Pres. Nixon Proffers Indochina Cease-Fire

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a new five-point bid to end the war in Vietnam, President Nixon has called for a standstill cease-fire throughout Indochina and a big new international conference to negotiate peace for Southeast Asia.

"Our side is ready to standstill and cease firing," Nixon told a national television and radio audience in a speech from the White House Wednesday night. He urged North Vietnam to start serious negotiations promptly.

"Nobody has anything to gain by delay and only lives to lose," he said.

At one point in the 12-minute speech he offered to negotiate "an agreed timetable" for troop withdrawals from South Vietnam without specifying removal of North Vietnamese forces as a condition. But aides said Nixon was talking about a schedule for removing North Vietnamese as well as U.S. and allied forces.

He also called for immediate and unconditional release of all prisoners of war.

Nixon's five-point peace bid is the latest in a series of settlement plans put forward since the Paris talks opened in May 1968. The newest element in American policy as disclosed Wednesday night is the call for a cease-fire in Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam. Previously Nixon had proposed an internationally supervised cease-fire in Vietnam as part of a plan for troop withdrawal by the U.S. and allied nations and by North Vietnam.

Nixon announced his new peace plan—breaking through the bounds of previous policy—on the eve of its introduction today in the Paris peace talks where prospects of its success were not rated high even by administration policy makers.

They said North Vietnam has shown no sign of moving out of the stalemate at the Paris talks. Nevertheless Nixon was said to feel the time was right to make what he himself called "an intensive effort to develop new approaches for peace in Indochina."

And administration officials expressed hope that regardless of its first public reaction, North Vietnam would take time to consider the new U.S. proposal fully.

The United States, they said, is prepared to be flexible in negotiations and discuss North Vietnamese and Viet Cong propositions already on the table in Paris as well as its own.

Here in summary are the five points of the plan:

1. All armed forces in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos should stop shooting and stand still in positions they now hold. This cease-fire should be supervised by international observers and be effective for all forms of warfare. Neither side should build up its strength after the guns fall silent.

2. An Indochina peace conference should be organized to include Laos and Cambodia as well as the two Vietnams and other unspecified nations, presumably Russia and Red China among them. Administration officials said the key to setting up such a conference was agreement by North Vietnam. Meanwhile the peace talks at Paris should continue.

3. The United States is "ready to negotiate an agreed timetable for complete withdrawals (of troops) as part of an overall settlement." Nixon made it clear his announced program of American troop removals would continue in any case at previously announced rates. He said by sometime next spring he would have taken more than 260,000 men out of Vietnam; the total withdrawn to date, he said, is 165,000.

4. The United States wants a political settlement for South Vietnam to "reflect the will of the South Vietnamese people" and at the same time "reflect the existing relationship of political forces"—evidently meaning Communists as well as non-Communists would share in power. The South Vietnamese must "determine for themselves the kind of government they want." South Vietnam, informents reported, will introduce a political settlement program at Paris.

5. Arrangements should be made for "the immediate and unconditional release of all prisoners of war held by both sides." Nixon said all journalists and other civilians also should be released at once.

The President's plan came less than a month before the Nov. 3 congressional elections, which are centered in part around the Nixon Vietnam policies.

Politicians for weeks had expected the President would undertake some dramatic initiative on the peace front when he thought the time was ripe politically.

However, White House officials told questioning reporters political considerations had nothing at all to do with the Nixon statement.

And there seemed to be no move to make a political issue of the plan on Capitol Hill where Democrats and Republicans, hawks and doves alike, acclaimed the speech as "bold" and "fair" and a test of Communist intentions toward making peace.

In Saigon the immediate reaction from South Vietnamese officials was not to comment. Several weeks ago South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu had opposed a standstill cease-fire.

Communist Side Promptly Rejects Nixon Peace Plan

PARIS (AP) — President Nixon's five-point peace plan was formally presented at the Paris peace talks today and the Communists immediately rejected it.

North Vietnam called it "an electoral gift certificate" while the Viet Cong assailed it as a means of "legalizing American aggression in Indochina."

In making the plan a part of the conference proceedings, U.S. Ambassador David K. E. Bruce said the President's proposals "represent a profound effort to achieve peace in Indochina ..."

"These proposals are designed to end the fighting throughout Indochina and to end the impasse in the negotiations in Paris," Bruce declared at the 87th plenary peace talks session.

"It is our earnest hope that the President's proposals will receive the most careful study and considered response by your side," Bruce told Ambassador Xuan Thuy of North Vietnam and Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong emissary.

