GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Dr. Guy T. McBride, Jr., vice president of the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., is the new president of the Colorado School of Mines.

McBride will assume the presidency Sept. 1, filling the post vacated June 1 by Dr. Orlo Childs. He resigned to become vice president for research at Texas Technological University.

Dr. McBride has also been designated by the school's board of trustees as a professor of mineral engineering, and is expected to do some teaching.

He currently is based at Aurora, N.C., where he serves as general manager of the phosphate division of Texas Gulf. McBride was first employed by the firm as a consultant in 1950, and became a fulltime company employe in 1958.

He has served as dean of students and associate professor of chemical engineering at Rice University in Houston, and also worked as research associate in Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he received his doctroate. He was also an engineer for the Standard Oil Co., of California.

Marine Armory Robbed

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (UPI) —An armory was raided and 11 weapons stolen at this sprawling Marine base Friday night. Security around President Nixon's compound nearby was immediately tightened.

The President is visiting the Western White House at San Clemente, Calif., 15 miles away, at the northern end of Camp Pendleton.

A Marine spokesman said a guard at the armory was assaulted but not seriously hurt. The spokesman said the raid was conducted by "three or four unknown assailants" in the staging battalion area of Camp Margarita at the base.

Taken were nine M16 automatic rifles, a grenade launcher and an automatic pistol.

After the raid, the base was sealed off and FBI arrived to talk to the guard. The robbery occurred at about 10:30 p.m., approximately the same time the presidential jet touched down at El Toro Marine Air Station north of here.

Miss Agnew At Shrine

TAOS, N.M. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's daughter Kim went to the centuries-old mountain altar of a group of northern New Mexico Indians Friday to worship their "great spirit."

The 14-year-old Kim said she found the religious shrine of the ancient Taos Pueblo Indians "more beautiful than I had imagined."

For 64 years, the 1,400-member tribe, which has occupied the area since about 1300 A.D., has been trying to recover ownership of its religious mountain sanctuary. Legislation is pending before the Senate Indian Affairs subcommittee that would grant them title to 48,000 acres around Blue Lake, high in the Carson National Forest.

Earlier this month, the White House endorsed the legislation. Miss Agnew came to New Mexico to help celebrate the administration's endorsement with the Indians.

Jordan Backs Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D—N. C., says the North Carolina Board of Elections took "the correct position" in voting to continue the state's literacy tests and maintain the voting age limit, of 21.

The elections board decided last week to disregard parts of the 1970 Voting Rights Act that would have abolished the literacy tests in counties where they are still administered and dropped the voting age to 18.

The decision, though explained as resulting from concern that the federal law called for violations of the North Carolina Constitution, drew criticism from at least one quarter—Dr. Reginald Hawkins.

Hawkins, a Charlotte dentist who heads a Negro group in the Democratic party, sent telegrams to Gov. Bob Scott and the Board of Elections denouncing the boards decision as "disrespect for the law."

But Jordan said Friday in Washington the decision was a good one because the act poses a basic constitutional question that needs resolution. He said the state should refuse to act "pending a court ruling on that section of the law."

Will Try Form Govm't

ROME (UPI) —Emilio Colombo, a chief architect of the Italian economic "miracle," agreed Saturday to try to form a new government that would end a 20-day-old national crisis.

The 50-year-old Christian Democrat and six-time Treasury Minister agreed during a brief meeting with President Giuseppe Saragat, who only two hours before completed a one-day round of political consultations.

Although he has long been a national political power, this was the first time Colombo had been asked to form a government and lead it as Premier.

Saragat summoned Colombo to the Quirinale Presidential Palace to ask him to make another effort at reviving the coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Unitarian Socialists and Republicans that had ruled for seven years.

Success would mean formation of the 32nd government since the fall of fascism in 1943. Failure could mean a Presidential decision to call new national elections three years ahead of schedule.

Nixon To Talk Economy

By EUGENE V. RISHER

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) —President Nixon begins a series of meetings with his top economic advisers this week to discuss the problem of balancing the 1972 federal budget without raising taxes.

Already the President and top Republicans have labeled the "spendthrift" Democratic-controlled Congress as the chief culprit in the nation's economic woes which is shaping up as one of the main issues in the November elections.

The President, accompanied by his wife, Pat, and daughter, Tricia, arrived at the western White House shortly before midnight Friday for a 10-day long working visit that was expected to focus on the problem of inflation and the budget he will submit to Congress next January.

Secret Service agents charged with protecting the lives of the First Family were informed of a raid on an armory at nearby Camp Pendleton Friday night that occurred at about the same time the President landed at his ocean-side compound located at the northern end of the sprawling marine base.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said no additional security measures were being taken beyond "the normal protective procedures which, of course, I can't discuss in any detail."

The President planned to attend the baseball game Sunday in nearby Anaheim between the California Angels and the Washington senators.

Nixon, who was reminded of the economic pinch people feel by signs sprouting from the crowds which greeted him during stops Friday in Fargo, N.D., and Salt Lake City, told newsmen in Washington last week that balancing the 1972 budget depended on two factors:

"One, the restraint the Congress shows now in this session with regarding to spending...and, second, the economic situation."

He said then that no tax reduction could be expected in 1972 and implied that tax increases rested primarily on the actions of Congress.

Record Border Belt Opening Is Anticipated

RALEIGH (AP) — A record opening day price average of about $71 was predicted Saturday for the South Carolina and Border North Carolina Belt which begins flue-cured tobacco sales Tuesday.

John H. Cyrus, tobacco marketing specialist for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, also said he looks for a price range averaging between $70 and $73 per hundred pounds on the various markets.

"The Border Belt has an unusually good crop, considering the amount of dry weather we had in June," Cyrus said in an interview. "The weather this month has been excellent. We have a good medium, thin-bodied crop with plenty of flavor and aroma."

South Carolina markets which begin sales Tuesday are Darlington, Conway, Dillon, Hemingway, Kingstree, Lake City, Lamar, Loris, Mullins, Pamlico and Timmonsville. The eight North Carolina markets include Fairmont, Fayetteville, Lumberton, Tabor City, Whiteville, Fair Bluff, Clarkton and Chadbourn.

Last year the South Carolina markets opened earlier along with Georgia and Florida markets and averaged a record high of $70.17 per hundred pounds on opening day. The North Carolina markets began sales the same date as this year, and had a record price average of $70.79.

"We expect full sales Tuesday," Cyrus said. "The North Carolina markets will sell a little more than four and one-half million pounds based on the current market schedule."

He estimated that at least 50 per cent of the tobacco crop in the Border Belt area has been harvested.

"There is an old saying that a dry June will turn out one of the better crops if you get good rains in July, and we did," Cyrus said.

He noted the average price support this year is $66.6 per hundred pounds, compared to $63.8 last year.

Cyrus said that on opening week the Border Belt markets will sell four hours per day for four days. Then the following week the schedule will be 4½ hours per day, Monday through Thursday.

He said the industrywide Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Committee amended a regulation this year providing stiff penalties for any warehouse that oversells its quota for one day and fails to make adjustments the next day.

Israel Leaning To Acceptance Of Peace Plan

By United Press International

Israel will accept America's Middle East peace plan, but only on condition there is an unconditional cease fire coupled with guarantees the Egyptians and Russians will not use it to beef up Suez Canal air defenses, authoritative Israeli political sources said Saturday night.

The sources said Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir and her cabinet would meet Sunday to approve the final form of israel's stand on the plan, which has already been accepted by Egypt. The plan calls for a ceasefire until Oct. 1, and resumption of negotiations among Egypt, Jordan and Israel under auspices of U.N. mediator Gunnar Jarring.

The sources said the Israeli acceptance of the U.S. peace plan was worked out after new assurances of Israel's safety by President Nixon were delivered to the Israeli ambassador in Washington and relayed to Mrs. Meir. Mrs. Meir and cabinet ministers belonging to her political party met Saturday night at her residence here.

Meantime Israeli warplanes streaked across the Suez Canal Saturday for the 65th consecutive day of bombing Egyptian front line positions, and Cairo said its planes shot down one Israeli Skyhawk. There was ground fighting on other fronts. There were these other major Mideast developments:

—Informed sources in Amman said Jordan would probably announce acceptance of the U.S. peace proposals within 24 hours, and sources in Cairo said Syria also has endorsed the move. President Nasser accepted for Egypt on Thursday.

—Some cabinet members in Jerusalem called publicly for rejection of the American peace plan. But Mrs. Meir met with U.S. Ambassador Walworth Barbour for 90 minutes Friday at Barbour's request, and diplomatic sources speculated he relayed Nasser's acceptance of the plan and urged her to follow suit.

Limited Proposal By U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States has offered a limited disarmament proposal to the Soviet Union that would freeze or reduce the size of the two nations' missile systems, informed sources said Saturday.

The sources said Gerard C. Smith, the chief U.S. disarmament negotiator delivered the porposal Friday at an one and one half hour meeting with the Soviet delegation at the U.S. Embassy in Vienna. The two nations are engaged in Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

According to the sources the proposal included these elements:

The two nations would agree to an overall numerical limitation on strategic launching systems, which are composed of land 3-missiles and sea-based missiles and strategic bombers.

Within this limitation a quota would be placed on the size of the Soviet fleet of the giant SS9 missile or any comparable missile that might be developed by either side.

The two nations would limit their antimissile defense systems, possibly by allowing them to encircle only Moscow and Washington. (The United States in 1969 authorized building of two ABM sites, in North Dakota and Montana.)

The U.S. proposal, at this stage, omits any proposal for limiting the deployment of multiple warheads or limiting tactical nuclear weapons and medium range missiles that are stationed in eastern and western Europe.

A description of the U.S. proposal was published today by The New York Times and subsequently confirmed by informed sources. The Times report appeared following a briefing by an administration official for a selected group of congressmen.

The arms control and disarmament agency, of which Smith is the director, declined to comment on the publication of the proposal. The disarmament officials were upset over the disclosure because of an agreement with the Soviet Union to kee, the substance of the Vienna talks strictly confidential.

'Reward' If Red Trawler Is Captured

FORT BRAGG, Calif. (UPI) —A grocer and other irate citizens offered a $1,658.50 reward Saturday to anyone capturing a Russian fishing trawler inside the 12-mile limit along the Northern California coast.

Jack Azevedo, who hoped his offer might tempt a "soldier of fortune," accused "weak-kneed and corwardly" officials in Washington of allowing repeated violations of territorial waters by a fleet of 17 Soviet trawlers.

But North Coast fishermen, whose boats are about 40 feet long, said trying to bring in one of the 300-foot trawlers would be "like a flea trying to arrest an elephant."

Azevedo, 36, who moved here seven months ago to operate a grocery store, said he'd be happy to pay the Coast Guard if they hauled a violator into Yolo Harbor at Fort Bragg.

"The reward is growing all the time," he added, "and if it gets big enough maybe some soldier of fortune will bring one of those Russian boats in."

The reward, which started at $150, was swelled by donations to $1,658.50 Saturday, including $40 put up by Azevedo himself. It was actually proferred by an informal organization called "American Waters for American Fishermen," which has two members—Azevedo and a fisherman's wife.

The grocer said his quarrel was with the federal government, specifically the State Department, which he accused of preventing the Coast Guard from doing its job.

He said the Soviet fleet was ruining Northern California fishing grounds because their tight-meshed nets don't allow small, young fish to escape.

Fishermen, who have long complained of the Russian competition, their small-holed nets, and their destruction of long-line tackle used locally, weren't rushing out to collect the reward.

Fifth Of 13 Alleged Weatherman Plotters Found

NEW YORK (UPI) —Jane Spielman, who authorities believe could tell the story of the mysterious explosion in a Greenwich Village townhouse that led to a full-scale federal investigation into the Weatherman radicals, surrendered Saturday to face bombing conspiracy charges.

Miss Spielman, 23, was the fifth of 13 alleged weathermen named in an indictment handed up Thursday by a federal grand jury in Detroit to be placed in federal custody. A nationwide search is under way for the other eight.

A short, stocky girl with long dark hair, wearing dungarees, a blue shirt and blue sunglasses, Miss Spielman appeared at FBI headquarters at midafternoon with her lawyer, William Crain.

She was taken handcuffed to U.S. District Court for arraignment.

Linda Sue Evans, 23, already was being held at Fort Dodge, Iowa, in connection with the Weathermen's October "Day of Rage" riots in Chicago when the new indictments were handed up. Dianne Marie Donghi, 21, was arrested here, Russell Neufeld, 22, was taken into custody in Chicago and Robert G. Burlingham, 24, surrendered in Boston.

Still sought by the FBI were Mark Rudd, 23, Bernadine Dohrn, 27, William Ayres, 25, Kathy Boudin, 27, Cathy Wilkerson, 25, Ronald Fliegelman, 26, Larry Grathwohl, 22, and Naomi Jaffen 27.

The Weathermen were accused of conspiring to destroy property, kill and injure people with bombings in New York, Chicago, Detroit and Berkeley, Calif.

Miss Spielman, who lives in New York but originally came from Miami, was accused also of being present at the Greenwich Village House where bombs were being assembled. The house was destroyed March 6 by an apparently accidental explosion which killed Weathermen Ted Gold and Diane Oughton and another believed to be Terry Robbins but never positively identified.

Bail of $50,000 each was set for Miss Donghi and Neufeld and $35,000 for Burlingham at their separate arraignments. But Miss Donghi was ordered released in her lawyer's custody Saturday by U.S. District Judge Frederick Van Pelt Bryan who said the high bail was "inappropriate" in her case, reduced it to $10,000 and gave her until Monday at 5 p.m. to put up $1,000 cash bond.

Candlewick Club's Membership Drive Progressing 'Well'

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A membership drive begun July 1 is progressing well according to the Candlewick Club's temporary co - chairmen, Bill McDonald and Paul Redgate.

"We'd like to have around 200 members during the first year," Redgate said. "Then we'll play it by ear and decide how many we feel compose a congenial group. We already have attracted over a hundred members from Greenville, Farmville, Winterville, Ayden, and other more distant towns just during this first month of the drive."

"We like to think of the Candlewick Club as a social group with a country club atmosphere for those who do not care for golf," McDonald said. "Running the club and providing other fine recreational facilities is made somewhat less expensive than a country club because we do not have the cost of maintaining a golf course."

The club is a non - profit organization owned by the members. It has contracted to use the name, facilities, and services of the Candlewick Inn, a colonially - decorated restaurant located on the Stantonsburg Road about six miles west of Greenville. A swimming pool and snack bar was built in back of the restaurant last year and land is now being cleared for tennis courts adjacent to the pool.

"The club's planning committee wants to offer a wide variety of outdoor activities," Candlewick owner and manager, Don Whitehurst said. "We are in complete agreement and look forward to being able to offer stables, etc. for horseback riding, badminton courts, volleyball courts, a skeet-shooting range, and areas for shuffleboard, horseshoes, croquet, and other lawn games."

"One of our important concepts," Redgate said, "is that we want our adult members as well as our children to have proper instruction in all the activities we offer. Swimming lessons for children have already been offered this summer and we are making plans for tennis lessons to begin just as soon as the courts are ready."

The club has the use of the "Blue Room," a large dining room sumptuously decorated with rich blue flocked wallpaper, formal draperies, walnut woodwork, and deep pile carpeting of the same shade as the wallpaper. Subdued lighting gives the room a relaxed atmosphere conducive to either a dinner of several courses or a cup of coffee in the afternoon.

A combo plays in The Blue Room every Saturday night and it is inaccessible to everyone except Candlewick Club members and their guests. There is a hardwood area for dancing in the center of the room.

Whitehurst expressed his hope of making the Candlewick grounds more beautiful all the time "so they can be a source of pride to the members and happiness to all who come here."

During the first year the membership fee for the club is set at $100 with $48 yearly dues. "We reserve the right to increase dues later on as we seek to limit the number of members," McDonald said.

"The emphasis in this will be on activity. Anyone of any age who enjoys doing things is invited to join. We already have holiday and other events planned well into the next year—events for adults, some for children, and some for the entire family like the swimming party we will have this afternoon," he said.

New York City Facing Electric Power Crisis

NEW YORK (UPI) —New York City's trouble-plagued power generating system, further taxed by a heat wave, moves toward a test next week of whether it can supply the needs of more than 10 million people in the area.

Officials of the Consolidated Edison Co. which supplies power to the city and neighboring Westchester County, warned that with two of its major generators out for the remainder of the summer and the current hot, humid weather expected to continue, "Wednesday would be a true test day."

The peak demand of the summer so far was reached Friday afternoon, the first day of the heat spell, and even after borrowing 1,223,000 kilowatts from neighboring utilities. Con Ed came within 1.2 per cent of reaching its total capacity.

The critical situation lessened during the weekend because of offices and businesses being closed and the thousands of residents who fled the city for the beaches and mountains, but come Monday peak demands may again be reached.

Con Ed officials said that after three days of such demands on the system, its capacity could be reached and it may have to reduce power in some areas, first in outlying residential areas. The alternative are blackouts or "brownouts."

Last summer, Con Ed had to appeal to consumers to cut back on their use of electricity to avoid blackouts.

Con Ed plans to buy power from other utilities and the Atomic Energy Commission made plans to halt production of uranium fuel at three of its plants and move the power to the city via transmission line.

The immediate cause of the trouble was the breakdown of the company's largest generator, located at its Ravenswood plant, last Tuesday and the earlier breakdown of a nuclear generator at Indian Hill. Neither will be back in operation this summer.

On Friday, the small, 37,000-kilowatt generator at Hell Gate in the Bronx broke down, cutting Con Ed's total capacity to 6,943,000 kilowatts. The Demand Friday afternoon rose to 6,822,000 kilowatts, leaving a reserve of only 84,000 kilowatts.

The Hell Gate generator was expected to be back5 in operation by Monday, but even so, the utility still needs between 200,000 and 300,000 kilowatts of power to fill the gap left by the two bigger generators that broke down.

Some of this will be filled by power for the Tennessee Valley Authority but during an all-day meeting Friday TVA engineers and power peel dispatchers did not reach a firm figure on exactly how much power can be brought up from there.

Julius Stewart Summerell, will be tried August 12 in District Court here for assaulting a Greenville police officer, resisting arrest, and disorderly conduct.

The 24-year-old Negro who gives his address as Greenville and New Jersey, faces the charges as a result of a scuffle between him and Police officer Barley Phillips at Pitt Memorial Hospital July 6.

Summerell was wounded in the left wrist and right side by the policeman's bullet. The officer reportedly was investigating an automobile accident in the emergency room of the hospital at the time the altercation began.

He had placed Summerell under arrest for disorderly conduct and had moved to the front of the hospital when the fight began. Phillips also was injured.

Phillips was suspended without pay until the local Police Department and the State Bureau of Investigation could investigate the case. The local investigation reportedly is complete, but the SBI's is not.

Loaded Truck Runs Into Traffic Island

FALKLAND — The cab of a truck loaded with tarpaper practically buried itself as it plowed into a traffic island at the intersection of N. C. 43 North and the Belvoir highway about two miles east of here Friday night.

The flatbed truck was approaching the intersection on the Belvoir highway when it failed to make a curve, went off the road and traveled some 225 feet before stopping on the island, investigating highway patrolman, W. R. Wright said.

The driver was identified as William Henry Best, 60, of Tarboro. He suffered minor injuries when his head hit the windshield, Ptl. Wright said, but has already been released from Pitt Memorial Hospital. He was charged with driving too fast for existing conditions.

Some $2,000 worth of property damage was done, Ptl. Wright said.

TRIED TO GO UNDERGROUND — A heavily loaded truck failed to make a turn and plowed underground as a result. The driver of the vehicle was slightly injured in the accident.

The school assignment plan adopted Thursday night by the Greenville Board of Education will involve assignment of elementary school children grades one through six per geographic zones indicated in the map shown above. It is to be noted in several instances, zones for a particular school, i.e., Eastern Elementary, are located in two sections of the city.

These zones have been established in accordance with Plan Four adopted by the board, and in turn reflect an arrangment that will provide the two to one black and white ratio of pupils required by the recent court order handed down by District Judge John Larkins.

Assignment of pupils by numbers and the names of subdivisions and areas from which children will be drawn for each school are listed below. The listing does not necessarily name every sub - division or area existing within each school zone.

B52s Attack Build-Up Of North Vietnamese

By WALTER WHITEHEAD

SAIGON (UPI)—The U.S. command sent an armada of B52 bombers today against what was described as the beginning of a North Vietnamese attempt to drive American troops out of another gun base near the Laotian frontier. Across the border, a Laotian battalion commander was reported killed in heavy fighting with Communist troops at Ban Nongboua, near the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

In Cambodia, Communist forces blew up two bridges on road linking Phnom Penh with the strategic Mekong River town of Kompong Cham, 50 miles northeast of the capital.

Military sources in Phnom Penh said the bridges were sabatoged Friday.

One bridge was at Skoun near the junction with Highway 6, 35 miles northeastof Phnom Penh, and the other was at Phnom Traeun, 18 miles further east on Highway 7 near the junction with Route 21, the sources said.

In Vientiane, Gen. Bounpon Makthepharack, commander of the third military district, announced that Col. Chanthara, commander of a government battalion, was killed in battle at Ban Nongboua.

He said the fighting, which erupted Wednesday, involved two battalions of government troops and three battalions of North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao guerrillas. The government troops were backed by air strikes while the Communists were supported by artillery and mortars, Makthepharack said.

The general said the Communists suffered at least 100 dead, mostly killed by air strikes, before the battle ended Friday night, but refused to disclose government casualties.

Across the border, U.S. bombers were dispatched on raids in support of a 101st Airborne Division gun base coming under increasing pressure from Communist forces.

Ford's Theatre Now Restored

WASHINGTON (AP) — It took 24 years and $2.5 million to recreate the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln.

But Ford's Theatre today looks just like it did in 1865 when John Wilkes Booth, a disgruntled 26-year-old actor from Maryland, slipped into the presidential box and shot Lincoln in the head.

The movement to restore the theater began in 1946 when a bill was introduced in Congress to fix up the run-down playhouse. But no action was taken until 1960 when funds were appropriated for a research and architectural study.

Work began in 1964. But there were snags and delays.

Surveyors found the three-story brick structure was built over quicksand, and had to dig the foundation deeper to insure safety. They stripped the building to a shell, then rebuilt.

Historians were adamant about authenticity. They rejected 50 artists' samples of wallpaper to line the presidential box before accepting one they felt matched the all over crimson leaf and border design. They worked from a swatch donated to the government by a doorkeeper on duty the night Lincoln was shot.

The building opened as a museum in 1968. Lincoln experts acclaimed it a success, a splendid copy of the $100,000 century-old theater. And accurate, they said, even to the suspended gas chandeliers ...

There were three modifications, however: air conditioning was added for comfort, crowd restrictions were imposed to conform with fire codes and cane chairs for the audience were built three inches wider to accommodate today's expanded population.

This week the final touch was added—a 35-minute narration of the tragedy that April 14.

The events of that night in Ford's are recounted in a presentation using only sound and light, no characters. Laughter, footsteps and conversation echo in the playhouse while a spotlight shines on an empty spot where the action occurred.

Keep Troops From Ports

LONDON (UPI)—The British government kept troops out of the country's strikebound ports and held back action to control food prices Saturday in preparation for new peace moves next week.

Britain's 47,000 longshoremen pushed their strike in support of an 80 per cent wage hike into its 11th day.

Officials said the cabinet has decided to take no action that would risk extending the walkout until a three-man court of inquiry probing the pay dispute releases its findings. It was expected to do so Monday.

Robert Carr, secretary for employment and productivity in the government, said that as soon as the court's findings are published he will call the two sides to his office for the first negotiations since the strike began July 15.

Officials said the government has decided it is not worth risking a chance for settlement by using troops or moving to fix prices in the next 72 hours.

But they said if the peace hopes collapse, the country is likely to face a prolonged strike and the government will use its emergency powers. These include the use of troops in the docks and setting food prices, which already have begun to soar.

N.C. Press Assails Actions By Judges

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N. C. (AP)—The North Carolina Press Association says that lawyers, judges and the public should "act now to preserve the tradition of open courts" in the state.

"This tradition is the strongest shield for the rights of the accused, the victim and the public," the association said in a lengthy resolution adopted Friday during its annual convention.

The association assailed the recent action by two district judges of excluding the public from preliminary hearings involving persons charged with serious criminal offenses.

"North Carolina has no statute or court rule permitting exclusion of the public from the trial or preliminary hearing except during the testimony of the prosecutrix in a case of rape or assault with intent to commit rape," the resolution stated.

It added, "The orders of the two district judges went far beyond their authority in ordering the preliminary hearings behind closed doors, and went against the spirit and letter of the Constitution of North Carolina which states in Article I, Section 35, 'The courts shall be open'."

The association, which ended its convention Saturday with a board of directors meeting, said, "The exclusion of the public from criminal proceedings is detrimental to the public interest in that it violates the fundamental right of citizens to be fully and timely informed concerning the administration of justice."

It added, "When court proceedings and law enforcement activities become shrouded in secrecy, public confidence in the integrity of the judicial system is lost. . . ."

The association noted the U.S. Supreme Court had reaffirmed in the case of Dr. Sam Sheppard that "what transpires in the court room is public property."

TB Testing Serum Given

MIAMI (AP)—A Miami-based Dominican nun who begged help for Peruvian earthquake victims got it Friday when 38,000 units of tuberculosis testing serum arrived in Lima.

Sister Mary Kenneth wrote friends she was afraid a tuberculosis epidemic could sweep Peru because homeless persons were still living in caves and makeshift shelters after earthquakes in June.

She turned to Miami for help.

The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services rushed the serum to Miami. Braniff International flew it to Lima.

