

Outnumbered; Battling Tanks From Syria

Heavy Casualties For Jordanian Army

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Royal Jordanian army forces were outnumbered and taking heavy casualties today in battles with tanks from Syria in Irbid, Jordan's second largest city, Radio Amman reported.

Israeli military informants in Tel Aviv said they had received information that Irbid, about 50 miles north of Amman, had fallen to a force of Soviet-built tanks that entered Jordan on Sunday in the second of two thrusts from Syria.

The Jordanian broadcast said two brigades of tanks converged on Irbid in support of Palesti-an guerrillas holding the city's center in the fifth day of their war against King Hussein's government in Amman.

The Amman broadcast exhorted troops of the 40th Royal Tank Brigade in Irbid to "hold fast and teach the heretic rulers of Syria a lesson in heroism." The Syrians denied their forces had entered Jordan.

King Hussein himself went on the radio later, accusing the Syrians of hatching a plot that would allow Israel to occupy all of Jordan.

"But Jordan is defended by lions," the young king declared. He praised the 12,000 Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war and this was taken to mean he was appealing indirectly to them to intervene on Jordan's behalf. They had been encamped near Irbid before the fighting began.

The Iraqis are reported to have moved away from the battle zone but allowed Jordanian tanks to pass through their lines.

The Baath Socialist regimes of Iraq and Syria are locked in a bitter ideological dispute.

The 34-year-old monarch claimed Syria's leaders withdrew tanks from the cease-fire line with Israel in the Golan Heights in order to strike against Jordan.

Hussein contended his forces had just about ended the uprising by Palestinian guerrillas—who opposed his agreement to enter peace talks with Israel—when "the real imperialist agents, the rulers of Syria, staged their treacherous aggression against us."

Syrian President Nureddin Atassi denied that his country's troops had crossed the border after the first of two invasion claims by Amman, and Damascus Radio reiterated the denial today.

The official Syrian government statement also demanded that the United States withdraw its 6th Fleet units from the eastern Mediterranean Sea.

The guerrilla command, in broadcasts from Damascus and Baghdad, claimed to have fought off continual Jordanian tank and artillery assaults on Irbid prior to the reported Syrian intervention.

A message from Jordanian army leader Field Marshal Habis Majali praised the Jordanian 40th Brigade for successfully resisting superior enemy forces and "holding fast in the face of the aggressors, as fast as the steel of your tanks."

Majali said: "You are standing alone against a mass attack unleashed on you by the rulers of Syria, who could not hold for two hours in the Golan Heights in 1967." It was a reference to the easy Israeli victory against the Syrians in the six-day war.

In Washington, Secretary of State William P. Rogers, calling the reported incident an "irresponsible and imprudent intervention of Syria into Jordan," demanded that the alien forces be removed. He urged the Soviet Union to press Syria for withdrawal.

Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba proposed a summit conference of Arab states in Cairo to thrash out a Jordanian solution, and several, including Egypt, had accepted. But Cairo sources said Sunday the Syrian invasion ended chances for such a meeting.

Cairo took two positions on the conflict Sunday:

Hussein should intervene immediately to ensure compliance with a cease-fire plan worked out by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and reportedly accepted by the government and guerrilla forces.

Iraq's ruling Baath party tricked the guerrillas into continuing to fight after their leaders accepted the truce.

Nasser sent Hussein two messages accusing the royalist troops of disregarding the cease-fire. If Hussein doesn't stop his men, Nasser warned, "dangerous consequences" might result.

Hussein answered over Radio Amman that shortly after he ordered his troops to hold their fire, "the other side openly shelled for hours my own residence." The royal summer palace outside Amman was shelled Saturday night, but the king was away.

He said, however, that negotiations are under way which "we hope will lead to peace," and that Gen. Mohamed Sadek, Cairo envoy to Amman, will be invited to join in. Sadek carried the Nasser initiative to Hussein and Yasir Arafat, leader of the Al Fatah guerrillas and the Palestinian central committee.

The newspaper Al Ahram, which usually reflects the Egyptian government's thinking, said the Baathists in Iraq—which opposed the cease-fire between Israel and the Arab states—used a breakdown in commando communications to sabotage implementation of the Nasser truce plan.

The newspaper said the rebels' broadcast equipment became inoperative and Arafat was unable to broadcast word of his acceptance of the cease-fire to the forces in the field. The Baathists broadcast over Baghdad Radio, an official guerrilla voice during the civil war, that Arafat had refused Nasser.

Guerrillas, hearing this, resumed firing, which forced royalist troops to retaliate the newspaper said.

Libya warned that Hussein had 24 hours to stop the fighting or "the Libyan Arab republic, prompted by its national duty, will take suitable individual action."

However, Libya did not indicate whether it would intervene with force.

The declaration from Tripoli also renewed the commitment of Libya and Algeria "to prevent renewal of clashes between the two sides." They are members of a permanent Arab commission with Sudan and Egypt to keep peace in Jordan.

Lebanese newspaper reports said casualties of four days of fighting were as high as 10,000 and other reports said wounded persons were dying on the streets of Amman for want of medical aid. Communications were down, and only a pooled news dispatch reached the West Sunday from correspondents encoined in the Intercontinental Hotel. They have been there since the battle of Amman broke out Thursday, the morning after Hussein installed Field Marshal Habis Majali as military governor.

The dispatch told of near desperation for Amman's 500,000 residents, with no water, gas or electricity. It said Hussein's forces were wearing down the commandos, who are adept at street fighting, but that some were hiding, sniping, holding out in hopes the Syrian forces could rescue them.

The dispatch said rockets and heavy machine guns have been at work steadily, tearing the city apart, and citizens venturing from their homes for food risked attracting army bullets.

About a dozen foreigners sheltered at the Shepherds Hotel were brought to the Intercontinental, where they told newsmen of three days and nights of bullet-riddled terror, soldiers and guerrillas dashing through the hotel firing weapons.

There was no word of 54 hostages, including 38 Americans, from three international airliners hijacked by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. The hostages are believed in small groups at houses around Jordan.

Medics from an international Red Cross mercy flight set up two units at a hospital near a refugee camp. "The conditions they had to work under were appalling," the source said.

The flight returned empty, although its crew had expected to bring some of the wounded to Beirut for treatment. But apparently conditions in Amman were so bad the wounded could not be moved to a hospital, let alone out of the country. Each medical unit included a surgeon and seven specialized nurses.

Uphold Leggett

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Board of Elections today rejected a contention that Clarence Gene Leggett is not eligible to run as an American party candidate for Congress in North Carolina's 1st District.

Leggett's candidacy had been challenged by the current leadership of the state party, which is embroiled in a factional fight for control of the organization.

Walter Green, party chairman, argued at a hearing before the board Sept. 10, that Leggett was not legally a member of the party.

In its ruling, the elections board said it found Leggett had first registered as an American party member Jan. 15 in Pitt County, and that he registered in Craven County April 1, also as a member of the party.

The elections board conducted its hearing after the Craven County Board of Elections upheld Leggett's registration. Leggett, of New Bern, is opposing Democratic incumbent Walter Jones and Republican Frank Everett in the Nov. 3 election.

Balloonists Try Atlantic Ocean Flight

U.S. Officials Hoping Urgent Appeals Might Avert Broadened War

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The reported Syrian intervention in the Jordanian civil war appears to increase the possibility of direct U.S. involvement in the conflict. But U.S. officials hope urgent appeals to Russia, Syria and other nations will avert broadened fighting.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers condemned the alleged invasion Sunday as "irresponsible and imprudent" and warned: "This action carries with it the danger of a broadened conflict."

"We call upon the Syrian government to end immediately this intervention in Jordan," he said, "and we urge all other concerned governments to impress upon the government of Syria the necessity of withdrawing the forces which have invaded Jordan."

The Nixon administration's initial reaction took the form of the Rogers denunciation and warning and a direct request to the Soviet government, plus diplomatic appeals to other governments, to put pressure on Syria loon crossing of the Atlantic began at 1:40 p.m. Sunday and by the time dusk fell the craft had floated east to the vicinity of Boston.

Overnight the balloon drifted into the vicinity of Halifax, N.S. The balloonists were reported in "good shape."

Making the flight are Rod Anderson, 32, a New York commodities broker; his wife, television actress Pamela Brown, 28; and Malcolm Brighton, 32, of Farnham, England, an aeronautical engineer and amateur balloonist.

"They ride in a fiberglass gondola 12 feet in diameter and 4½ feet deep, swung beneath the 80-foot-high, helium-filled balloon that is a brilliant orange topped by yellow and white stripes.

Before leaving from a cow pasture in this Long Island community the three balloonists broke open champagne and christened their craft, "The Free Life."

Brighton, said he saw no reason why the flight should not succeed but declined to predict where they might land. "We'll take any inch of land we can get," he said.

If successful, the flight will eclipse the present balloon distance record of 1,896 miles set by an eight-man German team in 1914, as well as mark the first manned transatlantic balloon crossing.

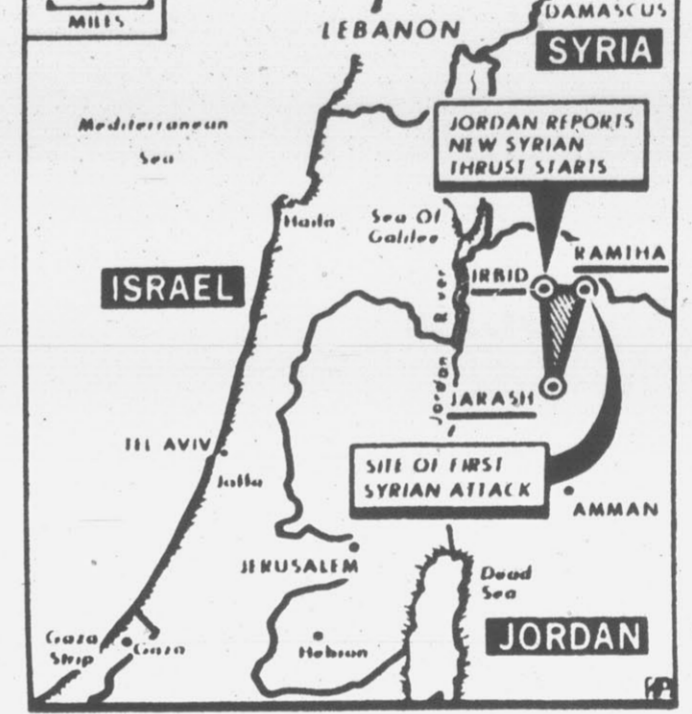

There have been several unsuccessful attempts at transatlantic balloon crossings, beginning in 1873.

The present flight is expected to take from 6 to 16 days, depending upon the weather. For supplies, The Free Life carries bottles of champagne and cognac, assorted food, a guitar, 5½ pounds of books, survival packs, cameras, water, a portable toilet, sandbags and a life raft.

The United States has powerful naval forces including aircraft carriers in the Eastern Mediterranean and late last week, Nixon ordered the 6th Fleet there reinforced by units from the Atlantic fleet.

His move was described officially by the Pentagon as a "precautionary step" related to the possibility that Americans might have to be evacuated from Jordan.

The State Department did not say what other countries in addition to Russia were being asked to join in putting pressure on Syria, but Rogers' public statement constituted the kind of appeal which U.S. ambassadors in friendly capitals all over the world would normally bring promptly to the attention of the foreign offices.

Gunboat Fleet In Action

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese naval task force has launched a major operation in Cambodia along the Bassac River about 35 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, a military spokesman reported today.

The operation, involving scores of gunboats and more than 1,000 Vietnamese marines, started Saturday but was not disclosed until today for security reasons, he said.

Informed sources said there had been little significant action to date.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported one minor skirmish Sunday when a Marine battalion clashed with North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops along Route 30 near Phum Taey.

British Confirm Development Of Synthetic Leaf

By PETER MUCCINI
LONDON (AP) — British scientists claimed today that they have developed a synthetic tobacco pleasant to smoke and less hazardous to the health than natural tobacco.

They plan to market it but don't know when.

A spokesman for Imperial Chemical Industries, the giant combine which is working on the material with Imperial Tobacco Ltd., said: "We have a number of research staff who have been smoking NSM (new smoking material) either on its own or blended with normal tobacco. I understand that it tastes not at all unpleasant."

The spokesman said NSM has been in the testing stage for two years.

"NSM smoke contains less of a number of compounds that are suspected of biological activity which are present in ordinary tobacco smoke," he added.

The spokesman said the biological activity could mean lung cancer, bronchitis and heart ailments.

NSM is a synthetic material based on carbohydrate substances such as cellulose which is the major constituent of tobacco and most other vegetable matter.

The researchers said it was too soon to say whether it would be cheaper to produce than normal tobacco.

"But it will certainly save the British tobacco industry a large amount in import costs as we would have to buy less tobacco from such sources as the United States," a spokesman for ICI said.

British Confirm Development Of Synthetic Leaf

He explained: if introduced, NSM will be blended with natural tobacco. It will be up to manufacturers whether it will be used in pipes as well as cigarettes.

ICI claims that NSM is being investigated for its economic virtues of being possibly cheaper than natural tobacco and not because of health scares.

The British Treasury, which already imposes a stiff tax on tobacco, has made it clear that it will tax NSM at the same rate.

Reports Due Today On Everett Tests; Said 'Progressing'

R. Frank Everett, Republican Congressional candidate in the North Carolina First District, remains hospitalized at Pitt Memorial Hospital after suffering a mild heart attack.

Jerry Scott, campaign manager for Everett, said this morning that "tests have been run, and I understand the doctors are to give a report of the results to his wife today."

Scott indicated that it is not known how long Everett would be hospitalized, but that this "will probably be determined after the test results are known."

"In the meantime," he continued, "we are very optimistic and will continue the campaign. There is absolutely no idea of considering Everett's withdrawing from the campaign."

Everett was admitted to Pitt Memorial Friday for a check

Ervin Joining In Court Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., planned to file a friend of the court brief with the Supreme Court today urging overturn of a lower court order requiring busing in the desegregation of Charlotte-Mecklenburg County schools.

An aide said Ervin would file the brief on behalf of the Charlotte Classroom Teachers Association and that Ervin would ask to be permitted to argue the case personally.

Reduces Prime Interest Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth largest bank, said today it was cutting its prime interest rate to 7½ per cent from 8 per cent.

The bank said the rate cut was effective immediately.

The prime rate is the rate banks charge their largest and most creditworthy customers such as large corporations.

While First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Co. of Philadelphia and several smaller banks have cut their prime rates in recent weeks, Morgan Guaranty is the first major New York bank to do so.

Golda Asks For Financial Help

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Premier Golda Meir flew home today after a parting appeal to American Jews to support programs of financial aid for her country.

"The only thing that matches your outpouring of love and devotion for Israel is the love and devotion of the Israeli for you," she told a dinner crowd of 3,000 at the New York Hilton Hotel Sunday night.

"If we do not fight for our freedom and for our safety, nobody else will," she said. "We have seen too many little people in other countries discover this bitter truth too late."

The $20-a-plate dinner was sponsored by the United Jewish Appeal and the Israel Bond Organization. Another 40,000 persons in 19 other cities heard Mrs. Meir's appeal via closed

Prison Confinement Said Unnecessarily Long

RALEIGH (AP) — A nationally known criminologist says the major problems facing correctional systems, including North Carolina's, are unnecessarily tight confinement of prisoners and unnecessarily long sentences.

