

Record $73.50 Average Is Predicted For First Day Eastern Belt Sales

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—A record first day price average of about $73.50 per hundred pounds was predicted Saturday for Tuesday's opening sales on flue-cured tobacco markets of North Carolina's big Eastern Belt.

port program will be less in the east than they have been running on Georgia-Florida markets and the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt.

Noting that stabilization receipts have been running higher on the belts to the south than they did last year, Cyrus said, "we're hoping that with a little better crop that stabilization receipts will taper off as we move into the east."

Cyrus said the eastern crop had recovered fully from a June drought.

He pointed out that the crop was not as far-advanced as it was on the border at the time of the drought. "They got the rains in time to grow this crop on out and produce a good medium to thin-bodied crop," he said.

Eastern belt markets are at Ahsokie, Clinton, Dunn, Farmville, Goldsboro, Greenville, Kingston, Robersonville, Rocky Mount, Smithfield, Tarboro, Wallace, Washington, Wendell, Williamston, Wilson, and Windsor.

ABM Foes Insist Winning Formula Has Been Found

LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evidence is conflicting, but leaders of a renewed drive to curb the Safeguard ABM system insist they've found a formula to win a Senate majority without incurring undue White House wrath.

The Senate's Republican chieftains disagree. Backers of the play, led by Sen. Edward Brooke, D-Mass., say it will provide as much defensive power as the Nixon plan and maintain the momentum President Nixon has said he needs at arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

They find no broad agreement on that point either. The Brooke plan would, simply put, bar a requested Safeguard extension to two bases and use the money saved to improve ABM at the two sites authorized last year.

The aim is to stop the geographical expansion of a system some say has built-in technical faults in its present form and will not function adequately under Soviet missile attack.

Two plans rejected by the Senate last Wednesday would either have stopped Safeguard spending altogether—except for research on an improved system—or denied the money to carry out expansion.

Brooke said last week he has evidence from inside the administration and the Pentagon that both could comfortably live with his plan.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., who for more than a week has been saying a vote against Safeguard will be considered a vote against Nixon and his administration, rejected that view.

"The Nixon administration will not accept any amendment that will limit Safeguard, including the Brooke amendment."

As it has been throughout this year's debate, the key to the final Senate decision remains the degree to which an expanded or restricted Safeguard will effect the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with Russia.

In other words, is Safeguard the vital "bargaining chip" the President needs to get a meaningful agreement on limiting offensive and defensive nuclear arms?

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., who voted against the previous amendments primarily because of the bargaining-chip argument, said he is co-sponsoring Brooke's plan because he believes it is the solution.

"My consultations with the American delegation in Vienna have led me to conclude that intensified work at the Phase I sites—Malmstrom and Grand Forks air bases—will provide ample momentum to support our negotiators," McIntyre said.

Opponents of any change in Safeguard also used the SALT negotiations as a bargaining point, covertly circulating just before last Wednesday's crucial vote a communication—purportedly from Gerard Smith, chief U.S. negotiator at Vienna—stating Safeguard is indeed as vital to his success.

Democratic leaders roundly scored that move, saying that if such a letter existed, it should be placed on the table for all to see and discuss.

McIntyre and Brooke forces contend that if the SALT talks fails, the United States will be in a better defensive posture with an amplified and enforced first-phase Safeguard than an expanded system offering thinner defenses.

The essential justification for Safeguard has been the defense of the nation's fleet of retaliatory Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles aimed at Soviet targets. To defend Minutemen adequately, the reasoning goes, is to preserve the U.S. deterrent, the quick-draw six gun that will persuade the other fellow not to shoot first.

Marching On N.C. 'Litter'

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — About 60 youths began a 125-mile Wilmington-to-Raleigh anti-litter march Saturday, picking up tons of litter along U.S. 421 in a protest against pollution.

The youths, under the direction of the Wilmington Youth Council, started the long highway march at 6:30 a. m. and at noon had completed half of the planned first 60 miles of the journey.

Along the way, they stuffed tons of paper, beer cans, bottles and other debris into large plastic bags for highway commission personnel to pick up in trucks.

The state Highway Patrol cruised along with the youths to make sure they made the journey safely.

The boys and girls expected to arrive at Clinton—the halfway Mark—by nightfall. Arrangements were made by the Clinton Jaycees for the hikers to stretch their sleeping bags on the floor of the National Guard Armory.

They planned to begin the last segment of the journey early Sunday.

Youth co-chairman Raleigh Carter and Betsy Fullenwider said the youngsters had been planning the march for five months.

GAS LOADING WINDS UP — The Liberty ship destined to be scuttled with its cargo of nerve gas is shown receiving the last of 2 trainloads of gas rockets encased in concrete. (AP Wirephoto)

Storm Breaks Up; Gas Issue Still Pending

By HOWARD BENEDICT Associated Press Writer

SUNNY POINT, N.C. (AP) —

The breakup of a budding tropical storm off Florida raised Army hopes Saturday that it can tow its much-disputed nerve gas shipment toward an ocean grave Sunday or Monday.

A decision was to be made late Saturday whether the sea phase of Operation Chase will start Sunday morning. Chase stands for Cut Holes and Sink 'em.

If the go-ahead is given, commercial tugs will begin hauling a rusting Liberty ship laden with 418 concrete vaults of gas to a point 282 miles east of Cape Kennedy, Fla., where it will be sunk Tuesday in 16,000 feet of water.

Navy Capt. A. J. Hamilton, in charge of the sinking operation, had hoped to head for open sea Saturday but had to delay at least hours because of the tropical depression.

The storm failed to intensify as expected and started breaking up Saturday.

"Conditions are improving," Hamilton said. "We're sending out reconnaissance planes to check the disposal area. The only problem could be high waves created by the depression."

Asked whether pending court action in Washington would affect the departure, Hamilton replied, "the court situation is being handled at a much higher level."

He said, in reply to another question, that authorities in Washington might be "considering the possibility of changing the dumping site, but I can't say."

In rejecting a petition to halt the gas disposal, a U.S. district judge in Washington Friday urged that the gas be dumped at a shallower site.

Judge Green accepted the Army's contention that the delay might be harmful to humans because the gas may already be leaking inside some of the steel and concrete coffins.

But she said she had "serious misgivings about the site of the proposed dumping." She said shallow water would lessen the danger that water pressure would collapse the vaults and release the gas all at once.

Paternity Suit Faces Presley

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 21-year-old waitress has charged swivel-hipped singer Elvis Presley fathered her unborn child in a lawsuit filed here.

Patricia A. Parker, North Hollywood, Calif., asked the Superior Court to award her medical expenses and $1,000 a month child support for the infant she says is due in September.

Neither Miss Parker nor Presley, who was appearing at the International Hotel in Las Vegas, was available for comment. The singer's wife, Priscilla, whom he married in 1967, and their two-year-old daughter Lisa reportedly were with him.

Close-Out

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Coast Guard closed out its Vietnam-based combat operations Saturday, turning over its last two 82-foot patrol cutters to the Vietnamese in a brief ceremony at the Coast Guard base in Cat Lo near Saigon.

With the turnover of the boats, the last two of 26 patrol vessels the Coast Guard's Vietnam-based Squadron One had operated, only a few advisory and technical personnel of the unit are left in the country, Coast Guard officials said.

Officials said, however, another Coast Guard squadron with larger cutters based in Subic Bay, Philippines, will still be active in a combat role in Vietnam.

The 26 patrol-boats of Squadron One were given to the Vietnamese over a 15-month period.

At the height of its operations in Vietnam the Coast Guard had about 400 men here, most of them involved in patrol and surveillance work along the South China seacoast. Officials said the unit had reported a total of 1,03 Communists killed since it came to Vietnam in 1965. During that time it suffered seven men killed and 48 wounded.

Warrants For Angela

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Former college philosophy instructor Angela Davis was sought today on warrant charging her with murder and kidnapping in the Marin County courthouse shootout Aug. 7 that left four dead, including a judge.

The warrants were issued Friday night by Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin County under California law holding that anyone who aids or abets in a major crime is equally guilty with the direct participants.

The warrants, requested by Bruce Bales, Marin County district attorney, were used later in a raid by heavily armed San Francisco police on a Potrero Hill district house.

Miss Davis, 26, an avowed Communist, was not at the house, but her sister, Fania Jordan, 23, of Los Angeles, was.

Mrs. Jordan, who was questioned and released, was in San Francisco to attend the funeral today of Jonathan Jackson, 17, the youth who supplied the weapons for the attempted escape of three convicts from a trial in a Marin Center courtroom.

Student Congress Narrowly Rejects Radical Plan

By WILLIAM J. WAUGH AP Education Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — After three hours of debate the 23rd annual National Student Association Congress early Saturday voted down 150-134 a proposal calling for nonviolent civil disobedience, and paralyzing Washington, D.C. May 1 unless the Vietnam war is ended.

strategy brought to the convention by Rennie Davis, a Chicago 7 defendant, and Mike Lerner, a defendant in the Seattle 8 conspiracy case.

Before they went down to defeat, the left wing of the student delegates managed a 140-140 tie but could not hold their votes on the second tally.

Opposition developed among blacks, Mexican Americans and more moderate students.

College, told the delegates, who represent about 300 schools, "you're stupid" to vote for the plan.

He said the night before he had started to speak out against the proposal but Davis asked him not to because "if the blacks are against it, it will give some wishy-washy whites" a reason for backing out. He added that the proponents wanted to get "stupid whites" to Washington and get their heads busted and then they'd be committed."

One supporter of the proposal shouted, "There's a possibility and probability of violence in Washington. We have to take a chance of provoking violence on the other side."

Davis earlier in the week had called for nonviolent national civil disobedience beginning in the fall and coming to a climax with students descending on Washington May 1 and shutting down the federal government by blocking roads, bridges and buildings and preventing federal workers from reaching their jobs.

Although speaking against the motion, Peter Denton of Ann Arbor, Mich., called for guerrilla warfare instead, shouting, "We can win it."

Before the delegates acted on the main resolution, three amendments were voted down. Two would have watered down the main proposal and eliminated reference to shutting down Washington.

The third amendment called for the NSA to "take the philosophical and political position actively supporting and coordinating student activities directed toward the overthrow of the existing governmental system in the United States."

Larry Stahl of Queens College in New York, referring to the amendment, said, "We're talking about total overthrow of the government. It is totally absurd."

Keel Laid For New Carrier 'Eisenhower'

By HARRY NASH Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — Dwight David Eisenhower II etched his name on a brass plate here today and declared the keel of the nation's newest nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, which will be named for his famed grandfather, "truly and fairly laid."

Young Eisenhower, accompanied by his grandmother, Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, and his wife, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, spoke after using an electric tool to engrave his name into the 50-ton keel assembly.

A giant gantry crane then lowered the assembly to keel blocks at the bottom of a shipway on the banks of the James River.

The grandson of former President Dwight Eisenhower was introduced to a crowd of several hundred spectators at Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. by Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, director of the Navy's nuclear propulsion program — who noted David's status as a new member of the naval reserve.

Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, principal speaker at the laying of the keel of the $510 million ship — which will require five years to build — said aircraft carriers will continue to play an indispensable role in the nation's defense as the United States reduces its overseas land bases.

Outside the gates of the shipyard, a score of peace pickets distributed handbills urging Laird and other government officials at the ceremony to:

Respond to the full implications of President Eisenhower's personal apprehension regarding the subtle and persuasive influence of the American military and industrial complex on our domestic economy and foreign policy" by reducing construction of warships and enlarging the U. S. Merchant Marine.

Investigating officers said the child, Lonell Nobles, of 1800 W. Conley St. was struck by a car driven by Marie Martha Tripp, 16, 413 Line Avenue.

Police, who placed no charges in the 2:15 p.m. mishap and listed no damages for the Tripp car, said Miss Tripp told them she saw the child run across the street at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Third St. and into the path of her car, but was unable to avoid hitting him.

Thomas Alton Redditt, Jr., 19, Aurora, was charged with following too close following investigation of a traffic accident at the corner of Fourth and Cotanche Streets here Friday at 11:15 p.m.

Police said the Redditt car collided with one driven by Jesse Roy Young, Jr., 21, of Rt. 2, Farmville.

Damage set by officers to the Redditt car was $350, while that for the Young car was $275.

An estimated $800 in property damages resulted in another mishap Friday at the intersection of US 264 and NC 43.

Investigators, who charged Gerald Louverne Smith, 20, Rt. 1, Vanceboro, with failing to see his movement could be made in safety in the 4:15 p.m. accident, identified the driver of the other car involved as Linwood Smith Worthington, 61, of 303 Lewis St., Greenville.

Officers estimated damages for the Worthington car at $450 and that for the Smith car at $350.

Frances Marie Powell, 21, 1202 Glen Arthur Ave. and Kelly Ward Mills, 18, Rt. 2, Greenville, were listed by police as the drivers involved in a fourth traffic mishap Friday.

Police, who reported the accident occurred at 9:10 p.m. at Dickinson Avenue 120 ft. from 14th St., charged Powell with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident and placed damage for the Mills car at $75 and that for the Powell car at $300.

Want Amnesty, Strike Rights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nationwide postal clerks convention has voted to back repeal of laws making strikes by federal employes illegal and to support total amnesty for postal workers who struck last March.

The AFL-CIO union, which says it represents 300,000 postal clerks, put the questions to a vote of 2,300 members present Friday.

Stan Allen, a spokesman for the clerks, said the union was not aware of any impending governmental action against the 150,000 clerks who struck for wage raises in March. But he added, "There are still about 150 federal injunctions against the postal clerks pending around the country."

Raps Curb On Spending

ROBERSONVILLE — R. Frank Everett, First District Republican Congressional Candidate, stated today that "the bill, which Congress recently passed, to limit the amount of money a Congressional Candidate can spend was probably the most dangerous and far reaching bill it has ever enacted."

Everett said that "the bill would limit to seven cents a vote, the amount of money to be spent in any Congressional District."

Everett added "that in the First District the Candidate will be limited to sending between $5,500 and $6,500 in his campaign."

"This bill," Everett remarked, "will insure the continuous reelection of all the incumbent Congressman and Senators after the 1970 elections." "It will be impossible to defeat an incumbent Congressman," Everett continued, "once they are elected, they will stay there for life," Everett added.

Everett further elaborated by stating "a few of the ways a Congressman will be able to spend more than this $6,000." "First," Everett stated, "the incumbent has the free frank for mailing which is worth around $40,000.00 a year." Secondly, Everett added, "he also has free access to the television, radio, and newspaper media which should run around another $50,000 a year." Everett, further stated, "that the incumbent receives 100,000 dollars plus for office expenses and can and does use this as a task force for his election."

See Loss In Divorce Bill

JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz' plan to outlaw quickie divorces in Mexico would cost this border city $3.2 million a year, says the man in charge of the municipal finances.

The loss in taxes alone would reach $1.4 million to $1.6 million annually, Ignacio Duarte, the tax collector, said. The rest would be living expenses for divorce seekers in this city across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Tex.

Duarte said Juarez awards 18,000 quickie divorces every year, mostly to Americans. Diaz Ordaz is seeking a tougher national policy on divorce in keeping with "the respect that the people of Mexico have for the family as an institution." Current law requires Mexican citizens to wait three months before a final decree is granted. But in some states—including this state of Chihuahua—foreigners can obtain a divorce in a day by paying the necessary taxes.

The proposed law would have no effect on Mexicans, but foreigners would have to present residency certificates from the Interior Ministry before their divorces could be granted.

Draft Gas Protest

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — The Bahamas Cabinet went into an emergency session today, reportedly to draft a strong protest to the United States against plans to dump deadly nerve gas not far off the island chain.

The meeting began after the return from Washington of Cecil Wallace Whitfield, a Cabinet member, and Dr. John Lunn, a Nassau physician.

Whitfield said he had made it clear in conferences with U.S.

officials that his government "will not accept any proposition to dump the gas so near to the Bahamas."

A government source said that since Great Britain had made no protest on behalf of the Bahamas, "we feel that Britain let us down and that we have the right to be heard as a country."

Teams from both the United States and Great Britain arrived in Nassau, presumably for an effort to reassure the government.

Hope For Alcoholism

Optimism was the prevailing mood of a speech by Dr. James W. Osberg, Deputy Commissioner of Alcoholism for the Eastern Region of North Carolina, Thursday to the School of Alcohol Studies held at East Carolina University last week.

"We are now in the midst (nationally and here in North Carolina) of developing imaginative, dynamic programs of prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation," he said.

"Alcoholism, the third leading health problem in the nation, requires an inter-agency, inter-professional, public action program. The emphasis should be on developing community programs, services, and facilities.

Alcoholism is no longer being looked on as a crime, he said. A 1966 court decision held it unlawful to hold homeless chronic alcoholics criminally responsible for simple displays of public intoxication. Devising programs for the care and rehabilitation of these ill persons is the biggest challenge facing those concerned, he said.

Marine Is Convicted

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — An 18-year-old Marine was convicted today of the murder of 15 South Vietnamese women and children in a village southwest of here last Feb. 19 and sentenced to five years in prison.

A jury of three officers and two senior enlisted men returned the verdict after deliberating nearly all day in the case of Pfc. Samuel G. Green Jr., of Cleveland, Ohio. The general court martial board handed down the sentence 2½ hours later. In addition to the prison term, Green was reduced to private, given a dishonorable discharge from the Marine Corps and ordered to forfeit all pay and allowances.

The youthful Marine, the third of four to be tried in the case thus far and the second one convicted, remarked to a friend moments after the sentencing: "Five years for that?" The conviction on unpremeditated murder could have carried a life sentence.

Briefing By Envoys

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt will send envoys to Washington and Paris in the next few days for briefings on his Moscow talks with Soviet leaders, a government spokesman said today.

Brandt will send State Secretary Egon Bahr to Washington, while Paul Frank of the foreign ministry undertakes the Paris mission.

The task of informing the British government will be left to Bonn's ambassador to London, Karl Guenther Von Hase. Bahr played a key part in preparing the Moscow treaty, in a series of meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Moscow.

The result was the "Bahr Paper" which formed the framework for the nonaggression pact signed by Brandt and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin last Wednesday.

The three envoys are expected to report back on Big Three reaction to Brandt's recent proposal for a western four-power summit meeting to discuss developments in West Germany's relations with the Soviet Union.

Closed To Shrimping

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's southeastern coastal waters will be closed indefinitely to shrimping to permit the small shrimp to mature to harvestable size.

Roy Sowers Jr., director of the Department of Conservation and Development, said Friday all creeks, bays and rivers south of New River in Onslow County to the South Carolina line will be closed with the exception of the Lower Cape Fear River.

Sowers said the 1970 season has been "a miserable summer for North Carolina shrimpers." Only 150,000 pounds of shrimp were caught along the Tar Heel coast in May and June, compared to 400,000 pounds in the two months last year.

Biologists in Sower's department have discovered large quantities of small shrimp, one-half to two inches in length, along the lower coast. Five inches and larger is considered harvestable size.

Bussing Plan Protested

School Complaint Is Filed

By JERRY RAYNOR

A complaint against the Greenville Board of Education has been filed with the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County for Barry Christopher Henderson, a minor, by his guardian, Christopher C. Henderson.

The complaint, filed Thursday, was followed Friday by an order signed by Superior Court Judge Robert D. Rouse, granting the plaintiff a hearing on the complaint. The order states that a hearing will be held Wednesday, or as soon thereafter as possible, to determine whether a preliminary injunction should be issued.

In the complaint, the plaintiff alleges that he is representative of a large group of students who are in a situation similar to his, and seeks from the court a preliminary injunction preventing the school board from putting into effect the plan which it adopted on July 23 relative to satellite bussing of students.

The group of students represented by the plaintiff are students living in the Hillsdale, Greenbrier, Carolina Heights sub-divisions and in some adjoining areas.

The school plan referred to, adopted on July 23, is the one which was ruled by Federal District Court Judge John Larkins as an acceptable one for the operation of the Greenville City Schools for the school year 1970-71.

This plan, which Judge Larkins had earlier ordered the school board to submit, is centered on a basic court requirement that all elementary schools in Greenville have a two to one ratio of pupils (two white students to each black student). The prescribed ratio is predicated on the percentage of white and black students in Greenville's six elementary schools. (Agnes Fullilove under the plan becomes a kindergarten and special program school.)

The adopted plan, known as Plan Four, was one of four alternatives studied by the board members before approving it five to two, with one board member abstaining.

On receipt of a request by representatives of residents of the Hillsdale-Carolina Heights sub-divisions, the school board convened a special meeting on August 4 to hear their request as one of two items on the agenda. (The other item was for consideration of a Letter of Compliance to HEW which was subsequently approved by the board members.)

Ray Corbett, spokesman for the Hillsdale-Carolina Heights group, presented a proposal to amend the adopted school plan, asking school board members to consider it.

This proposal requested that 134 elementary school children from these sub-divisions be returned to South Greenville School for the coming year instead of being assigned to Sadie Sautler School, as the adopted plan called for.

The proposal also asked that elementary school children, in an approximately equal number, be assigned to Sadie Sautler School from the Brook Valley and Washington Highway areas.

After hearing the proposal for an amendment to the school plan, board members made a decision to recess the meeting until Friday morning, August 7. The purpose of recessing was to permit the school attorney, W. W. Speight, to give an opinion on whether the proposed amendment would constitute only an administrative revision; or whether it would be a basic change to the court approved plan.

On reconvening the morning of August 7, Speight informed board members his opinion was that an amendment of the nature contained in the Hillsdale-Carolina Heights proposal would be a change to the basic plan and would necessitate a hearing before Judge Larkins.

Following Speight's statement of opinion, board member Mrs. Robert Kittrell offered a motion that the Hillsdale-Carolina Heights proposal be approved. The motion never received a second, which resulted in Dr. E. B. Aycock, board chairman, declaring the court approved plan unchanged.

In the August 13 complaint filed by Henderson, the plaintiff asserts he "would be forced to travel an unreasonable distance to attend school and suffer irreparable emotional strain as a result of being forced to participate in the integration of an all black school for the second consecutive year . . ."

Crobbett stated, "This is apparently the only area where all white students are being bussed from the school area which they attended during the 1969-70 school year with other white students being bussed into the same area."

35th Anniversary Marked By Office

Greenville's District Office of the Social Security Administration was the scene of a brief observance of the 35th anniversary of social security Friday afternoon.

Officials from Greenville and Pitt County, neighboring towns and counties and from out-of-state were guests as the once controversial agency marked more than a third-century of service to Americans.

Just how many are affected by social security benefits was outlined in a telegram from Congressman Walter Jones — who had planned to attend but was unable because of a flight delay. "At this time 25,578,662 citizens benefit from social security," the congressman noted in his message of congratulations in which he praised the Greenville office for work well done.

Figures show that as of December 1969, 9,410 citizens in Pitt County were receiving a total of $740,950 per month in social security benefits. Jack Tatum, manager of the Greenville District Office, and Lee Alltop, assistant manager, in explaining the extent of services provided by the Social Security Office, noted that of the 9,410, more than 5,000 recipients are Greenville residents.

A seven county area is serviced by the Greenville office — Beaufort, Bertie, Hyde, Martin, Pitt, Tyrrell and Washington. As district office, Greenville is also responsible for the branch office at Elizabeth City which serves Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Perquimans and Pasquotank Counties.

Mrs. Delores Taylor, one of the three field representatives and television representative for the social security office, explained that people unable to come to the Greenville office or one of the branch offices were visited in their homes and assisted in paperwork.

Others in the 21 member staff of the Greenville office are assigned to various divisions within the structure of the district office. Richard Capps is office supervisor. The three field representatives are William Shaw, Mrs. Barbara Garland and Mrs. Taylor. There are five Claims representatives — Miss Mary Daugherty, Mrs. Lilly Diggs, Mrs. Alretha McLain, Frank Kirkland and Paul Sasser. Three persons, Mrs. lanthe Smith, Mrs. Joan Jordan and Mrs. Sadie Riddick are service representatives. There are also three claims stepographers — Mrs. Nancy Fulcher, Mrs. Faye Swindell and Miss Northan Gibbs. Two are assigned as data review technicians, Mrs. Liz Chandler and Mrs. Elinor Ratcliff. Rounding out the full time staff are Mrs. Gerry Gorst, administrative clerk, and Mrs. Grace Forrest, account number clerk. Four young workers have been assisting in social security work during the summer months.