If the serum tests show evidence that a tuberculosis outbreak has occurred among the refugees, Florida is "prepared to follow through with a supply of oral serum found effective against tuberculosis in its primary stages," said Mrs. Arthur Baise, program director of the Miami-Dade Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

TIBER POLLUTED

ROME (AP) — Rome officials said Saturday the pollution level of the Tiber River could be "tens of times higher" than the level recognized as a danger signal.

Charge Driver In Collision

A collision on Cotanche Street at its intersection with Ninth Street here yesterday afternoon resulted in charges of operating on a one-way street to one of the two drivers involved.

A car driven by Cleo Smith, 901 Ward Street, allegedly was going west on Ninth Street, which is one - way east, when it ran into the path of a car driven by Gary Lee Jarman of 1801-B Norcott Circle.

Some $500 damage was done to Miss Smith's car and $800 damage was sustained by Jarman's auto.

Massachusetts Seeking Craig

RALEIGH (AP)— North Carolina Social Services Commissioner Clifton Craig confirmed today he has been approached about the possibility of applying for a top administrative state job in Massachusetts.

"It would be an over-all administrative job involving several departments, including welfare," Craig said. "I plan to give it careful consideration before making a final decision."

He said a group known as the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation had asked that he apply for the post.

NUCLEAR TESTS

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Uppsala Seismological Institute reported Saturday it has recorded two Soviet underground nuclear tests during the past four days in Siberia, some 300 miles from the border of Sinkiang province, northwest China.

Ellis Island Is 'Invaded'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ellis Island, where since 1954 the weeds have flourished around the old brick buildings that once were the gateway to America for millions of immigrants, today is home for some 60 squatters.

All of them black and many of them ex-convicts and former drug addicts, they took over the island and are refurbishing it with plans to make it into a rehabilitation center for 2,500 persons.

The squatters said they arrived by 30-foot skiff Monday. They were not spotted until Friday, however, when a passing helicopter pilot saw them. By then, they had cleared some of the weeds and set up a factory to make cleaning powder.

The invasion, was spearheaded by a group called the National Economic Growth and Reconstruction Organization (NEGRO).

The squatters, who plan to stay only a few days, issued a statement declaring they will leave as soon as they demonstrate "the capacity of society's forgotten drug addicts, multigenerational welfare recipients and former prison inmates to create a self-supporting, productive, rehabilitative community."

Federal authorities who control the island—which became part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument in 1965, but for which no rehabilitation money has been appropriated—appeared to be quietly looking the other way.

Involved? Know The Details

Citizens who feel their property is involved in city planning would do well to attend municipal meetings to learn what is going on.

At the same time they should ignore unsigned handbills attempting to stampede them to attending meetings.

Handbills were distributed prior to a Planning and Zoning meeting Wednesday night imploring the recipients to "be there."

"Let's fight to keep urban renewal out of Cherry View," the handbill stated.

What was going on was a meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission, involving overall planning for the General Neighborhood Renewal Program. This is a broad program for rehabilitation of a large section of the city. No specific plans have yet been made and it is not contemplated as a general clearance project.

Whatever is done would have to work through the Redevelopment Commission, then back to the Planning and Zoning Commission and finally to the City Council for final approval. In the course of all this, any urban renewal projects would have to be presented at two public hearings as required by law.

Certainly any citizen is interested in the planning that the city is carrying on, and particularly if it affects his own property. Most citizens, however, will find that they can obtain the information they need by following the planning as it goes along. If any individual objects to any particular phase of the planning, the law provides ample opportunity to be heard before the Redevelopment Commission and the City Council. That is why the State Legislature established the procedures for having two public hearings.

It is to every citizen's interest to see that all dwellings are brought up to minimum standards. Most of our city boards and officials are trying to see that this is done.

Ribbons Made At Workshop

By BRYAN HAISLIP

SANFORD, N. C. — There's a prize in the making as well as the winning of ribbons which will be awarded at the 1970 North Carolina State Fair.

Those bright bits of grosgrain and gold lettering symbolizing degrees of excellence also will represent an achievement for the handicapped persons in the Lee County Sheltered Workshop program. Their hands will fashion the ribbons.

"It's a new skill they can be proud of," said Dave Godwin, workshop director. "It's also a new source of income for the workshop, a boost for our program with great potential."

The Lee Sheltered Workshop will produce 7,000 to 8,000 award ribbons for the State Fair, and receive $2,000 to $2,500 under the contract. A modest beginning, Godwin acknowledged, but the emphasis is upon beginning.

"This will help us pay for equipment and materials we needed for the start-up of the ribbon-making project," he explained. "I'm hopeful we can expand it, perhaps to the point that it will provide work year-round."

When you think about it, there's quite a market for ribbons. The 54 members of the North Carolina Association of Agricultural Fairs all give ribbons. Horse shows, flower shows, a variety of exhibitions and competitions, all need ribbons for winners.

Now that he's started, Godwin will be making the pitch for more business.

A blue ribbon started the whole thing. It was attached to the 1969 State Fair exhibit of the Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the State Department of Public Instruction.

Bob Wills, State Fair public relations director, stopped by the exhibit as Wally McCullock admired the ribbon. "What do you think of it?" asked Wills.

"I think," McCullock replied, "that ribbons like this could be made in one of our sheltered workshops."

"Okay," said Wills. "Figure out how you could do it, and we'll talk a deal."

Wills gave a further assist. He called McCullock, public information officer for vocational rehabilitation, and reported that an Albequerque sheltered workshop makes ribbons for the New Mexico State Fair. He suggested it might be a source for information on equipment and techniques.

The idea was put before Godwin and the board of directors of the Lee Sheltered Workshop. The board authorized Godwin to investigate further, including a trip to observe the Albequerque operation. Plans moved ahead smoothly to the final arrangement with the State Fair to supply the 1970 ribbons.

A gratifying aspect of the outcome is the cooperation of two state agencies to help the handicapped. "We have to buy the ribbons," said Wills. "Why patronize an out-of-state source when we can assist our own state's vocational rehabilitation work with those who are handicapped?"

"We are always looking for skills which the severely handicapped can master," said McCullock. "Producing award ribbons opens a new field for contract work by sheltered workshops."

The workshops are a part of North Carolina's vocational rehabilitation program, this year celebrating its 50th anniversary. Through them, the handicapped can be trained in skills which give them a degree of productive self-sufficiency, as important emotionally as it is economically.

"The person who has a handicap, whether it is physical or mental, needs to find a useful place," McCullock said. To help them get out of the rocking chair and into work which they can perform at their own level of competence is the objective.

There are 40 sheltered workshops in the state, five of them maintained through cooperation with the Department of Mental Health at mental institutions. The remaining 35, including the Lee County workshop, are based on working agreements with local, non-profit organizations.

Vocational rehabilitation participates in the cost of equipment, renovation or expansion of facilities, and a tuition payment for each person taken into the program. Approximately 2,000 persons last year received training or performed contract work in the workshops.

While many can be trained and placed in employment in the community, others have severe physical or mental handicaps which make it impossible for them to work outside the sheltered workshop. To keep them busy, the workshops look for contract work with local industries.

Cutting and folding cloth remnants, putting together manuals or other printed material — these are some of the routine assignments which the severely handicapped can carry out, with a satisfying sense of accomplishment for themselves and also a degree of economic gain.

Now producing award ribbons is added to the list. "From our point of view," said McCullock, "it's a winner."

Hopefully Ready For Action To Back Words

Let us hope that Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell means it when he says that the federal government will attempt to win the war against organized crime.

We recall having heard such statements before from other administrations through the years; and yet organized crime still flourishes.

All of us are concerning about the appalling crime-in-the-streets rate and certainly this should be a matter for attention.

However, much of the petty crime can be traced back to the awesome controlling influence of the crime syndicates, and without doubt the government should aim for the head of the dragon.

Attacking organized crime will require more than words. We trust Atty. Gen. Mitchell is prepared to back up what he said with action.

'Lost' Control Of Trade Bill

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The nonchalance with which members of the House Ways and Means Committee reacted to President Nixon's sudden threat to veto the foreign trade bill was the natural conclusion to the Administration's gross mismanagement of the protectionist problem.

The bill, signalling a national shift back toward protectionism after 36 years of free-trade policy, is scheduled to come out of the committee unaffected by Mr. Nixon's tardy intervention. Simply put, Congress is calling the President's bluff. Most lawmakers just don't believe he would veto a bill that contained his campaign pledge of textile quotas. "The President would have to be out of his mind to veto this," one cocky Ways and Means Democrat told us.

In sum, the President lost control of the trade issue to Congress months ago and his veto threat Monday did nothing to recapture it. Failing to appreciate the growth of protectionist sentiment, Mr. Nixon neither devised new mechanisms to placate it nor launched an assault on it.

In fairness to Mr. Nixon, there was no easy answer to the rising protectionism he encountered upon entering the White House. When the AFL-CIO abandoned free trade, the political balance of power had been altered profoundly.

Still, Mr. Nixon's 1968 campaign promise to the South of textile quotas was the spark that set the combustible Congress ablaze. Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, in charge of the textile question, believed threatened textile legislation could force a voluntary agreement from Japan without Congress actually getting into the quota - passing business.

What both Stans and the President failed to realize was that momentum for textile quotas would bring irresistible pressure for other commodities more economically deserving of protection. Stans was a double loser, failing to get a Japanese agreement and losing control of Congress.

By early spring of this year, there was no turning back — as witness a chat with colleagues on the House floor late in April by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Mills asked how many votes he could get in 1970 on the extremely liberal Trading

Born In The Gutter

By Encyclopaedia Britannica — UPI

Ever stop to think who invented the cigarette, and why?

Cigarettes were born in the gutter and popularized in a war. It all began when Spanish explorers caught the Aztecs smoking tobacco stuffed into hollow reeds.

Some natives rolled crushed tobacco leaves in corn husks. But these smokes were ignored by the Spaniards, who took home something else the natives were smoking —cigars. Soon wealthy Spaniards were puffing contentedly and tossing the butts into the gutters. And that's where the cigarette as it is known today was invented. Those discarded cigar butts, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, were turned into the first paper-wrapped cigarettes by the enterprising beggars of Seville, early in the 16th century. They salvaged the butts, shred them, and rolled scraps of paper around the tobacco.

Those poor man's smokes were known as papeletes or cigarillos. It was nearly 200 years before they acquired respectability. Traders carried them to other continents, but as was to be the case in later years their popularity was stimulated more by warfre.

The new smokes became familiar to French and British soldiers fighting each other on Spanish soil during the Napoleonic campaign of 1814. They took their newly discovered pleasure home with them. It was in France that they acquired the name cigarettes.

American Debut

In a few years the cigarette crossed the Atlantic. In 1854, R. T. Trall, a commentator on the New York social scene, complained that fashionable women had started smoking cigarettes, "aping the silly ways of some pseudo-accomplished foreigners."

Cigarette production in the United States was entirely dependent on hand labor until the 1880s, when machines were perfected that turned out thousands of cigarettes per hour and reduced the cost by nearly two-thirds.

Cigarette production jumped from 500 million in 1880 to 1 billion in 1885 and 4 billion in 1895. Cigars continued in top favor until 1920, when cigarettes caught up with them. Cigarette popularity, in the 15-year period that included World War I, shot up 600 per cent. That rate more than doubled during and after World War II.

Part of this increase was triggered by the revolution in manners which freed American women of all ages to take up smoking. In 1920 no cigarette advertiser would portray a woman smoking. When the decade closed, the ads had women and the women had cigarettes.

The publication of research reports linking cigarettes with cancer brought a decline to cigarette sales. Some of the sales dips were erased by the population spiral that produced increasing numbers of new smokers, but this spring the Internal Revenue Service announced that the number of taxed cigarettes produced in 1969 totaled 523 billion, a decline of 2.4 billion from the year before.

Sunday Morning Notes

If you have ever seen a newspaper press in operation you know that newsprint is fed from huge rolls. As the press prints the ribbons of paper are brought together and finally cut and folded.

There is no way for the newspaper to use the paper over, of course, although some newsprint mills are working with complicated de-inking processes.

If what one of our carrier boys is telling gets around, The Daily Reflector will have to figure out how to de-ink papers and re-use them.

He was asked what he did with the papers he had left over after delivering his route each day.

"Oh I carry them back to The Daily Reflector," he replied. "They de-ink them and use them again."

Oh, that we could.

Sports Editor Woody Peele has been trading with a gas company which gives silverware with gas purchases.

Apparently the word hasn't reached Nags Head.

Woody pulled up to a station there and filled up.

"Do you have silverware?" he asked the attendant.

"Naw," the man replied in complete seriousness. "We got plastic spoons though."

East Carolina's 1970 yearbook "The Buccaneer" is lavish and it captures the spirit of the university in the language of today's young.

Particularly impressive is the final page, a photo of a boy and girl by the fountain with a little verse by Dr. Frederick Sorensen:

"Man and woman

The end of a book
The end of a life
But seeming so
Just a beginning
Of something new Ready to take
That giant step beyond

Lines Forming

(Henderson Dispatch)

Some six months remain until the 1971 General Assembly meets in biennial session early next year. But the lines are forming on some of the chief problems the lawmakers will have to contend with. One of these will be whether or not to repeal any or all of the new taxes which were imposed last year.

Opponents of the extra two cents per gallon levy on gasoline appear to be the most active. The others are soft drinks and cigarettes. Governor Scott is preparing to go to bat for the gasoline excise, and will have to contend with dealers, a few of them Democratic party stalwarts who are distributors in their own right. The Governor has not had much to say about the bottled drink levy, which he did not advocate in the first place, but which he did accept in a compromise on cigarettes.

Oddly enough, not much has been heard of late about efforts to repeal the cigarette excise of two cents per pack. The Governor asked for five cents, but took the drink tax in a compromise. Tobacco people are against the cigarette levy, but if they are to stage a determined fight for its repeal they are yet to get their ducks in a row for the fray.

Much will be heard about the lack of necessity for any of the three taxes. Surpluses accumulating in the general fund and generous revenue from the new impositions over and above budget requirements will be argued, and not without merit.

Overall, the new taxes are not palatable to to probably most citizens, and are the basis of dissatisfaction that has resulted. That may be reflected in this year's elections for legislative members. It may also carry over into the election of a governor and other high State officials two years hence. But for the 1971 session the lines are forming and it may develop into a turbulent meeting of the lawmakers.

HE LOVED THEORY

There was a great theologian in this country some years ago who profoundly influenced the thought of thousands of people. Only a few, however, were aware of the fact that in addition to being a great theologian he was one of the best versed men in the United States on baseball. But the singular aspect of the matter was this — he never attended baseball games.

Theoretically he knew all about the game. He could give the batting averages of all the prominent players, keep a box score, prophesy with accuracy regarding the outcome of the World Series. But he would not have crossed the street to see the most exciting game on record. The few games he had witnessed years ago had bored him almost to extinction. But baseball as a scientific study — ah! that was a different matter.

Now curiously enough those who knew him well realized that the attitude the learned professor maintained toward baseball was precisely the attitude he maintained toward theology. To him theology was a science. He had little interest in the relation it bore to life. He loved to discuss theology, to spin theories, to dwell on distinctions without a difference. But he was frankly bored by the insistence of certain fanatical folk that religion should make a difference in the way a man lived. It made little difference in the way he lived. He had many superb qualities, but he was also selfish, vain and implacable toward his enemies. He was fascinated by Christianity as a sound theory. He was impatient with those who insisted too earnestly that the theory must be applied.

Costs Rise As Quality Sinks

By ELMER ROESSNER

The phenomenal rise in medical costs is due largely to an old business law: supply and demand.

Demand for health care has spiralled in the last two decades. The obvious reasons: growing population, general affluence, increasing welfare assistance, Medicare, growing health insurance coverage and a better informed public that knows where and when to seek medical attention.

ELMER ROESSNER

Meanwhile, the number of doctors, nurses, medical technicians, hospitals, laboratories, clinics and related personnel and facilities has fallen woefully behind the demand.

Two other factors add impetus to the escalation. They are the medical profession's ability to successfully treat a growing number of disorders and the more complex and sophisticated equipment, techniques and medicines that have been developed.

As a result, annual medical costs rose from $9 billion in 1930 to $60 billion this year. A further rise to $94 billion a year by 1975 is expected. Similarly, two decades ago per capita health expenditures were just over $125. Now they are more than $235 annually.

No Fast Answers

Unfortunately, while a business supply - demand situation causes the problem, a business-type solution won't solve it. Business responds to increased demand and higher prices by increasing production.

A medical school cannot be cranked up or put on double shift as some factories can. A widget or thingamabob production line may be speeded up to turn out twice as many units, all of equal quality, in the same amount of time. But not doctors and nurses.

Adding new capacity has its own problems. Financing, building, equipping and staffing, say, a plastics plant or a furniture factory is child's play compared with establishing and running a hospital.

Numerous stopgaps are being tried to ease the impending health care crisis. Most center on more busjnesslike, efficient use of medical resources and may help meet demand for the next few years, at least.

Short-Term Help

Among the more promising measures are:

GROUP PRACTICE — This is a more efficient, if less personal, way to treat patients who benefit from the specialized training of a number of doctors instead of just one. The medical group is often supported by its laboratory and technical services.

ADVISORS — Lone, or solo, doctors with their own practice are making greater use of business, financial and legal consultants and services to handle non-medical aspects of their practices. This frees them for strictly patient work.

COMPUTERS — Information banks and diagnostic systems show promise for maintaining medical information, patient data and providing fast, accurate diagnosis. They may eventually be able to prescribe complete medical treatments.

Observations From Editorial Columns

SIGN OF TIMES

If we ever had any doubts that American society is rapidly changing, a scene we witnessed the other day has wiped them all from our mind.

Picture it — a sweet, little, old, bespectacled, grey-headed lady hunched behind the wheel of a four-barrel carb, overhead cam, eight-pack powered, rear-ended raised super sports car scratching down Magnolia Drive.

A FOOLPROOF WAY TO BALANCE BUDGET

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., almost balanced the federal budget single-handedly (something which few U. S. Presidents and Congresses combined have managed to do in recent decades).

That is, had an amendment sponsored by Sen. Curtis passed, everyone could rest assured that the budget would have been balanced — for the Curtis amendment specified that the $12,500 annual pay hike Congress recently rewarded itself with would be suspended until the budget was balanced.

Come to think of it, maybe the way to solve the nation's perennial budget-balance woes for once and for all is simply to write a one - sentence constitutional amendment, specifying that Congress shall receive no salary until the budget has been balanced. — Jacksonville (Fla.) Florida Times-Union and Journal

EVER ON SUNDAY

Good old American know-how — you still can't beat it.

A dallas discount house has found a way to doge that city's blue laws. The store is allowed to stay open either Saturday or Sunday, but not both. So the chain has set up a special corporation that buys the store on Saturday night, opens for business on Sunday, and resells to the chain on Monday.

Ingenious — but a pity, really, that such originality has to be wasted on something as silly as blue laws. — Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal

THE PRESS SHEDS LIGHT

The news media has been undergoing harsh criticism recently so it's refreshing to note one staunch defender among public officials in Washington.

We concur with the remarks of Kenneth A. Cox, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, who reminded a New Orleans audience that "the news media have not caused the war or created poverty. They are performing a vital function by throwing light on these problem areas."

Cox said that "those who attack the news media for reporting bad news undermine freedom and resemble young critics they often criticize." He deplored what he called "broad attacks" and "broad statements" by critics of news media. He said that there is some validity in Vice-President Spiro Agnew's charges, "but basically I think it is very dangerous for high government officials to make such broad statements."

Cox is right. It would be ridiculous to claim that the press is perfect or that it should be exempt from any criticism. Newspapers are as different as the individuals who operate them and individuals who make no mistakes seldom accomplish anything worthwhile.

But, critics should be aware of the fact that when they make broad and often baseless attacks upon the news media, they are in effect attacking their own interests and the public's right to information. So far as newspapers are concerned, when it comes to both good and bad news, never before have readers had access to so much information. — Houston (Tex.) Chronicle

CLEAN DEFICIT

For want of patronage, a clean-films theater opened in Detroit by two priests has closed its doors, reports The Associate Press. It couldn't make the weekly $4,200 in expenses.

Inception of the idea came when parishioners complained to the clergymen that there weren't enough movie houses with good family-type entertainment. For nearly two months at a downtown location, the theater showed such films as "thoroughly Modern Millie," "Romeo and Juliet," "Four Clowns," and classic W. C. Fields comedies at prevailing prices.

THEY CAN POLITICK ON THEIR OWN TIME

Those who think a university should be a geyser of activism rather than a well of knowledge have promoted the idea of suspending classes for a week or two before the November election to let students work in political campaigns.

Not Florida universities, said the State Board of Regents. And rightly so.

Universities are there to teach, not to provide recruits for political movements. Any student who feels strongly enough about a candidate or cause can do his campaigning after working hours — as he'll have to do once he leaves the campus and goes into a business or profession. — Tampa (Fla.) To The Editor:

The Crusaders were recently invited at Allens Chapel Church to render music. They were amazed at its condition. It was damp from a previous rain, and one could see through the cracks in the walls.

The Crusaders started a program, "Operation Helping Hand", which involves volunteer work and contributions to help renovate their church. We sent letters to churches, both black and white, stating that a small country church is in need of a "Helping Hand". Newspaper articles and television appearances have been presented to the public on this project. We also asked individuals to donate concrete blocks.

Donations were to be mailed in by July 23rd so that on Saturday July 25, we could try to lay blocks around the church in one day.

The amazing thing is that we have had very little response. Members of the "Black Community" know the condition of this church. This may seem to me that Black people don't believe in helping others. I wonder if that "sugar coated" religion stands up when it comes to "Do Unto Others."

Members of the white community also have not responded, especially churches. Do you believe in helping others?

Truely, this would serve as a deed of good race relations in our community. We need this. The only time the races come together is in time of crisis and tension.

I believe that our progressive Greenville is too intelligent to let a situation as this exist in our community when a small church congregation sends out a distress signal. They want a place to worship and can't afford one.

Lets stop thinking only of ourselves. The Crusaders, in spite of little support from the public, will continue Operation Helping Hand through July 25. Will you help Us?

Politics Again Shown A Body Contact Sport

By J. J. KILPATRICK

Strom Thurmond's short speech in the Senate on the afternoon of July 17 had all the classic characteristics of a good right hook: It was quick, explosive, and squarely on target; it carried conviction; and it left an impression. If the President was brusied, okay, politics is a body contact sport.

The South Carolinian reminded some of us of the fabled Indian, who silently marked each grievance by putting a pebble in his pouch. When he had a pouchful, he went to war. After months of quiet simmering, Thurmond boiled over at Mr. Nixon's new crackdown on desegregation in the South, coupled with the denial of tax-exemption to private schools enrolling white pupils only. Thurmond had his pouchful.

"Mr. President," he cried, "I condemn these actions; I strongly condemn them; without end, I condemn them. They are wrong as social policy, and they are wrong as law. This is the sort of program we would expect to get from a Democratic administration . . .

"I am warning the Nixon administration — I repeat, I am warning the Nixon administration today — that the people of the South and the people of the Nation will not support such unreasonable policies. Ire mind the Chief Executive that the presidency is an elective office, and that what the people give, the people can also take away."

Strong words, but there was more: "I have been watching the administration since it came into power a year and a half ago," Thurmond said. "I have noticed that since the President has been in office he has become surrounded by liberal and ultraliberal advisors . . . The philosophy which these people espouse and which they give to the President is a sectional philosophy — the philosophy of the Northeast . . . Those who support the philosophy of the Northeast did not support the President in 1968, and they will not support him in 1972."

At his press conference the following Monday, Mr. Nixon responded in conciliatory vein to Thurmond's complaint about the desegregation crackdown; there would be no "vigilante squads" to coerce the Southern school districts to integrate. Counselor Robert Finch spoke to the same effect. But neither the President nor his former Welfare Secretary touched on Thurmond's blast at denial of tax exemption for the non-profit private schools.

This action on the part of the Internal Revenue Service, explicitly approved by the President, was a peculiarly regrettable exercise of John Marshall's dictum that the power to tax involves the power to destroy. The ruling is intended to destroy these private schools for one reason only — that they are pursuing an admissions policy that, if pursued by a public school, would violate the Fourteenth Amendment.

The effect of the ruling is itself to violate the spirit of the Fourteenth Amendment, which never on this earth was intended to prohibit private acts of discrimination. The effect is further to single out one class of private educational institutions only, and to impose special requirements upon these schools not imposed in any other way. The ruling is a denial of the "even-handedness" of which Mr. Nixon boasts; and it flies in the very teeth of the Supreme Court's reasoning as recently as May 4 in approving continued tax exemption for churches.

Senator Thurmond did not count out the other grievances in his pouch, but other conservatives are beginning to do so. There is the President's Family Assistance Plan, his signing of the bill giving a vote to 18 - year - olds, his endorsement of direct national elections, his recommendation of more millions for subsidies to artists and to the super - sonic transport plane. All these are "the sort of programs we would expect to get from Democratic administrations."

And there's the rub. If Hubert Humphrey had been elected, the Senator would have had his pouchful in 24 hours. Nixon was the best chice conservatives had. He is likely to be the best choice they have in 1972. But if the President fails to correct his recent drift to port — if he fails to listen more attentively to conservatives in his party — he surely will alienate many of the 31.8 million silent Indians who voted him into the White House just 21 months ago.

Expansion Act overwhelmingly passed by the House in 1962. The answer: perhaps 50 (out of 435), and that many only because Mills has many friends.

Mills himself made it abundantly clear through long committee hearings that he had left the ranks of free trade. Still, there seemed no realization of this trend by Administration strategists. To this day, senior Republican members of Ways and Means have not been contacted by the White House.

Indeed, the White House has seemed isolated from events inside the committee. Rep. John Watts of Kentucky, a conservative Democrat and expert legislative manipulator, quietly collected votes for an amendment freezing existing oil quotas into law. The committee's Democrats adopted it in eight minutes flat with neither committee Republicans nor the Administration fully aware of what was happening.