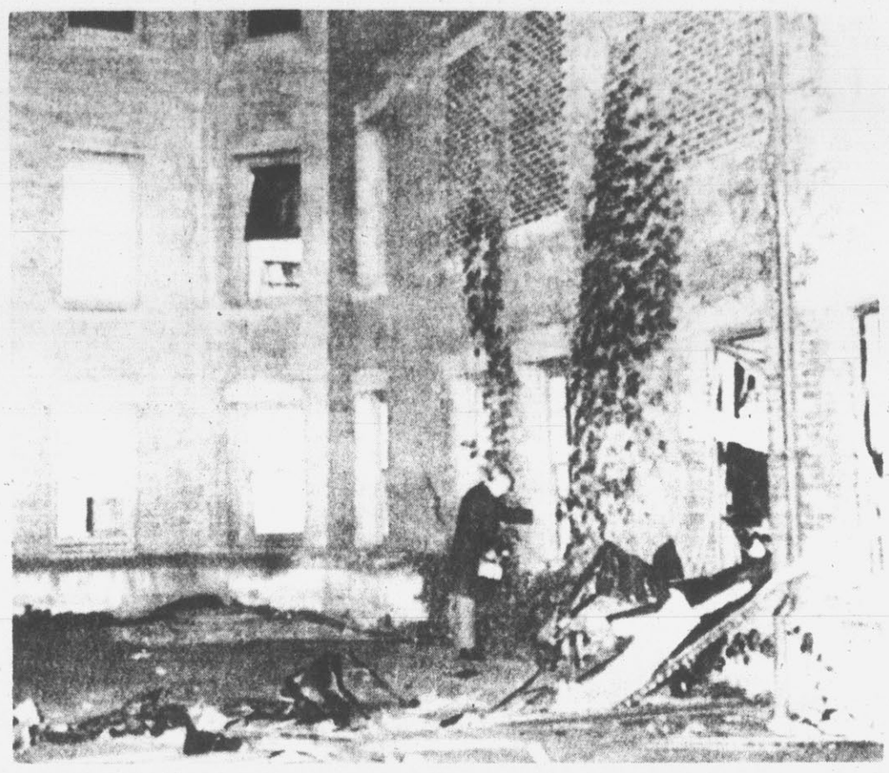

The President's five points included a standstill cease-fire throughout Indochina, a Geneva-type conference on Indochina, negotiation of a troop withdrawal timetable, balanced representation in South Vietnam's political structure and immediate release of all war prisoners.

Mrs. Binh dismissed the plan as one aimed "only at misleading public opinion on the so-called American desire for peace."

"The real significance of the proposals," she asserted, "is that they aim simply at arrogating for the United States the right to commit aggression in Laos and Cambodia and to continue Vietnamization of the war, that is, to prolong and intensify the war to impose the yoke of U.S. neocolonialism on South Vietnam.

The Viet Cong's emissary then delivered a point-by-point rejection of the President's proposals.

—On the president's call for a standstill cease-fire all over Indochina under international supervision, Mrs. Binh declared: "The United States must end its aggression and withdraw completely from the zone."

Students Shouted Down The Governor Of Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Preston Smith walked off a speakers' platform at the University of Houston Wednesday as about 750 students shouted him down.

The governor stood silent before the jeering crowd for a full minute then raised his hand in disgust and left.

He was whisked away from the building by 10 uniformed security guards and went on to a reception in Baytown.

Later, a statement from his office in Austin said:

"When a public official—myself or anyone else—cannot go on the campus of a state supoported university by invitation to deliver a speech without being interrupted by the rude rantings of a handful of unwashed, intolerant, ill-informed students, then the time has come to act.

"While I do no take this personally, and while I still have a great confidence in the vast majority of our young people, the time has now come to put a stop to such foolishness."

Smith said if the students cannot behave themselves and live under the laws of the institutions then there is no place for them in the halls of learning.

"If college administrators cannot control this type of sorry spectacle, we must find other ways to straighten out these undisciplined young people — both and non-students who stir up this kind of disturbance," he said.

The largest group at the meeting had been attracted by the promise that Smith would state his position on tuition at state universities but the speech he had prepared to deliver made no reference to this issue.
this issue.

About 50 students demanded that Smith release Lee Otis Johnson of Houston, who is serving 30 years in prison for selling a marijuana cigarette.

Student president David Jones deplored what he called "tactics designed to intimidate, frighten and demand that Gov. Smith think along the lines of the demonstrators."

"I don't think this type of thing ought to be condoned," Jones said. "He has the right of freedom of speech, especially on a college campus."

He did say, however, that Smith should have been willing to answer some of the questions about Johnson.

Johnson, a former field secretary for the Student Non Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) has contended his arrest and conviction resulted from a conspiracy by police and city officials.

Will Ask Bids This Month On 4-Laning 264

The State Highway Commission announced that it will ask for bids later this month on a 2.673 mile four-laning project that will complete the U. S. 264 Bypass near Greenville.

The project is one of 28 road programs in 26 counties of the state on which the Commission plans to ask for bids later this month. The 28 projects contain 84 miles of proposed construction and improvements.

Fred Edwards, staff engineer with the Greenville division office, said this morning that the 2.673 miles planned for the project will, in effect, involve an extension of the four-lanes from N. C. 11 west to the area known as Frog Level.

The 68-foot curb and gutter section will pick up where the last project ended at N. C. 11, he said, and complete the 264 Bypass as exists now.