The Assistant Regional Representative in charge of the North Carolina Social Security Office, Ulmer Crosby, from the Atlanta Regional Office, came to Greenville for the occasion.

The idea of marking the 35th anniversary with a program featuring a person born on the day of the original beginning of the revolutionary assistance program was made by Assistant Manager Alltop and Field Representative Mrs. Barbara Garland.

Charles H. Gaskins of Black Jack, who was born August 14, 1935, the day the original Social Security Act was signed under the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration, was on hand with his wife Janie and two daughters, Kathy and Cindy as special guests of the Greenville office.

In addition to the cake for Gaskins, a second cake honored John Mobley of Williamston, another area man with an August 14th birthday.

Pitt and Martin Counties Registers of Deeds, Mrs. Elvira Allred and Mrs. Julia Manning, and William Howell, County Treasurer for Martin County, were among county and agency representatives at the 35th anniversary commemoration.

Ken Wichard, called by Mrs. Garland the "unofficial representative of social security in Pitt County for a number of years," spoke briefly of the pioneer days of social security activities in Pitt County.

"It was not easy in those early days for people, particularly farm people, to get social security," Wichard commented. "The law required that if a man was married more than

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (AP) — The defense closed its case Saturday after Capt. Jeffrey R. MacDonald completed his third day of testimony during which he again tearfully denied killing his pregnant wife and two children.

A week-long recess was called to allow the prosecution to prepare rebuttal evidence before the closed door Army hearing is completed. It began six weeks ago and has had one two-week recess.

Bernard Segal, one of MacDonald's two civilian attorneys, said the 27-year-old Green Beret physician from Patchogue, N.Y., underwent about four hours of cross examination by the prosecution before the unusual Saturday session ended.

Defense attorneys have been the only source of information on the hearing since the Army ordered it closed despite defense protests shortly after it began.

Segal said that in addition to questioning by the prosecution, MacDonald was examined for about 45 minutes by Col. Warren V. Rock, the officer conducting the inquiry into the bizarre Feb. 17 slayings at MacDonald's Ft. Bragg home.

Segal said MacDonald's voice choked and tears welled up in his eyes when Rock asked: "Did you kill your wife and children?"

Segal said MacDonald composed himself and replied: "No."

It will be up to Rock, once all the evidence is in, to decide whether to recommend that MacDonald be tried at a general court-martial on three counts of premeditated murder the Army lodged against him.

MacDonald testified the killings were the work of mysterious intruders.

Defense attorneys put MacDonald on the stand Thursday afternoon and questioned him again Friday afternoon before turning him over to the prosecution for cross examination.

The bizarre slayings were discovered about 3:30 a.m. Feb. 17 legal separation from his spouse. We had a hard time getting papers for some beneficiaries proving they were legally separated and legally married to their present spouse."

Whichard related how he and another guest of the program, retired Judge Dink James had assisted a number of eligible beneficiaries procure papers qualifying them for the benefits.

Included in the geological project will be the use of barge mounted equipment, seismic profiling, scuba diving and laboratory analysis of sediment samples according to texture and mineral, chemical and organic content.

The deposits of the Croatan, Roanoke, Albemarle, Currituck and Pamlico Sounds will be investigated.

A marine vocational school for commercial fishermen has been named as a proposed program for the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

According to Herman D. Phelps, associate dean of the by military policemen who answered MacDonald's telephoned plea for help.

They found MacDonald suffering from several stab wounds and the remainder of his family dead. Mrs. MacDonald, 26, and Kimberly, 6, had been stabbed and bludgeoned. Kristen, 2, had been stabbed.

MacDonald told investigators he had been attacked by three men as he was awakened on his living room couch by cries from his wife.

MacDonald said he lost consciousness quickly but saw a girl with long blonde hair who murmured: "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs." Acid is slang for the hallucinatory drug LSD.

The word pig was scrawled in blood on the headboard of the MacDonald bed.

Warns Bitter War At Stake

By HAL MCCLURE
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV (AP) — A former chief of Israel's military intelligence predicted Saturday that a breakdown in the Middle East cease-fire would touch off a "very bitter struggle" and an attempt by Egypt to cross the Suez Canal.

The warning came as Jordan accused Israel of trying to torpedo peace efforts by violating the cease-fire and Israel indicated it would not sit down to talks until Egypt pulls back the SAM missiles it reportedly has moved closer to the canal cease-fire line.

Israel should make sure it is ready to deal with any move to cross the canal, said Reserve Gen. Haim Herzog, now a military commentator, in broadcast over the Israeli state radio.

Herzog declared that Egypt has "no prospects whatsoever even to prepare for such a situation, unless the entire anti-aircraft missile system is advanced so as to be in position to give adequate cover to the planned concentration, crossing the bridgeheads areas."

"From a purely military point of view," he went on, "the question before Israel is clear, once it is clear the cease-fire is merely a cover for military preparations on the other side.

"It is to ensure that any action taken is the right action, of suitable scope, in the right place and at the right time.

Herzog said President Gamal Abdel Nasser has indicated that Cairo's only aim is to thrust across the 103-mile long canal.

It must be obvious that should the cease-fire cease to operate, the next stage will be a very bitter struggle with the central theme an attempt by the Egyptians to cross the canal," he predicted.

Herzog, like several other Israeli leaders, questioned Washington's reaction to Israeli complaints that the Egyptians had brought up Soviet-built missiles into the Suez Canal standstill zone in violation of the week-old cease-fire.

The question, Herzog said, "is whether the desire of U.S. officials to achieve a political success, however short-lived, will blind them to the facts of life when dealing with the Russians, in which they should now be well versed."

Mordechai Gazit, deputy director-general of the Foreign Ministry, said in a radio interview that, in light of "continued Egyptian violations of the cease-fire," Israel is considering easing off on its contacts with the U.N. peace envoy to the Middle East, Gunnar V. Jarving of Sweden.

Jarving is in New York trying to get indirect talks under way among Israel, Egypt and Jordan.

In its latest charge, filed Friday with the U.N. truce supervisor in Jerusalem, Israel accused Egypt of emplacing an additional missile battery and resuming work on incomplete and empty missile sites.

Israeli officials have said they hold Washington responsible for seeing to it that the Egyptians honor the truce and pull back their missiles.

Princess Marks 20th Birthday

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's Princess Anne celebrated her 20th birthday Saturday aboard the royal yacht Britannia with birthday cards flown in by helicopter and champagne toasts from her family.

The only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II was en route to Balmoral Castle, the royal retreat in the Scottish highlands, for the family's annual summer vacation.

Both the birthday and vacation could be important for the blonde princess.

Seafood Research Program Slated Through ECU Project Series

By FRANCES PERRY
Research studies of the diet of the striped bass, the reproductive cycle of the crab, the use of modern machinery in commercial fishing and other such matters will aid the development of eastern North Carolina into one of the leading coastal fishery producers in the world.

Through a series of research projects recently approved, East Carolina University marine scientists and biologists will increase efforts to learn, improve and teach ways of lifting the coastal fisheries economy.

They will examine methods of growing, catching, processing and marketing seafood in various programs to be conducted by the ECU Departments of Geology, Biology, the School of Business and the Division of Continuing Education.

East Carolina's Marine Science Center on Roanoke Island, Dare County, will be headquarters for six new research projects financed by the National Science Foundation and the state.

Funds totaling about $600,000, two thirds of which were furnished by the National Science Foundation, will be distributed to ECU and other campuses.

The NSF sea grant program is designed to assist individual states to develop basic marine research information, and translate it into material that can help to solve the practical problems of persons engaged in marine industries.

East Carolina's research will involve the biology and ecology of sea life, a study of coastal geological resources, a marine vocational school for improved sea farming and the development of a curriculum in marine resource management.

Three biological projects will attempt to discover more about the conditions which foster healthy sea life, by close observation of the environment and biology of useful organisms.

Dr. Vincent J. Bellis is scheduled to direct a study of the ecology of certain inhabitants of the estuaries which will end in an inventory and distribution map of such commercially valuable fish and shell - fish as founder, oysters and crabs.

The study will be based on the exact locations of the habitats of these organisms in the Currituck, Albemarle and northern Pamlico Sounds.

The reproductive cycles of the blue crab and the lobster will be investigated by Dr. Edward P. Ryan and Dr. Charles E. Bland.

Special attention will be focused on breeding seasons and diseases caused by fungal parasites which affect reproduction among the blue crab and lobster populations.

Their research will provide a basic understanding of the coastal physical environment, in order to enable future nutritional requirements of the shad and the striped bass which will be of use in feeding these fish in pond culture.

The results of metabolism and diet studies, with emphasis upon the energy and protein requirements for good growth, will be tested in a production situation at hatcheries.

Dr. Michael O'Connor and Dr. Stanley R. Riggs of the ECU Department of Geology will study the recent sediments of northeastern North Carolina estuaries and their relation to potentially economic mineral deposits.

Areas of training which are most needed include methods and capabilities of harvesting sea food, efficient techniques for small units, sound conservation and ecological practices, and operation and maintenance of more modern machinery and equipment.

Dr. Jack Thornton Jr. of the ECU School of Business has planned a program for the development of an undergraduate curriculum in marine resource management.

The program will be eventually expanded to higher level courses to train students for potential careers in the field of the sea food industry.

The Warehouses Come To Life

Piedmont Sees Rising Power

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Eastern political power which called the tune for many past sessions may well be singing its swan song in the 1971 General Assembly.

The legislative redistricting which must be accomplished on the basis of the 1970 census will, for the first time, place in the Piedmont counties a majority of control in both House and Senate.

The impending transition has profound implications for North Carolina. What it will mean for the future already is being pondered by those with an interest in politics, either active or academic.

The East is rural - oriented, generally conservative, and staunchly Democratic. The Piedmont is urban and industrial, with moderate to liberal tendencies, and has an increasing proclivity to elect Republicans.

Transfer of legislative seats from the former to the latter is a prospect arousing misgivings or elation, depending upon the point of view.

Division of the state into regions of East, Piedmont and West is based on geography, concentration of population, and dominant economic interests. Naturally, the boundaries are arbitrary to a degree, and there is considerable shading along the times between regions.

How the Regions Shape Up
For purposes here, the East is composed of 44 counties bordered by and including the north-south line of Vance, Franklin, Johnston, Harnett, Scotland and Hoke.

The Piedmont is bordered on the east by Richmond, Moore, Chatham, Wake and Granville, and on the west by Cleveland, Catawba, Iredell, Yadkin and Surry, embracing 32 counties. The West is the 24 counties west of and including Rutherford, Burke, Caldwell, Alexander, Wilkes and Alleghany.

The present line-up of legislative strength is: East — 45 House members, 18½ Senators; Piedmont — 58 House members, 24 Senators; West — 17 House members, 7½ Senators.

The preliminary census count for North Carolina is 4,960,749, breaking down by regions: East — 1,659,470; Piedmont — 2,630,968; and West — 670,311.

Dividing the state's population by 120, the number of seats in the House, gives a figure of 41,339 for each Representative. Similarly, each of the 50 Senators must represent 99,215.

On this basis, redistricting should give the East 40 House members and 16½ Senators. The Piedmont will be entitled to 63½ House seats, and 26½ Senators. The West should be represented by 16½ House members, and 6½ Senators.

Piedmont Will Have The Votes
Thus, once redistricting along these lines is carried out, the 32 Piedmont counties would have the votes to secure the passage — or defeat — of legislation before the General Assembly.

Of course, issues rarely or never split neatly between regions. The possibility is remote that the Piedmont would use its enhanced legislative muscle to dictate to the rest of the state.

Still, the drift of political weight to urban areas, highly industrialized and with a sizeable labor vote as well as a more sophisticated electorate generally, is bound to have ultimate impact upon state policy. With time, it is certain a new set of priorities will evolve to guide legislative decisions.

Realignment of legislative representation to more closely reflect population came about in the decade of the 60s, climaxed by the "one man, one vote" decisions in federal courts.

In the 1959 General Assembly, for example, the East had 48 House members and 20 Senators. The Piedmont had 46 House members and 22 Senators, while the West was represented by 26 House members and 8 Senators.

Limits On Urban Strength
Those were the days when each of the 100 counties had at least one of the 120 Representatives, and no county had more than one of the 50 senators. It was a two-way hedge by the rural interests against the cities, designed to guard against concentration of political power in the state's urban areas.

Of course, these devices were abolished as the courts entered the picture to enforce the Constitutional mandate for representation to reflect population as nearly as possible.

It was never numbers alone which gave the East its disproportionate influence in the legislature. Eastern Representatives and Senators gained seniority and positions of leadership by returning to the General Assembly term after term. An overriding concern with agriculture gave a cause for the region's legislators to stick together. Further, alliance with the West (also largely rural in composition and conservative in sentiment) always was an easy arrangement.

Conservative Democrats, who view the weakening of the East with grave concern, are hopeful that these factors will continue to give the East a deciding voice in legislative matters.

Basket - by - basket the carefully grown, harvested and cured leaf will be sold off to cigarette companies and to independent tobacco companies for export to other nations.

The product has been under strong attack in recent years, but the industry has managed to thrive despite its troubles. For the growers, there have been major changes, ranging from mechanical harvesters to the leasing of tobacco acreage by small farmers.

There have also been changes in our area where tobacco is grown. Within a short distance from where tobacco is sold and processed in Greenville there are major industries producing a variety of products that weren't there just a few years ago. The same is true in Farmville. This is evidence of the diversification that our county so badly needed.

Tobacco is still a major part of our economy, though, and a bad growing season would have meant considerable problems for our economy. From all reports it appears that our farmers have produced a good crop this year and judging by sales on other markets it appears record prices may be in store for opening day here.

Thus the opening day sales will be an exciting and colorful time as it has been for many years. We are looking forward to good sales on the area tobacco markets.

Traffic Study Should Be Basis For Effort

The traffic study which city officials have received from a consulting firm should be used to improve dangerous intersections in the city.

The study showed that of 51 intersections with traffic signals 24 are non-standard. There were also 33 high accident intersections found within the city. West End Circle was cited as a complex intersection with a high accident rate. There were also 26 intersections with poor visibility and 17 intersections with poor layouts. Seven railroad crossings were found with inadequate warning systems.

Anyone who travels Greenville's streets know that these hazardous conditions exist at various intersections.

Now that the problems have been identified the city and the state should proceed with a plan for correcting them.

Nixon Sagging In The North

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — A remarkable series of statewide private polls taken this spring and summer suggest that President Nixon, gaining strength in the South but declining in the vote - rich industrial North, can win the popular vote in 1972 but lose the electoral vote—and the Presidency.

The state surveys, conducted by pollster Oliver Quayle, show surprising strength for Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine against Mr. Nixon in areas indispensable for a Republican Presidential victory. Were the election held now, Quayle found, Muskie would beat Mr. Nixon in the essential states of Illinois and Ohio plus the barometer state of Delaware.

The meaning is unmistakable. If Mr. Nixon is dropping in those states, he must have similar difficulty in other major states he carried against Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968—California, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Missouri. No matter how many Southern states go to Mr. Nixon, Dixie simply does not have enough electoral votes to compensate for such Northern disasters.

Thus, polling data buttresses the argument of non-Southern Republicans: a strictly Southern strategy cannot succeed. As usual, the 1972 Presidential election will be determined by those Northern swing states with the big packages of electoral votes.

It is much too early for Worry can become a sin, and it frequently does become such. Has the Creator who fashioned the world left his creation and gone back to a high heaven above our reach? Is this not heresy at its worst? Sunday Morning Notes

Mr. and Mrs. J. Tom Forrest of 101 N. Harding St. took a trip to Daytona Beach, Fla. recently. They were staying at a modern 10 story hotel. One night as they boarded an elevator they found themselves crowded in with a group of teenagers, who were attending a convention and staying at the hotel. As the crowd squeezed in and the elevator door shuttled closed, one long-haired young man stated in a solemn voice,

"Watch out for your Benson and Hedges!"

The Forrests thought they were safe from street noises in their tenth floor room. One morning they awakened by the roar of autos. Sleepily they looked out the window to see a beach buggy race under way at the ocean side.

Other Editors Say Treat All Alike

(The Wilson Times)
According to the National Observer, the South is "set to pass its final school test." This includes from Alabama, Mississippi and on up the line to Maryland. From talks with black and white leaders, educators, parents and students most of the South is making a serious effort to clear the hurdle once and for all.

You read just yesterday in the Daily Times that South Carolina's 93 public school districts open their doors for classes in less than three weeks and freedom of choice will have become a thing of the past. This is unfortunate in that freedom of choice is the one way to satisfy all.

The whites are willing to abide with what they call law and order. They say they had rather not be a part of it, but if that's the law, they are resigned to it. Integration will not occur in rural areas where blacks heavily outnumber whites.

We haven't read anywhere of the approval of cross-busing to accomplish balance and the doing away with the neighborhood schools. And cross-busing has never been ruled on as a requirement to achieve integration. What is needed and badly is for the U.S. Supreme Court to speak out on the subject of cross-busing and other disputed areas.

The South may be set to pass its final school test. But at the same time the rules should apply to the North. For whether desegregation comes by one factor or another makes little difference. The fact is that if it must come for one section it should be for all.

And will the time come again when education will be the objective, rather than integration?

Your columnist has kept a close eye on the progress of the dual laning of N.C. 11 between Greenville and Kinston. On every trip down that way I've watched the work progress from Greenville to Winterville and from Ayden to Grifton.

For months, though I've been puzzled that nothing was going on on N.C. 11 between Winterville and Ayden even though utilities poles on the west side seemed to be set back far enough to provide right of way for additional lanes.

Last Sunday a side trip west showed why. A mile or so over an entirely new road is being constructed which by passes both Winterville and Ayden.

The dual - lane fenced - in road is now being paved. It's nice to know it's there.

Jurors Show Views

By PRESTON MCGRAW
DALLAS (UPI)—Jack Ross, chairman of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, says when Dallas juries sentence criminals to 1,000-year prison terms—as they increasingly are doing—the jurors may be trying to tell the parole board something.

A convict in Texas is eligible for parole after he serves one third of his sentence. That is considered to be 20 years, no matter how long the actual sentence.

Then, what difference does a 1,000-year sentence make? "The only thing is that it shows the attitude of the jury and the feeling of the public," Ross said. "That is taken into consideration."

'Deterrent'
Dallas juries since March have sentenced one man to a 1,001-year term and two to 1,000 years each for crimes such as rape and armed robbery. A Fort Worth jury sentenced a rapist to 800 years.

The most recent 1,000-year sentence was handed out to Harold Eugene Hill, 22, a rapist. The prosecutor asked the jury to sentence Hill to 5,000 years "to serve as a deterrent to rapists." The jury, however, was not willing to go beyond 1,000 years. In Texas, juries decide punishment in most felony cases.

A few days after Hill was sentenced to 1,000 years, Ronald Lewis Jones, his partner in crime, decided against a jury trial and pleaded guilty. He got off with a life sentence.

Criticizing Parole Laws
Larry Joe Knox was sentenced to 1,001 years in March for rape. Joseph Franklin Sills, a veteran holdup man, became the first member of the "1,000 year club" in February after being found guilty of a $73.10 robbery of a dry cleaner. Sills said other prisoners in the Dallas County Jail started calling him "the man with the grand."

"This is actually a slap at our parole laws," Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade said after Knox was sentenced. "Our parole laws let a man out in 20 years, regardless of what the sentence is."

Parole Board: 'Not easy'
Ross, head of the three-man parole board, said in an interview that he could not agree with Wade. He said parole is not that easy.

"I have never heard of one doing it in 10 years," Ross said. "If a convict remained in Class I (the best prison record a man or woman can have short of trusty) it would take 12 to 12½ years. "Actually 95 to 99 per cent serve more than the minimum penalty."

Ross said that getting a parole in Texas is a process that starts the day a man enters prison. Psychiatrists, social workers, guards and chaplains watch him and report frequently on his progress toward rehabilitation.

Two of the parole board's three members must favor his parole and the district attorney and sheriff of the county from which the convict was "sent down," as well as the trial judge, have an opportunity to object.

Finally, the governor can either approve or deny parole. Ross said the parole revocation rate in Texas is one of the lowest in the nation—less than 10 per cent for an annual rate and slightly more than 20 per cent over the past 27 years.

Some Income Drops Are Offset

By ELMER ROESSNER
Corporate income has declined. Corporate profits in the first quarter of this year were at an annual rate of $76.7 billion, compared with $87.1 billion in the first quarter of 1969.

The decline in profits has cut the federal government tax revenues. Corporate tax liability was at an annual rate of $38.0 billion in the first quarter compared with $43.5 billion in the first 1969 quarter. The difference is greater than the federal deficit in the last fiscal year.

However, some corporations are taking a new look at their balance sheets and are finding that the decline has not been as bad as they thought. Profits on sales may be down, but the decline has been partially offset by a rise in value of inventories. Some corporations are recalculating their inventory valuation. In some cases, this has shown that corporations have made a profit whereas preliminary calculations had indicated a loss.

Commodities Rise
Basic reason for the rise in inventory valuations has been the rise in commodity prices. While they have not gone up so far so fast as consumer prices, the rise has been persistent.

In some companies, the work - in - process has been revalued upward, as have finished products. Inventories, of course, are not liquid assets, but they look good on balance sheets and annual reports and help make stockholders less discontented.

Concern Over Ecology
Booming Plastics Industry
The sudden surge of worries over the ecology is booming the plastics industry.

The public can't be weaned from the nonreturnable container. Even kids feel the time required to take a pop bottle back to a grocery store isn't worth the 2 cents they can get. So the plastic industry is concentrating on plastic containers that are less of an ecology problem. Inside Industry, the copyrighted newsletter of Magazines for industry, reports that Coca - Cola is market - testing Monsanto's Lopac plastic, which can be incinerated without generating toxic fumes, and that Pepsi is market - testing Vistron's Baresx, which is biodegradable; that is, it will eventually be destroyed by nature. Neither plastic, both of which are clear and rigid and look and feel like glass, is commercially available yet. The newsletter says that more such plastics are in development and that considerable work is being done on molding techniques so that containers can be manufactured even in smaller bottling and packing plants. It also adds that at least one manufacturer is now close to developing a self - destructing can for soft drinks, beer and other foods.

BUCK FEVER AGAIN

Whatever other factors are involved in the financial rhetoric going on about The Medical Center, one thing is undebatable:

The only two segments of American society anyone can afford proper medical care - when the cost of doctors, drugs and hospital rooms and services are all considered - are the very rich or the very poor. The former can still barely afford it and the latter can claim it through welfare arrangements.

The rest of us are being priced out of any treatment much more complicated than taking another aspirin tablet. News that yet another round of rising hospital prices may come are driving a lot of us to that right now, too. - Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer

BREATH OF THE OLD WEST

It was a scene worthy of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

Two young men, faces hidden by a ski mask and a black stocking, held up a train in Texas July 18 by jumping from the bushes and ordering the engineer to stop. They went down the cars, relieving passengers of the contents of their wallets and purses, and escaped in the dark.

But maybe the movie - famous Cassidy and the Sundance Kid would have been above this kind of job. For the train was a miniature one, in Brackenridge Park in San Antonio, and the haul was only $500. What's more, one elderly passenger refused to turn over his wallet and laughed at the robbers.

It just goes to show that drama and humor - and lawlessness - are still part of the West - Waynesboro (Va.) News-Virginian

BEETHOVEN - DIG THAT MAN

Music lovers around the world are celebrating 1970 as the 200th anniversary of the birth of Ludwig Von Beethoven. Even the teeny - Boppers.

A reasonably straight version of the finale - the "Ode to Joy" - from Beethoven's ninth and last symphony, written when the great composer was totally deaf, is currently climbing up on what the old folks once called the hit parade.