Mr. Nixon did not speak out until the committee had nearly completed its bill and he had conferred late last week with Mills and Rep. John Byrnes of Wisconsin, the committee's senior Republican. There was no veto talk at that meeting, but Mr. Nixon decided shortly thereafter to speak out publicly.

One motive of the President was to get the committee to reconsider its retention of the "American selling price" system which provides unfairly high duties on certain European - produced chemicals. but Watts had pulled together so large a majority on this point, opposing both Mills and Byrnes, that reconsideration was highly improbable. So too was reconsideration of a quota on shoes or other protectionist devices attacked by the President.

These said prospects were hammered home at Tuesday morning's meeting between Mr. Nixon and his legislative leaders, the day following his veto threat. Moreover, he was informed that the Senate surely would add quota protection for other industries and that they might well survive in the Senate - House conference.

Continuing Education Plays Big East Carolina Univ. Role

One of the most important factors in the smooth and efficient operation of today's businesses and industries is good, clear communication. Key personnel are trained in written communication, such as reports and letters, but scant attention is given to oral or spoken communication.

Recently, at East Carolina University, a number of supervisory employees of the Greenville facility of Empire Brush Company learned to improve their ability to communicate orally in a course sponsored by the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

During a 10-week period, they met night classes taught by Jim Rees of the East Carolina speech faculty, and judging from the enthusiastic reports of both instructor and students, the class in oral communications was a total success.

According to James A. Hecker, Empire Brush Company's manager, the course was "well worth" the time and effort expended by him and his colleagues.

"We can see results already, but the real pay-off will be in cumulative, long-range effect," said Hecker. "Everyone will benefit." He cited the area of oral communications as a most essential one in his business, since industry personnel have to use spoken communication much more often than they write.

He went on to say that in a busy plant, key personnel are usually forced to operate under a great deal of pressure, and that good verbal communication is a necessary part of getting things across, to the employees and at conferences.

He joined the other students in praising instructor Rees for making the course relevant, interesting and challenging.

Rees himself is no less enthusiastic about the outcome of the class. He feels that the subject is one which needs much more emphasis than has heretofore been placed on it. "In an area such as ours," he said, "application of sound techniques of oral communication in business and industry is vitally needed. As the industrial potential grows, so will the necessity for a better understanding and ability to communicate clearly, concisely and effectively."

It is worth noting that this very useful instruction cost the Empire Brush Company only $35 tuition per employee enrolled.

The oral communications class is only one of many services extended to eastern North Carolina by the ECU Division of Continuing Education. The Division offers a variety of non-credit courses to adults in diverse fields, as well as graduate and undergraduate work.

Last week, thirty employees of Electric Membership Corporations completed an intensive conference in public relations on our campus. In April, the Divison helped to sponsor a free clinic for diabetics and their families. In January, the Division offered a real estate course designed for both beginners and real estate practitioners. And, during February and March, the Division co-sponsored an adult program of foreign policy discussion, which involved television broadcasts of discussions between several members of the University faculty.

A most important project of the Division of Continuing Education is the Undergraduate Evening College, which gives to persons who cannot enroll as full-time students the opportunity to further their education with college level courses in liberal arts and social sciences. And, of course, the Divison coordinates the work of East Carolina's extensions in Dare County, Goldsboro, Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point, and sends graduate faculty to various locations to give North Carolina's public school teachers a chance to renew their certification with upper level courses in education.

Because of the fine work produced by the Division of Continuing Education, we number a great many school teachers, military and civil service personnel and members of business and industrial groups among our student body.

We are justly proud of this service to the people of our region and our state. Education is our business, and we shall continue to try to meet the needs of all who can profit from it—Dr. Leo W. Jenkins.

Uncertainties In Business World For Many Months To Come

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

On the business outlook, one thing is sure: Today's mood of rising optimism stands in sharp contrast to the deep gloom which spread over the economy only a few weeks ago.

There have been developments which offer some reassurances. But it should be noted that much of the "good news" has been good mostly because it wasn't as bad as had been feared.

Take the second quarter performance of the gross national product, for example. This is the measure of total goods and services which make up the economy. It failed to make it three downs in a row. Instead of chalking up another slip, it turned sidewise, which is about all the three - tenths of one - percent gain can be called.

The second quarter corporate profits figure fits pretty much into the same picture. There are declines aplenty. But there is a bright side. The declines were not as sharp and as widespread as had been anticipated.

The Penn Central bankruptcy didn't produce any chain reaction of business failures. This, of course, is one the plus side. But it doesn't alter the fact that many businesses, as well as individuals, are so deeply in debt that meeting obligations out of current income and reserves is still a tough task.

President Nixon has put himself in the ranks of those who are willing to take a stand that the business downturn "has bottomed out" and that the last half of the year" will definitely see the economy turning up."

At his news conference, Nixon seemed careful to show restraint on the speed of the recovery. He didn't say it in so many words, but he implied that it may well take another 12 months, a full year, for the basic economy to return to where it was a year ago. He mentioned a return to "full employment" by next July 1.

Many observers are persuaded that "caution" will be a major factor in both business and individual decisions over the next year. It may well be that the Nixon Administration has handled the anti - inflation program in such a way that a severe recession will be avoided. But casualties already have been great.

More than 1.5 - million people have been added to the unemployed. And for many thousands, this meant loss of jobs; not just failure to get jobs. The stock market dive has been the sharpest and longest since the 1929-32 bust, with losses around $250 - billion. Interest rates have hit records for a hundred years. Many businesses are hard up for cash and finding borrowing very difficult.

This tends to create a climate of caution. Many business executives who stepped out with expansions and mergers in the past few years have felt the ax. Their replacements are apt to be less bold when it comes to taking chances. The savings trend indicates that individuals have decided that some cash at hand is a good thing, even though it is highly vulnerable to continuing inflation.

There is a gradual easing of the brake on money and credit. But there is no indication that the Federal Reserve Board is in any mood to simply pull out the stops and "let it flow", as was the case a few years ago.

Thus, while interest rates may well have hit a peak for this particular period, the declines are likely to be modest and of most importance to the big borrowers, such as governments, utilities, etc. The individual probably will see little change. In fact, some of the new loan bills being readied for state legislatures call for much higher small loan ceilings than now exist.

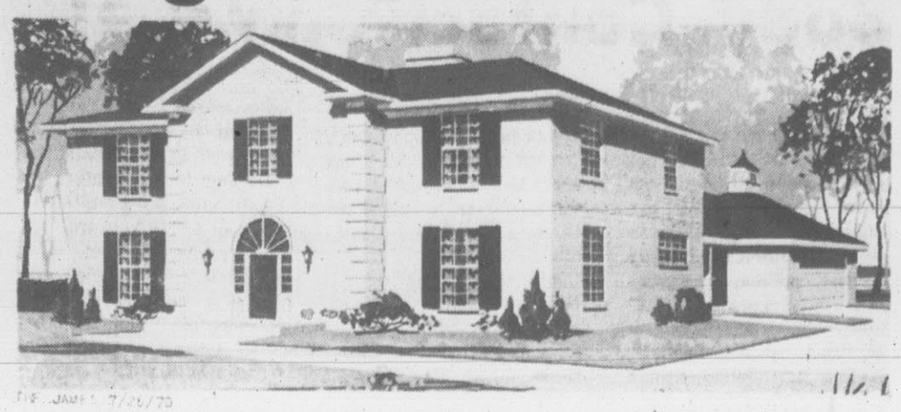
And, then, there's the Nixon policy of sticking with a relatively tight economy until the price trend levels out. This time may be in sight. But inflation still has enough momentum to send prices zooming again unless Nixon plays it close. He has had to give ground on his goal to hold spending down hard. And he may be pushed more off base by the open - handed Democrats in Congress.

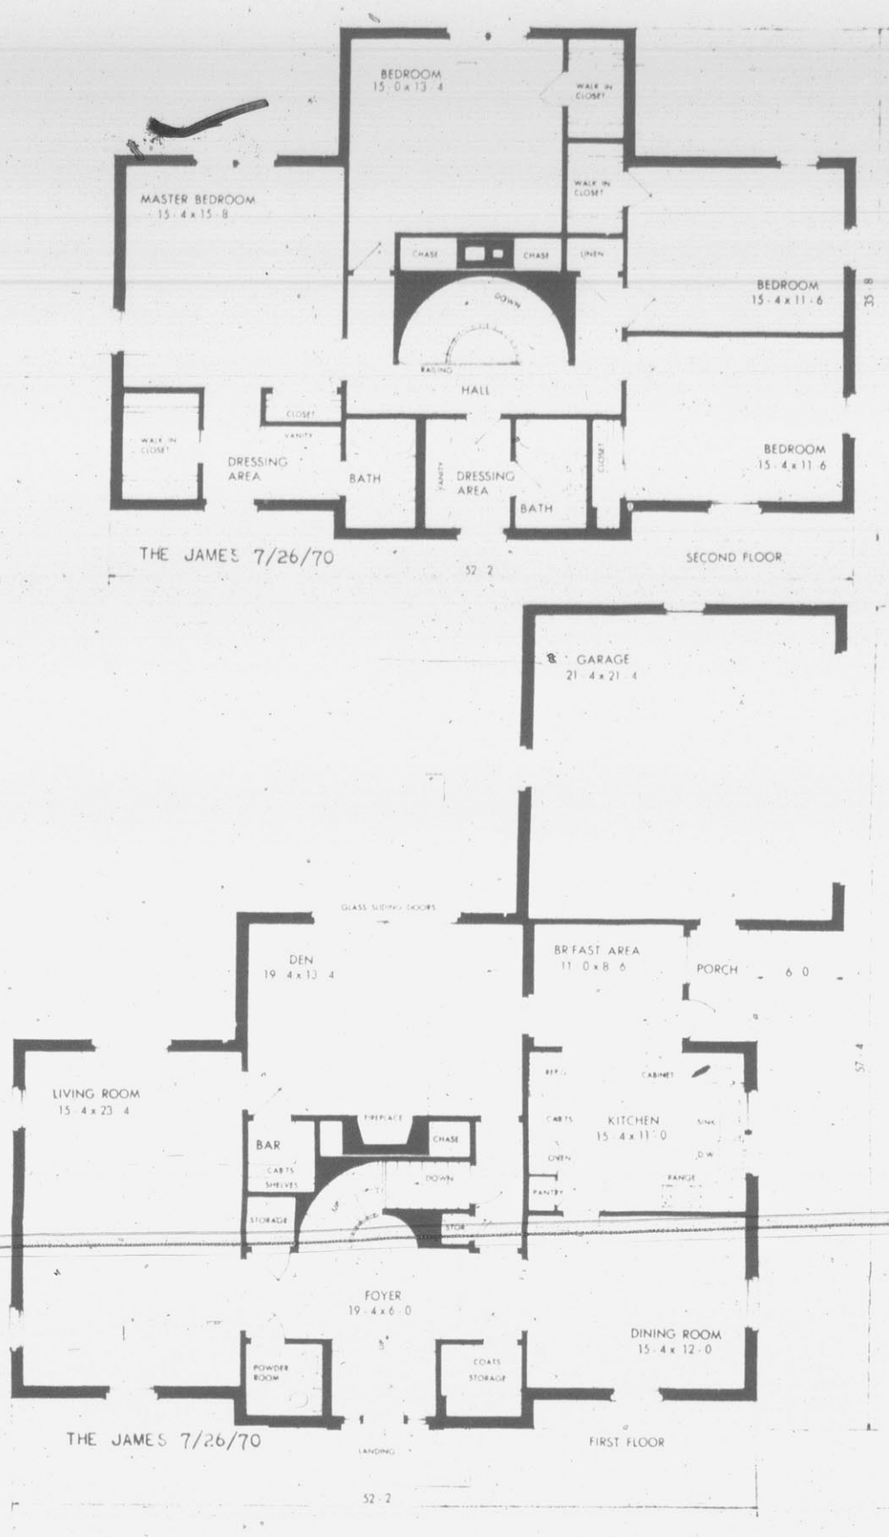
But the fact that Nixon does have a position against uncontrolled spending is of importance. Actually, he is the first President since Eisenhower, in the 1950s, to actually try to hold spending down. And such an attitude by the White House does have an impact, although it might be offset to some extent by Congress.

It should not be overlooked that union labor this year is in a position to play hob with the forecasters. Prolonged strikes against some of the big employers, such as the auto makers, could give business statistics a sharp down turn.

So, while things may look a bit brighter and may actually be brighter, there will be uncertainties for many months to come.

Large Home For Active Family





LOTS OF EASY LIVING — The James, designed by the Associated Architects, is a traditional four-bedroom home for a large family. It has two and a half baths, a large living room, den with fireplace and bar, dining room, modern kitchen with a breakfast area, foyer with stairway leading to the upstairs, double garage and full basement.

By GERRY BISHOP

The James, designed by the Associated Architects, would be the perfect setting for elegant family living.

This is truly a home for an active, effervescent family that needs room to spread out and enjoy itself.

The exterior is impressive, with traditional, two - story styling and a charming entrance enhanced by a fan-shaped transom and two carriage lights.

Shuttered windows stand out against the brick-painted-white walls and the extruding facade. There's a Georgian influence here that makes a major contribution to the overall design.

Another fine feature is the centrally-located staircase which adds a touch of elegance to the foyer.

And there are many other extras in this large home, such as the two dressing rooms, char - grille in the kitchen and the large detached double garage.

Altogether there are four bedrooms, two and a half baths, living room, den, dining room, foyer, kitchen with breakfast area and full basement.

The garage is located at the back of the house and has a spacious turn - around an parking area.

The laundry and utilities are situated in the basement.

The main entrance is impressive. One steps into an unusually large foyer which has a powder room and a large coat - storage closet. Stairs wind up to the second floor.

To the left is the living room, a sweeping chamber which measures approximately 15 feet by 23 feet.

Nearby is the den, or family room, which has a fireplace, bar and sliding glass doors connecting to the backyard. It also has large dimensions of approximately 19 feet by 13 feet.

The kitchen is exceptionally well designed. All the appliances are built in and arranged in an efficient U-shaped layout. And there is a pantry, a handy extra.

Adjacent to the kitchen is the breakfast area on one side and the dining room on the other. The latter measures approximately 15 feet by 12 feet and overlooks the front yard.

Upstairs, the sleeping quarters are spacious and feature lots of closet space.

The master bedroom is approximately 15 feet square, has a private bath, dressing area and large walk - in closet. It would be very accomodating for the master and mistress of the house.

The main bath also has a dressing area and vanity.

All the bedrooms are large, with the two smaller ones measuring approximately 15 feet by 12 feet.

There are 3,140 square feet of living area in the James and its outside dimensions are approximately 58 feet by 57 feet.

Garage May Be Turned Into 'Play Room' For Use In Summer Months

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In summer, many families convert the garage to a game room, television room or lounging area that can provide a lot of fun and privacy. The car is locked out.

Some people like the idea so well, they may find a permanent place for the car and use the garage as an extra room all the year.

One delightful patio in a one-car garage is an example of the possibilities offered by a seldom-used garage.

At this house nearby shopping centers made the car almost useless.

The small house is sandwiched between two houses and is about eight feet from the road on a nonconforming lane in a busy town.

The owners erected a tall fence of saplings on three sides with a gate. Concrete was poured inside the garage and in the area to the fence. The interior of the garage was painted white and a few bookshelves were put on a wall. An old chest was painted white and used under the bookshelves to store some china and glasses. Three old wicker pieces, a sofa and two chairs, were painted pale yellow and three colorfully-patterned washable cushions were added. A small metal coffee table with a glass top was painted white and was set on a yellow washable rug. Behind the sofa, a narrow table painted white with four white chairs provided a dining area.

Two lights are on either side of the garage entrance, but small inexpensive hurricane lamps with candles provide adequate light, and romanticize the setting in the evening.

If a garage is to be used all the year, a window should be installed. Outdoor light makes a big difference during the day.

In suburban and country areas where only one car is stored in a two-car garage, people put the other side to good use. One older couple set up the area for complete relaxation with a partition dividing the car side and their lounge area. A few bookshelves hold books, games, cards. There is a television set, a card table, folding chairs, an electric fan, several comfortable chairs, lamps. A salad bowl holds yarn and needlework.

Many people have found intriguing answers to summer garage conversion. Garage door system installers in Cleveland spotted a portable rug of artificial grass on a garage floor. The object was to improve the putting of the man of the house, but the green grass improved the patio look, they pointed out, and would be a pretty addition to any garage patio.

Some people prefer to use the garage floor for shuffleboard, hop scotch and other games, moving the furniture back during such times, the garage lookers say.

Other ideas they have noted include these:

Ping pong tables doubling as picnic tables.

Insect traps used to discourage bugs.

Barbecue-cooking in garages that have cross-ventilation.

A garage patio can help the family keep its cool in summer, and it can be a haven for every member of the family. In one household, young people have the run of the patio during the day, and on certain evenings. At night, usually, the parents take it over, and enjoy having conversation and libation at their leisure.

Sees Easing In Mortgage Mart

By NORMAN KEMPSTER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The president of the Federal National Mortgage Association (ENMA) says the mortgage market is beginning a turn-around that will eventually mean lower interest rates on home loans.

The official Oakley Hunter, based his prediction on recent increases in the volume of savings going into thrift institutions—savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks.

"Beneath the surface of the turbulence that has beset us, the basis for a turn-around is developing," Hunter said in a speech. "Now that short-term interest rates are down a point or more from their peak...thrift institutions are showing some recovery.

"Indeed, we wonder how much in mortgages FNMA will buy during the fourth quarter this year. We anticipated buying some $6 billion in 1970. In the turn-around which already has occurred is reinforced by a further decline in market interest rates as the present demand for funds abates, then the thrift institutions may come alive and bid some mortages away from us.

"That would mean that the mortgage market was beginning to see the light of day, that buyers would ultimately pay somewhat lower interest rates on mortgages and that our whole position with regard to financing Housing would enter a stage of marked improvement."

S&L Report

Hunter's association, often called FANNIE MAE because of its initials, is a privately-owned corporation sprawned by the government to buy and sell FHA and VA mortgages in an effort to stabilize the market.

Hunter's view was reinforced by a report from the U.S. Savings and Loan League that savings deposits at the nation's S & Ls in May exceeded withdrawals by $650 million, compared to $642 million in May of 1969.

It was the third straight month in which the S & L savings flow was better than a year earlier.

The League said S & Ls made loans totaling $1.7 billion May, a greater than seasonal growth over th $1.4 billion lending reported in April.

High interest rates have been blamed for a prolonged slump in home building. Private housing starts were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.2 million units in May, far below the 1.9 million rate recorded in January, 1969, the month before the slide began.

Home building is limping along at far below the pace needed to fulfill the nation's goal of 26 million new or rehabilitated homes in the 10 years between 1968 and 1978.

Warn Against Rabid Skunks

RALEIGH — The State Board of Health was advised today by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta that several potentially rabid pet skunks, raised in Oregon and reportedly sold as pets in Washington state, have not been accounted for. One skunk bit its owner in Seattle and was found to be rabid.

So far as is known none of these skunks have been shipped to North Carolina for sale. However, Dr. J. N. MacCormack, chief of the Communicable Disease Section of the N. C. State Board of Health, today issued a warning to vacationers planning travel to the Northwest to avoid purchase of pet skunks.

There have been no rabid skunks reported in North Carolina for the past several years.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

All of us have been warned constantly in recent years about the necessity of updating the insurance policies that give us financial protection should fire or other disaster strike our homes.

The warnings are well advised, since rising building costs keep adding to the amount it would cost to replace a house. How do you estimate what you'd have to spend to build, on the same lot, a house similar to the one you now own? You can't rely solely on knowledge of the selling prices of houses in the area, since these prices include the cost of land, and it usually isn't easy to decide current land prices, especially in built-up sections where lots are no longer available.

While professional appraisers can make such decisions, it is a fact of life that very few one-family home owners ever use their services. Most persons either guess at what figures to use for insurance purposes or use the amound specified in the policies they inherit when they take over at the closings.

We recently ran across what is called a Dwelling Replacement Calculator, a booklet that attempts to tell you what the current replacement cost of your house is. It is designed for relatively modern homes with average size rooms. For homes that are over 30 years old, have larger-than-average size rooms or exceed $50,000 in replacement cost, an appraiser is suggested.

The system has been devised by the Hartford Insurance Group, which has companies in five states. Homes are divided into three categories: basic, standard and custom. Basic are those constructed to sell at low cost, but meet minimum building requirements; standard, which comprise between 70 and 80 per cent of homesand have materials, workmanship and design of average or slightly better quality; and custom, those built from custom plans or with extras and alterations to standard plans.

These three categories are then divided into houses with wood framing and combustible exterior siding; those which are a combination of wood and masonry; and those which have solid masonry exterior walls. After that, you decide on the number of units in your home—a living room, dining room, kitchen and all full rooms counting as one unit each, with a similar rating given to a finished basement or attic and an attached two-car garage. Half units are such things as porches, sun rooms, unfinished basements and attics, a one-car garage and central air conditioning.

Having decided on all this, you then look at what is called a base-cost table, select the line that fits your home and presto, you get the cost of replacing your home. The final step is to adjust the amount to fit your locality, based on what is called a Current Locality Multiplier, since construction costs, materials and labor vary across the country.

It's an interesting idea—but, but, but and but. Anyway, if it serves to alert home owners to the necessity of providing adequate insurance protection for their houses, it has some value.

'New Town' Is First Of New Breed

COLUMBIA, Md. (UPI) — This "new town" under construction in the Baltimore-Washington corridor is the first of a new breed of American cities, incorporating architecture and engineering which its developers say serve man and preserve nature.

When completed, around the end of this decade, Columbia will house more than 110,000 persons in some 30,000 dwelling units spread out over 15,000 acres and within easy reach of a downtown area with stores and offices, and with jobs for more than 60,000 breadwinners, city planners predict.

Transportation? This important need will be met by an advanced concept in public mass transit. It is labeled by the Bendix Corp. which designed it, the "personal rapid transit system" (PRTS).

It uses small personal vehicles operating automatically on an elevated guideway designed and engineered to move people quickly and efficiently about the city "without detracting from the esthetics of the surroundings," according to system engineers.

They explained the PRTS will use "an advanced form of vehicle management and control," offering both scheduled and unscheduled service and handling peak loads of 5,000 passengers per hour.

For unscheduled or "demand-activated" service a passenger will electronically "call" for a vehicle, select his destination on a computer console and travel nonstop wherever he wants to go.

Warn 'Sunday Athletes' Not To Play Hard

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—"Sunday athletes"—people who are not necessarily athletic or in top physical shape and indulge infrequently in energetic sports—can suffer painful rupture of the Achilles' tendon above the heel, say two University of Michigan radiologists.

Drs. Peter M. Reveno and Athur C. Kittleson undertook a retrospective study of the x-ray films of 13 such patients and were able to set up standards to provide a diagnosis. If the tendon is not ruptured, no surgery is necessary; if it is, there must be an operation. The radiologists observed that basketball "was by far the most common activity, accounting for seven of the total injuries. None of the individuals could be considered highly-skilled or well-trained athletes."

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—I often see the terms "close grain" and "open grain" in reference to different kinds of wood. Exactly what do they mean?

A.—While both terms have reference to the annual growth rings of the tree from which the wood was cut, the common usage of "close grain" is fine textured wood with closely spaced pores; that of "open grain" is coarse textured wood with large pores.

Q.—You seem to give advice about everything except using a lathe. I bought a second-hand lathe and have been watching your questions and answes to see if I could pick up some tips about it. I am especially interested in making wooden bowls.

A.—Questions about lathes are few and far between, which is a good thing, because nobody can learn to use one from a few sentences of advice. You need a book of directions or first-hand instruction from someone who knows how to operate such a machine. Or, preferably, both. Nearly all lathe manufacturers put out detailed printed material on how to use their machines. Get the manufacturer's name from the machine you have and write to him. Also send along whatever other information there is on the machine's nameplate. If that isn't practical, you'll find that your local library or bookstore has one or more books on the subject.

Q.—I have the plans for making one of those rolling carts on which to serve refreshments, but it doesn't tell how to finish the wood. I know how to handle all parts of the cart, but would like to know what to use on the top tray so that it won't be harmed by spilled liquids. Will ordinary varnish do?

A.—One way is to use a plastic laminate glued to a piece of plywood, which will give you a top similar to that of many kitchen and dining room tables. But if you want a varnish finish, go to a well-stocked wood finishing store and buy what is generally called "bar varnish." It is specially formulated to withstand liquids and general abuse. Since all stores carrying paints and varnishes don't sell it, you may have to go to several places to get it.

Contraption Keeps Him Alive

Joe Black 'On The Machine' Three Times A Week

By RAYMOND L. ANDREWS

BOTHELL, Wash. (UPI)—Joey Black, 3, doesn't quite understand it.

"Daddy's on the machine," he tells you as you enter the home of his parents.

Inside, in a hospital-clean room, his father, Joe Black, is indeed "on the machine," as he is three times each week.

It is a weird, science-fiction contraption of plastic tentacles, pressure gauges, cellophane sheets with minute holes and a thin red line of life pulsing on its way.

A Life-Preserving Device

"That's about the only way I can explain it to him," says his father, smiling. "I tell him it's something that I can't do. That I have to use the machine instead."

Joe Black owes his life to the machine. His kidneys do not function and chronic uremic poisoning will prove fatal unless three times a week he hooks up to a kidney machine.

In essence, the kidney machine through a complicated process called hemodialysis purifies the waste blood which accumulates the body of Joe Black.

It is a tough regimen but one which he and his pretty wife, Louise, 21, take pretty much in stride.

Poisoned 21 years ago

"She never complains," Black said. "If she can take it, who am I to feel sorry for myself?"

Now 23, Black's kidney problems began as a 2-year-old when he accidentally drank a home hairset product.