Edwards noted that the bids on the project are expected to be opened on Oct. 27 to determine the low bidders and the awarding of the contracts would not come until the Commission meets in November.

Information issued by the Commission pointed out that the project will technically involve grading, a coarse aggregate base course, bituminous concrete binder, surface and culverts for improvements on U. S. 264 and 13 from about 600 feet southwest of state road 1127 at Frog Level, northeasterly to the intersection of the U. S. 264 Business and 264 Bypass, and along the bypass to N. C. 43, 11 and U. S. 13 in Greenville.

$19,000 Slated For Road 1728

Pitt County has been allocated more than $19,000 for a secondary road construction project involving State Road 1727 and surveying and right of way acquisition for a connector road .4 of a mile long from State Road 1728 to the new Ravenwood Subdivision.

BOSTON (AP) — Archbishop Humberto S. Medeiros, the son of a Portuguese immigrant, has been installed as archbishop of the 1.9 million-member Roman Catholic archdiocese of Boston, the second largest in the nation.

Standing room was at a premium in Holy Cross Cathedral as more than 3,500 witnessed the tradition-filled ceremonies Wednesday. Archbishop Medeiros succeeded Richard Cardinal Cushing, 75 and in failing health, who last month was given permission to resign by Pope Paul VI.

Guard Armory, ROTC Facility, Courthouse All Damaged By Bombs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bomb explosions heavily damaged a National Guard Armory and a county courthouse in California today and damaged the inside of Air Force and Navy ROTC facilities at the University of Washington.

There were no injuries.

Part of a wall was blown back and windows knocked out at the armory on Santa Barbara. The county courthouse in San Raphael, where a judge was taken hostage and shot to death Aug. 7, was damaged by a bomb apparently planted in a toilet.

Two of the blasts were preceded by telephoned warnings to authorities that they were about to go off.

The explosions came just two days after representatives of the radical group the Weatherman said that a "fall offensive" would soon be launched.

At a press conference in New York on Tuesday, a recording said to be the voice of Bernardine Dohrn, a Weatherman fugitive leader, said an offensive by dissident youths "will spread from Santa Barbara to Boston, back to Kent and Kansas."

The San Rafael explosion caused heavy damage to two courtrooms, a sheriff's inspector said. Inspector Bowen Bridges said a San Francisco telephone operator reported five minutes before the blast that an "excited young woman called in anonymously and said there was a big bomb in the courthouse in San Rafael and it would go off soon."

The bomb, which went off at 1:27 a.m. appeared to be dynamite and had been placed in a toilet adjacent to one of the courtrooms.

The Santa Barbara explosion went off outside an Army National Guard armory, scattering cement debris from a wall, blowing out windows and sending up columns of smoke. That explosion occurred at 4:32 a.m. at the building operated by an artillery unit of the California National Guard and shared by an Army Reserve unit.

In Seattle, a janitor was taken out of the building just prior to the blast after the Fire Department, the university and the Seattle Times got phone calls warning of the explosion. The calls came about 25 minutes before the early morning blast.

A small fire that followed the explosion in the school's Clark Hall was put out quickly, firemen said.

45 Days

PINELLAS PARK, Fla. (AP) — C. Richard Jolly, 29, an appliance repairman in whose backyard workshop two children suffocated inside a clothes dryer, began serving a 45-day jail term Wednesday for storing junk in the open.

Richard Herber, 7, and his sister Peggy Jo, 4, died Sept. 27 when they climbed inside a dryer while playing in Jolly's yard next door. The door slammed shut trapping them.

About 50 appliances—refrigerators, washers and dryers— were in the yard.

Jolly had been cited for storage junk Aug. 12 and given 10 days to clear the yard. A city inspector said Jolly had promised to have the machines removed by the weekend of Sept. 26-27.

Jury Is Selected

The selection of a jury was completed this morning and testimony was scheduled to begin in the Thomas Earl Stocks case in Pitt County Superior Court.

Stocks is being tried on charges of rape and burglary in connection with an April 27 incident at a Brook Valley home.

Selection of a jury began Monday. Twelve jurors and one alternate had been seated by the time court recessed yesterday afternoon. The second alternate was seated at 10:45 a.m. today.

Stocks and a Negro, Elmo Barber, allegedly forced their way into a Brook Valley home and assaulted the occupant, who was alone in the dwelling with her small daughter.

Barber was tried and convicted on similar charges in Pitt Superior Court in August and sentenced to life imprisonment.

TO BE SENTENCED

RALEIGH (AP) — John A. Robertson, Wake County's delinquent tax attorney, will be sentenced today or Friday for sending letters to two of North Carolina's top university officials, threatening their lives.

Nobel Prize Won By Soviet Writer; Banned In Russia

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Controversial Soviet novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn, whose works are banned in his homeland, was awarded the 1970 Nobel Prize in literature today.

The Swedish Academy of Letters said it had made the award to the 52-year-old writer, called the "Dostoyevsky of our time," for "the ethical force with which he has pursued the indispensable traditions of Russian Literature."

