of the city right away.

13. If you hop into a cab and you can't speak the language, have a card with your destination written on it ready to hand to the driver. The desk clerk at your hotel will be glad to jot it down correctly.

14. Don't forget a card with the name of your hotel to make coming back just as easy.

15. Carry a folded airline bag inside your suitcase to stow your souvenirs in for the return home.

Mom Wants To Skip Wedding Functions

[© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: My son is marrying the daughter of one of the town's most socially prominent families. I am a working widow with limited means. I am giving the bridal couple a wedding gift, plus the rehearsal dinner. These, plus the clothes for the wedding, are all I can possibly afford.

There will be luncheons, teas, and evening parties honoring the bridal couple. I cannot afford to take time away from my work to attend day time parties, and I can't afford the kind of clothes I would feel at ease in for any of these affairs, with the exception of the wedding itself.

Would it be a breach of etiquette for me to refuse these invitations? Thank you. MOTHER OF THE GROOM

DEAR MOTHER: Are you being perfectly honest with yourself for wanting to ditch the bridal parties? Clothes? Surely you could be appropriately attired without too much expense. Time away from work? That, too, could be managed for this once-in-a-lifetime occasion! If you feel socially inferior, you needn't. As the mother of the groom, your contribution to the wedding is easily the most important of all. Go, and enjoy yourself!

DEAR ABBY: I was invited [a month in advance] by a bachelor friend to dinner to meet his mother, who was visiting him. He said there would be other guests and we would dine in the restaurant in his apartment building, but to come to his apartment "for cocktails" at 7:30 p. m.

I arrived at the appointed time and he greeted me with the news that he had a "cold" and had cancelled out the other guests since he wasn't in the mood to entertain a group. I told him he should have cancelled me out, too, but he insisted that he wanted ME to come anyway.

I had a few drinks with him and his mother, and since nothing was said about going to dinner I wondered if perhaps he intended to whip something up in his apartment, but he didn't move.

As time went on I wondered if perhaps the restaurant in the building wouldn't be closing soon, but naturally I didn't mention it.

Finally the conversation lagged, and at 10:40 p. m. my friend offered to call a taxi for me.

I said my good-byes without dinner. The following morning I telephoned my friend and apologized for keeping him up so late.

What did I do wrong? WASHINGTON, D. C.

DEAR WASHINGTON: Perhaps when he told you he had "cancelled out" the other guests because he had a "cold," you should have taken the hint, met his mother and departed. But since you didn't, after one hour, since there was no mention of dinner, you should have gone home. In any event, you had no need to apologize.

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter from "IRRITATED," who dislikes having small children answer the phone when she calls.

I used to work for a telephone answering service, calling doctors, repairmen to service television sets, juke boxes, oil burners, refrigerators, etc. Nearly all these men had to be called at home. It IS irritating when some child grabs the phone and says, "WHO IS THIS?"

After burning up several times over this, I finally came upon a satisfactory solution: I just hang up without saying a word, wait about five minutes, then I call again. If the child answers again, I hang up again. By the third time I call, the mother's curiosity has gotten the better of her, and SHE beats the child to the phone. It works nicely. Furthermore, you don't have to say anything nasty to the mother. I just say, sweetly, "I have a very important message which I didn't think I should entrust to a child to deliver." Cordially,

(Tips On Buying Floor Coverings)

The purchase of carpets and rugs represents a major investment. Therefore selections should not be guided by snap judgment. The first consideration is color. Because the floor is the largest, unbroken area in the room, its color will be the dominating factor in relation to all other furnishings.

If you are following a program of refurnishing the room from scratch, let the floor covering set the color keynote.

Should your intention be to purchase a new rug only, then take samples of your draperies, upholstery, wallpaper, paint or other prominent fabrics of the room, when you visit the rug store.

With these samples placed on various floor coverings, you should soon be able to arrive at a color and pattern to your liking.

Bryan-Roebuck Vows Said In Ceremony On Saturday

The Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Nancy Marlene Roebuck and Benjamin Wayne Bryan on Saturday at 3:00 p.m.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony was the Rev. William Gaylord.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Edith Barnhill, organist, and Mrs. Ann Briley, soloist, who sang "Whither Thou Goest," "More" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Roebuck of Rt. 1, Stokes, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of peau de soie with imported chantilly lace featuring a sabrina neckline and lace sleeves ending in calla points over her hands. The full skirt was accented with appliqued lace extending into a chapel train.

Her waist length veil of French illusion was attached to a pillbox of forget-me-nots. She carried a bouquet of miniature carnations, lilies-of-the-valley and green ivy centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Janice James of Rt. 1, Stokes, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was attired in a formal empire gown of aqua voille appliqued with yellow daisies with puffed sleeves and high neck. She wore a matching aqua voille headpiece and carried a nosegay of white daisies with aqua streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Frances Kaye Bryan, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Peggy Fornes of Greenville and Miss Jean Farmer of Stokes, cousins of the bride, and Mrs. Deborah Higson, also of Greenville.

They wore formal empire gowns of yellow voille appliqued with yellow daisies with puffed sleeves and high necklines. They wore matching headpieces and carried nosegays of white daisies tied with yellow and white streamers.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bryan Jr. of Greenville.

Tony M. James of Rt. 1, Stokes, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Gus James of Rt. 1, Stokes, Kenneth Ross and Larry Roebuck, cousin of the bride, both of Greenville and Michael Edmundson of Bethel, cousin of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride chose a pink brocade dress with matching coat of voille and brocade collar. She wore matching accessories and a white mum corsage with pink spray and ribbon.

The bridegroom's mother selected a navy blue dress with matching accessories. She wore a white mum corsage with red spray and ribbon.

Mrs. Carolyn Long of Washington, aunt of the bride, directed the wedding. She was presented a corsage of white carnations.

Following a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 5, Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Stokes - Pactolus High School and is employed by Greenville Utilities Commission. She plans to attend Pitt Tech this fall.

The bridegroom attended Greenville schools and is now attending Pitt Tech. He is employed with the State of North Carolina.

After-Rehearsal Party

The Bryan-Roebuck wedding party was honored at an after - rehearsal party given by Mr. and Mrs. Tony James and Mr. and Mrs. Armistead A. Long Jr.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth. The Sweet Gum Grove Community Building, where the event was held, was decorated throughout with arrangements of summer flowers and burning tapers.

After the couple cut the traditional first slice of wedding cake, Mrs. Roebuck, mother of the bride-elect, served the cake and Mrs. Bryan, mother of the bridegroom-elect, poured punch.

Makeup Man Advises New Look Calls For Soft Face

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Career women may suspect their glamor stock dropped with their hemlines. They might be on the right track.

Youthful makeup man Stan Place says: "The most depressing thing about the midi-longuette fashion worn mainly by the over-30 set may be that women will relax their beauty regimes that kept them slim, and they may neglect to update their faces.

"I predict women will get 10 pounds heavier unless they continue to exercise and diet as they did when their skirts were short, their knees showed, and they were swinging in their minis," he explains.

A graduate of Ohio State University with a master's degree in fine arts, Place has applied his knowledge of color, lighting and form to the beauty world. He is a consultant on lighting, which he learned in the theater and on makeup. He was on the road with "My Fair Lady" in a dual job as dancer-hairdresser to the star of the show, when he became fascinated with stage lighting and makeup techniques used in the theater. The full circle came about recently when he developed a four-way makeup mirror that provides lighting that is similar to fluorescent light.

FACE IN THE ENVIRONMENT — That's what makeup-lighting expert Stan Place calls the challenge presented by the midi dress. Hair must be less static and face makeup should be soft and applied in good light so that it looks good even under fluorescent office lights.

"The midi fashion is not for curvaceous ladies—it is a long, slim, small-bust look, the kind of thing that Susannah York might wear—but it wouldn't look well on Elizabeth Taylor. Many women will think of the style as something to hide behind, he explained. They shouldn't. It can't be done. The midi fashion will be even more demanding than the mini—it requires a big effort to wear it," he points out.

Fashion is fickle, he warns, and hemlines are an indication of the economy. If things worsen, hemlines might fall to the ground, but if the economy improves, skirts might be heightened before you can say "exercise every day." The mini fashion was good because women had to be healthier "with more of them exposed," he says.

In addition to the slim lines of clothes, there should be an above-the-neck transformation.

Hair must be dressed to make the head look small—it can't be teased. Hair should be "moving" rather than static in its style. It should be clean, soft, unlacquered.

Lips can wear more color, but the color should be transparent. He likes lip glosses. Some Parisian mannequins have been wearing opaque lipsticks, deep red, at recent fashion shows, but Place considers this look an aging one for the over-30 set.

Eyebrows should be thin, soft and delicate, but not pencilled in a harsh line. He likes pastel eyeshadows, translucent powders.

The entire image should be soft. Many women get a harsh look from putting makeup on in poor light, he advises. Makeup done under ceiling light in a bedroom may look a bit odd under fluorescent lights in the office. The makeup room should be well-illuminated, and one should stay close to the mirror, when applying makeup under a ceiling light. Fluorescent lights can play tricks with color. Your makeup and dress may be color-unified when you leave home, but a different effect may be realized under office fluorescent lights.

A makeup mirror can help improve your appearance, but many makeup mirrors provide a soft glow—you look great when you stare into them—but you might look spooky under harsh light. You should stand about 18 to 21 inches away from the average makeup mirror when you are applying makeup, he advises, and you should choose lights that are similar to those in your office.

After-five clothes—soft jerseys and matte crepes that fall to gentle, mid-calf folds—call for the special radiance of translucent makeup, in his opinion. In the evening, one should avoid the dull, rigid finish, the feeling that because it is after five, you can use more of everything in the makeup box.

The swimming pool area at 150 Longmeadow Rd. was transformed into a tropical paradise for a few hours Saturday night. The party, a Hawaiian luau, was given by Miss Pat Minges and Houston Tucker in honor of Miss Kay Buck and Harold Barnes, who will be married June 27.

The guests included the wedding party and other friends of the bridal couple.

The Hawaiian theme was carried out in decorations as well as refreshments. The host, hostess and honorees wore island attire highlighted with authentic grass skirts and fresh orchid leis flown in from Hawaii.

The guests wore typical luau attire and were presented colorful paper leis at entrance of bath house.

The pool area was decorated with palm and tropical flowered trees, draped colorful fishnets, and flickering torches to aid the tropical setting. Hawaiian music was played in the background.

The buffet table was centered with two large Venetian glass fish and colorful flowers.

BeAdventurous With Cake Mix

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Ingenious cooks have done various things with cake mix. They have added flavored gelatin dessert, pudding-and-pie mix and frosting mix and have come up with interesting combinations.

Now comes a new get-together: cake mix plus whipped topping mix plus coarsely grated semi-sweet chocolate. The whipped topping mix, added to the dry cake mix straight from the envelope without whipping, helps make a cake that has extra volume, good keeping quality and tender texture. The baked cake is given a Brandied Chocolate Glaze—one of the most delicious glazes we've ever sampled.

CHOCOLATE FLECK DREAM CAKE

1 package (2-layer size) yellow, white or devil's food cake mix
1 envelope whipped topping mix (use right from envelope without whipping)
4 eggs
1 cup cold tap water
1 square (1 oz) semi-sweet chocolate, coarsely grated
Brandied Chocolate Glaze, see recipe

Into large bowl of electric mixer, turn the cake mix, whipped topping mix, eggs, and water; blend until moistened. Beat at medium speed for 4 minutes. Blend in grated chocolate. Turn into greased and floured 10-inch Bundt or tube pan.

Bake in preheated 350-degree oven until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—40 minutes for Bundt pan or 45 to 50 minutes for tube pan. Cool in pan placed on wire rack for 15 minutes. With spatula loosen from sides and center tube, and gently remove cake. Finish cooling on rack; spread with glaze.

BRANDIED CHOCOLATE GLAZE

1 square (1 oz) semi-sweet chocolate
1½ tablespoons butter
¾ cup unsifted confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons (about) brandy

In a small saucepan over low heat, melt chocolate with butter, stirring constantly until smooth. Remove from heat. Gradually add sugar alternately with brandy. Stir until mixture is of glaze consistency. While glaze is still warm, spread over cake. Makes about ½ cup.

World Offers Adventure To Photographer

By PEACE STERLING
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Doris Nieh is a pretty photographer whose philosophy of never passing up a challenge has gotten her into some strange and wonderful situations, including the chance to become a member of a sheikh's harem.

This honor was offered here when she went to the Middle East to do a series of photographs for an oil company. She declined the sheikh's proposal.

Another time, on her first trip to Taiwan, the Chinese-born miss was shooting photographs of frogmen who do intelligence work for the Taiwan government. Someone suggested she go through the rigorous underwater training herself. She did — for two weeks — and has pictures to prove it.

Her latest escapade involved playing a nude scene in the movie "The Hawaiians" with Charlton Heston. She had been hired by the studio to shoot stills for the movie, but the director spotted her and asked how she'd like to take a bath with Heston. Without her clothes? How else?

"At one time I thought I'd say no," she recalled. "But then I thought—how many people get an opportunity like this?" The fun started when she tried simultaneously to hide her nakedness and take the photos.

"I was juggling two cameras and trying to keep a towel wrapped around me and I was a nervous wreck," the 33-year-old Miss Nieh recalled with a smile. "You don't just take off your clothes and feel natural about it. But the second day it wasn't so bad, and I realized nobody was paying any attention to me personally."

Although she has had small parts in three movies, Miss Nieh's main occupation is as a Hollywood still photographer. "I'd like to act," she says, "but I don't want to have to fight for roles. It was enough of a hassle to establish myself as a photographer."

Miss Nieh was born in mainland China, but she and her family fled from there in 1950, and settled in New Jersey. After graduating from the University of Iowa, she decided she wanted to travel, but didn't want to pay for it herself.

"I first thought of being a foreign correspondent," she said, "so very wide-eyed I walked into the New York Times office. They looked at me like—who is this crazy girl?"

Undeterred by her failure at the Times, but determined to travel she then tried to use the "fly now pay later" credit plans that had just begun.

"I wrote to two credit card companies requesting cards," she recalled. "When they wouldn't issue me their cards—and why should they, I had no money, no job—I wrote a very moving letter to the president of one company accusing him of discriminating against penniless Oriental refugees.

"It must have caught his eye, because they issued me a trial card. I wrote a thank you letter to the company and took off."

Before leaving she purchased a second-hand camera, hoping she'd be able to sell her photographs. She chalked up a $6,000 bill on her 22-country trip, all of which she eventually repaid, and sold a series of photographs to a Canadian magazine.

Returning home, she moved to Los Angeles, had no luck with her photography, and finally worked as a lecturer. "For three years I lectured on Oriental cooking and the mystique of Oriental women," she says. "It was a hoke because I only knew how to cook two Oriental dishes, and the mystique idea is a farce."

Her break into Hollywood photography came in 1965 when she learned a studio was getting ready to start shooting for "The Sand Pebbles" in Taiwan.

"I wrote the head of the publicity department and told him they should hire me because I spoke seven dialects of Chinese and would fit right in," she said. The studio took her up on the idea.

After "The Sand Pebbles" came other assignments, not all in Hollywood. In 1968 she went to Florida with the Detroit Lions to work on the film, "Paper Lion."

"That was a challenge because the players don't like having women working around them. They feel they have to curb their language," she explained. "But after I showed them I could keep my cool, we got to be friends."

Miss Nieh said that her parents haven't understood her yen for travel and adventure, and that her father has disowned her. "We haven't been in communication for some years now," she said.

But she doesn't regret her adventures, and she doesn't worry about her future. "I never think too much about what I'm doing. When you think, you worry too much and you anticipate all the horrible things that can happen."

Engagement Announced

MISS VERONA AGNES DIXON. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Dixon of Farmville, who announce her engagement to Richard Wayne Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Wayne Taylor of Rockingham. The wedding will take place Aug. 2.

Miss Joan Eysenbach Weds On Saturday

WINSTON-SALEM — In a high noon ceremony in the chapel of Ardmore United Methodist Church here, Miss Joan Alice Eysenbach and Robert Charles Cooper were united in marriage.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Wendell H. Eysenbach of Winston-Salem and Mr. Charles C. Cooper of Florence, Ala., and the late Mrs. Elisabeth P. Cooper.

William E. Nickle officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of chiffon over taffeta designed with an empire waistline and chiffon coat with long sleeves. The collar and cuffs of the gown were of white satin. She wore a white horsehair picture hat and carried a bouquet of white daisies with white ribbons.

Miss Lee Bennett of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of aqua with white lace trim and long sleeves. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies with yellow ribbons.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Wendell E. Eysenbach of Winston-Salem, brother of the bride, and Lafayette Lynch of Atlanta, Ga.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall. The couple left for a wedding trip to Virginia.

After July 1, the couple will reside in Atlanta, Ga.

The bride received her nursing education from Lenoir Rhyne College and M. N. from Emory University. She has taught at the School of Nursing of East Carolina University for the past two years.

The bridegroom received his A. B. in chemistry from Emory University and served in the U.S. Naval Reserve. He attended Emory University Medical School. He is employed as a research assistant in the Emory University Biochemistry Department and is also associated with Dr. Florence and Dr. Scott, Georgia Baptist Hospital, Atlanta, Ga.

Former Greenville Woman Elected To General Assembly

WAGRAM — A former Greenville resident, Mrs. Mary Horne Odom, recently impressed politicians in Robeson, Hoke and Scotland Counties.

A school teacher, Mrs. Odom won a House seat in the North Carolina General Assembly in a 24th District run-off primary. Winning the Democratic nomination for one of the four seats alloted the district was tantamount to election for the high school teacher since neither she nor her three running mates will have Republican opposition in November.

A newcomer to politics at any level, Mrs. Odom placed fourth in a 10-candidate field seeking the District's four house seats. She ran a strong second in the run-off to cinch nomination and election.

By winning Mrs. Odom became the first woman legislator from the southeast and will be one of no more than three teachers serving in the 1971 General Assembly.

"People told me when I decided to run," she said, "that a woman couldn't win. People are sick of school talk they advised, but I couldn't believe that because I know parents are concerned about our schools and their children.

"Frankly I didn't think I had a chance in the first primary, but I had worked as hard as I could and I didn't slacken my efforts in the second race."

The Odom campaign was a family affair with only a few close friends helping out in the beginning. She and her husband, Scotland County Deputy Sheriff L. W. Odom, and their three sons, Leggett III, John H. and Philip — spent hours addressing letters to teachers and friends in the three counties.

"I took each Thursday off to campaign through the district," she said, "and I was fortunate to have the opportunity to speak at a number of meet the candidates and civic club meetings. A neighbor drove me around as much as possible and my husband or one of my sons went with me to the night meetings."

A graduate of East Carolina University, Mrs. Odom has been residing in Scotland County since she began teaching science at Gibson High School in 1942.

The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John L. Horne of Greenville, Mrs. Odom has taught at high schools in Gibson, Wagram, Laurel Hill and Laurinburg. For the past six years, she has been a distributive education and teacher coordinator of industrial cooperative training at Laurinburg and Scotland High Schools.

A past president of the Scotland County chapter of the N. C. Education Association, Mrs. Odom is currently a member of the state legislative committee of the NCEA. She also served as president of the Scotland County Classroom Teacher.

Shower Given Recent Bride

GRIFTON — On Monday night, Mrs. Gary Charles Davis, recent bride, was honored at a floating shower at the home of Mrs. Robert B. Mewborn.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Roy Jackson, Mrs. George Lehman, Mrs. Edward Hart, Mrs. C. L. McClaine and Mrs. A. G. Callicutt.

In the living room of the Mewborn home, arrangements of roses in shades of pink and red were used, with pink and white gladioli and other arrangements.

The refreshment table was covered with a linen and lace cloth and centered with a crystal and silver epergne with blue and white hydrangea, gardenias and baby's breath.

The gift room was decorated with flower arrangements in shades of yellow, orange and white with magnolia. Sam Mann, brother of the bride, directed guests to the gift room.

Special guests were the honoree's mother, Mrs. William Austin Mann, Mrs. C. B. Davis Jr., mother of the bridegroom, and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. C. B. Davis.

Punch was poured by Miss Connie Davis, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Ella Mann, sister of the bride, served bridal cakes.

Disposable pans are a bonus for seagoing cooks. Heavy foil skillets and corrugated broilers are sturdy enough for more than a one-time use, can go through several sudsings, and then be discarded.

On The Young Side

By JANE JACKSON

Since summer vacation has definitely arrived for Rose High School students, they are participating in a variety of summer projects, trips, and jobs.

Many young people will serve as counselors for various camps in the state. Steve Aldridge, Becky Cullop, Judy Dunn, and Johnny Wooten will travel to White Lake as counselors at a camp for retarded children. The camp, hosting about 100 campers, lasts two weeks.