A slow, inexorable deterioration set in until by December of 1968 he suffered from uremic poisoning and faced certain death.

Fortunately, two scientific breakthroughs enable Joe Black to lead a near-normal life.

The artificial kidney itself was developed in the 1930s by a Dutch doctor, William Kolff. However, no method of repeatedly gaining access to man's circulatory system had been devised.

Tubes Anchored In Arm

Dr. Belding Scribner of the nephrology department of the University of Washington Medical School in Seattle solved that problem.

In the spring of 1960 he sutured small twin plastic tubes known as cannulas to the artery and vein of a patient dying of Bright's disease.

The tubing was closed by a small U-shaped tube called a shunt. This enables part of the patient's blood to circulate outside the body until the time comes to hook up to the kidney machine.

With the shunt removed and the cannulas attached to the machine, the patient's heart pumps blood through the machine, where waste products are filtered through sheets of cellophane and the blood is rewarmed and returned to the patient.

8 Hours Thrice Weekly

The process requires about eight hours with the patient's blood circulating through the machine and his body as much as eighteen times.

The Blacks also allow from one to two hours for "cleanup time" after each run.

Black's illness took him to the Northwest Kidney Center in nearby Seattle—established in 1962 and the world's first community kidney center.

"The people there are fantastic," he said. "They're very dedicated. You can always get help if anything goes wrong."

Selected To Live

At the center he and his wife were interviewed by a review board burdened with the agonizing decision of deciding which candidates can best be accepted.

Even today not all candidates, however worthy, can be accepted. Treatment is expensive—the initial cost for a home machine is $13,400—and not all candidates are medically or emotionally geared for kidney machine use.

"But the way they teach you there's no way you can die," Black said. "You just don't get careless. If you die on the machine, it's your own fault."

Black trained in kidney machine use for eight weeks at the center and his wife joined him for the final two weeks of training.

Keeps Arm Bandaged

He wears on his left arm a bandage looking much like the encased arms of a pro football lineman. This covers the spot where the cannulas and shunt are implanted in his arm.

Average survival time for the cannulas is about 18 months. Then a new site is selected and the patient is "recannulated."

When he "runs" on the machine, Black climbs into a bed in a side room where Louise hooks him up.

"She probably knows more about it than I do," he said.

Only Minor Problems

"It's a safety precaution," Black said.

The home kidney machine comes equipped with an alarm in event anything goes wrong.

"It went off one night while I was sleeping," Black said. "My lines had come apart. But she bounced out of bed and we got things straightened out, although I lost a little blood and didn't feel so hot."

But most of the time, Joe Black feels just fine and leads a fairly normal life.

He is undergoing a sales training program, aided by the Washington State Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, and hunting and fishing trips can be scheduled around his "runs."

Not All Can Have Children

He is a willing speaker at events to raise funds for ongoing care for kidney patients. A benefit auto race by two racing groups raised enough money to care for his own home treatment for several years.

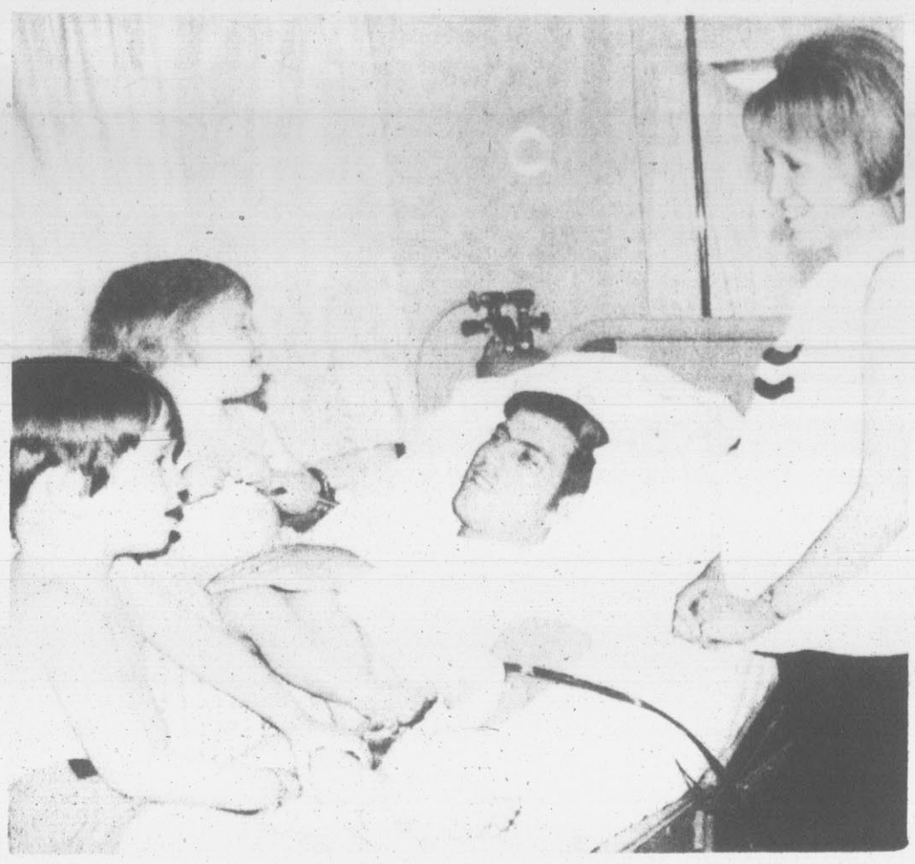
Black has two children, a younger daughter, Bonnie, to go with Joe Jr., and a third child is expected in November. Not all kidney patients are able to have children.

So Joe Black considers himself lucky. The couple is evaluating the possibility of kidney transplants and new horizons are in sight for the kidney machine itself.

"Right now, this is the way things are," he said. "Maybe it leaves something to be desired but we've learned to live with it."

In time, Joey Jr. will understand it, too. In fact, he is making some progress.

"When he makes a drawing of the machine, he always colors it bright red," his father said as his blood surged through the tubes to the kidney machine.



HOOKED UP — Joe Black lies in bed hooked up to a kidney machine to which he owes his life. His wife Louise and children "visit" him in a hospital-clean room at home. (UPI Telephoto)

Gambling Clubs In Britain Are 'On The Ropes'

By PETER J. SHAW

LONDON (UPI)—A new law, not Lady Luck, has put more than 1,000 gambling clubs out of business in Britain.

Only 150 clubs among the 1,200 that sprang up during the swinging sixties and became a $1.5 million annual industry have survived the 1968 Gaming Act, which took effect this July 1.

Among the fallen are three major gaming clubs in London, including the famous Crockford's. Of about 60 London casinos and clubs in business at the start of 1970, just 23 remain.

As dust covers went over the green baize tables, up went worried cries that the Mafia and other specialists in organized crime would seek chunks of the more centralized action.

Control Gambling

"Talk of a Mafia takeover of gaming in Britain is absolute nonsense and complete irresponsibility," said Sir Stanley Raymond, chairman of the government's five-man Gaming Board.

Parliament, in the autumn of 1968, set up the Gaming Board to control and restrict legalized gambling which, it felt, was getting out of hand in Britain.

The board issues certificates of consent without which a gambling club cannot operate.

Gambling was legalized in Britain by a loophole-riddled Betting and Gaming Act of 1960. Subsequent gaming legislation in 1963 failed to plug the loopholes and gambling places proliferated.

"During the 10-year running battle between the law and club operators that is now ended by the new baming act, all games of unequal chance were in fact illegal," Sir Stanley said.

Requires Licensing

One problem with the original gaming laws was their failure to require registration of clubs. The new law requires licensing by a magistrate.

"In casino gaming, the turnover, the temptation and opportunities for crooked operation are great," Sir Stanley said. "Gambling is a very dangerous activity which has to be properly controlled."

The Gaming Board has wide and arbitrary powers and there is no appeal from its decisions. It is charged with examining the "character, reputation and financial standing" of the appliant and his associates.

Most of the clubs refused permission to renew or obtain licenses fell outside 41 geographical areas the government designated as suitable for gambling.

The reasons behind the rejection of clubs within the areas are never fully revealed by the Gaming Board—not even to the applicants.

But gaming industry sources said foreign or uncertain ownership—the latter posing the question of possible criminal ties—seemed to be the main reason for rejection of some major established clubs.

Phone Expansion Work Now In Its Final Stage

A $607,726 construction project to expand telephone facilities in the eastern section of Greenville and in the communities of Grimesland and Simpson is in its final phase of completion.

L. R. Langley, local manager for Carolina Telephone, said his company's construction forces have placed cable in the conduit installed along East Fifth Street and Highway 264-East. "They are now in the process of connecting the thousands of wires which extend from our Fifth Street Central Office to beyond Grimesland," Langley said.

The $607,726 total project was made up of four separate projects which involved placing over four miles of underground conduit, 32 access manholes, and the installation of over 18 miles of telephone cables. "The cables varied in size from 1,800 to 400 pairs of wires and now each pair must be identified and wired on the field end for a customer and to equipment in the central office," Langley explained.

"We expect to complete our work during August," Langley said, "and soon afterwards, be able to provide higher grades of service to subdivisions in the eastern section of Greenville. Multi-party subscribers in the Grimesland and Simpson communities and along Highway 264-East will have the number of telephones on their lines reduced to a maximum of four."

"These service improvements are a part of Carolina Telephone's continuing efforts to provide improved telephone service at the least practical cost and keep pace with the increasing demands and rapid growth of this area," Langley concluded.

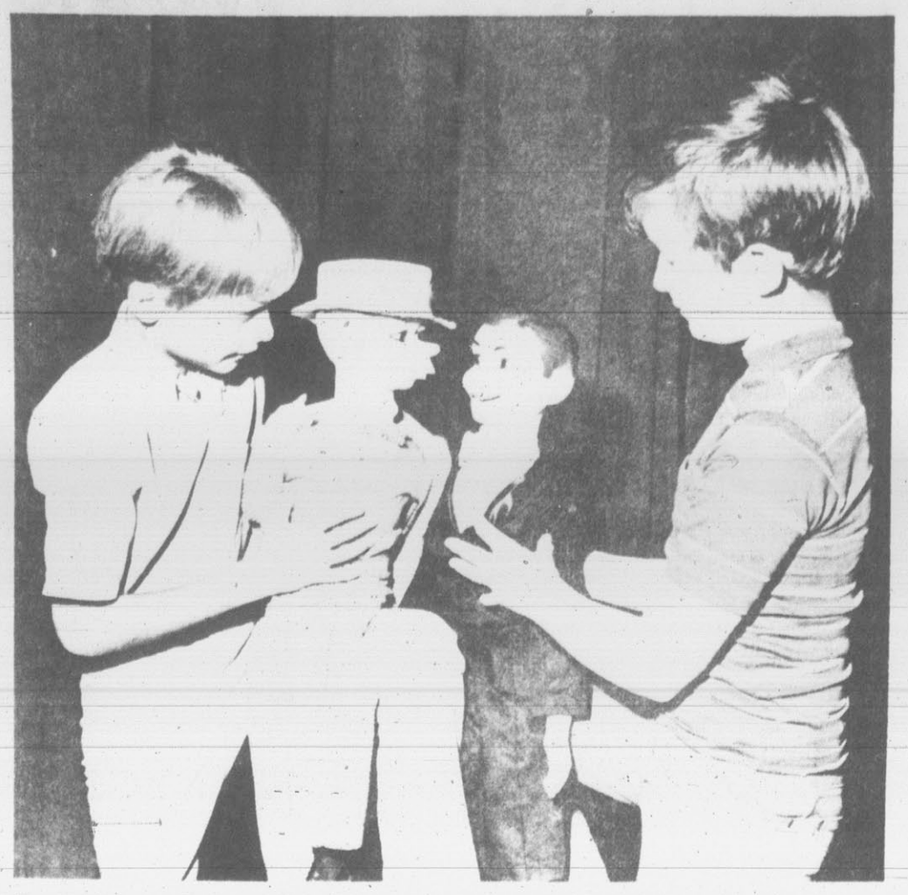
Children's Theatre: Greatest Experience



A VENTRILOQUIST DIALOGUE. . .is practiced by Will Sanderson, left, Pit Dickson and friends.

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor

"It's the greatest experience of my life," says Mrs. Beth Grant Cayton, director of Greenville's newly organized summer Children's Theatre Group.

"Getting children to appreciate drama as an art — seeing them love it as I do is something I will never forget," she continued.

The Greenville Recreation Department formed the theatre group as part of its summer expansion program. There are 62 boys and girls, ranging in ages six through 14, registered for the summer.

The program consists of classes in the basics of theatre production such as instruction in pantomime and pantomime skits. Experiments in improvisation, monologues and dialogues are included.

Elementary scene design and other technical aspects of stage production are being included in the classes. Make-up application is an important study effort in teaching.

There were no available funds or budget for the theatre group with the exception of Mrs. Cayton's salary, which she has used to help the group in "little ways." In addition, she has provided refreshments during several classes and has transported costumes and scenery.

Lack Of Funds

"The largest obstacle was lack of funds and an appropriate place to hold classes and rehearsals. The entire theatre group chipped in and helped each other in providing needed costumes and other essentials such as props and scenery," said Mrs. Cayton.

Continuing she added, "I think the project is worthwhile and would add a lot to the community as an annual summer project, if not year round."

When asked about community support, Mrs. Cayton replied, "There was a good turnout at the first play and parents of the children within the group have been very cooperative. Everybody is very encouraging and the Children's Theatre Group is something which has been needed here for a long time. East Carolina University allowed us to use their amphitheatre for our first play and we are now using Elmhurst School auditorium."

"Kaleidoscope" will be the final production of the group. The show will consist entirely of comedy presentations including the works of James Thurber and Carl Sandburg.

Included will be three short plays, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," "The Little Girl and The Wolf" and "Unicorn in The Garden." Sanburg's works of "The Machine" and "Beware" will be group presentations.

A ventriloquist dialogue, a collection of Sandburg's jokes incorporated into a skit and two abstract monologues will be included in the production, which has been set for Aug. 7 at the Elmhurst School auditorium.

The first production of the group included "Little Women," "Treasures of Monte Cristo" and a monologue, which was given on July 10.

Group Parties

During the next few weeks, the theatre group will be entertained at an informal party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins and a cast party has been planned for Aug. 8 at Elm Street Park.

Originally from Wilmington, Mrs. Cayton was active in summer recreation there, serving at intervals as girls athletic director, assistant director of Children's Theatre and as a center director.

She is a member of the Governor's Recreation Committee under the Department of Local Affairs, on which she will serve until expiration of her appointment in 1972. Mrs. Cayton's participation in drama enabled her to be selected as a lifetime member of the National Thespian Society, an honor society for outstanding drama students on the secondary school level.

She attended Governor's School of North Carolina in Drama in 1966 where she received a special award for outstanding achievement in her field. She has more recently appeared in college productions at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Mrs. Cayton is presently a drama and speech major at East Carolina University.

Miss Jo Betts Barrett Weds

In a candlelight ceremony in the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church on Saturday at 5:00 p.m., Miss Jo Betts Barrett became the bride of James Van Taylor III.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Russell Barrett of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Van Taylor Jr. of Bethel.

The Rev. Troy James Barrett, pastor of the bride, and the Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston, rector of Saint Paul's Episcopal Church, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Coronet candelabra entwined with smilax, springerii greenery and altar arrangements of white rubrum lilies, tuberoses and snapdragons were used to decorate the chancel. Directly in front of the altar stood a flower decked prie-dieu where the couple knelt to take their vows and for the benediction. Pews were marked with white satin ribbon and smilax.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Paul Alden Toll, organist, choir boys, Moulton Braxton Massey III, David Scott Creech, David Woodward Moye and Richard Michael Harrington, and soloists, Mrs. Thomas Rushman Andrews Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, of Bethel, and Mrs. John Herbert Waldrop Jr. of Greenville.

Prior to the entrance of the wedding party, the choir boys, standing in the narthex, sang "O Perfect Love." After the wedding vows were spoken, they sang "The Pledge."

Mrs. Andrews, soloist, sang "With This Ring" and "The Wedding Prayer." "Ave Maria" and "My Heart Ever Faithful" were sung by Mrs. Waldrop.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an alabaster white satin organza gown fashioned with a French lace bodice, high neckline and long, cuffed bishop sleeves. The cathedral train flowing from the natural waistline of the softly full skirt and fastened with a Cameo pin worn by brides for four generations on the maternal side of the family, was also of satin organza.

Her full length veil of silk illusion edged with bands of lace was held by a medieval bonnet of French lace overlaid and encrusted with pearls. The bride's only other ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried on her mother's prayer book white brides roses tied with alabaster ribbons.

Miss Eleanor Ann Joyner of Farmville was the maid of honor, and Mrs. Richard Warren Gaylord of Chapel Hill was the matron of honor.

Serving as bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Jane Stedman of Asheboro, Miss Sally Freeman Simpson of Williamston, Miss Frances Rives Rowlette of Bethel, Miss Elsya Watt Verdone of Charlotte, Mrs. Charles Wesley Smith Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, of Kinston and Miss Barbara Bacot Wright of Greenville.

The attendants were attired in floor length Juliet dresses of candlelight silk chiffon. The dresses were designed with high rounded necklines and long full sleeves with a deep ruffle at the wrists. Carnelian ribbon velvet appliqued with green leaves and embroidered flowers in tones of carnelian apricot, and moonstone accented the neck, waist and sleeves. They carried clusters of mid - century carnelian lilies and natural wheat tied with velvet streamers.

Child attendant was Miss Lisa Gay Jones of Newport News, Va., cousin of the bride. Her dress was identical to those of the bridesmaids. She carried a nosegay of tropicana roses and wore a circlet of miniature roses and wheat in her hair.

James Van Taylor Jr., father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Vance Bunting Taylor of Farmville, Don Columbus Carson III of Bethel, Norman Eugene Carson of Greenville, cousins of the bridegroom, Ferrell Leighton Blount III of Bethel, Edward Wilkes Atkinson Jr. of Winston-Salem, Sam Perry of Chapel Hill, James Leggett Kitchen of Virginia Beach, Va., and Frank Huling Poston III of Charlotte.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Barrett selected a classic Helenic gown of moonstone grey chiffon. The V-neck and long full sleeves were trimmed with gold beads and moonstones. Her flowers were white gardenias.

Mrs. Taylor, mother of the bridegroom, chose a formal full length dress of yellow chiffon and lace. She wore matching accessories, and her corsage was a green orchid.

Mrs. Agnes Barrett Joyner, cousin of the bride, wore a dress of Amalfi blue silk and a phalaenspsis orchid.

Mrs. James Van Taylor Sr., grandmother of the bridegroom, wore a lake blue dress of lace and silk and a lilac-centered white orchid.

For a wedding trip to Jamaica, the bride changed into a dress of navy enbroidered silk eyelet over white linen, with a large white organdy Dutch collar. Her accessories were white.

Mrs. Taylor is a graduate of Saint Mary's Junior College, Raleigh. She was presented at the Terpsichorean Ball in Raleigh in 1968. Presently, she is a senior at the University of North Carolina, where she is a member of Delta, Delta, Delta sorority.

Mr. Taylor is a graduate of Woodberry Forrest School. A member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, he also is a senior at the University of North Carolina. After his graduation, he expects to enter medical school.

The couple will reside in Chapel Hill.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett, parents of the bride, held a reception to honor the bridal couple at their home. Guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Barrett, the bridal couple and his parents.

At noon on Saturday, a wedding breakfast given by the friends of the family of the bride honored the wedding party at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Other events prior to the wedding included an after - rehearsal dinner at the Candlewick Inn. Hosts and hostesses for the dinner were friends of the family of the bridegroom.

Also in the Blue Room of the Candlewick Inn and following the dinner, a dance was given by the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. James Van Taylor Jr. of Bethel and Mr. and Mrs. George Nick Noble of Trenton.

Lawyer-Husband Now Divorced

LONDON (WNS) — Jessie Levett-Yeats, 35, sued her lawyer-husband for divorce because he was forever cross-examining her and the children at home. Justice Park granted her a divorce on grounds of cruelty after permitting husband Dennis Levett-Yeats, 43, to cross-examine her in Divorce Court. "I felt that I was witnessing in this court the kind of conduct the wife complains of in her marriage," said the sympathetic judge. "It was not suitable behavior for home and family."

Sew what's new.

by Ruth Ann Faulk

THE "INNER" GARMENT

The lining of a garment is often the ingredient that provides the finished, professional look that all home sewers seek in their "creations".

The main functions of a lining are to give body and support, or to "finish" the inside of a garment.

When purchasing a lining: Consider your garment and the reason a lining is needed.

Then decide upon the method of lining that is most suitable for your garment. An "underlining" usually backs each section of a garment whereas a "lining" is sewn together and applied to the garment as a separate "inner" garment.

Because a lining should never impose itself on the outer fabric, carefully consider the weight and texture of your fabric. (In most cases, the lining should be lighter in weight.)

The actual style of the garment is, another important factor that should be carefully considered. A crisp lining is necessary for straight designs, whereas a soft lining is essential in a garment with flowing or draped lines.

The lining and the outer fabric must require the same type of care. A machine washable lining is a must in a machine washable fabric.

The lining should be of a quality that will last the life of the garment.

One of the finest linings now on the market is "Polee", the new Polyester lining now available at all Piedmont Fabrics stores. Not only does it have the appearance and hand of china silk, but the durability and washability only found in Polyester. After you try "Polee", you will find that it will answer many of your lining needs.

It's Open Season On Mothers

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you don't believe this is pick-on-Mom month, listen to a few gripes.

...Because her widowed mother "is loading the guest list with a lot of her Establishment-type friends," an 18-year-old bride-to-be, an only child, is seething.

"My mother acts as if it is her own wedding. She dictates everything, even the guest list. Why must we have so many of her friends? Isn't the bride supposed to make up the guest list."

A—It is more or less traditional for the groom's family to make up a list of guests, and sometimes this is limited, and then the bride's family adds its list which includes the bride's friends.

Usually, mother and daughter discuss the guest list and they are both so happy, everything seems to jell. In her eagerness, the mother of an only daughter may seem a bit domineering, but the excitement may be fraying her nerves. It is no picnic planning a wedding, and a mother may be the only one who can enjoy the chore.

Why be chintzy about guests if mother is paying the bill? If a girl prefers a small wedding reception, her mother may be disappointed, but she'll go along with it. After all, she can show off daughter to her friends at the church, and she can limit reception invitations to relatives and friends and the wedding party.

...And then there is a mother who insists on spending her working dollars in her own way, and her daughter doesn't approve.

"My mother went to work to put my brother through college, and she has continued to work for 'extras'—furniture, house repairs, and so on. Before I graduated from high school, she promised me a trip to Europe, but she suddenly decided I couldn't have it right now as she was using the money for my sister's orthodontic work. Isn't that an anytime project that can wait a year or so? I'm the one in the family who always gets the 'you must wait' routine..."

A—A mother who is good enough to work to supply the family with a few dividends should certainly be entitled to decide which projects deserve priority. She probably figures that Europe will be there tomorrow, but one day it might be too late for your sister to have her teeth repaired.

...And there's a mother who insists on dating the man of her choice.

"My widowed mother has fallen for a hippie! She used to criticize my long-haired friends, but suddenly she is going out with a real hippie type who wears a beard and looks like a dirty old man. He is revolting and it is a disgrace to my father's memory," says a 19-year-old college sophomore.

A—It could be that your mother got side-tracked trying to tell you something. Maybe when you get the message...

...And then there is the mother who bores daughter with her conversations about marijuana.

"She really runs this thing into the ground and she has the whole family ganging up on me. My brother discovered a good friend of mine smokes the weed and now they are trying to pin it on me. They constantly harass me and drive me to say things I really don't mean."

A—Tell your brother to cool it or he'll drive you to pot. Your mother would be satisfied if you could give her some actual assurances, by volunteering conversation when you are not being harassed about it. A heart-to-heart talk may convince them to bury he needle.

Wife's Duty Is To Her Husband

By Abigail Van Buren

(c 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Recently you had a letter from a young wife whose husband was offered a better job in another state. She was reluctant to leave her mother as she was an only child, and you advised her to move with her husband.

Abby, I realize that a woman's first duty is to her husband, but why must money and position come before one's parents who have spent the best years of their lives raising their children in the hope that in their later years they will have someone to visit them and comfort them?

When children move hundreds of miles from their parents, visiting is a financial burden and also an inconvenience. What's the use of having children if all you have to look forward to is a visit from them every year or two?

It seems as tho society doesn't think family love is important anymore. It's the almighty dollar that counts.

CLOSE TO MOTHER

DEAR CLOSE: You say you realize that a woman's first duty is to her husband. You're right. But if he must move in order to accept a better job in another state, there is more than "the almighty dollar" involved. His sense of accomplishment and confidence in his ability to succeed and climb higher is at stake. The wife who asks him to stay where he is and pass up promotion because she wants to stay close to her parents is doing her husband a tremendous disservice.

It's nice, I agree, when parents can have their children near to visit them and comfort them in their old age, but that is not the reason parents raise children. [And if it is, it shouldn't be.]

DEAR ABBY: I have a complaint which I certainly hope you will give a little publicity to because I am sure others have the same complaint. It's the utter and complete thoughtlessness with which some people select retirement gifts.

Example: My sister has just retired, and some of her co-workers called and asked me for "suggestions" for a gift for her. I said, "She is moving into a mobile home and is getting rid of a lot of things, so why don't you give her a gift certificate and let her buy what she wants? [My sister had just given her daughter all her china, stemware and silver, and she kept only one set of dishes and a set of stainless steel to use in her limited quarters.]

So what did her co-workers give her? A set of china [108 pieces!] and a huge silver tray, inscribed, "Best wishes for a long and happy life. The employes of—." She has to stand the tray on the floor as there is no cupboard large enough to hold it. The dishes she is considering taking to a gift exchange place.