Some 143 years after the master's death, another generation is discovering him and claiming him as their own. Which is a good start toward a definition of immortality. - Stillwater (Okla.) News - Press

INTEN WORDS OR LESS

One -time movie mogul Sam Goldwyn, he of the fractured but frequently apt syntax, once squelched plans for a movie full of "social significance" with the terse advice: "If you want to send a message, call Western Union."

Alas, the public's message is no longer quite as welcome at Western Union, the Federal Communications Commission says. The company is trying hard to get out of the business of notifying your Aunt Edna you'll be arriving on the six o'clock train. Of course, the six o'clock train was canceled a long time ago, too - another victim of economic reality.

"The point is that times have changed. Public messages are hard to make a profit on. The service cost has risen and Western Union would rather deal with its bulk commercial clients.

Western Union president Russ McFall says it is the public that has deserted the telegram counter. "This is the way the customer wants it," he says. Whatever the cause, we frequently pay the price of change with sad renunciation of yesteryear's nostalgia. If these changes continue we may have to fall back on another Same Goldwynism; "Include us out." - Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune

CAPP VS. KENNEDY?

Cartoonist Al Capp, creator of Senator Phogbound satirical public servant, suggests that he may run for the Senate himself. He would try to unseat, of all people, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Mr. Capp will have his work cut out for him, because Senator Kennedy has an amazing talent for staring down troubles that would humiliate a lesser politician. He was on television the other night with the Boston Pops Orchestra, doing the narration for Aaron Copland's "Lincoln Portrait." All during the performance we kept thinking that, as between him and the Boston Pops, the senator has more brass. - Columbia (S.C.) State

To The Editor:

Thursday, July 30 in response to an advertisement of a local firm, I traveled to Greenville seeking the merchandise offered. Other stops and purchases were made in your city.

On leaving Evans Street, turning east on Fourth Street and noting the changes made between Cotanche and Reade Streets, on past the area of the former high school, I was stopped by a police car driven by a Mr. Fleming. I had failed to stop at the stop sign at Fourth and Reade. This Mr. Fleming was not parked on the street but behind the restaurant on the corner.

My apologies for not having seen the sign and assuring him I would not do so again were of no avail. Joyfully he said, "A ticket will make you remember better." He said the fine would be about $30. There were no other automobiles on the street at the time. I was not driving more than ten miles per hour.

Merchants spend vast amounts of money advertising to draw "trade" to "Greenville, the friendly city." The Police Department is doing its utmost to kill thriving business. The "Hub of Eastern Carolina" is shrinking and its spokes are weakening. You flourish only as long as customers continue to support you. You do not have a thing to sell that cannot be bought elsewhere! As honey attracts bees, so does good will attract people. This incident has left me and my companion of the day with disgust so filled with contempt that I no longer care to ever shop with you again.

In my opinion, it would be far wiser to overlook such incidents when visitors are interested in noting your changes and improvements than to impose a fine which will forever seal off business. Over the years it has been pleasant shopping with you. I much prefer trading with townspeople, who are the backbone of your community, than being a consumer for those businesses with greater buying power. It is my duty to support you.

The decision rests with you and its consequence rests with you. What is your decision?

Constitutional Timebomb To Placate Harpies

By J. J. KILPATRICK

The House of Representatives voted itself a three-week recess on Friday, but the vote came four days too late. In a monumental display of irresponsibility, far beyond the calls of lunacy, the House on Monday voted 346-15 to approve a "women's rights" amendment to the Constitution.

Gadzooks! Zounds! Horsefeathers! What in the world came over the House?

If you follow the course of constitutional amendments on the Hill, you might suppose this action reflected months of painstaking hearings, testimony by professors of law, studies by constitutional experts. None of this. There had not been a single hour of study in committee.

From the lopsided nature of the vote, you might suppose the amendment had overwhelming public support. Bosh! This constitutional time bomb is the contrivance of a gang of professional harpies, descendants in zealotry of the late Carry Nation. Her bag was Prohibition; theirs is "women's rights." They are as persistent as Secaucus mosquitoes; and they are the biggest bores in town. The 346 who voted for this resolution, give or take a handful, had but one purpose in mind - to get these furies off their backs.

Now, mind you, there is an excellent case to be made for "equal rights for women" in certain well-defined areas of law and public policy. It is patently unfair for women to be paid less than men for performing the same work. This is more than unfair: It is unlawful, under the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The Department of Justice recently filed a major case to establish the point. Meanwhile, the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission has won scores of voluntary agreements in industry to halt discrimination against women workers.

The equal protection clause of the existing Fourteenth Amendment also is being widely invoked these days, notably in suits to compel the admission of women on an equal basis with men at state-supported institutions of higher learning. Step by careful step, courts and legislatures are in fact adjusting to the changing status of women in America today.

All well and good. But the reckless action of the House on Monday is the very antithesis of this careful, reasoned approach to social and legal change. The proposed amendment says this: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Does anyone have even a foggy notion of what this amendment, as a matter of law, would accomplish? No, sir. The House record is as empty as a ping-pong ball. The Senate Judiciary Committee held three days of hearings this past May, but these were mostly my dear lady, how delighted we are to have you here. The hearings have not even been printed.

The most rudimentary study would have required of the House that it look into all the laws of all the States, along with the Federal government, especially affecting women. It is a fair assumption that hundreds of such laws exist, affecting marriage, divorce, wills and estates, inheritance, abortion, military service, hazardous occupations. If this amendment were ratified in its present form, as Professor Paul Freund has said, it would "transform every provision of a law concerning women into a constitutional issue to be ultimately resolved by the Supreme Court." Look. This is serious. The U. S. Constitution, just as Gladstone said in his famous phrase, is in truth the most wonderful political work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man. It ought never to be amended lightly or frivolously, or to soothe some passionate sopranos. An amendment specifically affecting, in some unknown fashion, more than half the population of the nation merits far more than an hour's apoplectic argument on an August afternoon. Perhaps the Senate will bury this proposal, but the resolution has 83 sponsors over there and the prospect seems unlikely. In the end, it may be up to the sovereign States, God bless them, to demonstrate the same courage and common sense shown by the 15 stout-hearted men who had the guts on Monday to stand up and vote no.

Bonn-Moscow Accord Is Seen No Reason For Dropping NATO Guard

By CARL HARTMAN

Associated Press Writer BRUSSELS (AP) - Now that the Soviet Union and West Germany have promised not to use force against one another, some people are sure to suggest that there is no longer any good reason for the North Atlantic alliance—that the chief danger of a European war has disappeared.

This kind of talk gets no support at the headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization outside Brussels.

NATO officials are not commenting officially; the private view generally is that the treaty helps relax tensions but does not mean the allies can let down their guard.

NATO diplomats believe that the treaty only became possible because West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's foreign allies were firmly behind him.

The point of the Atlantic Alliance, as these diplomats see it, is that America and Western Europe must depend on one another for defense, not against the comparatively mild policy today of the men who rule the Soviet Union but against any shift to a new aggressive policy that those men or their successors might make. Weakening the Atlantic alliance might encourage such a shift, they think.

"You still have the same configuration of troops in Central Europe," said one NATO diplomat, "and that obliges us to have something comparable."

He and his colleagues argue that because the Western allies have held together for the 21 years of NATO's history, Soviet leaders have seen that aggression would be futile. The diplomats think no quantity of treaties can match the effectiveness of united defense in preventing war.

Nevertheless support can be expected to grow for the idea of talks with the Soviets on a new system of security for Europe. At the end of NATO's last big meeting in Rome nearly three months ago, success in the Soviet-West German negotiations was mentioned as one of the first steps toward such a conference.

But the governments in the alliance are likely to insist, as Secretary-General Manlio

I told him we had done articles on them, before.

I had to agree that maybe some further explanation was needed.

Greenville Glimpses

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

Two boys biking along on Fourth Street about a block apart, communicating constantly with each other via walkie-talkie radio.

An enterprising brown dog crashing all the cookouts and backyard parties along Jarvis Street, making friends and dining sumptuously on leftovers, scraps and bones.

A youngster, about five years old, fearfully clutching his mother's hand on first trip to the dentist's office.

Heavenly blue morning glories blooming along a fence on Tenth Street.

peephole in the door. Even then, the opening of the door was no instant thing.

Once in the vestibule, the delayed greeting explained itself. A glance at the door revealed what can be called an elaborate display of multiple locks and chains. The host noticed the surprise in the glance. He pointed to the extra window locks and then to what appeared to be a simple table decoration, painted with pretty flowers. "That," he said, "is a can of mace. You find them all about the house."

It should be noted that this man is not what you would call an excitable person. Neither is his wife and daughter. The explanation given was simply that "we feel we need to do this in the light of some of the things which have happened in our neighborhood." Such precautions now are commonplace throughout the area.

A drive about Northwest Washington leaves little doubt that the fence builders have had a bonanza. Police say prowlers don't like them. They hamper a hurried departure.

Many, probably most, large apartment houses have taken extra security measures. Visitors often find that their host not only must be notified by the desk of their arrival, but that their host must, in turn, notify the desk that they are departing. Closed circuit TV covers service entrances and exits.

The influence of crime is also seen in changes downtown. If you need to drop in on an office "after hours," arrangements should be made in advance. The lobbies of many buildings are locked shortly after the usual quitting time. Special clearance is needed in advance so that someone will be there to let you in.

At government offices, top secretaries who often must work late get special consideration. They rank high in the allocation of official parking places on guarded lots. And they are escorted to their transportation by guards when they leave in the dark.

Visitors have a bit of trouble with street buses, until they get onto the system. Drivers carry no change to attract thugs. It is up to the rider to have either a token or the correct amount of change to drop into the locked box on the bus. Taxi drivers can't be counted on to change big bills. As their cash builds up, they "drop it off."

Night life, entertainment, is influenced in many ways. The "mass" parties once so much a part of the Washington scene are now rather rare. Small gatherings are much more in vogue. They make it easier to identify the invited guests. Movement after dark is very much restricted. This is true of the whole area and not just downtown Washington. Most people simply go home from work, lock up and stay in.

Police claim the crime tide is being reversed. In 1969, Washington and its suburbs ranked fourth in national statistics for violent crime. First place went to a metropolitan neighbor, Baltimore.

Downtown Washington stores, the famous 14th and F St. area, are trying a new experiment - staying open a couple of evenings a week. Restaurants and downtown clubs are a part of the act.

They offer special buffets and entertainment in the hope of "getting a crowd." The try is expected to continue, at least until the days turn short and night comes early. And there is some hope that things may be changing. Washington does have a new crime law, considered the toughest ever enacted.

But it will be hard to forget a call to a long time friend who said: "My, we want you folks to see the youngsters. But we can't ask you to come over and we never go out at night. Meet me at the club for lunch tomorrow. Jane will come down and bring the kids."

There is something more than just said about that.

The 'Crime Problem' Overshadows Lives In Washington, D.C.

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

WASHINGTON - The nation's Capitol City takes a bit of getting used to, even after an absence of only three years.

Politics, as has been the case historically, still remains the chief topic of conversation. But in any get-together, whether two or a crowd, it is never long before attention shifts to the "crime problem."

In fact, it is not drawing too long a bow to conclude that crime has become the single most important influence in the way people of the area live and work here in the District of Columbia and the huge urban sprawl which surrounds it - reaching into the communities of Fredericksburg, Culpeper and Winchester, Va., and Frederick, Baltimore and Annapolis, Md.

The concern was brought home in an evening visit with a friend who lives on one of the best of the few "better sections" which remain in Washington. It's an address which befits a Washington representative of one of the biggest manufacturing companies in the nation.

The first tingle of the door bell produced a near-frantic yelping (the poodle was a new acquisition and the barking is not discouraged). Then came a "viewing" through a

New Emphasis On Family Room

THE MAISLAND 8/16/70

By GERRY BISHOP
The family room is where the action is. So why not make it special?

In the Maisland, designed by the Associated Architects, the family room boasts many qualities that will endear it to any homeowner.

First, there's the sunken floor which creates charm and atmosphere.

And then there's the wood-burning fireplace. What's a family room without a log fire on those crisp fall evenings when it's so much fun to sit around and sing and chat!

And this is only one of many fine features in this warm and inviting home.

There are four bedrooms on the second floor, including a master suite with dressing room, walk-in closet and private bath.

The main bath serves the other three bedrooms which are of comfortable size.

Private Balcony

Perhaps the most distinguishing asset of the second story is the private balcony off the master bedroom.

On the first floor there is a formal dining room, large kitchen with dining space, living room, foyer, laundry and a half bath, as well as the family room.

There's a large basement with plenty of space for storage and utilities.

The attached two-car garage is king-sized and opens into the kitchen part of the house.

Traditional styling is enhanced by stone veneer on the front facade and shake shingles on the 4-12 pitched roof. Redwood plywood siding with redwood battens add to the exterior appearance.

Construction is frame.

The main entrance is sheltered by a small overhang. One steps into the foyer which has two closets. Stairs to the second floor lead off to the right.

The living room has fine dimensions of approximately 22 feet by 13 feet. It adjoins the dining room which is 12 feet square.

All Usual Built - Ins

All the usual built-ins highlight the kitchen which has ample space for a table and chairs. The sink overlooks the back yard.

Completing the kitchen work area is the laundry room next door. It adjoins the powder room and has space for a washer and dryer.

The family room, a spacious 24 feet, has sliding glass doors which open onto the back yard. It would be convenient to build a patio there.

There are 1,203 square feet on the first floor, 960 square feet on the second floor, and 505 square feet in the basement.

The exterior dimensions are 34 feet by 58 feet.

Antique-Buying Can Be Fun For The Housewife

By VIVIAN BROWN

This is little white lie time—when an "antique" impulsively bought at a wayside barn sale or antiques shop can turn a red-blooded healthy woman into a furtive, quivering fiber.

"It cost practically nothing" may be her stock reply.

If she can get "the thing" home without being observed, she is giant steps ahead in avoiding the family inquisition.

Small objects—doorknobs, old locks, bottle stoppers—may be hidden in the glove compartment of the car. Flat things—trivets, sieves, plates, trays—may slide under the car seat.

And if the car has a portable ice box, she is in luck. It will hold candlesticks, vases and other treasures. One good system is to stop at a grocery store and use a brown paper bag to hold the treasures. That way, suggests one woman, you can walk bravely to the kitchen and maybe on down to the cellar, if you have one.

If one gets caught in the act when one is transporting, say, a big piece of furniture or other large object, you must meet the heckler head-on: "Wait until you see this table when it is re-finished ... no one at the stupid auction could tell this was really a Hitchcock chair." Or, "This old door is really 18th century ... I could have sold this for three times what I paid for it before the auction was over ... Gosh, that auctioneer was a real dum-

... dum...." A 50 cent investment in a goldfish bowl—even if you don't have goldfish—can be a barrel of laughs. But try to sell that idea to the family.

One woman completely lost her cool under family pressure when she unveiled her purchase. She told them her pastic-topped table was Louis XI. To which her 15-year-old girl replied that it was too bad. Louis went underground with the secret of plastics.

Days like that can take the joy out of antique hunting and make a woman tell fabulous fibs. A handsome little sewing table may well be worth the price—reduced from $25 to $15 and then actually acquired to $10—but the wise shopper must tell her family that she got it for $5 or $2.

While the fun of junksales may be marred when you arrive home carrying your little prize, don't get the idea that you can break the junk barrier by inviting your husband to an auction or tag sale even to carry home that Franklin stove or carved eagle you've been eyeing. Some comments made by men that were overheard at one auction, include these:

... We don't have room in the cellar for that thing (when his wife bid on a Boston rocker that needed to be repaired).

... We don't even own a bird (when a woman bid on a large old Victorian bird cage that she planned to use as a planter).

... That isn't as good as the one Aunt Mary sent us that is on a shelf (when a woman bid on a coffee grinder).

... Who needs it (when she wanted to buy a duck decoy to convert into a lamp. Real cheap, too.)

AP NEWSFEATURES

A recent discussion in this space on balky doors concentrated on loose hinges, the most common cause of sticking and sagging.

Apparently it didn't go far enough. The subsequent mail made it obvious that, even when hinges were secured properly and doors weren't actually sticking, many persons were having trouble with locks, especially mortise locks, which are recessed into the front edges of doors.

Most complained about the failure of door bolts to fit into the openings in strike plates, making the doors difficult or impossible to lock. And some asked what to do about spring latches that seemed to fit into the strike plate notches without any trouble yet produced door rattles at the slightest breeze.

When a bolt does not fit into the strike plate opening, you must first determine why. Is it striking the plate too low or too high? Most of the time, there will be scratch marks or a worn part on the plate showing where the bolt is hitting it instead of going into the opening. If this is not quickly apparent, close the door slowly and shine a flashlight into the area to see where the misalignment is. And if that doesn't work, then rub some chalk on the end of the bolt, try to lock the door and see where the chalk marks are.

If the difference is very slight—say, one-eighth of an inch—you can probably file the metal to make a larger opening to accommodate the bolt. This filing usually can be more easily done if the strike is removed by taking out the two screws that hold it in place.

If the misalignment is too great, you will have to change the location of the strike plate. Remove it from the door frame. Take a good chisel and enlarge the mortise so that the striking plate can be positioned properly. Before cutting away any wood, be doubly sure you are making the cut in the right place.

When you attempt to replace the plate, the old screw holes may interfere with the placement of the screws into their new locations. In that event, fill the old holes with wood putty or

More Drawn To A Mobile Home

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—One in every two single-family homes sold this year will be a mobile home. Newlyweds will purchase about half of them; retirees or older couples whose families are grown will buy more than 20 per cent.

The attraction? Modern convenience at low cost.

One young couple explained their decision to buy: "We couldn't afford the down payment on a house. We didn't want to pay high rent for an apartment. We bought a new, completely furnished mobile home for $5,000. After living in it for three years we sold it for $3,000. It was rewarding way to beat the housing shortage."

The industry describes a mobile home as a "portable, wheeled structure that can be plastic wood, wait until the patches harden and go ahead with replacement of the plate. If you happen to have wood plugs on hand, fill the old holes with them and then you won't have to wait until the putty or plastic hardens.

Rattling comes from too much play when the latch is inside the strike plate opening. This can be corrected by repositioning the strike plate by moving it slightly closer to the moulding. Here again a little chiseling of the wood is necessary and here again, you may have to fill up the old screw holes with putty, plastic or plugs.

towed on its own chassis, connected to all utilities and used for year-round residential living."

Today, that's home for almost 6 million Americans. The Department of Commerce reports mobile homes accounted for more than 90 per cent of all new single-family residences priced below $15,000. The industry expects to sell 475,000 units this year; one million by 1975.

What does the mobile home family get for its money?

A fully-furnished, completely-equipped home ranging in price from $4,000 to $15,000, depending on size and furnishings. The variety in size and style is enormous. The average cost is $6,300, or about $8.75 per square foot, compared to approximately $20 per square foot for an unfurnished site-constructed home. Monthly space rentals range from $30 to $70.

Promoting the growth of the mobile home market is the increasing number of specially planned mobile home parks. There are 22,000 throughout the country at present, and the number is growing. Many of the new developments provide a package that includes paved streets, lighting, maintenance, cable television, playgrounds, swimming pools, man-made lakes, shopping centers, day-care centers and other facilities.

The mobilehome is outfitted much as any dwelling—better than all but the most modern apartments. The Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association says more than 90 per cent of mobile homes have refrigerators, 25 per cent have air conditioning,

Here's How To Do It

By ANDY LANG

Q—I am negotiating to buy a house and expect to get an FHA mortgage. I understand that I will have to pay "points" on the mortgage, but have never quite figured out how these points are determined. Can you help me?

A—A point is 1 per cent of the mortgage. Lending institutions charge points when they feel they aren't getting enough interest to make the transaction worthwhile. If the points charged amount, let us say, to $450 on a $15,000 loan, the person taking out the mortgage would receive only $14,550—which, in effect, hikes the interest rate. But this is a very complicated subject (often the seller, rather than the buyer, must pay the points) and it would be unwise to enter into the purchase of a house under these

Q—We had some kitchen cabinets put in about a year ago, intending to finish them ourselves. But we never got around to it. Now we hope to do so, using white enamel that has a semi-gloss. Is there anything special that has to be put on under the enamel. The wood is pine of a good quality.

A—Use white enamel undercoater, preferably of the same brand as the semi-gloss. Sand very lightly, then paint. Even more important, be sure that all dirt, grease and grime are removed from the wood before anything else is done to it. And if there is any wax on the wood, take it off with a commercial wax remover.

Q—Is price the only way of determining whether a paint brush is of good quality?

A—No. A good quality brush has bristles of different length so that the paint is distributed evenly throughout the brush. Tapered bristles—thick at the butt and thinner at the tip—are desirable. And a good quality brush has fullness. You can learn the knack of telling a good brush at a glance by going to a reliable paint store and comparing the expensive brushes with the cheaper brushes. When they are side-by-side, the differences stand out. Of course, that brings up the point about prices.

While the answer to your specific question is no, the fact is that it costs more to make a good brush than a poor one and so, a high quality brush will cost more. But there's a personal satisfaction in being able to make your own decision.

'Normalization' Chokes Czechs

By RICHARD C. LONGWORTH VIENNA (UPI)—When the Soviet Union invaded Czechoslovakia on Aug. 21, 1968, it told the reform-minded Prague leaders the price of Russian withdrawal would be the "normalization" of the country.

On the second anniversary of the invasion, few would deny normalization—the kind of normalization the Russians had in mind—has been achieved. But the occupation goes on.

Czechoslovakia today is a sad and sullen nation. Overt protest has nearly ceased. The centers of liberalism, like the cultural unions and the universities, are under strict control. Czechoslovaks still speak punitively in private about their leaders and the Russians but political apathy is the rule in public.

The liberals who led the "Prague spring" and who shouted their defiance of the occupiers on the first anniversary last year are either in exile or cowed.

Protests choked off Reports reaching here from Prague say the liberals who led the first-anniversary demonstrations have decided against any protests or demonstrations this year. They feel it is too dangerous and probably would accomplish no more than another turn of the hardline screw.

This dousing of defiance may be the hardliners' chief accomplishment over the past year.

On the first anniversary, tens of thousands of Czechoslovaks responded to whispered instructions by marching, dressed in black, for miles through Prague rather than ride state-owned transport to work. Even conductors aboard the empty trams wore black.

forced every Communist party member to go before examining boards to swear his loyalty to both Prague and Moscow and his condemnation of the reform era that preceded the invasion. If the board remains unconvinced, the member is out of the party.

Tightening Controls
In an exaggerated way, this is what happened to Alexander Dubcek since the anniversary. At that time Dubcek, the former first secretary of the party, was president of parliament. Since then, he lost that job, was hustled off in exile—and apparent safety—as ambassador to Turkey, then called back and subjected to four consecutive days of grilling by a party committee. Then, near collapse, he was told that he was out of the party he had served for 30 years and led for 18 months.

Gustav Husak, the man who succeeded Dubcek as party leader, tried to save his fellow Slovak by sending him to Turkey, voting against his expulsion from the party. So did Dubcek's old colleague, the 74-year-old resident, Ludvik Svoboda.

Both failed—outvoted by the hardliners on the party's highest councils. Now the rumors in Prague say both may be gone by the time the third anniversary comes, with Svoboda retired and Husak kicked upstairs to the ceremonial presidency.

Ruin Of The Liberals
Svoboda was one of the many heroes of the "Prague spring." Many of the others—the writers, journalists and economists—have gone into exile.

Dubcek will spend the anniversary at the Slovak summer cottage where he has lived with his family since losing his party membership. He is unemployed and is believed to be the "rope" in a tug of war between Husak's moderates, who want to give him an obscure factory job, and the hardliners, who want to put him on trial.

Of all the heroes, perhaps the only one left in Czechoslovakia who knows his fate is Jose Smrkovsky, Dubcek's top aide and the reform movement's leading orator. Smrkovsky is hospitalized with cancer and medical sources in Prague say he is dying.