Rising seniors Tim Leith and Steve Rowland will serve as life guards and athletic supervisors at Camp Albermarle this summer. Located on the Bogue Sound, Camp Albemarle is set up for underprivileged boys, ages nine-12, who would otherwise not have a chance to attend summer camp.

The camp is sponsored by the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, and the work Steve and Tim do is voluntary.

Kaki King will spend her summer as a counselor at Camp Leach, an Episcopal Church camp on the Pamlico River. Kaki will look after the campers and be a lifeguard.

Mitchell Cobb will work at Camp New Life some this summer as the cafeteria and auditorium superintendant, and recreation director.

Houseparties

Many houseparties of rising junior and senior girls took place at Atlantic Beach last week.

A junior group of girls at the beach included Sandy Bullock, Kathy Williams, Lisa Glidewell, Marti Monroe, Helen Mosely, Josie Rawl, Chris Dudley, Anna White, Pat Cavendish, Brenda Murray, and Becky Clark.

Seniors attending a houseparty are as follows: Jo Ann Tice, Sharon Costner, Mary Alice Smith, Jo Ferguson, Pat Harrison, Robbie Riddle, Terry Smith, Karen Bachelor, Debra Cannon, graduate Becky Cannon, Chris Wilkerson, Swanee Robertson, Debbie Edwards, and Terry Ford.

Another group of senior girls were Kathy Harris, Karen Harris, Janet Mills, Debra Hall, Helen McElearth, and Beth Whitehurst.

Fourteen more girls comprised a final houseparty. The are as follows Lynette Clark, Lynn Massey, Gwen Rogers, Chip East, Betsy Kempton, Molly Merritt, Sue Harrington, Vickie Davenport, Deb Pollard, Sally Jenkins, Terry Taylor, Jan White, Donna Jamieson, and Donna White.

Sew what's new.

"FOR PLEATS SAKE"

With the approach of fall, the "war of lengths" is rapidly intensifying. As Paris and New York designers specify the "midi" and "maxi", the consumer across the nation continues to balk at being restricted to the longer skirt lengths.

But there is one fashion area where both the designer and consumer agree - and that is the "pleated look". Pleats are important now, and will continue into fall.

Pleated skirts or dresses aren't really difficult to construct, but they are time consuming when made properly. Because of our busy lives, many of us home sewers shy away from pleated patterns.

But no more! The answer to your "pleated dilemna" has arrived at Piedmont Fabrics Your local store recently received a wash and wear broadcloth solid that is actually hemmed and pleated! And just right for these warm summer days and ideal for "back to school" wear.

Let's take a minute to discuss how they work.

First, select a long waisted pattern. The pleats are 14" long and hemmed on one edge. You will need to buy only your hip measurement plus 2" (for seam allowance and ease) in the pleat. The coordinating broadcloth solid is available in 45" width for the bodice.

Before applying the pleat to the finished bodice, be sure and trim the unfinished side of the pleat to the width necessary to finish the garment to the desired finished length.

Because of its washability, don't forget to consider this broadcloth pleat for children's wear and tennis clothes. You may want to apply trim to the area where the pleat is applied to the bodice.

There are so many ways to be original with pleats. Start your "creation" today.

Nuclear Space Engine Holds Promise For Future

NUCLEAR ROCKET — This is a view of the NERVA rocket engine that was fired in 1969. The U.S. is moving ahead with development of the engine that harnesses nuclear energy instead of fire to propel men and machines through space. (UPI Telephoto)

By AL ROSSITER Jr.
UPI Space Writer

JACKASS FLATS, Nev. (UPI)—The United States is moving ahead with the development of a rocket engine that harnesses nuclear energy instead of fire to propel men and machines through space with twice the efficiency of the best of today's rockets.

Tests last year in the desert where prospectors' donkeys once roamed climaxed a research program dating back to 1955, and showed that the engine named Nerva works.

The biggest hurdle now facing the world's only known nuclear robert project is obtaining the money needed to build and test the final flyable engine design and financing construction of a rocket stage to carry it.

David S. Gabriel, deputy manager of the Joint Space Agency-Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) project, said American taxpayers already have spent $1.2 billion on the nuclear rocket program. He estimated $750 million more will be needed to get the engine qualified for flight in 1978 or 1979, and $800 million will be needed to build the stage.

The potential of atomic energy in space is virtually unlimited.

Potential Great

Nerva is still eight years from flight, but already it is being planned for a number of jobs. It could ferry men and equipment between the Earth and moon at a fraction of today's costs, it could carry heavy payloads to stationary orbit high above earth, and it could propel unmanned probes and eventually manned ships to the planets.

"It can go anywhere, far beyond the limits we can visualize right now," Gabriel said in an interview at the nuclear propulsion office in Las Vegas, 90 miles south of the desolate test site.

"It's an entirely new kind of propulsion capability."

The only similarity between today's rockets and Nerva is that they both expel hot gases to produce thrust. They go about generating the gases in completely different ways.

The chemical engines used in all the big rockets of the United States, Russia and other countries produce thrust by burning two substances—oxygen or something containing oxygen and a fuel.

The nuclear engine uses the heat generated by nuclear fission in a reactor to vaporize liquid hydrogen and expel it at twice the velocity of chemical rockets.

Engineers measure rocket efficiency in terms of specific impulse—the length of time in seconds one pound of propellant will produce one pound of thrust. Nerva, using the lightest of the elements, has a specific impulse of 825 seconds. The best chemical rocket, burning the heavier mixture of oxygen and hydrogen, can generate one pound of thrust with one pound of fuel for 456 seconds.

Thus, the nuclear engine can carry out specific missions with less propellant than a chemical rocket and therefore carry more payload at less cost per pound. Or it can go farther, faster and maneuver more with a given amount of propellant.

The hydrogen in Nerva is heated to about 4,000 degrees by passing through a reactor four feet in diameter and six feet tall—not much bigger than a household hot water heater.

Development of a flyable reactor and its uranium fuel elements to withstand tremendous heat for long periods of time has been a difficult and expensive task, and the effort had discouraging results in the early 1960s. Reactor endurance then was on the order of five to 10 minutes.

Last year, ground version of the Nerva engine ran for a total of 3 hours and 48 minutes during a series of tests at the foot of the reddish Calico Mountains at the Nuclear Rocket Development Station.

It was started and stopped 28 times and it produced up to 55,000 pounds of thrust. Two charred wooden light poles remain at the concrete and aluminum test stand as the only evidence of the great heat generated.

Once the testing was completed, a heavily shielded, yellow and black railroad car of the test center's "Jackass and Western" moved the Nerva engine to a radiation "hot bay" in a nearby building where the engine was remotedly taken apart by men peering through a six-foot glass window.

No Radiation Hazard

There is no radiation hazard from a nuclear engine before it has been run. But once the reactor starts the chain reaction of nuclear fission to heat the hydrogen, radiation becomes a problem.

In space, a shield would protect astronauts from the engine's radiation. And after the rocket has done its job, it would be left in a sufficiently high orbit to keep it away from Earth for the 10 years that might be needed before radiation levels became harmless.

Gabriel said nuclear rocket safety has been extensively studied, and he said the Nerva could be launched from Cape Kennedy with an "essentially zero probability of an accident." Even if something did go wrong, a nuclear explosion would be impossible.

Nerva would be used as an upper stage of a Saturn 5 rocket, or it would be carried into space by an advanced launcher. It would never be operated in Earth's atmosphere.

Dr. Thomas O. Paine, administrator of the National Aeronautics and space Administration (NASA), told Congress May 19 that Nerva in a reusable rocket stage will have a key role in the space transportation system proposed for the 1980s and beyond.

As now envisioned, the ingredients of that system will be a space shuttle powered by chemical engines to ferry men and supplies between the ground and Earth orbit, the nuclear rocket to shuttle between Earth orbit and lunar orbit, and a space tug to fly between a moon orbiting station and the lunar surface.

The idea behind such a plan is that space transportation costs would be greatly reduced. With lower prices, the reasoning follows that more would be done in space. With more missons, the system's development costs would be amortized over a reasonable length of time.

As it now stands, however, only the Nerva engine assembly is an approved project. NASA, which is working on the engine itself, has $38 million in its budget for the new fiscal year for the program and the AEC will provide $43 million for work on the reactor.

The Aerojet-General Corp., of Sacramento, Calif., is prime contractor on Nerva and the Westinghouse Astronuclear Laboratory, of Pittsburgh, is the main subcontractor for the reactor.

Papers Of A Pioneer In Conservation For ECU

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

The personal papers of pioneer conservationist J. Vivian Whitfield of Wallace have been donated to the East Carolina University manuscript collection.

Whitfield, who died in November, 1968, gained national recognition during the 1940s, 1950s and 1960s as a crusader for clean air and water and conservation of natural resources.

His papers disclose that he was a man ahead of his time in concern about the environment and the dangers of desecration, waste and water and air pollution. As a member of the General Assembly from 1945 to 1953 he introduced and worked for enactment of state stream ,sanitation laws. Through his efforst the N.C. Water and Air Resources Commission was established as a successor to the State Stream Sanitation Commission of which he was the first chairman.

In a joint resolution adopted by the 1969 General Assembly, Whitfield was described as "the father of the North Carolina Stream Sanitation law" and a "strong and guiding force in the clean streams movement of North Carolina for over two decades."

He was also interested in protection of marshlands and estuaries, in proper utilization of fish and shellfish resources and in forestry and wildlife. A few years before his death he claimed to have found the world's largest living holly tree near New Bern.

He was a prolific writer and the bulk of the papers, given by his widow, Mrs. Vivien Stevens Whitfield, consists of correspondence, reports, speeches, articles, clippings and other material related to his conservationist activites. Whitfield frequently traveled long distances, alone and by bus, to attend conservation meetings all over the country.

He was born in 1894 at Seven Springs, and received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill where he served as an instructor.

From 1919 to 1927 he served as a member of the U.S. Foreign Service in Uruguay, Argentina, Cuba and Mexico.

He was director of the N.C. Farm Bureau federation from 1943 to 1950 and in 1952 as an unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor. He served as director of the N.C. Forestry Assn, and was a member of the Council on Forestry, Research and Education of the Southern Regional Education Board.

In 1956 he became chairman of the State Stream Sanitation Commission and served until 1967 when it was merged into the Board of Water and Air Resources. He served as chairman of this board until his death.

The Whitfield papers will be housed with other collections in the J. Y. Joyner Library. After proper arranging and cataloguing the papers will be available to the public for research purposes.

HEW May Look Into ACC Grant Policy

By DEL BOOTH
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A federal look at integration on college campuses may be spilling over into the athletic eligibility requirements of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The question federal investigators apparently have asked is whether athletic scholarship requirements of the conference work against black athletes.

If they do, then pressure might be brought to have these requirements changed.

The presidents of the eight member colleges of the ACC are to meet in September to consider the conference athletic scholarship requirement of an 800 or better score on the college board entrance examination.

Pressure has been applied in the past year by the University of South Carolina to change that to the national requirement of a predicted grade point ration of 1.6—about a C minus average that the applicant can be expected to do on college level work.

Such items as standing in the high school class and high school grade averages are combined with board exam scores for the predicted grade point ratio. Frequently a youth with less than 800 will predict a ratio better than the 1.6 approved by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Coaches and athletic directors of the ACC long have wanted a more competitive position in relation to other schools, such as those in the Southeastern or Big Eight conferences, in recruiting athletes. They claim the 800 score puts them at a disadvantage.

Some college presidents in the ACC paid little attention to the matter until the past year.

Then the Department of Health, Education and Welfare began a survey of college integration.

President Thomas F. Jones of the University of South Carolina, in a statement some time ago, took note of the federal probes, and said the 800 score originally was intended to restrict athletic scholarship aid to qualified students.

But, he said, it appears to work against prospective athletes, especially Negroes.

And, he implied, that HEW had noted this during its look around campuses in southern states.

Adoption of the 1.6 grade point ratio would put the ACC schools on the same footing as other colleges in the country and relieve them of any possible integration pressure in the area of athletics.

The ACC holds its next meeting in December, at which time it could change its requirement from an 800 board score to a 1.6 predicted grade ratio.

It did not consider the matter at its spring meeting, but laid the groundwork for the September meeting of the presidents.

It appears that if the conference doesn't act, the HEW may, a situation the presidents apparently would like to avoid.

Recently the conference relaxed its hard-and-fast 800 rule by extending hardship case status—an exemption—to at least one University of South Carolina prospect, Mary Woolbright of Chapin.

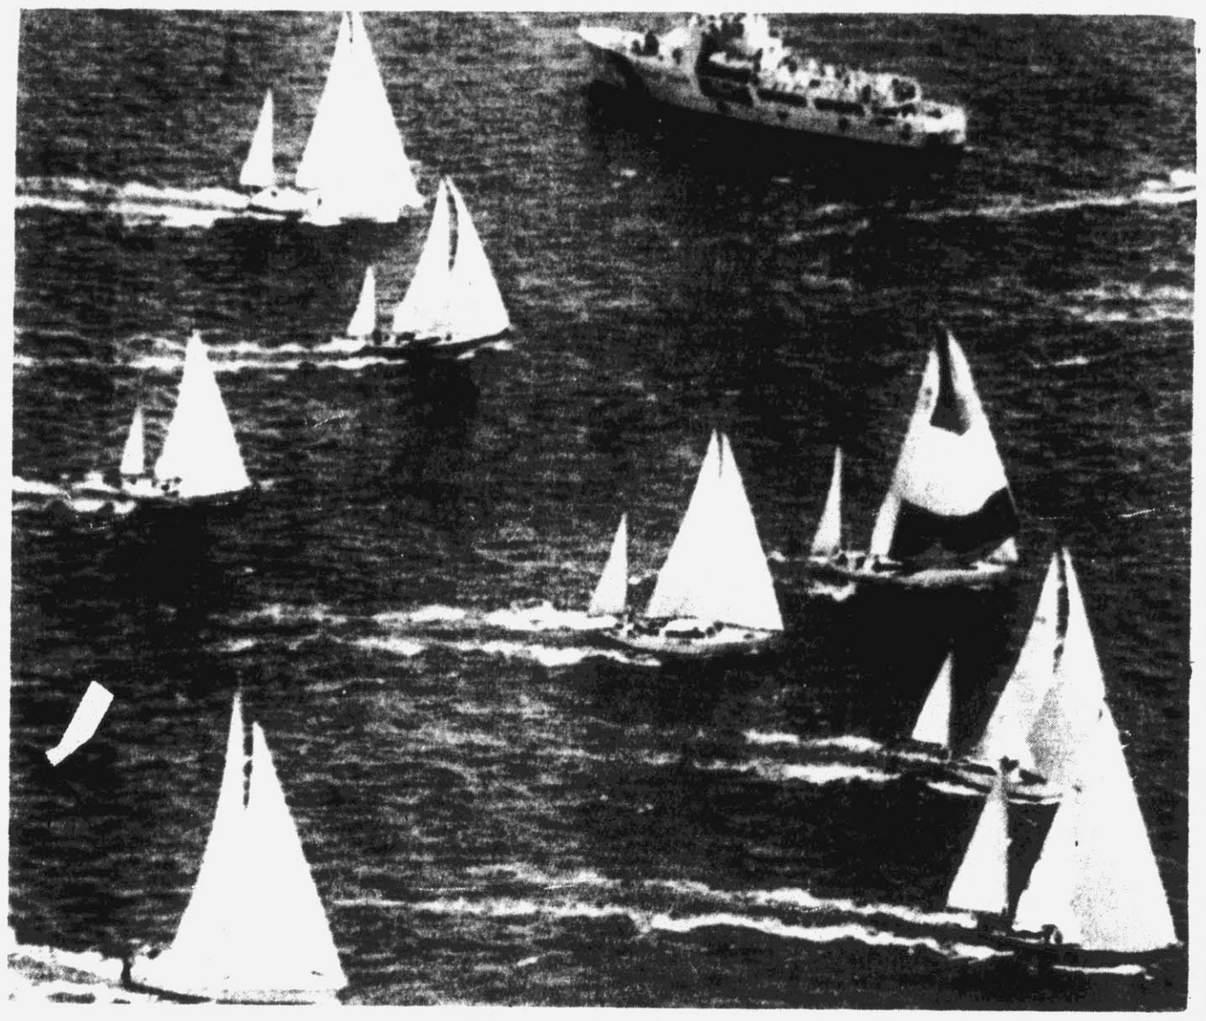

He made 796 on the college board exam, and is to be given a chance to improve that score.

But it seems certain he will be admitted to USC even if he doesn't make 800.

This could be a means of easing into the 1.6 grade point ratio use, or at least a move out of the ironclad 800 score requirement.

Woolbright's predicted grade point ratio reportedly is well above 1.6.

Tony Holds 4 Stroke Advantage; Hill Laughs Off His Reprimand

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — Tony Jacklin lengthened his lead to four strokes Saturday in the third round of the United States Open Golf Championship but couldn't completely shake off controversial Dave Hill, a gritty character who shrugged off a fine and rallied down the stretch.

Jacklin, the handsome young Briton bidding to become only the second foreigner in 50 years to win this most prestigious of all golfing titles, had a two under par 70 and led for the third consecutive day at 211.

That put him five under par and ahead of Hill, who was slapped with a reprimand and a $150 fine for "conduct unbecoming a professional golfer because of his criticism of the Hazeltine National Golf Course."

"It's like taking a bogey," Hill said after the fine and reprimand had been announced by Joe Dey, commissioner of the Tournament Players Division of the Professional Golfers Association, shortly before Hill teed off.

"Bother me?" he said. "Nothing bothers me but that little ball down there."

But he bogeyed the first hole missing the fairway and coming up short of the green, and had to rally strongly to stay in contention. He had a 71 for 215, one under par on the course he said he'd "like to plow up."

Gay Brewer, a graying veteran whose last offical tour victory was the 1967 Masters championship, made one run at the leaders, took second for a time, but finished with a 71 for 217 and third place.

Julius Boros, 50-year-old two-time Open champion, had a 70 for 218 and fourth. Big Bob Lunn had a 70 and 219, with former champion Gene Littler and Ken Still matching 71s for 220.

The big three—Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player—continued to have their troubles. All scored 75s and were far, far back in the pack at 228.

Billy Casper took a 71 for 221 and was tied at the figure with PGA champ Ray Floyd, transplanted Australian Bruce Devlin, hard-hitting Larry Ziegler and Mason Rudolph.

Randy Wolff, a young touring pro, and Dick Crawford, who shared second place going into the day's play, drifted back. Wolff bogeyed four of his first six holes en route to a 76 and Crawford had the same.

Hill, a tour-tested 33-year-old who came into his own last year, and Jacklin, the reigning British Open champ and now a tour regular, were paired together in the last twosome to get away under the lowering, threatening clouds with chilly temperatures.

"Stick it in his ear, Tony," a voice from the gallery said when the slim, dark Hill drove into the rough. There was some scattered applause when he missed a putt to save par on the hole.

Hill just grinned, a cocky, almost pugnacious grin.

But he was dead serious, almost grim in the turn down the stretch as the crowd began to applaud his birdie putts on the rolling, 7,151-yard layout that Hill said needed "about 80 acres of corn and four cows."

Hill made the turn in 38 and was in third place, six strokes back before he began his run.

Jacklin knocked in a 14-foot birdie putt on the par five 11th, and Dave dropped a pressure-packed 13 footer right on top of it.

Hill, winner of three tour titles more than $150,000 and the coveted Vardon Trophy last year, curled in a 15-foot putt for a bird on 13 while Jacklin suddenly had troubles.

Tony saved par with a six-foot second putt there and did the same on the next hole. Dave cut further into the lead with a beautiful third shot to the green on the par five 15th, a 592-yard monster, and then ran in the putt.

They parred in, Jacklin again saving par with a tough putt on the final hole when he missed the green.

Hill started shakily, with the bogey on No. 1 and didn't really get in birdie range until the seventh, when he missed from 17 feet.

Jacklin, meanwhile, chipped to within eight feet on the third and made it, only to lose the stroke with a three-putt bogey in the fifth. Dave bogeyed the eighth—for the third consecutive day—from a trap and Jacklin appeared ready to pull away when he dropped in a 12-foot birdie putt on the ninth.

Brewer's bid came on the front side, with four birds in a string of five holes, but he dropped back with bogeys on the 11th and 12th.

"He's five under now and I'm one over," Gay said. "It's possible I can catch him."

"I'm just going out there tomorrow and hit it and hit it again," Hill said after the round. "If I make some putts, I'll be in there."

Cubs Strike Early To Win

By JOE MOOSHIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Staked to a six-run lead in the first inning, right-hander Bill Hands hurled the Chicago Cubs to an 8-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

Hands, 9-5, had a three-hit shutout going into the eighth when the Cardinals broke the spell on a pinch single by Jim Beauchamp, infield hits by Lou Brock and Vic davilillo and a two-run single by Richie Allen. Joe Hague's sacrifice fly scored the third run of the inning.