ALSO RETIRED

DEAR ALSO: I can understand some well-meaning co-workers selecting an inappropriate gift, but when they go to the trouble of asking there is no excuse for such colossal goofs.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished cleaning up after a family dinner, and for once I am not "beat."

We have one son who has been married for 10 years. He and his wife [and her parents] have eaten at my home so many times I couldn't begin to count them.

My husband and I have eaten at my son's home twice, and at her parents' home twice.

Tonight, I did not lay the table as usual with my pretty china, sterling, crystal, and linen. I used sturdy paper plates, plastic cups and my everyday stainless.

Eyebrows were raised, but I got compliments on my food as usual. I might add that my daughter-in-law and her mother are both fabulous cooks, but they cannot be bothered to have guests.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Saturday Ceremony

BETHEL — Miss Sara Susan Hunniecutt became the bride of John Edwin King IV on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in a ceremony at her home.

Dr. Robert McKee, pastor of the Bethel United Methodist Church, officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. R. Harold Staton.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. William Russell Hunniecutt of Bethel and the late Mr. Hunniecutt and Mr. and Mrs. John Edwin King III of Farmville.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Joseph Warren Hunniecutt, of Bethel, wore a white costume of Swedish lace.

Mrs. Joseph Warren Hunniecutt was matron of honor. The father of the bridegroom served as best man.

The bride was a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority at East Carolina University and a graduate in medical technology from the Medical College of Virginia.

The bridegroom was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity at Wofford College and a graduate in business administration from Atlantic Christian College.

On The Young Side

By MARGARET STEVENS

Rose High School presently has representatives throughout the United States and abroad, though all will be returning for the opening of school one month from today.

Sue Trevathan, a rising Rose junior, is participating in an eight - week expedition into Arizona, Colorado, and New Mexico. Sue is one of 28 girls and four counselors from all over the United States who are traveling into very remote areas of these states, exploring and sleeping in tents.

Each girl has chosen a certain field as her project, and Sue is working on an archaeology project during the eight - week period. Having left the last of June, Sue will be returning from her explorations in late August.

Martha Sugg and Warren Gaylord returned July 18 from a five - week "grand tour" of the West. Consisting of 42 young people and four chaperones, the tour took a bus from Winston - Salem and headed West.

Places visited include the Frontierland of Dodge City, Kan.; Pike's Peak, Colo.; Yellowstone National Park; Seattle, Wash.; the Grand Canyon; and Disneyland. Parts of Canada and Mexico were also visited.

Students from Wilmington, Charlotte, Burlington, Richmond, Washington, D.C., and Winston - Salem participated in the travels.

Community Ambassadors Susan Leggett and Elizabeth Jones are enjoying their stays in Cori, Italy and Athens, Greece, respectively. Elizabeth finds Greece very beautiful, and her first letter home began "Greetings from Gorgeous Greece."

Elizabeth had a wonderful experience on her Geneva - Athens flight in meeting and talking with Margaret Meade, the famous anthropologist.

Elizabeth's Greek family includes one older sister who speaks English. The parents, however, do not. Elizabeth reports swimming in the clear and beautiful Aegean Sea. The beach is not sandy, but composed of small stones.

Susan has two Italian sisters, the older of which speaks fluent English. Susan is lucky, because she is the only one of a group of 10 Americans in Cori with an English - speaking person in the family. These 10 Americans compose a group with one group leader, and go on excursions together.

Cori, Italy has no running water, and water must be obtained from a village well.

Steve Peszko is serving as a foreign exchange student in Medellin, Columbia in South America. The Peszko family may have an unusual experience this fall, in that the whole Eccheverri family with whom Steve is staying may visit them. If this is not possible, one member of the family will come here as an exchange student.

Rose students hold jobs in varying fields from construction to secretarial work. Offering their services at the Recreation Center are Bryant Kittrell, Lisa Glidewell, Ben James, Penny Harrison, Pam Carter, and Laura Robbins.

The Birodanjles, a Rose High folksinging group, have cut an album at Pitt Sounds Studio. The record includes songs the group has performed for civic groups, as well as songs prepared for an end-of-the-year concert. Records may be purchased for $4.00. For information call any member of the group.

New members of the Rose High folksinging group, the Birodanjles, are as follows: Bill Cheek; Joan Cobb; Julie Gurganus; Gloria Hawley; Rebecca Jones; Kathy Kirk; Amy Leggett; Mary Bryan Matney; Chris O'Connell; Maurice Sheppard; Susie Still; and Cathy Wilson.

Lady Gives Midi Coat A Boot

By SARA FRITZ

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The mini may win the hemline battle by default.

Fashion people apparently expect to improve sales with the new long skirts. They may be wrong.

Women who are not already discouraged by the look of the "longuette" skirt will be if they try to buy one. I tried and failed to buy a $65 raincoat with a midcalf hemline in a city department store.

"I'll take this," I said, handing the coat and a charge card to the sales woman. She looked at me suspiciously.

"Are you going to wear it with boots?" she asked.

"No," I said. "It's summer and I don't usually wear boots in 80-degree weather."

"Well, then, you will be wearing it with heavy, dark stockings, won't you?"

"No. I don't wear heavy stockings in the summer either."

"Well," she said, "we are advising women not to wear these coats without boots or dark hose. You probably shouldn't buy it if you aren't going to wear boots or dark hose."

"But this is a raincoat," I protests. "This coat is meant to be worn in the summer. Boots and dark stockings are meant to be worn in the winter. Why do they even make coats like this if you can't wear them when it's raining in the summer?"

"You're supposed to buy rain boots to go with them."

"You mean, you're telling me not to buy a $65 coat because I don't have rainboots?" I asked.

"Well" she replied, "I'm just advising you not to buy it."

"You aren't going to sell many coats this way," I said. Then I left.

Hiroshima Rose Again From Death In Holocaust

By TEIJI SHIMIZU

HIROSHIMA, Japan (UPI) — Trees and flowers would never grow again and there would be no more of Hiroshima's famous oysters. That was what many Japanese people thought 25 years ago.

Hiroshima city, situated in the western part of Japan's largest island of Honshu, was wiped out by the blast of the world's first atomic bomb on Aug. 6, 1945.

Those who survived the holocaust not only believed that plants would never grow again, but that the city would remain an uninhabited, ruined waste for a long time to come, if not forever.

Awesome Mushroom Cloud

There were more than 340,000 persons in Hiroshima —240,000 of them residents —when a formation of three B29s arrived over the city that August morning. The skies were clear and sunny.

One of the B29s stopped its engines at an altitude of 27,800 feet and released its one bomb.

The three aircraft quickly departed, leaving behind them a trail of thick, red columns of flames and an awesome mushroom-shaped cloud.

At Least 80,000 Died

To this day nobody knows for sure how many people were killed and injured. Estimates of the dead ranged from 80,000 to 200,000. The injured totaled more than 100,000.

America dropped another atomic bomb on Aug. 9, 1945 on Nagasaki, the southern Japanese port city, home of opera's Madame Butterfly.

Economy Has Rebounded

Hiroshima, reduced to ashes 25 years ago, is very much alive with a population of 560,000. It is the seat of the Hiroshima prefectural government and produces a great quantity of oysters from its scenic inland sea.

Hiroshima also is the home of a professional baseball team, the Hiroshima Carps, which plays in a city-owned stadium located only a few thousand yards from the spot where the A-bomb exploded.

Hiroshima's name frequently appears nowadays in the economic pages of newspapers since Japan's third largest automobile maker (Toyo Kogyo) has its head office and plants just outside the city.

Reluctant To Remember

And like any other Japanese city of its size, Hiroshima has its share of gay night life. Glittering neon signs light up the city. Japanese visitors and American and foreign tourists coming to Hiroshima in this year of Expo '70 have no difficulty finding out where bars and night clubs are situated.

Taxi driver Koichi Taguchi talks readily enough about the lures and pitfalls of the night life —including a warning to strangers to beware the bar girls. "Many girls working in the bars and cabarets are associated with gangsters," he says. He is less forthcoming about the bombing.

A 57-year-old native Hiroshiman, Taguchi lived through the attack.

He Missed Opportunity

"Many people in this city don't talk about the genbaku (atomic bombing) anymore," he said. "They don't care to."

Taguchi was lucky. He suffered only a "falling out of my hair." He regrets he wasn't more foresighted when the war ended.

"If I were smart," he said, "I would have gouth land and I would be rich today. But many people said at that time that the city would be no place for people to live. You could have bought land for practically nothing then. But today it costs more than a million yen ($2,777) a tsubo (4 square yards) in the heart of the city."

A park studded with green trees and benches by the river in the center of the city provides a comfortable outdoor resting place for citizens of Hiroshima. On sunny days girls in miniskirts stroll in the park while men sit on the benches to play shogi (Japanese chess).

This is the Hiroshima Memorial Park. It was above this park that the A-bomb exploded.

The bare iron frame dome perched atop what used to be the three-story Hiroshima industrial exhibition hall stands across the river from the memorial park as one of the few physical reminders of the bombing. The city also maintains the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Museum, where broken rocks, stones, torn clothing and photographs of people burned in the blast are on display.

'A Role For Peace'

Kaoru Ogura, director of the museum, said the exhibits "touch the hearts" of people who come to see them—an average 5,000 to 6,000 a day, by his estimate.

"Some people leave the museum with feelings of shock after learning the horror of war," he said in an interview. "Many young Japanese who never experienced war depart with conviction that there should be no war.

"Thus, I believe, Hiroshima has played a role for peace in the world. Like other students, those in Hiroshima University are opposed to all wars and not just against the nuclear weapons."

An American Visitor

Dr. Lucius Hoyt, a general practitioner from Reynolds, Ill., said he thought the display at the museum "is very well put together."

"It reports fairly," he said after seeing the exhibits during a visit to Hiroshima. "There's nothing nice about the atomic bomb and you cannot make anything nice out of it. Yet it's part of war and there is nothing nice about war."

While Hiroshima gives the outward impression that effects of the bombing have practically vanished, there are some people who still suffer from it.

At the Japan Red Cross Hospital in the city, there are 147 people who are hospitalized with diseases connected with the bombing.

Still Studying Effects

And on the other side of the city, on a a hill, a team of American and Japanese medical experts continue to engage in research on latent effects of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima.

These physicians are working for the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission, a joint operation by the governments of the United States and Japan.

Dr. Joseph L. Belsky, chief of medicine, says the study at the commission must continue.

"The reason is that these people who are survivors represent a very unique situation which we hope will not be repeated," he told UPI. "At the same time those who come here seem willing to help the world discover what if any new late effects there are."

Belsky said the survivors come to the commission voluntarily and they get physical checkups free of charge. "Some come because they feel 'America owes it to me'," he commented.

He said from time tc time the commission finds something it had not found before. "In a very recent review," he said, "we found that perhaps young people—children at the time of the bombing who received high doses—might risk of having cancer sooner than would be expected for their age. This was not known 10 years ago."

Boys Home Game Week In Greenville

Saturday night at 8:00 p.m. in Ficklen Memorial stadium a strong foot will be placed into an oblong ball and thousands of kids. Jaycees, and football fans will loudly usher in the 1970 football season.

Why a football game on August 1st?.

The primary reason is to raise funds for Boys Home at Lake Waccamaw. Secondary to this is that the Boys Home All-Star Game affords the N. C. Jaycees a vehicle to recognize some 54 young athletes and 4 top - notch high school coaches each year for their excellence in football. And of course it provides football fans from throughout the state an opportunity to watch spectacular football being played by future college stars.

When Boys Home was being formed, R. N. McCray (ex-head coach at William & Mary and currently Boys Home Director) approached the various civic organizations with the idea of building cottages, or small dormitories, to house a total of 100 young boys. These youths would come to the home from environments that were not conducive to the effective development of young boys.

Responding to this challenge, the North Carolina Jaycees obligated themselves in 1960 to build a 16-boy cottage at a cost of $60,000. The cottage was built and occupied in 1962. At that point the Jaycees owed a balance of $21,000 on the facility with no ready means to liquidate the obligation. Local chapters throughout the state had already substantially drained their available resources and no funds were available in the state organizations treasury.

Congressman Walter Jones of Farmville, who at that time was a Boys Home Trustee, and McCray had conceived the idea of a second late summer All - State Game (the East - West Game played in Greensboro had been in existence for some time) for the benefit of Boys Home. Their problem was finding a sponsor with enough manpower and enthusiasm to promote such an event. Simultaneously with these events, East Carolina University, began building the first phase of Ficklen Stadium.

Representatives of Boys Home and the Jaycees put the proposal to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association and obtained their approval contingent upon the game being played at least 150 miles East of Greensboro to insure it would not detract from the East - West Game.

A quick look at the map revealed Greenville and East Carolina University as the only spot meeting the requirements. The Greenville Jaycees eagerly agreed to host the event and East Carolina University readily made their facilities available. Thus the first athletic event ever played in Ficklen Stadium was the first Boys Home All - Star Game in early August, 1963. Teams were divided on a North - South basis in order not to be confused with the East - West Game. Coach Choppy Wagner's (then coach at Washington) South team registered the first victory with a 26-0 score.

The North has since reeled off 6 straight wins with the following scores 1964 21-0; 1965 32-0; 1966 24-7; 1967 19-14; 1968 20-6; and 1969 26-14.

Numberous college stars such as Butch Colson (ECU), Ricky Lanier (UNC), Jim Sursavage (Clemson), Billy Wallace (ECU), Jim Gudger (ECU), Tim Foley (N.C. State), Steve Davis (ECU), Toby Morgan (Lenoir Rhyne), Digit Laughridge (Wake Forest) and Billy Wightman (ECU) began their post high school careers on the Ficklen Stadium turf. In addition a number of boys from smaller schools (game regulations require that players be equally distributed over 4-A, 3-A, 2-A and 1-A schools) have received college grants as a result of their performance here.

The 1965 game paid off the debt on the Jaycee cottage. Since that time funds have been used to help pay operating costs of the cottage which runs some $25,000 annually. Misfortune reared its ugly head in 1966 and again in 1967 by bringing torrential rains on the event. In spite of this, the Jaycees' efforts in 1967 resulted in a $5,000 contribution to Boys Home.

There have also been some humorous incidents. In the 1965 game, the teams were aligned on the field when suddenly it was realized that there were no chains available. Game chairman, Julian Vainright, and former ECU football coach, Odell Welborn, frantically rushed to the equipment room in search of the chains. The whistle sounded and the ball was put in the air with Vainright and Welborn stirring through piles of equipment. Forunately the kickoff went out of bounds, it was brought back and kicked again and just as the official placed the ball down for the first play from scrimmage, Vainright and Welborn appeared with the chains and the game progressed without the spectators realizing the dilemna.

The following year was the first year that the game was played in the rain. Shortly after kickoff it was discovered that no dry towels were available to dry the wet balls. Game chairman, Don McGlohon, dispatched assistant chairman, Gene Prescott, to his residence which is near the stadium to get some old towels. Moments later Prescott dashed in with a large assortment of multi - colored flowered bath towels straight from Mrs. McGlohon's finest collection. Chuckles could be heard throughout the crowd as the officials used the gayly designed towels to dry the balls. There were few chuckles from the area Mrs. McGlohon was seated.

Irrespective of these minor problems, the game has grown increasingly in stature over the years. Coaches who have participated are lavish in their praise of the Jaycees and the overall organization of the week's activities. This year's chairman, Sam Keel of Greenville, reports that advance ticket sales are running at an alltime high rate both on the local level and in Jaycees chapters throughout the state.

For the Jaycees who direct much of their efforts toward youth and sports, and whose creed ends with the charge "we believe that service to humanity is the best work of life", the Boys Home All - Star Game is a natural. For the football players and coaches it is an honor. For Boys Home it is a direct and indirect economic boost via the public exposure the game provides. For the college coaches it insures that their freshman recruits will report in shape. For the Greenville community, the game focuses statewide attention upon it. For football fans the game provides outstanding entertainment.

Cash Is In

No Progress In Pro Grid Talks

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Both sides huddled with federal mediators here Saturday in the contract hassle between the National Football League Players Association and team owners—and it looked like it would be a long weekend.

There was no indication progress had been made when members of the players negotiating committee emerged close-mouthed after a two-hour morning session with the mediators. The owners had been scheduled to go into the meeting an hour after the players started at 10 a.m. but the session ran into overtime before it broke for lunch.

Alan Miller, an attorney for the players, was asked if he expected to be in town Sunday. "I certainly do," Miller replied, "I have no train tickets."

Another member of the association negotiating team, Cincinnati Bengals tackle Ernie Wright, seemed to sum up the results to date of the talks which started Friday when he told reporters, "It's your humble duty to ask and it's my humble duty to say nothing."

Wright, Miller and Ken Bowman of the Green Bay Packers represented the association Saturday. John Mackey, president of the players association, did not put in an appearance.

Tex Schramm, Dallas Cowboys president and Ralph Wilson, owner of the Buffalo Bills, represented the owners.

Meanwhile, it looked like there would be plenty of seconds for rookie players at training tables Sunday. With no settlement of the pension dispute in sight, veteran players will probably stay away from the league's 26 training camps. The owners had earlier closed the camps to the veterans until the matter is resolved.

The players' association gave in on at least one point Friday when it permitted the Kansas City Chiefs to begin workouts for the annual game against the College All Stars in Chicago next Friday.

Jim Tyrer, player representative of the Chiefs, made it clear the veterans would practice only for the All-Star game.

"If the dispute between the NFL owners and the NFLPA is not successfully concluded by July 31, we will then disperse and end all training in compliance with the request of all 1,300 NFLPA members until such time as all our association's negotiations are settled."

The main issue on the bargaining table is the amount to be contributed by the owners to the players' pension fund. The owners have offered $18 million over a four-year period. The association says it wants $26 million. Other fringe benefits are involved in the dispute.

In Washington, meanwhile, the NFLPA issued a position pape in rebuttal to one issued by the owners earlier in the week as the battle of words continued away from the negotiating site.

The players' position paper took issue with owner estimates of monthly retirement benefits in the proposal pension package, contended the powers of the commissioner are no longer an issue despite the owners insistence that it is and said the players were not striking—they had been locked out of camp.

It also said the owners had distorted the true increase in players' salaries and bonuses over the past several years and took strong issue with the use of the word "unrealistic" as applied by the owners in describing player demands.

"That word unrealistic'" said the statement. "Our general managers tell us that our individual contract demands are unrealistic. Our owners tell us that our group collective bargaining demands are unrealistic. The owners provide information on which to base our projections, yet they tell us the projections and our advisors are unrealistic.

"What is unrealistic? Dress codes, grooming standards and restrictions on our basic rights to speak and write what we wish."

The latter apparently is an allusion to a report that one of the points made by the owners during negotiating sessions dealt with player conduct and dress as representatives of the sport and in light of their influence on young people.

On the issue of the powers of the commissioner, the position paper said: "It is the player's proposal that the role of the commissioner be preserved and that the commissioner has the power to veto, amend of accept recommendations in non-injury grievance cases."

Rabbits Hop Up, Catch Jack And Arnie

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — The unlikely combination of Dave Eichelberger and J.C. Goosie, a pair of refugees from the rabbit ranks, came out of the pack Saturday and tied giants Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus for the third-round lead in the $200,000 National Four-Ball Golf Championship.

Eichelberger and Goosie, who had to survive Monday qualifying to get into the field for this team event, carved out an eight-under-par 63—including 29 on the backside—for a 54-hole total of 192.

Nicklaus and Palmer heavily favored with Palmer playing on his home course, the 7,045-yard Laurel Valley Golf Club, also were at 192 after a third-round 64.

Sam Snead and Gardner Dickinson, who were tied with Palmer and Nicklaus for the lead going into the hot, muggy day's round drifted back with a 68 for 196—four strokes off the pace.

Australian Bruce Crampton and former U.S. Open champ Orville Moody forged into third place with a 64 for 194.

Moody, in a slump for several months, snapped out of it with two strings or four consecutive birdies.

Miller Barber and Don January were tied with Snead and Dickinson at 196, the two veterans from Texas taking a 66. Jim Colbert and Dean Refram followed at 197, after a 67, with two other teams at 198. They were the Hill brothers, Mike and Dave, and Bob Lunn and Dave Stockton. Both teams had 65s.

Goosie, a 41-year-old former club pro who returned to the tour only this year, blew a six-foot putt on the 185h that would have given him and his 26-year-old partner sole control of the lead.

Neither has ever won a tour event and they made it into the field only when Goosie sank a 60-foot putt to c'aim the final qualifying spot on Monday.

Goosie has been a pro since 1954, but has been on the tour only occasionally. Eichelberger is a former Walker Cupper who turned pro in 1966 but had only $9,400 in money winnings last year.

"Tiger meat," the laconic Goosie replied when asked what he'd been eating to get up so high for the tournament.

"I kind of scraped it around at times," said the dark, intense Eichelberger, but my partner was always there to pick me up."

Goosie and Eichelberger were in the same foursome with Palmer and Nicklaus and drew most of the gallery of about 15,000.

Aaron Hits 580th In 9-0 Victory

CHICAGO (AP) — Hank Aaron's 26th homer of the season and the 580th of his career backed Phil Niekro's two-hitter and the Atlanta Braves to a 9-0 victory Saturday over the Chicago Cubs.

Aaron's homer came in the sixth after Felix Millan singled to break up a pitching duel between Niekro, 9-12, and Ferguson Jenkins, 11-12.

Aaron lifted a foul behind the plate but when catcher Randy Hundley reached into the stands for the ball, a fan snapped it up. Aaron belted the next pitch out of the park for a 2-0 lead.

The Braves put the game beyond reach with a five-run burst in the eighth, featuring a two-run double by Orlando Cepeda and a two-run single by Tony Gaonzalez.

Pinch Hit Slam Saves New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Marshall slammed a pinch hit three-run homer in the seventh inning Saturday, powering the New York Mets to a 6-4 victory over Los Angeles.

Marshall's fifth homer came off Jose Pena who relieved starter Alan Foster after Ron Swoboda led off the seventh with a walk and Jerry Grote singled. The Mets added another run in the inning when Ken Singleton doubled home Joe Foy.

Los Angeles had taken a 4-2 lead in the sixth. Bill Grabarkewitz led off with a double and scored on Manny Mota's triple. Mota was thrown out at the plate on an infield hit but the Dodgers got two more runs in the inning on RBI singles by Wes Parker and Bill Russell.

Willie Davis hit his fifth homer for the Dodgers in the fifth but the Mets came back to take a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the inning on an error and Bud Harrelson's sacrifice fly.

Buford's Homer Leads Baltimore By Twins

By PAT THOMPSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

....minneapolis-ST. PAUL (AP) — Don Buford powered the Baltimore Orioles over the Minnesota Twins 6-5 Saturday with a two-run, eighth inning homer.

Buford's shot into the left field seats came after reliever Dick Hall beat out an infield single, his first hit of the year.

Hall, in four innings, yielded three hits including Tony Oliva's bases empty homer, his 15th in the eighth inning.

Frank Robinson, Ellie Hendricks, Dave Johnson and pinch-hitter Terry Crowley laced sixth inning singles to produce two Oriole runs and tie the score 4-4.

Harmond Killebrew's windblown double, Frank Quilici's run-scoring single and Leo Cardenas' two-run single drove in the runs.

The Orioles broke into a 2-0 first inning lead on Bill Zepp's wildness before a man was out. Buford was hit by a pitch, took scond on a wild pitch and scored when Zepp fielded Paul Blair's bunt and threw it into right field for a three-base error. Boog Powell drilled a double down the line in right for the second run.

Little League Tourney Opens

The Area II Little League tournament will open play Monday in Robersonville. Two Greenville teams will be involved in the play during the week.

The Area winner will meet the Area I winner on Saturday to determine the District Four champion, which enters the state battle the following week.

Monday, two games are planned. At 3 p.m., Tarboro will take on Pope Air Force Base. Then, at 5 p.m., Roanoke Rapids will meet Southern Pines.

Greenville Wins, 5-0, Gains Finals

Championship Game Is Set For 1:30 Today

KINGS MOUNTAIN — Greenville's Babe Ruth All - Stars advanced to the finals of the State Tournament Friday with a 5-0 win over Concord.

The win left Greenville as the only unbeaten in the tournament, and means they have to win only one more game to claim the title.

The championship game is slated for 1:30 p.m. today. A second game, if necessary, would be played immediately after the end of the first.

East Asheville and Concord played Saturday afternoon for the right to face Greenville in the finals.

The All - Stars moved into the contest on the four - hit pitching of Stanley Cobb, who hurled the shutout. He struck out eight and walked four during the game. He was in trouble only twice, in the fourth and fifth innings.

In the fourth, Jerry Furr doubled and Lyn DeBerry, walked to put runners at first and second before the final out. Then, in the fifth, Gary Marshall led off with a double and with one out, Robin Swaringer singled to left, but the run was unable to score. Stanley Boger walked with two outs, loading the bases. But pitcher Don Means popped up, ending the frame and getting Cobb out of the jam.

Greenville pushed out into the lead with two runs in the first inning. Bill Lee walked with two outs, and when Means attempted to pick him off first, the ball was errored, and Lee moved on to second.

J. C. Daniels followed wigh a single to left, scoring Lee. Daniels moved into second when the throw went home to try and get Lee. Cobb then aided his own cause with a single to right, scoring Daniels for a 2-0 lead.

In the third, Lee again reached, this time on an infield single down the third - base line. He stole second, and when the ball was overthrown, he streaked on to third. Another overthrow there allowed him to go the rest of the way for the third run for Greenville.

Then, in the sixth, Greenville added two more insurance runs. Wayne Bailey walked and stole second. Harding Sugg reached on an error, and Bailey moved on to third. Sugg moved to second unheeded and Herb Wilkerson brought both runners in with a single into left field.

The winner of the tournament will advance to the regionals, to be held the week of August 10 in Huntsville, Ala. The winner of that goes on to the national tournament in California in late August.