"In general, confinement is a hopelessly useless attempt at criminal rehabilitation," said Sol Rubin, chief counsel for the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

Rubin spoke Saturday at a meeting of Gov. Bob Scott's Penal Study Commission.

Rubin told the group not more than 100 of the 800 prisoners at Central Prison should be confined there.

"Though I have not had a study of the system at Central Prison, I can safely say it would prove to be much like many others I have studied."

"The unnecessary maximum security confinement of such large numbers of inmates is a prime problem facing correctional systems," he said. "Fairly simple psychological testing would enable a proper diagnosis of the prison population, thereby reducing those conditions."

Rubin also said sentences are too long. "In most cases, offenders who are not a menace to society should not be given sentences over five years," he said.

"Long sentences have proved not to be a significant factor in (detering) criminal activity," he said.

He said the exception is "white collar crime"—those offenses committed by middle class citizens in the course of business and professional activities.

"Middle class citizens fear long imprisonments," Rubin said, "and there is evidence that this fear prevents offenses in that area. We have found no evidence that the same principles work with other segments of society."

The Penal Study Commission was formed in August by the North Carolina Bar Association at Scott's request. Ralph N. Strayhorn, president-elect of the Bar Association, is chairman of the group.

The committee is charged with studying the state's prison system and recommending any needed reforms.

Pot Penalties Still Too High

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Recently you printed a long list of penalties for being caught with marijuana, and since you made no comment, I assume that you believe these penalties are fair and just.

DISAPPOINTED READER

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: You are assuming a lot, my friend. I frequently publish letters without adding my comment. And many letters express views contrary to mine. I simply let others have their say. Why not? I don't assume that because someone disagrees with me, he is wrong and I am right.

I published the legal penalties for being caught with marijuana because many are still unaware of what they have to lose. I also happen to feel that the punishment does not fit the "crime."

DEAR ABBY: Why do so many people say that "pot" is harmless? Our daughter began using it in January. She went on to mescaline in March, started seeing a psychiatrist in May, and was in a mental hospital in July. She really had no intentions of getting involved with drugs, but her nearest and dearest friend, a girl I liked and trusted, got her started. Now the mother of this girl says, "You know, I've been reading up on marijuana, and it's really not so bad. It's no worse than tobacco or alcohol."

What can I possibly say to her? And to all the people who are spreading this plague with their permissiveness?

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: While the most reliable authorities tell us that marijuana is no more addictive (habit-forming) than tobacco or alcohol, excessive use of pot can be as destructive to some individuals as excessive drinking and smoking is to others. There is no way of knowing who can "handle" such things and who can not. Some people who drink like fishes and smoke like chimneys live to be 90. Others become alcoholics in their twenties and die of lung cancer in their thirties. It's a gamble. And of course the only winners are those who stay out of the game.

DEAR ABBY: Just who says "pot" is harmless? From personal experience I know it can cause ulcers, insomnia, heartache, financial problems, and the desire to commit suicide. Not to all, but to a significant percentage of those who are caught.

I am 22 years old. I threw newspapers all thru junior high. I bagged groceries thru high school, and left for college with a pat on the back from my proud father. After graduation I taught school for one year and was considered to be an outstanding teacher.

While home on vacation, a friend invited me to a "groovy party." He said there would be pot there, and even the I disapprove of pot, I was too weak in character to say no.

The next thing I knew, a policeman's flashlight was shining in my eyes. I was sitting on the same blanket with a bag of pot beside me. Now, 10 days later, I have lost everything; my fiancée, my opportunity for Coast Guard O. C. S. [I was to leave in two weeks!]

After a decade of pulling myself up by my bootstraps, career opportunities are now limited. It saps my desire to live.

My "friend" consoles me by saying that the law is outdated and will be changed "soon," and any society that punishes for such a thing is "sick." This all may be true, but I am the felon and I have to pay the price. Society, be it sick or well, has certain laws which should be obeyed until they are changed.

Now, I ask myself, "What was I doing there?" I am supposed to be a mature and intelligent person. I was absolutely stupid!

If you publish this, Abby, maybe just one person who is tempted to do what I did will read it and remember it. Between the lines can also be read the sorrow I have caused myself and my family.

Experts Advise Girl Watchers: Don't Be Overt; Appreciative

By LINDA KRAMER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bird watchers spend hours waiting for a glimpse of a rare species, thrill to the sight of a particularly beautiful specimen; have formed societies to give hints to other bird watchers and have written books to catalog their findings.

But for some people there are more thrilling and exciting specimens to be seen when practicing an equally popular pastime — girl watching. They have their own organization, the American Society of Girl Watchers (ASGW), which currently boasts over 50,000 card carrying members.

When someone joins he receives a card identifying him as a certified girl watcher, a pin and a guidebook. The guidebook catalogs types of specimens and points out likely hunting grounds.

"We're a congenial group of individuals who appreciate women," said Andy Ettinger, vice-president of ASGW. "We don't have set meetings. Whenever and wherever two members meet there can be a meeting."

The society, 16 years old, has no formal membership requirements—although there are no recorded female members. The youngest known member is 11, and Ettinger guesses that the oldest ones are probably in their 80s.

"Girl watching is a matter of subtleties," said the former photo-journalist. "A man shouldn't be overtly trying to catch a pretty girl's attention. He should just let her know he's appreciating and complimenting her."

"The Playboy type is more aggressive and obvious. Girl watchers don't believe in foldout paper dolls. We like real live girls better."

The 39-year-old publishing consultant and editor practices what he preaches. His wife, Heather, is a top model with Ford and was one of the first girls chosen to be in the TV commercials called The Girl Watchers. Ettinger said she does not mind his watching girls and occasionally will point out one he's missed.

As for the man watching some women have reportedly been doing, Ettinger doesn't object. "As long as it is done as honestly and discreetly as it should be, there's no harm in it."

"Anyway, it's non-fattening. I've given up my lunch hour, often accidentally, to watch girls."

The seasoned girl watcher feels the present is a prime time for practicing this healthy sport, mainly because of the wide variety and freedom of styles. His own views on what women should wear are rather laissez-faire.

"The idea of girl watching is to liberate woman, not to restrict her," commented Ettinger about fashion. "But she must decide what she feels comfortable and free in." He said that many ASGW members have written in asking the society to take a more militant stand against the midi.

Nor is he worried about the amount of flesh some of the skimpier skirts expose. "Decency is in the eyes of the beholder—as beauty is. You can't legislate it. Each woman should do what is best for her."

His only really big beef about a woman's appearance is the wearing of curlers. "We're having a big stamp out curlers campaign," he said. "Curlers in public are despicable. There's no excuse for it with the availability of electric rollers and other new methods of hair grooming." Hair is of special interest to Ettinger, perhaps because his mother owned a beauty shop. He explained that most girl watchers have an area they prefer—legs, breasts, necks, etc. The society is currently preparing position papers on some of the specialties. Ettinger, head of the committee on hair, said their report would probably deal with hair styles and colors that have appealed to men the most over the ages.

"Hair is part of a woman's armor," said the connoisseur, who personally prefers long locks. "It must be brushed and well-cared for. And I think wigs are a great idea. They give a woman the chance to be several women."

The 'New' Julie Andrews—As Squeekly Clean As Before

By CINDY ADAMS

NEW YORK (WNS) — "Oh, but I'm not such a goody good girl anymore," cried Julie Andrews who, although her icky-poo saccharin roles pay off in heavy sugar, thanks to "Mary Poppins" and "Sound of Music," wants desperately to shake that image of being so sweet you can get diabetes by watching her.

"I think I'm quite different in my new movie, 'Darling Lili,'" said darling Julie. "I have love scenes and I play a spy and I'm really quite a wicked, unwholesome character. And, quite frankly, since my husband (Blake Edwards) directed this film and we're married only a short time, it was really quite difficult the first day. I was to do that bedroom scene with Rock Hudson. Having him direct the action truly hampered me somewhat. The next day, however, the feeling was over and we both got down to business as usual. I mean, it was a job and we both knew it and we had to get it over with, but I freely admit I was quite embarrassed at first about the whole thing."

The commercial for the "new" Julie Andrews being duly noted, the fact is in "Darling Lili," a perfect 1940's type movie sans dirty words, violence and catsup and kitchen-sink reality, the always decorously clothed Julie doesn't make love IN bed but rather ON the bed. And outside the bed, in the living room of the New York hotel suite where I interviewed her over five o'clock tea, she was as razzmatazz and pizzly looking as a counselor at camp. She wore refined pumps, a tidy blue and white suit devoid of jazzy jewelry, small earrings, neat little wedding band and one narrow, thoroughly ladylike little gold bracelet. The makeup, eyeliner included, was minimal, the brown-blond hair was short and tidy, the medium oval nails polished a careful pink. No speck of dirt would DARE settle even on the "new" Julie Andrews.

Sally Superstar?

I'd last interviewed Julie in post—"My Fair Lady" days, in 1962 when she was on Broadway in "Camelot." I asked about the comments that she has since changed into Sally Superstar.

"Well, I do arrive late onto the set sometimes," she smiled, "but that's about it. I'm not temperamental. I don't throw tantrums. I admit I'm not all that sweet and loving in that I do throw a good curse word now and then, but I haven't changed appreciably. At least not for the worse. If anything I've improved myself. I'm perhaps more outgoing. I've gotten rid of the things about me that were perhaps not so good but I don't believe I've added additional negative traits. I certainly have not stopped seeing people I once knew. I haven't done any of those unpleasant things attributed to me.

"It used to hurt when the fan magazines which, unfortunately, always write against me but which, fortunately, don't have much circulation, used to print those false, totally contrived items against me. I can't truly say it doesn't hurt anymore but at least, now, I try to separate fact from fiction. They make up bold lies about how they were in the doctor's office when I visited and what went on or they try to make me out an unfit mother. These are quite painful to read no matter how you steel yourself.

"I'm a very devoted mother to my little girl and, also, to my husband Blake's child. When you're on the set from six in the morning until dinner it is not easy to spend time with your child, that's true. I make up for it on weekends, however, and also I am not always working. When I am not I spend considerable time with seven-year-old Emma Kate. I try to see that she has a very normal upbringing. I permit no interviews at home. I allow no story layouts or photographs of her. I keep her as much as possible in an environment as normal as possible.

"Also, I don't lead a superstar's life, whatever that is. My husband and I lead a very quiet existence. Home right now is in Beverly Hills. We're early to bed and early to rise people. We rarely go out. We don't go to nightclubs. And we get runny noses and headaches and bad days just like everybody else. If people think movie stars live charmed lives without a problem they're quite wrong. We have difficulties just like the next fellow."

Publicity Junket

Julie was East to plug the new film which received adverse publicity during its marathon making because A) Julie became divorced, then involved with and then married to Blake Edwards the director and B) It soared way over budget "due to the fact that we filmed in four countries and we had beastly weather problems" and C) When "Star," her movie on the life of Gertrude Lawrence, debuted last year, she was too busy filming to grace the opening.

"Darling Lili" being her husband's effort, Julie is not now too busy to drumbeat. In fact she's quite eager for it. "I was in on the beginning of this one, right from its inception," she said with her hospital-clean hands properly folded in her un-wrinkled lap. "And it was exciting to see it take form. I've watched the daily rushes whereas I haven't on other pictures. On this one the film was processed in London and it took three days for it to come back to wherever we were on location so, sometimes, we'd be shooting a scene for three days before we found out the camera wasn't working properly; then we'd have to redo it totally. That's quite nerve-racking.

"It all helped put us over budget, too. That, plus thousands of extras standing by and all the expense piling up was the reason they wouldn't let me out for the opening of "Star." It was not my husband's decision solely. It came from up higher."

And is there an authority higher than one's husband? Particularly when he's one's director and one's BRAND NEW husband besides?

Julie grinned. "In the picture business, yes, At home, No!"

'Up And Down' Job Finances Education

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—Linda Hyland, 21, is glad not all elevators are automatic. Because they aren't, she is now a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps.

Miss Hyland suffered the "ups and downs" jokes to work her way through college as an elevator operator and waitress at Tulsa's Petroleum Club.

Now she has a degree in education and the commission. It wasn't the first job the young woman had and she says she still managed to enjoy the fun and fascination of being a coed.

"It wasn't like a magic trick," she says, "and I did have to work hard, but it can be done. Anyone trying to do it must be willing to work before they get started.

"The Petroleum Club was wonderful to me. They worked my schedule around to fit my college hours and let me do all kinds of jobs."

Miss Hyland worked during her high school years, also. She sold doughnuts.

Her ambition is to teach but now, she says, she's going to get in some travel and hopefully some adventure. She reports for duty as a woman Marine in August.

Despite the hours at work, Miss Hyland was on the honor roll most of the four years.

She doesn't think college is out of reach for anyone who wants to try.

"I would say it is possible for anyone to go to college today if they are really willing to work," she says, "and I would encourage anyone to try it if they have learned how to apply themselves." She has one follower. Her sister, Therese, 16.

"I hope she makes it, too," Miss Hyland says.

Warning Given Of Dangers To Infants In Cars

By BOB IRVIN

DETROIT (WNS) — When parents with an infant son or daughter go riding in the family car, it's customary for the mother to hold the baby in her arms. That may be disastrous, especially if the mother fastens the same seat belt around both of them.

This is the answer of safety researchers from the University of Michigan in response to a letter I received from Mrs. Claude Centers, of Livonia, Mich. She wrote:

"Our family bombs around in a Chevy Carry - All (all eight of us). Marianne, four months, sits on my lap in the front seat when dad drives. I put the seat belt around both of us, as I'm afraid that she might fly out of my arms in case of an accident."

"Sunday when we were leaving a friend's cottage for the trip home, our host was quite upset when we buckled in together. He said it was dangerous to put the seat belt around the baby, as she might be crushed and hurt internally by the weight of my body in case of an accident. What is your opinion?"

'Disastrous'

Prof. Donald F. Huelke, of the anatomy department at the University of Michigan Medical School, said "this could be disastrous for a child. Our rule is one seat belt for one individual. You should never put a child on your lap and then put a belt around both of you. A child's anatomy is too soft to withstand the heavy forces from an adult in a crash."

Huelke, who is president of the American Association for Automotive Medicine, said that "in my estimation you should never ever hold a child in the front seat. The children should have their own restraint systems. There are adequate systems on the market which are crash proven."

Huelke mentioned the General Motors infant carrier which retails for $9.95 through GM dealerships. "It will hold a child up to six to eight months of age," he said. "There is also a General Motors safety seat for children and the Ford Tot Guard. These are the best safety devices for children on the market today."

The GM child safety seat has a retail price of $8.95 in the standard version and $18.95 in the deluxe version. Ford is priced about the same.

'Positioners'

Huelke said care should be exercised in buying the baby seats found at most stores. "They are good child positioners; they will hold the child in place but are not very good in a crash," he said. "They aren't as crashworthy as the GM and Ford devices."

The National Highway Safety Bureau, which publishes regulations on new cars and equipment, is now working on a standard for safe child seats. The University of Michigan's Highway Safety Research Institute conducted tests of various child seats for the government.

Herley Robbins, a researcher at the institute who conducted the tests, said "many of these seats have not been designed with safety in mind. Many are designed more as just a comfortable seat. Ford and GM have put some effort into designing their seats."