Hands chipped in with a sacrifice fly while batterymate Jack Hiatt drove in three runs with a pair of singles.

With one out in the first, Paul Popovich walked and scored on Billy Williams' triple. Williams scored on a Mike Torrez wild pitch as the Cubs were loading the bases on a pair of walks and a single by Willie Smith.

Jimmie Hall walked to force in a run and Hiatt singled home two more before Hands delivered his sacrifice fly. The Cubs added a run in the third on a single by Santo, a walk and another single by Hiatt and closed out the scoring in the eighth on a walk, sacrifice fly and single by Popovich.

Pamlico All-Stars Rally To Nip Greenville Legionaires By 8-7

The Greenville American Legion baseball team fell to the Pamlico County All-Stars, 8-7, yesterday in a non-league game at East Carolina University field.

The game was close most of the way, although Pamlico worked up a 6-1 lead, only to blow it in the sixth inning to a Greenville Rally. Pamlico finally pushed over the winning run in the top of the ninth inning.

It was a hitting day for both teams. Pamlico finished up with 14 hits, while Greenville had 10. The locals went three innings before they got that first hit, and it was a cheap one, off the pitcher's glove. The first clean shot was not until the sixth inning.

But a lot had happened in between. Greenville cut down a Pamlico threat in the second when Glenwood Tyndall singled and was followed by Dean Hughes with another hit. Tyndall, however, tried to move all the way to third on the play and was cut down by a good throw by Joe West from the outfield.

A double play got Greenville out of a jam in the third after a walk and a stolen base.

In the bottom of the third, Greenville pushed over a run to take the lead. Alan Pate walked and moved around to third on a walk to West and a fielder's choice by Larry Dixon. A wild pitch then let Pate come in with a 1-0 lead.

Pamlico came back to score three runs in the top of the fourth and take a 3-1 lead. Shade Barnes led off with a walk, and Lacy West slapped a single into left field. Jimmy Hudson's grounder to third was overthrown at first, and both Barnes and West raced home before the ball could be relayed. And by then, Hudson had pulled into second. A passed ball moved him to third, and he scored on a wild pitch.

Greenville tried to get a rally going in the bottom of the frame, loading the bases with one out, but failed to get things rolling. A fielder's choice and a pop-up ended the threat.

A triple by Allan Wilson in the fifth came when the fielder misjudged his routine fly and it got past him and rolled all the way to the fence. But again, Greenville couldn't connect to get him in.

Pamlico came up with three more runs in the sixth. Barnes led off with a single to right and West laced one through the middle. Hudson walked, loading the bases. Tyndall unloaded a shot into left, scoring both Barnes and West on the play. Billy Respess hit back to short, and Hudson was cut down going to third. Hughes followed with a single to left, however, bringing in Tyndall to make it 6-1.

Greenville then came up with five runs to tie it up. Robert Twilley led off with a single to center, and a passed ball let him move to second. Joey Moore struck out, but the pitch was wild, and he reached first safely as Twilley pulled into third. Russ Smith lifted a fly into center that fell in for a double, scoring Twilley. Byron Dickens then got a single into left, scoring both Moore and Smith, and Dickens moved to second on the throw to the plate.

West singled to drive in Dickens, but he was picked off first on the relay back in. With two outs, Wilson singled to deep short and then stole second. Kim Harbin lifted a routine fly to center, but the ball just fell in and was kicked away, allowing Wilson to score easily and moving Harbin on to third, but he was unable to come in with what would have been the go-ahead run.

Greenville moved out into the lead in the bottom of the seventh. Smith doubled again and moved into third on a fielder's choice. Dickens walked, and he and Smith worked the double steal for the seventh Greenville run.

Pamlico couldn't be held off, however, coming back in the eighth to tie it up. Respess singled and scored when Hughes tripled to center field.

Then, in the ninth, Pamlico got the winning run. Broome walked and was sacrificed to second. West was walked to set up the double play, but a single by Hudson brought over Broome with the run, and that was all Pamlico needed.

The Greenville team returns to Legion action this afternoon at 2 p.m., playing host to Wilson, one of the two teams to have claimed a win over the locals. The game will be played at East Carolina.

Homers Lead Reds By Bums

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tony Perez' 24th homer—a three-run tape-measure shot in the third inning—and bases-empty blasts by Johnny Bench and Lee May carried the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-4 victory over Los Angeles Saturday.

The Reds, out hit 16-9 in the nationally televised game, shot to a 5-1 lead in the third on Perez' 500-foot wallop and May's 17th homer, then hung on to end the Dodgers' winning string at three games.

With one out in the third, Pete Rose singled, Angel Bravo walked and Perez tagged Los Angeles starter Joe Moeller for a drive that cleared the left field screen and sailed out of Crosley Field. One out later, May unloaded over the screen in left.

Winning pitcher Jim McGlothlin checked the Dodges until the seventh, when they knocked him out in the midst of a two-run rally. Clay Carroll finished the inning, but gave way in the eighth to Wayne Granger, who was clipped for a two-out homer by Wes Parker in the ninth.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the second on a single by Parker, a double by Billy Grabarkewitz and a ground out. The Reds tied it on Bench's leadoff homer —his 23rd of the season—in the bottom half.

In the seventh, McGlothlin walked Tom Haller and gave up singles by Jim Lefebvre and pinch hitter Bill Sudakis for one run before being yanked.

Maury Wills greeted Carroll with a run-scoring single, but he and Granger protected the edge the rest of the way to assure McGlothlin's 10th victory in 13 decisions.

Foster Bangs 2 For Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Roy Foster's second home run of the game with one out in the eigth inning broke a tie and gave the streaking Cleveland Indians a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

Foster, a rookie outfielder, tied the game in the third with his seventh homer of the season and then won it by connecting again in the eighth off Earl Wilson, 4-4.

It was the seventh consecutive triumph for the Indians, who climbed out of the cellar in the American League East Friday night.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

The big push in professional athletics now is to get the National and American Basketball Associations merged into one big league to end all the worlds' problems.

The NBA players are fighting it, along with a small number of owners, who probably will fall into line. Whether it will ever be is questionable. It will take federal approval, plus some court decisions before it is all over.

It is just another of the battles that the players are making against organized sports. Curt Flood has already set the pace with his challenge of the reserve clause, and now the football players in the NFL want a piece of the action, too.

The question arises here as to why the ABA wants to merge with the NBA. Apparently football set the example when the AFL merged with the NFL.

But for years baseball has operated with two leagues, working hand in hand to keep things going. And the World Series and the All-Star games prove that is a healthy climate.

So why not just agree to recognize each other, hold a common draft, and play a season ending series to decide the "grand champion?" There was probably a whole lot more interest in the now-dead Super Bowl than there will be between the two divisional champs in the NFL. When they play together all the time, it takes some of the interest out of the series finals.

The big question is really the draft. Both leagues want to get away from a buying war, and this is exactly what the players want. But the high salaries of today, which would climb even higher with a buying war would do more to wreck the sport than to help it.

Right now, however, only time will tell the outcome.

East Carolina University has received a number of gifts in the past few months. Two of these are involved with the football program, and another with tennis.

Fieldcrest Mills made special carpet available to the University at a cut rate for the dressing rooms in Scales Fieldhouse, thereby making it a little more comfortable and classy for the players.

Then, the Washington Packing Company came up with a "Steer-A-Year" program, where farmers donate beef cattle to the university to be used on the training table for athletes.

And in the past couple of weeks, Bob Smith, Greenville businessman, has donated a set of lights to be used in the new tennis courts just being finished beside Minges Coliseum.

The courts will be the site of the 1971 Southern Conference championship meet next spring.

Now what ever happened to that plan to light the baseball field?

Nats Continue To Be Good Neighbor To Birds

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Washington—first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of the Baltimore Orioles ... and last in the American League East.

The Washington Senators, that is, who continued their good neighbor policy by dropping a doubleheader to the Orioles Friday night 12-10 and 3-2 in 13 innings.

The Orioles' lead in the AL East had shrunk from 7½ games to 1½ over the past few weeks as they dropped 10 of 16 games. But the Senators, as usual, were just what the doctor ordered. Baltimore has taken Washington four out of five this season after going 13-5 last year and 14-4 in 1968 and the series since the expansion Senators were born in 1961 stands 114-53 in favor of you know who.

Coupled with the New York Yankees' 7-4 loss at Boston—Sonny Siebert pitched a no-hitter for eight innings—the Orioles' doubled their lead to three games over the Yanks. Elsewhere, Kansas City took Minnesota 5-1, Cleveland downed Detroit 4-2, the Chicago White Sox beat Oakland 4-2 and Milwaukee defeated California 5-2.

In the National League, St. Louis shaded the Chicago Cubs 5-3 in 17 innings, the New York Mets blasted Philadelphia 13-3, Los Angeles whipped Cincinnati 6-1, Atlanta swept Houston 7-6 and 4-2, Pittsburgh trounced Montreal 8-4 and San Diego clipped San Francisco 6-3.

"It's a little more fun this way," yelled Baltimore manager Earl Weaver as he wandered through the clubhouse after the Orioles' sweep.

"We are," he confided, "a little bit behind schedule ... but you never know when the Birdies'll get hot."

"Are you out of your slump?" someone wanted to know.

"I hate to say it," Weaver replied, "but we play 'em one at a time."

The double success gave the Orioles an 8-8 record in June as they tried to get back on pitching coach George Bamberger's schedule, which calls for them to play nine games over .500 each month en route to another flag. They were right on target through April and May with a 33-15 record.

They won the opener despite eight runs batted in by Mike Epstein of the Senators and took the nightcap on Merv Rettenmund's two-out run-scoring single in the 13th.

Frank Robinson hit a two-run homer in the first inning of the nightcap but the Senators caught up on solo homers by Paul Casanova in the fifth and Bernie Allen with two out in the ninth. Dave Johnson doubled to lead off the 13th after Darold Knowles had pitched five hitless relief innings and eventually scored the winning run.

After trailing 12-4 in the first game—Boog Powell drove in four runs with two doubles and two singles—the Senators rallied on a grand slam by Epstein in the seventh—his second homer of the game—and had the tying run at the plate in the ninth following a two-run single by Epstein before the rally ended.

Boston's Siebert, who pitched a no-hitter for Cleveland against Washington in 1966, held the Yankees to three walks for eight innings. But Horace Clarke, who broke up a no-hit bid by Kansas City's Jim Rooker in the same situation earlier this month, cracked a leadoff single, Jerry Kenney doubled, Bobby Murcer singled and Roy White homered, bringing on Sparky Lyle, who got the final three outs on only four pitches.

"I was aware of the no-hitter all the way," said Siebert, "but it never reached the point where it became crucial. There was no great pressure. There probably was more pressure on the fans. I just gave it my best shot and didn't do it. That's it."

Mike Andrews, Reggie Smith and Carl Yastrzemski belted homers off loser Stan Bahnsen.

Kansas City's Dick Drago stifled powerful Minnesota on seven singles with batting support from Amos Otis, who collected a double and two singles. Cookie Rojas singled a run home against loser Bert Blyleven in the third. Singles by Bob Oliver and Joe Keough, Lou Piniella's double and a forceout produced two runs in the fourth and the Royals got two more in the fifth on Otis' single, Oliver's double, a single by Keough and Piniella's infield out.

The reeling Angels missed a chance to gain on the Twins in the AL West and remained five games behind by losing to the Brewers. It was their fifth consecutive setback and seventh in eight games. Phil Roof's two-run homer was the big blow for the Brewers. Jim Fregosi homered for the Angels.

Gail Hopkins drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Joe Horlen survived a shaky first inning as the White Sox turned back Oakland. The A's got only one run in the first, although they managed two hits, two walks and three stolen bases, but got only four hits off Horlen thereafter, including Don Mincher's 14th homer.

The Indians swept to their sixth straight triumph, beating Detroit behind Sam McDowell's four-hit pitching. Two of the blows were homers by Mickey Stanley and Jim Northrup. Eddie Leon's two-run single off Mickey Lolich in the fifth put Cleveland in front 3-2 and Graig Nettles singled in an insurance run in the sixth.

Tulsa Under NCAA Glance

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The University of Tulsa disclosed Friday it is being investigated by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, ruling body of college sports.

No specific incidents were cited, but the announcement indicated the NCAA probe involves more than one sport.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions submitted a letter containing allegations concerning the 1.6 grade average eligibility requirement, recruiting practices, spring conditioning programs, the awarding of grant-in-aid scholarships, and squad meetings.

The investigation was thought to center partly on the recruitment of Ken Garrett, a standout running back for Northeastern Oklahoma A&M College at Miami, Okla.

The 6-2, 205-pounder, who runs the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds, signed a national letter of intent this spring with the Hurricane football team.

Garrett had been signed by TU after one season at Northeastern, and he was below the 1.6 grade average.

Missouri Valley Commissioner DeWitt Weaver was in Miami last month, reportedly looking into the matter.

However, Garrett since has transferred to Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N. C. He is a native of Fayetteville, N. C., and earlier had signed a national letter with a small college in that state.

TU's second year grid Coach Vince Carillot, who is in the middle of a rebuilding program after last season's 1-9 record, was vacationing in Michigan Friday and unavailable for comment.

Pepsi-Cola Defeats Moose; Exchange Wins

Pepsi -Cola swept to a 6-0 shutout victory over the Moose yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League. The win moved Pepsi into second place in the standings, and nearly knocked the Moose out of the race for the title.

In other action, the Exchange took a 12-8 win over Integon in a resumed protested game. The outcome, win-wise, was the same, however, and did not affect the standings.

The Graniteers lead the league with an 11-1 record, while Pepsi is now 9-3. The Moose, at 8-4, can only tie for the title, and a single Graniteer win or Moose loss would eliminate them. They are followed by the Exchange, 4-8, the Elks, 3-9, and Integon, 1-11.

Pepsi pushed into the lead in the third inning with a run. Mike Shank walked and took second on a passed ball. David Davis reached on an error and that brought Shank home with all Pepsi really needed.

In the fourth, they added four more. Dana Kendrick led off with a triple, coming in when Timmy Eubanks reached on an error. Lee Shearin singled and Ricky Avery followed that with a three-run homer, running the score to 5-0.

The final Pepsi run came in the fifth. Danny Bowman singled and Mike Shank reached on an error, Walks to Shearin and Avery brought Bowman across.

No one on either team got more than one hit.

The other game, between Exchange and Integon was resumed in the third inning with the Exchange leading 6-5.

It stayed that way until the fifth, when Exchange pushed over another run. Darrell Roebuck walked as did Thil Hurley. Mike Brewington singled to bring in Roebuck.

In the sixth, Integon came up with two to tie it up. Timmy Radford reached on an error and Donald Blanchard singled. Buddy Boyd reached on an error, and another on Ricky Overman's ball let in Radford and Blanchard to make it 7-7.

In the top of the seventh, the Exchange came up with five runs. Roebuck singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Brewington doubled, driving in Roebuck. Brewington then moved up on a wild pitch. Mike Belton reached on an error and Gene Bunn doubled. An error on the play let Belton score. Doug Paschal singled in Bunn, and he moved to third on a stolen base and a passed ball, scoring on Mike Jeffries single.

Integon tried to rally, but failed. Sandy Abbott walked and moved up when Howard Hill reached on a fielder's choice. Radford doubled in Abbott, but the rally died there.

Brewington finished the game with five hits, while Roebuck and Paschal had two each for the Exchange. Radford had two for Integon.

Kiwanis Win, Ice Title Tie

The Kiwanis iced a tie for the North State Little League title with an 11-8 victory over Coca-Cola yesterday.

The win boosted the Kiwanis record to 10-2, and left only the Jaycees, 7-5, with a chance to tie them. R. C. Cola and Coke are tied for third with 6-6 records, followed by the Optimists, 4-8 and the Lions, 3-9.

A single Kiwanis win or a Jaycee loss would give the title to the defending champions.

Coke pushed ahead in the second inning scoring five runs after starting Kiwanis hurler Ed Mayo was struck in the nose by his own bouncing foul tip and had to retire from the game.

Greg Lassiter walked and two more to Tim Cottle and Joe Downing loaded the bases. Molt Massey, Jeff Barber and Keith James also walked, forcing in three runs, and a single by Max Joyner brought in Massey and Barber for a 5-0 lead.

The Kiwanis broke the ice in the third with one. Danny Hester walked and moved up on an out. He scored on Kelly Heath's single.

In the fourth, the Kiwanis picked up four more to tie it up. Teddy Harris walked and Mike Langley reached on an error. Chuck Ellis singled in Harris, and David Middleton got a hit, scoring Langley. Hester hit into a fielder's choice, getting Ellis at third, but a single by Clayton Brock brought in Middleton. Syd Ashby singled to score Hester with the tieing run.

The Kiwanis then powered ahead in the fifth with six more runs, running out to an 11-5 lead. Kent Phillips, Langley, Ellis and Middleton all drew walks, scoring Phillips. Another walk to Brock brought in Langley. Ashby singled in Ellis, and a double by Heath brought in the other three runners.

Coke tried to rally and came up with three in the top of the sixth. Lindsay Henry walked and Randy Allen came on as a pinch runner. Massey also walked and Barber slammed a homer, cutting the lead to three. Coke went on to load the bases with one out before the Kiwanis finally managed to slam the door.

Barber and Joyner led the Coke hitting with two each, while Ashby had three and Heath had two for the Kiwanis.

West Texas In Missouri Valley

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Faculty representatives of the expansion-minded Missouri Valley Conference voted unanimously Saturday to accept West Texas State as a conference member, effective at once.

West Texas State, a major NCAA independent since the Border Conference disbanded in 1962, increased the MVC's membership to nine teams after the Cincinnati withdrew earlier this year.

West Texas State will begin competing for the football championship in 1972 or sooner if scheduleing permits. West Texas State basketball teams will begin league competition with the 1971-72 season but not later than the 1972-73 campaign.

All other sports will begin competing in the Missouri Valley with the 1970-71 season.

The addition of West Texas State is the first phast of a conference expansion program aimed at at increasing the league to 12 teams. Under the expanded conference, eight teams would participate in football and 12 in basketball.

West Texas State becomes the seventh football school in the conference. St. Louis does not compete in football and Bradley does not compete for the football championship.

Other conference members are Drake, Bradley, Louisville, Memphis, North Texas State, Tulsa and Wichita State.

DeWitt Weaver, who took over last year as conference commissioner, said the league would continue its expansion plan as soon as other schools could be approved.

He said 10 schools already had expressed interest in entering the conference and seven had made formal application.

Campy Leads Oakland Win

OAKLAND (AP) — Bert Campaneris drove in four runs with a double and homer, leading the Oakland A's to an 8-5 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

The A's came from behind after Chicago peppered Oakland starter Chuck Dobson with four singles to score three runs in the second inning.

Campaneris' seventh homer, a two-run shot in the third cut the White Sox' lead to 3-2. Tom McCraw homered for the Sox in the top of the fourth, but an error by losing pitcher Barry Moore opened the gates for four unearned Oakland runs in the bottom half.

With the bases loaded and two out, Moore threw wildly to first trying to get pinch-hitter Bob Johnson and two runs scored. Campaneris then doubled home two more runs, putting Oakland ahead.

Pirates Rally To Beat Expos

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for three runs in the fifth inning and went on to beat the Montreal Expos 4-2 Saturday behind the six hit pitching of Steve Blass, with help from Dave Giusti in the ninth.

With the Expos leading 2-1 in the fifth behind Carl Morton, Matty Alou led off with a single and Richie Hebner walked. Dave Cash scored Alou with a single to right and went to second on Rusty Staub's throw to third.

Bob Robertson was intentionally walked to load the bases after one out. But Jerry May singled to left, scoring Hebner and Cash.

Staub hit his eighth home run of the season in the first to start the Expos' scoring. In the second, Bobby Wine doubled to score Jim Gosger, who led off with a single.

The Pirates first run came in the second when Alou tripled to the wall in right center to score Blass, who reached on a force play following a walk to Freddie Patek.

Legion Runs Past Tarboro By 8-1

Black Jack Stays Alive

Black Jack kept its faint chances of a tie for the National Division Church Softball League title alive with a 10-9 victory over Piney Grove Friday night. In the other game, Mt. Pleasant downed Oakmont, 9-4.

Black Jack has an 8-5 record, while leader Grace, 11-2, has assured itself of no worse than a tie for the title. The two teams collide Monday night in the game that could decide the title. Following them in the standings are Immanuel, 7-7, Mt. Pleasant, 5-7, Oakmont, 6-8, and Piney Grove, 4-10.

Black Jack moved ahead in the top of the first inning, as they came up with seven runs. This included a two-run homer by S. Peele. Piney Grove came back with two in the bottom of the first.