Solzhenitsyn was captured while commanding a Soviet artillery battery toward the end of World War II in 1945 and sent to a German forced labor camp. While there, he wrote a letter criticizing the military capabilities of "the whiskered one," an obvious allusion to Stalin.

Someone in authority saw the letter, and when Solzhenitsyn was "liberated" it turned out to be for an 11-year term in a Soviet detention camp.

His experiences there proved to be the background for "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich," a novel about a typical day of a 3,653-day sentence being served by a Russian peasant.

Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Writers Union early this year.

In 1965 the Swedish Academy awarded the prize to the Kremlin-approved writer Mikhail Sholokhov.

The prize this year is worth a record 4,000,000 crowns—close to $80,000.

When Boris Pasternak, the controversial author of "Doctor Zhivago," won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1958, Soviet authorities refused to let him travel to Oslo to accept it.

General Assembly May Decide On Student Aid

RALEIGH (AP) — The 1971 General Assembly apparently will be faced with making the decision in a dispute between North Carolina's public and private colleges and universities over how state student aid funds should be allocated.

The growing breach between the institutions' positions was widened further Wednesday when the Council of Presidents of North Carolina Public Institutions broke with the recommendation of a legislative study commission. The commission said state aid should be made available on the basis of need to students in both public and private institutions of higher learning.

A statement issued for the group by its head, president Leo Jenkins of East Carolina University, said the aid should be "given directly to the student." The amount should be fixed regardless of the institution and the differences in tuition charges whether the institution is public or private, the statement said.

Such a position has been strongly opposed by the state's financially stricken private institutions, which hope an aid program based on need will enable more less affluent students to meet their higher tuition costs.

The legislative Study Commission on Student Aid, headed by Rep. Charles Phillips, D-Guilford, approved a preliminary report Sept. 16 that supports the private institutions' proposal for an aid program based on need.

During commission hearings last spring and summer, both public and private institutions declared their positions.

An aid program based on need, as determined by tuition, brought statements of opposition from Jenkins, University of North Carolina President William Friday and community colleges head Dr. I.E. Ready.

The opposition of the public institutions to a program based on need is linked to the feeling that the 1971 General Assembly will appropriate only a few million dollars to a student aid program. They fear that the private institutions, with their higher costs, would get a larger share of the limited funds.

The president of one community college told the commission last summer that "idealistically" an approach based on need is right, "but the General Assembly won't appropriate enough money for that."

Watts Hill of Durham, who serves on the study commission as a representative of the state Board of Higher Education, has called the public institutions' recommendation "unthinkable."

Hill said that although the 1971 General Assembly cannot appropriate enough money to cover all students, the commission feels it is essential to establish the foundation of an aid program based on student need.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago a man in our small town broke into my home and tried to force his attentions on me. I am a happily married woman and I have never tried to attract this man. I was so embarrassed of what people would say I never told a soul.

Last week the same man broke into another woman's home while her husband was away and tried the same thing with her. She didn't tell her husband because she was afraid he'd kill the man. This woman is my neighbor and she confided in me. Oh, yes, he also makes obscene telephone calls to women when he knows their husbands are away. I know because I recognized his voice.

I honestly believe this man is mentally unbalanced. Should I step forward and tell his wife? They are newly married and have a small baby. Your advice is desperately needed. AFRAID TO GET INVOLVED

DEAR AFRAID: Telling his wife may accomplish nothing. Few wives will turn their husbands in because either they are afraid of them, ashamed of scandal, or they fear that if the law steps in their husbands may be sent away, lose their jobs, and the families will lose their breadwinners. This man's behavior clearly indicates that he is sick, and could be a threat to society if permitted to go free. Your police should be notified at once!

DEAR ABBY: There are three grown children in my family and we are all married and have families of our own. We all live in the same general area.

My parents live in this area, too, and are active and healthy for their ages. We have heard that in the last few months they have had four cookouts to which my husband and I and our children have not been invited. They invited their other children and grandchildren, however. We find out about these cookouts after they have taken place. My parents also visit back and forth with the other members of our family, but they seldom come to visit us, even when invited.

My husband and I have concluded that we are not liked very much by my family, and we shall let them all alone. Are we wrong to take this attitude? LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT: There is a large piece missing from this jigsaw puzzle. Before you decide to "let them alone," why not attempt to have a summit meeting with them and find out what's what? Perhaps there is something in the air that needs clearing. Parents do not usually exclude one family for no reason at all. If all efforts to restore a harmonious family relationship fail, then let them alone.

DEAR ABBY: Frequently my husband will get a telephone call during the night regarding a problem at work. The phone rings in our bedroom, and rather than ask the caller to hold the line while he goes into another room to talk, my husband will get into a loud and lengthy conversation, making it impossible for me to sleep.

I told him that I thought he was being inconsiderate. He says that is why we have a phone in the bedroom, and if he can't enjoy the convenience, we may as well have the phone taken out. I say he is selfish. He says I'm the one who is selfish. What do you say? SLEEPY TIME GAL

DEAR GAL: I say he's selfish. But I have an idea that if your husband heard it from the Delphic Oracle, the Supreme Court or Dear Abby, he'd still insist that he was right. Selfish men are usually stubborn, too.