Girls Get Exposure To Chosen Fields

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dedicated and well-qualified medical and paramedical personnel will necessarily be the backbone of the medical center of Eastern North Carolina that Greenville aspires to be. The Summer Experience Program, tried here for the first time this summer is an effort to provide firsthand knowledge for young people who believe they would like to enter any of the allied health professions.

Four girls who have been exposed to their chosen fields this summer are Peg Horne and Becky Mobley of Greenville and Susan Allen and Vicki Spell of Farmville. Peg worked in physical therapy at Pitt Memorial Hospital while Becky learned about the work of the medical records librarian there. Susan and Vicki were at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, where Susan verified her interest in social work and Vicki observed nursing.

George Hamilton, who heads the Department of Physical Therapy of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions at East Carolina University, is president of the statewide Summer Experience Program.

"We are delighted to have some young persons from this area participating in our program for the first time," he said. "For five weeks this summer, each girl will be exposed to differing phases of the work of her particular field under the supervision of a professional in the field."

The supervisors were given a chance to accept or reject the candidates and, upon accepting them, agreed to give them a chance to do real work in the fields under their direct supervision.

Peg Horne's supervisor, Henri Guyette, chief of physical therapy at Pitt Memorial Hospital, is enthusiastic about the program mainly because he sees it as an excellent means of recruiting for the field of treatment he loves.

Kills or Cures Desire
"We need qualified physical therapists badly," he said, "but it's certainly not to the advantage of the student or the profession for a student to begin his academic work, perhaps have two or more years behind him, and then when he gets into the actual work, find he doesn't like it."

"Peg is finding out now before she begins college at all what it's like inside physical therapy. The experience hopefully will either reinforce her desire to become a physical therapist herself or will point her way to another field."

Peg said she feels the experience has had reinforcing effect. "I've seen aspects of the work that I didn't know existed and, although it all hasn't been pleasant, I find it fascinating and I'm surer that ever that this is what I want to do with my life. I will study at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro beginning fall after next toward this aim."

Like all of the four, Peg is a rising high school senior. The program is open to students entering their junior and senior years of high school.

Becky is not so sure as Peg that her field for the summer, medical records librarianship, will be her profession, but it has provided her a satisfying job and a means for furthering her education. Becky has a strong commitment to Christian education as a career, but her five weeks' program has already developed into a paid full-time summer job and she will probably work part-time during next school year. She feels the experience will help her get a similar job near Bob Jones University, the school she plans to attend after high school. Miss Trula Bennett is her supervisor.

Susan Allen has been directed in the varied activities of social work and other related fields at the Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center near here. Her supervisor was Miss Dotty McLaughlin, director of social work there. She still believes she wants to be a social worker and plans to study at Appalachian State University. She thinks she would like to work either with alcoholics, as she has at ARC, or with children.

Vicki Spell would like to be a nurse and has practiced the nursing art under Mrs. Phyllis Martin, ARC director of nursing. She and Susan both learned about other fields within the ARC program, also, including occupational therapy, recreational therapy, and vocational therapy.

The Greenville Jaycees sponsored the Greenville girls and provided them a small stipend to cover some of their expenses, although it was by no means a salary. Recruited late, the Farmville girls did not have sponsors.

The girls' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'H. Horne Jr. of 1813 Circle Drive, Greenville; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mobley of Route 2, Greenville; Mr. and Mrs. Pete Allen of Lee Drive, Farmville; and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Spell of 600 East Wilson Street, Farmville.

At the beginning of the five-week Experience, all the local girls attended a statewide meeting in Charlotte of all the 85 Summer Experience participants. They were oriented to the program and to their particular fields which include nursing, social work, occupational therapy, recreational therapy, vocational rehabilitation, social welfare, medical technology, dental hygiene, dietetics, speech and hearing, special education, and others.

At the end of the five weeks, they got together in Charlotte again for an evaluation session. Girls who had participated in all of the different fields told something of what they had learned. Susan was the representative from social work and Becky from medical records. Several of the supervisors spoke, telling what they liked about the program and giving suggestions for future programs.

Two Officers Here

Greenville has a good portion of the program's officers. Besides Hamilton, its president, its vice president, Miss Mary Young, came here this month to help plan the occupational therapy curriculum of the ECU School of Allied Health. Other officers are Mrs. Faith Geyweiler of Durham, secretary, and Norwood Clark of the State Department of Mental Health, treasurer.

Summer Experience was begun five years ago as a state recruitment effort by the National Occupational Therapy Association, Hamilton said. Three years ago, having proved successful, it was expanded to include other health career fields. The full title is "The Allied Health Professions Manpower Summer Experience Program."

"We like to think of the Summer Experience as a community program with the community contributing and the community benefiting," Hamilton said. "Local organizations provide the financing. Local schools, specifically counselors, publicize it and interest students. The student participates, hopefully makes his decision and perhaps interests some of his friends in medical and paramedical careers, also. Of course, if the person is at all proficient, the institution in which he works benefits, as do the people he works with."

The growth of the program — from 36 participants last year to 85 this year — seems to indicate its success and to predict a rosy future. Its concept is not self-limiting. With local organizations acting as sponsors, instead of the program's being financed from within or by one agency, there is no limit to the number of young people who can participate.

The need for health care personnel is great. There is a critical manpower shortage in the health professions all over the nation and North Carolina is well below the national average per 1,000 patients. Eastern North Carolina trails the state.

According to Joe Amberg, national president of the Allied Health Schools, health care is the second largest industry in the nation and it could be the first if the needed personnel were available. There are over 125 definable health professions and occupations. In 1900 there was only one supportive health care person per physician. Today there are 13, and there should be at least 20 by 1975, he said.

Data is being kept on all the Summer Experience participants to determine how many of them do indeed go into health careers. No accurate figures are yet available because of the newness of the program, but Miss Ann Hodges of Rex Hospital in Raleigh has followed up the participants she has worked with and she says that about 70 percent are in or are working toward medical and paramedical careers now.

Miss Mary Sue Watson Is Wed Diana Sands Is Excited About Career

BETHEL — Miss Mary Sue Watson became the bride of Harry Thomas Witmer on Saturday in the Bethel United Methodist Church. The Rev. Dr. Robert F. McKee officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lloyd Watson. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald S. Witmer of Fall River, Mass.

The nuptial music was presented by Mrs. W. Russell Hunnicutt, organist, and Mrs. Thomas Rushman Andrews Jr., soloist, who sang "Because" and "The Prayer Perfect." Mrs. John W. Rook directed the wedding.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a wedding gown of white silk organza. The empire bodice designed with a portrait neckline and short sleeves was enhanced with a panel of chantilly lace and pearls cascading the gown front. The A-line skirt featured a detachable wateau train bordered in chantilly lace falling from the shoulder.

She wore a fingertip mantilla with matching chantilly lace border arranged from a Camelot headpiece and carried a colonial nosegay of white majestic daisies and stephanotis centered with a white cattleya orchid.

Mrs. Andrew C. Benbow of Laurel, Md., was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs.

N. Clemmons Williams, and Miss Margaret Cannon, of Bethel, Miss Nancy Watson, of Perry Hall, Md., cousins of the bride, Mrs. William Stewart of Concord, Calif., sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Buster I. Hill of Great Lakes, Ill.

The attendants were gowned alike in floor length dresses. The empire bodices overlaid in white Swiss lace featured scooped necks and short puffed sleeves. The full skirts of yellow nylon organza were enhanced with self bows. They wore daisy headpieces adorned with pearls and carried nosegays of white and yellow daisies.

Dr. Donald S. Witmer, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were William Witmer of Denver, Col., and Donald B. Witmer, Fall River, Mass., both brothers of the bridegroom, John L. Watson Jr., of Bethel, brother of the bride, Grady Locklear of Sumter, S. C., and James Earl Jr. of New Bern.

The church was decorated with arrangements of yellow and white daisy chrysanthemums and yellow snapdragons. Twin nine-branched candelabra entwined with greenery flanked the altar. Pews were tied with bridal satin.

The bride's mother wore a dress of pink silk with a beaded neckline and beaded cuffs on the short sleeves. She wore matching accessories and a cattleya orchid. The bridegroom's mother chose a dress and jacket of aqua silk with matching accessories. Her corsage was a cattleya orchid.

For a southern wedding trip, the bride changed into a navy blue ensemble with white trim and red, white, and blue accessories. She wore an orchid lifted from her bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, at Greensboro. The bridegroom is a graduate of Valley Forge Military Academy, Wayne, Pa., and Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C. Both Mr. and Mrs. Witmer have done graduate study at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. The couple will reside in Miami, Fla.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

The Witmer-Watson wedding party and out-of-town guests were honored with a wedding breakfast Saturday morning at the Three Steers Restaurant. Hosts and hostesses were family and friends of the bride.

By PEACE STERLING AP Newsfeatures Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Diana Sands has a sprinkling of freckles across her pretty face, and hands that are never still. She has a quick laugh and a throaty voice.

And as a Broadway, television and motion picture actress, she is excited—about an upcoming TV special in the fall, but even more so about her latest movie, "The Landlord."

"I'm so proud of that movie, you'd think I'd done the whole thing myself," she said, in a way that somehow wasn't conceited. "It's a very honest film. And it was such a joint effort, with such a great group of people to work with. I think that's what made it so special for me."

A native New Yorker, Miss Sands, in her 35 years, has had a multidimensional career. Critics first noticed her in the Broadway play, "A Raisin in the Sun," and liked her so much that she was named the Most Promising Young Actress on Broadway in the Variety Critics Poll. She recreated that role in the motion picture version of the play.

Her next two plays were "Blues for Mr. Charlie," and "The Owl and the Pussycat." And in addition to her stage work, she appeared in the motion pictures "Mr. Pulver and the Captain," "Four Boys and a Gun," "Executive Suite," "Garment Jungle," and "An Affair of the Skin."

Recently, in a busy New York restaurant, wearing a pink pants suit that she called her "cuddlesuit," Miss Sands tried to sit still and talk about her career.

"When I was a little girl, my brother took me to a movie, and ever since then I wanted to be a movie star. So I entered the High School of the Performing Arts as soon as I could, and from then on never had a doubt."

"I was lucky though," she said. "My family was so encouraging. My father looked on acting as just another profession, and said, 'If you're going to have a skill, you'd just better be as good at it as you can.'"

"And were they ever tolerant," she explained. "When I was little, I used to do the Suzy Q while my mother and sister were washing the dishes. They seemed to be happy for the entertainment."

Miss Sands made her stage debut in an Off-Broadway production of "Major Barbara." Reminiscing about her early work, she recalled, "I was scared to death, but was so excited. When I first heard an audience saying 'bravo,' I was so frightened I didn't know what was happening. And when I got my first standing ovation, I couldn't figure out why the audience was standing up."

Although she has played in serious roles as well as light ones, she says she enjoys both. "I still like straight drama," she commented. "But when I was younger, I used to prefer it because I took myself so seriously. Now I don't do that. There's so much trouble in the world today that comedy is needed, and it's a good device for putting a point across."

Speaking of her position as a black actress, Miss Sands is fond of recalling some advice she received from one of her drama professors.

"He used to tell us that being an actress doesn't mean you can walk away from life. On the contrary, he said you have to be more involved in it because as an actress, you're seen and heard more."

"As for being black," she continued, "I think it's important that the black community has a sense of unity and identity. It's the only way you can make your voice heard, like the idea of the Poor People's Campaign. Poor people are so busy working they don't have time to lobby like other groups. But organized like that, they can."

"Those principles don't apply just to blacks," she noted. "They hold true for all minority groups, and until we all become Americans in the true sense, each unit should be strong."

Although she loves her work, Miss Sands complained that she has little time left for the personal things she enjoys.

"People say, let's go to the movies, or to a play. That's not relaxation for me—it's work. I'd rather sit on the porch and read—that's my kind of fun."

What would she do if she weren't an actress? "I really don't know," she said. "I've thought of things like psychology or writing, or some kind of community or social thing. I'd have to keep busy, but it would have to be something I felt was important."

Then, with a grin on her face, and her eyes crinkling, she said, "My biggest thing is wanting to get married. I don't think all I've done is all there is. There's another part of me that's important. I think it's very hard for a woman to be fairly intelligent and still express herself as a woman." Is there a special man in the picture? "Yes, and I'm thinking hard about him, but I won't say who he is."

THE "LOOK" OF WOOL

Did you know—that the "look" of wool really looks and feels like Wool?

That you can now machine wash most of the "woolens"—that really aren't "woolens"?

It's true — the development of the Turbo Acrylic fiber provides the look, texture and warmth of wool — but, is machine washable in luke warm water of 110 F.

You will also find Fall 70 styling in these fabrics; watch for novelty plaids, brushed varieties and even fur fibers added for that softness so essential for Fall's fashions.

Piedmont Fabrics will have the pre-cut and pre-fringed poncho for you that looks like wool but can be machine washed as well! All of Fall's best Autumn shades as noted below can be found within the many varieties available.

Rust is the newest and most important color of the fall season and merits your close attentions.

Purples of every tone and shade quality promise to be seen and felt in volume for the upcoming season. True violet is being heralded as a real standout.

Red is more important than ever and will be seen clear and bright or in the deeper shades.

The "Blues" are here again—with medium and Cadet blue "doing their thing"! Navy will deepen intensely for Fall 70. Gold will deepen into yarn and pumpkin. Keep an eye on golden orange and polished copper also. Next week will find us discussing the extensive knit scene for Fall 70.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

(Blanche Hardee is substituting this week for Mrs. Trotman who is on vacation.)

Some women had rather get less for their money it seems.

A sampling of Greenville females shows they like the mini-skirt look. They contend that the mid-length dresses are less feminine and glamorous—not as flattering—as the present mini-skirt styles.

"I don't like it at all. I don't like it for anyone," said Mr. Allen Taylor. "The mid-length is not flattering at all."

Mrs. Taylor said she will probably buy some midis just to keep up with the style.

"I don't think most men like the midi. I feel sure they prefer the mini," Mrs. Taylor noted.

Practical value? "They're not practical at all," Mrs. Taylor explained.

"I just returned from New York and the mid-length is seen in all the exclusive dress shops," Mrs. Taylor said. "There were no mini-length styles."

Mrs. Donald Patrick said, "The midi is not for me because of my height (five feet - four inches tall)."

"The mid-length is good for someone tall and slender," Mrs. Patrick remarked. "I probably could wear certain mid-length outfits with boots."

Mrs. Patrick does not intend to buy many mid-length outfits this year.

She plans to buy pant suits with mid-length coats.

"I think that possibly the mid-length would be warm, but it would also be very clumsy," Mrs. Patrick noted. "I don't think anyone really needs that much skirt around their legs for warmth."

"I don't feel the midi is practical for a number of reasons," Mrs. Patrick emphasized. "Mainly because it makes people feel they have to give up an entire wardrobe for the new style."

Mrs. Patrick said, although any length is good this fall, women will probably feel out of style without the mid-length.

"I personally do not like the midi and hope they will not last," she said. "I would rather see skirts go to the floor than have the midi. This length is so unbecoming to most women."

Josie Rawl, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rawl, feels her age group will not change their style of clothing this fall.

Josie, a junior at Rose this fall, does not like the midi and feels she will probably not buy any this fall.

"I don't think the midi will become fashionable and replace what women are now wearing, not for a while anyway," she said.

Mrs. Norman Keller, who has just returned from a two-month tour of the United States, said the only way she likes the mid-length is with high boots.

"Most of the dresses in the store windows in Los Angeles were mid-length but the dresses seen on the street were mini-length," Mrs. Keller said.

"Styles should make women look feminine and glamorous, the midi does not do this," Mrs. Keller said.

One Can't Call A Princess 'Fat' / Calendar Events

By MARGARET SAVILLE LONDON (UPI)—There is no mistaking the budding double chin and the spreading plumpness.

But it would not do in this polite nation to call a royal princess "fat."

So as she approaches her 40th birthday Aug. 21, Princess Margaret is described in the British press as "a comfortably built matron."

Queen Elizabeth's younger sister, fifth in line to the throne, is making few concessions to the onset of middle-age. Her once-keen interest in nightclubbing and champagne suppers at posh restaurants has flagged but she frequently attends private parties given by trendy friends.

In a controversial book on the royal family by British journalist Andrew Duncan, Margaret is said to have told Duncan last year:

"I think everybody has the right to stick up for themselves. My friends used to tease me and say I was wearing my 'acid-dope' expression. That doesn't happen a lot now. I'm much nicer in my old age."

Margaret still clings to youthful fashions, makeup and hairdos. Like Princess Anne, she wears big white Stetson hats and loose flowing hair with ribbons.

She studies fashion magazines for ideas and then designs almost in full her own clothes. Just over five feet tall, the blue-eyed princess can only buy ready-made clothes from a few French houses like Dior. Most of her clothes are made for her by "a little woman" in southeast England.

Lord Snowdon, her husband of 10 years, takes a great interest in what Margaret wears and does not hesitate to give her suggestions and critical comments. He turned 40 earlier this year.

They have two children: Viscount Linley, and Lady Sarah, 6. Rumors that they are on the brink of divorce flare and fade with regularity. The fact so far is the storybook marriage of the princess and the photographer has been par for the marital course. They quarrel, and make up like everyone else and have thought about breaking up but haven't.

In 1970 the Snowdons seem to do their own thing individually much more. Margaret is possessive and dislike her husband's travelling. She realizes she cannot stop him—when she first married Antony Armstrong-Jones. He refused to quit working and the queen had to capitulate on the tradition that no royal family member engages in trade.

Snowdon is often in New York on photographic business. She is prevented from joining him there by royal commitments.

Large sized fresh fruits are not necessarily the best quality, nor are they always economical. They may appear to be bargains, but may be entirely unsuited to the purpose you have in mind.

Punishment Love Women Prisoners Fare Far Better Than Men Is Motive Here

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: What's wrong with me? I'm in love with a guy who treats me like dirt. The worse he treats me, the more I love him. I've walked away from him a hundred times, vowing never to see him again, but I always call him up and ask him to forgive me for blowing my stack, when he's the one who should apologize to me.

I'm a good looking girl with a good figure, and could have lots of men who would treat me a lot better, but I always go back to this guy who gives me nothing but heartaches. I am 26 and he is 29 and this has been going on for nearly 3 years. How can I kill a love that is killing me?

CARMEN

DEAR CARMEN: What you call "love" is a physical attraction, passion and a compulsion to punish yourself—all tightly bound together. Unless you want a life of misery, walk out for good next time he has it coming. And pray for the strength to never again "love" a man you cannot like.

DEAR ABBY: What does a wife do about a husband who never writes to his mother? She is an ailing widow, and if I didn't write to her, she'd never hear from him. This goes for acknowledging her Christmas gifts, birthday gifts, etc. Naturally, I'm the one who buys and sends all our gifts to her. This has gone on ever since we were married—20 years ago!

I honestly didn't give it too much thought until recently when I realized from her letters how hurt she'd been.

We live a long distance from her. Over the years I've begged him to write a personal note to his mother, but he's always had a dozen excuses and my pleas have been ignored. My husband says it's a wife's "duty" to take care of the letters and gifts. What do you say?

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Attention to Mother—the results of prodding affords as much pleasure as the sincere and spontaneous kind—if the prodding doesn't show, that is. It's sad when a wife must beg her husband to show his mother a little consideration, but if that's the only way to accomplish it, better that way than not at all.

DEAR ABBY: Our church attendance is made miserable by selfish slobs who bring crying and talking babies to church services. Abby, there is a nursery for little ones right in the church, so there is no excuse for this sort of thing. The sermon cannot be heard at times, and even when it can, the outbursts are distracting. Our minister seems impervious, but we are annoyed. How do you feel about this, and what do you suggest?

AUBURN, N. Y.

DEAR AUBURN: Short of telling the offending "selfish slobs" directly, there is nothing you can do. I suppose some parents bring their little ones to services "praying" they'll behave, but I do believe if a child makes even one annoying sound, he should be removed from the audience for the duration of the service.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "EMBARRASSED" IN TULSA: Don't be. Don't go into debt for a showier wedding than you can afford. It's usually the girls who marry the little drips who insist on the biggest splash.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Letter writing can be a breeze. For Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

INTERIORS TODAY

(Fireplace Decoration)

Even if a fireplace is not in use, do not cover the opening. Why advertise that the fire is out? The sight of andirons and logs, though artificial, is always heart-warming.

If your hearth is of brick and the space between the mantel and the opening is high, add an extra mantel for curios.

Pictures over a fireplace should never be as wide as the hearth setting. If your fireplace is rather small, you can give it impressive size by mounting marble a foot wide on each side and top. This will provide a new and higher mantel. If your fireplace is of stone, you can add a bit of charm by painting the stones in a variety of hues.

By SALLY THRAN
St. Louis Post-Dispatch Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jane is 25-years-old, works in a St. Louis beauty shop and knows something few other American women do: the routine of a prison.

Her first conviction was in 1964, for stealing more than $50. She served 13 months at the Missouri Correction Center for Women at Tipton. She worked in the sewing room and laundry and learned how to upholster. She shared a dormitory room with four other women.

When she left Tipton, she found a job altering clothes in a Minneapolis department store. One day, she said, a friend lifted some dresses and coats off a rack. Don't take them, she remembers telling the friend, who told Jane not to worry.

They put the clothing in a car. Jane Jane ran a signal light and was stopped by the police. In the end, she was charged with stealing. Her friend, she explained, had some raps pending back in St. Louis and was out on bond. She said Jane had taken the clothing. Jane said she didn't blame her, that she would have done the same thing if she'd been in the friend's situation. She didn't deny the theft to anyone but her attorney. She can't remember if he was a public defender or a court-appointed lawyer.

Her attorney, she said, suggested that she plead guilty since she probably would be sent back to St. Louis. She pleaded guilty and served 23 months in a Minnesota prison.

The Minnesota institution had a work-release program: Jane did alternations at a clothing store each day from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For a while, she worked at a home for retarded children but she asked for a transfer because she became too attached to the kids.

She returned to St. Louis, took up residence at Magdala House and has resolved to stay out of trouble.

The experience of Jane (not her real name) indicates the good and the bad about the state and federal penal institutions in which some 6,000 American women currently live.

Their lives are inconspicuous compared to the critical analyses given men's prisons in recent years.

Large, violent outbreaks take place in men's prisons—not women's. Men, not women inmates have voiced charges of forced homosexuality, brutality and inadequate facilities. Reformists focus on male, not female, penal institutions. The total effect is an indication that things might run smoother in a women's prison.

Harry Woodward is a director of Guides for Better Living, a pre-release program connected with the Stone-Brandell Center in Chicago and operating in several prisons. He maintains that the small number of women prisoners—the approximate 6,000 women compared with a total of more than 185,000 men inmates—provides an inherent advantage to the woman prisoner.

"The design of the buildings tells you a lot," he said. "The first thing you notice about a men's prison, for example, is apt to be gun towers and a 31-foot-high fence around the maximum security area.

"But some of the women's prisons look more like French chateaux. Fewer numbers mean better design, it's that simple. It also means better everything: food, space, staff, privileges. There's more person-to-person contact between staff and inmates."

Jane, for example, remembered her feeling when she received her first prison sentence. "I was scared. I thought it would be like the movies. But it wasn't bad. The warden and staff were fair."

The same internal problems are common to male and female institutions but apparently to a less intense degree in women's prisons. "Sure, there were gals who wanted to mess around with you," Jane said, "and little groups that managed to get drugs—mainly pot. But all I needed to do was say 'no' once and they left me pretty much alone."

The lower number of women inmates stems in part from the fact that far fewer women than men are arrested for crimes of any sort. In 1969, some 700,000 women were charged with crimes in the United States compared to more than 4,000,000 men.

Clean Air Racers Prep For Cross-Country Match

By DAVID HASKELL. CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—Students will go racing across the country on Aug. 24 in cars powered by almost every means except the rubber band—just so long as it doesn't pollute the air.

It's the second annual running of the Clean Air Car Race, with 44 colleges and two high schools fielding about 60 vehicles in a 3,600-mile race from Cambridge, Mass., home of Massachusetts Institute of Technology (Caltech).