Black Jack scored one more in the second to lead 8-2, but Piney Grove scored once in the third, and then twice more in the fifth to cut the lead to 8-5.

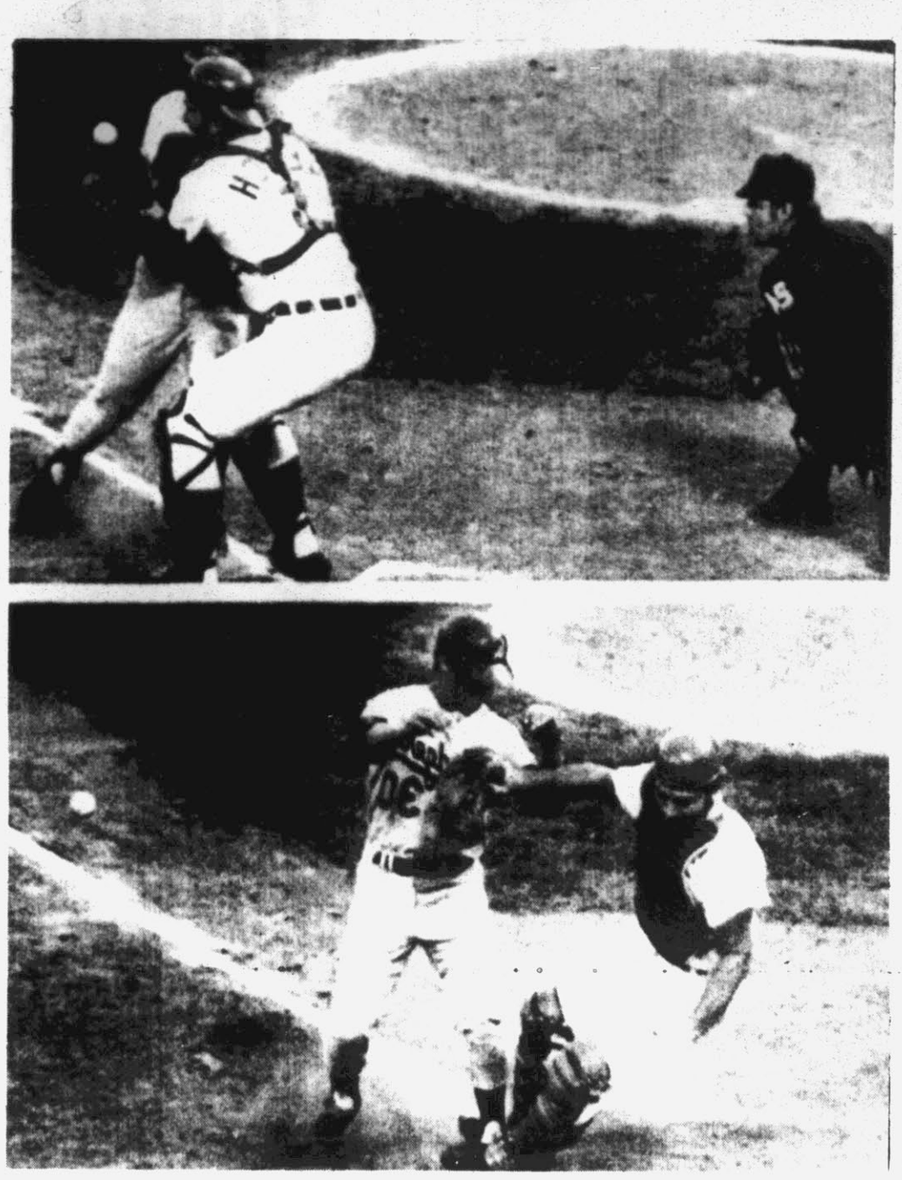

In the sixth, Black Jack pushed over two more runs, and then held off a Piney Grove rally in the bottom of the seventh, when they scored four runs, just one short of tieing.

T. Adams and J. T. Mills each had three hits and Peele and B. Elks had two each for Black Jack. D. Allen had three and M. Beaman, G. Darden, C. Joyner, I. Crawford and W. Case each had two for Piney Grove.

Mt. Pleasant pushed over three runs in the first, and Oakmont came up with two to open the action in the second game. Both scored again in the third, with Mt. Pleasant pushing over three and Oakmont four to make it 6-4. But Oakmont failed to score again after that.

Mt. Pleasant went on to score three more in the sixth inning.

Nobles, Worthington, Wallace, H. Bullock and B. Bullock led the Mt. Pleasant hitting with two each. Carraway had three for Oakmont, while Cheek and Randall each added two.

Pop Out, Not Up

Maury Wills, Dodger shortstop, was perched on second when Andy Kosko singled in the fourth inning, sending the speedy Los Angeles player streaking for home. Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench waits for the ball, blocking the line as Wills crashes into him, top, knocking the ball free. Wills continues to the plate, bottom, as the ball bounces away and Bench hits the ground. The Dodgers won, 6-1 in the Friday game. (AP Wirephoto)

Smith Tosses Four Hit Win; Wilson Next

TARBORO — The Greenville Post 39 American Legion baseball team rolled to an 8-1 victory over Tarboro Friday night, upping its record to 6-2 for the season.

Russ Smith handcuffed Tarboro on four hits as he tossed the win. The lone run scored against him was unearned. He walked only three and struck out 16 in going the distance.

He and his teammates, meanwhile, tortured Tarboro for 11 hits as they pushed over eight runs during the contest.

Tarboro, however, got off the first threats in the game. In the first, a walk and single moved a man into scoring position. Then, in the second, a single, and out and an error moved a runner to third before the inning was finally ended.

Greenville, without a threat, broke the ice in the third with its first run. Joey Moore walked and moved to second on Kim Harbin's sacrifice. Smith hit a high fly to right, but it was missed, and Moore moved into third. Jimmy Bond laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt to score him with the go-ahead run.

In the fourth, Greenville added two more runs to lead 3-0. Ronnie Leggett singled to left and Alan Wilson followed with a hit. Joe West walked, loading the bases. Moore grounded into the infield, and the play was made at the plate in time to get Leggett, but the ball was dropped, leading everyone safe. Harbin then sacrificed Wilson home with the third run.

Greenville kept it up in the fifth inning, adding another run. Smith cracked a triple down the right field line. Tony Whitehurst walked, and Tommy Durham followed him on base the same way, loading them up. Leggett then singled into shallow right to score Smith and make it 4-0.

In the sixth, Moore opened with a single to left. Harbin laid down a bunt and beat it out. The throw was errored, also, allowing both runners to move up. Bond walked, loading the bases and Whitehurst got a single to deep short, driving in Moore. Durham then got a chopping single over the pitcher's mound, scoring Harbin to run the score out to 6-0.

In the seventh, Tarboro finally managed to break the scoring ice and avoid a shutout. Mitch Evans singled to deep second, beating out the play. Phil Webb then dribbled one past the mound that Smith couldn't handle properly. Ronnie Crisp followed with a walk, loading the bases. With two outs, Marion Kent walked, forcing in Evans.

Greenville then came back with two more in the eighth to finish off the scoring. Whitehurst reached on a fielder's choice, and Robert Kear entered as a courtesy runner for him, moving to second on a wild pitch. Durham grounded out, moving Kear to third. Leggett then walked and he and Kear worked the double steal, scoring one run. Leggett moved on to third when Wilson reached on an error. He then broke for home on an attempted steal, and slide safely in as the throw by the pitcher was wild.

Defense credit was given to Wilson for two fine catches he made in left to rob Tarboro batters of extra base hits, one right up against the fence.

Greenville was to face the Pamlico All-Stars Saturday afternoon in a non-league game. The resume league action on Sunday at 2 p.m. at East Carolina University field against Wilson.

A walk to Mike Grimsley loaded the bases and another to Stokes forced in Clark. Randy Hodges then walked, forcing in Porter.

The final run came in the sixth. Robinson walked and was wild pitched to third. He scored on an error.

Sutton had two hits to lead the R. C. effort, while no one on the Optimist team managed more than one.

Boyer Snaps His Hitless String

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer

Clete Boyer, Atlanta's clever fielding third baseman, whose bat has been idle most of June and Braves' teammate Ron Reed, idle since spring training, turned their talents on Houston and sent the Astros reeling.

Boyer, who snapped a horrendous 2-52 batting slump, delivered the winning run in the opener with a single and rapped a pair of key hits in the nightcap as the Braves swept to a 7-6, 4-2 sweep over the Astros Friday night in a doubleheader.

Reed, the Braves' 18-game winner last season, who broke his collarbone March 16, picked up the opening game victory in his first appearance, stopping Houston on one run and three hits over the final five innings.

In other National League contests, Los Angeles tripped Cincinnati 6-1, New York belted Philadelphia 13-3, St. Louis downed Chicago 5-3 in 17 innings, San Diego topped San Francisco 6-3 and Pittsburgh whipped Montreal 8-4.

In the American League, Baltimore swept a doubleheader from Washington, 12-10 and 3-2 in 13 innings, Boston stopped New York 7-4, Cleveland edged Detroit 4-2, Kansas City trimmed Minnesota 5-1, Chicago nipped Oakland 4-2 and Milwaukee beat California 5-2.

Boyer, who was rested for a couple of days recently said "It felt real good. I think the slump was from being tired."

The 34-year-old, 15-year veteran, upped his average to .196 with the three hits and his three runs batted in, gave him 29.

"This ought to show them I can hit if I get some rest," Boyer said afterward. "I'm not going to hit .300 but I'm going to get some big hits. I'm not an out. I just want to knock in the important runs when I have to."

And that he did against the Astros, who lost their fifth straight and 10th in 12 starts.

Boyer's seventh inning run-scoring double in the opener, snapped a 6-6 deadlock and gave Reed the victory. In the second game, Boyer singled and scored Atlanta's first run and drove in another with a fourth inning single.

Rico Carty had a two-run homer, his 16th, in the opener while Hank Aaron drilled his 19th in the nightcap, a two-run shot as Pat Jarvis, 7-5, scattered eight hits, two of them solo homers by Doug Rader.

Reed, the 6-foot-6, 215-pound right-hander, had arrived earlier in the day from Amarillo, Tex., where he had been working out with the Braves' farm club and had no idea he'd pitch.

"You should have seen him pitch a week ago," said Paul Richards, the Atlanta general manager. "You wouldn't have believed it. He was wild and unsteady. Just terrible. It was like the first day of spring training for him."

Andy Kosco drilled a solo homer and RBI single in the Dodgers' victory with Bill Singer, 2-2, making his second start since missing two months of the season with hepatitis, allowing the Reds only two hits in five innings.

Jose Pena relieved Singer and allowed a two-out eighth inning homer to the Reds' John Bench. It was the Cincinnati catcher's 22nd.

The Mets exploded for seven first inning runs and Tom Seaver rode a 15-hit attack to his 10th victory, striking out 11.

Ken Boswell hed three hits for the Mets, including a two-run homer and Wayne Garrett ripped a triple and homer.

Ted Simmons cracked a two-out, bases-loaded single in the 17th, ending the 4:56 marathon at Chicago. A sacrifice fly by Ron Santo, following Jim Hickman's triple had tied it at 3-3 for the Cubs in the ninth.

Rookie Dave Cash socked a pair of triples, driving in four runs, including a bases-loaded three base hit, snapping a 4-4 tie in the sixth.

Al Ferrara singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh as the Padres beat Giants' right-hander Juan Marichal for the third straight time. Marichal is 3-6 on the season.

'Allaboard' Device Is Homemade But Is Helpful In Many Ways

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI)—Safety is of prime concern to most pleasure boatmen and they carry aboard a large number of devices to cope with any emergency.

With this in mind, Charles W. "Red" Russell, deputy director of the American National Red Cross Safety Programs, has developed an all-purpose piece of equipment that not only is a safety device but has at least a half dozen other practical uses.

Russell calls it an "Aallaboard." It is not a manufactured product but can be made by any "Do-it-yourselfer" and consists simply of a sheet of three-quarter or one-inch exterior or marine plywood, measuring 8 feet by 16 inches and fibreglassed on one side and on the rounded edges.

Its primary use, Russell says, is as a reboarding device for helping persons who have fallen overboard, but, he adds:

"It is also helpful in handling injuries which may occur around the water, as well as to give additional recreational benefits. Other uses include a gang plank, a ladder, a stretcher, a float to support tired swimmers and as a 'flopperstopper,' which, when placed under the keel, helps steady a boat in rough water."

Russell points out that many lives are lost for lack of reboarding devices or techniques.

"While boat racing rules require an assortment of safety gear such as life lines, preservers and grab rails, water lights and buoys, none specify means or procedures for getting an overboard victim back into the boat," Russell says.

"Even though some boats have portable swimming ladders for active and agile people, some persons can't climb a vertical ladder out of the water. And, of course, a ladder is of little help in getting an injured or unconscious person aboard."

Since the Allaboard performs many functions, he points out, it also is a space-saver, cutting down on the need for several pieces of equipment.

In building his Allaboard, Russell installed one-inch "chicken ladder" strips on the natural finished, or opposite of the fiberglassed side. These cleats are about 15 inches apart, beginning several inches from one end of the board.

Above each cleat on alternating sides he has cut footholes approximately four inches wide and one and a half inches in depth. Holes for half inch lines are drilled at each of the board's four corners so that rope can be used to hold the Allaboard in position when in various usages.

Here are some of the uses Russell suggests for his Allaboard:

—As a fenderboard: the fiberglassed side provides protection when the boat is moored alongside a pier or against a piling.

—To recover a person who has fallen overboard: the simplest method is to suspend the board over the side. Place a fender or seat cushion over the side first to hold the Allaboard away from the boat. Double the rope grommet over the cleat.

—As a gangplank: the rope grommet at either end can be secured to a convenient cleat on the boat or pier. The other grommet acts as a roller under the gang plank. When the tide is out, or to reach a higher elevation, the Allaboard becomes a ladder.

—As a first aid device: use the board to support a tired or injured swimmer in the water. Also, a fracture victim can be tied to the board and the board used as a litter.

—As a "flopperstopper:" Work the Allaboard athwartship under the keel and clinch snugly up to the gunwales. The stabilizing effect of the board makes a 20-or 25-footer feel like a 40-footer when anchored in rough water, according to Russell. The device can be used on either power or sail craft. —

Regatta Set For Beaufort

The Beaufort Historical Association will sponsor the Beaufort Sailing Regatta Sunday, June 28, at Beaufort.

Five classes of races will be held during the afternoon affair, set to get underway at 1:30 p.m. from the Duke University Biological Laboratory at Pivers Island in Beaufort. Classes include Sunfish, Flying Scots, Spritsail Skiffs, Cruising and Miscellaneous. Three races will be held in each class except the Cruising, which will have only one race.

That race will be run over an offshore course, while the rest will be run in Taylors Creek. Registration and a skipper's meeting will be held at 12:30 p.m. at the Duke Lab.

Further information can be obtained from John E. Gilchrist, chairman of the regatta, 215 Ann Street, Beaufort.

Tar Heel Outdoors: Cookbooks Provide Tasty Carolina Recipes

By JOEL ARRINGTON

The Beachcomber's Handbook of Seafood Cookery (by Hugh Zackery, John F. Blair Publishing Company, Winston-Salem, 208 pp., $4.95) has attracted a good deal of interest in North Carolina since its recent publication, and for good reason.

It is one of the most readable cookbooks to come down the pike in a long time. But it is certainly more than a mere cookbook. The author, an Oklahoman transplanted in Southport, transmits a fascination for marine lore that his origin belies.

Zackery deals charmingly with rare and odd items of seafood cookery. The first chapter, for example, titled "How to Make a Good Day from a Bad Day's Fishing," advises the reader, perhaps hungry for oyster stew or clam chowder, fresh fish steak, scallops and fresh crabmeat, to prepare instead coquina chowder, fresh blowfish or shark steak, and skate wing.

For the less exploratory palate, however, Zackery has cooked up a zesty stew of old stand-by coastal recipes. Hushpuppies, for which he provides five recipes, should, he says, always be made with onions. Directions for preparing fried fish, boiled shrimp and steamed crabs and oysters are simple and straight-forward enough for even the most inexperienced cook. They are simple enough even for the reluctant angler who draws the shortest straw and finds himself cooking for an entire fishing party.

Part of the appeal of the volume, in fact, is the no-nonsense approach to cooking which Zackery insists is the proper attitude toward seafood, and which is, not coincidentally, the native Tar Heel's way.

For this reason, I consider Beachcombers Handbook A man's cookbook. It will find its way into the duffel of anglers heading to the coast for a fishing vacation, and into numerous coast cottages from Duck to Shallotte.

Occasionally along the way, Zackery stubs a toe, however. Speckled trout are not called spotted weakfish because the flesh is soft, as he states, but because the mouth is so weak as to make them difficult to catch on a hook.

It was unfortunate that the author did not warn his readers of the danger of fish poison (Cigautera) from barracuda. Although there are no North Carolina cases of poisoning to my knowledge, it is a fact that we catch the same barracuda that are sometimes toxic in the Mediterranean. Frankly, it is not worth the risk to cook one.

But Zackery is at his best with crabs. He obviously understands crabs and has an affinity for them. His section on "crabology" is uproarously funny, and the entire chapter is a high light of the book.

For jack fishing fans, there is just out a comprehensive volume of lore, technique and knowledge. The Weedy World of the Pickerel (by Bob Gooch, A. S. Barnes and Company, 184 pp., $8.50) pulls together many bits and pieces of information about the pickerel family that are not otherwise available between two covers.

The book covers three species — chain, redfin and grass pickerel — this last a native of the Mississippi drainage and not found in North Carolina.

Gooch obviously admires pickerel, particularly the chain pickerel, or "jack" as it is frequently known in the south, for their slashing strikes and general availability within their range from Maine to Florida, across to Texas and southern Missouri.

Throughout this range, the pickerel is alternately cursed and praised, Gooch states, but its popularity is growing. The author describes fishing techniques with bait casting, spincasting, fly rod and spinning equipment, and makes a case for spinning tackle being most appropriate, all things considered.

There is thorough treatment of the pickerel's habitat and some good tips on fishing methods (fish the slow water, retrieve your lure along the weedy shore line instead away from it, etc.), and a good survey of state fish and game departments' current efforts to regulate pickerel fishing.

In North Carolina, nothing is being done in respect to management of the species, but officials of the Wildlife Resources Commission state that both the chain and the redfin pickerel are getting along nicely.

Weedy World is a book I'm glad to have in my fishing library.

Ease Rules For Hunting

RALEIGH — Restrictions on the more than 30 commercial shooting preserves in North Carolina have been eased for the coming hunting season.

The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission voted to ease the restrictions after receiving complaints from shooting preserve operators that the regulations were too harsh.

"Shooting preserves have provided a valuable service to our sportsmen by making good hunting available, and it has not been the Commission's intent to curtail operation of the preserves," indicated Wildlife Commission Director Clyde P. Patton.

Several requirements were eliminated, including the requirement that boundaries of preserves be marked by wire, the requirement for an additional special permit when native game birds were hunted in addition to pen-raised birds. Also, supervision of the release of pen-raised birds was eliminated.

The extended season was set from October 1 to March 31, and native birds may be hunted during this period on licensed preserves. Hunters on the preserves will also no longer be restricted to hunting only designated shooting fields on the preserves.

Marlin Contest Is Underway

By FRANK SWANSON

Excitement is still mounting as the first blue marlin, (at this writing), has still not been boated after the first day of tournament activity. Thirty boats are now pulling baits in the second day of fishing in the offshore waters off Morehead City, known as Morehead's Marlin Grounds. Monday's marlin action proved to be a day with plenty of good marlin strikes, with one boat having had one on for over an hour, but with no true grabs.

Skipper George Bedsworth, who had a night full of good fishing Monday night is back to pulling his marlin baits this morning. By ship-to-shore radio, skipper Bedsworth reported that his night fishing included good snags of red snappers, silver snappers, and porgies. Capt. Bedsworth is helmsman of the Dolphin One.

Monday, Dreamo Lu 2 master, Jim Talton arrived at the docks with a boat load of beautiful dolphin. These dolphin were skinned, and filleted for the journey home to the fishermen's freezers.

Also Monday, L. F. Lee, Houston, Texas, boated a giant bull dolphin straining the scales at 61 pounds. The bull was boated from the Alpha D-Amour with David Ballou as skipper.

Fishing for kings has been up and down these past few days. Saturday, Jack Ruby and party, Richmond, Va. reeled in 43 summer kings from the charter boat Isobel, skippered by John Rose. Also Saturday, fishing on the Dolphin II, with Capt. Herman Gibson, R. G. Ogden, Lynchburg, Va. pulled aboard 33 king mackerel. Mr. William F. Henson, Washington, D. C. took to bottom fishing on board Capt. Wallace Guthrie's Dolphin VI, and brought home 350 pounds of sea bass.