DEAR ABBY: My boy friend and I are planning a spring wedding. The only thing that bothers me is that he was engaged two years ago and the girl had the nerve to keep the diamond and the hopechest. He claims he never asked her to return them, and he doesn't want any of these things back. I have a good mind to demand that my boy friend insist that she return them, as she has no right to keep them. He gave me a nice engagement diamond so it's not that I am jealous. What do you think? WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I think if you demand that your boy friend pay his former financee a call for any reason, you should have your head examined. Furthermore, whatever he gave her is his loss—not yours, so stay out of it.

New Cooking Series, Cookbook Highlight October For Julia

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—October is Julia Child's month. Her new cooking series, in color, premiered the 7th on educational television and her new cookbook will be published about two weeks later.

In a telephone interview, the ebullient French chef of ETV was both pessimistic and enthusiastic about the world's most acclaimed cuisine.

"We feel its dying out," she said. "France has the same difficulty getting skilled help as we do here. Young people don't like the long, hard hours."

She added that the impact already is being felt at bakeries in the south of France, where she and her husband, Paul, have a second home.

"Bread there is so poor I make my own now," she said.

Few Cooks Employ

Labor shortages and rising prices also affect home cooking. Mrs. Child said most middleclass French homes that used to have cooks no longer do cooking, in Mrs. Child's opinion because they cook every day.

Viewer mail tells her that a lo have learned to cook by wat ching her show.

The new series will feature, ir addition to Julia, some scenes filmed in France, including a fish auction in Marseilles, olive oil and preserve making, and bread baking.

"But the whole point of the show is the same," said Mrs Child. "It's cooking from the American supermarket, using American ingredients with French methods. It's not cuisine for the happy few, but for everyone."

Same Point

Volume two of "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" (Knopf) makes the same point, but in greater detail than is possible within the 30-minute format of the television series.

Mrs. Child estimated that she and her co-author, Simone Beck, used nearly 300 pounds of floor to develop a recipe for real French bread using American flour and American kitchen ranges. American flour has a higher gluten content than French, and makes dough more elastic than the French kind.

Mesdames Child and Beck have changed their minds about some things in the nine years since volume one was published and the seven years since the first TV show.

Perhaps the most significant change is their acceptance of some small electrical appliances, such as mixers and blenders, to do jobs for which they formerly recommended hand labor only.

Their techniques may change with the times, but Julia Child's sense of humor is as lively as ever.

Suggesting a blender to prepare lobster bisque, she writes that in the good old days you would have needed four utensils and "either a flock of kitchen minions or the strength of a Japanese wrestler" to do the job.

SWEET POTATOES

Fall and bushels of sweet potatoes go hand-in-hand. Sweet potatoes are delicious to eat — add color to any meal — and rich in food value. What more could you ask of any one food?

Choose those of deep yellow color inside for the most food value. A six ounce sweet potato will provide the average adult with a two day's needs of vitamin A. Sweet potatoes are rich in vitamin C and do have some vitamin B and minerals.

Two general types of sweet potatoes are grown commercially. One type, sometimes called "Yams" or "Porto Rico", has a soft, moist texture when cooked and very sweet. They have a very deep orange flesh.

The second type, when cooked is firm, some what dry and mealy and has a pale orange to light yellow flesh.

When selecting raw sweet potatoes look for well shaped, firm sweet potatoes with smooth, bright uniformly colored skins, free from signs of decay. They are more perishable than Irish potatoes, so extra care should be used in selecting them.

Avoid sweet potatoes with worm holes, cuts, grub injury injury, or any other defects which penetrates the skin: this causes waste and can readily lead to decay. Even if you cut away the decayed portion, the remainder of the potato flesh which looks normal may have a bad taste. Decay is the worst problem with sweet potatoes and if of three types: wet, soft decay; dry, firm decay which begins at the end of the potato making it discolored and shriveled; and dry rot in the form of sunken, discolored areas of the sides of the potato.

Sweet potatoes can be canned, frozen, boiled, baked, browned, fried, or candied, or used for making pies, custard, cookies and cakes.

For best flavor and nutritive value, always cook sweet potatoes whole in their jackets — it takes 35 to 55 minutes in boiling water and about 35 to 60 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F). The moist type cooks in less time than the mealy type.

Opera Star Rosalind Elias: Cooking Is Therapy

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) —Opening night supper parties are traditional in the theater and opera worlds, but the meal isn't usually cooked by the leading lady. Especially when she's a first prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera.

Mezzo soprano Rosalind Elias is an exception. In an interview here, the American-born singer said she enjoys cooking Lebanese food for post-opera parties she gives for members of the company. Many of her parties follow opening performances of operas in which she appears. She added that her first this season won't follow her opening performance. It comes too soon after her return from the summer in Europe.