The race is expected to take seven days, but because of anticipated breakdowns of the student-designed cars, vehicles are expected to be "stretched out across a thousand miles of highway."

Under race rules, the students themselves must design, build, test and drive their own vehicles, but are allowed to enlist industry help—and other outside aid—for donations of equipment and operating funds.

Changing Rules The primary eligibility rule is that vehicles must comply with the 1975 federal exhaust emission standards, which are much stricter than those in force today.

The first Clean Air Car race was held two years ago between battery-powered electric cars from Caltech and MIT departing from opposite sides of the country bound for their rival's campus.

MIT's car arrived first but because it had been towed so many times en route, penalties gave the victory to Caltech.

This year all entrants start at Cambridge and will be using a dozen different power sources. The experimental propulsion systems include electric, electric-gasoline hybrids, steamers, turbines and cars with conventional internal combustion engines burning low-pollutant fuels such as propane, compressed natural gas and cryogenic gases, and assorted combinations.

Gloomy Outlook For Calif. U. After Disorders

By ROBERT STRAND. BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—Five years of campus disorder and fiscal backlash have brought the university of California, once the wonder of the academic world, to one of the gloomiest periods in its history.

California's new state budget contains raises for virtually all employees on the state payroll—except university and college teachers.

The university's requested appropriation for new construction was cut by the legislature by nearly 99 per cent and officials are thinking of such measures as eliminating freshmen and sophomores, or using temporary buildings like the quonset of World War II.

At a meeting of the statewide faculty Academic Senate June 15, president Charles Hitch warned that public displeasure was so intense the university could suffer "severe damage."

"If present trends continue," said Chairman Albert S. Rodda of the California Senate's education committee, "the university will become a second-rate institution."

Assemblyman Don Mulford of Berkeley, a bitter critic of the university administration, believes there is "a real danger the university may not be able to recover as we have known it."

Since the "Free Speech Movement" burst on the world at Berkeley in 1964, ushering in the era of U.S. campus dissent, increasingly violent disorders have rocked the system almost every year.

They were climaxed during the past academic year with disorders in which Telegraph Avenue outside the Berkeley campus was virtually sacked, a Bank of America branch was burned to the ground near the Santa Barbara campus, and a student was shot to death by police gunfire.

The people of California, who built the university through decades of heavy tax investment into a system rivaling the best private institutions in the world, have reacted with increasing bewilderment and bitterness.

"If I was a policeman on duty, I'd shoot them," said John DeBonis, a conservative Berkeley city councilman, of the student rioters.

"Let's harass them if you want to call it that," DeBonis said. "let's arrest them every day and get them out of Berkeley."

Rodda blamed political leaders like Gov. Ronald Reagan for telling the public "we can't afford" to maintain educational quality in a time of affluence.

"My quarrel with Governor Reagan is his failure to inspire people to do what they ought to do, to make higher education greater," Rodda said.

In the minutes of a closed June 15 Academic Senate meeting, President Hitch was summarized as warning: "Unless the faculty realizes and heeds the extent of public displeasure with the university, severe damage could result—through drastic inadequacy of support, through loss of personnel, and through loss of autonomy."

The university system of nine campuses around the state now has 7,500 faculty members, slightly more than Harvard.

another $300 a year by 1971.

The decision broke a 102-year tradition of free education for all.

How wide and deep ran the public's resentment was demonstrated in a June election when almost all political leaders—including Reagan—backed a $265 million bond issue for five new medical centers.

The proposal was decisively defeated—mainly because the name attached was the University of California.

But the course has been stormy since 1964.

Reagan won election as governor in 1966 partly on promises to bring peace to the campuses by being tough. But the disorders became more numerous and violent.

By early 1967, Reagan's faction on the university board of regents, swelled by new appointees, was strong enough to abruptly fire the president, Clark Kerr. He was replaced by a cigar-smoking economist.

With mounting financial problems of its own, the state government began cutting back appropriations sought by the university to meet its commitments under California's ambitious Master Plan for Education.

The master plan promised education for all, providing for admission of the top 12.5 per cent of high school students to the university, the top third to the 19 state colleges, and the remainder to two-year community colleges.

Last February, the university regents imposed tuition, called "an education fee" on the students. In addition to current health service and sundry fees, undergraduates will be paying another $300 a year by 1971.

The decision broke a 102-year tradition of free education for all.

How wide and deep ran the public's resentment was demonstrated in a June election when almost all political leaders—including Reagan—backed a $265 million bond issue for five new medical centers.

Crackdown On Foreign Cargoes

MANILA (UPI)—Philippine customs commissioner Rolando Geotina has raised the fine from 3,000 pesos ($500) to 10,000 pesos ($1,667) on foreign vessels found guilty of "habitually" carrying unmanifested cargo.

"Let this serve as a stern warning to all parties concerned that any violation of customs laws, rules and regulations will be dealt with severely irrespective of who gets hurt," Geotina said.

BIG STRETCH

AKRON, Ohio (UPI)—The nation's supermarkets will use enough packaging film on meat and produce this year to form a band 15 inches wide stretching from the earth to the moon and back, says Goodyear, which makes packaging film.

meter. From there it goes to an adapter which feeds it into the carburetor. Everything from that point is stock equipment, except for a catalytic reactor replacing the muffler. This afterburner, using platinum as the catalyst, is designed to further reduce pollutants before they escape into the atmosphere.

"We expected to reduce pollutants to about 10 per cent of what they are now," Jim Henry said. Henry, 21, a senior from San Francisco, operates the Caltech team's test bed facility, with Michael Lineberry, 23, a graduate engineering student from Pomona, Calif., in charge of the entire Caltech project.

One unusual entry from MIT is called "an electric motor with a seat." It is a pickup truck using a 1,000-pound electric motor capable of producing 500 horsepower. It gets its charge from a gasoline driven turbine generator unit.

The race committee said

winners would be selected in each of various classifications by a panel of independent automotive experts, based on the vehicle pollution emission rating, vehicle performance and time elapsed.

Each entry in the race will be assigned a followup car carrying an official observer, maintenance men and spare drivers.

The race route swings through Massachusetts, New York, Ontario, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

Overnight stops are planned at Toronto on Aug. 24, Detroit, Aug. 25, Champaign, Ill., Aug. 26, Oklahoma City, Aug. 27, Odessa, Tex., Aug. 28, Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 29.

Hunting Limits Liberalized

By GORDON BROWN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In anticipation of large flights of ducks and other waterfowl from the North this fall, the Interior Department is liberalizing hunting restrictions somewhat for the new season.

Secretary Walter J. Hickel, in announcing the broad frameworks within which states select their seasons and bag limits, said Saturday that the regulations are the most liberal in a decade.

Most species of ducks are expected to move down the nation's four flyways in about the same numbers as last year, which was a good year generally for hunters, the department said.

States will be permitted to split their duck and geese hunting season into two segments without the penalty, which was in effect last year.

Most species of ducks are expected to move down the nation's four flyways in about the same numbers as last year, which was a good year generally for hunters, the department said.

Prospects for mallard ducks are better than a year ago.

Biologists for the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife who have made aerial surveys of the nesting grounds in Canada and the northern states said breeding conditions for the same birds were excellent, that there was an abundance of water.

However, the department said it still is necessary to impose hunting restrictions on some species, such as canvasbacks, redheads, wood ducks and black ducks in some flyways. There also are some reservations on mallards in the Mississippi flyway and some goose flocks need special protection.

Hunting dates and bag limits vary among the four flyways but the shooting seasons generally will be somewhere between early October and mid-January. Basic shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset.

Over-all frameworks for geese and cranes generally are the same as for the past three years the bureau said.

States will be permitted to split their duck and geese hunting season into two segments without the penalty, which was in effect last year, of losing any of their hunting days. The two segments may be of unequal length.

States in the Atlantic, Mississippi and Central flyways which did not select their gallinule season in July may do so at the time of their waterfowl selections. Frameworks for gallinule, previously announced, are 70 days between Sept. 1 and Jan. 15 with a bag limit of 15 daily and 30 in possession.

In the Pacific flyway, states may select coot and gallinule seasons to run concurrently with the duck season. The daily bag and possession limit is 25 coots and gallinule singly or in the aggregate.

Atlantic, Mississippi and Central flyway states also may select a special scaup-only season of 16 days with a daily bag limit of five and possession limit of 10, subject to several special conditions.

Pena Recalls First Win

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Relief pitcher Orlando Pena of the Pittsburgh Pirates recalls the first game he won in the United States.

"It was the year I won 21 games for Daytona Beach in the Florida State League," says Pena. "Johnny Van der Meer, who pitched those two no-hit games in succession for Cincinnati, was our manager and he pinch hit for me. He got a blooper hit and I won my first game. That was 16 years ago."

When Pena got his first paycheck he went to the novelty shop and bought Van der Meer dozens of multicolored toys. Orlando liked the toys and he wanted Van der Meer to have them.

Roberts Leads Second Round

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sue Roberts, professional for only 1½ years, stroked a two-under-par 70 Saturday for a two-day total of 147 and the lead among early second-round finishers in the Ladies Professional Golf Association Buckeye Invitational.

Miss Roberts, of Columbus, Ohio, was one under on both nines and birdied the seventh, ninth, 11th and 17th holes over the 6,110-yard Royal Oak Racquet & Country Club course. She bogeyed the second and 12th holes.

One stroke behind was Murle Lindstrom, Venice, Fla., who also fired a 70 on Saturday. Miss Lindstrom, 1969 winner of the O'Sullivan Ladies Open, birdied the third, 10th, 13th and 18th holes and bogeyed the second and 12th holes.

Sue Dobson, Riverside, Calif., had a 71 for a 150, placing her two strokes behind Miss Lindstrom.

Andy Cohn Fischer, Lincoln, Neb., first-round leader with a 68, was even after five holes.

The $20,000 tournament concludes Sunday with $3,000 going to the winner.

Hollis Stacy Two-Time Winner

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — Hollis Stacy of Savannah, Ga., became only the second two-time winner of the U.S. junior girls golf championship Saturday when she defeated Janet Aulisi of West Caldwell, N.J., 1-up.

The only other two-time winner of the tournament was Judy Eiler in 1957-58. Miss Stacy, 16, also will have an opportunity to add an unprecedented third title.

Miss Stacy, who said an ailing hand did not bother her, trailed until the 15th hole when Miss Aulisi three-putted from 15 feet.

Despite a double bogey six, Miss Stacy won the hole to pull even.

Miss Stacy then won it on the 17th when Miss Aulisi took another seven while the defending champion came in with a par five. They then halved the 18th with par fours on the Apawans Club course.

"My timing was off," said Miss Stacy, "but the hand didn't bother me. I was dissatisfied with my game. I might have been favoring my hand subconsciously. The more I played the less it hurt, though."

Kessinger Opens Big Inning

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Don Kessinger opened the Cubs' biggest inning of the season with a double and scored on a single by Glenn Beckert. Billy Williams, who had cracked his 34th homer in the first inning, doubled and Ji Hickman was walked intentionally.

Joe Pepitone singled homer two more runs, another scored on an error and Johnny Callison singled home one more before Hundley delivered his fifth homer of the season.

Ken Holtzman, 13-9, halted the Dodgers, who had lashed out 97 hits in their last six games, on nine hits.

Ron Santo and Paul Popovich also homered for the Cubs.

The Dodgers put on one of their patented uphill battles to squeeze out the opener with a 13-hit assault.

The Cubs struck for six runs in the third inning to take a 7-3 lead, with Pepitone delivering a two-run single and Callison capping the rally with a two-run homer.

Crawford, who had singled home a run in the second inning, cracked a two-run homer in the sixth and Dodgers took the lead with three more runs in the seventh.

The winning rally began with Maury Wills reaching first on an error by pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, 14-14, Bill Russell and Willie Davis singled for one run. Parker singled another across and the Dodgers scored the tie-breaker on Tom Haller's sacrifice fly.

nold Palmer dropped a 30-footer on the eighth hole at the Southern Hills Country Club.

Palmer was making a bid for his first major championship in six years. His last was the 1964 Masters.

"We've been following him for eight years," said Iftner, introducing his wife. "We've gone to Phoenix, Tucson and Las Vegas. He's such a great guy—he relates to the people."

Jim Gallagher, a Tulsa oil analyst, said he had followed Palmer every step of the way.

"I've admired him for years," Gallagher said. "Once he's in contention I think everybody goes wild."

It was Arnie's Army in full cry. They yelled and stampeded, pushed and shoved, giving no consideration to the other players.

"The Army has been a little quiet for a few years but I think it's always been in existence," said Doc Griffin, a Palmer aide. "A hard core had stuck by him through all his problems."

Steve Jernigan, 27, an engineer, said "Old Arnie will do it this time—I'm sure he will." He said he'd been a Palmer fan for five years, had read all of his instruction books.

Sharon Johnson, 29, an occupational therapist from Oklahoma City, said she drove over just to see Palmer whom she had only seen on television.

"I guess you'd call me a new recruit—I don't know whether I'll be a member of the Army or not," she said. "He's not as tall as I thought he was. He looks more like a gymnast."

"Also, he reacts more to the crowd than the others. I think he's a little bit of a ham."

Mrs. Frank Hamlin of Wichita, Kan., approached in the gallery, was asked if she was a member of Arnie's Army.

"Isn't everyone?" she asked. One woman in the Dave Stockton-Mason Rudolph gallery said she really was an Arnie Palmer admirer.

"But I can't stand the crowd," she said. A man smoking a pipe at the fourth hole was also asked how it felt to be a member of Arnie's Army.

"I'm not," he said. "I'm just standing here so I can watch everybody go through Arnie's Army? They look like a bunch of 4's to me."

Fast Hilarious Disqualified

CHICAGO (AP) — The apparent winner, top-weighted Fast Hilarious, was disqualified and an 8-1 shot, Te Vega, won the first division of the $126,000 Lindheimer Handicap on the grass at Arlington Park Saturday.

After Fast Hilarious took command in the final turn of the 1 3-16 mile race and finished a half a length ahead of Te Vega, Jockey Carlos Marquez protested that his third finishing mount, the favored Royal Harmony, was fouled by Fast Hilarious in the stretch drive.

The stewards reviewed a film and agreed that Fast Hilarious, carrying 120 pounds and ridden by Craig Perret, had pinched Royal Harmony against the rail at the eighth pole.

As a result Te Vega, ridden by Charles Baltazar, was the winner and second place was given to Royal Harmony, three-quarters of a length behind. Fast Hilarious was dropped to third.

Te Vega, five-year-old son of T.V. Lark, won the divisional split of $40,500 for Brunswick Farm.

Kerry's Time, a longshot under J. R. Anderson, captured the second division in the test for 3-year-olds and up. Chief Sun Dance finished second and Pattee Canyon third.

Kerry's Time, finishing the race in 1:56 2-5.

Moore Leads Team To Win

LONDON (AP) — Bobby Moore, England's World Cup soccer captain, shrugged off his personal troubles Saturday and led West Ham United to a 2-2 draw against Tottenham Hotspur on the opening day of the English soccer season.

Moore still has an allegation that he shoplifted a bracelet from a store in Bogota, Colombia, hanging over his head. His wife, Tina, was threatened with kidnapping earlier this week. Plainclothes policemen were on the sidelines to make sure no harm came to Moore.

Despite all his problems Moore played his usual brilliant game.

Ian Hutchinson, Chelsea's inside left, was the star of a day in which about a million fans turned out for the big kickoff.

Derby County, winner of the Watney cup in midweek, led Chelsea, winners of the treasured English football association cup last season, 1-0 at half time. Then Hutchinson whipped in goals for Chelsea in the 74th and 83rd minutes and Chelsea wound up 2-1 winners.

Everton, the defending English League champions, played a 2-2 tie with Arsenal, the European Cup Fairs champions.

Inside-left Charlie George cancelled out a goal by Everton center-forward Joe Royal and then was carried off on a stretcher after colliding with Everton goalkeeper Gordon West.

Mick Jones scored with a header for Leeds United and gave his team a 1-0 victory over Manchester United.

Southampton tied Manchester City 1-1 in a game that saw English international Mike Summerbee being sent off by the referee—the first player ordered from the field this season.

Blass Snaps Three Game Losing Streak

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Steve Blass has thrown in with Luke Walker to get another pick-up game going for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Blass, making his first start in a month, hurled six scoreless innings as Pittsburgh nipped San Diego 2-1 in Friday night's doubleheader opener to end a three-game losing string.

Then Walker, who has given the Pirates' troubled pitching staff a big lift since being called out of the bullpen last month, completed a sweep of the twi-nighter by taming the Padres 10-1 with a six-hitter.

After Blass, who has been sidelined with a badly bruised right elbow, teamed up with reliever Orlando Pena on a four-hitter, Walker sent the National League's East Division leaders three games up on the runner-up New York Mets with his fifth consecutive victory.

The Mets divided a twin bill with Atlanta, winning the nightcap 4-2 after a 10-2 first-game loss, and dropped another length off the Pirates' pace. Elsewhere, St. Louis edged San Francisco 2-1 in 13 innings before bowing 5-4 to the Giants in 10; Philadelphia shaded Cincinnati 5-4; Los Angeles slugged the Chicago Cubs 13-9, and Montreal drubbed Houston 10-2.

In American League games, Oakland topped Baltimore 4-0; Boston stunned Minnesota 8-1; California defeated Detroit 7-3; the New York Yankees beat Kansas City 3-2 in 10 innings; Milwaukee downed Cleveland 4-3 in 11 and Washington subdued the Chicago White Sox 6-5 in 10.

Blass, out of action since July 12, when he was struck on the elbow by a drive off the bat of St. Louis' Joe Torre, checked the Padres on two hits but was locked in a scoreless deadlock with left-hander Dave Roberts when he was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the sixth.

Roberto Clemente's 13th homer, Jerry May's triple, a walk and a run-producing double play grounder gave the Pirates a 2-0 lead in the seventh. Pena shrugged off a San Diego run in the eighth to gain his second victory without a loss.

"I had no idea what was going to happen out there," said Blass, who was yanked after throwing 63 pitches ... seven under the limit prescribed for him by Manager Danny Murtaugh. "But now I can walk into the clubhouse and look everybody in the eye again. I wanted not only to pick them up, but to pick myself up, too."

In the nightcap, Walker struck out nine on the way to his 10th victory in 13 decisions and doubled his season hit total with a pair of singles good for three RBI. His first hit and Willie Stargell's 23rd homer keyed an eight-run explosion in the fifth that put the game under wraps.

The Mets salvaged a split at Atlanta when Duffy Dyer hit a bases-empty homer and Wayne Garrett poked a three-run blast in the seventh inning, erasing a 2-0 deficit.

Hal King's first grand slam homer in the majors and a three-run wallop by Orlando Cepeda backed the four-hit pitching of Ron Reed as the Braves took the opener. King's bases-loaded shot was the 40th hit in the National League this year, tying the all-time record set last season.

Julian Javier scored on a 13th-inning throwing error by catcher Dick Dietz to carry the Cardinals past the Giants in their opener, but San Francisco bounced back to win the second game on Bobby Bonds' run-scoring double in the 10th.

Pitcher Rick Wise doubled in the fifth to touch off a tie-breaking three-run rally and the Phillies hung on to upend Cincinnati, which lost All-Star third baseman Tony Perez for several days when he was spiked on the right foot by base-runner Johnny Briggs in the fourth.

Mauri Wills rapped five of Los Angeles' 17 hits and Billy Brabarkewitz lashed two homers and a triple as the Dodgers overcame a five-run first inning binge by the Cubs, who hit four homers, including Billy Williams' 33rd of the campaign and Joe Pepitone's grand slam.

Wynn Wants To Pitch

MINNEAPOLIS — ST. PAUL (AP) — Early Wynn says if he can convince the Minnesota Twins to let him pitch again, he would be able to brag that he has hurled in five decades of major league baseball.

"It's appealing and I think I could do it," said the 50-year-old Wynn, the last pitcher in the major leagues to win 300 games. "There would be a problem with the roster. They would have to take somebody off."

"It would be a one-shot deal. A mop-up job. Maybe even one pitch. But it would mean five decades of baseball."

Wynn, a right-hander who missed two seasons during the war, first pitched in the major leagues in 1939 with the Washington Senators. He hurled in the 1940s, '50s and '60s with Washington, Cleveland and Chicago. One pitch would put him in record books for the '70s.

Wynn might not have as hard a time convincing Twins President Calvin Griffith, as he did a red-faced major league official who didn't know about Wynn when the big right-hander called New York last January and asked to start collecting his pension.

"'Early who?' the guy asked me," Wynn said. "I wished the phone line was around his neck. I was madder than hell. He probably didn't know who Abner Doubleday was. Finally after I told him my name five or six times, he told me he would look into the matter."

Wynn serves as a super scout for the Twins and was in the Twin Cities Friday to complete plans for a campers' weekend at Metropolitan Stadium.

COLOGNE, Germany (AP) — Harald Norporth of West Germany won the featured 3,000-meter run in 7:49.6 at an international track and field meet Tuesday. Bill Reilly of the New York A.C. was fifth in 7:55 and Frank Bshorter of Florida seventh in 7:57.8.

Big Three Are Still Alive, Says Player

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — "They keep saying the Big Three is my word for it, they've never been more alive than today."

The tough, little South African's challenging words were spoken as the PGA Golf Championship took on a definite establishment complexion—with a sprinkling of mods—going into the climactic final two rounds today and Sunday.

"I've always said I'll take Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus and play anybody in the world for any stakes. Nobody's ever taken me up on the offer."

The Big Three is a nickname

—some contend a misnomer—given to Nicklaus, Palmer and Player in the 1960s when they were dominating the major championships.

Many observers argue that no present day roll call of golf's greats is complete without Bill Casper. Others say the old stars are wearing out and the new kids are moving in.

But here are the game's giants—within two shots of each other and no more than four strokes off the pace—after two rounds of wrestling with the 6,962-yard, par-70 Southern Hills course without anybody breaking par for 36 holes.

Dave Stockton and Larry Hinson, a couple of rank outsiders, are in front at even-par 140, followed by Mike Hill, Mason Rudolph and Hale Irwin at 141. Most of the eyes, however, are on the guys just behind.

Player, Palmer and Casper are at 142, along with Dick Lotz, Nicklaus is one of seven bracketed at 144, including defending champion Ray Floyd. There are nine at 143, among them the always dangerous Julius Boros and Gene Littler.

No one could recall when Palmer, Nicklaus, Player and Casper were so closely bunched and in contention in a major tournament. All four were hopelessly out of it in the U.S. Open, won by Britain's Tony Jacklin, and Player failed to make the cut in the British Open, which went to Nicklaus.

"I have been playing miserably," Player said after shooting a 68 Friday, one of the four sub-par rounds of the day. "I lost my game when I flew home this summer and didn't practice."

"It's not possible for anyone to practice harder than I have here this week. After each round, I have gone to the tee and hit balls for three hours."

"I am determined to win the grand slam one more time around then throw in my clubs."

Player is one of four men who have won the Masters, British and U.S. Opens and the PGA. The other's are Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen, no longer active, and Nicklaus, who only needs the PGA to score a second sweep.

Player, who has two British Opens, needs a repeat in the Masters, U.S. Open and PGA.

Chiefs Lose Televised Game

By ROBERT MOORE
Associated Press Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Coach Hank Stram and the Kansas City chiefs had no alibies today after losing 17-3 national televised exhibition football game Friday night to the Baltimore Colts.

"We made too many mistakes," Stram said of his world champions. "It's as simple as that. The odd thing about it is we haven't been making that many mistakes in practice. We weren't as sharp and crisp as we should be."

"Defensively, I thought we played well enough to beat anyone but you can't throw the ball away six times and beat a team like Baltimore."

Stram's reference to throwing the ball away was to six Colt interceptions, three off the celebrated Len Dawson.

"We played without some people," Stram explained. "We didn't have our top three running backs—Mike Garrett, Bobby Molmes and Warren McVea. That makes a difference, too."

In Friday night's other exhibition, five field goals by Erroll Mann helped the Detroit Lions roll to a 22-6 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Field goals by Baltimore's Lou Michaels and Kansas City's Jan Stenerud were the only gestures until 12 minutes remained.