A king mackerel weighing 10 pounds was decked from the Oceanana Pier by Walter Mustian, Henderson, Sunday on a shad.

The Paragon, a small 23 ft. boat from Wrightsville Beach, N. C. has caught the first blue marlin of the Tournament. It was caught by David Gustafson, owner of the Paragon. The approximate weight of the marlin is 250 lbs.

Hill's Remarks Anger Sponsors

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — Dave Hill's sharp tongue has got him in hot water again—on both sides of the Atlantic—but there is no indication a gag will be slapped on him this weekend while he's shooting for the U.S. Open golf title on a course he says should be "plowed up."

"The Open is not a co-sponsored PGA event," Joseph C. Dey Jr., commissioner of the Tournament Players Division, said today. "We don't have jurisdiction over this event.

"I haven't seen Hill's remarks. I would say they would have to be especially strong to warrant disciplinary action."

Hill himself, a slender firebrand from Jackson, Mich., seemed to be waiting for the ax to fall again.

"I've been fined and suspended for what I've said before. I will again. I don't see why I should lie about what I think."

The 33-year-old pro, winner of more than $150,000 last year and the Vardon Trophy for having the tour's best scoring average, offended both the Open tournament sponsors and his British golf cousins in an almost unprecedented blast Friday after shooting into the runnerup spot in the Open over the widely criticized Hazeltine National Golf Club.

He fired a three-under-par 69 for 144 which placed him only three shots back of the leader, British Open champion Tony Jacklin, at 141.

Of the Hazeltine course, designed by famed architect Robert Trent Jones, Hill said:

"A monkey is as good as a man out there."

He added: "The man who designed this course had his blueprints upside down. All the greens slant away from you."

And:

"Somebody ruined a good farm."

Asked what the course needed, he said: "Eighty-eight acres of corn and four cows."

Hill, in rare form behind his wire-rimmed grandma specs, also had a bomb for the British when asked whether he planned to play in the British Open at St. Andrews two weeks hence.

Without mentioning his displeasure over an officials ruling in the Ryder Cup matches at Royal Birkdale last year, he replied:

"I told them people that if they ever found me over there again they'd know my mind had died and somebody had shipped my body to the wrong place."

Leonard Crawley, mustachioed ex-Walker Cupper who writes for the London Morning Telegraph, said: "Hill will regret these words one day. He left a solid bad smell. We will be relieved to know that we will not be pestered by his ill manners again."

You are right to fight pollution now.

Lead-Free AMOCO.

There is more to Lead-Free AMOCO than meets the eye. Many experts say that lead-free gasoline is the best answer yet to automobile air pollution. And AMOCO is the only lead-free premium gasoline you can buy. Right now. But there's even more to it than that. Lead-Free AMOCO can double spark plug life. That alone could save you up to $10. And double tailpipe life. That's another $20 or so. And double muffler life. That's maybe $40 more. And give you better mileage than leaded gasolines. Lead-Free AMOCO is right for your country. Right for your car. Right now. It's time to try it.

The Boys' Club of Greenville

Center of Activity For 500 Young Boys

BOYS CLUB . . . of Greenville is located in a renovated church on Skinner Street. A group of boys gather on the steps waiting for the bus to begin its homeward run.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Greenville's Boys Club is beginning its second summer with more than double the number of boys than were in the program last summer and with a broader scope of activities.

First opening in Greenville in March 1969, the Boys Club began with about 200 members. As this summer vacation begins, nearly 500 boys, black and white, are members. These Greenville lads, between the ages of 6 and 18, are enthusiastic about the club and all it offers them.

The purpose of the club is stated by Director Richard Ullom as "social educational, physical, vocational and character development for boys." This may seem a rather large order, but these lads have energy and inquisitiveness enough to cover a lot of territory. At any one time, there are several activities underway. Large groups of boys jump, run, swing and play in the summer sun on the obstacle course next to the building.

Inside what was formerly the West End Presbyterian Church, a dozen or more boys, mostly in the 7 to 12 age group, crowd around and try their skill at weaving with gemp — thin strings of plastic. Mrs. Dudley Howard, one of the staff, explains the process of braiding. Other boys carve, draw, and cut designs on boards.

The games room is popular. Ping pong, pool tables, shuffleboard, and carpet pool, and other indoor games are available. Smaller boys are helped by larger ones in learning these games. Occasionally one of the staff members has to step in to get some misunderstanding untangled.

The library is gradually becoming better stocked, and there's always half a dozen or more youngsters either browsing through books or engaged in serious study.

The Boys Club, Ullom points out, "is dependent on the community," for support in keeping the club financed and all the programs going. "We have been helped generously by a number of clubs and individuals."

Assistance in the first year has been given by the Optimist Club, which bought the bus, a piano, and a pop corn popper. The Jaycees purchased a movie projector and assisted the club with proceeds from a horse show. The Kiwanis Club is sponsoring the arts and crafts program and is responsible for the pool tables; and the Lions Club has given financial aid and other support. Three churches in Greenville, the First Christian, Red Oak Christian, and St. Paul's Episcopal have given assistance. Van Every Associates supplied kitchen equipment.

Community ladies and university students play a big role in making certain activities possible. Mrs. J. Lindsay Savage conducts a choir, and doubles as a piano player. Mrs. Howard Hodges and Mrs. Nancy Dunn, with assistance from other women, have formed a group of volunteer teachers giving tutorial services, particularly in reading.

Students of the Physical Education Department of Carolina University help out as part of their training — and give extra services as well. They are the ones who constructed the obstacle course which has proven to be a favorite with boys of all ages.

"Without this generous support and all the other assistance we've had from groups and hard working individuals," Ullom said, "we never could have had the successful program we've been able to give these boys."

This summer a joint program of activity for the Boys' Club and the Recreation Department is being conducted at C. M. Eppes School. This is the first joint venture of this nature in Greenville. At the same time, regular activities continue at the Boys' Club Center on Skinner Street.

Basically, the overall program is structured in two categories — Cultural-Educational; and Physical. Under the first, the Arts and Crafts program is one of the mainstays. Stone carving, wood burning and wood working, plaster of Paris models, drawing and weaving are some of the projects the boys enjoy. There's also an Adventure in Reading program, where the lads get into travel and adventure reading. Something new on the list is the Chef's Club. This deals with elementary cooking techniques, but also branches out to cover etiquette, courtesy and manners. A Conservation Club is being formed. This will cover a study of wildlife and basic methods of preventing pollution.

Each week a devotion service is held in the club. Volunteer ministers from various churches in Greenville give their time to head these services. Another similar activity is the character guidance program, where business and professional men come to the club to give brief talks to the boys.

The physical program is broad. Two of the of the more comprehensive ones are the Green Beret and the Mr. Peanut Physical Program. The first is designed for boys 11 and older, and incorporates a rank program in which a boy can proceed to higher levels of training based on prescribed standards of achievement. In the Peanut program for younger boys, activities are varied. Both of these programs stress sound physical fitness.

There is unorganized physical playtime too. Young lads enjoy the organized activities, but the staff realizes that improvision is a vital part of a boy's life. To satisfy this basic need, the boys have a trampoline, the obstacle course, and open space where they can simply run and chase each other.

Several special events are planned for the summer — a watermelon eating contest; a penny carnival; and anything on wheels Derby Day; fishing rodeo; and an eating contest of crackers and hard boiled eggs.

One event sure to appeal is an Air Rifle Safety Clinic being sponsored by the Jaycees. This is an example of a program combining fun and responsible training. Other big events the boys look forward to are the Boys Club Master Golf Tournament; tournament challenge day; and the Annual Awards Banquet when boys are recognized for outstanding achievement.

On the travel agenda for this summer are — a trip to Fort Bragg, a series of campouts and fishing trips, a sightseeing trip to Wilmington to include the battleship U.S.S. North Carolina, and possibly one or two more not yet scheduled.

Looking back over the past year, there have been a number of highlights for the boys belonging to the Greenville Boys' Club. One of the most recent was a trip to Washington for 35 of the boys. While there, they toured the Smithsonian, the Capitol, and other points of historic interest. Congressman Walter B. Jones met and talked to the group and arranged for them to sit in on a session of the House of Representatives.

Another group is to make a similar Washington trip within a few days. Nearer home, there have been trips to tour Raleigh and other towns, fishing trips, beach excursions, and several campouts.

Typical of a campout was once held in May. On this occasion 30 boys from Eppes and 30 from Aycock spent a weekend in leadership and character training, learning to work together and to get to know each other better. "This proved to be a rewarding weekend," Ullom commented.

Although a new club, Greenville was chosen for the site to hold the joint North Carolina-South Carolina Fine Art Exhibit. This was held at Wachovia Bank for a week, with several entries chosen for the regional show in Chattanooga.

Perhaps the highlight of last year's program was the selection of Carlos Ebron, a 17 year old Negro member, as one of the 20 national finalists from which the "Boy of The Year" was chosen. As a result of being a finalist, Ebron and director Ullom spent several days in New York.

"This brings to mind," Ullom remarked, "that one of the good points about the Boys' Club program is that the national headquarters provides local clubs financial support in matters like this trip. We actually get much more in return than what we contribute."

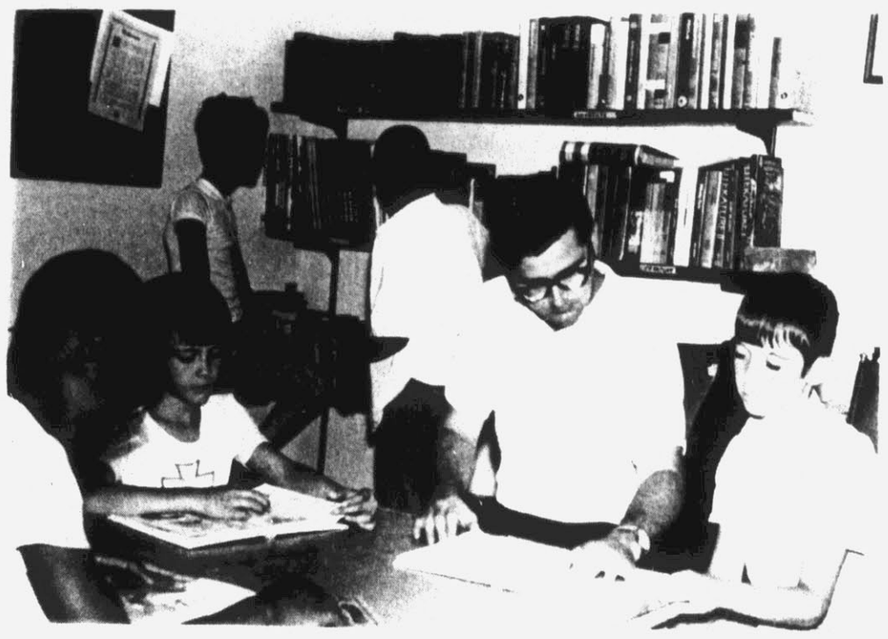

Ullom explained that only one percent of all cash contributions and money raised through benefit affairs go into the National Program. "Another example of the kind of help we receive," Ullom said, "are the 75 books they sent us recently."

Forty Greenville citizens — four of them women — serve on the Board of Directors. From the 50, an executive committee has been elected — Wally Howard, president; Gene Ward, vice-president; Dudley Flood, vice-president (who is resigning since he now works in Raleigh); Julian Vainwright, secretary; Johnnie May, treasurer; W. M. Scales, chairman of finance committee; and William Glidewell, personnel committee. Board members serve on 14 other committees set up to cover all the needs of an active, growing community service club.

In addition to the director, the Boys' Club staff consists of David Wilcox, program director; Raymond Williams, unit director of the Moyewood Branch Club; Mrs. Dudley Howard, education and crafts director; and Mike Parsons, ECU student who works with the physical program.

"We are really proud of what we have been able to accomplish," Ullom said. "We realize this never could have been done without the hard work and active support, both in time, material and money, of individuals and groups.

"We hope, as time passes, to be able to offer more and better activities to the boys because we feel they enjoy being a part of the club, and the Boys' Club provides them a chance to work, play and develop together."

A TIME TO READ . . . Reading time provides an opportunity to discover new horizons of adventure. Director Dick Ullom explains a paragraph to one boy as others read or choose a book.

SKINNING THE CAT . . . is great fun, especially when there's someone like David Wilcox, program director, standing by to help.

A BIG DAY . . . for one group of 35 was the recent visit to Washington and a chance to meet Congressman, Walter B. Jones. The group poses with Mr. Jones on the steps of the Capitol Building.

WATCH CAREFULLY . . . ECU student Mike Parsons demonstrates a fine point in pool shooting. Mike is in charge of the physical program this summer.

IN THE CRAFTS ROOM . . . young boys work on a number of projects with the assistance of Mrs. Dudley Howard, education and crafts director at the Boys' Club.

Jack Lemmon, on Acting

Hectic, But For Him The Only Career

By PEACE STERLING
AP Newsfeatures Writer

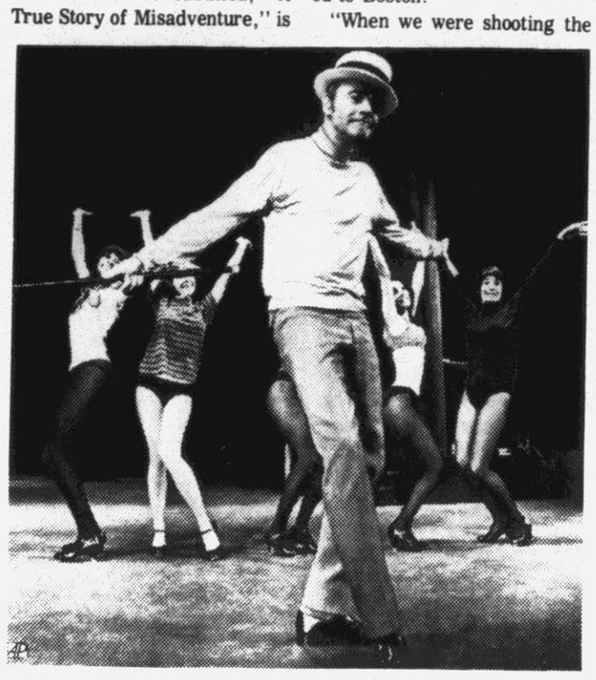

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaning back in a plush couch in his elegant hotel suite, Jack Lemmon —his hair a little grayer than it looks on the screen, his build a little slighter—grins his slow, captivating smile, and tells the story of his latest movie, a comedy called "The Out-of-Towners."

"Of course all the horrible things that happen in the movie aren't going to happen to one person all at once," he says, moving his hands rapidly before him. "But any one of them has happened to a number of people. And we all love to laugh at ourselves."

"The Out-of-Towners," which could almost be subtitled, "A True Story of Misadventure," is about a Midwestern couple who come to New York City where they are beset with seemingly endless trouble: lost baggage; a holdup; a kidnaping and a mugging in Central Park.

The couple's plane is supposed to land in New York, but air tieups cause it to be rerouted to Boston.

"When we were shooting the movie," Lemmon recounts, "we actually were going to Boston, but planes got stacked up there and we almost had to go to New York. Then the hotel didn't have our rooms, and our bags weren't on the plane. All the luggage had gone to Kansas. And finally, when we came to New York, I looked so awful after one day's shooting that when I got back to my hotel the man on the desk wouldn't let me upstairs until he had verified who I was."

BACK ON THE STAGE for the first time in 10 years, Jack Lemmon played to critical acclaim this spring in a Los Angeles revival of Robert E. Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight." Lemmon, who just completed a movie, now plans to direct his first film, with Walter Matthau in the starring role.

Lemmon pauses, and after a moment says thoughtfully: "It might be hectic, but I don't know what the hell I'd do if I weren't an actor. I keep wondering how many actors, even the ones who might be emotionally disturbed, would be real basket cases if they couldn't act. We all love to play games. Actors just get applauded for it.

"My father had hoped I would go into his business, but after college I wanted to go into acting. I went to him and told him I had to give this a chance. He just said, 'You really love it. You really need it—then okay.'"

Lemmon's acting career has been varied, beginning with a break into soap opera, then radio and television work, summer stock, Broadway and some 25 movies, including "Mr. Robert," the 1955 film for which he won an Academy Award.

"Film is the greatest medium," he says, "because it's practically limitless, whereas on stage you have only one shot. But on stage you have a live audience that tells you if a line isn't funny. In film you can't time the laughs. It's more difficult to do well on film because you take a scene and have to keep stopping and starting again. There's no build and flow.

"Doing both is good for you. If you did only one it would be like an athlete not going to the gym and not working out, then running the race. You might do all right, but you're not going to win. Performing live gives you a big emotional lift. And when the audience isn't good you work hard as hell. It gets to be like a game. You try to get them. All of which is good—it pulls and stretches you."

Last spring, Lemmon won critics' praise on the West Coast with his performance in a revival of Robert E. Sherwood's play, "Idiot's Delight." And in the fall, he plans to do another play, this time in New York.

Speaking about the several movies he has made from stage plays, Lemmon admits that it's often disconcerting. "If I've seen a performance of the play with a good actor, I'm so worried about not imitating him, I have to psych myself into forgetting all about him—just pull a curtain down in my mind."

And as for watching his own performances—"I don't see films I've been in more than two or three times, because more often than not I'll say, 'Why did I do that?' I see more things I think are wrong than right. But then sometimes, I might catch an old movie on television and be really pleased with something I did."

Although he may be better known for his comic performances, Lemmon says he doesn't prefer comedy. "And even within comedy or drama," he adds, "there's no particular kind of character I prefer.

"When I read a script, if I don't know how to play a part, I'll get excited, and want to do it. Good writing is harder to play because there are more depths, and it's delicious hell to decide which depths you're going to bring out," he says.

He sees changes in film—mainly a more enlightened audience.

"The audience is way ahead of the typical film," he comments. "You don't have to lay it out so much, to be so clear about what you're doing. The cinema is being realized not as escapist, but as an art form. Technically, films are much more creative and simple now. They're more mobile, more natural and realistic. More is being done with directorial techniques showing."

Recently, Lemmon announced he is going to direct his first film, "Kotch," with Walter Matthau starring in the role of a 72-year-old man. "I'm scared to death of directing," he comments. "But if I get run over by a truck or a producer, I don't want to look up and say, 'Why didn't I do it'?"

What's he like—the man not the actor? Two of his comments might be indicative: "I keep my Oscar on a bottom shelf in the living room, behind a chair, with a whole bunch of other stuff. I don't want people to think I want it to be seen."

And about television talk shows: "I'm nervous about going on as Jack Lemmon, because I have no role to hide behind. I find it hard to understand why Jack Lemmon himself should be interesting."

Children Write To Witchiepoo

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Witchiepoo of the piercing screech and evil intentions on the "H. R. Pufnstuf" kiddie show is, in actuality, Billie Hayes who is no witch at all.

Billie probably is the most beloved villainess on television.

Inasmuch as she and Jack Wild are the only human beings in the imaginative Saturday morning show, she is deluged by mail in childish scrawl reassuring her she is not as bad as she seems.

The letters are particularly heartwarming to Billie who is single and childless. She lives with another girl in a five-room Hollywood apartment.

For whatever reason, they have chosen to decorate their quarters with cane and bamboo furniture, stuffed pillows and light colors.

On entering the apartment one has the distinct feeling of stumbling onto a clearing in the jungle.

The mood is enhanced by pictures of lions and cheetahs on the walls. One senses Frank Buck might appear from the kitchen at any moment.

More likely it would be Frank than Billie Hayes. She loathes cooking and limits her knowledge of the kitchen to distinguishing the stove from the refrigerator.

She is off to Warner Bros. every morning for makeup at 6:45. It takes a full hour and a half to adorn her attractive face with Witchiepoo's grotesque nose, chin and other outlandish features. Generally she has breakfast in the makeup room.

Billie takes lunch in her dressing room or scares the Warner Bros. personnel by appearing in the commissary.

That leaves only dinner. And rather than prepare it herself, Billie is given to stopping at hamburger joints on the way home about 8 o'clock in the evening.

She and young Wild work all day together, but have little in common after working hours.

"He's only 17, you know," Billie explains, "and it took me three weeks just to understand his English accent."

In contrast to her witch's costume on the NBC half-hour, Billie is chic on her own time. She favors miniskirts, loafers, sandals and slacks. Saturday is her only free day for shopping.

Sunday she usually takes her dog—half boxer, half Great Dane—for long walks.

Enjoy your vacation this summer by trying some ideas from these books on boating.

THE LURE OF SAILING by Everett A. Pearson is a handbook on sailing which covers both small and large sailboats. This illustrated book explains in detail the techniques of sailing and gives a wealth of professional tips on such things as first aid for your yacht, cruising activities, safety equipment, living aboard and yachting etiquette. THE LURE OF SAILING will help you and your family discover how to enjoy the fun and rewards of sailing, whether it be cruising, racing or just loafing around out on the water.