According to plans early Saturday, Greenville planned to return home following Sunday's game. If only one game is needed, they would arrive here sometime between 10 p.m. and midnight tonight. If a second game is needed, the arrival time would be some two hours later.

Woody's Ramblin's

By WOODY PEELE

The next couple of weeks are going to be busy ones in the local sports world, and things could get a lot crowded very shortly.

This week, there are two-and-a-half activities going on.

First, this is the week of the annual Boys' Home Bowl Game, to be played Saturday night in Ficklen Stadium. Some 50 boys are to start work tomorrow for the game. The North currently holds a 6-1 edge in the game, and the South is out for revenge this year.

Then, starting tomorrow, the Little League opens the district tournament in Robersonville. Two Greenville teams are competing in it, hoping to grab off a berth in the state tournament.

And finally, while not really a half, the Greenville and Kinston American Legion's best-of-five series continues this week, after failing for nearly all of the week to get off the ground because of constant rain. It will wind up this week, with the winner going on into the state semi-finals.

The following week, Greenville could have, dependeng on the outcome of today's activities, and this week's contests, three teams continuing baseball play. The Little League state tournament is here that week, while the Babe Ruth All-Stars, if victorious, will be going to Huntsville, Ala., to play in the Regionals.

And the Legion, if it beats Kinston, will be playing in the state semis.

Then, the next week, it gets even worse. There could be continued play in each of the three above, AND. . . football season gets underway with the start of practice.

To top all of that off, the annual Southern Conference Rouser, the meeting of the coaches of the conference and the press, rounds out the week.

After that, well, there's a lot to go between now and then.

With football season just over a month away (as far as opening games are concerned), we begin preparations for coverage of the many games in the Pitt-Martin-Greene area. This year, there will be as many teams as last year, despite consolidations.

North Pitt and Conley High Schools will field teams for the first time, as consolidated schools. Two other schools in the county system, South Ayden and H. B. Sugg, which have fielded teams in the past, will not this year, due to consolidation plans, so that evens things off.

In Greenville's junior high school system, Eppes has been phased out and merged with Aycock this year. But the school, with 1,700 students, has plans to field two separate teams this year. Some form of division will be made to insure impartality in selection of players, such as alphabetical.

So, while the names may change, there are no more for this year, but the promise for the future is exciting in that there will be a better brand of football overall due to consolidation.

And while the picture may be cloudy as to the future of athletics in the area, at least for the next year, it will clear up as new conference alignments are made and skills advance.

Coaches and principals please note: We'd like to get a copy of your schedules as soon as possible.

Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Al Kaline knocked in four runs with a three-run homer and a single to pace the Detroit Tigers to a 9-4 clobbering of the Chicago White Sox Saturday and give Denny McLain his second victory.

McLain gave up three runs and seven hits in seven innings. It was his seventh start since returning from suspension July 1 and evened his record at 2-2.

His teammates staked him to a 5-0 lead after two innings off Chicago starter Jerry Crider, 3-4. Kaline's homer came in the four-run second inning and he singled in a run in the seventh off reliever Wilbur Wood.

Detroit added three runs in the fourth off Floyd Weaver.

The first hit off McLain was a homer by Tommy McCraw in the fourth, which was followed by a homer by Ed Herrmann. Gail Hopkins homered in the ninth.

OAKLAND (AP) — Diego Segui outdueled Fritz Peterson by hurling a three-hitter and Felipe Alou singled in the only run in the first inning, giving the Oakland Athletics a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Segui yielded only singles to Jerry Kenney in the third and seventh innings and a double to Thurman Munson in the eighth in running his consecutive scoreless string to 18 2-3 innings as Oakland won its fifth straight game.

Segui raised his record to 6-6 and has been 4-2 since becoming a starter June 22.

Before leaving for a pinch hitter in the eighth, Peterson, 11-7, yielded only seven hits, but two of them came in the first when Joe Rudi doubled to left field and Alou singled him home.

Durocher Says He's All Clear

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Leo Durocher of the Chicago Cubs disclosed Saturday he had been investigated and exonerated by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in connection with Durocher's gambling activity.

Durocher confirmed a printed report he won $25,000 gambling "in one brief stay" in Las Vegas.

The 64-year-old Cub pilot told the Associated Press "everybody in the world knows" Kuhn held an investigation last winter and spring.

"It's nothing new, it's old hat, and I'm sure the commissioner will tell you he investigated me and found nothing wrong. Any gambling I've done is legal."

John Justin Smith, associate sports editor of the Chicago Daily News, wrote in a copyrighted story that the investigation was based in part on reports of heavy gambling by Durocher.

"Yes I won $25,000 at Las Vegas," said Durocher. "It wasn't in one shot, but over a weekend and it was duly reported in my income tax for last year.

"Any time I go to Las Vegas, I gamble, just like everybody else."

Smith's story said that at the end of the last baseball season Durocher denied to an FBI agent a rumored acquaintance with a crime syndicate figure. Shown a picture of the alleged syndicate man, Durocher was quoted: "I never saw the guy in my life."

Smith reported that "the Cubs went so far as to check over records of each game played by the team last September when it went into a tailspin that saw the Mets charge into first place.

The story continued: "The conclusion was that the Cubs were beaten not by their manager but by the Mets. Durocher privately was declared innocent by the Cubs."

Smith wrote that Kuhn, on an ostensible routine spring training visit, appeared at the Cubs' Scottsdale, Ariz., base last spring and asked Durocher numerous questions about his friends and his gambling. "Durocher answered in full. Sure he gambled — but not on baseball. He explained to Kuhn that he made frequent trips to Las Vegas, especially when two old pals, Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin, were performing there.

"He didn't just gamble occasionally. He gambled every time he visited Las Vegas where gambling is legal."

Smith wrote that Durocher told Kuhn he didn't associate with any hoodlums, "as far as he knew," explaining that "all kinds of people talked to him on the street and in restaurants."

Air Force Academy football teams have played from one coast to the other, but next season will mark the Falcons' first visit to St. Louis. They will play Missouri Sept. 26 in Busch Stadium.

Homers Lead Brewers To Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mike Hegan slammed a two-run homer and Tommy Harper homered and singled twice, powering the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Hegan put Milwaukee ahead to stay in the first inning when he blasted a pitch by lower Mike Nagy into the right field stands, following a single by Harper. Harper hit his 20th home run in the third inning.

Marty Pattin, 6-9 went the distance to pick up the victory, scattering six hits. One of the them, however, was Carl Yastrzemski's 26th home run, a two-run blast into the right field bullpen in the fourth inning.

Birmingham Is After Its Turn

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Birmingham Athletics may be wondering when it will be their turn to be number one in the wild Southern League scramble, as they have knocked both Columbus and Montgomery out of the top spot within the past three days only to see the other teams forge into the lead.

Montgomery, who entered Friday night's action a half game ahead of Birmingham and Columbus, was beaten by the Athletics, 2-1. Meanwhile, Columbus squeezed a doubleheader from last-place Mobile, 2-1 and 1-0, to grab the lead it had lost two days before.

It was Wednesday that the Athletics decked leader Columbus only to have Montgomery move to the top via a twinbill sweep from Mobile.

Birmingham's Reggie Sanders hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning Friday to knock off Montgomery. Bob Sampe had yielded only three hits before giving up the winning blow.

Mobile could manage only five hits in its doubleheader with Columbus. Larry Yount fired a two-hitter in the opener and Mike Flanagan hurled a three-hit shutout in the nightcap.

The Astros got only three hits in the first game, but two of them, singles by Carl Richardson and Ed Armbruister in the second, netted Columbus its two runs. The Astros' run in the nightcap scored on Slidell Harvey's single.

In another pitching battle, Savannah scored a run in the ninth without a hit to nip Asheville, 1-0. Two walks, a bad throw by the catcher on an attempted pickoff, and a sacrifice fly by pinchhitter John Brohame provided the Indians with the run they needed.

Swinging Night For White Sox's Melton

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

It just wasn't Bill Melton's night.

While his Chicago White Sox teammates came close to their best night of the season Friday, he didn't come close to much of anything.

The slugging outfielder, who started the day hitting .227 with 18 homers, tied a major league record by striking out seven times in a twi-night doubleheader against Detroit.

He did walk once. And on his last time at bat, he finally managed to hit the ball—but he hit it with his left arm and wound up in the hospital.

In spite of him, the White Sox rallied for five runs in the ninth inning to beat the Tigers 5-2 in the first game, and with him gone in the ninth of the nightcap, they almost pulled that one out in the ninth before losing 5-4.

As a result, they missed another chance to win a doubleheader for the first time this season. They have lost nine twinbills and now have split three.

The Tigers also missed a big chance to pick up ground on the Baltimore Orioles, who were routed by the Minnesota Twins 8-0 in a battle between division leaders in the American League. Washington downed California 9-8 in 10 innings, Oakland bombed the New York Yankees 11-0, Milwaukee overcame Boston 8-4 and Cleveland mauled Kansas City 9-2 after losing 5-3 in another twinighter in other games.

In the National League, Pittsburgh buried Houston 11-0, Cincinnati stopped St. Louis 4-0, the New York Mets nipped Los Angeles 2-1 in 10 innings, Philadelphia edged San Diego 4-3 and San Francisco outhit Montreal 8-7 and then lost 7-5 in a twinighter. In a day game, the Chicago Cubs blasted Atlanta 11-1.

The victory enabled the Tigers to pick up only a half game on Baltimore, which now leads the East by 5½ games.

Minnesota, meanwhile, increased its West lead to six games over California as Tony Oliva, Harmon Killebrew and Rick Renick slammed homers behind Jim Kaat's seven-hit pitching. Oliva's came with two on in the fifth inning and drove out Mike Cuellar, 13-6.

Mike Epstein's 11th homer with one out in the 10th leveled California, which blew a five-run first-inning lead. The Senators, held hitless for Andy Messersmith for 5 1-3 innings, broke loose for eight runs in the sixth, the first two on Frank Howard's 26th homer.

Don Mincher, Frank Fernandez and Chuck Dobson each drove in two runs in a seven-run first inning and Dobson, 10-10, breezed in with a four-hitter for Oakland.

Dave May broke a 0-for-25 slump with a two-run homer in the seventh inning for Milwaukee after Roberto Pena drove in four runs with two singles.

Kansas City won as pitcher Jim Rooker, 7-9, and Bob Oliver hit two-run homers in the opener, but Cleveland came back in the nightcap behind Tony Horton's two homers for four runs and Vada Pinson's two shots for three more. Dean Chance, 5-5, making his first start since being demoted to the bullpen June 2, pitched into the eighth for the victory.

Kinston, R-D Split A Pair

Kinston and Raleigh-Durham split a doubleheader in Carolina League action Friday night with the Triangles taking the first game 2-0 on a two-run homer by Cliff Johnson and the Eagles winning the nightcap 4-1.

Johnson's homer came in the fourth inning of the first game. Triangle pitcher Rick Evans gave the Eagles only five hits. In the second game, Eagle righthander Robert Elliott held Raleigh-Durham to just three hits, one of them Cliff Johnson's 25th homer of the campaign.

Winston-Salem held onto its lead in the league by defeating Burlington 6-4 in the Sox' second straight 10-inning game.

The Red Sox, trailing 4-2 after six innings, scored two runs in the top of the seventh to tie the game, then took the win with two in the tenth.

Superb relief pitching by Ron Diorio helped Peninsula stop the Rocky Mount Leafs 5-2 in the first game of a doubleheader. Peninsula also won the nightcap, 4-3 over the Leafs in eight innings.

In other league action, Lynchburg downed Salem 5-4 in an 11-inning match. The Twins exploded for two runs in the ninth inning then came back for the winning run in the 11th.

All-Star Game Gets Life; Chiefs Report

By JOE MOOSHIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The game is on next Friday night with the College All-Stars tangling with the Kansas City Chiefs, champions of all professional football.

The National Football League Players' Association, still deadlocked in a dispute with the owners, gave the Chiefs permission to report to training camp Saturday and begin drills for the midsummer classic in Soldier Field.

It was a twelfth hour decision and saved the charity classic with the NFLPA stating that it never intended to jeopardize the All-Star game, a kickoff to the exhibition season.

Kansas City Coach Hank Stram had said earlier that his team could play in the game if it could begin organized practices by Saturday.

The decision by the Players' Association took the Chiefs off the hook. Earlier in the week the Chiefs voted against defying the Players' Association and would not go into formal training sessions for the game.

The players and owners are locked in negotiations over the pension fund and both groups are meeting in Philadelphia along with federal mediation officials.

The issue, involving some $11 million, has ripped the groups asunder and originally threatened the All-Star game and the entire exhibition schedule.

"We've been given permission to go with the game," said George Strickler, executive director of the Chicago Tribune Charities which is the sponsor for the All-Star game.

"From then on, it's anyone's problem," said Strickler. "My understanding is that if an agreement is not reached after the All-Star game, the strike will remain in effect.

"We're happy with the outcome. We've gone along with the assumption the game will be played. Our team will be ready."

The All-Stars, who have been working at Northern University in suburban Evanston, have missed only one day of practice.

That came last week when they took off one day to indicate their backing of the Players' Association's stand against the owners. But they went back to work the following day under the tutelage of head Coach Otto Graham.

"We've kept our scrimmages down," said Graham, "only to limit our injuries. We've been running thin but we'll be ready for the pros."

Veteran players, heretofore locked out of the camp, had been working on their own the past week in separate drills.

Agee's Steal Wins For Mets

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer

Tommie Agee was sure his daring surprise would work but he couldn't keep his lips entirely sealed as he deftly stole a victory for the New York Mets.

Agee, the Mets flet center fielder, stole home in the 10th inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers Friday night, giving the New Yorkers a 2-1 victory.

With reliever Jim Brewer on the mound for the Dodgers with two outs and the bases loaded and Cleon Jones at bat with a 1-1 count, Agee went and when he got near home yelled to Jones, "Look out, look out."

Agee barrelled across the plate, knocking over Los Angeles catcher Bill Haller and the home plate umpire as Jones faked swinging at the 1-1 pitch.

Agee sailed to Jones because in a similar steal attempt in last year's playoff against Atlanta, Jones didn't see him and drilled a line drive which just missed the startled Agee.

In other National League games, Chicago ripped Atlanta 11-1, Cincinnati blanked St. Louis 4-0, Pittsburgh bombed Houston 11-0, San Francisco split a twi-night doubleheader with Montreal, winning the opener 8-7 before losing 7-5 and Philadelphia edged San Diego 4-3.

In the American League, Kansas City and Cleveland split, the Royals winning 5-2 before dropping a 9-6 decision, Detroit and Chicago split, the White Sox winning 5-2 and the Tigers 5-4, Milwaukee trounced Boston 8-4, Minnesota bombed Baltimore 8-0, Oakland routed New York 11-0 and Washington downed California 9-8 in 10 innings.

Home runs by Randy Hundley, Ron Santo and Billy Williams keyed a 16-hit Cubs' attack behind Ken Holtzman's six-hitter.

Gary Nolan, with eighth inning relief help, notched his 14th victory for the Reds while John Bench and Bernie Carbo cracked homers for the rampaging West Division leaders.

Dock Ellis stroked a double for the final run in a six-run first inning and fired a four-hitter in the Pirates rout over the Astros. Willie Stargell had a homer for Pittsburgh which maintained its 2½-game lead over the Mets in the East.

Willie McCovey drove in four runs with a double and his 24th homer and Willie Mays drove in three runs with two singles as the Giants took the opener from the Expos.

Montreal took the nightcap, gaining the go-ahead run in the seventh without a hit, as Giant relievers loaded the bases on a pair of walks and a hit batsman before John Bateman drove in the deciding run with a ground out. Bateman also had a solo homer while Jim Ray Hart cracked a pair for the Giants, driving in four runs.

Pinch hitter Oscar Gamble stroked a two-out, run-scoring single in the ninth inning in the Phils' comeback victory over the Padres. Nate Colbert had given San Diego a 3-2 edge in the eighth with a two-run homer. The victory went to Grant Jackson, who won for the first time in 13 weeks and lifted his record to 2-8 with his first complete game of the season.

Race Accident Claims Three

DARLINGTON, Wis. (AP) — Three pit crewmen at a county fair stock car race died Friday night and four more were injured when a racer collided with another car, skidded backward into the pits and overturned a wrecking truck.

Sheriff Ken Pratt said two of the dead victims were pinned under the overturned wrecker. All three were from the Rockford, Ill., area.

Pratt estimated the car, a late-model Chevelle, was traveling 90 miles an hour in the back straightaway on the halfmile dirt oval at the Lafayette County Fair when it collided with another car.

It skidded into the wrecker and bounced away, but was checked by cables and steel fencing before it could reach spectator areas. About 4,000 persons were watching the race.

The dead were identified as Robert W. Henn, 15; James R. Hardman, 30, and Laverne L. Meyers, 17.

Two pit workers were hospitalized, neither in critical condition. They are Ray Burkhalter, 23, of Rockford and William Cullen 35, of Darlington.

Two other pit members were treated for injuries at the hospital two blocks from the fairgrounds. Neither driver was injured seriously.

Officials said the race, being held on the second night of the 114th annual fair, had drawn an unexpectedly large number of competitors.

Pratt said there were bout 40 entries in the race, and that there were at least 100 authorized persons in the pit area when the accident occurred.

Anderson Is Beaten Friday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An 8-7 loss after 12 innings dropped Anderson a notch in the Western Carolinas League standings Friday night.

The Senators were spilled by Greenville while Sumter was winning over Spartanburg, 9-6, and Gastonia was whipping Greenwood, 6-0.

At Spartanburg, Sumter sent 10 batters up in the eighth and scored four runs for the victory. Earlier, Spartanburg had scored four times in the sixth to take a 6-4 edge.

Legion Gets Rain Again

Friday night's scheduled opening of the best-of-five series between Greenville and Kinston in the American Legion Area finals, was again postponed, for the fourth straight time. The series had been scheduled to begin on Tuesday.

The two were to try again Saturday night in Kinston, then return to Greenville for a game today. The series is scheduled to continue alternating between Kinston and Greenville until one team wins three games.

Petty In Race Win

Petty led from the first until the 127th lap when Isaac took over. Then Isaac led until the 141st lap when Dick Brooks in a 1970 Plymouth took over from lap 142 through 155. Then Petty took the lead again and never lost it.

Brooks took third spot and won $750. Fourth went to Grand National point leader James Hylton in a 1969 Ford.

Other finishers in the East Tennessee 200 were Friday Hassler, fifth; Dick Brown, sixth; Neil Castles, seventh; Jabe Thomason, eighth; Bill Champion, ninth and Cecil Gordon, tenth.

Soviets Defeat U.S. Thinclads

By MICHAEL JOHNSON

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Soviet Union defeated the United States 200-173 Friday after two days of grueling track and field competition in weather that was too wet and chilly for the Americans.

Coach Leroy Walker said the U.S. team, which includes many Californians, "was not prepared for this weather."

The defeat here ended a three-stop European tour for the collegiate track team that defeated France and lost to West Germany before coming to the Soviet Union.

The sensation of the meet was medical student Frank Shorter of Ranchos De Taos, N.M., who literally ran away from all challengers in the 10,000-meter events.

Shorter, 22, a long-haired, articulate Yale graduate, upset the Russians on the opening night. His time was 28:22.8, second best ever run by an American.

Two U.S. girls also turned in top-flight runs, surprising the traditionally tougher Russian women. Mavis Laing won the 200 meters at 23.5 and Cheryl Touissant took the womens' 800 meters in 2:05.6

Bill Skinner of the University of Tennessee won the javelin competition at 272-8½ but his main challenger, Olympic champion Janis Luis, was off form due to a pulled muscle in his side.

Skinner said he had been pleased to throw against Luis, if not to defeat him, because Luis is his idea of the "ideal sportsman."

High-jumper Reynaldo Brown won his event, also partly because the current world record holder still is out of action due to injuries. He is the Soviet Valery Brumel, whose knee injury probably will prevent him from ever jumping in serious competition again.

Brown, a student at Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo, performed wearing an Indian-style headband and an Afro hairdo. He said after his event that he got "a few stares" from the Russians "but nobody had the nerve to ask me about it."

The Russian victory was their seventh in nine clashes with American teams. The men's team won this one 122-114 and the women's team won 78-59.

Among the U.S. Standouts who did not attend were shot putter Randy Matson and 1,500-meter runner Marty Liquori. Both would have been strong favorites in their events.

The team disbanded after the Leningrad meet, some members going on to Moscow for an invitational meet Sunday, some going to Stockholm for another meet, and others going home.

Some Of Catch

Tar Heel Outdoors: Fisherman Finds Way To Attract Catch

ALBERMARLE, N. C. — Lake Tillery entwines its over 100 miles of shoreline around the feet of the Uwharrie mountains a few miles south of here. But locating fish over 5000 expansive acres can be something of a problem.

He makes the fish come to him.

Extending from the rocky shore behind Hendley's house is a floating dock, much like the docks behind many other houses and summer cottages which rim this impoundment on the Yadkin River. What is different is that Hendley's dock has submerged lights suspended from it. Additional electric lights and gasoline lanterns hang just over the water's surface.

These lights attract insects, many of which fall on the water. Panfish and minnows are attracted to this ready supply of food, and they, in turn, lure the predators — largemouth bass and white bass.

On good nights, Hendley and his guests catch literally hundreds of fish, mostly white perch (locally called "Waccamaws') and white bass, but also bluegills, catfish and an occasional largemouth bass.

Our party descended on Hendley's dock recently after a day of fishing several ponds in Richmond County and enjoying a late country ham and eggs supper at a lake-side restaurant. Hendley had previously caught our bait — gizzard shad — from turbulent pools below the dam.

Already several visiting anglers had caught fish. In wire baskets suspended from corners of the dock, which perch, largemouth bass and catfish were confined. Even more exciting were the hundreds fish which we could see in silhouette near the lights.

"No one has caught a white bass yet," Hendley offered, "but we usually get them later."

Someone showed us how to cut narrow strips from the side of a shad and we began fishing in earnest. It didn't take long. White perch eagerly took the bait on the way down, and if it ever hit bottom, a catfish had it.

It seemed there was a fish on every minute.

I asked Hendley about using lures.

"We've tried nearly every common lure, but without much luck," he said, "and the fish here are even fussy about the kind of bait they take. Shad is best by far, but we've caught some on worms, crickets, shrimp — you name it."

Just for the orneriness of it, I tried lures — in fact, every spinning lure in my ultra-light box — but the only fish I caught were two small bluegills. They hit a black knat behind a willow-blade spinner.

Once, a Mayfly lit on the water. It had time to wiggle once before a fat bream sucked it under.

"They love Mayflies," Hendley observed. "When the main hatch comes off, and there are hundreds on the water, the shoreline comes alive with feeding panfish."

I couldn't help thinking that imitation mayflies on a flyrod would prove an irresistible attraction under the lights.

"I've never tried flies," he said, "but rubber crickets and other artificial insects are ignored."

We never did catch a white bass, which is unusual, but Hendley had not had his lights in the water for long.

"Our best luck has come," he said," after the lights have been on all night for several nights."

Tillery does not have a good reputation as a largemouth bass hot spot. Hendley believes one reason is that few anglers in the area fish for them.

"Everyone is interested in white bass," he said.

At least three general angling methods are used by white bass fans — trolling, jigging and casting to "breaks."

Trollers sometimes use No. 1 white bucktails on a leader behind a deep-running plug, usually a Bomber, from which the hooks have been removed to avoid snags. The plug serves only to take the jig down.

Jiggers drift while working one or more bucktails straight down. A few anglers attach as many as five jigs to their lines.

Fishing the "breaks" can be the most exciting — and frustrating — method of all. From mid-summer to late fall, white bass school and feed on shad fry on the surface. At these times, fish may be easily caught, or they may be devilishly difficult to fool.

Jim Hendley avoids that kind of anxiety. He makes the fish come to him.

Game Fish Hit Along Coast

Several good-sized game fish were landed from Morehead City boats these past few days, including a 110 pound hard-pulling grouper. This big fish was boated from the Carolina Princess, on Saturday by John Armstrong, Winston-Salem, N. C. On the same trip, plenty of big silver snappers were boated along with red snappers, more groupers, some dolphin and tile fish. Weekend fishing on the Danco netted good supplies of red snapper, bass, porgies, and grunts. Capt. Stacy put aboard plenty of offshore fish!

Dave Ramsey, Dobson, N. C. pulled in a giant amberjack weighing 100 pounds while fishing on the C-Oats, with skipper Don Coats. The catch also included a fine snag of bottom fish including grouper, snappers and tile fish.

Bob LeGault, Hardy, Va., fishing from Capt. Wallace Guthrie's Dolphin VI, came to the dock Sunday with a 28½ pound wahoo. Several moments after this weigh-in, Reed Robinson, Takoma Park, Md. arrived at the pier with a 30¾ pound wahoo, landed from Geo. Bedsworth's Dolphin One.

Sunday was good bill fishing aboard Dolphin One, with the catch of a nice, 7' 1" sailfish captured by Irwin Duncan, Rockville, Md. The sail weighed 38½ pounds. Fishing was good also for Frank Raspotnik, Cherry Point, N. C. as he boated a 6' 3" sailfish from Delmus Willis' Tripoli.

Tuesday, fishing for King mackerel was good aboard Capt. Jim Talton's Dreamo Lu 2. Mr. Guany Connelly, Winston-Salem, and party pulled aboard a total of 44 kings, plus 38 Spanish mackerel, and a bonus of 300 pounds of bottom fish. This Monday, fishing for big offshore bottom fish was excellent for Clarence Stophel, Bristol, Tenn., with his catch of large silver snappers, 13 dolphin, 3 wahoo, 3 kings, and 11 albacore, also aboard the Dreamo Lu 2. Carlton Lamb New Bern, fishing on Dolphin 7, Saturday, pulled aboard 41 kings with the help of mate Johnny Lewis.