"In our tests we found that the Ford Tot Guard for the larger child and the GM infant carrier provided quite a degree of potential safety. In addition to these, there was one British seat — called the K. L. Jeenay seat — which was more difficult to install but which also seemed to provide protection."

Huelke, incidentally, is now finishing his ninth year of investigating auto accidents as part of a continuing university research project. It began Nov. 1, 1961, and since then Huelke has visited the scene of hundreds of serious or fatal accidents in an effort to learn how more protection can be provided car occupants.

Long-Term Planning Pays Off

Benefits of long term planning to provide adequate public recreation areas in Greenville is evidenced by the fact the city now has some 120 acres devoted to public recreation uses.

Of this amount of land, some 105 acres are owned directly by the city while the remainder is either under lease from other public bodies or on loan from individual owners. The areas, scattered in various parts of the city, range in size from two 25-acre areas—Green Springs Park and the recently acquired Evans property—to areas of less than one acre each.

The important thing is that each of the recreation areas helps meet the growing need for a little elbow room for citizens in a growing community like Greenville. Not all of the areas are developed to their potential. For the most part, however, a sound development program has been followed by the local Recreation Commission which also has been largely responsible over the years for a program of acquiring property for recreation purposes.

In spite of the fact that Greenville now has more than 120 acres of land for recreation use, there is need for continued planning and continued acquisition of property in an orderly manner. The city is growing not just in population, but in area as well. Strategic location of neighborhood recreation areas is just as important an aspect of a sound recreation program as is the acquisition of large areas where many formal programs may be carried out. As the city continues to expand in size, additional areas must be acquired in the paths of expansion.

While it is comforting to note that the city's recreation program continues to grow both in the size and number of areas as well as programs, there is no time for complacency. The demand of local residents upon the city for recreation areas and programs will continue to grow in the years ahead. If the city is to adequately meet those demands, the long term planning, coupled with a sound development program, must be continued.

No Outsiders, They Just Go

GERTON — This summer's figures are not complete, but more than half of the Upper Hickory Nut Gorge population either has or will soon pack their bags, lock their front doors and drive, fly or float to Somewhere Else.

Such is the nature of communities like Gerton. The population rises and falls in rhythm like a sleeping mountain giant, from as few as 80 people in the snow-covered still of winter to as many as 250 in July.

These are not weekenders, overnighters or tourists in the usual sense of the word. They are bona fide residents whose stay each year may range from one to seven or eight months.

Gerton isn't large. Its population, for the most part, doesn't even claim the community as home on the voting books. Yet, it has managed to nail down just about every type of Community Development Program contest up for grabs in the past several years—some more than once. Awards for community organization and improvement, youth programs, better family living, increased income and most recently roadside beautification—for the third time in five years.

Everybody's Just Folks — There are no "outsiders" in Upper Hickory Nut Gorge; just people, working together, some summer people, some year-round residents.

The summer people come from Florida, Washington, D. C., South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas—all over. The first begin arriving around Easter. The big surge comes in May as schools let out. Then, in the fall, the tide flows out again.

On the long downward plunge of Highway 74 from the apex of the 3,000-foot Hickory Nut Gap there are gift shops, eating places, inns, tourist courts and a few small stores along the roadside. There are no rail stations, no banks, large industry, department or chain stores.

Small one-family industries create much of the mountain handicraft displayed in the retail shops. Interested travelers can stop, visit with the families and watch them work.

Farm produce is offered by a score of sometime merchants—apples, watermelon, peaches, and something unique to the Gorge, Cuban grapes.

A Gorge Speciality
These grapes, so the story goes, were brought into the Gorge 50 years or more ago by a traveler from Cuba who first tried them in Florida, then moved to the Tar Heel mountains. Experts who have seen and sampled the rich deep wine grapes with their tart, thick skins and thin sweet core have been unable to give them any other name. They are simply Cuban grapes.

One of those grape arbors is at the rear of Gerton's Post Office, a building as unusual and attractive as the Gorge it serves. The postmaster is Mrs. Varina R. Huntley, chief, cook and janitor of the Post Office for 31 years.

The Post Office itself is simply a small, divided room attached to the Huntley home. But it offers all the services of large post offices—including a large supply of P. O. boxes for summer residents. Its grounds, with almost every type of flower and shrub found in these parts have won a score of beautification prizes.

Want to know the best way to put up corn? Or directions to Chimney Rock, or a six-cent stamp on Sunday? Just ask Mrs. Huntley.

Apples And Talk
Down the highway a city block is the Hubert Miller produce stand where the retired plumber dispenses apples this time of year along with a few other items and plain conversation. At 71, Miller is a newcomer, only lived here about six years. He and his wife, Aline, grow plenty of grapes in an arbor behind the produce stand. This year, he said, "they bought them right off the vine."

Chester Rhodes runs a service station across the highway. His wife runs things at the grocery and sandwich shop next door. The couple also has a small, neat motel. Ask Chester how he came to settle here. He'll tell you he became dissatisfied with his job as a mechanic in a nearby town, and started a small garage where the service station is now.

"I don't work on cars any more. They've gotten so complicated...you need so many things to work on them right," he said.

Blood Bank Helps All Area, But Pitt Most

Let's spell it out one more time. The blood bank depends on us: the people of Pitt County.

Pitt County has been told it is the largest user of blood and blood derivatives in eastern North Carolina.

This makes it even more imperative that Pitt Countians share in the "deposits" to an even greater extent than any other county in our section.

Did you ever think that you, personally, had a stake in the emergence of Pitt as the medical center of eastern N. C.?

Well—you do, you have, and you will. Be there, Tuesday. Any time between 11:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

The real burden is on the pace-setters; that is YOU. Untold scores of lives are dependant upon you; untold developments affecting the whole concept of medical care in North Carolina may well depend on that "extra" pint of blood you give.

Does it hurt? No. Does it help? Yes. Where? — The Greenville Moose Lodge.

Stevenson On Shaky Grounds

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
CHICAGO — Both overwhelming strength today and potential for utter disaster tomorrow in the Senate campaign of State Treasurer Adlai E. Stevenson III are dramatically evident among lower middle-income whites on Chicago's Northwest Side.

Our interviews, conducted with the Oliver Quayle polling organization, revealed this irony inside the area's aging little one-family homes: although the voters are ideologically in tune with the Agnewistic ideology of Republican Sen. Ralph T. Smith, they support liberal Democrat Stevenson against him—at least for now.

The results of 56 interviews we conducted with the aid of Mrs. Ilene Ivins, Quayle's Chicago supervisor, are one-sided: Smith, 36 percent; Stevenson, 64 percent.

But the Stevenson-Smith statistics are meaningful only if modified by attitudes here. These voters have not at all accepted Stevenson's argument that inflation and unemployment are dominant issues. Their hard-felt concerns, instead, are crime, racial disturbances, and campus violence. Such concerns propelled President Nixon to victory in this nominally Democratic area in 1968 and would do so again in a Presidential election today.

Here, then, are the limitations of Richard Nixon's strategy for building a new Republican majority in the nation. Seemingly, a popular candidate can transcend ideology. But the jury is still out in Illinois. Stevenson's majority among middle-class voters has so shaky a foundation that it might collapse by Nov. 3.

The nature of Stevenson's popularity is typified by a retired grocery-store owner who voted for Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968 but now is switching to Mr. Nixon because "he's trying to end the war." But for Senator, he likes Stevenson. "I go according to his father's record, which was pretty good."

Indeed, Stevenson's only visible political asset among the silent majority is identification with his famous father, particularly among older voters. An elderly sound engineer, who supports George Wallace for President, likes Stevenson for Senator because "his father was a great man, and so I would vote for his son."

In contrast, Smith so far remains faceless to these voters one year after his appointment to the vacancy left by Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen's death. While our voters gave Stevenson a 71 percent favorable job rating, 32 of the 56 interviewed could give no opinion whatever about how well Smith has done in the Senate.

But in the issues Smith has an asset of incalculable potentiality. Our interviews showed 73 percent feel

Strength For Today

GOOD BEHAVIOR
One of the inspiring descriptions of Jesus is that He went about doing good (Acts 10:38). He spoke words of wisdom that have never been equalled. He started a movement in human history so important that humanity has agreed to date time from the birth of this Jesus of Nazareth. He stands out, a more stalwart and appealing figure today than He did two thousand years ago.

The Christian Church is having a pretty hard time of it right now, but that is not because of any lack in the nature, ministry, teaching or ideals of the Founder of the Christian Religion. The fault is ours. We are too selfish to live up to what we believe. We like money too well and pleasure even more. We think we are a lot smarter than we really are. We could easily wreck the world without folly and we may if so-called "scientific advance" puts more lethal weapons in our hands. It is conceivable that we might do more than blow ourselves off the planet—we might easily destroy the planet itself, if arms get in the wrong hands or somebody some day presses the wrong button or some empty-headed nobody feeds the wrong information into the computer—all could happen.

So let us not get too conceited about ourselves. We live in a grand world, in a wonderful nation, in the most progressive age humanity has known. But watch out—there may be rapids and falls ahead—precipices.

This is an age when the thing we most need is to learn how to behave ourselves. By Earl L. Douglass

The Black-Brain Drain

WASHINGTON — One of the reasons President Nixon's Black Capitalism Program has been a bust is that there is a black brain-drain in this country, and it's getting more serious all the time.

A black businessman told me the other day that every time he trains somebody in his organization, a white company comes along and hires him away.

"All that black businesses are doing these days is training black so they can be grabbed by white employers, who are willing to pay anything to get a qualified black in the organization.

"A few months ago, I sent my advertising manager over to a magazine to discuss a campaign. He never came back. The magazine people hired him on the spot.

"Every time a white person comes to the office to discuss business with me, he walks out with one of my secretaries.

"I've had girls come in here typing 15 words a minute. As soon as they hit their stride, they're kidnapped by Xerox or IBM or

AT & T, and I have to start all over with a 15-word-a-minute apprentice."

"You got problems," I told him.

"I'm afraid to send my people out to see customers, and I'm afraid to let by customers come to my office. It's a helluva way to run a business."

The businessman told me he hasn't the only one feeling

Other Editors Say Pistol-Packer

(The Charlotte News)

The saga of Dennis Dale McLain, alias Pecks Bad Boy, continues apace. Barely had Our Hero recovered from a one-week suspension imposed on him for the high crime of dunking two sportswriters in ice water (undoubtedly a fate they richly deserved), when he was summoned to the office of the Lord High Commissioner of Baseball, Mr. Bowie Kuhn, and sat down for the rest of the season.

On this occasion the offense was neither consorting with mafioso nor liquefying journalists, but a twofold crime: unhappy relations of unspecified nature with the Detroit management, and "information that on occasions McLain has carried a gun." Frankly, we are at a loss to see what all the noise is about.

After all, isn't it the constitutional right of every American, from Dagwood Bumstead to flaky right-handed pitchers, to detest his boss and attempt every subterfuge against him? If our Hero had the gall to cuss out his general manager or whomever, he was merely displaying a bit of the healthy disrespect indigenous to the American character since the Whiskey Rebellion.

As for the gun-toting, that can easily be explained. Though some may think the pistol merely a substitute for a missing fastball, the fact is that Dennis Dale was only exercising another of his constitutional rights. As contributors to Public Pulse are constantly reminding us, it is the citizen's duty to help maintain a well-regulated militia. All the other Tigers may be unpatriotic and shun guns, but in the repentant spirit with which he has been imbued since his (first) suspension ended, Our Hero has been displaying his fierce love of country.

That a man could be suspended from his job for patriotic acts is shocking indeed. What has happened to the National Pastime? If a man can't cuss out his boss and pack a lethal weapon, what freedoms remain? Why, instead of giving Dennis Dale McLain the boot, they ought to name him Most Valuable Player.

the black brain-drain. "I have a black friend in the franchise business. He was prevailed upon to open a drive-in restaurant. They told him they would give him all the money and help he needed. But everytime he gets somebody good, the franchise company makes the black trainee an assistant manager and puts him in charge of another restaurant. My friend feels like he's running a restaurant school.

"I have another friend who has a black law-firm. He's afraid to send one of his younger lawyers out to argue a case with a white law office because he knows they'll offer the black lawyer a partnership in the firm. How is black capitalism supposed to work if they keep swiping all our skilled people from us?"

"I guess President Nixon didn't think of that," I said. "They're not just doing it in business. They're stealing all the good black professors from black colleges and universities, too. Everytime a white school hears about a good black professor at a black school, they offer him twice his salary and the chairmanship of a department."

Your Years Show

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Yep, your middle age is showing if—
Your enemies start telling you how well you're looking.
When you bend over quickly, everything goes blurry for a moment—and when you straighten back your face looks like a paled beet.
Justice is what you think the other fellow should have. As for yourself, you prefer mercy.
It vaguely annoys you when you read about how much money pro basketball and football stars get. What, all that dough just for playing games?

It hurts your conscience to sit on the front porch and watch your wife cut the grass—but it doesn't hurt so much you can't stand it.

Whenever you hear the price of anything, you sigh, point your nose toward the sky, and begin to bellow about how nothing you have is worth what you have to pay for it.

Nostalgia rules your mind. If you see anything that doesn't remind you of something you saw before in your life, it doesn't interest you very much. They sure don't build cars now like they did in the old days, do they?

You get thrifty in small ways. You save broken shoelaces and leave food leftovers in the refrigerator until they spoil—just because you hate to throw anything away you might need later.

It used to seem like a wasted week if you didn't play poker at least one night with the guys, and come sneaking home at 3:30 in the morning. Now you rarely play more than once a month, and well before midnight you find yourself yawning and looking at your watch.

Your arguments with your wife become fewer and less strident. After all, you concede, there may be a few things she is right about, and anyway it takes less energy to listen to her than to fight back.

It makes your hackles rise to hear anybody under the age of 30 express an opinion in public. What could anybody that young know about the real facts of life?

The sofa needs to be reupholstered because you've been taking more naps on it lately than the family cat.

The pretty secretary in your office who used to bring you a single red rose on your birthday now just silently hands you two aspirin tablets and a paper cup full of water.

You know now who your true friends are, and in moments of utter honesty you wonder if you seem as dull to them as they do to you.

The more credit cards you stuff into your wallet, the more you wish it contained real money.

You haven't learned the words to a new love song in a decade, and you have forgotten the words to most of the ones you learned when younger.

Now and then you subconsciously ask yourself, "Where has the time gone? When does the fun begin?"

Yep, you may not think of yourself as middle aged—but your years are showing.

Jumbo Jet Wingtips Make Hazardous Turbulence

By JOHN S. LANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has discovered that wingtips of the new jumbo jets are creating tornado-like winds in the sky capable of tearing apart light aircraft and hurling other jetliners toward the ground.

The potential hazards of the funnel-shaped winds spinning off the wings of the 747s and C5s had been underrated, said Federal Aviation Administration officials familiar with a series of flight tests now being concluded.

The tests showed, for example, that the swirling winds trail behind the huge planes for many miles and do not readily dissipate at high altitudes. They disclosed, too, that the invisible turbulence can endanger passenger airliners as well as small planes.

Because of the winds — called wake turbulence or wingtip vortices — the FAA has ordered a five-mile spacing at all times between the giant jets and aircraft weighing less than 300,000 pounds.