Packed with information to delight and stimulate anyone who really loves the outdoors, MALO'S COMPLETE GUIDE TO CANOEING AND CANOE-CAMPING is for both beginners and seasoned adventures of the canoe. Mr. John Malo begins by describing the early history of the canoe in North America, and then explains such things as how to map a canoe trip, and suggests trails in the United States and Canada for that canoe-camping vacation.

Why cruise? Because the roads are crowded, to leave the everyday world behind, and the best rest I know of are just a few of the reasons Carl D. Lane suggests in his book THE CRUISER'S MANUAL, a complete guide to the art and pleasure of cruising. For anyone who wants to cruise with both confidence, and a certain amount of sophistication THE CRUISER'S MANUAL is essential and entertaining reading.

THE COMPLETE GUIDE TO WATER SKIING by Al Tyll is a key to unlock summers of fun for the young. For the old, it makes you younger, because you just never get to old to enjoy water skiing. The author is a four-time National Men's Trick Skiing Champion and has written a comprehensive book with photographs and diagrams, giving all the information a beginner wants and needs to know about the fast growing sport of water skiing.

SHIPSHAPE AND BRISTOL FASHION by Loren R. Borland is a sailor's guide to cruising in comfort and safety. This workbook of practical ideas was written by a man who has been cruising most of his life and has spent years living on his yacht. There are sixty-five articles which offer aid in safety, comfort and time. SHIPSHAPE AND BRISTOL FASHION shows that when things are under control, one can cope with unexpected events, the necessary work of ship handling can be done in an easy and relaxed fashion, and one can enjoy that vacation cruise.

An Artist Of Rich Colors

Sarah Blakeslee is the name she uses in signing her works of art, oils and watercolors. In private life she is Mrs. Francis Speight, artist wife of East Carolina University's artist - in - residence Dr. Francis Speight.

Warmth is the keynote in all her works. The rich colors which she favors are suggestive of an atmosphere of heavy summer light reflected on shades of peach, mauve, reds, misty lavenders, bronze oranges and summer greens. Even when she uses browns in portraits, these are suffused with a flow of mellow golds, tans, and velvety mahoganies.

The result are paintings with a quality that seems more pronounced in a time when hard - edge techniques; flat planes of color; and absence of graduations of color are dominating factors in so many current art movements.

"I've never tried abstracts or any of the other modern approaches," Mrs. Speight admits. "I think my style was too deeply ingrained in past years for me to consider changing at this stage."

She is quietly enthusiastic about the portraits which now occupy most of her painting time. "I'm surprised at the willingness of people sitting for these portraits to be so patient," she remarked. "I demand a lot of them, as I strive for the likeness I have in mind and keep at it until I arrive at what I want.

"This is very important to me," she remarked, for I could never get the results I want without the fine cooperation I've received from people whose portraits I paint."

A native of Evanston, a surburb of Chicago, Mrs. Speight has had a solid apprenticeship in the art of painting and drawing. "I started my art training at the Art Institute in Chicago," she recalled. "It was an early start, followed by study in Washington at the Corcoran Art Gallery."

She noted that after high school days, she continued art studies at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. It was there she met Dr. Speight, a young instructor. "We used the studio system," Mrs. Speight said, "where a student works, takes his work to an instructor or the instructor comes in to evaluate the work you are doing."

After their marriage, she continued painting in oils and watercolors — still her favorite media. "In those early years when the children were small I used to paint still lifes a lot. These are easy to do anywhere. Francis always painted on the spot. Whenever possible, I also like to make sketches on the spot."

"As the children grew up" (referring to a daughter Elizabeth and a son Thomas), Mrs. Speight remarked, "I found it possible to get in some painting while waiting for them to take swimming lessons or to take part in some other childhood activity."

This period resulted in landscapes combining outdoor scenes peopled with figures. She pointed out one she calls simply "a swimming pool scene." In this, as in most of her landscapes, there is a traditional treatment of contemporary objects. The trees, water and people at first glance are reminiscent of 19th century painting. Only a second look reveals the reality of concrete and abbreviated swimming clothes. Cars, light lines and other evidences of our modern society are treated with a minimal suggestion, never as a dominant object.

As the years have passed, Mrs. Speight has accumulated an impressive array of awards and prizes for paintings and watercolors. Among these are an award and the Mary Smith Prize at the Pennsylvania Academy; a first prize at Woodmere Gallery in Philadelphia and many others.

Her work has been exhibited in places as diverse as the National Academy in New York; regional shows in Pennsylvania; and in North Carolina in Kinston, Rocky Mount, N.C. State University and UNC at Chapel Hill in Greenville on several occasions.

With the children now adults, Mrs. Speight has time to teach. She has a regular class at Rocky Mount for which she commutes regularly.

Mrs. Speight's paintings and those of her husband reflect a basic kindred spirit. Although each are artists with their own distinctive styles and viewpoints, a love of nature and people and their inherent beauties is a characteristic shared by both. — Jerry Raynor

Ross Bryant Exhibits Photographs At Center

There's only about a week left to see the collection of Ross Bryant photographs being shown jointly with the Ahoskie Group at Greenville's Art Center.

This collection of black and white and color photographs covers the seacoast of North Carolina in its restful backwaters; people caught unaware in pensive or dreamy moments; close up details of objects and their shadows; and beautifully textured bits of nature.

Bryant, who spends his spare time recording the contemporaty scene on film, said "these phogographs represent the area of Eastern North Carolina from Rocky Mount to the coast. There's enough in this area to keep anyone busy with a camera for years."

Photography is an interest he acquired while studying art at East Carolina University. "I majored in art," he noted, "and specialized in sculpture. But photography has gradually taken top interest with me and now I'm totally committed to this field."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bryant, the young Bryant was born in Washington, D.C. He came to Greenville in 1962 when his father, a retired journalist, moved here. His wife, the former Sandra Whitfield, is also trained in art. She is an art teacher, and taught in the county's elementary schools.

In the last couple of years Bryant has exhibited the results of his camera browsings in the Greenville Sidewalk Art Shows and at other local shows. "It's a fascinating field," he notes, "one in which I find immense enjoyment."

His current show of about 40 photogramphs fill one gallery at the art center. It has the advantage of being enjoyable both as art and as a timely comment on our part of the state.

LAND OF OZ—Figures are being completed by Austin Fox, Charlotte sculptor who recently completed a series of the famous characters from the story "The Wizard of Oz." Fox worked for the past two years on this group of figures which can now be seen (until June 26) in "The Land of Oz", an outdoor attraction on the top of Beech Mountain near Banner Elk in western North Carolina. Fox is best known for his female "femlin" figures which have appeared 10 times on the cover of "Playboy" Magazine.

Ten Thousand Children Visit Center

School age children visiting Greenville's Art Center broke all previous attendance records during the past school year.

Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the center, says this is attributable to the fact that three exhibitions in the nine month period were ones featuring art work of children in the city and county.

Last October, approximately 1,000 children came to see the special show put on by both the city and county schools in connection with United Nations Week. The spring show by students of Greenville City Schools resulted in an attendance of about 2,000 children.

In late May, the annual Pitt County Art Show had more than 6,000 school children viewing the exhibition of art created by their fellow students. Mrs. Walker notes this large attendance was possible because the county scheduled schools by classes and provided transportatio.

These three shows, plus visits by a number of Boy and Girl Scout troops during the year, and children attending other shows during the year ran the total of school age visitors from September through May to well over 10,000, a new record for the center..

N.C. School of Arts Sets Italian Summer

WINSTON-SALEM — For the fourth consecutive summer, the North Carolina School of the Arts (NCSA) will sponsor three "Study - perform - tour" programs in Italy

In the Siena Summer Program from June 15 through August 12, 93 student musicians will be enrolled. Headquarters for the dance students from NCSA will be in the town of Asolo. The Camerata Chamber Singers will this year make their debut in both Italy and Austria.

The program is being held in collaboration with the Accademia Musicale Chigiana. The 93 students chosen by audition from the NCSA and from other sections of the country will study with Italian musicians such as Nini Antonellini, Franco Ferrara, Severino; and composers Goffredo Petrassi and Liciano Berio.

The summer session students are divided into two distinctly different groups. In the first, 74 outstanding young musicians have been selected to comprise a full symphony orchestra. Rehearsals and concerts will be under the direction of Meastro Piero Bellugi, music director of the Italian Radio in Turin. A few students will be given the opportunity to appear as soloists with the radio orchestra.

The second group of 19 will be enrolled in the graduate program of the Accademia Musicale Chigiana, where they will participate in master classes with some of Italy's greatest artist - teachers. These students will include ones studying in vocal repertory, harpsichord, violin, flute, piano, organ, as well as composition and conducting.

The Siena program was established in 1967 by the late Dr. Vittorio Gianni, first President of the N.C. School of the Arts, in collaboration with His Excellency, Anintore Fanfani, Foreign Minister of the Italian Governement and Dr. Daniol Verzili, president of the Accademia Musicale Chigiana.

Various sources support the Siena program — grant - in - aid from the State of North Carolina, subsidies from foundations and private sources in the U.S. and by a generous subsidy from the Monte dei Paschi Bank of Siena and the Italian Government.

'Impregnable' Siegfried Line Is Costly Nuisance

By HOWARD A. TYNER

LAMMERSDORF, Germany (UPI)—Adolf Hitler called it "impregnable." The years have proved that a more accurate word for the Siegfried Line of which the Nazi fuehrer was so proud would have been "indestructible."

THE SIEGFRIED LINE — Men and vehicles of the U.S. 7th Army pass through "dragon's teeth" defenses of the Siegfried Line in this 1945 photo. Below, remains of the Line only keeps cows from wandering too far. (UPI Telephoto)

More than 30 years have passed since Hitler built the Siegfried Line across 350 miles of the fatherland from the Alps to Holland to protect the western flank of the German Reich from attack through France and the Low Countries.

And today most of it still stands—a land-fouler, an eyesore, a nuisance and an enormous expense to West Germany.

"We'll hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line, cheekily sang British soldiers when World War II came, and eventually they did. Now the once-fearsome defense line of concrete teeth—sunk into the earth as tank barriers—and the thick-walled, deep-running bunkers remains as a vast and grotesque gravestone to the generals who once swore by static warfare.

Line Of Rubble

As far as the eye can see, there are blasted bunkers— 14,000 of them. And girding the neighboring meadows in broad rows are the tens of thousands of anti-tank obstacles that, when the final test came in 1944, were no match for the powerful American and British armies.

What the allies left behind was a giant line of rubble almost beyond imagination—"a monster millstone around the neck of the state which every year swallows up millions (of marks)," as one Bonn official described it.

Consider Lammersdorf, a dusty little (pop. 1,700) farming community in the Eifel, a pine-forested scrubland across the border from Belgium.

Dotted about the dozen or so square miles of the village are shells of 30 shattered pillboxes. Through backyards and fields run more than two miles of "The Teeth."

Various Schemes

Cows graze among the fortifications. Farmers must plow intricate pattern around them. Children sometimes play among them.

What to do with the remains? Various schemes have been tried.

Farmers have used relatively intact bunkers to store crops. Once the West Germany army considered using parts of the line to train soldiers.

Under pressure from local residents, the West German government decided to demolish the line. However, by 1969, nearly a quarter century after the end of World War II, the thousands of crumbling pillboxes remained, as well as 20 miles of anti-tank obstacles.

"Consider the demolition process," Dr. Hans Weber said in his Aachen office cluttered with maps, papers and statistics on the line (named "Siefried" by Hitler after the great hero of German folklore and Wagnerian operas).

No one in Bonn expects all the bunkers to go. A spokesman estimated "that would cost perhaps $40 million. We can attend only to those which are a genuine nuisance."

Ask Them Yourself

FOR STANLEY RESOR,

Secretary of the Army

Has a Medal of Honor ever been awarded to a military chaplain for bravery or any other service?—Mrs. L. D. Allen, Detroit, Mich.

● Since its inception, the Medal of Honor has been awarded to six military chaplains. They are: Chaplain John M. Whitehead, Civil War; Chaplain Francis B. Hall, Civil War; Chaplain Milton L. Haney, Civil War; Chaplain (Commander, USNR) Joseph T. O'Callahan, World War II; Chaplain (Captain) Angelo J. Liteky, U.S. Army, Vietnam; and Chaplain (Major) Charles J. Watters, U.S. Army, Vietnam. (Editor's Note: An article by Captain Angelo Liteky, "What Our GIs In Vietnam Are Really Like," appeared in FAMILY WEEKLY on June 29, 1969)

FOR EDDIE ALBERT

I have heard that you eat only "natural foods." Do you grow any of it? What is included in your diet?—Mrs. Ellen M. Crow, Texarkana, Texas

● It's true that I eat many organically nurtured foods, many of which I grow in my own garden. However, I also eat some non-natural foods. My diet consists mostly of naturally produced food and some chemical supplements.

FOR BESS MYERSON GRANT,

Commissioner of Consumer Affairs, City of New York

Do you spend more time in your home as a Commissioner than when you were on tv programs?—Mrs. Evelyn Smith, Epworth, Iowa

● Not at all. On the contrary, my time is now so fully occupied with work at the office, meetings, speeches, visits to stores and markets, and with research that time in my home has become a rare luxury.

FOR RON SANTO, Chicago Cubs

What is your favorite size bat?—Mark Pinkerton, Marion, Ind.

● My favorite bat size is 34 inches long and 32 ounces in weight.

FOR GLEN CAMPBELL

I have never seen a guitar like yours before. Was it especially made for you?—Desi Giglia, Somers Point, N.J.

● My guitars are manufactured by the Ovation Guitar Co. and are available to the public.

FOR MILTON BASS,

Do you believe, as is stated in your new novel, "Force Red," that there would be a danger of the nation being taken over by an all-volunteer army, such as the one recently proposed by President Nixon?—L. L. Smith, Chicago, Ill.

● I think there is grave danger of such a situation. The French only narrowly averted it after the loss of Algiers. The military has too much say on our country's policies right now, and I shudder to think what might happen with a force that has no civilian nucleus of draftees.

FOR DINA MERRILL,

actress

Have you added maxi skirts to your wardrobe?—Mrs. J. M. Waco, Texas

● No. I like my skirts about four inches above the knee.

FOR JACK DEMPSEY

Recently I read about the computer fight in which Rocky Marciano beat Cassius Clay for the all-time heavyweight championship. Is it possible to predict how two men who never fought would react?—John Davidson, Green Bay, Wis.

● Every fighter changes strategy for each opponent. Each has his own style. One punch can change the outcome. You can't predict it.

Want to ask a famous person a question? You can through this column, and we'll get the answer from the prominent person you designate. Send question, preferably on a post card, to Ask Them Yourself, Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We cannot acknowledge questions, but $5 will be paid for each one used.

What in the World!

Cool As Hell Now that it's officially summer (as of 12:43 this Sunday, EST) you may be interested in unique ways to escape the coming heat. So we pass along this you-know-where-you-can-go suggestion from Hell—Hell, Michigan, that is. For the curiosity seekers who come to this central-Michigan resort spot to see what it's like in Hell, the one thing they won't experience is too much heat: the town prides itself on the fact that practically every place is air-conditioned. What visitors can experience, however, is spending a night in a cozy motel on Hell Creek, mixing it up with the weekend brigade of townsfolk who dress up in devil's costumes for fun and photos, and shopping for satanic souvenirs. Since the community's postmark is, of course, "Hell," the favorite tourist sport is mailing an ersatz snowball (available at a curiosity shop called Den of Antiquity) from Hell. It doesn't melt.

Low-Keyed Campaign When wives—of husbands who believe a woman's place is in the home—want to go back to work, they need to launch a domestic campaign, but a low-keyed one. "Not an offensive one, or they'll get the job and lose the husband." This is advice from Letty Cottin Pogrebin, a top publicist and a happy wife with three youngsters. She has just written a book, "How to Make It in a Man's World," and gave FAMILY WEEKLY some unpublished inside tips for wives hoping to take their first post-children jobs. "First, talk about wanting to go back to school or brush up on former skills or merely check out available jobs. Later, speak of the need for adult stimulation, for something beyond self, kitchen, and kids. Emphasize that a job is not an escape, not a plan for giving up homemaking. As a convincer, you can cite American Journal of Sociology statistics showing that families of working women feel their lives are enhanced because the lady of the household is less tense, emotionally warmer."

Uniform Trend In years to come, are people going to be less individual, more uniform? It looks like it. The company which had half the American male population of 1915 in overalls now makes "uniforms" for the white-collar worker. Leighton Rosenthal, president of Work Wear Corporation, predicts that within 10 years half of the American women will be wearing couture-designed "career clothes" on their jobs. He says many large companies will pay for their rental and maintenance and compete for the best-looking ensembles to lure increasingly hard-to-get clerical help. But won't girls lose their individuality? Just the opposite, Mr. Rosenthal thinks: "Women will put the money they save on office clothes into more cosmetics, hair pieces, more glamorous evening- and leisure-clothes, and health-club memberships."

The Mystery of Premenstrual Tension

Quarrels, accidents, even crimes are caused by this monthly affliction; but for most women the condition responds to medical treatment

By THOMAS KERENYI, M.D. Obstetrician/Gynecologist, Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City As told to Martin D. Staiman

Recently, a Denver housewife, after bitterly quarreling with her husband and crashing a tray full of dinner dishes, piled into the family car and drove off to meet a bus—head on.

Like some three million housewives and mothers, she was a victim of the overpowering emotional and physical strain called premenstrual tension.

It's estimated that the number of premenstrual tension sufferers who go untreated or who treat themselves ranges between 15 to 20 million a year in the United States alone. The most common of all female nervous disorders, it occurs about a week to 10 days before menstruation, builds to a climax, and usually abates rather dramatically with the onset of menstruation. For most women, it passes like a whimper. But it's amazing what can happen while it lasts!

A recent study showed that in 500 serious auto crashes involving women drivers a significantly high proportion was found related to the menstrual cycle.

Four times as many unpremediated crimes of violence are committed by females in premenstrual days as on other days. In fact, current studies of both juvenile delinquents and adult female criminals suggest that their destructive activity is at a height during this time.

It's estimated that premenstrual tension accounts for female-job absenteeism of eight to nine million days per year and may cost industry as much as $5 billion a year.

Bringing it closer to home, a large percentage of marital quarrels and severe emotional conflicts between women and their children occur during these "black days."

During this time, women are most prone to accidents, and schoolgirls do very poor work, are forgetful and unpunctual, says Dr. Katharina Dalton of the University College Hospital in London.

Premenstrual-tension symptons include a number of physical ones, such as headaches, backaches, and a feeling of heaviness. Some women gain as much as three to six pounds, mainly due to water accumulation in the body tissues, and experience swelling of parts of the body.

Beyond the physical are the psychological telltales: irritability, depression, tenseness, jittery nerves, anxiety, temper tantrums, and lassitude. These are the symptoms that are really dangerous.

Not all women fall prey to or suffer all of the symptoms. A study made among normal, healthy females indicates that nearly one out of three females suffers pretty regularly from some form of premenstrual tension, and at least four out of five experience one or more of its symptoms from time to time.

Premenstrual tension is rare among young girls, who are most likely to complain of menstrual cramps. But it frequently starts in the 20s and worsens in a woman during her 30s. Premenstrual irritability seems to be much commoner among married women than single girls. It hits 50 percent of the women of childbearing age. Whatever merits or demerits the "pill" may have, about half of the six to eight million women on it get relief from tension, and almost 90 percent from menstrual cramps.

What causes this witchy time? Doctors agree on one thing: the causes of premenstrual tension are as complex as woman herself.

Overproduction of some hormones in relation to others has been offered by some medical authorities as an explanation. This hormonal imbalance causes the body to retain an abnormal amount of salt and water. The increase of fluid retention can account for feelings of heaviness and swelling of breasts, legs, and other body extremities. Other researchers also note that the blood sugar level goes haywire. This fluctuation in blood sugar level is thought to be responsible for the anxiety, depression, jitters, lassitude, and irritation.

But whatever the basic cause may be, the result is a physical condition that responds to medical treatment. And when the physical condition is effectively treated, the symptoms, both physical and psychological, are usually relieved as well.

Because each woman's symptoms and complaints vary and may be peculiar to her situation, treatment can range from use of simple pain relievers to psychotherapy. In trying to reduce the water retention, normalize the blood-sugar level, and treat symptoms, physicians use many different kinds of prescription and nonprescription drugs, along with simple high-protein, low-salt diets.

The new medications include hormones, tranquilizers, sedatives, and diuretics (compounds which reduce water in body tissues). Among the popular drugs on the market are Pre-Mens tablets, Pre-Mens capsules, Daprisal tablets, Cyclex tablets, Pamprin tablets, and Trendar tablets. Some of these—such as Pre-Mens tablets and Pre-Mens capsules—are designed to help prevent or alleviate the premenstrual-tension syndrome through multidimensional relief of basic underlying factors.