"But I will have a 'Hoffman' party later in the season," she said. Her initial role this season is that of Giulietta in "Tales of Hoffman."

Culinary art is relatively new to her repertoire. As the youngest of 13 children, including four sisters, she never had to learn it as a child.

"Oddly enough, my husband taught me a lot about cooking," she said. "And it does register when you're younger. Later, you start remembering things."

Her husband is a Lebanese-born lawyer, Zuhayr A. Moghrabi. Her parents were born in Lebanon, but emigrated to Lowell, Mass.

Miss Elias' wonderfully expressive face lit up as she described some foods prepared by her mother, some of which she now makes for guests.

She said she especially likes to serve sfeeha, which are meat pies, and cooked kibbee, which is baked ground lamb, because both can be made ahead and forzen. This leaves her free on the day of a party and performance to make other things, such as tabocley, homors and baba ghannouj.

She explained tabooley is wheat garden salad, made with cracked wheat, green onions, fresh parsley and mint, tomatoes, lemon juice, olive oil, salt and pepper. It's dipped up with lettuce or cabbage leaves or preserved grape leaves. Homos and baba ghannouj also are dips, served traditionally with Arabic bread. Homos is based on pured chick peas with tahini, which is sesame seed paste, and baba ghannouj uses cooked purred eggplant with tahini.

All this sounds like hard work, but to Miss Elias, it is rewarding.

"Cooking is therapy for me," she said. "I'll sleep as late as I can on the morning of a performance. But I'll cook that day because it keeps my mind occupied—it keeps me from getting too excited.

"If I had to cook, maybe it would annoy me. Right now, I love it. It's creative, something someone will enjoy. You make a party because you love the people."

Once the food is prepared, she hires help to serve and clean up, so that she is free to mingle with her guests.

Miss Elias said she and her husband don't have a steady diet of Lebanese food because it's too fattening, but guests have come to expect it. She recalled one whom she told she might fix a jelled salad instead of the usual tabooley, which is much more complicated and time-consuming to make.

Said the guest, obviously dismayed:

"Oh, no! We don't come to your house to get American food."

Congressional Reforms Needed

Often it seems to us that the Congressional processes are in danger of breaking down entirely.

We felt that way when we read that Congress had decided to adjourn for the election campaign with plans to return after the election.

According to news reports Congress will quit next Wednesday. The congressmen will return Nov. 16 for a post-election session. Predictably congressional leaders are saying the session will be a disaster.

Pressure for the post election session came from the House where all 435 seats are up for election Nov. 3. Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said that since members know that there will be an adjourned session it will become increasingly difficult to get a quorum.

Still pending is the amendment guaranteeing equal rights for women, crime bills and job-safety measures. There are hopes of passing the $66.7 billion military appropriations bill before the recess.

It is expected that a combination Social Security - welfare reform bill will be among the business to be considered when Congress reconvenes Nov. 16. Also to be taken up in the post election session is a bill providing for import quotas on textiles and other products.

Congressional sessions are stretching far longer than they should or ever were intended to, and it is because Congressional machinery has not been streamlined to provide the efficient type operation that is needed for handling the nation's modern day problems.

The rigid seniority system doesn't always allow the most qualified and able men to take their places as heads of committees.

Perhaps someday Congress will place congressional reforms at the head of its priority list and something will finally be done to make the law making processes more efficient.

Hemline Issue Surmounts All

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — One question among political and economic matters troubling the domestic front this autumn hangs over the head of every woman.

What length to go to in meeting the hemline issue?

Hardly a female is so liberated she can think about a fall wardrobe without a quiver of indecision. To bra or not to bra is not so agonizing a choice as where to wear the skirt — mini, midi or in-between.

That feminine decision has breathtaking interest for the man on the street and the merchant in the store. At stake is the scenic quality of the environment for the first, and the state of the economy for the second.

An opportunity to skirt the issue arose last weekend when North Carolina Democratic women met in Raleigh for their state convention. Three hundred or so women from throughout the state provided a display of current fashion as they attended afternoon, evening and morning functions.

A Downward Trend

Studied observation led to the conclusion that Tar Heel women are following a course of moderation and compromise. There's a downward trend, but no abrupt drop. In some quarters the line is holding firm.

Naturally, politics took precedence over fashion for the Democratic women. They adopted a constitution and by-laws for a statewide organization, heard Rep. Martha Griffiths of Michigan at a banquet and Former Ambassador to France Sargent Shriver at a luncheon, and vowed to go home and work hard for party candidates in the general election.

Hemlines cropped up as a private concern in conversations behind the scenes.

"We'll take no offical position on skirt lengths," laughed Mrs. Margaret S. Harper of Southport, state Democratic vice chairman. "Every woman must decide for herself. That's the democratic way."

She flipped back the hem of her snappy black - and - white striped coat. "I've let my hem down an inch - and a - half. That's as far as I'm going. I don't think the midi looks good, do you?" she said.

She capitulated to style for a pair of white, over - the - calf boots. Husband Jim looked askance at the flashy footwear and threatened his own fashion revolution. "If you wear those," he grumped, "I think I'll grow a beard."