There have been no cases reported of planes crashing after flying into the turbulence generated by the jumbo jets.

However, records compiled by the National Transportation Safety Board from 1964 through 1969 reveal 98 cases where wake turbulence generated by smaller jetliners was a cause or contributing factor in crashes of light aircraft.

These crashes caused 20 deaths and 54 serious injuries.

Wingtip vortices have been a recognized phenomenon for years. All planes cause them to some degree. But, said Richard Sliff, deputy director of the FAA's flight standards service, "We didn't know the extent of the turbulence until we undertook this testing program. We were fully aware of wake turbulence but we didn't know its intensity."

The tests showed that small aircraft which penetrate the wingtip vortices within three miles of the giant aircraft can be forced into a sudden roll of 75 degrees.

"In other words," said the FAA's William M. Flener, director of air traffic service, "what we're saying is that under certain circumstances a light aircraft would break up structurally."

However, the FAA's chief of regulation and procedures, Robert Martin, said he does not believe that a plane flying into a powerful vortex would break up or crash.

The FAA measures the 747's vortex strength as 7,700 feet squared per second and the C5A's as 7,260 feet squared per second. Agency officials translate this to wind speeds of 80 to 90 miles per hour.

The power of these vortices is nearly double that of the 707 jetliner which is listed in Safety Board records as the generator of crash-causing turbulence in six cases in a three-year period.

The vortex of the planned SST (supersonic transport) is estimated by the FAA at 11,200 feet squared per second — half again more powerful than that of the 747s.

The power of a vortex is demonstrated in a film — not yet shown publicly — taken by the FAA during flight tests this year at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

FAA and Boeing Aircraft Corp. pilots landing a two-engine 737 jetliner 1.7 miles behind a 747 jumbojet deliberately flew into the preceding plane's vortex.

At 60 feet above the runway the 737 suddenly jerked into a 28-degree bank. The right wing dipped almost to the runway and the plane yawed abruptly leftward. Without exceptional pilots at the control, FAA officials said, the plane would have crashed.

There are reports that an F104 fighter plane used in the tests was flipped upside down when the pilot flew into the vortex of one of the giant jets.

Asked about this, Al Morrissey of FAA's Flight Standards Service, said: "The F104, having a short wingspan, did experience rather drastic results as a result of vortices. Not only the F104 but other light planes were rolled out, pushed out of the vortices. During maneuvers some equipment was shaken up and some pilots were shaken up."

But Morrissey emphasized that these were cases of test pilots deliberately positioning their planes in the vortex, deliberately holding their planes there and deliberately flying deeper into the spinning winds.

"This is quite different from every day operations where nobody would purposely go in and stay there," he says.

FAA officials say the wingtip vortices are most dangerous during landings and takeoffs when large numbers of aircraft are concentrated in limited areas. But they say that requiring several-minute intervals between takeoffs and landings allows crosswinds time to break up the vortices.

The agency does not consider the problem to be as great at high altitudes, although the tests revealed that — contrary to long-held belief — vortices of big jets do not readily dissipate when formed at 30,000 feet and above where most jetliners cruise.

FAA officials cannot say precisely how long the vortices last at high altitudes, but estimates range from a few minutes to half an hour.

Given the longer time and jetliner cruising speeds of 500 miles an hour, this means the twisting winds could stretch out behind the jets for 250 miles.

At present, about 65 of the 747s have been delivered to airlines and about 200 are on order. The Air Force is operating six C5As, and eventually will have 81.

Opine Soviet's Hard Line May Wreck SALT

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration source says the U.S.-Soviet arms curb talks — a showpiece of President Nixon's Era of Negotiations policy — may fail if the Kremlin pursues a hard-line policy.

Speaking under rules barring a direct quotation, the source said of the strategic arms limitation talks — SALT:

"We can't say that it will succeed, but we can say that if they fail it will be as a result of a political decision, on the basis that the Soviets have decided to adopt a hard-line.

These remarks, made to newsmen in Chicago and released by the White House over the weekend, contrasted in tone with earlier administration statements. President Nixon, for example, said at a May 8 news conference:

"We're still far apart, but I will predict now that there will be an agreement, and when that agreement comes, it will be of great significance."

And last month the officials told another group he was extremely optimistic about the SALT prospects. But speaking in Chicago he said he is now cautiously optimistic about the outcome of the negotiations.

No explanation was given for the apparent dampening of U.S. expectations.

Among items other sources reported about the secret talks are:

—The Soviets made no response, other than asking typical questions, to the U.S. missile freeze offer made late in the Vienna negotiating session which ended Aug. 14.

U.S. negotiators hope for a substantive reply when the talks resume in Helsinki Nov. 2.

—Soviet negotiators turned down a proposal by U.S. Ambassador Gerard C. Smith for wording in the joint communique at the end of the initial round of talks in Vienna which would have indicated the two sides were reaching agreement in principle.

The administration official in Chicago saw no direct setback for a SALT agreement in what he termed the flagrant Soviet and Egyptian violations of the Mideast cease-fire.

Any proposed U.S.-Soviet disarmament deal does not depend heavily on good faith and trust, he explained. He said a Soviet attempt to cheat on a SALT agreement would be spotted quickly enough by U.S. intelligence to prevent an upsetting of the strategic balance against the United States.

These remarks, made to newsmen in Chicago and released by the White House over the weekend, contrasted in tone with earlier administration statements. President Nixon, for example, said at a May 8 news conference:

"We're still far apart, but I will predict now that there will be an agreement, and when that agreement comes, it will be of great significance."

And last month the officials told another group he was extremely optimistic about the SALT prospects. But speaking in Chicago he said he is now cautiously optimistic about the outcome of the negotiations.

Tighten Up On Collecting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department, while admitting that its collections of debts owed the federal government declined last year, says it won't resort to private bill collectors.

"It's not just a matter of going out and getting the bucks," said Leo Pellerzi, assistant attorney general for administration.

"You have to have justice," he said. "We're not going to throw old people out of their homes or cause families to disintegrate or put people on welfare."

The department will strengthen its collection procedures, however, through assignment of four field supervisors and an attorney in each U.S. Attorney's office to supervise collections and regularly review uncollected debts. Pellerzi said FBI reports will be made on debtors who haven't paid within three months.

A House Government Operations subcommittee had suggested use of private collection agencies to get money owed because of fines, judgments and penalties.

"This backfired, though, at Howard University last year. Some Midwest school was looking for a black professor for its science department, so it called Howard University and asked them if they had a man they could spare. They didn't specify race, assuming he would be black. Howard suggested a man. The Midwest school official hired the person, sight unseen. But when he showed up for the term they were flabbergasted to find that they had hired another white professor."

"What do you think the Administration should do about it?"

"Well, if our only role in business is to train black people for white companies, then we think the white companies and government should pay us for it. Rather than call ourselves companies we'll call ourselves labor consultants. Then when we send someone out on a call, we won't be so nervous if he doesn't come back."

economic questions are less important than matters of law-and-order (sharply contrasting with our recent interviews in recession-struck Michigan). Far from blaming the Republicans for unemployment or inflation, several went out of their way to tell us unemployment is no serious problem in Illinois. On the other hand, 85 percent would go no farther in helping the Negro and 172 percent disapprove of student demonstrations against the Vietnam war.

All this results in heavy support for the President among these voters: Mr. Nixon, 61 percent; Sen. Edmund Muskie, 30 percent; Wallace, 9 percent. But, so far, they have not associated Stevenson with the social permissiveness they deplore.

Consider the middle-aged wife of a milkman. She supports Mr. Nixon, favors the President's Vietnamization policy, and believes students who demonstrate are unpatriotic, spoiled kids. But she also backs Stevenson ("because of his dad") and, like most voters we interviewed, does not associate Stevenson with softness on students.

The attitudes of the milkman's wife on Chicago's Northwest Side, thereby, set the tone for the balance of the bitter Illinois campaign. An expensive and sophisticated television advertising campaign will attempt to hook Stevenson to student disrupters, crime, and everything these voters fear and detest. For some weeks now Stevenson has been trying to avoid that hook, an effort we will discuss in a future column.

Sailing school on Lake Thun, Switzerland.

Behind the sails rise the peaks of the Stockhorn range.

The Niesen towers over yachts on Lake Thun.

With your eyes beguiled by towering, snow-capped Alpine peaks, on a lake in the center of a country with no coastline, even if you had never handled a boat before, if you followed a three-week program diligently you could obtain your yachtsman's certificate—issued by the Canton of Berne, Switzerland.

At the Lake Thun Sailing School, in the Swiss Alps, you could also spend a few days just "messaging about in boats," without bothering about examinations. The school has 20 yachts and dinghies at Hilterfingen, Spiez and Neuhaus, round the lake, and visitors are welcome whether they want to get a proficiency certificate or not.

Several hundred pupils are trained at the school each year. And some become so skillful that they go on to reach regatta standard. The teaching program is designed to lead to proficiency in controlling a craft single handed. It is based on five-day (or ten-half day) courses covering different aspects of sailing, both theoretical and practical.

Unless you could prove prior knowledge and experience, you would have to do at least three five-day courses to take your mate's or helmsman's examination. This leads to the yachtsman's certificate and you could then go on to the master's examination.

The waters are blue, the air is fresh. And even if you came on vacation feeling as if you needed a rest cure, after a few days you'll probably find yourself suntanned and active, crewing, tacking, wearing, beating and jibing with the best of them.

Defector Is A Happy Secretary

By H. DENNY DAVIS
MEXICO CITY (UPI)—After listening to Communist indoctrination lectures every week for much of her life, Raisa, Kisilnikova, a defector from the Russian embassy here, has found happiness as a secretary in a capitalist advertising agency.

"When you go overseas for the Russians you get a book of no-nos an inch thick," she said in an interview. "I have a wonderful feeling of freedom now. How can I explain how marvelous it is, just to be able to wear slacks instead of a skirt if I want, in my own apartment?"

Puffing an American cigarette and sipping a French brandy beside a hotel swimming pool, Raisa, 30, in bellbottom slacks and a flowered blouse, looked back without regrets on her first seven months of freedom.

Cloak And Dagger
"I'm working in an ad agency in Mexico, outside Mexico City," she said. "I won't say where. I don't think the Soviets would watch me, but who knows? I come to Mexico City once in a while to visit friends and shop."

Her defection story, never fully told before, is filled with cloak and dagger action in workaday settings—walking a dog named Charcola to a secret rendezvous in Chapultepec Park; a decisive meeting in a Sears Roebuck restaurant; bumping into a Russian secret agent with "eyes like a reptile" in a supermarket.

Raisa wangled a post as translator in the commercial office of the Russian embassy here in 1968 after her husband died in Moscow. She concedes her break with the Soviet establishment stemmed from a romance, since terminated, with a Mexican. The embassy reaction to a lonely widow's dates was far from fatherly.

"My boss called me in and simply said, 'You may have a liaison with anyone you please—as long as he is Russian,'" she said.

"The worst thing about embassy life was the indoctrination lectures. Every Wednesday night from 7 to 9 the whole staff, wives included, gathered to listen to a diplomat lecture on communism. We were supposed to 'grow ideologically.' Everyone was bored stiff. This was nothing new. They begin the weekly lectures when you first start school. When you grow up and go to work you must keep going to the lectures, in Moscow or Mexico City."

"We were strictly forbidden to have social contact with Mexicans," Raisa said. "You get this great big book of things you cannot do. You must read it and sign it. You cannot wear slacks ever, not even off duty. You are not supposed to read certain books, or go to certain movies. You must never leave the embassy except in company of another Russian."

Raisa's decision to date a Mexican raised complications. She lived on embassy property. To meet her boyfriend, Raisa tried various pretexts.

Under Surveillance
"Sometimes we would meet in the supermarket where I was buying groceries," she said. "Other times, I would walk the boss's dog, a black spaniel named Charcola. I would walk the dog in Chapultepec Park. My friend would drive by. The dog and I would get in the car."

"I'm sure I was often shadowed. Once in the supermarket, I actually bumped into the agent I knew, spying on me. He looked embarrassed."

Last January an embassy friend warned her punishment was impending.

"They were going to send me to Cuba or Bulgaria. In the Russian foreign service, they punish you by transferring you from capitalist country to a Communist one."

Raisa and her growing circle of Mexican friends took stock of her situation.

Decision To Leave
"My father was sent to Siberia by Stalin. My parents are both dead. I was raised by a Frenchwoman and her Russian husband, in Moscow. My husband was dead. Our two sons died of leukemia. My only living relative is a sister I hardly know. Everything in Russia depends on influence and connections. I would have no future there. The KGB (State security agents) would 'interrogate' me. They would discover I was a daughter of an 'enemy of the state.' I didn't know exactly what would happen to me. It would not be good. I had studied languages. I speak English, Spanish, French and German. Mexican friends assured me I would have no trouble starting a new life here. Still, I hesitated."

On Friday, Feb. 6, the dreaded telegram arrived from Moscow.

"I was ordered to return to Moscow via Brussels. The next day I called a Mexican friend who had said he would help me. He met me and my boyfriend in the restaurant of the Sears store. I decided to ask asylum. But it was Saturday. My friends couldn't find anyone in the ministry. Finally they located one Mexican official at home. He said Mexico would be happy to give me asylum. I went to stay with a Mexican family over the weekend. On Monday I was officially placed under the protection of the Mexican government."

Then the Soviet ambassador was allowed to talk to her.

"He came in with the chief of the consular section of the embassy, the man in charge of running our private lives. They said if I returned to Russia immediately nothing would happen. But if I tried to go home later, they said, it would be 'dangerous.' I said I did not want to return, ever."

"Now I have papers that say I may live and work in Mexico as long as I want. I have a nice job and a decent apartment. For the first time in my life, I am free. The Mexicans are wonderful. No one is watching me all the time. If I want to see a movie, or read a book, no one says, you can't do that. The people I have met are fond of books and writing. I have learned more about Russian writers here than I ever knew in Russia."

Universal Sees Profit In Tours

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — At a time when other major film companies are pondering what to do with their studios, Universal has found a solution: Don't sell the lot, use it.

The enormous financial burden of the film factories has been a prime factor in the fiscal travails of the major companies.

United Artists avoided the problem by not having a studio. Now all or parts of Paramount and MGM are up for sale, and other companies would be receptive to sell-offs or consolidation of facilities.

Like all the companies, Universal has had grave problems adjusting to the changed film market—the soaring success of "Airport" has granted temporary relief. But Universal's overhead problem has been greatly alleviated by television filming, which other studios have, and its tourist attractions, which are unique.

Only Universal has thrown open its doors to paying visitors. Studio tours began in July of 1964, and this month Universal welcomed its 5-millionth visitor.

"Because of the recession, we expected a dip in attendance this year, as have all tourist attractions," said Jay Stein, the energetic vice president of recreations for the parent company-MCA. "So we stepped up our newspaper advertising and launched a television campaign to attract visitors from Southern California, as well as tourists."

"The results have been highly satisfactory. Attendance is running 10 per cent ahead of last summer. We expect to have between 1.1 million and 1.2 million visitors this year."

One of the factors in the increase is the International Festival which Universal has been operating on weekend nights during the summer.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed in late morning trading today after the collapse of a mild rally early in the session.

By 11 a.m. the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 0.96 at 757.53. The blue-chip indicator had been ahead more than 2 points shortly after the start of trading.