Tom Maxwell, a second-year cornerback, broke the 3-3 deadlock by stepping in front of a Mike Livingston pass intended for Gloucester Richardson and romping 28 yards to paydirt.

Tom Matte swept left end, brushing off tacklers en route, for a 28-yard clinching touchdown in the game's dying moments.

Baltimore put together the game's best defensive stand soon after Michael's field goal. Dawson's 43-yard pass, thrown as he scrambled out of trouble, to Ed Podolak, put the Chiefs on the Baltimore four. From there, Podolak stabbed into the line four straight times and was a yard short.

Mann, starting his third year of pro football, had field goals of 20, 24, 30, 31, and 34 yards against Buffalo. The Lions' lone touchdown came on a four-yard run by Mel Farr.

Detroit rookie Steve Owens, last year's Heisman Trophy winner, rushed 38 yards in 10 attempts, a slightly better showing than the 31 yards, also in 10 carries, by Buffalo's O.J. Simpson, the 1968 Heisman Trophy winner.

Tonight's exhibition action in the NFL: Cleveland vs. San Francisco at Tampa, Fla.; Houston at New Orleans; the New York Giants at San Diego; Chicago vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee; Atlanta vs. the New York Jets at Winston-Salem, N.C.; Dallas at Los Angeles; Cincinnati at Miami; Pittsburgh at Minnesota and Denver at St. Louis.

Glotzbach Captures Pole Position

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — Charlie Glotzbach, a stocky Hoosier who likes to go fast, has his Dodge on the pole for Sunday's Yankee 400 stock car race, but isn't overjoyed about it.

"I suppose anytime you can win the top starting spot in a major race you should be happy," the 34-year-old driver said. "But I would have felt better about it if I had been able to run the car as fast as it would go safely."

Glotzbach toured the two-mile, 18-degree-banked Michigan International Speedway at 157.363 miles per hour Friday to easily win his first inside front row starting spot since May.

Bobby Isaac put his Dodge in the No. 2 position at 156.294 m.p.h.

But what disturbed Glotzbach was the fact that his qualifying speed was almost six miles per hour slower than Pete Hamilton's old speed for a 400-mile NASCAR race here in June. And it was almost seven miles per hour slower than Glotzbach qualified for the June race in the same plum-colored car.

All of the 58 cars entered in Sunday's $71,070 race were required to be equipped with a special governor on their carburetors to reduce the cars' speed. The rule was imposed by NASCAR earlier in the week and presumably will remain in force the rest of the season.

Atkinson No Namath Fan

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Al Atkinson still isn't a Joe Namath fan—but the middle linebacker of the New York Jets is concerned enough about his teammates' injuries to end his brief retirement.

The 27-year-old defensive captain of the National Football League club coupled a verbal blast at Namath and the American Conference team's management last week with the announcement that he was retiring.

Then on Saturday night the Jets beat Buffalo 33-10—but the victory was a costly one as New York lost defensive end Gerry Philbin with a dislocated shoulder and Mike Stromberg, Atkinson's replacement, with a pulled hamstring.

"I admit I didn't expect the Jets to get hurt so soon," Atkinson said Friday. "I'm coming back to see if I can help the team."

He will rejoin the club Sunday at its Hofstra University training camp in Hempstead, N.Y., after the Jets play the Atlanta Falcons Saturday night in Winston-Salem, N.C.

"I was sincere when I said I was retiring," the 6-foot-2, 230-pounder insisted. "I tried to say all I had to say about Namath then," referring to the controversial quarterback's alleged disregard for the rest of the team and the Jet management's apparent preferential treatment of Namath.

Jets Meet Falcons

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — The first exhibition game of the National Football League season for the Atlanta Falcons sends them against a New York Jet squad that easily whipped its first opponent without its starting quarterback and defensive captain.

The Jets' Joe Namath, who passed the team to a Super Bowl victory in 1969, has not reported and neither has Al Atkinson. But the defensive stand-out said Friday he expects to go to the Jets' training camp next week.

Meanwhile, the Falcons of the National Conference hope to bowl over the American Conference foe, who beat Buffalo a week ago. Coach Norm Van Brocklin has a veteran offensive lineup to use and has many veterans returning for his defensive unit.

The Falcons have not played in North Carolina before.

Fischer Leads In Tourney

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mrs. Andy Cohn Fischer, a combination-housewife and professional golfer, feels she is playing her best.

"I'm swinging and playing better than I have before in my life," said Mrs. Fischer, who shot a four-under-par 68 Friday to take the first-round lead in the 54-hole LPGA Buckeye Invitational at Royal Oak Racquet and Country Club.

Mrs. Fischer birdied the first, third, fifth, 11th and 14th holes over the 6,100 yard course and sank a 30-foot putt for her birdie on the 11th hole. She hit 14 greens.

One stroke back were a trio: Sharon Miller, Battlecreek, Mich.; Betsy Rawls, Spartansburg, S.C.; and Sandra Spuzich, Indianapolis, Ind., defending Buckeye champion.

Tied at 70 were Sandra Palmer, Port St. Lucie, Fla.; Pam Higgins, Groveport, Ohio; Mary Mills, Ocean Springs, Miss.; and Jo Ann Prentice, Columbia, S.C.

Rare Moments In Baseball At Hall Of Fame

By FRANK ECK

AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP)—It was 1939 when a rock festival meant moving boulders for a new road and the cows never had to worry about the kind of grass they were munching. The Big Train, Walter Johnson, was here. So was Honus Wagner, George Sisler and Cy Young and Ty Cobb. Ford Frick's dream had come true.

Baseball's Hall of Fame, with a big financial assist from the Clark family and Paul Kerr who worked for them, had opened, and Moe Berg, who spoke about seven languages at Princeton and also while catching—took off his black suit in favor of one that had Boston in sparkling letters across the chest.

These were the days of two eight-team leagues and a fellow who hit .250 played only when his team had a six-run lead. This day you could say there were two true all-star teams on Doubleday Field.

Sixteen American Leaguers played for Eddie Collic's side and 16 played on the Wagner team. You don't remember the score in a game like this but you remember faces and how thrilled these top stars were to set foot on hallowed baseball soil.

"I caught Lefty Grove that day," Moe Berg was saying the other day. "Buck Canel was on the radio speaking in Spanish to South American and other Latin countries and Ty Cobb said: 'I'd give up my career to be able to do that.'"

It was one of the numerous impressive things about Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach.

And now, 31 years later, the Hall of Fame museum is filled with mementoes that bring back a good part of baseball's glorious past. However, nostalgia must step aside on occasion because this era, too, has furnished baseball with momentous achievements.

New National League President Charles (Chub) Feeney has been on the ball. He recently issued bulletins to his umpires to stop games and retrieve certain baseballs. One such ball was a knuckleball Hoyt Wilhelm threw when he appeared in his 1,000th game. Another was the ball Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves swung at with success to achieve his 3,000th base hit. These balls are here, along with Hank Aaron's bat.

Six of the several dozen balls used in 1968 by Don Drysdale, now working for the Montreal Expos, when he set his 58-inning scoreless string, are glass-encased in the Hall. The ball Ernie Banks hit for his 500th home run also is here. So is one of the spheroids used on April 30 when Cub Billy Williams played in his 1,000th consecutive game.

Hall of Fame director Ken Smith and historian Clifford Kachline spend half their days watching and listening for bats, balls, gloves, spikes and caps worn by players who hit milestones. "It's a helluva lot better than doing crossword puzzles," says Smith who goes back long before the days in the Polo Grounds when the Giants tipped off Leo Durocher to rival catchers' signals with the aid of binoculars in deep center field.

Last year Steve Carlton struck out a record 19 Mets. He lost the game and also his cap. That cap is here. And it was here that Carlton's pitching impressed St. Louis Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst in 1966. It was only an exhibition game but Red put Steve on the big roster. It was the year both Casey Stengel and Ted Williams were installed in the Hall of Fame.

They ought to put Casey's speech in the Hall, or the part of it where he said:

"We all know the umpires stand facing the pitcher to call balls and strikes. Well, Mr. Williams stood sideways and he could see the ball better than the umpires."

Right again Casey. What umpire hit over .400?

Ted Williams Is Content Teaching Youngsters To Hit

By LEW FERGUSON
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Ted Williams, once the tempestuous Kid of the Boston Red Sox, turns 52 on Aug. 30 with only two things left in baseball to accomplish—manage a pennant-winning team and teach other kids how to hit.

Talking to Ted leaves the impression the latter may be as important to him as producing a winner for the Washington Senators.

"I'd say that in the last 10 years one of the most satisfying things to me is that I've been able to explain things to kids better," Williams said in a recent interview.

Watch Williams around the Senators' pregame batting cage and you get the idea he was born to be a teacher, something the skeptics doubted when Robert Short, owner of the Senators, lured the game's last .400 hitter out of retirement to take over the Washington job 18 months ago.

They said Ted wouldn't last because of his famed temper. Many predicted he would be gone by June. Two Junes have come and gone and Ted seems as enthused as ever, although the Senators' performance this season has disappointed him.

"I was convinced we were really going to score a lot of runs this year," he said, "and our hitting has really been poor much of the season."

Managing has gotten easier the second time around, Williams admits, even if he is unlikely to duplicate his rookie feat of being named the American League's manager of the year in 1969.

"I'd have to say it's a little bit easier," Williams said.

"When I joined the club, I didn't know what to expect from any of the players. I didn't even know how to make out a lineup card."

"You've got to know what a player looks like when he's hot. How else can you help him when he's going bad? Now I know what they can do and can't do. Experience is a great teacher."

Ted "surrounds" the Senators' batting cage before a game, snapping advice, needing, admonishing, bantering with his players. He is a demanding, forceful teacher.

"Choke up, we need the bunt from you," he shouts to one of his weaker hitters. "Let Howard and Epstein hit 'em out."

"No, no, no," he instructs another. "Open the hips. Take a rip."

"I learned a lot about teaching when I had a baseball camp a few years back," Williams said. "I had to learn to explain to a kid why you do this and do that. Now I've got little tricks. Tell a kid, and then show him."

Williams said the theory of hitting he has altered most since he came out of San Diego 30 years ago to post a .344 lifetime batting average and gain admittance to the Hall of Fame is in how to swing the bat.

"I'd have to say as a young kid I'd read what the great hitters said, about a level swing, distribution of the weight, and so forth."

"But I changed some of that. For example, I believe it's better to swing up on the ball rather than completely level. I'll tell you why: Because you've got

Rod And Gun: Senseless Slaughter Of Green Turtles

By ROD AMUNDSON

This week's column consists of a letter from a young man whose interest in conservation is obvious. North Carolina has a law, G. S. 113-189, which makes it unlawful to take or destroy sea turtles or their eggs from May 1 to September 30. Enforcement is the responsibility of the Commercial and Sports Fisheries Division, Department of Conservation and Development.

"Dear Sir: This past early July while down at Long Beach, North Carolina, I was horribly shocked at the carcasses of once magnificent green sea turtles which had floated upon the beach. Enclosed are some pictures (They weren't enclosed.—Ed.) taken to show vivid proof of these dead sea turtles. These pictures only show just a few of many other sea turtles that also washed upon the beach in different areas. It is no telling how many of these turtles also died and were washed out to sea and never seen again. I thought this might have been an isolated case; however, while at Long Beach this past weekend (July 17-19) I noticed some more dead sea turtles. Some of these sea turtles at this time were about only 10-12 inches wide.

"With some close observation

I noticed holes in some of the turtles' shells — evidently the end result of some gunshot blasts. It was rumored that the shrimpers or the menhaden ships are firing at them to keep them from tearing up their nets. Tell me, what is the good in trying to conserve Baldhead Island when animals such as these magnificent creatures are destroyed by thoughtless persons. We might as well let the Carolina Cape Fear Corporation have the Island if there are no animals such as the green sea turtle left to benefit from the Island's conservation.

"I am just twenty-one years old, but the conservation of our North Carolina wildlife is of deep concern to me as many other thousands of people from North Carolina. I am and always have been proud of being born and raised most of my life in this Great State of North Carolina. I have always considered our wildlife situation in North Carolina as very superior, but the useless slaughter of these valuable green sea turtles makes me begin to question my praise of conservation in North Carolina. This type of slaughter is not only useless, but also a CRIME!

"I believe someone should investigate into what I have presented about the Long Beach area and most importantly begin some kind of legislation to stop this slaughter and the many other ones that go unreported. I believe one solution to the crisis of killing sea turtles is: an increase in the boat, fishing, and hunting licenses should be done. The increased revenue could be used for stricter enforcement of conservation laws and for paying reparations to the fishermen for the damages that are caused to their nets by the sea turtles.

"In conclusion I want to tell you of an experience with two sea turtles. I almost wept one morning when I saw two of these great sea turtles wash upon the shore. One of them was already dead. I thought the other turtle came in to protect and comfort the already dead turtle; but I noticed that he was wounded and exhausted. I tried in vain to get the alive sea turtle to return to the sea. I swam out into the ocean many times pushing the live sea turtle to see if he would try to survive. The sea turtle kept floating back onto the beach. Finally after a long and, I am sure, painful two hours the turtle died. My brother and some other people helped us bury these magnificent creatures on the beach — but this burial doesn't cover up the issue. "I hope my letter has made you aware of this problem and hope that you will give it some consideration."

"Sincerely yours,

Vigorously Test Pleasure Boats

BY JACK WOLISTON
NEW YORK (UPI)—

Most conscientious pleasure boat builders put their product through some pretty stiff tests before offering them to the public, especially if new designs or new construction materials are involved.

A good example is the steps taken by Kayot, Inc., to test the strength and durability of its new line of 15-foot runabouts with thermoplastic hulls.

A stock boat from the new line, called "The Invincibles," was submitted to 350 hours of vigorous testing by Tropical Marine Testers, Inc., in North Palm Beach, Fla.

The testing firm compressed into a few short months a lifetime of severe punishment—the kind of treatment a boat might get from the most sadistic owner.

The boat was driven over large cruiser wakes, bounced off docks, whipped through countless tight turns, pounded through heavy seas. It was beached at full speed 16 times every hundred hours and it jumped sandbars 16 times every hundred hours.

In another experiment, 12 football players (all fully suited) boarded the 15-footer in a swimming pool. When the drain plug of the craft was pulled, the Invincible slowly flooded under the one-ton load—but it would not sink.

Kayot, a well-known manufacturer of pontoon and house boats, is using a thermoplastic called Cycloc ABS and automated thermoforming equipment designed and built by Borg-Warner Corp. in constructing its new line of Invincibles.

"Due to the physical properties of the thermoplastic and to the way the hulls are made, the Invincibles offer a combination of advantages that conventionally-made boats don't have," says Gene Giedschied, Kayot's president.

"The thermoplastic hulls are stronger than fiberglass. They won't crack on impact and even after being exposed to the elements for long periods, they more strength and bat control when you swing up.

"I can take a kid and have him swing a bat down at a 45-degree angle, stop the bat in the middle of his swing and show him how I can wiggle it. I can have him then swing it up at a 45-degree angle and show him how much more resistance I've got trying to wiggle it."

"Invariably, when you show a kid these things, he remembers them."

Florida Tests

In the Florida tests, Biedschied said, the runabout was tested through the boating industry's new horsepower confirming course, with the BIA recommended maximum 80 horsepower motor.

"Even with this horsepower, the boat negotiated turns without skidding," Biedschied said.

The Invincible hulls are made in a relatively short time compared to the traditional hand-constructed methods used by the boat-making industry.

Kayot uses the automated Borg-Warner thermoforming equipment to turn out a hull skin in a cycle time of 10 minutes. Two one-quarter inch thick hull skins of Cycloc plastic are nested within each other. Polyurethane foam is injected into the cavity between the two skins, making the unitized hull rigid.

"The entire process takes about an hour and requires only three workers to complete, according to Biedschied. "The hull is then ready to be equipped with steering and electrical systems, marine hardware, seats and other accessories."

The Kayot president said the four runabouts in the Invincible line retail for prices substantially below those of fiberglass boats of comparable construction and quality.

CONSISTENT GOLF

CHASKA, Minn. (AP)—Five golfers, including 1969 British Open champion Tony Jacklin, matched their third and fourth rounds with their second round scores in the recent U.S. Open.

Jacklin, the winner with a 281 total, shot 71, 70, 70, 70 to finish seven strokes ahead of runnerup Dave Hill. Jacklin was seven under par.

Ken Still, fifth place finisher with 291, shot three 71s after his opening round 78. Larry Ziegler, who tied for eighth, shot a 75 then finished with three 73s. Dean Refram, with a 301, began with a 79 then had 74 for the next three rounds. Rolf Deming, with 305, opened with a 77 and ended with three 76s.

Children Taught Swimming Skills

It takes a lot of work to make a winner or even a strong contender. But, a number of Greenville area youngsters seem to enjoy it.

To become more proficient in the art of swimming some 75 students (20 girls and 55 boys) ranging in age from 6 to 17, have been enrolled in "stroke mechanics" classes at Raynez Pool near Greenville this summer. "Over half get into competition," according to Dr. Ray Martinez, Raynez director.

"All are from Greenville or the surrounding area . . . Ayden, Winterville . . ." Dr. Martinez explained.

The students enrolled in stroke mechanics learn skills. They practice the proper techniques for the front crawl, the back crawl, the breast stroke, the butterfly. Also, they learn starts and turns. All are necessary for competition.

If they are interested in competition, they may attend competition training classes which are devoted to building the endurance of the participants.

As Dr. Martinez explains, "the competition training class is specific training . . . training for speed . . . endurance."

Dr. Martinez is uniquely qualified to talk about training and competition. He coached the East Carolina University swimming team for 14 years and currently is professor and chairman of the graduate committee of the ECU Department of Health and Physical Education.

The Raynez students who participate in the five or 10 week training sessions receive much the same instruction as do students in Martinez' summer camping program for competitive swimmers.

The campers, who this summer have come from places such as Fort Myers, Fla.; Bath, Minn.; Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, Georgia, Wisconsin, and Ohio work hard. During their four daily practice sessions they swim about 10 miles. As a result, enforced rest periods are scheduled for the nine - to 17 - year - old campers. The competitive training classes for "day students" includes a daily 90-minute class devoted to speed training in which students are subjected to repetitive short distance swims or sprints. In addition, an hour - long morning session for optional distance training is available each day to build up the endurance of the competitors.

Coaches are continuously watching the students strokes. When felt necessary, students are encouraged to attend the stroke mechanics sessions for work on individual problems.

Just last week, nine Raynez swimmers took 16 first places in individual competition in a swim meet in Goldsboro, while two Raynez relay teams took four first places as proof of the training at Raynez. The Raynez team's swimmers also took 44 other places including a dozen seconds and 14 thirds.

"Swimming is a marvelous sport for conditioning the heart and lungs . . ." Dr. Martinez explained, "and has an advantage over other sports in that all the children (boys and girls) of a family can participate.

"They can take part in vigorous activity at the same time," Dr. Martinez pointed out. One member of the family does not have to go to one location while another family heads for another court or practice field.

He added that all of the youngsters in a family can participate in competitive swimming as a group and still maintain their individuality. "They can come to the same practice session and at the same time receive Individual attention," the coach explained.

Competition in swimming is available during the summer in age groups that include 8 and under; 9-10; 11-12; 13-14; and 15-17, for both boys and girls.

AP Newsfeatures Writer
Blood, Sweat and Tears is very successfully mixing rock and jazz, as it was formed to do. Woody Herman is successfully making the same mix.
Herman says, "They certainly opened up the market. However, I was becoming involved about four years ago, before they happened. I felt a wedding was in the offing between jazz and rock and that is what we're (his 16-piece band) trying to do."
"What aroused my interest was, when we'd go to England every year, each year more and more kids came to our concerts. A lot of them were rock musicians coming to find out where the roots were. That impressed me terribly.

with new story ideas, but with new TV forms.
How does the new season look? Business-like and cautious, take it from one who predicted "Beverly Hillbillies" would be lucky if it survived for five months and that "LaughIn" could never stand the pace.

Health Food Is For Doris Day

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Doris Day may be the healthiest star of a weekly television series, no small thanks to her dedication to health foods and a plentitude of exercise.

The freckled star of "The Doris Day Show" arises before 7 a.m. each day, exercises lightly in her bedroom and then swims vigorously in her extra-large swimming pool.

Returning programs, will not risk any really radical changes.

Producers, who are usually good salesmen, speak convincingly about exciting scripts and impressive performances. Stars, particularly all the young unknowns getting their first breaks in leads, rave about their fellow workers and tell how the affectionate acting climate will be reflected in the finished product. All this is as predictable and traditional as the choreography of a minuet.

There is the usual inter-network competition, but it seems to be consensus that ABC, with 11 new series, a new confidence and aggressiveness, is the network to keep an eye on. ABC, "the third network," is under new leadership and appears ready to give the two larger, older networks some real competition for audience favor.

CBS, with six new shows, has been reshuffling its schedule and refocusing, all in an effort to attract more viewers in younger age brackets and in urban surroundings. It will schedule fewer specials, under a new policy dictating that only specials which have found sponsors will be scheduled. Currently there are almost none on its schedule but several on its shelves.
NBC, with the fewest new shows—four—still likes to use special programs, and lots of them. It is experimenting, not

When the mood seized her — which is not infrequently — Doris redecorates her large, comfortable house. She is addicted to happy, bright colors, especially yellow and orange. Her furniture is comfortable and contemporary.

She likes to slip on a pair of gloves and putter about the yard, although she has a gardener. Additionally, she enjoys cooking, despite the fact she has full-time domestic help.

Shattered by the death of her husband, Doris retreated to her desert home in Palm Springs to reassemble her life. She is a devout Christian Scientist and drew strength from her religion.

She and Melcher once enjoyed the weekends at their Malibu Beach home, but Doris no longer spends much time there. On warm days she drives to the beach for long walks along the sand.

On days when she's not working, or during vacations, Doris likes nothing better than riding her bicycle around the neighborhood.

With freckles a bloom, a straw hat, slacks and blouse, Doris is rarely recognized by tourists or residents. She enjoys riding into the heart of the Beverly Hills shopping district to have a cup of tea and cookies at a favorite shop.

"I went through a lot of experiments to try to arrive at some kind of answer."
"Eventually I came upon Richard Evans who had done a lot of soul dates at Chess Records, the parent company of Cadet. He also had a very good knowledge of the jazz scene and finally could help us put it together."
"We're basically a jazz band and can't lose that, but we blow the pop kinds of things with a pretty heavy rock beat and accent."

WOODY HERMAN

Herman's two latest LPs, "Light My Fire" and "Heavy Exposure," are on Cadet.

"We've got a hip version, 13 minutes, of 'Blues in the Night' that goes far out and in and sideways which we hope to put in our next album. And we've got some newer material which we can present to the youth, yet people as elderly as I am will dig these tunes."

The "elderly" Herman, now 57, became a bandleader at 23, when Isham Jones dissolved his band. Herman, who'd been playing in it, reorganized it and became leader.

"We've been scuffling for some 30-odd years," he says, "in dry and good seasons. Down through the ages I've tried to stay on top of what is happening. When I don't, I'll go home and sit on my hill in California."

"I'm toying with the idea of doing an album of new and old blues. Ten Years After did 'Woodchoppers' Ball," a 12-bar blues, on one of their albums. That is our excuse for playing it this year.

"A blues album would put us right back where we started to a certain degree. Our first name was The Band That Plays the Blues."

Jazz writer George Simon gave Herman's band its most known name—the Herd. First was the Thundering Herd, then the First, Second, Third Herd. Now it's again called the Thundering Herd.

Herman retired in 1947, but went back to work after seven months.

Looking back over the band business in general, Herman says, "In 1945-46 the American name band was at its peak. The '30s was the beginning and very good, but music for dancing mostly. By the '40s, people were listening pretty much.

"In the '50s, when we had the Third Herd, the band business was at its lowest. We were making some excitement; we weren't doing great but getting by on a business standpoint.