First Lady Lowers

The advice and consent of the Governor guides Mrs. Jessie Rae Scott in setting the boundary for fall skirts.

"I tried it the new length, but Bob said it had to come up," she said of her smart black coat dress. "I had it raised once, but it still has to be taken up about an inch or so. I think knee - length is what I'll wear."

Leaders must lead on every issue. Mrs. C. Gordon Maddrey of Raleigh was in the forefront, both as president of the host Wake County Democratic Women and in style.

Her brown tweed ensemble was well below the knee. "I think I'm going to like it," she said. "You know, designers can do wonderful things with the proportion of the skirt. It can make a short person look taller, and a tall person look shorter."

For daytime, she favors about 16 inches from the floor; after five, about an inch longer. That means a skirt just as the top of the calf. "I can't go to the ankle length," she said firmly.

There's some correlation between age and skirt length. There are women of mature years who never raised their hems, and who expect to keep them right where they have been.

Youth Holds Firm

Some younger women are just as adamant against lowering skirts. "No," said Mrs. Bob Bingham of Boone, wife of the YDC president. "I know what looks best for me, and that's what I'll wear."

Her soft dress in a dark but vivid print was a flattering three or four inches above the knee. "I'm not tall enough for a longer skirt," she said to her husband's approving nod.

Pants suits offer a way out for the woman who hasn't made up her mind. They were on the scene in great variety and numbers. There were pants suits in the evening with sequins and beads, pants suits in the morning in double knit and tweed.

Comfort with style is the appeal, said Mrs. Sam Wilson, Jr., of Fountain who wore a lime green pants suit outfit. "But you can be sure when Sam comes home in the evening he finds me in something more feminine than pants," she said.

Most husbands will exercise some influence in the final choice, she agreed. "You know how Sam feels, though. He likes skirts short on everybody but his wife," she added.

The issue is far from resolved.

Hard Evidence State Drug Problem Growing

That the drug problem has become a very real thing in North Carolina is illustrated by the fact that the State Probation Commission will ask for officers who would specialize in helping persons convicted of drug law violations.

The request will be made of the next General Assembly.

There are already officers who work with alcoholics, which has long been recognized as a problem in our state. Now the drug culture has brought an additional problem and whole new cadres of personnel will be required to cope with it.

Opines Some Heads To Roll

By JOHN KILGO

BOONE — North Carolina Republican Party Chairman James Holshouser — predicting his party will make "sizable" gains in the 1971 General Assembly — says "Some pretty big heads in the Democrat Party will roll in November."

In forecasting a rosy future for the GOP in Tar Heel politics, Holshouser says North Carolinians are unhappy about many things as the November elections draw near.

"The concerns of the people vary in the different parts of the State," Holshouser says, "but I can assure you that the people are really griped off about taxes. They're also concerned about education in general and desegregation in particular. Black and white are concerned about it. And, of course people are alarmed about crime in the streets."

The Republicans now hold 29 seats in the State House and 12 in the Senate. The 36-year-old mountain lawyer, who has headed the Tar Heel Republicans since 1966, refuses to say just how many seats he expects his party to pick up in the Legislature, but he leaves no doubt as to what will be the number one campaign issue.

It's spelled, T-A-X-E-S.

"We contended in 1969 that the taxes weren't needed," Holshouser said. "The State ended up the fiscal year in June with a $118 million surplus. Our candidates are telling the people that not a single penny of this money has gone for education or mental health. It's setting up there in Raleigh. The Democrats are trying to get out from under the tax issue, and we're trying to hold them under."

Holshouser says most GOP candidates for the General Assembly are advocating the repeal of the gasoline tax and the soft-drink tax.

"And while the cigarette tax might be popular with some of our candidates in the Piedmont," he said, "Republican candidates in the East are campaigning to have the tobacco tax reduced or repealed."

In looking to November, Holshouser said some big Democrat names in the General assembly wouldn't be going back in 1971, though he declined to name names. He said the Republican National Committee has placed North Carolina as the fourth state in the nation on its priority list.

"Only New York, Connecticut, and California are receiving more attention from the national GOP than North Carolina," Holshouser says. "This means that we are getting sizable and substantial help from the national level to help our seven Congressional candidates."

Holshouser contends that GOP candidates all over the State will be helped considerably by heavy artillery being sent to North Carolina. House Minority Leader Gerald Ford will be in Southern Pines Saturday to speak for Congressman Earl Ruth.

"And Vice President Agnew is coming to Raleigh the last week in October," Holshouser says. "We think a visit by the Vice President that close to election day has got to help us a great deal."

Holshouser says ten years ago Republicans in North Carolina had only one

Strength For Today

GET BUSY

William Shakespeare was certainly one of the greatest geniuses the human race has produced in all its history. Yet he died not knowing he was a genius. He believed he would find a place in the history of English literature because of his sonnets — which few people except professional scholars ever read today. As for the plays that have made his name famous — Shakespeare considered them writings by which he made a living. He would probably turn over in his grave today if he knew that his plays are now considered the brightest literary jewels of all time. He would probably say: "I wrote those plays to make a living. But have you read my sonnets? Now there is literature."