The early rally was attributed by analysts to the cut in its prime lending rate from 8 to 7½ per cent by New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. Several medium-sized banks across the country subsequently lowered their prime rate.

U.S. Readiness Force Building

WASHINGTON (AP) — Infantry and paratroop units in the United States and Europe are on the alert as a precautionary step for the evacuation of Americans from Jordan, the Pentagon announced today.

A Pentagon spokesman declined to comment on the volatile Jordan development beyond saying the situation there was "fluid and complex."

Overnight, the spokesman said, units at Fort Bragg, N.C., and U.S. bases in West Germany were alerted as "additional precautionary actions to increase the readiness of Army, Navy and Marine and Air Force units to support the evacuation of American citizens from Jordan should that become necessary."

The spokesman said he would not preclude the possibility of a third Navy attack aircraft carrier steaming to the Eastern Mediterranean to join the two already there.

It had been reported that the carrier John F. Kennedy was already enroute.

Extra C130 transports have been positioned in Europe to carry the troops in West Germany. The 82nd Airborne Division, on alert at Ft. Bragg, N.C., relies on huge C141 jet transports as part of the U.S. strike reserve.

All this was billed as precautionary by Pentagon officials who said there was no widespread general alert. The intent remains only the possibility of rescuing Americans—thought to be about 400—swept up in the Jordan fighting.

No decision to intervene has been announced.

Troops in West Germany on alert were not specified. They are most likely the paratroop elements of the 8th Division plus infantrymen of the 1st and 24th Divisions.

Meanwhile, a Navy convoy with a helicopter carrier and 1,500 Marines was still steaming toward the Mediterranean. A force of some 1,500 Marines is already with the two U.S. aircraft carriers and their support ships in the Eastern Mediterranean.

A likely plan for evacuation of Americans would be the landing of the troops from West Germany at the Amman airstrip.

Bombs Explode In Churches

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Fire-bombs exploded early today in three Milan churches, including the famous Santa Maria Delle Grazie in which Leonardo da Vinci painted "The Last Supper."

The bomb in Santa Maria Delle Grazie slightly damaged a side altar. Leonardo's world known fresco was not harmed. In the two other churches fire damaged vestments and fittings.

Anticlerical leaflets signed by an anarchist group were found by police in the churches.

Tryon Palace Symposium Set

Eighteenth century architecture, rugs and carpets from the Orient, fabrics, cookery and music will be the topics of interest at the third annual Tryon Palace Symposium, scheduled for March 7-9, 1971.

The Symposium is sponsored jointly by the Tryon Palace Commission and the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education, in cooperation with the Tryon Palace Restoration and the N.C. Department of Archives and History.

The purpose of the Symposium is to increase knowledge and understanding of life in eighteenth century North Carolina through a concentrated study of the decorative arts.

Tours of the Tryon Palace Restoration Complex and other historic buildings in New Bern, N.C. will be featured.

Announcing plans for the Symposium, Brayton Anderson, assistant dean of the ECU Division of Continuing Education, cited lectures and discussions, slide presentations, tours and musical performances as part of the offerings to persons who participate in the Symposium.

"The Symposium is designed for those with a keen interest in the decorative arts of the period," he said.

"Interior decorators, collectors, historians, those engaged in restoration work, and individuals who are interested in our American heritage will find the Symposium both interesting and informative."

A special ensemble from the ECU School of Music will be presented in concert and will perform during a candlelight tour of Tryon Palace.

Tryon Palace, named for royal Governor William Tryon, was constructed in 1770. It was the colonial capitol and the first state capitol of North Carolina. Since authentic restoration by the Tryon Palace Commission was completed in 1959, the Palace has become one of North Carolina's most notable historic attractions.

The full restored buildings are furnished with period antique furniture, and eighteenth century formal gardens occupy considerable portion of the grounds.

Previous symposiums, attracting registrants from several states, have included lectures by authorities on eighteenth century architecture, furniture, interior design, and such decorative art forms as silver, ceramics and engravings, which were part of the elegant life style of colonial New Bern.

Additional information about the 1971 Tryon Palace Symposium is available from the ECU Division of Continuing Education, P.O. Box 2727, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Posh New Clubhouse Readying For Republican Congressmen

By JOHN HALL
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican members of Congress, aided by a lucrative land deal with the government, will be relaxing in a posh new clubhouse on capitol hill next year.

Finding an uncrowded restaurant serving good food around the capitol has been a problem for years, and members of both parties have moaned that there were few decent nearby places to wine and dine important constituents or guests.

The capitol dining rooms themselves are overcrowded and do not serve liquor. Both political parties have had private space in the nearby Congressional Hotel, but the accommodations are overtaxed.

Sometime in 1971, the Republicans will move into a spacious two-story club that will be part of the $4 million Dwight D. Eisenhower Republican Center just one block from the Capitol grounds.

Tradition Outside, Efficient Inside

The center is a block-long complex of traditional exterior architecture, but with modern efficient interiors. It will house the Republican National Committee, which already has moved into the first of three wings to be built.

The second wing, to be completed in about one year, will be the GOP club with a grillroom, a dining hall and a number of private dining rooms for private gatherings. The third wing will house the Senate and House Congressional campaign committees, thus bringing all of the GOP's Washington structure under a single roof.

The center is located about as close to the Capitol as private owners can get these days. Most of the land around the capitol grounds is already occupied by government buildings or has been earmarked for future construction of federal buildings.

Partly to clean up the approaches to the capitol and partly to make room for the projected James Madison Memorial and Library of Congress annex, the block was condemned and razed in the early 1960's.

The library has not been built because of money problems and ptomaine row is now a vacant lot. But the Republicans, not currently suffering from such difficulties, are building the Eisenhower Center down the street, partly with the help of the federal funds it got from its land on the Madison Memorial tract.

Republicans sell to Republicans
Records in the office of the architect of the capitol show that a private GOP group got $600,000 from the government for its club and four other lots that were condemned. That amount was settled upon—without formal condemnation proceedings—by negotiation between Capitol Hill Associates Inc., the Republican-organized firm which owned the property, and representatives of the Justice Department, which handled the condemnation proceedings. The settlement was made in a lump sum during the last days of the Eisenhower Administration.

The total cost to build is $687,500. Thus, for an extra

The committee will hold its first meeting September 24 at the Education Building in Raleigh for a study being sponsored by the Division of Cultural Art and Teacher Education of the State education agency.

Prado Pollution Endangering Art

By ALFREDO GOMEZ
Associated Press Writer

MADRID (AP) — Pollution is endangering the priceless works of art in the Prado Museum but eventually air conditioning will protect them.

"We who look at these paintings, by obligation and by devotion, see the pollution action going forward," says the museum subdirector Xavier de Salas.

The dirty air works against the paintings by lodging on the varnish and attracting dampness. This begins the destructive action, De Salas says.

Spain's capital is rated among the dirtiest in Western Europe, approaching Rome or Paris. The mayor of Madrid, Carlos Arias Navarro, says heating plants bring a layer of carbon monoxide that is one of the most dangerous pollution levels in Europe.

The Prado is surrounded by hotels, office buildings and intense traffic.

The museum's 30 galleries house 3,178 paintings collected by Spanish kings over the years. It attracts more than one million visitors every year.

No one can estimate the current value of Prado art. The 64 paintings by Velazquez represent an incalculable fortune. Some years ago a Velazquez was put on sale for $1.6 million, but the Spanish government ruled it couldn't be sold outside the country.

The Prado has 66 paintings by Rubens, 77 by Goya, 24 by El Greco, 42 by Titian, 10 by Raphael, and hundreds more by Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Van Eyck, Tintoretto, Murillo, Ribera, Zurbaran, Sanchez Coello, Brughel, Granach, Durero and other masters.

De Salas says the March Foundation, named after a Spanish financier, is paying for a project to install air conditioning at an estimated cost of between $4.2 million and $5.7 million.

"Meanwhile, the pollution will go forward on these works of art," says De Salas. "Pollution will continue to corrode slowly or quickly many other valuable works in Madrid, in the Royal Palace, in museums, in private collections."

Club Calendar Deadline Oct. 1

WINTERVILLE — October 1 has been set as the deadline for receiving names for the Winterville Ruritan Club's 1971 birthday and anniversary calendar.

According to Ruritan member R. E. Boyd, the main source of financing for the club is the calendar project.

Boyd said the local club is one of the sponsors of the recreation program of Winterville in addition to participating in various other projects.

Tom Mann, vice president, is heading the committees working on the calendar. All persons in the Winterville community who wish to have their name on the calendar, may contact Mann or any member of the Ruritan Club.

CHAIN SOLD
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Sale of the Galaxy drug store chain by Colonial Stores Inc., of Atlanta, to the Jack Eckerd Corp. of Clearwater, Fla., was announced today by Colonial.

$87,500, the Republicans were able to exchange five previously owned lots for a block of frontage.

For the national committee, the new four-story structure—with built-in filing cabinets, moveable partitions and music piped into the elevators—will provide only 5,000 more square feet of office space than its former quarters in a downtown office building. But employees say they have far more room because of more efficient arrangement of space.

Bruce Devlin Condors Making Wins Big Alcan Prize Debut Tomorrow

By JOHN FARROW
Associated Press Sports Writer
PORTSMARNOCK, Ireland (AP) — Bruce Devlin, 32-year-old Australian golf star, picked up a check for $55,000 today and said: "Well, that's how lucky you can get if you conquer the winds and the rain of Ireland." Devlin won the prize money over Portsmarnock's 7,117-year-old par-72 course by conquering the winds from the Irish Sea and the rain that plagued the Alcan "Golfer of the year" Championship.

Bob Rosburg of Winthrop, Maine, finished second with a score of 285—seven strokes behind Devlin. He collected $15,000 for that effort. Devlin's seven-stroke advantage was the same as Britain's Tony Jacklin led in winning the U.S. Open earlier this year. "Tony's seven-stroke margin was something unbelievable," said Devlin. "But my advantage today was just as incredible." Devlin was involved in a field of 25 top players for the championship and later Rosburg said: "I thought I had it going great for me but it was impossible to catch up with the Aussie." Devlin picked up his check with a 72 hole score of 69-71-70-68—278. Lee Trevino, El Paso, Tex., Neil Coles, England, and Peter Oosterhuis, England, all had 287s to win $5,933. Miller Barber of Sherman, Tex., and Billy Casper, the defending champion from Bonita, Calif., each collected $4,100 by finishing at 288.

The Pittsburgh Condors make their ABA debut Tuesday in Greenville at East Carolina University's Mingos Coliseum. The club's new look includes the uniforms, nickname, and coach, all of which add to the aura of what promises to be an exciting season for Pittsburgh. The Condors, as they are now known, are coached by Jack McMahon, who is no stranger to the world of pro basketball. His past nine seasons have been devoted to the sport and include coaching tenure with the Cincinnati Royals, Chicago Zephyrs, San Diego Rockets, all of the NBA and one year at the helm of the Kansas City Steers of the old ABL where he led them to the League championship. The Condors have a fine nucleus which includes former Duke All-American and leading rebounder for the team, Mike Lewis; John Brisker, the team's leading scorer; former All-League guard Charlie Williams and rangy forward Stew Johnson. Surrounding this nucleus is a host of new faces which is led by the Condors number one draft choice—Davidson's All-American Mike Maloy. Other new faces in the lineup include Houston's Ken Spain and veteran Simmie Hill

CLOBBERED

OTTAWA (AP) — The St. Louis Blues clobbered the Pittsburgh Penguins 6-0 in a National Hockey League exhibition game Sunday night.

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
Before preseason practice began, Virginia Military Institute football coach Vito Ragazzo remarked that he was looking forward to this fall's campaign because the Keydets would have a shot at the same 10 teams that defeated them last year. There was even a bonus, the NCAA-approved 11th game, and the Keydets took advantage of that to schedule Southern Conference rival Furman. They opened their season with a 13-0 victory over the Paladins that brought their 12-game losing streak to an end. But the rerun began Saturday night with VMI taking a 42-0 drubbing at the hands of Rice—there was improvement, because it was 55-0 last year—and this Saturday comes West Virginia. In looking ahead to the game with the Mountaineers, Ragazzo observed that "I think their second team is as good as most first teams."

Two other conference coaches, Lou Holtz of William and Mary and Frank Jones of Richmond, can give him the firsthand word on that. William and Mary went against the Mountaineers in their opener and lost 43-7. It was Richmond's turn last Saturday, and the Spiders were routed 49-10. West Virginia might wish it were back in the conference of which it was a member until two years ago—and there are some other teams that might like to get in, too, after a look at the weekend results. The VMI-Rice and Richmond-West Virginia encounters delated the conference enough, but The Citadel's Bulldogs—cofavored with Richmond for the league title—were handed a 52-0 hiding by Vanderbilt. William and Mary had been a 36-14 victim Friday night of Miami, Fla., and East Carolina's Pirates lost their second Saturday night to East Tennessee 10-0. In fact, the only winner in six nonleague games was Furman, which knocked off small-college Presbyterian 19-7 during a severe electrical storm.

Things get a little better this week, for there are two Saturday night games matching conference foes. Davidson opens its season at Richmond in a battle of last year's co-champions and East Carolina is at The Citadel. Besides VMI at West Virginia, the afternoon schedule has William and Mary entertaining Cincinnati and Furman at home against Wofford. The weather was so bad at Furman that consideration was given to suspending play several times in the first half. Timekeeper T. W. Edwards was knocked to the ground but not hurt when lightning hit the line leading to the clock, and 81 of the stadium's 192 lights had been shorted out by rain by the time the game ended. Presbyterian didn't like the weather, eight. The Blue Hose lost six fumbles, and Furman turned two of them — at the Presbyterian 40 and 33—and a blocked punt at the 3 into its three touchdowns. The blocked kick went into the end zone, where the Paladins' Ivey Stewart fell on the ball.

Against William and Mary the previous week West Virginia had ruled up 624 yards in total offense, missing the school record by a yard. The Mountaineers broke that record Saturday by moving the ball 641 yards, including 157 yards and two touchdowns in 27 carries by halfback Pete Wood.

Halfback Bob Gresham had 123 yards in 14 carries and also scored twice for the Mountaineers, whose pass rush limited Richmond's All-Southern Charlie Richards to 17 completions in 42 attempts for 129 yards. Two of his passes were intercepted, and the Spiders gained but eight yards on the ground.

The Spiders, however, actually led 10-7 early in the second quarter on a 31-yard field goal by Keith Clark and a two-yard Richards-to-Jerry Haynes pass after a fumble recovery, but Leon Jenkins—whose fumble set up the TD—ran 47 yards with a punt for a lead West Virginia never lost. Tailback Mike Spruill gained 122 yards in 14 carries to capitalize on an intercepted pass Bruce Chambers returned to the Rice 9, being set back by two successive holding penalties.

The VMI defense, which had yielded just-99 yards to Furman, surrendered 480 yards to the Owls while the Keydets gained but 96.

Sophomore tailback Mack Brown scored three touchdowns and Vanderbilt scored the first four times it had the ball in overpowering The Citadel, which rarely got out of its own territory.

East Carolina battled East Tennessee to a scoreless tie for three periods, but the visitors marched 98 yards to a touchdown in the final period, then got a 35-yard field goal from Ron Harrold. The Pirates reached the East Tennessee 2 in the second period but couldn't score.