"It's better now. There is more activity for the bands that are still around and more different kinds of things we can do today." The Thundering Herd still plays for parties and in nightclubs. And the band tours abroad and does college concerts, packaged with a wellknown singer, often Dionne Warwick.

In September the Herd will go to Japan, Australia and New Zealand, then back to the U.S. for college dates.

"We'll be introducing jazz to kids in our fashion. If we continue to have any success with it, we'll be helping the cause of jazz," said Herman.

THE TWO-TON ALBATROSS by William C. Anderson is a light and humorous description of the Anderson family's trip through the United States. They start their adventures with a shake-down trip for their trailer, the two-ton Albatross, and then decide to make the trip across country, not just to the mountains. Anyone who is planning a trip, or would like to take a trip, will enjoy THE TWO-TON ALBATROSS or ACROSS A TRANS-CONTINENTAL HIGHWAY IN A TRAVEL TRAILER WITH TWO KIDS, TWO GUPPIES, A MINATURE ORANGE TREE, A LOBSTER NAMED HUD, A SAINT BERNARD DOG, AND A CLAUSTROPHOBIC WIFE.

THE PRODUCTION by Daniel Brown tells of the behind-the-scenes production of a Broadway play. Each of the chapters tells of one of the major steps in getting the production before the people and making it a success. The playwright, Andy Neal, starts the book with his play and the story broadens to include different characters to make an exciting book.

John Updike, the author of COUPLES, has a new book called BECH: A BOOK. This book is a writer's story, a story that has part of his books and writings included. The author, Henry Bech, sends letters to John Updike, but it is possible to see a correlation between this fictional author and Updike himself.

In TIME AND AGAIN, the principal character, Si Morley, is transported back in time by a secret organization to be an intelligent observer. Armed with a camera and sketch pad, he watches the corruption until he realizes that the organization no longer wants him to be just a bystander. TIME AND AGAIN by Jack Finney is an exciting novel of New York in the 1880's.

A young girl with her hard impoverished life is the story of THE MANUSCRIPTS OF PAULINE ARCHARGE by Marie-Claire Blais. In this novel Pauline observes, "If I had been given my being in some other form, perhaps I could have felt a pang of pity as I leaned down to observe a person such as myself. . . . What made me feel most desolate was the thought that it was such a long, such a hard business for me to live."

Miniature Drawings In An Old Friendship Book

In the late 18th century, throughout the 19th century, and on into the early 20th century, keepsake books were very popular with teenagers in Europe, particularly in England, France and Germany. These small blank page bound books served a purpose similar to autograph books teenagers today pass around for classmates to write a brief message in and sign their names.

Young people of the 18th and 19th centuries, however, with less to divert their time, quite often made these little books, commonly called "friendship books" into works of attractive miniature art. Nearly every page carried some decorative device, or small scene, usually discernible as the work of one gifted friend of the owner of the friendship book. As a rule, these were drawn in brown or black ink.

Friendship books illustrated with landscapes, devices or portraits in delicately drawn watercolors or oil colors, show up infrequently in antique shops or old book stores, but these are rare. The pages illustrated here are taken from a friendship book belonging to Miss Nancy Bancroft. The date January 12, 1817 is inscribed on the inside cover. Most entries are in English, a few are in French. This book was discovered in a box of old papers in the attic of a bookstore in Rome specializing in the works of Keats and Shelley.

Entries were made by friends of Miss Bancroft from January until October 1817. Pages are blank following that date, leading one to wonder what led Miss Bancroft to abandon her friendship book — and how the book happened to be stored in Rome.

William Ashburnham, Junior, is identified as the young artist responsible for the pen and ink drawings in Miss Bancroft's little book. Most are in brown ink, a few in black. He may have been one of Miss Bancroft's very close friends, as several entries are signed by him.

Student Discontent Subject New ECU Book

Politics 1970: Student Discontent on the American Campus. H. H. Indorf, editor, East Carolina University Publications, P. O. Box 2771, Greenville, N. C. $2.75; 140 pp.)

As another school year begins the forms and the extent of campus unrest are nearly universal topics of public concern. In the light of this concern members of the political science faculty of East Carolina University have chosen a focus on student activism for the first number of a new journal of politics. The journal embodies a unique approach to academic publishing by combining under one cover opinion, factual survey reports, and scholarly analysis of the current student unrest.

Three articles relate the findings of surveys of student disruption of and participation in campus administration. Both the administrative point of view and the student point of view are included in essays written by university administrators and students. Opinion and analyses are presented in articles on the ideology of the student left, the legal relationship between students and the university, and the process of "radicalization" undergone by student organizations over the past several years.

Four of the authors are teachers of political science at East Carolina University. Two are students at the same university, while one is a law student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Alan E. Bayer and Alexander Astin of the research office of the American Council on Education contribute survey material while the administrative point of view is presented by President

Italian Sculptor Returns To Art After Fifteen Years In Business

By PETER MUCCINI
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — For Enzo Plazzotta, sculpture is like swimming or riding a bicycle. "Once you learn how to do it you never forget even after years away from it," said the Italian who recently had a one-man exhibit at London's Grosvenor Gallery.

Fifteen years ago, Plazzotta gave up his art for a venture into the business world. "I had all sorts of economic and personal difficulties," he said. "I felt I could not give myself completely to sculpture, and rather than be a week-end artist I gave it up altogether."

Plazzotta did not return to sculpture until 1962 when he was 41. He found he had not forgotten what he had learned from his master Giacomo Manzù, the Italian who is numbered among today's half-dozen greatest living sculptors.

"I found my urge and ability just as strong," Plazzotta said. Plazzotta's works have won the admiration of such great masters as the Briton Henry Moore and the Lithuanian-born Jacques Lipschitz.

The authoritative British business magazine Investors' Chronicle has given him its seal of approval by declaring: "He is a good man to give a commission to."

"I don't like working on commissions," he said. "Unless it's something challenging or exciting, I'd rather produce what I wanted take my chances on the market."

His work sells well in New York, Paris and London. His prices range from $240 for a figure 12 inches high to $7,200 for his largest. The most striking feature of his work is its vivid sense of movement. Horses are a favorite theme. They tumble backwards on themselves, their hooves flailing the air, their manes flying and their mouths gaping in terror or rage; His dancers twist their bodies into incredible acrobatic shapes and even a seated peaceful Negro girl looks as if she is going to turn round and speak to the viewer.

He works both in Pietrasanta in Tuscany, where the great Renaissance sculptor Michelangelo quarried his white marble for his statues, and also in London's Chelsea district where he has a studio and a house.

Plazzotta is a modeller rather than a carver. Unlike most members of his craft, he makes his original models in wax.

"It is an extremely difficult technique but very rewarding," he said. "There are so many things you can do with wax that you can't in clay. You can mould it with a hot palette knife to get brush-stroke effects on the finished sculpture, or you can let it go rock hard and work on it with cutting tools to get the effect of carved wood." A fast worker, Plazzotta can prepare a life-size figure in a difficult, giddy pose, requiring intricate armature supports, ready for casting in two weeks.

"Michelangelo, Rodin and Degas are my models," he said. "Modern non-representational sculpture leaves me cold."

Born in Mestre, near Venice, Plazzotta studied sculpture at the Accademia di Brera, Milan. During the war he formed a group in the Resistance, was imprisoned, escaped and rejoined the partisans.

In 1947 he was commissioned by the Italian Liberation Committee to make a bronze sculpture for the British Special Forces in London to commemorate their work for the Italian Resistance.

While the total effort might be criticized for "balance" of opinion (articles obviously unsympathetic to recent student movements have the edge over the "neutral" or "pro-student" articles), the format of the journal is such that the combination of opinion, fact, and analysis provides an interesting and profitable opportunity to discover "what the other side is thinking" whatever the reader's "other side" happens to be.

Given the need for more and varied brief-article publications in the field of political science, the journal to be published yearly under the title Politics 1970 should be welcomed by scholars of all methodological persuasions — as well as by graduate and undergraduate students whose chances to be "heard" in a printed forum with their teachers is at best limited.

SUB-QUALITY DRUGS ARE RECALLED

Every week the government issues a list of products that they would like taken off the market either temporarily or permanently. We have found that the majority of the drugs on this recall list are made by lesser known manufacturers whose products are not usually stocked by pharmacists.

When one of the larger well-known companies is listed it is usually at their own request and because they have found something in their extensive testing laboratories. The public is being protected by strict supervision of the medicines that can be dispensed, so you can have confidence in what your doctor prescribes and your pharmacist dispenses.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

CALLING ALL CAMERA FANS
By ROSS BRYANT

FAMILY PIX

The vast majority of all family pictures seem to be taken in the summertime, outdoors and on sunny days, or during vacation trips. And, that fact is a good reason for taking some fresh pictures during blustery March. If the sun isn't as bright and the sky isn't as cloudless as you expect it to be on a bright midsummer day, that's not necessarily a disadvantage. In fact, hazy or cloudy sun tends to give a more balanced tone to your photographs.

That means there will be less sharp contrast between different elements in the picture. Your effects will be subtler. Features will be more unified because you won't have such sharp shadows. On top of that, the different backgrounds available to you at this season, with winter on the way out and spring around the corner, will give your family pictures a fresh new look.

Good photography is never out of season — and we're never out of what you need to take more and better pictures. For that new camera, film or accessories, join our photographic family!

Old Radical Now Frowns On Bombings As 'Futile'

By ROBERT STRAND
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The man convicted of the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing that killed 10 and injured 40 others doesn't understand the current young generation of radical bombers.

"I don't believe the Weather-men know what they are doing," Warren K. Billings said in an interview. "They don't seem to be accomplishing anything."

Billings, now 76, added, "I don't believe illegal activities accomplish anything except to attract attention." In occasional appearances before groups of college students, he advises the young to seek racial some of which he shares—by working within the system.

Convicted Of Murder
"Anybody with any common sense knows there's absolutely no chance of creating a revolution in the United States, not today. You can't create a revolution without support of the people."

On July 22, 1916, while thousands watched a parade demonstrating willingness for war, a bomb exploded among spectators on a street corner.

Billings was a young helper of Tom Mooney, a radical labor organizer, who advocated violence in his newspaper.

Both were convicted of murder. Billings was sentenced to life in prison and Mooney to death, but President Woodrow Wilson's intervention caused commutation of the death sentence to life by the governor.

His Sentence Commuted
Rapidly the two men became central figures in what was called an American Dreyfus case. Five presidents and six governors eventually became involved.

In one of his first acts in taking office in 1939, Gov. Culbert Olson, a Democrat, pardoned Mooney with the statement that the men were innocent and convicted by perjured testimony.

The law kept Olson from pardoning Billings, without approval of the state Supreme Court, because of a prior felony conviction for possession of 60 sticks of dynamite.

The dynamite was in a suitcase, and Billings said he was merely delivering the suitcase and unaware of the contents.

Olson, however, commuted Billings' sentence to time served, and Gov. Edmund G. Brown, another Democrat, gave him a pardon in 1961.

History Relieved Them
Billings and Mooney, who died in 1942, always maintained their innocence. Numerous historians, like Gov. Olson concluded the two men were framed because of their labor organizing activities.

During his 23 years in prison, Billings taught himself how to repair watches. Upon his release, he opened a watch shop, married a young lady who had corresponded with him, and settled in a suburban home.

Nowadays Billings, who still works at watch repairs two days a week, is hardly the picture of a conspiratorial bomber.

Dressed like a businessman and mentally acute, Billings' face beams as he tells detailed anecdotes about "riding the rods," hobo jungles and vicious labor strife.

Foresees Peaceful Change
Proportionately as many people used hard drugs in his youth as now, Billings said, he recalled quitting a construction job in Colorado the first day because all the workers were "coheads"—users of cocaine.

"The construction company bought cocaine for the workers by the ton," he said. "It was pretty bad in Brooklyn, N.Y. in 1912, too."

About his prison experience, Billings is philosophical. "I learned a whole lot there I wouldn't have learned any other way. I learned not to blame people for things they did to me when forced by circumstance," Billings said, referring to the two witnesses whose testimony convicted him.

Billings, who describes himself as a life-long Democrat, believes the way to social change is evolution. "I don't see how we can do anything any other way."

WARREN K. BILLINGS, the man convicted of the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing that killed 10 and injured 40 others, looks up from his work as a watch repairman at his jeweler's bench in San Francisco. (UPI Telephoto)

Wolf Pack Is Observed For Nature's Law

By JUSTIN BAVARSKIS
ISLE ROYALE, Mich. (UPI)—Sixteen wolves stretch out in single file over a quarter-mile. From the air, they look like a string of dark furry beads as they pace in hunting formation over the snow. The wolves stop and stand still for several seconds, their noses upwind, ears pricked. They run together into a football huddle. They sniff noses, wag tails, and race off. They have scented a moose.

Bounding through the deep snow, they quickly catch the up-to-1,000-pound moose. He stands at bay with his back to a stand of aspen. The wolves form a semicircle around him. When the moose charges them, each paw stomping furiously on the ground, the wolves scatter, tails between their legs.

They wait a few minutes, and the defiant moose waits for them. The wolves hold another conference and run off.

Soon, they cross another fresh moose trail. His time, the moose tries to outrun the wolves. But they catch him within a few hundred yards.

The Fittest Survive
One wolf grabs him by the nose while the others slash at this flanks and rump. Rearing up, throwing his head from side to side, stomping the ground, the moose cannot shake the nose wolf. Soon, he sinks to the ground, the wolves tearing at his flesh.

Why did one moose escape and the other not? Why did the wolves decide to chase one moose and leave the other alone? What effect do the wolves have on the moose population and what effect does the moose population have on the wolf pack?

For 12 years, a team of scientists from Purdue University, headed by noted wildlife authority Dr. Durward Allen, has been watching nature at work in tooth and claw among the moose herd and wolf packs on Isle Royale National Park, an island in the western corner of Lake Superior.

Isle Royale, 45 miles long and between three and nine miles wide, is almost a perfect natural laboratory for the study. It is difficult for wolves or moose to leave the island or come to it from the mainland. So any change in wolf or moose populations generally must come from the animals already on the island.

So far, the studies have borne out Darwin's first law of nature—survival of the fittest.

The wolves weed out the calves and the old, and sick moose. In doing so, they improve the quality of the moose herd and keep it available to the moose on the island.

The moose supply, in turn, may keep the wolf population in balance. In times when moose are relatively scarce, the wolves either do not have pups or the pups do not survive. Like most large meat-eater, wolves practice a form of birth control. "It is likely for only the socially dominant female to breed," Allen said in an interview. "She won't let other females breed. She'll attack them if the males pay too much attention to them."

Outside of Alaska, Isle Royale is one of the few places left in the United States where the timber wolf—canis lupus—survives.

As they conquered the country, settlers and farmers drove out the wolf. The settlers were driven by fear for their livestock and their lives. They had heard stories of wolves attacking and killing whole caravans of travelers.

Few Wolves Survive
Largely because of fear, timber wolves have been poisoned, trapped and shot from airplanes. Fewer than 1,000 of them survive in the contiguous states, about three-quarters of them in Minnesota.

Students of the wolves maintain the wolf fears man far more than man fears him, and that stories of wolves killing people are only folk myths. At the first sign of a man, they say, the wolf retreats deeper into the forest.

Although the federal government regards wolves as an endangered species, and most states agree, regulations against hating wolves are left to the states. Most don't have to worry about the problem because they don't have wolves any more.

It was largely because wolves are in danger that Allen, together with a succession of graduate students such as David Mech, Peter Jordan and Philip Shelton, undertook the Isle Royale study.

Population Fluctuates
In 1966, Mech published his doctor's thesis—"The Wolves of Isle Royale." He concluded, "The Isle Royale moose population probably is one of the best-managed bio game herds in America."

"An obvious result of intensive predation on Isle Royale moose is the elimination of heavily parasitized, diseased, old or otherwise inferior individuals. Culling benefits any population, but it probably is especially important to Isle Royale's defense herd. It may even be the reason that such a high population has survived."

When he returned from the 1970 winter study, Allen estimated the moose herd was about 900 and the wolves totaled about 18—populations which have held true for about three years. This, Allen feels, is a good balance that the island can support.

In the 1930s, before wolves migrated across a temporary 15-mile ice bridge from northern Ontario to Isle Royale, the moose population was 1,000.

It reached 3,000 a few years later. At that point, there were too many moose for the available browse. Most of them starved to death.

When you gotta go, kid, you gotta go.

Ask Them Yourself

FOR DAVID KENNEDY, Secretary of the Treasury

How do you determine the denomination of paper currency burned beyond recognition? Does the Treasury refund the money?—John E. Hansen, Racine, Wis.

● No refund is made for currency which has been burned beyond recognition because positive identification as to denomination must be made before it can be replaced. If fragments which lend themselves to identification are submitted, then payment may be made in accordance with the Treasury Department regulations.

FOR REX REED, writer and movie critic

What do you think was the best movie of 1969, and whom do you consider to have been the best actor and actress?

● A miracle happened this year when the best actress of the year actually won an Oscar. Maggie Smith gave the finest performance of the year in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie." Unfortunately, I considered Peter O'Toole the best actor for "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," and Luchino Visconti's masterpiece, "The Damned," the best picture of 1969. Neither of them won anything at all.

FOR RANDY HUNDLEY,

Chicago Cubs

When you go out to the pitcher's mound to calm a pitcher, what do you actually say?

—M. L. Nestler, Spring Valley, Ill.

● I go to the pitcher's mound during a game for one of three reasons: one, to ask the pitcher what kind of a pitch he wants to throw in the particular situation in which we are involved at that moment; two, to make sure we are together on the set of signs being used; or thirdly, to try to "loosen up" the pitcher if he appears nervous.

FOR PEGGY LIPTON,

tv's "Mod Squad"

How long did it take you to get your hair to the present length?

—Gail Dent, Bladensburg, N.C.

● My hair took about six months to grow to its present length. It extends to the middle of my back.

FOR WALTER CRONKITE,

C.B.S. newscaster

What is the purpose of the symbol in the upper right-hand corner of the tv screen on your early news broadcast?—Mrs. J. O. Boswell, Owensboro, Ky.

● The symbol you refer to is a hand folded around the globe. It is used whenever we are reporting on environmental pollution.

FOR SEN. WARREN G. MAGNUSON, Washington

What problem does the shortage of railroad box cars create?—Mrs. Steve Moyer, Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada

● Every year for at least the past 25 years there have been insufficient freight cars available to meet the needs of grain producers for transportation of their harvest to market. Failure to supply box cars for the harvest means that it must be piled on the ground. Much of it is lost.

FOR FRANCES KNIGHT,

Director of U.S. Passport Agency

Is there a minimum or maximum age when a passport is not needed?

—Mrs. Bert Anderson, Green Bay, Wis.

● There is no exception to the passport requirement by reason of age.

FOR ARNOLD PALMER

Soviet Scale Model A Soviet rocket was recently launched from an American Air Force base in Massachusetts. The reason the event didn't make world-wide headlines was that the rocket was a 1/100 scale model. However, it did make some news as it soared 300 feet into the air because, until then, all models for hobbyists were of American rockets. This one was of the Vostok, which opened the space age in 1957 by boosting Sputnik into orbit. The Vostok research was conducted by G. Harry Stine, one of America's leading experts on Soviet and NASA rocketry, who was retained by Model Products Corp. "For historical reasons, we felt it should be made available to American hobbyists," explained Stine.

"We beat the Russians to the moon, but they were first in space."

Archery, Anyone? Bows and arrows are making a comeback. Archery will be classed as a new gold-medal sport, open to both men and women, at the 1972 Olympic games in Munich, Germany, according to Ben Pearson, the "Babe Ruth of Archery." Today archery equipment sales ($45 million a year) are twice those of tennis. It's a relatively low-cost sport; $30 could get the basic simple fiber-glass bow and arrows. Or, an aficionado could go wild with a $200-plus sophisticated Practice Makes Pianists Popular pianist Roger Williams, whose records are consistent best sellers, used to hate to practice. "I was more interested in sports and girls," he commented to FAMILY WEEKLY. Though he became an avid 10-hour-a-day practitioner, he still is sympathetic to reluctant students. "In the first year, 70 percent drop out because it takes too much time and patience. Also, there's a shortage of teachers—especially of popular music. I can't even find one for my own 10-year-old son." Yet Williams believes there's a great future for professional pianists. So he has endorsed the computerized "International Music Centers." In 39 lessons, with a half hour of practice a day, it's hoped kids can absorb what once took four years. Roger Williams jokingly advises budding keyboard artists: "Don't practice too hard—I have enough competition!"

By FRANCES L. KOLTUN

Fort William Henry, at Lake George Village, New York, has reenactment of historical battle scenes to attract visitors to area.

In northern Georgia, where the Blue Ridge foothills offer the first breath of cool mountain air to anyone driving north from Florida, lies the lonely hamlet of Hiawassee—so like a thousand others it hardly takes your eyes off the road as you drive through.

Yet Hiawassee, population 405, has become the site of one of Georgia's most joyous, popular, and colorful events, the Georgia Mountain Fair. The way it happened provides a perfect working model of how to put small-town America on the map.

In 1950, worried about the isolation of Hiawassee, its dwindling population, and its "nothing future," the Town's County Lions Club decided to hold a small exhibit of local mountain crafts. Few visitors were expected that first year. Yet amazingly, more than 1,000 showed up. In 1968 more than 100,000 came, thronging both town and surrounding countryside for nine days.

When the Fair started, 20 years ago, Hiawassee had no visitors and perhaps only two dozen summer homes. Today it has nearly 400 summer residences. Its two supermarkets together gross over a million dollars a year. Its bank deposits nearly doubled during the month of August when the fair was held. Clearly, by using their heads and a once taken-for-granted asset, the good people of Hiawassee have rescued their town from the brink of its economic grave.

Years ago, Natchez, Mississippi, was a small forgotten river town wilting away in the summer heat. Cut off from the main stream of traffic, without passenger railroads, her only link with the outside world was a rutted dirt road. "We felt so remote," one resident recalls, "that a car with out-of-state plates caused a commotion."

Then one day Mrs. J. Balfour, president of the Natchez Garden Club, faced the problem of entertaining the Mississippi State Federation of Garden Clubs. It was usual to treat the Federation to a display of local gardens, but most of those in Natchez were in poor condition due to a March freeze that year. In desperation, Mrs. Balfour decided to show the visitors the town's opulent white-pillared, ante-bellum houses instead. They were so enchanted that she and the Garden Club organized a similar tour the following year and "invited the world to come."

Doubtful residents wondered whether it would work. These were dark Depression days and money was scarce, especially for such things as house tours and trips. Yet, miraculously, from the first moment, the tour proved a great success—and Natchez came back to life.

Last March, the now-famous month-long Natchez Pilgrimage brought several thousand visitors and nearly a million dollars to the town. It has given people a fresh awareness of the whole state of Mississippi, and Natchez, after years without a new industry, now boasts a number of important branch offices and plants.

Each June, in a natural amphitheater at the edge of town, there unfolds at dusk a cheerful, joyous musical pageant that the people of Albany write and produce entirely on their own. Using only the talents of their citizens—no outsider can participate—they tell the history of their own community, "not as it comes from the texts but as it lingers in the hearts of old-timers."

The Fandangle started life 32 years ago as a high-school play and was so successful that it was taken over by a committee, aided by the Albany Chamber of Commerce, to be staged annually. Since then, the cast has grown from 30 players to 300, and the town is flooded with visitors on Fandangle days. Everyone in Albany knows the heart-filling satisfaction of bringing vibrant theater—and thousands of appreciative visitors—to the remote ranching country of north-central Texas.

Throughout the country, people are pouring energy and heart into events that help their communities. They work long hours, without pay, to get one going, then to sustain it. Sometimes an idea starts with the initiative of an individual, perhaps a local historian, sometimes it comes from the Chamber of Commerce. Sometimes it has the backing of the town's financial interests; sometimes, it moves ahead as a club project.