Rod And Gun: Newest Pollution

By DUANE RAVER
Guest Columnist

Various agencies, individuals, periodicals, and news media have used just about every tactic in the book (and then some) to get people at least concerned, and hopefully downright angry enough to take action, about our environmental plight. One of the latest is an article entitled "The First Victims" appearing in the August issue of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING magazine.

It's difficult, when dealing with a subject such as this, not to appear "sensational," and overdramatic. But our environmental mess is so bad and so dire that the truth is far more chilling than any fiction that could be conjured up. Habitat for fish and game is actually but a part of the total picture, only a fraction of that which is slipping from our grasp at this very moment. Animal diseases, habitat destruction, fish kills, and the like have been happening here and elsewhere for generations. Some wildlife species have long since disappeared from the American and world scene.

Conservation agencies and private groups have by and large gone unheeded until the fairly recent upswing in the current environmental kick. Now with just about everybody jumping on the verbal bandwagon, the "new" leaders have all but decided that the hunters and fishermen are in fact to be herded into the same pens as the polluters and the other assorted habitat desecraters. This strange quirk finds the drivers of the current bandwagon booting their greates allies — the hunters and fisherman — off.

Obviously, the present staggering situation has gone far beyond the saving of streams, forests, grasslands, and other wildlife - producing areas, as important as these are. It is not an overstatment to say that the very survival of mankind is at stake.

New pollutants of air, soil, and water are being pointed out almost weekly. One of the most recent is mercury. Studies in neighboring states have revealed high concentrations of this deadly substance in the flesh of fish, some to the extent that entire lakes have been closed to commercial and sport fishing. How much mercury are you carrying around in your system? When will this reach a toxic level? What about the fish and other wildlife in North Carolina? We begin to wonder just what is next on this road to self - destruction.

How many fish will an acre of water produce? In order to even come up with an educated guess, we have to know more about that acre of water and what kind and size of fish we're talking about. For example, an "average" acre of well - managed and heavily fished farm pond in the Piedmont is capable of producing over 500 pounds of bluegills and bass every year — year after year. Yet an acre of cold mountain reservoir with much less food available and a much shorter growing season may be lucky to put forth 40 pounds.

So it's not the number of fish that is in question, but first of all how many pounds. If they are trout, the amount will likely be lower than the production of carp. If it's an adequately fertilized and harvested farm pond, the yield will far exceed the best acre of the best reservoir in the state.

Pappas Third On Keg Money List

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — George Pappas of Charlotte, N. C., moved into third place in the Professional Bowlers Association's money list this week.

He has a total of $29,200 this year after winning $1,200 by a third-place finish in last weekend's Sertoma Open.

The top bowler is Don Johnson of Akron with $37,265, followed by Nelson Burton Jr. of St. Louis with $31,750.

A field of about 100 golfers, aged 51 or older, has entered the two-day event at the Lan Yair Country Club.

ONA, W. Va. (AP) — Thirty of NASCAR's top Grand American division drivers compete tonight in the International 300 at Ona, the final event for the stock car drivers on their northern tour.

The seven-sixteenths mile track will test 1970's top Grand American money winner Tiny Lund, defending 300 champ Buck Baker and others.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — LeeRoy Yarbrough predicts a speed of 115 miles an hour will be needed to win the pole today in the Nashville 420 stock car race qualifying.

The event, to be televised nationally Saturday, features many of NASCAR's best known Grand National competitors, including Yarbrough, Richard Petty, Dick Brooks and Coo-Coo Marlin.

Many of the drivers competed in a race Friday night at Maryville, Tenn., and noted the pressure and fatigue of driving about 700 miles in two days will take its toll.

SALISBURY, N. C. (AP) — Lynn Pitts, 15, gave her 17-year-old sister a golf lesson Friday by beating her, 5 and 3, for the Carolinas Junior Girls Golf Championship.

State To Seek Boost

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission still plans to ask for a two - goose per day limit for this winter's 1970-71 hunting season despite indications from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service that the request will be denied.

The plans were revealed at a regular meeting here Monday after the Commission heard a letter from U. S. Fish and Wildlife which stated that the one-goose limit, which has been in effect for the past two years, is being considered again this season.

U. S. Fish and Wildlife said that 75 percent of the Atlantic flyway's goose population has shifted north to wintering grounds in the Delmarva Peninsula because of changes in farming practices and an abundance of water and natural sanctuaries. The Federal agency also indicated that the reduced bag limit in the south hopefully would encourage growth of southern flocks.

"We have had the one - goose limit now for two years, and there is no evidence that this reduced bag limit has had any beneficial effect," said Commissioner Orville Woodhouse of Grandy. "We feel that the one - goose limit is ineffective, discriminatory and unfair."

The Commission voted to ask Director Clyde P. Patton to write letters to North Carolina's U. S. Senators and Congressmen requesting help in obtaining the same bag limit for North Carolina and other southern states as authorized for northern states.

Aluminum Top Boat Material

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI) —It has been almost 80 years since the first boat built of aluminum was launched on a Swiss lake, but it has been only in the last decade that the metal has become a widely used material in hull construction.

The peak was reached last year when according to the Aluminum Association, about 60 per cent of all pleasure craft produced in this country—331,000 boats—were aluminum.

Most of these craft were of the portable type—dinghies, car-toppers, John boats, canoes, utilities, runabouts. But for the first time aluminum began making big inroads into the field of stock cruisers, houseboats, one-design sailboats and custom yachts, power and sail, a field formerly dominated by wood and fiberglass.

What's behind this sudden growth in popularity?

Probably the most important factor was the discarding of aluminum-copper alloys in marine construction in favor of a combination of aluminum and magnesium or aluminum, magnesium and silicon.

The new combinations did away with the biggest problem produced by the aluminum-copper alloy—corrosion, especially in salt water. The new alloys produced a highly corrosion resistant, more workable metal and —most important, at least to the consumer —boat builders found it more economical than most any other material.

Another problem with the early breed of aluminum boats was noise. The slap of water on an aluminum hull was nerve-shattering over a sustained period. On-board noises produced by loose gear or vibration sounded like a tin can symphony.

This problem, the aluminum people say, has been largely overcome by spraying the inside of the hull with a noiseabsorbing material, bracing floors inside and out with extrusions and stampings, using double floors with foam flotation and designing pressed-in lapstrake hulls.

—Light weight: Aluminum boats go faster with less power; are easier to cartop, launch, tow and carry.

—Strength and durability: Aluminum has more than 10 times the tensile strength of marine plywood and nearly twice that of fiberglass.

State Gets Record Fish

It's a world record!

When William Arnold of Sanford caught a four - pound four - ounce redear sunfish (shellcracker) in a Lee County pond on February 3, 1968, he knew he had a whopper, but the big news came recently when Field & Stream magazine recognized the catch as a new rod and reel world record.

The Department of Conservation and Development cited the catch as a state record soon after Arnold made it, but Field & Stream, which is official tabulator of freshwater world records, took longer in processing the claim.

The monster panfish, which fell for a worm, is the only freshwater world record from North Carolina, although the state holds several International Game Fish Association records for saltwater fish.

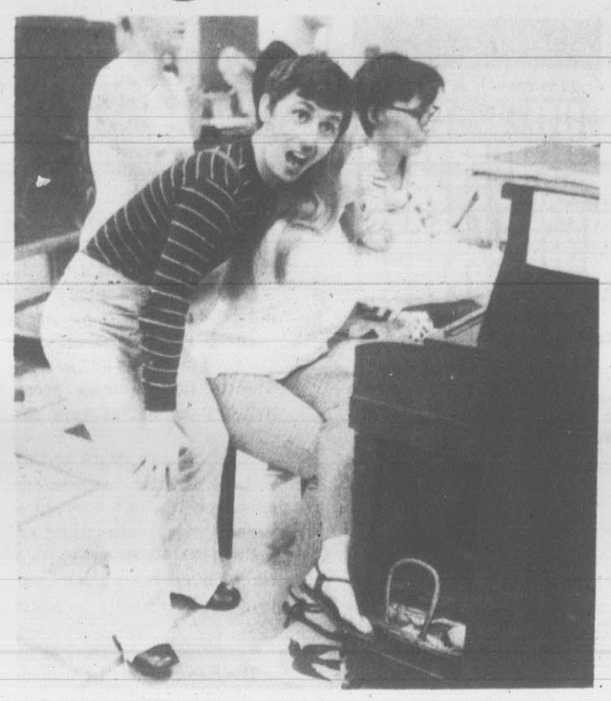
Bobby Lee As "George M"

Something Big In A Small Package



IN REHEARSAL . . . Bobby Lee goes through a number in a warm-up session for "George M", in which he will play the title role.

By KEN ELIOX

Question: Which major star of the Summer Theatre Season '70 has performed on Broadway (in four different shows), was hired for his first job without any previous experience or training, is really named Robert Scherkenbach, has succeeded as director and choreographer as well as a performer, and is going on 30 but could pass for 19 or 20?

Answer: Bobby Lee, dynamic singer and dancer who will light up the Summer Theatre beginning July 27th in the title role of "George M".

Proving the old saw that big things come in small packages Bobby — at just 5'4" and 125 pounds — is, whether launching out on a favorite subject of conversating or selling a song onstage, sheer dynamite.

One measure of the man is his precedent - upsetting string of professional jobs, beginning in his native Milwaukee where, as a trophy-winning roller skater, he auditioned for a chorus role at the famed Fred Miller Theatre and wound up with a principal song and dance role. This led directly to an engagement at Fazio's night club in Milwaukee, where he was seen by Teddy Hammerstein who immediately hired him to tour with "Flower Drum Song". Within hours of completing that tour, Bobby was hired to tour with the national Broadway company of "Bye Bye Birdie", then served as dancer and assistant choreographer for a night club revue in Chicago. One week after that engagement, he was signed to understudy both Dromios in an off-Broadway production of "The Boys from Syracuse", which he followed with a one-year night-club stint in San Juan, Puerto Rico. Then, in close succession, came his four ON Broadway performances — Buckbeelows in "Baker Street", Buggins in "Half a Sixpence", the office boy in "Superman" and, finally, the M.C. in "Cabaret" (a role he will repeat in Lakewood, Pa., immediately after he leaves Greenville).

As energetic off-stage as on, Bobby Lee could be described as feisty, outspoken, cocksure — adjectives which he not only does not resent but is proud of, because they separate him from others in his age group whom he criticizes for being "anesthetized by drugs and by well-meaning but misdirected adherence to hazy philosophies of "peace" and "love" ".

Bobby Lee is a self-directed man, of definite aims, ambitions and opinions: in this respect he feels a kinship with the man he portrays in "George M", the incomparable George M. Cohan. "Cohan was impossible," admits Lee, "but he was a self-made man who knew and loved theater and was unstinting in his devotion to it." Bobby enjoys this role, and the show itself. "It has razzmatazz, and an accurate — if controversial — delineation of George M. Cohan." In a previous enactment of the role, he was coached by Mt. Gretna (Pa). director, Mr. Conlan, who knew Cohan personally, and who verified the hard-headedness as well as the genius of Cohan. Conlan's knowledge of Cohan was in his capacity as an officer of Actors Equity. Cohan bitterly fought Equity's successful attempt to unionize actors' wages and hours. "His opposition", muses Lee, "was both selfish and unselfish, selfish in the sense that he didn't want to give up one cent more or one priority more than he had to, but unselfish in the sense that he couldn't understand anyone wanting to give less than their all for show business."

Bobby Lee's own future seems destined for some more Cohan-like success. "My tarot cards assure me of that," he declares with characteristic vigor. As to what direction that success will take, Bobby isn't quite so certain. It may be in the performing area, or it could just as easily be as a director or choreographer: he functioned in both capacities for a year-long musical revue in Detroit, and is preparing to repeat those roles for a projected Las Vegas revue. He is also branching out into other areas: he has designed clothes for animals, and is preparing to go into the antique shop business. But, regardless of the direction his future may take, he can be enjoyed now as a volatile performer onstage at the Summer Theatre from July 27 through August 1, as the man who once owned Broadway, George M. (Cohan).

Next In Homes: The Son Of TV

NEW YORK (UPI)—There's an old show business axiom that if a format is successful, wait a while and try it again. Title it "Son of Success."

Now on the doorstep is the newest development in home entertainment. It could be called "Son of TV."

Electronic interests on three continents are engaged in a scientific race to produce the "way to play" prerecorded color tapes for home showing.

"This is the most significant development in home entertainment since the introduction of color TV two decades ago," says Tom McDermott, RCA vice president in charge of programming for its SelectaVision system.

McDermott, who was president of Four Star International, which produced and distributed such television shows as "The Danny Thomas Show," "Rifleman," and "Loretta Young Show," said a conservative estimate of the fiscal potential of this new dimension in entertainment is a billion dollars yearly.

"We are already contacting producers and performers who will bring forms of entertainment to the home viewer that are not regularly seen on TV now," he said.

McDermott envisions halfhour color tapes covering a broad range and including sports highlights, education, drama, comedy, science, history and many other interests. He also foresees rental libraries with tapes for housewives, covering detailed instructions by noted chefs on how to prepare gourmet meals, flower arrangements instructed by horticulturalists, sewing tips and decorating details.

The new system permits a home viewer to watch whatever he wants whenever he wishes and is capable of instant playback or start-stop action.

Other companies are developing tapes systems similar to RCA's, which is a unit that can be mounted on top of a color television receiver, with color plastic tapes, enclosed in cartridges, insert for viewing. They include Admiral, Magnavox, Zenith and avc in the United States; Matsushita (Panasonic),, Sony and Nippon Victor in Japan; Phillips in Holland, and Grundig, Springer and Telefunken in Germany.

FOR THE BLIND

NEW YORK (UPI) —A new unit designed by RCA for the blind and called the "Audio Center" radio also carries braille-studded control knobs for AM-FM radio and tuning dials that for the first time bring in the sound from VHF and UHF television. A visually handicapped person thus can now enjoy the chatter of Johnny Carson or the theatrics of Bonanza, which always have been video-oriented.

CAINE TO NARRATE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Michael Caine will narrate a special documentary featurette for "Too Late the Hero," in which he stars for Robert Aldrich.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR HERBERT THOMPSON, Press Secretary to Vice President Agnew

Mr. Agnew seems to be quite politically different from Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York. Yet he once was pushing Mr. Rockefeller for the Presidency. Why?— R.L., Utica, N.Y.

● Mr. Agnew never thought Governor Rockefeller was as "liberal" as some of his critics in the party did. He admired the Governor's administrative abilities, and when he (Agnew) was Governor of Maryland, he used some of the procedures Mr. Rockefeller had used in New York State.

FOR GEORGE P. CRESSMAN, director, U.S. Weather Bureau

Where and when was the heaviest rainfall recorded in the U.S.? —George H. Bowen, Nokomis, Fla.

● During an extraordinary cloudburst at Unionville, Md., July 4, 1956, 1.23 inches of rain was recorded in one minute (3:23 p.m. 3:24 p.m.). This set a new world record for rainfall intensity.

FOR DR. MARIE A. HINRICHS, American Medical Association

During the summer months, many articles warn against prolonged exposure to the sun and its harmful results. Just how much exposure is too much?—Karen Morris, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

● We could not answer your question because the limits of safety for prolonged exposure to sunlight must take into account some other factors such as the time of year, altitude, time of day, and skin characteristics. We suggest that this would be best determined by conference with your physician.

FOR LOUIS R. BRUCE, Commissioner of Indian Affairs

Do we have a statue of an Indian on top of our national Capitol? —Irene Rohr, Devils Lake, N. D.

FOR CURT GOWDY, network sportscaster

FOR MAE WEST

If a movie is made of your life, and you do not star in it, whom could you imagine for the title role?—R.D., Lancaster, Pa.

● In order that it be done properly I would have to do it myself. My millions of fans have always demanded the Mae West!

FOR ALDEN BARBER, Chief Scout Executive, Boy Scouts of America

Has a former Boy Scout ever become a President of the United States?—Mrs. Betty Barbera, Pueblo, Colo.

● Yes. John F. Kennedy was a Boy Scout in Troop 2, Bronxville, New York, from 1929 to 1931. Although many other Presidents have been active adult Scout leaders, President Kennedy is the only one to have had scouting experience.

FOR JIM NABORS

Is it true that you call your mother in Alabama every night?—Lou McDonald, Tuscumbia, Ala.

Fly In/Camp Out Camping enthusiasts can now camp out in areas as distant as Alaska, Hawaii, and Canada—or in previously inaccessible areas of the U.S. The Fly In/Camp Out program of Camp America has a new program which combines air travel and fully equipped camper rentals. Pioneered by Eastern Air Lines, a reservation can now be placed with any major airline or travel agent for the combination. Arriving at their destination-airport, the camping families have the option of following a preplanned itinerary or going off on their own. The campers, ranging from $250-per-week motor homes to $135 - mini-vans, are all equipped with built-in stoves, ovens, sinks, water supply, refrigerator, dinette, storage areas, and toilet facilities. And for the adventurous folk who don't want to be burdened with their own gear, Camp America will even supply bedding, utensils, and maps and guides.

Create a Time Island Do you come home from work "dead tired?" It may not be more rest you need but more exercise. As psychoanalyst Dr. Erika Freeman reminded a gathering of the Family Fitness Council (in cooperation with Sears), "Motivation to keep fit is necessary to start but insufficient to keep going. It must become a recuperating habit." One of the best and fastest ways to establish the habit is to give exercise a "time island" of its own (meaning a time interval devoted to a specific activity such as a coffee break—which has the psychological effect of getting away from it all). Another aid is having a 'gadget' such as an exercise machine because it reminds you to start. Then the habit takes over. Once it is established, physical fitness produces a look of "totally infectious radiance," thus making the exercise habit very hard to break.

Home bicycle is exercise reminder.

Closet Tips When putting a seldom-worn hat away on the closet shelf, turn the brim up all the way around to keep the hat in better shape for the next wearing. And for the wrinkled suits hanging therein, try a dampened turkish towel, wrung out and draped over a hanger overnight. It can supply enough moisture to help remove some of the wrinkles.

Peaceful Shoot-Out Some 700 shotgun marksmen from throughout the U.S., Canada, and parts of Europe will begin gathering in Savannah, Ga., this week for the opening on Saturday, Aug. 1, of the World Championship Skeet Shoot. In skeet, participants fire from eight different stations around a semi-circle at clay targets propelled across their line of vision. At Savannah, male, female, junior, and senior contestants will compete in events for .410, 28, 20, and 12-gauge shotguns. Some $20,000 in prize money will be distributed. Officials say this one may be the biggest world skeet event yet held.

NEW CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS DECLARES:

By WILLIAM O'NEILL

Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, 58, became Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on July 2. He is the second Navy man to hold this position. The other was Admiral Arthur W. Radford, who retired in 1957. Admiral Moorer granted FAMILY WEEKLY this exclusive interview shortly after his appointment to his important new post.

Q: What do you see as the greatest problem facing you as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff?

A: I'm very much concerned with a problem facing our country which has a great bearing on the morale of our young people in the armed forces. I'm disturbed by the general attitude of some persons—particularly as expressed in the press in terms of cartoons and so on—that has the effect of degrading the serviceman. There are roughly three million young Americans in uniform today—a uniform that is a new-found target for groups that deal in discredit. This concerns me deeply.

Q: Is this something that has to be tackled by the Joint Chiefs, the government, or by the press?

A: It confronts us all, for it poses difficulties and dangers for everyone in the United States. The biggest danger is the effect it can have on our young people, who see these slurs on military service and start to wonder whether they want a career in the military. And if this reaches the point where we do not get the very highest type young men, the best-qualified young men, to seek military careers, then by 1980, 1990, and 2000, we're going to be faced with a "leadership gap," which will significantly weaken our country.

Q: Why do you think ths situation has arisen? Isn't it because of disagreement over the war in Indochina?

A: That's a big part of it, of course. This conflict against a ruthless foe in Southeast Asia has been described as immoral, unnecessary, and unjust. I happen to believe that these descriptions are more appropriately applied to militant communism—the militant communism our servicemen overseas are facing and coping with. The objective of our Government in this conflict is simple: to stop the aggressive spread of communism.

Q: Do you feel that the press is being unfair?

A: Not intentionally, no. It's always been the nature of things that something bad that happens, because it is the exception, is more likely to be deemed newsworthy than something good. Unfortunately, this means that the good things that happen, and the progress brought about by good people who work hard, observe the law, and raise God-fearing families, are being given short shrift in favor of a small minority who advocate, and sometimes produce, dissention and destruction. They aren't typical of the American people, and it's important to keep this in mind. Pessimism has a bad characteristic, even a dangerous characteristic, in that it can be self-defeating. It would be a tragedy if the United States were to sell its capability and determination short in these crucial times through negative thinking.

Q: Do you think that this might happen?

A: There is always that risk, but let me make it clear that I personally am not a pessimist. I've worn the uniform for 41 years, and because I know that the sort of attitude we are seeing today is a kind of recurring cycle, I'm pretty thick-skinned. It goes on all the time with our country's military forces. At some point, everyone is for you, then everyone seems to be against you. It has been a part of our history.

Q: Then I gather you feel the critical mood will pass. What do you think will have to be done to bring about a change?

A: Well, I hope and believe that it is a passing phase because we have much more going for us than many people seem to realize or appreciate. We hear a lot just now about demonstrations and noisy protesters. I think it's time we made some noise of our own about what I like to call the Quiet Generation—which includes members of our armed forces—who are not prone to seizing the stage, an act that has become the hallmark of some of their contemporaries.

The youth of this country are holding the line against a determined foe, and they are containing the spread of communism. They are meeting it head-on in Vietnam, and they are the heart of the deterrent forces we have elsewhere. By any standard of history, no soldier, sailor, or airman ever faced more of a challenge.

In spite of what I would define as a negative minority attitude, our servicemen overseas have performed with courage and a great professionalism, and I'd like to see them receive some of the recognition and attention that is being misdirected elsewhere.

This is what I mean by saying that, at the moment, many people are getting only a distorted image that needs to be corrected. And I think it's time we stopped calling the Government "they" all the time, as though it were our enemy, and remembered that we—the people—are the Government and quit berating the alleged existence of a so-called evil military-industrial complex.

Q: But it was former President Eisenhower, back in 1961, who warned of the danger that might arise from a military-industrial complex. Do you think we have, in fact, such a complex today?

A: President Eisenhower's fine speech, which enjoined us to remain strong against a hostile and determined enemy has been quoted entirely out of context. As a result, the phrase "military-industrial complex" has become so loaded with warped connotations that it has become a semantic trap. In my opinion, if we didn't have close cooperation between industry and Government, we would not have the capability we now possess to use the advancements of science for the over-all benefit of our country. An outstanding example of this is our successful landing of men on the moon.

Q: Is the dissent at home and the difficulties of the war in Southeast Asia having an adverse effect on morale among servicemen?

A: They are concerned, of course. A man in uniform wants and needs the support of the people at home. But I have visited our servicemen in Vietnam, in Europe, and at bases in the United States, and their morale remains high. They know that although bad news and controversy may attract the headlines, the majority are behind them.

As I've said before, I know that "good news is no news" on many of the mass media's events yardstick, since it may not capture the public's attention. But though we have seen a number of stories about American servicemen who choose to absent themselves without leave, giving the impression that our military morale is suspect, here are some facts that didn't make the news: less than five percent of American servicemen ever go absent without leave—or A.W.O.L. —less than one-tenth of one percent of our men in uniform have sought asylum in Sweden; yet more than 73,000 military personnel have volunteered for second or subsequent duty tours in Vietnam.

Q: You are taking office when the United States is engaged in essentially a land war, which the President has pledged will be scaled down. Do you foresee a smaller role for the Navy?

A: No, for a number of reasons. The United States is an island that sits between two oceans. This makes us a maritime nation. During our lifetime, we have had free use of the seas for so long that the average American citizen takes it for granted. But this is not the case. The Russians have seen how use of the sea by the United States and her allies has facilitated our military, economic, and political viability. They know that in four major wars and on several lesser occasions we have projected U.S. power through the seas.

These lessons have not been lost. The Soviet Union has set out to build the world's largest and best navy. They see it as a means of exerting economic pressure and establishing a worldwide presence.

We are embarked on an overdue program of shipbuilding to modernize our Navy—many of our vessels have been active since World War II. We are moving more of our nuclear deterrent to sea, aboard nuclear submarines for wider dispersal.

Q: Defense costs have been the subject of growing criticism, in Congress and out. Do you think you will get from the Congress the funds you need, or will there be some belt-tightening?

A: There already has been substantial belt-tightening. For instance, the Navy has inactivated many ships and aircraft squadrons and curtailed several modernization programs. Large numbers of reservists have been granted early discharges as an economy measure. Similar steps have been taken in the other services. Also, the number of military bases here and abroad is being reduced.

It's worth bearing in mind that the $71.8 billion Department of Defense budget for fiscal 1971 represents 34.6 of Federal spending, while in 1960 it was $43 billion—which was 46 percent of Government spending. So despite a costly war and the increasing costs of more technically advanced weapons systems, our investment in national security today is actually 11.4 percent smaller than it was during a time of relative peace.

Proposed defense spending will take seven percent of our Gross National Product in fiscal 1971—or about three percent less than the percentage Americans spend annually on all forms of insurance. So despite the hue and cry, we are making very major cuts, and I believe Congress is aware of this.

Q: There is speculation that the decision to enter Cambodia was a high-water mark for the Joint Chiefs, and that their influence in decision-making may never be as strong again. Do you think this is the case?

A: I do not. You should remember that the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommend various courses of action to our civilian superiors. We do not make policy, approve budgets, or approve force levels. I confess to being less than happy when I read accounts that the military has done this wrong or that wrong. It shouldn't be necessary to say it again, but we are advisers; we make the recommendations, not the decisions.