In any case, it's always advisable to consult your family physician about what specific treatment should be prescribed for your particular premenstrual symptoms.

Both physicians and psychiatrists stress that you shouldn't confuse slight premenstrual discomfort with helplessness. If you feel merely a little edgy or tired for a day or two, you're probably a lucky lady who takes the cycle in stride.

If your edginess seems more like a cliff-hanger, then discuss your problems both with your family doctor and husband. Tell your husband how guilty you feel over your loss of control, and be honest enough not to use these days as a license to nag. In fact, recent work by Dr. William Masters and Mrs. Virginia Johnson of the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation in St. Louis, suggests that sexual relations culminating in orgasm may also relieve premenstrual irritability. This is something you should talk over with your husband—especially if you notice yourself having an increased sex drive before your period; many women do.

Above all, don't resign yourself to premenstrual tension. The myth of this needless misery should be forever dispelled. If you suffer from it regularly, often, or just sometimes, you can do something about it. Thanks to new medical research and knowledge, you can use the results to maintain your dignity, efficiency, and happiness on the job or at home. ◆

JON M. LINDBERGH SAYS:

"Let's Start Talking Sense

In an exclusive interview, this famed oceanographer answers vital questions about what the seas can—and cannot—do to solve man's problems

Jon Lindbergh emerges from midget sub after returning from undersea survey in Pacific.

The oceans, which cover 70 percent of the earth's surface, have been talked about as a potential living space and source of unlimited amounts of food when and if man exhausts land resources. Are such claims realistic?

It is true that the oceans have enormous potential, but in the present flurry of interest about them many people, including some who should know better, are coming to regard the oceans as an alternative to land. Too many people feel we can be less concerned about our problems of overpopulation, pollution, inadequate food, and diminishing natural resources because we have the oceans as an ace-in-the-hole.

Those who look to the ocean for ultimate answers are deceiving themselves. For instance, Government officials and others who talk about building cities on the ocean floor to relieve the earth's overpopulation are dreaming science fiction. The technology to build underwater cities of steel and concrete capsules into which we could stuff people would be possible but vastly expensive. It would be much cheaper and even perhaps more desirable to live in a hole in the ground. And the idea that people of the future will be swimming down underwater streets with aqua-lungs on their daily rounds of activities has little more realistic possibility than does the idea of moving the world population to the moon.

It is another myth, although a popular one, that the ocean as a food source can prevent the mass starvation that is expected to begin in many countries in a few years because of excess population. The most optimistic, reliable estimates are that we can multiply the quantity of food we derive from the sea by perhaps 20. Pessimists claim we have already reached our limit. I think the truth is somewhere in between. The ocean may allow us a little more time but if we are unable to control the real problem—the population explosion—we will quickly have far more hungry people and no new oceans to bail us out.

Is there danger that pollution may cut that time even shorter?

Yes, pollution of the ocean is a serious threat from several standpoints. Both by accident and design, we use the ocean as a cesspool. Oil from leaking wells and tankers, and human and industrial wastes are obvious examples of pollution. Less visible but much more dangerous are DDT and other persistent pesticides washing down from forests and farmlands. These are affecting the oceans even in the remotest parts of the world. Some of these pollutants are now contaminating and even killing certain sea life and may eventually upset the oceans' whole ecological balance. Certain other chemicals and radioactive wastes are also potentially very dangerous.

This, of course, threatens the ocean as a food source. Already some table fish caught off California have been banned from commerce because of their high DDT concentration. Shellfish from New York waters may be spreading such diseases as hepatitis. High concentrations of persistent pesticides, such as DDT, are known to affect the basic life functions of the tiny planktonic organisms that live in the ocean. These organisms produce most of the oxygen we breathe. So it can easily be seen that their alteration would be a most alarming factor.

What about mineral wealth? Are vast quantities of gold, magnesium, zinc, aluminum, silver, uranium, and other valuable metals waiting on the ocean floor and dissolved in the sea water for us to mine?

The ocean can be broken down into two general regions—the continental shelves and slopes which are geological extensions of the continents themselves, and the deep-sea basins, which average over 10,000 feet in depth.

The sea floor under the continental shelves is believed to contain about the same proportion of hard-mineral wealth as the land. There are, however, many more problems involved in finding and extracting it. From what we can determine, the deep sea floor appears to contain considerably less mineral wealth than the land. Rock of the deep-sea floor is largely basaltic, and such rock generally is mineral-poor.

However, there are some exceptions. For instance, manganese nodules, averaging a few ounces in weight, but occasionally ranging up to several hundred pounds, cover extensive areas of the deep-sea floor all over the world. There are trillions of tons of these, containing some very desirable metals: nickel, copper, cobalt, manganese.

The problem is that the richest ones tend to be very deep—15,000 feet or more. We have not yet been able to develop a method of recovering and refining them at a cost that makes it worthwhile.

With regard to minerals dissolved in sea water, we already obtain much of our salt and most of our magnesium from sea water. We also recover bromine and certain other resources. However, some of the more romantic elements in solution, such as gold, are unlikely to be recovered economically in the near future.

Realistically speaking, what benefits will we derive from the oceans in the 1970s?

During this decade we will probably quadruple our oil and natural-gas production from the ocean. About 75 percent of our energy sources are from petroleum products. We are now pumping oil from the ground in the lower 48 states faster than we are discovering new reserves. Natural gas, which is one of the cleanest energy sources, is already in a state of critical shortage. For these reasons, it is vitally important that we develop sub-sea hydrocarbon resources.

We can expect in the '70s to recover significantly more hard minerals from the continental shelves. Already there is important off-shore tin-dredging activity in the Far East. The British are obtaining more than 10 percent of their sand and gravel to make concrete from off-shore. We can expect the same in the U.S.

Diamonds are being mined from the sea floor off Southwest Africa, and although the operation is relatively small, it became profitable during the last year. Much of the world's titanium ore, used in spacecraft and supersonic aircraft, now comes from beaches in Florida, Australia, and Brazil. We can expect to see the development of such ore lying off-shore. There are interesting prospects for off-shore gold mining, particularly if the price of gold should be raised.

ABOUT JON LINDBERGH

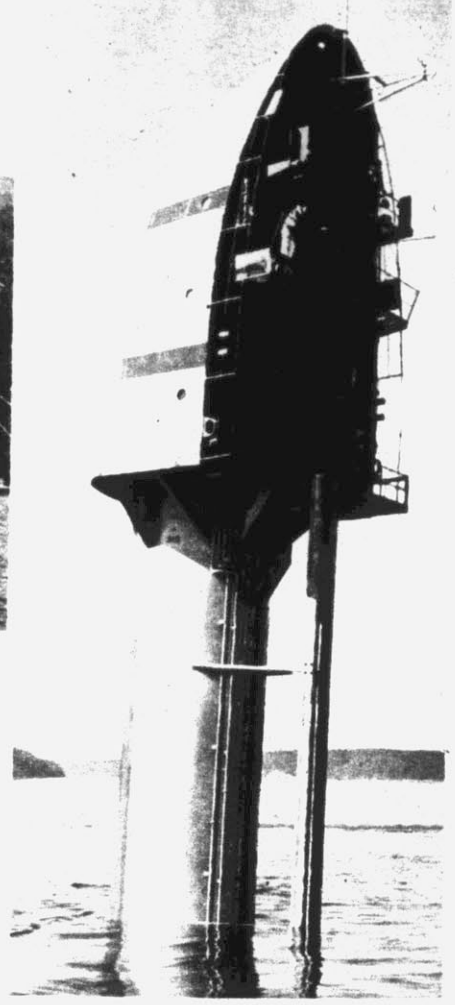

The son of pioneer aviator Charles Lindbergh and authoress Anne Morrow Lindbergh, Jon M. Lindbergh began his undersea career as a Naval demolition expert. Since then, his extensive experience and enterprise in ocean research have been credited by Scientific American Magazine with "helping to establish a new branch of engineering." He now serves as consultant to Ocean Systems, Inc., a company engaged in sea exploration, is chairman of the Oceanographic Commission of the State of Washington, and makes his home on Bainbridge Island, Wash.

FLIP ship (floating instrument platform) stands upright in water or "flips" to give scientists stable lab for sea study.

I think we'll see important changes in the fishing industry. We will to a far greater extent practice controlled "farming" of fish rather than rely so heavily on the catch-as-catch-can hunting that goes on today. Already in Japan, commercial fish and shrimp farms have been set up in shallow, protected salt waters where the fish are fed and "harvested" under controlled conditions. One company in America will attempt to harvest shrimp commercially from a farm off Florida this year. Many others are doing extensive research in the cultivation of lobsters, salmon, pompano, and other very high-value sea life. There has been speculation that fish will be contained in these "farms" by air-bubble fences, or perhaps they'll be herded by ultrasonic waves or by trained dolphins.

One of the key elements in the success of future "aquaculture" lies in experimental work by Dr. Lauren Donnelson at the University of Washington. He has made dramatic advances in the genetic manipulation of fish. He has produced special strains of salmon that return from the sea one year earlier and several pounds heavier than their parent "wild runs." This could do for the fishing industry what the replacement of the long-horn steer by the modern beef cow has done for the meat industry.

Also the ocean contains a vast new potential source of drugs and antibiotic compounds which we have only begun to develop. For example, there are reports that we may be able to get medicine from octopus saliva that can control high blood pressure and correct the irregular heart beat often associated with coronary attacks. Some researchers say that antibiotics to kill a wide variety of microbes and viruses may be perfected from sponges. Barnacle secretions may offer dentists a new way to glue fillings into teeth.

Is it possible that conflicts will arise between countries over ocean resources?

The limits of national jurisdiction in the ocean are not well defined. While rights of navigation should remain as broad as possible, a nation's sea-floor legal boundaries logically extend to the base of its continental slope. But since this boundary is at present legally uncertain, there may be a lot of loud talk, if not actual conflict because many nations have exaggerated ideas of easy riches to be plucked from the ocean.

Some scientists and politicans have argued that we have devoted too much attention to space while "neglecting" the oceans. Do you agree?

I think that some ocean spokesmen who are jealous of space spectaculars have helped create a false controversy between the oceans and outer space. Actually, the two areas are so dissimilar you can't legitimately compare them. In terms of usefulness to our daily lives, the ocean has far more potential than space, at least in the foreseeable future. But this age will not be remembered as the time when man exploited the sea.

History will look at this period as the time when man landed on the moon. Space exploration is important for the inspiration it gives us and perhaps for what it does for our national prestige.

A proposal has been made by some members of Congress that the United States create a "wet NASA," a multimillion-dollar Government agency to investigate and develop ocean resources. What do you think?

It's true that our ocean programs have been spread among a multitude of agencies and often uncoordinated. This needs improvement. But I question whether everything should be put into the same pot, into one agency just because it is "wet." Management of off-shore resources ties in closely with management of on-shore resources, and ocean programs often have more relationship to some land programs than they do to other projects connected with the sea.

What is the proper role of Government then?

The basic role of the Government should be to coordinate in both the public and the private spheres the nation's development and use of the sea. We have a fixed amount of coast line. With the present expansion of our population and our economy, we must plan our use of the ocean wisely if we are to obtain the maximum over-all benefit and properly apportion all the different uses—transportation, industry, resource extraction, conservation, recreation, and fisheries.

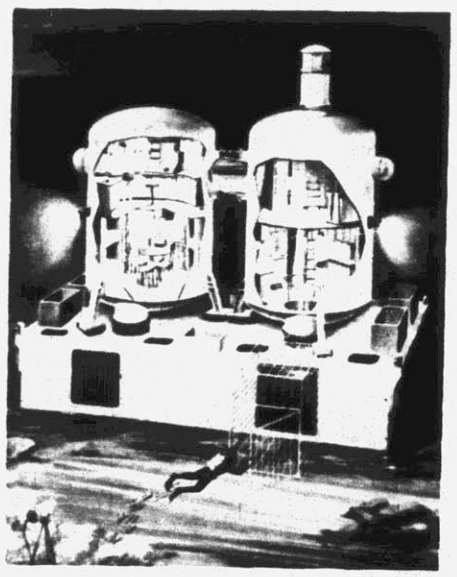

The proper management of our coastal zones is particularly important since most of our population lives in close proximity to these areas, and mismanagement is of long-standing and in some cases far advanced. For example, landfill, including trash and garbage deposits, has eaten up about 40 percent of San Francisco Bay, and if filling continues, it is believed that the resulting decrease in water surface there will bring a major alteration of climate to the Bay region.

A power company in Florida proposes to pour enough heated water from nuclear power plants into Miami's Biscayne Bay not only to radically affect marine life but make large parts of the bay too hot in summer for swimming.

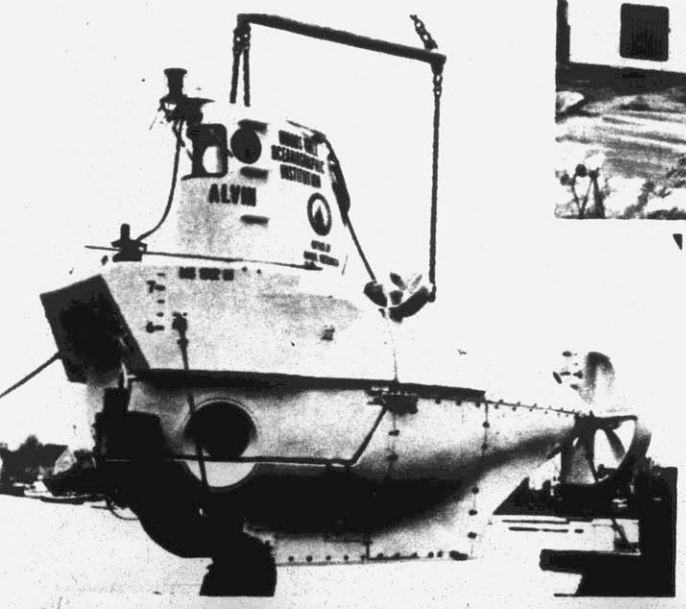

The U. S. should firmly establish its jurisdictions over our adjacent sea floors to the base of the continental slope and discuss with other nations the orderly development of the deep-sea floor. We should not wait until some moment of crisis to tackle these political problems.

Tough pollution control must be enforced by government with all deliberate speed if we are to preserve many of the oceans' benefits. Experts estimate that unless changes are made, industrial waste poured into the oceans will multiply by seven in the 1970s.

If we start right now talking sense' about the oceans and taking sensible actions as well, our benefits from the sea will be magnified many times over, and our use of it will accelerate for the next 100 years. ✦

What Makes Jean Seberg Run?

To keep up with lovely Jean Seberg, you need your own private jet and a pair of comfortable track shoes! Even her best friends have to go to their local movie houses to get a glimpse of her these days.

After finishing "Paint Your Wagon" in the U.S., then a film in Italy, she dashed off to the Spanish island of Majorca, where she and her estranged husband, author Romain Gary, keep a villa. But attempts to reach her there failed since there is no phone and only a nearby restaurant as a forwarding address. Was she back home in Paris, where she "shares" an apartment with Romain and their six-year-old son Alexander Diego? No, she was in Hollywood filming "Airport."

Well, actually she wasn't in Hollywood because she suddenly flew back to Paris to be with her son. Meanwhile, Jean was already making plans to move—lock, stock, and make-up kit—to a remote section of Mexico, where she would be filming "Macho Callahan."

Once cornered and settled down for a chat, Jean talks about her faltering marriage to Romain Gary and, lovingly, about her son Diego, and where she's going to live next. "I broke up our marriage," Jean was quoted as saying in a Hollywood column. "I am a bad liar, and I tell Romain everything," Jean allegedly said. But friends close to the couple know that Jean and Romain are two very different personalities— he can be overbearing, and she can be terribly independent.

"Romain and I will remain friends," said Jean as she plotted out her future. "There's no reason not to just because we're divorcing. But I don't want to make my home in France any more, where all of my friends are his friends. I can't establish an identity of my own. I'm also beginning to miss speaking English. The solution will be to get a house in England, where I have friends. When I'm not working, I'll divide my time between London and Paris, where Diego will be going to school." Diego is Romain's only child, and he wants his son to be raised as a Frenchman.

Jean admits that age (she was 30 last November) has helped her to accept disappointments and defeats a little more gracefully. And she has had her share of setbacks. The petite blonde from Marshalltown, Iowa, managed to appear in a number of film flops early in her career, including "Saint Joan" and "Bonjour Tristesse."

Her previous marriage to playboy-lawyer Francois Moreuil was also unsuccessful, but through him Jean met French film director Jean-Luc Godard. He cast Jean in "Breathless," with Jean-Paul Belmondo, which was a turning point in both her career and life.

The film was a smash international success, and Jean was once again in demand. In Hollywood, Jean and her husband were introduced to the then French Consul-General, Romain Gary. A friendship began between Jean and Gary, which turned into romance. They were married in 1963.

They had homes in Paris, Greece, the South of France, Majorca—and all, it's said, were kept in Gary's name, though Jean contributed substantially to the financing. All along, she retained her American citizenship. Her homeland ties have remained strong. So has the call of her profession, which she admits she cannot give up. "Acting is my craft," she insists. "When work calls, I pack up my make-up box and I am off.

"I am like the man who sharpens scissors and goes from place to place plying his trade. I never know where I will be next. I couldn't ask a husband to keep up with that, could I?" ◆

President, Society of American Historians

The Gallery of Great Americans will be open to the public.

AMERICAN FREEDOM WILL SOON BE 200 YEARS OLD. This is but a fortnight in the history of civilization. In this short time a great country has been forged out of the toughness of the American spirit. Free men and women did it. Many of them from humble beginnings.

It is time that the men and women who have contributed most to our American heritage be given an appropriate tribute—a permanent commemoration that can serve as an inspiration to the youth of today, and tomorrow.

The Franklin Mint has resolved to do just that —to establish a permanent Gallery of Great Americans at Franklin Center, Pennsylvania, near the birthplace of American freedom almost two centuries ago. The Gallery will become a constantly expanding, living center of national pride with permanent exhibits dramatically telling the stories and portraying the achievements of the Great Americans honored.

To give as many people as possible the opportunity to become acquainted with the Gallery, The Franklin Mint will also produce and distribute a series of finely engraved commemorative medals immortalizing each of the men and women who are selected to be included in this historic shrine.

A distinguished group of citizens, acting as an advisory board, has selected one person in each of twelve categories to be honored in the first year. These Great Americans, pictured above, will be the subjects of the 12 commemorative medals to be minted in Solid Bronze and Sterling Silver during 1970, and soon thereafter their achievements will be magnificently portrayed in individual exhibits in the Gallery.

Who should follow these men and women into the Gallery of Great Americans in 1971? What other Great Americans are most deserving of this exceptional tribute?

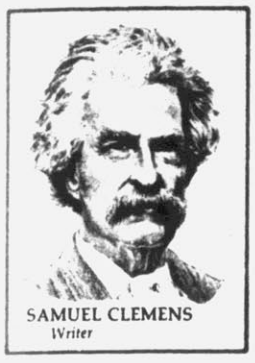

The selections for 1971 and future years will be made by you, and by other interested citizens—in the most democratic manner, by ballot. Our board of advisors' nominations for 1971 appear on the ballot at the right. Now, the choice is yours. Cast your vote for one nominee in each category—or, if you prefer, write in your own selections.

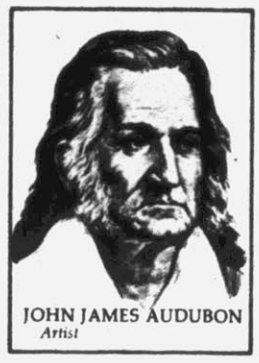

Long after this historic celebration is past, the commemorative medals struck in response to this balloting will form an imperishable record of our nation's history—just as minted likenesses of Pericles and the Caesars are part of our legacy from Greece and Rome.

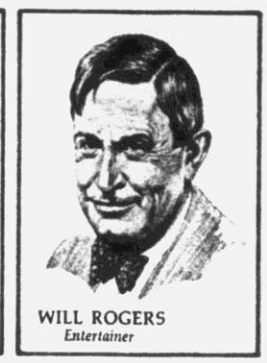

Your Vote Makes You Eligible to Acquire a Proof Set

First Edition Proof Sets of this heirloom series of commemorative medals are available only to those participating in this election.

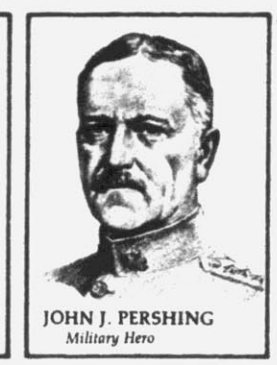

It is important to note that there is no obligation to subscribe to a Proof Set. On the contrary, it is a privilege extended exclusively to those who

Your own personalized Proof Set

If you decide to exercise your option to acquire a Proof Set, each medal will be individually struck in your choice of Solid Bronze or Sterling Silver—and will be inscribed with your personal subscription number on its rim—a perpetual certification of its authenticity and First Edition Proof status.