Gretel Inched Ahead In Mad, Mad Day At Sea

By JANE M. DOZIER
NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—Australia's Gretel II won a spectacular America's Cup race Sunday.

But she'll have to win it twice as a result of a protest that was only one feature of a mad, mad, mad day at sea that only Jack London could have written—If he dared.

It was a day that saw:—Intrepid, the American defender, finish within inches of Gretel II after the Australian challenger collided with her at the starting gun within feet of the race committee that will decide the protest.

—Two dramatic rescues at sea. One was of Intrepid's 27-year-old cockpit tactician, Steve Van Dyke, who went ashore by helicopter suffering from a severe reaction when a bee stung his lip while he was sipping a soda before the start.

The other was of seven people in an outboard which capsized in the wash of the boats of the spectator flotilla.

Van Dyke recovered promptly after treatment ashore and the seven spectators were quickly rescued.

—A mine scare. A mounted old globe first identified as a reemerging old explosive from World War II was spotted among the fleet which immediately took evasive action. Later it turned out to be a fishing buoy.

The protest presumably will be decided today by the race committee of the New York Yacht Club. The committee already has had to handle one protest arising from a near collision in the first race last Tuesday.

Both Intrepid, the NYCC Cup defender, and Gretel II protested, but the committee disallowed it.

If Intrepid is sustained, the score in the best-of-7 series will be 2-0. If Gretel II wins, it will be 1-1.

In any case, it was a stunning triumph for the Aussies in a light southwest wind that never blew above eight knots.

Intrepid pulled away from the ill-fated start, turning the first three marks with increasing margins of 42 seconds, 1:19 and 1:42. Gretel was close behind but hadn't been able to get close enough to challenge until the fourth leg when she trimmed a half minute from Intrepid.

But Gretel II's skipper, Jim Hardy, turned the wheel over to 36-year-old David Forbes, current world champion in a 5.5-meter sailboat. He has a reputation as a downwind helmsman skippers. Committee boat Incredible marking one end of starting line at right. Gretel II lost start but eventually won race, the first victory for America's Cup challenger since Weatherly-Gretel I series eight years ago. (AP Wirephoto)

Happy Day For Four ACC Teams

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The door to glory or at least the door to the championship at the end of the season, was cracked last weekend for four ACC football teams.

Not surprising to the Monday morning quarterbacks, North Carolina held off a determined North Carolina State, 19-0; Clemson came out on top of Virginia, 27-17; Duke nipped Maryland 13-12; and South Carolina came alive in the last half to trounce Wake Forest, 43-7. The Tar Heel win was especially gratifying for Coach Bill Dooley and his Heels. The win was the first in four long years for UNC in the long-standing rivalry.

The win was pleasing to Tar Heel fans in that it was the first time since 1953 UNC had defeated its first two consecutive opponents. Carolina downed Kentucky 20-10 a week ago in the season's opener.

at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. His condition was listed as satisfactory Sunday.

Duke had to squeeze out a 45-yard in the final minute to pull out a 13-12 home opener over Maryland. David Wright did the honors for the Blue Devils.

The Maryland defense played gallantly all day and kept the pressure on the Blue Devil offense. The pressure paid off late in the third period when Maryland's Tony Green intercepted a pass in the end zone to stop a Duke drive. The Terps also blocked a Blue Devil field goal attempt.

Clemson was not forced into the same dramatics at Duke but never-the-less had its hands full with Virginia. Down 17-10 at the half, the Tigers rallied in the second period, mainly on the passing of quarterback Tommy Kendrick.

Clemson, like UNC, is defeated in the young season. The Tigers defeated The Citadel, 24-0, in a nonconference opener.

Defending ACC football champion South Carolina, stinging from an opening loss the previous Saturday to Georgia Tech, wore out stubborn Wake Forest in the first two periods and then mutilated the Deacons in the final two.

The Gamecocks held a slim 10-7 lead at the half, but it became a different ball game in the second half. Gamecock quarterback Tommy Suggs threw two touchdown passes and three field goals, one from 43-yards out.

Coach Paul Dietzel finally cleared his bench in the late stages but third string back Chuck Mimms, not to be outdone by his superiors, crashed through for two touchdowns, both from one yard out.

Dooley said after the game, "If you keep hanging in there, things will break your way sooner or later. That's the way we try to teach our football players here at Carolina, and that was the most pleasing thing about our victory."

Dooley added, "When we had those opportunities to score and didn't, we didn't quit. Our players kept after them."

The win was also a costly one in that the services of defensive back Rusty Culbreth were lost for the season. The 5-9 junior from Greensboro, N.C., had knee surgery following the game

Tobacco TIPS

By S. J. WEEKS

Tobacco stalks have been cut and the stubbles have been plowed out in approximately 65 percent of the tobacco fields in Pitt County. It is not too late to perform this important cultural practice in the other 35 percent of the tobacco fields.

Nematodes will continue feeding on tobacco roots and multiplying until December in those fields where the tobacco stubbles have not been plowed out. If the roots are plowed out and exposed to the drying action of the sun and wind, the nematode build-up will be greatly reduced.

Cleaning up old tobacco fields will also cut disease losses from brown spot and mosaic as well as cause a reduction in next years tobacco insect population.

Budworm pupae over-winter in the top two or three inches of the soil. Turning the stubbles for nematode control also reduces the number of moths which will emerge next spring to lay eggs from which the larvae that destroy tobacco will develop.

Hornworm population can also be reduced substantially by destroying the tobacco stalks and plowing out the stubbles.

About two weeks after the stubbles have been plowed out, the fields should be harrowed and disced so that the crop residue will be completely buried where it will decay before spring.

Every day of delay will mean more nematodes, more mosaic, more brown-spot, more insects, and more dollars down the drain in 1971.

Let's make Pitt County a 100 percent REDUCE 6 PESTS county by cutting tobacco stalks and plowing out the stubbles "right now."

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

A challenge facing agricultural cooperatives in the seventies is - Will they develop the marketing system and marketing leadership that will give producers a bigger piece of the agribusiness action on a profitable basis?

To help meet this challenge the following seven ways should be considered:

1. MARKETING LEADERSHIP

Cooperatives can and must exercise marketing leadership. They will need to create improved marketing systems and more efficient performance in that system. They need to bring about greater interdependence among those who produce, process, and retail or service farm products.

2. TOUGHER PRODUCTION AND QUALITY POLICIES

Coops will need to adopt hard-line production and quality policies. Management must be more business like. They will need to enter long-term marketing agreements with members. Management decisions must be guided by the market, consequently the marketing department must have prior control over production.

3. JOINT VENTURES

In addition to entering into marketing contracts with members, cooperatives must be prepared to enter joint venture agreements with marketing corporations. To deal with marketing corporations, producers must be strongly organized and soundly grounded in economics and marketing expertise in order to stand on equal footing.

4. CASH AND CONTRACT MARKETS

Cooperatives must at the same time work with the cash or spot market and with the contract market. More and more agricultural production is forward contracted.

5. NEW AND EXPANDED MARKETS

Cooperatives must assume responsibility for creating and expanding markets for their products. Market building activities for food and fiber have in the main been left to the non-farm sector. Control of the market rests with the market builder. Producers, through their cooperatives, can become these market builders.

6. BETTER RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Cooperatives must budget more funds for research and development. Although public research has sufficed in the past, successful coops of the future must put forth additional research efforts.

7. STRONG INTERNAL LEADERSHIP

None of this can take place without strong leadership among cooperatives. The key to good management and board members is "select the best and keep them trained." A specific added key for top employees is to "pay them well."

Managers will need to be "up" on the functions of management - planning, organizing, staffing, directing, and controlling. Board members must also be "up" on their responsibilities. They must be creative and exercise initiative with confidence. Running the organization must be a team effort with an informed board.

Opines Mide Not Wanted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Women do not," says Mr. Blackwell, "want the mide length."

The pronouncement from one of the leading arbiters of the fashion world in California came on the eve of the opening of this week's prestigious 20th national press week, staged by the California Fashion Council.

Another view is expressed by Bill Travilla, who says with firm flatness: "The mini is dead. By Christmas holidays you will see every woman in the 'United States in longer clothes."

One of the leaders in daring new fashions, Rudi Gernreich, who introduced the topless look in years past, proclaims with a yawn: "The whole lengths thing is absolutely boring."

Gernreich is concentrating on swimwear—but not bathing suits. "We will be swimming in clothes," Gernreich says. He's pushing a wet wardrobe of nylon jersey pantsuits, sweaters and shirts for the well-dressed swimmer.

But although Mr. Blackwell says "the consumer has won out," asserting the pro-mini forces have beaten off the heralded long-skirt fashion predictions, he forecasts that knees will be harder to see.

"In 1971, Mrs. Americas will want their dresses to the knee or just below the knee for day," Blackwell says. "At night, they will return to floor-length or ankle."

Swedish Premier Ready Accept Communist Aid

By DJCK SODERLUND Associated Press Writer STOCKHOLM (AP) — Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme, whose Social Democratic party lost its majority in Sunday's general election, made it clear his party will accept Communist help to stay in power.

"This is a clear setback," Palme said of his party's unofficial capture of 166 of the 350 seats in the newly reorganized one-house legislature. Three

Crochet Lessons While In Prison

LONDON (AP) — Bernadette Devlin, 22-year-old youngest member of Parliament, is learning to crochet while serving six months in Northern Ireland's Armagh Prison for inciting riots. Her teacher is a murderer in for life.

This news was disclosed by Ivan Cooper, an Ulster member of Parliament, Sunday after visiting the young civil rights leader.

"She doesn't have any grumbles about prison life at all," Cooper told a reporter for the Sunday Express.

major nonsocialist parties, which had hoped for enough votes to form a coalition government, won 167 seats, and the Communist party 17.

"We have lost votes both to the Communists and the nonsocialist camp," Palme said, "and the blame rests wholly with the party leadership and me. We did not put across important campaign issues the right way, and international trends that forced price hikes and a tough economic policy may have contributed."

Palme, 43, made it clear that the Social Democrats were ready to continue ruling with Communist aid.

"The nonsocialists failed to get the majority they wanted to form a government," he said. "We will pursue our policy for a more equal society and the Communists can take it or leave it. It is up to them whether they will topple a workers' government."

Communist party leader C. H. Hermansson replied, "We will carry on an independent policy fighting for our program, but we will never topple a socialist government to help the nonsocialist bloc gain power."

Hermansson said one of his party's primary aims is to keep Sweden out of the European Common Market.

The Swedish Communist party got about 100,000 more votes than it did in 1968, the year of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Says Too Much Is Spent For Defense

By CARL HARTMAN Associated Press writer COPENHAGEN (AP) — World Bank President Robert McNamara, former U.S. secretary of defense, said today that most countries are spending too much on defense and should shift to more foreign aid.

"For the so called security of an ever spiraling arms race," he said, the world is spending $180 billion annually and the figures go steadily up."

Yet the rich nations, he went on, hesitate to keep on spending their present $7 billion on public development aid.

"That 20 times more should be spent on military power than on constructive progress appears to me to be the mark of an ultimate, and I sometimes fear, incurable folly," he said. McNamara's speech was prepared for the opening of a week-long meeting of the bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, managing director of the IMF, had just told the meeting that rich countries are not giving development aid "the high priority it deserves."

McNamara also predicted a widening of the gap between rich and poor nations. By the end of the century, he said, the average American will have an income of about $10,000, the average Brazilian $500 and the average Indian $200.

He denied that the birth control movement is an effort by the rich countries to kill off the poor ones.

"It has one source and one source only," he said, "the belief that without a slowing down and control of the population explosion, the life awaiting millions upon millions of the planet's future inhabitants will be stunted, miserable and tragic."

Area Projects' Funds Approved

RALEIGH — Nearly half a million dollars in State, Federal and local funds have been approved for a total of 20 projects of the North Carolina Governor's Coordinating Council on Aging.

Two local area projects were among the three for which funds have been continued for a second year — the Pitt-Greenville Multi-purpose Senior Citizens Development Program for $12,753; and the Mid-East Council on Aging (Beaufort, Bertie, Hyde, Martin and Washington Counties), $20,000.

Projects in Cumberland County, Durham and Greensboro were approved for a third consecutive year. In addition, ten other previous state wide projects were continued, and four new projects have been approved.

Argentina Affected By Wrecks Claim Its British Immigrants Fourteen Dead

By RICHARD RITTER
BUENOS AIRES (UPI)— Many foreigners live in Argentina, a sparsely populated country which has always attracted immigrants.

But the British hold a singular place in this bustling South American nation.

Although British power and strength have dwindled here—as in other areas—over the past century, there is little likelihood that the British impact on Argentina will fade away.

One of the pillars of Britain's continuing influence is the Anglo-Argentine. He descends from Britons but was born in Argentina.

Some "Anglo" families go back for five generations or more. The Anglo-Argentine is bilingual and sometimes resorts to a "Spanglish" combining Spanish and English words.

Although he may hold a British passport, his feelings as an Argentine will often stand out when discussing international affairs with Americans or other foreigners.

There is one issue, however, where "Anglos" find themselves at loggerheads with other Argentines. This dispute centers around the Falkland (Malvinas) Islands, a wind swept archipelago off the Argentine coast at the southernmost tip of the continent.

Ever since their occupation by the British more than 150 years ago, Argentina has demanded that the British hand over the islands. Both countries are engaged in talks aimed at reaching an agreement on the islands and the 2,500 inhabitants.

A British embassy spokesman estimated there are about 35,000 English residents in Argentina who are still British subjects. Counting Irish and Welsh would bring the figure close to about 60,000, he said.

There are other reminders of Britain in Argentina's way of life such as a Big Ben tower, five o'clock tea, English clubs, the British Hospital and shopping at Harrods in downtown Buenos Aires.

Despite their relatively small numbers in this nation of 24 million people, the British have succeeded in leaving a distinct imprint on Argentine life.

Waves of British immigrants flocked to Argentina in the late 19th century to help build the country's railroad system.

However, Britain's grip on Argentina came a century later with the so-called "Roca-Runciman" treaty.

The agreement was signed by Walter Runciman, then president of the British Board of Trade and Argentine Vice President Julio A. Rocam in 1933. It required Argentina to sell all her wheat and beef to Britain or face losing her biggest trade partner. Argentina also agreed to import British coal free from-tariff. At that time British coal was Argentina's chief power source.

However, a rising nationalism in Argentina in recent decades, coupled with Britain's need to sell foreign holdings during World War Two, forced Britain to liquidate most of its interest in Argentina. It reached its peak in 1947 when former dictator Juan D. Peron nationalized the British-owned railroads.

Since then the Anglo-Argentines have continued a strong influence on Argentina's way of life.

It is an influence bolstered by many interests and practices which Argentines have made their own.

The Argentine craze over soccer football—introduced by the early British immigrants—is second to none, including the British.

English gourmet specialties, such as chicken curry pudding, can be had at "The London Grill", one of Buenos Aires' best restaurants, under portraits of a smiling Queen Elizabeth II.

And when fashion-conscious Argentines look for a new suit, they often chose British styles.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
At least 14 persons were killed this weekend in traffic accidents in North Carolina.

The State Highway Patrol reported the weekend deaths raised the toll for this year to 1,171, down from 1,277 at this time last year.