Under the U.S. Constitution we have civilian control of our military forces, and, consequently, decisions are made by the civilian leaders in the executive and legislative branches of our Government. Speaking for myself and the other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, we fully support this concept which is inherent in a democracy. We wouldn't have it any other way. ◆

QUIZ

How Sharp a Shopper Are You?

This true-false quiz might separate the savers from the losers when it comes to shopping

Most of us shop for something every day. And we probably consider ourselves fairly knowledgeable in the fine art of tracking down a bargain or reading a label or getting a good buy on certain products. This true-false quiz will test your skill in what every keen-eyed shopper knows—or ought to know.

1. All cuts of meat are graded.

2. If an advertisement gives a "list price" or the manufacturer's "suggested price," you can be sure that this is the actual price of the item.

3. A sweater that is labeled "full-fashioned" means that the garment was knitted in a special way.

4. When buying kitchen pots and pans, it's better to purchase them in sets rather than individually.

6. You can't judge a transistor radio by the number of transistors it has.

7. Lower grades of meat have more fat to the pound than the expensive cuts.

8. A good shopper always buys large or economy-size cans and packages of food.

9. The words "League" or "Professional" on a piece of sports equipment mean that the equipment was made according to official rules of the sport.

10. The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) specifies that white eggs and brown eggs must be cartoned separately because of the difference in their nutritional value.

ANSWERS

1. False. Meat grading is a voluntary service provided by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service to meat packers and others who request and pay for the grading.

2. False. Some manufacturers set high "list" or "suggested" prices on their merchandise so that retailers can offer greater "bargains" by selling items for less.

3. True. Full-fashioned means that the sweater was knit to shape.

4. False. Every pot and pan has its own uses, and your best bet is to purchase each one separately according to your requirements.

5. True. A child with a picky appetite has more interest in food if he's allowed to make some of his own selections at the market.

6. True. Some big sets have only 10 transistors, and smaller sets, claiming many transistors, may have dummy connections.

7. False. The more expensive cuts have a higher proportion of fat to the pound, which makes them taste better, although there is less lean meat.

8. True. For the large family, this is definitely true, although a single person or couple may save by buying the smaller cans or packages.

9. False. The word "Official," not "Professional," means the equipment was made according to official rules of the sport.

10. False. The color of an egg has nothing to do with its nutritional value. In some sections of the country, brown eggs are valued over white eggs or vice versa.

The Promise of Skin Beauty —from Lemons

The beautifying properties of lemons have been recognized for centuries. Women knew even way back in ancient times that the pure juices of the lemon could accomplish wonders in softening, smoothing and clearing their complexions, and could bring the golden-bright look of shimmery sunshine to their hair when used as a rinse.

Today, women are rediscovering this most valuable of nature's gifts to feminine loveliness and utilizing all the remarkable beautifying properties of lemons in the easy-to-use form of a skin freshener.

Lemon Jelvyn Skin Freshener is exceptional in its ability to promote a smooth, fine-grained texture because it stimulates the circulation and helps melt out clogging grime and impurities that cause blemishes and sallow complexions. This unique lemon lotion encourages the natural "flaking" processes of skin cells at the most propitious time, when they outgrow their usefulness. The old, clinging, complexion-dulling particles of scarf skin are gently coaxed away by the mild, tingling lemon freshener, so that new cells can take their place and the wonderful beauty of a fresh, radiantly clear complexion can be fully admired.

The natural toning and invigorating qualities of lemons become immediately appreciable when Lemon Jelvyn Freshener is applied to your skin with a cotton pad, for the complexion benefits in every way from these clearing, bracing properties that bring a soft, fine bloom to your skin.

Because this luxury freshener helps discourage an over-zealous oil flow and aids also in clearing the skin of blemish-inducing impurities, it is invaluable to the teenage complexion as well as those complexions with an inherent tendency to be oily in character.

Lemon Jelvyn Freshener is used by the world's most beautiful women for skin beauty and is ideal for quick cleansing or to prevent a greasy shine developing on the nose. In America it is obtainable from druggists.

MICHAEL COLE:

Out of Tune and Outspoken

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

Michael Cole, one of the three youthful stars of "Mod Squad," is a paradox. He's Establishment and anti-Establishment at the same time. He's young and he's old—at 28. He's been married, divorced, starved, jailed, loved, and neglected. Yet he holds no one but himself responsible for what he was, what he is, and what he will become.

Along with Peggy Lipton and Clarence Williams, Michael helps policeman Tige Andrews solve all sorts of problems on the weekly ABC-tv show. Yet he points out heatedly, "We don't work for the Los Angeles Police Department! The series has nothing to do with that. The moment I feel like a cop, I'll quit. In the show, Peggy, Clarence, and I are working with a man who is in the police department. I'm not 'Dudley Doright.' I hate it when ABC says we're three cops—one white, one black, one girl. The main reason for the success of the show is the relationship among us."

His feelings were so strong that he almost talked himself out of getting the part in the first place. "Originally the inclusion of guns, cop cars, and all that nonsense was discussed. When I had this first interview with Aaron Spelling, the producer of the show, I ranted and raved and did a lot of screaming against such a concept—and probably made quite a fool of myself—until he explained what he felt the show was really about."

Cole could have some reason for disliking the law. "When I was 15, I ran away from home, and got into trouble. (He wouldn't explain what the trouble was.) The police picked me up. I got in trouble with the police a couple of other times, too. But I was never put away for any length of time."

Cole thinks he ran away from home because of a terrible insecurity within himself. "I simply wasn't comfortable with whatever I did because I didn't contribute anything worthwhile to anybody, including myself. Yet I can't blame anyone for what happened. Not my mother who loved me. Not my brother. Not my teacher. Not even my stepfather, although we didn't get along at first. We did eventually. I simply felt unfulfilled and without purpose. But I'll never forget the day my mother came all the way from home in Madison, Wis., to get me out of jail. She cried. I knew then that what I'd done was very wrong."

Michael didn't like school, although his grades were quite good, and he excelled in competitive sports. "I quit when I was 15. It was the worst decision I ever made. Education is everything. I wish I had more of it." Michael never caught up with his schooling. "I was too busy running around at night, drinking, and going out with the chicks."

He worked in a pizza parlor, as a dishwasher. He was a bartender and handy man in a theatre workshop. The job he liked best was in a bookstore. "I would read periodically," he recalled, "and I still do. Except my tastes have changed. For a while, I was interested in nothing but comics. After a while, I learned to enjoy poetry. I'd read it primarily to see whether I could understand it. When I did, I felt I'd accomplished something."

When he was 19, Michael left home with a friend and headed for the West Coast. "We wound up in San Francisco, but not until after this ding-a-ling friend of mine blew all the money we had gambling in Las Vegas. Luckily, I had a little stashed away in my shoe. When we got to San Francisco, we had the names of some cats who we could stay with until I got a job in a bookstore again, and my buddy started to work for an insurance company."

Michael became interested in acting after he moved to Los Angeles and attended a Little Theatre performance. He felt he could do as well as the actors he watched and enrolled at Estelle Harmon's workshop, which he still attends once in a while. He studied with her for two years before he tried out for his first acting job. He survived during this time in a vagabond existence of odd jobs.

"Miss Harmon helped me get an agent and my first job," Michael recalled—"A featured role in the pilot film for ABC's 'The Felony Squad.'" Although the original format was canceled, casting directors saw it, and before long Michael had his chance to play in "Gunsmoke," "Run For Your Life," and two motion pictures—Arch Oboler's "The Bubble" and "Chuka," with Rod Taylor, before becoming Pete Cochran of "The Mod Squad."

When conversing with Michael, you have to be careful because he can fly off the handle rather easily. Certain subjects are tabu, even though once in a while he slips into them of his own accord. Among them is his own father, whom he can't remember, and his stepfather, whom he hated at first but then learned to like.

He also won't discuss the woman he married at a very young age, nor his two children, a boy and a girl he no longer sees, and to whose support he doesn't contribute for reasons known best to himself. He does admit, however, that he supports his mother and two sisters (he also has an older brother), for whom he bought a house in the San Fernando Valley, while he remains in a small apartment in Laurel Canyon.

Michael insists he has no idea about money. He has a business manager and an agent to invest for him. "If it weren't for them, I'd probably put any extra money in an old shoe box. I was so broke for so long, I simply couldn't hold on to money once I got it. And I trust these people."

He claims money doesn't matter to him as long as he can live fairly comfortably, which includes his one luxury, a silver-gray Jaguar. Yet a few days before we met, he'd gone to Hawaii to look after three parcels of real estate he owns there, including one that contains a successful hotel.

Michael's constant tension is apparent in the way he walks, talks, and thinks. But he doesn't believe in drugs. Nor does he believe in rebellion for the sake of rebellion or, in spite of his earlier outburst about playing a cop on tv, of hating cops simply because they are cops. "You can't lock them all up in one group. I hate some of them, but I also know a lot of honest-to-goodness cops who devote their lives to their work."

Michael is both aware and disturbed by what's going on today. "There are too many problems which seem to have no solution. I am scared because I don't have an understanding of so many things that are going on."

What does Michael want out of life? "To be involved," he says. On the other hand, asked about his personal future, he insists, "I never think about it. Sometimes I don't even care. It all depends upon the mood I am in."

Cool Foods for Summer

MELANIE DE PROFT
Food Editor

■ When sultry summer days cause appetites to lag, perk up your meals with the appetite-stimulating magic of something cool.

Crab Parfait Salad

- 1 can (7½ oz.) Alaska King crab or ½ pound frozen Alaska King crab
- 2 cups tomato juice
- 1 env. unflavored gelatin
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
- 2 teaspoons grated onion
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- ⅓ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup dairy sour cream
- 1 tablespoon capers
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped celery

1. Drain crab and chill thoroughly. Sprinkle gelatin over tomato juice in a saucepan and stir over low heat until dissolved. Remove from heat. Blend in sugar, Worcestershire, horseradish, onion, lemon peel, and juice. Chill until set.

2. Meanwhile, combine the mayonnaise, sour cream, capers, green pepper, and celery. Slice chilled crab, reserving 4 pieces for garnish; mix remainder with the mayonnaise. Chill.

3. Spoon ¼ cup of the tomato aspic into each of four 6- to 7-oz. parfait or cocktail glasses. Layer ¼ cup crab mixture over each; then another ¼ cup tomato aspic. Garnish with reserved crab pieces and parsley.

4. Serve with Watercress Sandwiches. Or for a hot roll accompaniment, see recipe for Bacon-Flavored Cheddar Crescent Rolls July 19 FAMILY WEEKLY food page. 4 servings

Note: For appetizers, divide crab and aspic to fill about eight small glasses.

Watercress Sandwiches

- ⅔ cup butter or margarine, whipped
- ⅔ cup watercress, snipped
- Few drops lemon juice
- Few grains seasoned salt
- Few grains seasoned pepper

1. Blend butter, watercress, lemon juice, seasoned salt, and pepper thoroughly in a bowl.

2. Trim crusts from white and whole wheat bread and spread with the watercress butter; sandwich together and cut diagonally. About 1¼ cups spread

French Apricot Tart

- ¾ cup all-purpose flour
- 1½ teaspoons sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 2 to 3 tablespoons cold water
- 2 cans (29 oz. or 30 oz. each) peeled whole apricots, well drained (reserve syrup), pitted, and chilled
- ¼ cup strawberry or other red jelly
- 2 drops red food coloring
- 2 drops almond extract
- 1 cup apricot preserve

1. Prepare pastry, blending the flour, sugar, and salt in a bowl. Cut in butter or margarine with a pastry blender or two knives until the particles formed are the size of small peas.

2. Sprinkle water over mixture, one tablespoon at a time, tossing with a fork after each addition until dough holds together; shape into a ball.

3. Roll out pastry on a lightly floured surface, keeping shape round to about 1½ in. larger than over-all size of pan. Fit pastry loosely into a 9-in. tart or pie pan. Fold pastry edge under and flute. Thoroughly prick bottom and sides with a fork.

4. Bake at 450°F. 10 to 12 min., or until pastry is a light golden brown. Set on rack to cool.

5. Combine 1 tablespoon of the reserved apricot syrup with red jelly and food coloring in a saucepan; heat, stirring occasionally, until jelly is melted. Remove from heat; cool. Stir in extract.

6. Spoon apricot preserves into bottom of cooled pastry shell; spread evenly over bottom. Arrange whole apricots over preserve; spoon red glaze over apricots. Chill thoroughly. One 9-in. tart

Arthritis Cholesterol

New Discovery Reveals A Common Cause

TASTY FRESH FOOD DIET BRINGS HELP FOR BOTH

New scientific studies show how cholesterol and fat choke the arteries only when eaten in aged and stored form as in bacon or ham, but are harmless when FRESH as in beef or shell eggs. Cholesterol and fat slowly dry and harden like paint when aged in many stored foods, and can form deposits only when changed in this way. This tested research finding comes as a welcome surprise, at last solving the agonizing riddle of choked arteries and cholesterol.

Recently published in booklet form, these findings also cast new light on the arthritis problem. A network of fine arteries in the membrane and porous bone around the joint nourishes the moving parts. When these arteries are choked by hardened fatty materials from stored foods, the joints are starved and arthritis develops. Fully explained in the new booklet (third edition) with large clear drawing. Shows the beautiful self-repairing natural design of our joints, and how we hurt them with the wrong food and drink.

Best of all, it is shown that powerful natural forces in our bodies gradually attack and remove non-living matter. It has long been known that these natural cleaning forces cleared fatty deposits from choked arteries in prisoners fed scanty diets in wartime Europe. Now we have the bountiful and tasty fresh food diet to obtain the same natural cleaning action without hardship, by avoiding only the deposit-forming stored foods. Far from a hardship diet, people are saying they have never eaten so well, or cooked so easily.

Now you can read all about it in a new easily understood booklet through which thousands have found relief. It explains wonderful findings in simple words. Tells how to use the tasty FRESH FOOD DIET to stop this internal pollution and help the body heal itself. For example, Mr. John Landridge said with a happy smile: "Sixty days ago I needed plastic arteries. But I went on the new diet instead, and now I mow my whole yard without resting. My heart and leg pains are gone. Blood pressure and cholesterol dropped to normal. And those fatty yellow lumps in my eyelids faded away!"

This booklet gives clear instructions on the delicious FRESH FOOD DIET. How to relieve suffering, save on food, and reduce kitchen work. Effects of better food on face and figure. New easy ways to cook well for one or two. Diabetes control. Real sweets for diabetics. Ear noises, deafness, and dizziness. Indigestion, acid stomach, and general health aids. Pictures of arteries and joints. A new practical approach that really works. Fully guaranteed: may be returned for refund if you are not satisfied. Over 35,000 satisfied customers. Very popular, now in a new third edition with four pages added. Special prices on quantity orders.

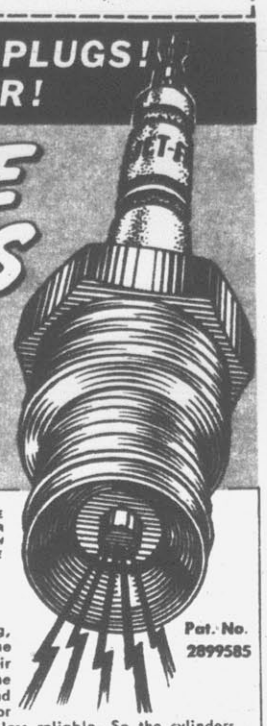
NEW JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS



can spark your engine up to 30 more horse power and 5 more miles per gallon! using only your regular gas!

AND—THEY'RE GUARANTEED FOR THE LIFE OF YOUR CAR!

JET-FIRE IGNITERS KEEP ENGINES YOUNG AND STRONG!

Instead of the weak, unreliable spark that accompanies the aging of ordinary spark plugs . . . Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters "walk" a strong, sure swath of flame from one electrode to another, across a semi-conductor bridge — to fire each cylinder with absolute reliability, even under the most rugged conditions of temperature and speed. Built-in "scavenging" action keeps the Jet Fuel Igniter clean . . . prevents fouling . . . assures perfect combustion every time! And, because there is no spark gap, carbon deposits don't foul up performance, but actually improve by heightening conductivity! That's why you never have to adjust or replace Jet-Fire Igniters.

WHY CONVENTIONAL SPARK PLUGS ARE OBSOLETE!

Even after only 100 miles of driving, conventional spark plugs start to become eroded and caked with carbon. Their electrodes begin to burn away. The spark has to jump across a wider and wider gap to explode the gasoline vapor in the cylinder — becomes less and less reliable. So the cylinders "miss" and the plugs foul even more. Your engine runs at lower and lower efficiency. You wonder where the car's pep and pick-up have gone. You can't understand why your gas mileage is so poor. Before you know it, your mechanic tells you you need a new set of plugs. And your engine has grown old long before its time!

Pat. No. 2899585

When you install JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS, you say "goodbye" forever to spark plug problems! They deliver sure-fire performance conventional spark plugs can't match — for more efficient, more economical performance . . . mile after mile . . . month after month . . . year after year — in any kind of weather . . . and any kind of driving! It's all a matter of design!

By their very design, conventional spark plugs must deteriorate in use. Each time your cylinders fire, they erode the electrode of your spark plug, and cake it with carbon. Because the spark then has to jump across a continuously wider gap, it weakens and becomes less efficient. So your cylinders often misfire, and foul the plug even more. Especially with today's "hot" high-compression engines, plugs often "conk out" in a few months of hard use.

Designed for Sure-Fire Ignition!

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITER's patented design eliminates this problem before it starts! The electrodes are solid, not wire — so they don't burn away! The firing tip is a semiconductor — so carbon can't foul it! There is no gap to adjust — so the spark is a strong, constant swath of flame! You get the same reliable ignition every time — for easier, faster starts . . . even in the coldest weather! Your battery won't be drained and run-down by slow starting — and you won't have to turn the key and pray, whenever the temperature drops! What's more, JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS make your engine run more powerfully and efficiently — and on less gas — than the conventional spark plugs you have in your car right now. And you can prove it for yourself . . . on your car.

"On-the-level" Driving Test Proves Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters Get up to 30 More Horsepower out of Your Engine!

When you receive your set of JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS, make this "before-and-after" test yourself . . . on your car.

1. Run your car until the engine is fully warmed up.
2. Stop on a perfectly level stretch of road.
3. Put the car in Drive (1st gear with manual transmission) and see exactly what speed the car rolls at with your foot off the gas (idling speed).
4. Turn off your engine, remove the plugs, and screw Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters into the plug sockets, following the simple directions (a 10-minute job).
5. Start the engine, warm it for a minute, put the car in Drive again, with your foot off the gas. Now see how much faster it rolls at idling speed — probably 4 to 6 miles per hour faster without touching the gas pedal! In-use proof that Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters increase engine RPMs by 100 to 120 with no increase in gas consumption. (At high speeds, the increase will actually be 300 to 350 RPMs!)

Right then and there, you can adjust the idling screw to cut down on your gas flow and your gas consumption. Now your JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS have started to save you money before you've even driven a single mile!

ONLY JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS PROTECT YOU WITH THIS EXCLUSIVE

4-WAY GUARANTEE!

1. GUARANTEED to perform for the life of your car (or 30,000 miles) without cleaning, servicing, or replacing!
2. GUARANTEED to increase miles-per-gallon of gas on your regular gas!
3. GUARANTEED to inclease your working horsepower, increase engine RPMs!
4. GUARANTEED to improve ease and reliability of starting and acceleration!

How to Get Even More Savings!

Want even greater efficiency and economy? Make your air-to-gas mixture leaner. With JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS, your engine can perform at full power and efficiency on a 15:1 ratio instead of the conventional 9:1. You or your mechanic can make this simple adjustment in a minute. Then watch how you can get 10 . . . 20 . . . 30 . . . even 50 extra miles on a tankful of gas!

Your engine is finally able to produce all the horsepower it was designed for! Up to 30 more horsepower of acceleration power, climbing power, and passing power! And — it uses less gas than ever while producing this extra power!

Forget About Replacement or Adjustments!

JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS have no spark gap — so they never need adjustment! They "scavenge" themselves every time they fire a cylinder. So they never need cleaning or servicing! Because they have a semiconductor glass-enclosed tip, carbon build-up actually improves conductivity . . . carries even more of the jet flame into the cylinder — for even more sure-fire performance! They can't foul up, burn out, or blow out — the way conventional plugs do. That's why they're guaranteed for the life of your car! (or 30,000 miles). Guaranteed to keep right on saving you money by running your engine at maximum power, on a minimum of gasoline!

Spark Your Car into the Jet Age!

Both the Navy and the Air Force have already approved Fuel Igniters for jet engine use. It's only logical to expect that sooner or later, some alert automotive designer will borrow a good idea from the aerospace industry . . . and equip his most advanced engines with Fuel Igniters like these. But you needn't wait — because you can install a set in your car right now. Simply mail the coupon with the make and model of your car, and we'll rush you a set with full instructions.

*ACROSS THE U.S.A., USERS REPORT AMAZING RESULTS WITH JET-FIRE FUEL IGNITERS!

"Had Jet-Fire Fuel Igniters installed in my car—a 1966 Country Squire with a 390 engine. Immediately I noticed great difference in performance and economy — automatically gained 2½ miles to the gallon." J.J.L. Glencoe, Mo.

"(Owner) says he never saw a plug so good. In the last 5,000 miles it cost him $68.00 for plugs (in a '65 Corvette with a 13-1 ratio engine). I told him about Jet-Fire Igniters and he bought a set and has run them 700 miles and says they are wonderful. He wants another set to have on hand." F.L. Downey, Calif.

MAJOR MANTLET IS ORDERED TO SERVE AS TEMPORARY LIAISON WITH THE CIVILIAN POLICE INVESTIGATING WINTHROP'S MURDER.

PLENTY OF PEOPLE KNOW THE WAY UP THE CLIFF, MAJOR. LOCALS, WHITE AND INDIAN, FEW STRAY PROSPECTORS, NOT TO MENTION THE SCIENTISTS WHO COME DOWN FROM THE STATE UNIVERSITY...

BUT HOW DO I PICK ONE WHO JUST HAPPENED TO BE HERE WHEN YOUR STUDENT PILOT CAME DOWN – AND COLD-BLOODEDLY MURDERED HIM?

SHERIFF PARA, WINTHROP WAS ONE OF MY STUDENTS. A NICE GUY – AND I DOUBT HE'S HAD ANYTHING BUT THE MOST CASUAL CONTACT WITH THE FOLKS AROUND HERE.

NO, THE ONLY THING THAT MAKES SENSE IS THAT HE WAS KILLED BECAUSE OF THIS PLACE – BY SOMEONE WHO ATTACHES SPECIAL IMPORTANCE TO IT!

WHICH BRINGS US ROUND TO BOLD HORSE AND HIS GIRL AGAIN, I'M AFRAID, SHERIFF. THEY KNOW THIS SITE – AND THEY HAVE STRONG FEELINGS AGAINST NON-INDIANS COMING HERE.

POLICE

WHEW! HOT IN THE DESERT, DOC. BET THE MEDICAL EXAMINER'S OFFICE KEEPS SOMETHING COLD AND WET JUST FOR DESERVING FUZZ.

SOME TIRE TRACKS, STUFF LIKE THAT. MAY MEAN SOMETHING, OR NOTHING. YOUR AUTOPSY TURN UP ANYTHING WE DIDN'T KNOW?

MATTER OF FACT, IT ENLIGHTENED ME, SOMEWHAT...

I WOULD HAVE SWORN A WEAPON LIKE THIS WAS OBSOLETE CENTURIES AGO!

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: DALE HAS BUT ONE DESIRE: TO COMPLETE THE KING'S MISSION AND LEAVE THIS DOLOROUS CASTLE WITH ITS HATREDS, CRUELTY AND DEATH FAR BEHIND.

AT LAST HE CAN EXAMINE THE RECORDS. THEY ARE ALL IN ORDER, AND MATILDA IS MISTRESS OF THE CASTLE UNTIL THE RIGHTFUL HEIR IS FOUND. BUT WHERE IS HE? LADY MARVYN HAS GONE TO HER GRAVE WITH THE SECRET.

"WHEN LADY MARVYN TOOK HER SON TO A MONASTERY SHE MUST HAVE HAD GUARDS OR SERVANTS TO ACCOMPANY HER. WE MUST FIND THEM. OUR SERVANTS AND THE VILLAGERS KNOW EVERYTHING THAT GOES ON IN THE CASTLE. PERHAPS IF YOU QUESTION THEM.....?"

THE NEW MISTRESS CALLS IN THE ENTIRE STAFF AND GIVES INSTRUCTIONS, AND IT IS CLEAR THAT THE OLD SLIPSHOD DAYS ARE OVER. FLOORS ARE TO BE SCRUBBED, TAPESTRIES CLEANED; FURNITURE POLISHED; AND THE STEWARD, CHEF AND HOUSEKEEPER WHO ALLOWED THE MESS TO ACCUMULATE ARE DISCHARGED.

"WHILE MY FATHER LIVED THIS CASTLE WAS A BRIGHT AND ELEGANT PLACE. MY STEPMOTHER LET IT SINK INTO DECAY. I INTEND TO RESTORE IT, FOR IT IS THE ONLY PLACE I HAVE EVER KNOWN. NEVER HAVE I BEEN OUTSIDE THESE WALLS."

IN THE STABLES DALE FINDS ONE WHO WAS WITH LADY MARVYN WHEN SHE RODE AWAY WITH HER INFANT SON. "SHE TOOK HIM TO MEADOWSCARP AND PLACED HIM IN THE CARE OF THE GOOD BROTHERS. I KNOW THE WAY."

THEY RIDE FROM CASTLE MARVYN, DALE HOPING HE WILL NEVER SEE THE PLACE AGAIN, AND ANXIOUS TO RETURN TO CAMELOT AND TELL HIS STORY TO HIS LADY FAIR, QUEEN ALETA.