Minting of the Proof Sets will begin in July 1970. The first two medals will be issued in July, then two per month for the remaining 5 months of the year. In 1971 and thereafter, only one medal per month will be issued. In order to maintain your subscription privilege beyond 1971, you must continue to participate in the annual elections. This will also give you the satisfaction of knowing you are a continuing part of this exciting commemoration of our American Heritage.

There is a limit of one Proof Set per voting subscriber. The cost is $8.75 per medal if you choose your Proof Set to be minted in Sterling Silver or $3.50 per medal if you specify Solid Bronze.

Please give your ballot the careful and immediate consideration it warrants, and mail it promptly. It affords you a rare opportunity to take your place in what our late President, John F. Kennedy, called "the high court of history." At the same time, if you exercise your privilege to subscribe to a First Edition Proof Set, you will be acquiring a collection of significant historical and educational value—an heirloom you personally helped to create.

The medals are 39 mm in diameter (larger than a silver dollar).

Handsome 8 x 10 inch plaques for each year, which can either be framed or kept in their original slipcase, are included with each First Edition Proof Set.

All ballots and subscriptions must be postmarked no later than July 4, 1970.

Collectors prize this symbol. It is the hallmark of The Franklin Mint, an assurance of flawless quality which will be impressed on every medal in this series. Announcing the Official United Nations 25th Anniversary Commemorative Medal

In The Cause Of Peace, Justice and Progress

On June 26, 1945, delegates from 50 nations signed a Charter pledging ". . . respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all"—thereby founding the United Nations. • Today, as this world body prepares to mark its 25th Anniversary, it represents our strongest moral force in the quest for worldwide peace and freedom. But the task is monumental. Much remains to be done. And much depends upon popular support throughout the world. • With the conviction that this anniversary celebration should involve as many people as possible, the United Nations General Assembly has authorized the minting of an official commemorative medal proclaiming the anniversary theme—Peace, Justice, Progress. • This outstanding collector's item minted by The Franklin Mint, will be a lasting symbol of an historic milestone in man's progress toward international goodwill and brotherhood.

Back-Yard Clambake

An ancient eating tradition along New England's shore is the clambake. Bring this simplified, equally delicious family-sized version to your own back yard.

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ End some of these lazy summer days out-of-doors feasting on meals cooked leisurely in foil packets put onto a hot grill. As the food cooks to a delicious succulence, sit back, relax, and enjoy yourself while whetting your appetite for the feast to come.

Back-Yard Clambake

18-in. heavy-duty aluminum foil, 28-in. length
Cheesecloth
Seaweed or rockweed (available at fish market), thoroughly washed
1 doz. unopened steamer clams, well scrubbed and rinsed
Half of a 2½-lb. broiler-fryer chicken (split lengthwise), rinsed
1 (1 to 1¼ lbs.) lobster, well rinsed
1 ready-to-cook ear of corn (fresh or frozen)
1 baking potato, scrubbed, rinsed, and cut lengthwise in quarters

1. For each packet, line the length of foil with a piece of cheesecloth several inches longer than foil.

2. Form three layers on the piece of cheesecloth using seaweed, clams, chicken, and lobster in that order. Tuck in the corn ear (halves, if long) and potato quarters. Sprinkle lightly with salt and grind pepper over all. Bring the cheesecloth up to cover the food. Bring two opposite edges of foil together over mixture and wrap securely using a drugstore fold; turn up ends and fold to seal.

3. Set packet on a hot grill and cook 1 hr., or until chicken is tender. (Cover grill with hood if necessary during cooking.)

4. Carefully pour the broth from packet into a cup for dunking the clams or for drinking. Accompany with melted butter or margarine. Serve with crusty bread, which has been wrapped in foil and heated on grill; slice before serving.

Note: If substituting South African rock lobster tails for the lobster, put 2 small tails, still frozen, on seaweed with the clams, then chicken, corn, and quartered potato. If clams are not used, pour ¼ cup canned clam juice cocktail over all along with the seasonings.

Frank-Vegetable Medley

18-in. heavy-duty aluminum foil, 4 long lengths
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
¼ teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
6 tablespoons olive, or other salad, oil
2 large zucchini, sliced
2 large ripe tomatoes, cut in wedges
1 small green pepper, cut in strips
6 green onions with tops, sliced
¼ cup snipped parsley
8 frankfurters
Bottled barbecue sauce

1. Pour wine vinegar into a bottle or jar having a tight-fitting cover. Add garlic; then a mixture of salt, chili powder, oregano, and basil. Cover and shake well. Add oil; shake until blended. Set aside.

2. Bring edges of each foil piece up slightly. Divide zucchini, tomato, green pepper, green onion, and parsley evenly among the packets. Vigorously shake mixture in bottle and spoon about 2 tablespoons evenly over vegetables in each packet.

3. Slit franks almost through lengthwise, spread cut surfaces generously with barbecue sauce, and gently press together. Put 2 franks into each packet.

4. For each packet, bring two opposite edges of foil together over mixture and wrap securely using a drugstore fold; turn up ends and fold to seal.

5. Set packets on a hot grill; cook 20 to 25 min., turning packets over once. Open packets and gently mix vegetables and franks with their juices before serving. Serve with crusty bread, which has been wrapped in foil and heated on the grill.

Are The Foods You Are Eating Today STARVING YOUR BRAIN?

Check the three vital symptoms below—and then read how ORDINARY FOODS—used in a new way—may actually be able to REFUEL your vital brain cells, ACTUALLY AVOID OR BANISH MANY KINDS OF MENTAL TROUBLE!

Yes, Dear Friend:

Please believe this—

The man or woman who is a "nervous wreck"—who is "torn apart" by anxiety and tension day after day—may actually be a victim of his own starved brain!

The man or woman who is plagued by a "fading memory" —who no longer can rely on his own good mind to feed back to him the vital information he must have—may also be a victim of that same starved brain.

And, most tragic of all, the man or woman who suffers from really drastic fatigue, depression, overwhelming fits of temper, and other signs of possible schizophrenia or paranoia or other mental disturbance—may also be a victim of his own starved brain!

And now every one of them can do something about it! Can fight that damaging BRAIN STARVATION with ORDINARY FOOD! Can do it in their OWN HOME—with nothing more than a few simple directions, and food you can get in any supermarket!

HIS MAY BE THE MOST CONTROVERSIAL BOOK YOU EVER READ!

For in it, a crusading judge opens an entire new vista of hope for the ill—especially for the mentally troubled—and strikes at the very roots of some orthodox beliefs about medicine.

Tom R. Blaine was a practicing attorney in 1920. He has been an Oklahoma state judge since 1942. He began to suspect that even many "insane" people, juvenile delinquents, and actual criminals were in trouble because they suffered from low blood sugar; that is, they simply were not getting enough food for their brains.

Working with physicians and laboratory men, he proved his theory and expanded it. The fact is that almost anyone, of any age, who suffers a lack of vitality, nagging ill-health, and flagging mental powers, may be a victim of low blood sugar. And the best, safest, easiest way to restore the normal content of sugar in the bloodstream is with food and food supplements—exactly as Judge Blaine describes in this trail-blazing book!

Try it at our risk, today!

What Doctors Discovered About The Vital Food Substance That Keeps Your Brain "On The Job".

What is this vital substance that is so absolutely necessary to your well-being? It is BLOOD SUGAR—your body's natural fuel—carried by your bloodstream to every gland and organ. And only recently have doctors discovered that millions of people have TOO LITTLE natural sugar in their blood!

Yes, if you feel that your brain is hampered in any of those three critical ways) or if a loved one shows signs of the mental trouble that strikes one family out of every three), your brain may not be receiving enough BLOOD SUGAR. So you are STARVING YOUR BRAIN no matter how well-balanced your diet seems to be!

Can You Restore The Blood-Sugar Balance Of Your Body— And So Restore The Vital Functions That Have Gone Wrong?

Yes, it is possible, practical and EASY in millions of cases! You are invited to send for the book that explains the simple method—a book you read without risk. In it, you are going to see, simply and clearly:

The precise kinds of ORDINARY FOOD, sometimes with a few vitamin "extras", that can restore health to many suffering minds, and has brought even the seemingly insane back to useful, happy living.

How the same ORDINARY FOOD also works wonders for such common ailments as headache, fatigue, irritability, memory lag, anxiety, depression.

How the same ORDINARY FOOD also refuels the entire body, to help you get into splendid youth-condition from head to toe.

Based On Years Of Breakthrough Medical Research!

Behind those statements stands the work of such physicians as Dr. Abram Hoffer and Dr. Joseph Tobin; Nobel Prize winner Dr. Linus Pauling; famed nutrition expert Judge Tom R. Blaine, and other researchers of equal stature. The entire book is the dedicated work of Judge Blaine, who has winnowed thousands of cases to help you see the nutrition cause of your own problems—and how a simple, pleasant way of eating may quickly help you banish troubles like these.

Are you depressed, nervous, unhappy? Read a doctor's story about a woman with marriage troubles who had been deeply depressed and miserable all her life. She got rid of her misery—thanks to simple changes in nutrition and a vitamin you can buy in any drugstore. (page 41)

Does any member of your family suffer from schizophrenia?

Read a letter from a young man who conquered schizophrenia—not through psychiatry—but through simple changes in nutrition. This letter also reveals significant food traps for schizophrenics. Even if you are not schizophrenic, avoiding these same food traps may make a priceless difference to your health and peace of mind. (page 104)

Do you suffer from gastro-intestinal sluggishness?

This (and scores of other common symptoms) can be a warning of blood-sugar deficiency. Read about a simple food supplement that is known by several names. Get it by any name! See how it aids the entire gastro-intestinal tonus. (page 156)

Extra added bonus—

Have you had, or are you threatened by heart failure or stroke?

See why your present meals may contain a "heart mistake" food that nobody ever warned you about before. And why you may be avoiding a delicious type of food that should not bother your heart in the least! (page 126)

Why Did It Take So Long To Discover The Importance Of The Natural Brain-Food Diet In Both Mental And Physical Health?

Because, as you will see in Judge Blaine's fascinating book, blood-sugar deficiency is the GREAT MASQUERADER. Your own doctor will confirm that people have been treated for years for other conditions (such as ulcers, arthritis, every kind of indigestion, exhaustion, blurred vision, paranoid delusion) before it was discovered that blood-sugar deficiency may be the possible cause of all these diseases—and many more! (Of course, we suggest that you consult with your own doctor if you suffer from any of these serious ailments.)

Of course, there still are diehard medical men who go on treating symptoms instead of the basic causes of illness and debility. There still are drug companies who do not like to hear that the best medicine, in some cases, is food alone. There still are psychiatrists charging $50 an hour, for years of treatment—when a month of proper "brain-food" diet, costing no more than your ordinary diet, may do the job. (And a simple test, described in this book, can tell you unmistakably if you suffer from low blood sugar, rather than, for example, high blood sugar, where these rules do not apply.)

So it took courage to write this book—the courage of a dedicated jurist and health researcher who says that WRONG NUTRITION dooms millions to misery; and that the right kind of "brain-food" nutrition can often lift such people onto a high new plane of mental balance, efficiency, and the kind of physical well-being that money cannot buy.

FIVE MINUTES THAT CAN CHANGE YOUR LIFE

The moment you receive Judge Blaine's easy-to-read book, turn to pages 37 and 38. In five minutes or less, read the MASTER FOOD-LIST for "brain-food" nutrition! Meats! Seafoods! Vegetables! Dairy products! Desserts! Drinks! The list will delight you—and so will the delicious, hearty meals you eat . . . plus special snacks between meals and at bedtime!

Also in this important book: FOOD SECRETS that brought a full recovery from symptoms of arthritis and senility—special FOOD SECRETS that make old age wait—FOOD SECRETS that help your eyes, help teeth and gums, help the skin to be firm and youthful—FOOD SECRETS that strengthen the entire system of adrenal glands—plus all the especially important FOOD SECRETS (so easy to follow!) that help to strengthen and tonic YOUR MIND, no matter how many years you have suffered!

QUIZ

Sex Appeal and You

It's the rare person who doesn't want to be attractive to others—particularly members of the opposite sex.

Nothing is more flattering to the male ego than to feel that women find him both interesting and intriguing. And a woman, whether she is married or single, likes to feel that she has what it takes to attract and hold a man. This true-false quiz presents findings which take the guesswork and speculation out of what things make a person attractive to the opposite sex.

1. A man is most susceptible to a woman's charms during the late afternoon hours.

2. If a girl you are interested in tends to avoid your gaze, it's a sign the attraction isn't mutual and your personality isn't registering with her.

3. A quick way to make a favorable impression on a member of the opposite sex is to draw him out about his pet peeves about people.

4. You will make yourself more attractive if you cultivate a subtle air of mystery.

5. You would be more attractive to the opposite sex if you were extremely good-looking, had a terrific sense of humor, were highly intelligent, and exuded an air of complete self-confidence and assurance.

6. To attract a man and hold his interest, it's important that a girl be a good conversationalist.

7. A man interested in a certain girl will usually do best using the romantic approach since women are more romantic-minded.

8. Everyone likes to be appreciated, and a shrewd and sure way of boosting your stock with the opposite sex is to bestow flattering compliments whenever possible.

ANSWERS

1. False. And, contrary to notions about the effects of moonlight and music, a recent biological study by the British Medical Research Council shows that men are most romantic-minded and most vulnerable to a lady's charms between 4-o'clock in the morning and noon.

2. False. The exact opposite is far more likely to be the case: she avoids prolonged eye-to-eye contact because you are registering so strongly with her that she is fearful of being swept completely off her feet.

3. True. University of Texas studies show that, other things being equal, when two people discover they share a common enemy or aversion, their mutual attractiveness immediately increases.

4. False. Georgia State College studies show that in most cases the opposite is true, that people who reveal their true selves, are far more attractive to others.

5. False. Studies show that people who have all these traits are likely to come on so strong that other persons feel overwhelmed.

6. False. Surveys show that one of men's pet peeves about women is that they are long on conversation but short on listening.

7. False. Studies at Florida State University have shown that women are far less romantic-minded than men, take a much more matter-of-fact attitude toward love and romance—and are more prone than the male to be ruled by practical than by romantic considerations.

8. False. Not only is is not sure-fire, it's often sure to back fire. At best, the flatterer's gambit is a risky one. If the recipient sees through him or senses that he is insincere (and a woman's intuition is often a man's undoing in this respect), then he runs the chance of being immediately branded a phony.

WHY PLANT A GROUND COVER?

In many areas and situations, ground covers are more appropriate and more satisfactory than turf. They are able to grow and thrive in sun OR shade, and in poor soil.

On steep slopes where mowing is difficult, ground cover is much more effective and much less laborious to maintain than grass. Ground covers hold the soil as well as turf and the textures are far more interesting.

Small areas of grass are a continual chore to keep mown and trimmed but ground covers require almost no care. They are excellent protection and soil conditioners. They hold the fallen leaves from blowing away, thus helping to add annually to the humus content.

WHY CREEPING RED SEDUM?

One of Sedum's most valuable assets is its full time beauty. Lush foliage begins in early spring, and star-shaped scarlet flowers delight the viewer from late June through September. The attractive semi-evergreen foliage lasts well into winter, maintaining its rich green and bronze color nearly all year round.

Besides being one of the loveliest of the ground covers, Sedum also rates high on the other requirements. It is hardy, grows well in sun or partial shade, in sandy soil, clay soil, or good soil.

Its thick foliage and root system hold the soil on slopes or banks. The neat 3-4" cover forms a dense perennial mat to bring green and scarlet beauty to slopes, borders, rocky areas, anywhere beauty and durability are needed.

Each plant will easily and quickly spread to fill one sq. ft. Sedum spreads evenly, maintains its uniform smooth beauty at all stages of growth. Unlike some other ground covers, Sedum, also called "Dragon's Blood", stays where you put it — does not straggle out into places where it doesn't belong. Sedum is almost indestructible, enduring and persisting against heavy climatic and nutritional odds.

FULLY GUARANTEED

All House of Wesley plants are guaranteed to be of high quality, exactly as advertised, and to arrive in good healthy condition. If you are not completely satisfied with these hardy Sedum RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY for replacement or complete refund. You may keep the plants. (One year limit).

SEND this Special Offer Coupon TODAY to receive your Red Sedum and Peonies!

Now is a Good Time to Plant RED SEDUM!

Your young Sedum plants will establish themselves and begin to spread a few days after planting. In a month or so they will already be 3-4 inches in diameter. They may lose their foliage as the first winter progresses but will leaf out again in early spring. During a long growing season they may reach 12" in diameter, always maintaining their neat regulated shape.

I've watched the ads for colds and flu

QUIPS AND QUOTES

When LBJ was in Vietnam on an inspection tour, he put on Army fatigues and walked among the troops. One GI called out to him, "Hey, soldier! You look just like President Johnson."

"I am President Johnson," LBJ replied.

The soldier shook his head in amazement. "Boy," he finally said, "you sure must have a tough draft board."

Both my sister-in-law and I were expecting our third child. Since each of us had two little girls, my mother-in-law expressed a natural-enough desire to be blessed with a pair of grandsons. She must have irked my young niece, who burst out:

"Boys, boys. All I ever hear is boys. Even at Sunday School we sing hims—not hers." —Joanne Perper

10,000 PATIENTS LOSE POUNDS AND INCHES QUICKLY AND SAFELY WITH NEVER BEING HUNGRY.

'I lost 85 lbs. of ugly fat in only 2 short months!'

YES, THIS IS MY ASTOUNDING STORY OF HOW I LOST 85 POUNDS OF EXTRA WEIGHT IN ONLY 60 DAYS . . . NO DIETS . . . NO CALORIE COUNTING . . . NEVER HUNGRY AND COMPLETELY SAFE.

In the summer of 1967 I noticed a report written by a New York Doctor who was specializing in Internal Medicine. These people included Doctors, Nurses, Dieticians, Life Insurance Experts, Actors, Models, and others who had Never Been Able to Reduce Successfully No Matter How Hard They Tried. Yes, these people were permitted as many meals as they wanted — No calories to count. They ate as much or more than ever . . . Were never hungry AND TO EVERYONE'S AMAZEMENT SAW POUNDS MELT AWAY WITH UNBELIEVABLE SPEED IN THE FIRST 3 DAYS OF FOLLOWING THIS METHOD. Some people actually LOST 25 POUNDS THE FIRST WEEK. IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: A WHISPERED MESSAGE. THEREAFTER SIR LOWARY ARMS HIMSELF AND LEADS A TROOP OF MEN-AT-ARMS CLATTERING FROM THE COURTYARD HEADING WESTWARD TOWARD THE KING'S HIGHWAY, TEN MILES AWAY. AND DALE, TREMBLING WITH RAGE, WATCHES HIM GO AND WONDERS HOW LONG HE CAN BEAR UP UNDER HIS INSULTS.

THE MAID APPROACHES, QUIET AS A SHADOW. "LEAVE THIS HATEFUL PLACE. IT IS NOT WORTH SAVING, AND SIR LOWARY PLANS TO KILL YOU. HIS INSULTS ARE FOR A PURPOSE."

"WHEN YOUR PATIENCE WEARS THIN OR YOUR HONOR IS QUESTIONED YOU WILL HAVE TO CHALLENGE HIM TO A DUEL. IF YOURS IS THE CHALLENGE, HIS WILL BE THE CHOICE OF WEAPONS. HE WILL CHOOSE THE WHIPMACE, WITH WHICH HE IS EXPERT. NEVER HAS HE LOST."

"I AM LORD MARVYN'S DAUGHTER BY HIS FIRST WIFE. THE PRESENT LADY MARVYN IS MY STEPMOTHER. IN THIS PLACE I AM NOTHING. I DARE NOT RAISE MY VOICE, A SHADOW!" HER EYES GROW MOIST: "NEVER IN MY WHOLE LIFE HAVE I SET FOOT OUTSIDE THE CASTLE!"

NEXT MORNING THE SOUNDS FROM THE COURTYARD SIGNAL THE RETURN OF SIR LOWARY. DALE DESCENDS, BUT THIS TIME HE IS ARMED.

HAL FOSTER

THERE HAS BEEN FIGHTING. SOME ARE MISSING, OTHERS WOUNDED, PACK HORSES ARE LOADED WITH GOODS. WITHOUT A DOUBT LOWARY HAS BEEN ON A RAID. AND FOR DALE THE SIMPLE TASK OF UNTANGLING AN INHERITANCE LOOMS AS A MAJOR PROBLEM.