Five of the victims were hit by onrushing cars, two of them pedestrians in Columbus County who were killed in separate accidents, the patrol reported.

Troopers said Howard Treadwell, 23, of Rt. 1, Evergreen was killed when he was hit by a car on U. S. 74 about three miles west of the Columbus County town of Evergreen. The other Columbus County fatality happened when James Matthews, about 50, of Rt. 1, Tabor City was hit by an oncoming vehicle while he was lying on a rural road just over a mile north of his home town.

Mary Isaacs Renegar, 49, of Charlotte was killed in her home town when a car went out of A teen-ager from Rt. 1, Connelly Springs, 17-year-old James Gerris Jr., was killed when a car hit him as he walked along U. S. 64 two miles east of Hickory. And Karl S. McClure of Burlington was killed when he was hit by a car on N. C. 87 eight miles north of his home town.

An 85-year-old Hickory man, William Preston Austin, was killed on U. S. 321 about a half mile north of Granite Falls. The patrol said he drove from a side road into the path of an oncoming vehicle.

Levi Edward Smith, 24, of Clayton, was killed when the car he was in veered off a rural road and slammed into some trees about a mile east of Raleigh.

A 34-year-old Ellenboro man, John Zarthen Blanton, was killed in Morganton when his car ran out of control on a city street and crashed into a rock wall.

Janice Paige Pegram, 23, of Rt. 1, Walkertown was killed when the car she was riding in was involved in a two-car collision on a rural road four miles northeast of Winston-Salem.

A Camp Lejeune man, 32-year-old Lewis A. Delane, was killed when his car slammed into a tree after running off a rural road two miles south of Richlands in Onslow County.

Martin Carroll McCasland, 24, of Rt. 1, Matthews was killed when his car hit a utility pole in Charlotte, city police said. Bobby Dean Deyton, 23, of Marion, was killed when his car slammed into an embankment after running off a rural road 10 miles south of Marion in McDowell County.

The patrol reported Elise B. Simmons, 35, of Stockbridge, Ga., was killed near Charlotte when the car she was riding in overturned on I-85.

Good Neighbor On A Changing Street

MIAMI (AP)—When Wayne Frankforter moved into 52nd Street only white families lived there and the only Negroes seen were maids or yard men who left before dark.

Now, Frankforter and the Max Larrabee family are the only whites left around northwest 52nd Street and 13th Avenue, an area involved in black rioting twice in recent years. They say they have no intention of moving.

"I've lived here since 1946," said the white-haired, 75-year-old Frankforter. "I was all alone and I thought I could live here just as well as any place else. I don't have long to stay in any place."

His days are full of doing for his black neighbors. He is the kind of man who mows the lawn of a neighbor on vacation.

"I have to pass by his house to get to the lawnmower shop," said Fred Morley, a black man. "I never make it. Mr. Frankforter stops me and before you know it he not only tells me what's wrong, but even fixes it for me."

When blacks started moving into the neighborhood in the late 1950s most whites left.

Larrabee, who works for the Florida Department of Transportation, said:

"I had more roots than most people. We built this house and know what's in it. I'm always working on this house."

Larrabee and Frankforter seem to be accepted as just neighbors, not whites in a black neighborhood.

During the rioting at the time of the Republican National Convention in 1968 Scott and other black neighbors kept an eye on Frankforter's house.

When two Negroes tried to start trouble with the elderly white man, Scott and the others persuaded the troublemakers it would be healthier to leave. And when the troublemakers' landlady heard what had happened, she evicted them.

The Worry Clinic The Hairbrush Ardor Exists

Irma wants to know the specific "why" behind this young wife's desire for a hairbrush spanking before marital relations. In psychiatry, we call this "hairbrush ardor" and it is far more common than most people realize. Many other related fetishes are used by young husbands and wives to "trigger" their sexual passion.

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph. D., M.D.

CASE O-535: Irma B., aged 24, is a new bride.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "recently I read Ann Landers' reply to a wife who said her husband used a hairbrush on her regularly.

"And this wife admitted she relished such a spanking, for then they'd terminate the evening in a more romantic union.

"Ann Landers brushed this aside as a stupid idea, probably reminiscent of the caveman era.

"But this girl's husband seemed to think the hairbrush episode was O.K., and his wife apparently wanted it.

"So can you give us readers a little more of the psychiatric background? Tell us the 'why' behind such abnormal conduct."

In psychiatry we often see similar evidences of what we term "hairbrush ardor."

Actually, many women remain frigid with their husbands until some sexual fetish is vividly brought into play to "trigger" the release of their sexual passion.

And the hairbrush is often this fetish.

For example, in many cases a little girl may be caught by her parents as she indulges in auto erotic practices.

In past generations, such horrified parents then applied a hairbrush as a form of punishment.

So the child subconsciously associated a spanking with sexual excitement.

When such a girl then grew up to womanhood and married, she might thus retain a frigid consciousness toward marital relations.

For her prudish upbringing had "conditioned" or "brainwashed" her accordingly.

So the hairbrush then becomes the fetish or "trigger" which unleashes her erotic inhibitions.

For that hairbrush not only has been subconsciously linked with intense sexual excitement.

But it also served as an expiatory or atonement for such an affair.

In her girlhood, such a person thus experienced erotic thrills, followed by the punishment of the hairbrush as a postlude.

In marriage, however, the hairbrush becomes a prelude stimulus that now revives the excitement of her childhood auto eroticism; but serves as her advance "fine" or penalty for proper marital indulgence.

After her husband thus applies the hairbrush, she then feels fully entitled to enjoy the resulting sexual union, with a clear conscience!

This "hairbrush ardor" is just one of many devices that serve to unfetter the emotions of adults whose childhood was rigidly prudish.

Many newly married girls who have been indoctrinated with an ascetic concept, thus can't enjoy their legitimate marital role until they trick their conscious mind.

So they may resort to whiskey to anesthetize their conscience, after which they may exceed Cleopatra.

This is especially true, too, when the young husband resembles the bride's father to the degree that the old incest

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K 10 5 ♠AKJ 6 ♠AQ 5 3 ♣K 8

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 1♣ Pass
2♥ Pass 3♣ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Three spades. This allows for all contingencies. If partner has a five card spade suit he might prefer to play the game in that suit. If his bid was based on a four card suit, he still has the option of returning to four hearts or three no trump.

Q. 2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 4 ♠8 4 ♠A 10 9 6 5 3 ♠A J 7

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♥ 1NT Pass ?

What do you bid?
A.—Three no trump. Your hand contains nine points which, with a six card suit is ample to carry on to game. There is nothing to be gained by jumping in diamonds.

Q. 3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A 10 5 ♠A J 10 6 3 ♣K J 7 5 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass 1♣ 2♦ ?

What do you bid?
A.—Two hearts. While it is tempting to double and exact from the enemy a suitable toll for what may have been an in-temperate act, nevertheless such a step should be taken with caution when support for partner's suit is held. Vulnerability in this case militates against an early double. Chances for game are too bright to accept what might be an inadequate penalty. Were clubs and spades interchanged, we would favor the double.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9 6 4 3 ♠8 7 5 4 ♣K J 3 ♣K J

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1♥ Dble. ?

What do you bid?
A.—Two hearts. Your values are mild and should be shown at once. A pass is not recommended, for you may find it inconvenient to enter the auction on a later round.

Q. 5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠4 ♠K Q 3 ♠K 3 2 ♠Q J 10 7 5 4

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1♣ Pass 2♥ NT Pass 3♦ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Three no trump. Except for the ace your hand is worthless and no inducement should be offered partner to go past the nice trick level.

Q. 6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 6 4 ♠10 8 7 5 ♠9 6 3 ♣8 6 2

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2♦ Pass 2NT Pass 3♦ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Three no trump. Except for the ace your hand is worthless and no inducement should be offered partner to go past the nice trick level.

Q. 7—As South, with both sides vulnerable, you hold:
♠A K 9 8 6 3 ♠A ♠A K J 10 ♠6 3

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2♣ Pass 2NT 4♣ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Pass. This strategy is clearly indicated. Partner may be in a position to inflict a severe sting and he should be given the courtesy of the road. If he does not choose to double, he is obliged to proceed with the bidding inasmuch as your original bid was forcing to game.

Q. 8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 10 9 6 3 ♠7 3 ♠J 9 8 3 ♣K 5

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♣ Pass 1♣ 2♥ Pass Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Two spades. Opposite a partner who has opened the bidding, you cannot afford to sell out cheaply and, this is not, strictly speaking, a re-biddable suit, there is no other call available.

Q. 9—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 10 5 ♠A J 10 6 3 ♣K J 7 5 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass 1♣ 2♦ ?

What do you bid?
A.—Two hearts. Your values are mild and should be shown at once. A pass is not recommended, for you may find it inconvenient to enter the auction on a later round.

Q. 10—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A 10 5 ♠A J 10 6 3 ♣K J 7 5 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass 1♣ 2♦ ?

What do you bid?
A.—Two hearts. Your values are mild and should be shown at once. A pass is not recommended, for you may find it inconvenient to enter the auction on a later round.

Q. 11—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A 10 5 ♠A J 10 6 3 ♣K J 7 5 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass 1♣ 2♦ ?

What do you bid?
A.—Two hearts. Your values are mild and should be shown at once. A pass is not recommended, for you may find it inconvenient to enter the auction on a later round.

Q. 12—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A 10 5 ♠A J 10 6 3 ♣K J 7 5 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass 1♣ 2♦ ?

What do you bid?
A.—Two hearts. Your values are mild and should be shown at once. A pass is not recommended, for you may find it inconvenient to enter the auction on a later round.

VC Losing Hamlet Role

SAIGON (AP) — The revised hamlet evaluation system used by U.S. officials to measure pacification in South Vietnam claimed today that as of Aug. 31, 92.8 per cent of the country's population was under government control.

The figure, representing 16,722,100 Vietnamese, is the highest number ever claimed by the controversial Hamlet Evaluation System, the revised version of which was unveiled last March.

The revision was seen by some observers then as an attempt to narrow a long-standing credibility gap concerning the reliability of the computerized three-year-old evaluation system by demanding more specific indications of pacification in South Vietnam.

The latest figures showed a 0.4 per cent increase in the number of persons under government control compared to July. The report said 184,700 persons still are controlled by the Viet Cong and another 996,600 live in areas where neither the Viet Cong nor the government has decisive control.

No Longer Want Hippie Visitors

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The monks of Mt. Athos, the all-male Byzantine monastic republic in northern Greece, have decreed that hippies are no longer welcome in their holy community.

The abbot of the 121-square mile autonomous theocracy on the Khalkidhiki Peninsula says that all persons with long hair and unbecoming appearance are barred from now on in the more than 1,000-year-old state — where no female, human or animal, has ever set foot.

The decree obviously did not apply to the monks themselves, who wear their hair long and have beards.

Find Pop Singer Guilty Of Two Counts In Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Shaggy-haired James Morrison, lead singer of The Doors, has been convicted of indecent exposure and profanity during a 1969 performance before a large audience of teen-agers.

A jury of three men and three women returned the verdict against the self-proclaimed "king of orgasmic rock" after a 16-day trial. Maximum sentence is eight months in jail and a $525 fine.

The bearded singer declared, "This trial and its outcome won't change my style because I maintain that I did not do anything wrong."

Witnesses said Morrison dropped his trousers during the performance.

The singer's performance sparked several campaigns against indecency, including an Orange Bowl rally by 30,000 persons.

Morrison was freed on $50,000 bail until sentencing Oct. 23.

Rated Best Of Navy's Big Mess Halls

By ROBERT C. MILLER
HONOLULU (UPI)—The Wahia Naval Communications Station has parlayed a cup of coffee and a bowl of soup into the best of the Navy's big mess halls.

For the second time in three years the general mess at Wahia has won the Edward F. Ney Memorial Award for feeding more people ashore better than anyone else in the Navy. And one of the fringe benefits was the award of the "golden cup and saucer" for brewing the best cup of coffee in the station.

The station, located about 20 miles from Honolulu, serves an average 375 noon meals daily in its flower-decorated dining hall, provides ice cream 24 hours a day, has pretty girls lading out the goodies, but never lets a woman close to a stove.

The foundation stones of Wahia's success are its coffee and its bean soup. Chief James L. Barnes of Nashville, Tenn., who has brewed enough coffee to float half the Navy, says the secret of a cup of good coffee is loving, tender care.

Coffee Do's and Don'ts
"There are more don'ts than do's to making a good cup of coffee," Barnes explained. "Never boil coffee. Never let it stand in the pot. Never brew it in a dirty pot. Use only glass or stainless steel containers. You can't make a good cup of coffee in an electric percolator. Never let the water stay married to the grounds more than six minutes.

Most important, the veteran food handler said, is to use the correct grind.

Temperature is also an important factor. "The beer experts will tell you that 53 degrees is the best temperature to serve beer, but few people know that the ideal temperature to serve coffee is 155 degrees," Barnes explained. "And the water temperature in the pot should be between 195 and 205 degrees, and never boiling!"

The chief frowns on the use of aluminum coffee pots. "Too porous," he said.

He also explained that ground coffee loses 35 percent of its flavor within 24 hours after the can is opened, and practically all the oils are gone from an opened can in three days.

Lt. Dana C. Chase, of Morris Plains, N.J., said the Navy had never used instant coffee because it lacks the quality of the good bean.

Good Coffee But Weaker
James C. Coombes, who handles the civilian management at Wahia, said an extra half gallon of water is now added for every pound of coffee used as "The boys don't like it too strong."

"More and more of them are drinking milk and soft drinks," Coombes said, "but there aren't too many tea drinkers."

White, dry beans are used in the prize-winning Navy bean soup ladled out at Wahia, along with hamhocks, ham, onions, carrots, cabbage and garlic.

The most disappointed cook at Wahia was Tom Morris, of McConelsville, Ohio, who developed the "first team" bean soup recipe especially for a competition "Navy Bean Soup" annual.

"But we never got a chance to show the world how good it was," Morris said, "as the competition was discontinued just when we had the trophy cinched."

"We serve the best food in the navy," Chase said matter of factly, "so we try to package it accordingly. This is a dining room, not a 'mess', and we serve food, not 'chow.'" beans and wheat. Powell made about $90 a week.

Powell remembered. "I'm intending to get back," he said. It was a promise to himself.

"I'm sure gonna be doing my best to get back home, I'll try to get a good job. Go to St. Louis, maybe get a job making box cars. My uncle, he works there.

Sowa and Paddila were stoic in the beginning. They didn't want to be here, but as they see it, this was a fight against communism.

"If they take over Vietnam, what do you think will be the next place they live in Puerto Rico before moving with his family to New York nine years ago.

"If they see we're afraid to come here, they'll all join together against one place: the United States."

"If the Communists do take over South Vietnam, I wouldn't think much of it, but I guess Uncle Sam would," said Sowa, who was a pretty good baseball player at home.

"Anyhow, I don't think running away is right. If anyone thinks anything of their country, they can't be happy in Canada, never being able to come back to your home."

The end of their training meant going into the field for real. It also meant they were a week closer to home.

"All right, you are now going to get a chance to apply everything you've learned the past week," said their training sergeant.

They were combat—assaulted into the field outside Camp Evans.

Sowa soon saw his first dead VC. They came across him at night: he'd been dead a long time.