Almost always, it starts small, then takes hold and develops. Seldom does it have much seed money. (When the Natchez Garden Club started its Pilgrimage, it had next to nothing in the bank.) Gaspee Days, a Pawtucket, Rhode Island, historical festival, got going on $60.

But those that prevail pay off handsomely. Here's why:

Visitors bring in money: Somerset R. Waters, a travel-industry economist, shows how even a small number of visitors make a big contribution. "Suppose one touring couple spends one day and night in your town. This couple will spend at least $35 for a room, meals, gasoline, shopping and sight-seeing. If

How to Attract Visitors to Your Community

1. Organize a Visitors' Council. The Council can be a special project for an existing civic organization, or it can be an entirely new community project. The most important ingredients: an enthusiastic leader and a true cross-section of your community interests, including business, education, women's clubs, and cultural groups.

2. Start with a small steering committee to lay the groundwork. Expand to a larger committee with sub-committees assigned to Inventory, Program, Promotion, and Hospitality. Warning: a sure blueprint for failure is to build the Visitors' Council around a group of citizens interested only in profiting directly from the visitor business. Visitors benefit the total community. Every segment should be represented.

3. Get as many people involved as possible. The secret of success is to make sure that the whole community has as much fun as the visitor. Give everyone a chance to shine.

4. Establish your hospitality plan. Set up a committee to take care of the visitors' needs for housing, feeding, entertainment, and shopping. You'll need a centrally located visitors' information office. The atmosphere of hospitality you create is the key to increasing visitor growth in succeeding years. The director of your state travel department can advise you and help promote your event. Consult also your state's branch of the American Automobile Association, oil-company touring services, the Chamber of Commerce, and airlines serving your general area. If there are big industries in your town, get the advice of their advertising and public-relations departments.

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce's Travel Council has assembled a comprehensive kit, detailing every facet of its uniquely successful, award-winning Stay and See Georgia program, as used by 325 communities in that state. The kit is available at $50 from Georgia Travel Council, 1200 Commerce Building, Atlanta, Ga. 30303.

The American Petroleum Institute publishes a manual, "Economic Growth Through a Community Visitors Council." Up to 25 copies will be sent free to a civic organization, on request. The API also distributes a film, "The Broken Bow Story," detailing how a small Nebraska town attracts visitors. Write to API, 1271 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Town on the Map

you attracted just one couple a day, every day of the year, it would mean a tourist income of $12,775. Just 100 couples a day would mean a tourist income of $1,277,500. This in turn would cause employment of approximately 127 people—waitresses, bus boys, tour guides, life guards, bell hops, parking attendants, sales clerks—jobs that require little training and that can absorb the normally hard-to-employ: the young and unskilled. This added payroll of about half a million dollars spent in the community would set in motion economic activity that could result in another million dollars in local business."

Visitors fatten tax coffers and create jobs: Since their home is elsewhere, out-of-state visitors are tax contributors without being major tax consumers. The taxes they leave behind—on gasoline, hotel rooms, retail sales, fishing licenses, and the like—can be used for schools, libraries, roads, and a whole range of public works.

Visitors generate new industries: A better place for visitors is a better place to live—and a better place to live is a better place for new industry. The Birmingham, Ala., Arts Festival is credited by the city's businessmen as a very influential factor in the decision that the home office of the $2 billion Central Bell Telephone system would be located there. The men who called the Natchez Pilgrimage "feminine foolishness" are the first to admit that it helped attract some notable industries.

Visitors put your town on the map: A notable event draws notable publicity, often national and international news coverage. Real-estate values invariably rise as people get to know a place. A Sag Harbor, New York, real-estate dealer, says, "I've sold several homes to people who told me they'd never heard of Sag Harbor until they came for our Old Whalers' Festival."

Visitors give a town a sense of pride and accomplishment: An event born of local history or uniqueness or special talent, cannot help but knit the community together and give it a sense of fulfillment. Just as a handsome house that is never visited seems dead, so a town that never shares its rich traditions seems lifeless and dull.

What kind of event can you dream up for your home town? Here, from all around the country, are some very successful ideas:

- If yours is an area distinguished for a single crop, plant, or foodstuff, build a festival around it. There is, for example, a sauerkraut festival in Springfield, Minn.; a strawberry festival in Humboldt, Tenn.; an apple-blossom festival in Wenatchee, Wash.; a Maine seafood festival in Rockland, Maine; a clam festival in Annapolis, Md.; the famous Cotton Carnival in Memphis, Tenn.; the National Cherry Festival in Traverse City, Mich.; the Beaufort Costumed residents of Natchez, Miss., act as host-guides during annual Pilgrimage through ante-bellum houses.

Log rolling at Timber Carnival in Albany, Oregon, attracts huge crowd each summer, which comes to see local skill.

Water Festival in Beaufort, S.C.; the "Trail of Tears" drama at Tsa-La-Gi, Okla.; and the Minneapolis Aquatennial in Minneapolis, Minn.

- If yours is a town of historic homes or beautiful gardens—even a handful will do—plan a tour of them. There are house-and-garden tours in Rhode Island, Virginia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Connecticut, Louisiana, Maryland, and many other states.

- If a "famous son" has grown up in your part of the country, present a pageant built around his life and show his boyhood home. Or, if history has swept through your section, re-enact some of the highlights.

- If music and art are your town's "thing," organize an arts festival around your musicians, painters, sculptors, singers, dancers, and writers. Or have a country-music jamboree, or an all-night sing. There are many music festivals around the country today, and the sound ranges from Beethoven under a tent to banjo-strumming under a tree. In Weiser, Idaho; Union Grove, N.C.; and Oakland, Md.; as in a number of other towns, the old-time fiddler is celebrated with contests and festivals.

- If your community has strong ethnic ties, try a "national" festival. Michigan's colorful Highland Festival and Games in Alma, for example, is billed as "the largest Scottish event held outside Scotland." The annual Bavarian Festival in Frankenmuth, Mich., features German food, arts and crafts, singing and dancing.

- If yours is a great fishing area, sponsor a fishing rodeo. A gifted hand-craft area? Take a tip from Asheville, N.C., or Gatlinburg, Tenn., and hold a craftsman's fair. Does your town have a sports tradition of a particular kind? Create a tournament. In the bayous of Louisiana, they celebrate spring with the World's Championship Pirogue Races, a competition among the narrow cypress boats built to navigate the shallow swamps.

Don't be afraid to let your imagination soar, even if you think your resources are modest. Remind yourself that what may be commonplace to you can be enormously appealing to a visitor. And remember, there is a growing flood of mobile and curious Americans who like to travel about on weekends, holidays, or summer vacations. By bringing even a small percentage of them to your town, you can make a large contribution to its well-being. ♦

What we need is a cooler heat wave

A nice little arctic breeze to take the sizzle out of the sun, 'cause it's downright uncomfortable sometimes. Especially when it's also monthly period time.

But there's one way to keep that discomfort bearable. Tampax tampons. The internal sanitary protection developed for comfort. The smooth container-applicator makes insertion, easy and comfortable, even the first time. And you won't feel the tampon when it's properly in place.

Removal is effortless and safe because our tampon doesn't expand to uncomfortable proportions. And the moisture-proof removal cord is securely chain stitched the entire length of the tampon. Of course disposal is no problem since everything is flushable.

Tampax tampons. Always comfortable. Always convenient. Always a cool idea.

What Do You Know About Your

By JOHN E. GIBSON

Marriage can be one of life's most richly rewarding experiences—or it can be disappointing and frustrating. Whether a marriage turns out to be a happy one depends largely upon the personalities of the two persons involved, and how capable each is of accepting the other's frailties and imperfections.

This true-false quiz provides answers to some of the questions concerning the marital state which you may have speculated about.

1. If a couple can just manage to rec-oncile their major differences, the little things will take care of themselves.

2. A marriage has two strikes against it if the wife is older than the husband.

3. If a husband can out-talk his wife in a family discussion, he stands an excellent chance of getting his way.

4. Most happily married couples fell in love at first sight.

5. Domestic fights are frequently triggered by noisy household appliances.

6. Couples who blame their relatives for domestic troubles are usually just passing the buck.

7. A family should have only one head.

8. The husband may appear to be the boss, but most marriages are dominated by the wife.

9. In a family argument, it's the wife who is most likely to turn the discussion into a snarling, bickering, personal attack on her spouse.

10. A sexless marriage, where physical love is absent, can be a happy, fulfilling relationship.

ANSWERS

1. False. Surveys in which couples were carefully questioned show that some of the most upsetting influences are the "little things." Irritating personal habits are often borne in silence by each partner until the cumulative resentment finally reaches a festering point and is expressed in unfocused hostility.

2. False. Wide-scale studies at the University of California have shown "no consistent relationship between the age of the spouses and their mutual happiness." Some of the happiest marriages are those in which the wife is older. Only when there is a great difference in ages—such as two decades or more—has an age differential been found to be an obstacle to happiness.

3. True. Sociological studies of marriage relationships at a leading university indicate that the husband who is more voluble than his wife in a discussion usually has the inside track when it comes to getting his way. Another interesting finding: having a male friend present gives a man a definite edge when he is trying to persuade his wife to his point of view. The reverse is true, too.

4. False. A noted sociologist found that the cases of love at first sight that do not end in happy marriages are far more numerous than those that do. Love at first sight often blinds a couple to personality differences which may make it extremely difficult for them to get along amicably.

5. True. A University of Texas study reports that vacuum cleaners, kitchen mixers, blenders, tv, dishwashers, among others, raise the sound level in some homes to the point where it seriously disturbs family harmony and leads to violent arguments.

6. False. Sociological studies show that interference by relatives and in-laws ranks close to first place as a disturber of family peace. Newlyweds would do well to avoid setting up housekeeping too close to either his or her relations—regardless of how well-meaning they may be.

7. False. Studies of thousands of marriages conducted by the American Institute of Family Relations show that the happiest families have not one head but two, with the husband and wife mature enough to cooperate on the basis of equality.

8. False. In the same study of a cross-section of the marriage population, dominance was rated by close friends and relatives. Findings: "It was decided that 28 percent of the marriages were definitely dominated by the wife, 35 percent by the husband, while 37 percent were genuine copartnerships."

9. True. According to a University of Michigan study of young married couples, it was the wives who were more likely to respond with a personal attack during an argument. The report stated that when the husbands started the argument, the wives were more likely to retaliate with biting, attacking, or coercive remarks. But when the wives started the arguments, the husbands were more inclined to cool down the verbal disagreement and to kiss and make up.

10. True. Dr. John F. Cuber, professor of sociology at Ohio State University found that the sexless marriages are no rarity and are far more prevalent than suspected. He notes that there is a sizable percentage of people for whom physical love is unimportant, and when two such people find each other, a quietly satisfying kind of sexless life fulfillment emerges. ♦

A formula so different it has far more anti-wetness agent than it is possible to put in any aerosol can. By anybody. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible—with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 57-year-old laboratory and guaranteed by Good Housekeeping. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need—and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily—get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Your choice, liquid or cream. Ninety-day supply, each $3.00. Available at your favorite drug or toiletry counter.

Rag Time

My wife's an incessant collector of rags. With rags she fills boxes and barrels and bags. What one day is clothing, all manner and sorts—My shirts and pajamas, my socks and my shorts—The next day's a rag. This distinction is subtle. It's useless to argue or offer rebuttal. When my wife has that look in her eyes, she's a fright. I hide things away, and I button up tight.

QUIPS AND QUOTES

The old farmer had brought his prize hog to town to sell. A friend questioned him about the possible profits in pig farming.

"How much did you pay fer her?"

Pocketing the check, the old man said, "About 10 dollars, ah guess."

"And how much did it cost to feed her?" his friend persisted.

"About 40 dollars, ah guess," the farmer replied.

"But you didn't make any profit," his inquirer pointed out. "You sold her fer 50 dollars."

"Ah know," admitted the old farmer. "But I had her company all winter!"

One Sunday morning, as a beggar stood on a corner holding out his hat, a woman stopped and glared at him.

"If you went to church," she scolded, "maybe you would be more fortunate."

"You're wrong, lady," replied the beggar. "I passed my hat around at church last Sunday, but I was thrown out."

—Robert Brown

The small boy's mother had let him invite his chum over for dinner. When the young guest ate well, except for his spinach, his hostess said, "Eating plenty of spinach will put a lot of iron in your blood."

The young guest thought for a moment, then asked, "Gee, don't you think it'll make me kind of stiff?"

—Dorothea Kent

As she entered the room, a woman recognized the celebrity who was about to address her club. He was pacing madly back and forth. "Are you always nervous like this before you make a speech," she asked.

"Why, no, I never, never get nervous," he protested.

"Then why are you here in the Ladies' Rest Room?"

Kabobs for Cookouts

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

Called "shish kabobs" in Middle East countries (Turkish for skewered roast meat), kabobs are usually prepared with lamb. Here are kabobs in the American manner, fine for cookouts—lamb, seafood, vegetable, and frankfurter—with wonderfully flavored marinades to add to their succulence.

A blend of herbs with other seasonings imparts delightful flavor to lamb chops and vegetables on skewers, grilled over an open fire.

Shoulder Lamb Chops and Vegetables on Skewers

- 6 round-bone shoulder lamb chops, cut about 1 1/2 in. thick
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/4 teaspoon marjoram leaves, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon rosemary leaves, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon tarragon leaves, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon ground thyme
- 1/8 teaspoon onion powder
- 3/4 cup cooking or salad oil
- 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen cauliflower, partially cooked and drained
- Green pepper squares (about 1 1/2 in.)
- Tomato wedges

1. Put lamb chops into a large shallow dish.
2. Combine lemon juice, garlic, herbs, onion powder, and oil; mix well. Pour over lamb and marinate in refrigerator several hours, turning chops over occasionally.
3. Remove chops from marinade (reserve for brushing) and thread 2 chops on each of 3 long skewers. Put on a hot grill about 4 in. from coals. During grilling, turn chops frequently and brush with marinade. Cook about 18 min., or until desired degree of doneness. To test for doneness, slit meat near bone and note the color of the meat. Season with lemon pepper marinade.
4. Meanwhile, alternately thread vegetable pieces on long skewers. Brush generously with marinade. Grill until of desired doneness, turning and brushing with marinade. Sprinkle with Accent.
5. When meat and vegetables are done, remove from skewers to paper plates.

6 servings

Scallop Kabobs

- 1 lb. scallops, fresh or thawed frozen
- 1/4 cup olive oil or other cooking oil
- 1 small clove garlic, crushed
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup finely chopped parsley
- 1/4 cup all-purpose soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Freshly ground pepper
- 1 can (13 to 13 1/2 oz.) pineapple chunks, drained
- 1 can (4 oz.) button mushrooms, drained
- Green pepper squares (about 1 in.)
- 12 slices bacon

1. Rinse scallops with cold water to remove any pieces of shell; drain on absorbent paper. Cut large scallops into smaller pieces.
2. Combine oil, garlic, lemon juice, parsley, soy sauce, salt, and pepper to taste in a large bowl. Mix thoroughly and add the scallops, pineapple chunks, mushrooms, and green pepper pieces. Toss to coat ingredients with the marinade. Set aside at least 30 min., tossing several times.

3. Meanwhile, panbroil the bacon until cooked but still soft. Halve the slices.
4. Using long, thin skewers, thread each with a scallop, pineapple chunk, mushroom cap, green pepper piece, and bacon piece; repeat to fill skewer.
5. Brush kabobs with some of the leftover marinade and place on grill about 4 in. from the hot coals. Cook until bacon is crisp and browned, 10 to 12 min. Turn kabobs several times while cooking and brush with the marinade.

About 6 servings

Frank and Vegetable Kabobs

- 1 large green pepper, cut in 1 1/2-in. squares
- 12 small cooked potatoes (use canned, if desired)
- 6 small cooked onions (use canned, if desired)
- Favorite bottled barbecue sauce

1. Using 6 long skewers, thread on each: 1 piece meat, 1 sq. green pepper, 1 potato and 1 onion; repeat to fill the skewer.
2. Brush kabobs generously with melted butter or margarine and then with barbecue sauce. Place on the grill about 4 in. from hot coals and cook until franks and vegetables are thoroughly heated and lightly browned, turning kabobs occasionally.

Johnny Cash—
 The Man Behind the Mask

The past of this country-music star represents the worst in many of us—his future represents the best

By HUGH CHERRY

Jim Marshall

This story is not about me—it's about Johnny Cash. But it's important to say that I may know him as well as anyone because Johnny Cash is a very private man.

As a country-music disc jockey for more than two decades, I have had the opportunity to associate with Johnny Cash both socially and professionally—during the good times and in some very bad ones. I have introduced him from the stages of Carnegie Hall, the Hollywood Bowl, and in the crowded mess hall at Folsom Prison. I have attended his recording sessions, interviewed him on international radio, and have been a guest in his home. We have gotten drunk together, sometimes fought, and I have known his wife, June Carter, whom he married in March, 1968, for some 20 years now.

During a recent trip to Nashville, where Johnny broadcasts his weekly country-music show (it returns on ABC-TV on Sept. 23), I visited my old friend and tried to relate this new image as a superstar to the guy I had known and worked with over the years. It wasn't easy.

I first met Cash in 1962. The circumstances are a bit hazy for both of us because he was popping pills, and I was guzzling scotch. We talked a lot about Indians and Jimmie Rodgers and folk songs. He thought I drank too much, and I thought he was a nut for popping amphetamines. Our paths crossed with increasing frequency, and we came to be friends.

Many of Cash's compositions possess a foreboding, almost dirgelike quality. The melody line is secondary to him, often in performance as well as composition. His writings often display a disdain for meter. A good example is "Don't Take Your Guns to Town." The meter of the song is as unorthodox as its writer, but the combination of lyric, melody, and meter accomplished Cash's intended statement. He once explained its origin:

"This song idea comes from another song I had written, earlier called 'Don't Step on Mother's Roses.' I thought the idea was good enough to warrant a song or maybe it was because I had felt so much about the incident that inspired it. I went to my aunt's funeral in South Arkansas. The pallbearers were trying to take the casket out of the house, and one of the pallbearers stepped on a rose bush. My cousin saw the man's foot on the rose bush, and with tears in his eyes, he said, 'Don't step on Mother's roses.' I wrote the song that night and I got to thinkin' of other 'Don't' ideas, using the same meter. I was cleaning a pistol one night, and I got to thinkin' about the things you shouldn't do with a pistol, and the 'Rose' song became 'Don't Take Your Guns to Town.'"

An excellent poet and composer, Cash could have made a comfortable living from his compositions alone. But during the past 15 years, Johnny has been one of country music's top performers and money-makers. He was earning $200,000 a year 10 years ago. But until recently, success was as frustrating to Johnny as failure is to most men.

Cash's first wife, Vivian, the mother of his four daughters, told me that Johnny took his early success in stride. But as his career began making increasing demands upon him, he became tense. His increasing tension was at its peak when he finished a performance. He began to drink heavily in the late '50s, usually after a show.

Pills did not become a part of Cash's dissipation until after the death of his good friend and fellow performer, Johnny Horton, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1960. Cash and Horton were very close, and his death was a shock. The drugs brought changes. He began missing engagements. His marriage was disintegrating.

Paradoxically, this was one of Cash's most productive periods. Several of his epic writing and recording works were accomplished while he was suffering his heaviest addiction. Such albums as "Ride This Train," "Johnny Cash Sings the Ballads of the True West," and his collection of Indian ballads were all researched, written, and recorded while indulging in severe drug abuse.

I worked a country-music show with Johnny at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium in 1966. He and Vivian had been separated for some months, and he had been living in Nashville. He looked bad. His clothes just hung on him, and he was terribly nervous. But none of this interfered with his performance. He was brilliant that night.

During the next year I spoke with Cash a couple of times on the phone but did not see him again until November, 1967. I was scheduled to introduce him from the stage of the Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium. As I entered Cash's dressing room at the Shrine, I saw a new man. He had put on some weight. He was sitting quietly, talking with June Carter. As I entered the dressing room, Johnny stood and extended his hand warmly. We chatted for a moment, then I asked him about the pills. "I'm off of 'em!" Cash said quietly, "Can't you tell?" Yes, I could.

After the show was over, I was with him in his dressing room, and he said, "Hugh, I gonna' go to Folsom Prison and record an album, and I would like for you to come along and MC the show for me. Do you wanna' go?" I didn't have to be asked twice.

The experience at Folsom is one

I shall never forget. I had worked shows at prisons in Tennessee, but none had the forbidding reputation of Folsom.

The Cash party—musicians, engineers, newspapermen—were escorted behind the walls by several guards. Armed with shotguns, they paced the catwalks above the mess hall. The stage was a make-shift construction at one end of the long room. The mess-hall kitchen was used as the performers' dressing room.

As Cash mounted the stage, he looked over his shoulder and spoke to his recording director. Cash said, "Bob, is there anything in particular that you want me to say to them to open the recording?" The director just shrugged, indicating that, from that moment on, it was Johnny's show all the way.

At that tense moment the now-familiar greeting—"Hello, I'm Johnny Cash"—was born.

Johnny Cash's purpose in life is to make a statement—whether it's about the plight of the Indians, prisons, railroads, or just being lonesome—and his past experience helps to get the statement across. And while that past is fraught with dark depressions, his future couldn't be brighter.

The Cashes are the proud parents of a baby boy—John Carter—born in March. Johnny appears in the film, "The Gunfighter," with Kirk Douglas, made during the summer before he returned home to Hendersonville, Tenn., near Nashville. A new tv season gets under way soon, and Johnny will once again be in his element—the musical spotlight, making his personal statements. ♦

With June looking on, Johnny proudly holds baby John Carter, ponders future.

It features handsome top seaming, a face-framing funnel collar, set-in sleeves, and, with fashion currently focusing on the waistline, a nifty wrap-around belt. It would look lovely in a wool or gabardine fabric.

Arteries Arthritis

A WONDERFUL NEW DISCOVERY, By ROBERT S. FORD, B.S.

New scientific studies show how cholesterol and fat choke the arteries only when eaten in aged and stored form such as in sausage or cheese, but are harmless when FRESH as in pork chops or milk. Cholesterol and fat slowly dry and harden like paint when aged in many stored foods, and can form deposits only when changed in this way. This research break-through comes as a welcome surprise, at last solving the agonizing riddle of choked arteries and cholesterol.

Recently published in booklet form, these findings also cast new light on the arthritis problem. A network of fine arteries in the membrane and porous bone around the joint nourishes the moving parts. When these arteries are choked by hardened fatty materials from stored foods, the joints are starved and arthritis develops. Fully explained in the new booklet (third edition) with large clear drawing. Shows the beautiful self-repairing natural design of our joints, and how we hurt them with the wrong food and drink.

Best of all, it is shown that powerful natural forces in our bodies gradually attack and remove non-living matter. When we stop polluting our systems with the wrong foods, these slow but sure natural forces can catch up in their cleaning work. The body can thus become clean again in a few months without drugs or surgery. At last it has been shown which foods form deposits, leaving us all the wonderful FRESH FOODS to enjoy without limit.

You can read all about it in a new easily understood booklet through which thousands have found relief. This booklet tells how to select FRESH foods so as to help clear arteries and joints without surgery. How to reduce high cholesterol and blood pressure without drugs or weakening diets. How you can enjoy a full diet of tasty FRESH food and grow strong while your circulation and arthritis improve. A typical reader said with a happy smile: "Sixty days ago I needed plastic arteries. But I went on the new diet instead, and now I mow my whole yard without resting. My heart and leg pains are gone. Blood pressure and cholesterol dropped to normal. And those fatty yellow lumps in my eyelids faded away!"

This booklet gives clear instructions on the delicious FRESH FOOD DIET. How to relieve suffering, save on food, and reduce kitchen work. Effects of better food on face and figure. New easy ways to cook well for one or two. Diabetes control. Real sweets for diabetics. Ear noises, deafness, and dizziness. Indigestion, acid stomach, and general health aids. Pictures of arteries and joints. A new practical approach that really works. Fully guaranteed: may be returned for refund if you are not satisfied. Over 40,000 satisfied customers. Very popular, now in a new third edition with four pages added. Special prices on quantity orders.