"When it starts getting dark, I sorta get scared and more alert because that's when Charlie works," said Sowa.

"The day is like a relief." He sat in the dirt. Rain started to fall.

"Sometimes I wonder about Americans dying and the Communists aren't even close to the United States. But my opinion doesn't mean much and I still got a year to go."

Withdrawal In Vietnam Still 2-Way Street

By WILLIS JOHNSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER
CAMP EVANS, Vietnam (AP)

—When the big Boeing arrives at Da Nang air base it is called the Prison Bird. When it leaves it's dubbed the Freedom Bird.

The United States is steadily reducing its force in Vietnam, but the GIs still arrive to replace men whose tours of duty have expired. The home bound men leave on the same plane that brings in recruits. More leave than arrive, but it's still a war.

What do they think about when they first step onto Vietnamese soil?

Pfc. Jose Paddila, an 18-year-old plumber's helper from the Bronx, N.Y., recalled a bit later: "I was thinking about New York. I was thinking how the last day was the saddest day, about that plane taking off, thinking I might never come back."

"If they gonna pull everybody out, why they keep sending so many guys like us over?" wondered Pfc. Elmer Powell, a farm hand. He is 19 but has a wife and two kids back home in Luxora, Ark.

"You get drafted and you can't do anything about it," said Pfc. Thomas Sowa, also 19, of Niagara Falls, N.Y. He had been a utility laborer in a carbon processing plant and he wanted to study to be an electrician.

The Army sent Paddila, Powell and Sowa to this 101st Airborne Division camp in the coastal lowlands in the northern region of South Vietnam.

First there was a week of indoctrination. "We want to give them a chance to start mentally thinking they are in Vietnam," the training commander explained.

Then they were assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 3rd Brigade of the 101st, which has headquarters here.

All three were infantrymen, also known as grunts. None of them ever had taken part in a demonstration, and they had not thought much about the war they would have to fight.

"It looks like all this could have been avoided," Powell said one day as he walked through scrub country on a training exercise.

He came across a dud mortar round and gave it a wide berth. "The only thing I ever thought about the war was that I thought they could have got along without me."

On the farm they grew cotton, beans and wheat. Powell made about $90 a week.

Powell remembered. "I'm intending to get back," he said. It was a promise to himself.

"I'm sure gonna be doing my best to get back home, I'll try to get a good job. Go to St. Louis, maybe get a job making box cars. My uncle, he works there.

Sowa and Paddila were stoic in the beginning. They didn't want to be here, but as they see it, this was a fight against communism.

"If they take over Vietnam, what do you think will be the next place they live in Puerto Rico before moving with his family to New York nine years ago.

"If they see we're afraid to come here, they'll all join together against one place: the United States."

"If the Communists do take over South Vietnam, I wouldn't think much of it, but I guess Uncle Sam would," said Sowa, who was a pretty good baseball player at home.

"Anyhow, I don't think running away is right. If anyone thinks anything of their country, they can't be happy in Canada, never being able to come back to your home."

The end of their training meant going into the field for real. It also meant they were a week closer to home.

"All right, you are now going to get a chance to apply everything you've learned the past week," said their training sergeant.

They were combat—assaulted into the field outside Camp Evans.

Sowa soon saw his first dead VC. They came across him at night: he'd been dead a long time.

"When it starts getting dark, I sorta get scared and more alert because that's when Charlie works," said Sowa.

"The day is like a relief." He sat in the dirt. Rain started to fall.

"Sometimes I wonder about Americans dying and the Communists aren't even close to the United States. But my opinion doesn't mean much and I still got a year to go."

World's Liveliest Ghost Town Virginia City Today Called

By RUSSELL NIELSEN
VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (UPI) —Once it was the proudest city between St. Louis and San Francisco.

Its treasure gave birth to a state and helped save the union. Virginia City was the "Queen of the Comstock," courted by presidents, coveted by financiers and celebrated in the saga of the Old West.

Now it's called the "world's liveliest ghost town." Only a few buildings remain of what once was a city of 25,000, mountainside and across the canyon below.

But so strong is the legend of the Comstock lode that thousands of tourists still fill the streets often frequented by miners and silver kings—and that has given Gov. Paul Laxalt an idea. He thinks the town might find more wealth in the pockets of tourists than in the mines, and he would like to restore Virginia City as the "Williamsburg of the West."

Plans Uncertain
Laxalt has asked the federal government for $250,000 to draw up a rejuvenation plan to make the rickety town look like what it was—a "grand old mining camp." He said some tourists come away disappointed because of the "Coney Island stuff"—hot dog stands, souvenir shops and businesses which have nothing to do with Virginia City's storied past.

Residents are skeptical, but all agree something has to be done. Others believe it would be compared with no-holds-barred Western counterparts.

The first issue not only studied refrigerators, men's shirts and soft drinks, but gave tips on how to buy a house and land and how pensioners can defend their rights.

Consumer Guide
According to the editors, Nagyito's aim is to "put pressure on industry and trade by (guiding consumers in) refusing to buy certain articles and waiting until goods of better quality are made."

The magazine began by surveying seven refrigerators. The only Soviet model, a Saratov, got a "so-so" rating because it was "out of date." Best buy, said the magazine, was a Hungarian Lehel.

The magazine then turned impartially to Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola and Sztar-Cola. All are made in Hungary from imported Western ingredients.

Nagyito liked them all, but gave Sztar-Cola top rating—on the grounds it suited the Hungarian taste best.

Nine brands of men's shirts were studied and all but a take millions to do the job properly.

"I've put $50,000 in my place alone, and all kinds of money has been spent to restore other buildings but you can hardly tell the difference," Florence Ballou Edwards said.

Mrs. Edwards, 73, operates the Silver Dollar Hotel on "C" Street, the main street a century ago when ladies in the latest fashions and gentlemen in frock coats mingled on the board sidewalks with grimy men just up from the mines, gamblers and pitchmen. Hers is an informal style of business in which a weary traveler may ring a bell for service and, drawing no response from the attendant, may go on upstairs, find a room, and pay in the morning.

'Ruined By Cornpone'
"When I came here in 1945 it was charming, just charming," Mrs. Edwards said. "Now it has been ruined by the cornpone type of business that has moved in. Too many Los Angeles types who don't have any taste to begin with. They're only interested in making a buck."

From the tall and narrow, draped windows of her hotel, Mrs. Edwards can see the Victorian mansions of the early silver nabobs. Some have been beautifully restored and are occupied by their new owners.

New owners also refurbished the famed Piper's Opera, where actors such as Edwin Booth and David Belasco performed, watched by a Territorial Enterprise drama critic named Mark Twain.

Mining Atmosphere
Along "C" Street were most of Virginia City's 213 business houses, including 100 saloons. Seventeen saloons are still operating, most with original furnishings. There are numerous red brick buildings lining the street, but many are in disrepair and gaping holes mark the spot where some have collapsed.

The back of Mrs. Edwards' hotel looks down on the canyon floor where the Virginia and Truckee Railroad wound a tortuous path from the mines to the mills a few miles away. The depot remains but the rails are gone. Rebuilding the railroad has been a key project of restoration enthusiasts.

The mines are marked by giant piles of tailings and foundations of hoisting works. The lode, discovered in 1859, produced nearly $1 billion in gold and silver from 750 miles of underground workings as deep as 3,200 feet. President Abraham Lincoln, needing money to finance the northern armies in the Civil War, drew Nevada into the union in 1864 as the 36th state.

The red light district, which once thrived, is gone without trace. In the town cemetery lie the remains of prominent leaders of the early days, but none received a bigger funeral than Julia Bulette, a favorite lady of the night who was murdered. Her casket was borne through the city in a parade in which bands played and police and fire units marched.

Hungarians Get Consumer Voice

By ANDREW SUEMEGHI
BUDAPEST (UPI) —A consumers' research magazine newly published in Hungary has already stepped on many toes—capitalist and Communist.

Nagyito (Magnifying Glass) is the first consumers' magazine in Eastern Europe that can be compared with no-holds-barred Western counterparts.

The first issue not only studied refrigerators, men's shirts and soft drinks, but gave tips on how to buy a house and land and how pensioners can defend their rights.

Consumer Guide
According to the editors, Nagyito's aim is to "put pressure on industry and trade by (guiding consumers in) refusing to buy certain articles and waiting until goods of better quality are made."

The magazine began by surveying seven refrigerators. The only Soviet model, a Saratov, got a "so-so" rating because it was "out of date." Best buy, said the magazine, was a Hungarian Lehel.

The magazine then turned impartially to Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola and Sztar-Cola. All are made in Hungary from imported Western ingredients.

Nagyito liked them all, but gave Sztar-Cola top rating—on the grounds it suited the Hungarian taste best.

Nine brands of men's shirts were studied and all but a Yugoslav import were panned. Too often, Nagyito said, Hungarian shirts carry the wrong sizes.

Pictures accompanying the article showed a series of wrinkled, crinkled shirts. Editors at the magazine said they later received a letter from one shirt factory admitting they were right.

Economist's Brainchild
Nagyito is the brainchild of Mrs. Pal Takacs, an economist and sociologist who suggested it to the Internal Trade Ministry. The ministry approved the idea but, Mrs. Takacs said, gives no financial help.

Mrs. Takacs said she edits the magazine with relative independence, helped by four full time staff members and a board of 14 experts, including engineers and economists.

The testing is farmed out to specialists, she said. Until now, Hungarian manufacturers and stores have never faced the kind of expert criticism leveled by Nagyito, and Radio Budapest reported some industrialists were angry. But Mrs. Takacs said both stores and factories had promised their cooperation.

Thousands Unequipped For Crisis Of Joblessness

Eldor's note: New faces are appearing among the ranks of the unemployed—the faces of thousands of white collar workers and professional men who are totally unequipped by background to cope with the problem of joblessness. This article examines their plight.

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) —Dunstan Hayden, a former Benedictine monk trained as a specialist in educational technology, figures he has entered the job market at the wrong time. "Everybody keeps saying that people are our most important resource but I feel like I'm being squandered," he said.

Hayden, 38, has been looking for a job for three months. For him and for thousands of other panicky white collar and professional people, there are no jobs.

"Everywhere you go, you hear the same thing," he said. "There are no government grants this year and therefore we're not hiring."

His experience is being shared by an increasing number of professionals in the economic squeeze resulting from the administration's efforts to combat inflation.

Rapid Rate Rise
A recent report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) showed that white collar unemployment rose in August to the highest level in nearly 10 years. BLS found 1,114,000 persons, or 2.7 per cent of the white collar labor force, out of work in August. A year ago, there were 873,000 jobless white collar workers—2.2 per cent of the labor force.

Many of the newly unemployed are scientists and engineers who received their degrees in the post-Sputnik says when U.S. society was putting a premium on technological skill. Now, with cutbacks in government, defense and aerospace spending, the market for their services is glutted.

J. Paul Cali, a scientist with the U.S. Bureau of Standards, said he has been trying unsuccessfully for several months to find jobs for seven fellow scientists.

British Pay The Victims

LONDON (AP) — The British government gave $28,000 to a girl whose face was marred when a former boy friend threw acid at her. It awarded $12,000 to a young steward deprived of fatherhood when he was hit in the groin by a shipboard bullet.

The money was paid by a body set up in 1964 to see that the sufferings of innocent victims of violent crime "do not go unrewarded."

The Criminal Injuries Compensation Board had paid out $17 million, and more people are appealing to it every year.

Anybody can apply who suffers physical injury from violent crimes, either as a victim or by trying to stop the crime or help the police.

The board can refuse people with a criminal background, or whose way of life is "unsuitable."

The biggest payment so far is $72,000. That arose when three youngsters playing on a colliery railway line started a coal truck trundling down a slope. The truck hit a woman out for a walk. She lost an arm and a leg, will be paralyzed for life and is "little more than a vegetable," according to a board official.

A man at a wrestling match who tapped a wrestler on the leg with a lighted cigar and got a broken jaw drew no sympathy from the board.

Nor did the young man at the office outing who got friendly with a girl he knew was married. They went to her place and were getting on even friendlier terms when the husband appeared and slashed him across the buttocks.

But a man who is stabbed in a tavern brawl can expect to get some compensation, so long as he did not start the fight.

Most Unused To Natural Milk

DENVER (AP) — Edmund Siemers, who retired recently as a passenger train conductor for the Union Pacific Railroad, recalls he was conductor of a troop train from Portland, Ore., to Denver in 1943 when the milk supply gave out.

Rail officials telephoned a dairy at Montpelier, Idaho, to arrange for replenishment. The train waited at Montpelier until 4 a.m. when milking was finished and the milk hauled to the train in 10-gallon cans.

"These are all highly trained, educated, professional people. But there just isn't room for them any place right now," he said.

"It used to be that when we had an opening here we'd have to go out and hunt for someone to fill it. Now we have 15 applicants whenever there is an opening."

First Jobs Harder
One of the trade journals that serves the engineering community reported this month that the demand for engineers and scientists has hit a 10-year low.

It published a lengthy article advising engineers on how to go about preparing for job hunting and interviewing. "The suddenness of the layoffs has left deep scars in the technological community," it said.

If things look bleak for men who've once had jobs, they're even worse for young professionals who are still trying to find a first job.

A 24-year-old college graduate with a Ph.D., a wife and baby daughter but without business or other training, explained his predicament succinctly.

He told an interviewer, one of a dozen he had seen: "If ever a man needs, a job, I do. I have mouths to feed, but I don't have any of the ordinary skills that you or a dozen other employers want."

"I feel I have wasted years on my education while others of my age group were out learning how to make a living."

How To Adapt

According to Labor Department figures, more than 16 per cent of the unemployed professionals have been out of work for 15 weeks or longer.

In Los Angeles, which has an especially large concentration of aerospace and defense contracting plants, thousands of engineers have used up their 26 weeks of unemployment benefits and still have no jobs in sight.

That means they no longer have income of any kind. For people used to living a comfortable, affluent, middle-class American life, this can be traumatic.

"You learn to get by—finally," said a rocket engineer, formerly with a small research and development firm outside Washington. "First you cut back on a lot of the little things—on entertaining, new clothes, special things for the kids."

"You put off getting a color television set, and that seems easy. Then you wonder about making the house payment, and panic hits."

All Occupations Hurting
In many cases, the only solution is for the wife to go to work—if she can find a job.

The teaching field was once a typical occupation for married women because it allowed a family to supplement its income while the husband was getting established. But now it is glutted. Boston, for example, had 3,500 applicants for 350 teaching jobs. Milwaukee had 2,000 applicants for 700 jobs. Scarsdale, N.Y., reported that it had Ph.D.'s applying to teach third-graders.

The picture is just as bleak outside the professions. The advertising industry, an economic bellwether, last year reported its first drop in employment since 1961. It was due in part at least to large cutbacks in automobile and cigarette advertising and the general slowdown in the economy.

Jobs Cut In Half
The gloomy outlook for the white collar brigade and unemployed professionals became even gloomier this month with the cancellation of two Apollo moonshots. The space agency said 700 civil servants and 2,300 space contractor personnel will be discharged.

In the space industry, private corporations will be employing only 142,000, less than half the number employed three years ago. Such figures help to explain the panic that is spreading among once relatively affluent people who never thought they would be among the ranks of the unemployed.

"You just don't realize what it means until you face it, day in and day out," Hayden said.