And the sonnets gather dust on our book shelves while we still line up at the box office to see the plays which Shakespeare considered "pot-boilers" (defined in the dictionary as "a literary work hurriedly produced to obtain ready money").

Taken the world over, people know very little about themselves. Often if they have done something really significant they die without realizing its significance.

What does than mean for those of us living in the middle of the twentieth century? It may mean that we are doing things every day of great significance. The future will tell the final story. What we need to do is to keep everlastingly at our appointed jobs, be honest with ourselves and others, and let the future tell the final story.

TWO'S COMPANY!

Charm Of The Past

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Memory is the great reconciler in life.

You've piled up a lot of memory trackage yourself if you can look back and remember when —

A farm boy's day was made if the engineer on a passing train returned his friendly wave. To him that was a salute from the great outside world beyond the acres of home—the world he would go out and try to conquer.

A spendthrift was a kid who used up most of his week's allowance seeing how many balls of penny chewing gum he could put in his mouth at the same time.

If a girl couldn't find a beau in her own home town, she'd make a series of visits to cousins in other towns, hoping her luck would be better there.

It took a woman all day to wash and dry her hair.

A strong dentist took pride in his ability to pull a tooth with his bare fingers.

About the only place the average family had a charge account was at the grocery store, and all the kids tagged along when father paid it on Saturday night in order to get a free lollipop from the grocer.

Butchers wore straw hats and their shops had sawdust on the floor, as did many saloons.

The hidden resentment against the richest man in town burst forth on Halloween, when men joined the boys in overturning the iron deer on his front lawn.

A lad was regarded as grown up when he put on long pants, got a gold watch from his father, and could go to a burlesque show without having to sneak in.

Reformers thought public morals had reached a new ebb when some brazen girls started wearing two-piece bathing suits that exposed their belly buttons.

You knew you were in a poor section of town if you saw working men sitting in front porch rocking chairs in the summer twilight with their bare feet cooling on the banister.

A thrifty man always greased the bucket with which he sent one of the kids to fetch some draft beer from the neighborhood saloon. That was supposed to keep down the volume of foam.

It took the great depression to knock down a long-cherished American idea—that even in hard times a man willing to work could always find a job.

A family was regarded as a success if it could afford the services of both a hired girl and a hired man.

Postmen made their rounds twice a day instead of just once —and still had time to come into the kitchen and gossip over a cup of coffee.

The thing that most men feared almost as much as the devil was getting in debt.

Folks popped more corn at home than they ate in movie houses.

Any husband who helped his wife do the dishes pulled the blinds down first so the neighbors wouldn't see him and spread the rumor that he was henpecked.

Jim Buckley's Assets

NEW YORK — It was right on the stroke of 9 o'clock one morning last week when the rented limousine pulled away from 60 Sutton Place in midtown Manhattan. The candidate stretched his legs, put on his glasses, and plunged into a fast study of the day ahead. Then a police car pulled alongside.

"How things look, Jim?" The officer could not have been more than 25—crew-cut, pug-nosed, and five generations of County Cork in his smile. The candidate leaned forward, traded smile for smile, and said things looked great. "Keep up the good work," said New York's finest, giving a thumbs-up salute. Then the traffic light changed to go, and one more day on the campaign trail had begun for James L. Buckley.

He is among the most attractive candidates ever to bid for a seat in the United States Senate, and this year's contest in New York ranks one-two—three among the most interesting races in the nation. Buckley is running for the seat about to be left vacant by the incumbent Charles E. Goodell. He is running with charm and conviction and the tacit support of Richard Nixon; and if he can pick up two vital elements in the next two weeks, he will make it.

One element is money for TV commercials. The other element is effective organization among his conservative supporters. These were still question marks last week.

For the record, the three-way Senate race now finds Democrat Richard L. Ottinger well in front. Buckley, bearing colors of New York's Conservative Party, is six to ten points behind him. Far to the rear, Republican Goodell is struggling vainly to catch up. Ottinger and Goodell are unabashedly liberal; Buckley's hope for winning a plurality lies in uniting moderates and independents of both major parties, plus his own conservative supporters. Some six million votes will be cast; Buckley's aim is to get 2.5 million of them.

Can he do it? The odds are surely against him. No independent or third-party candidate has made it to the Senate since George Norris in 1936. Ottinger poured two million dollars into his own successful primary fight; the Democratic nominee reportedly is prepared to throw another million into this general election. Party allegiance in this country is dying slowly, but it dies hard; the well-oiled and experienced major organizations will roll out heavy party-label votes for both Ottinger and Goodell.

Yet Buckley has a great deal going for him. He has Clifton White, for one thing, and White is a pro in the game of campaign management. Buckley himself is no amateur: He managed brother Bill's campaign for Mayor of New York in 1965; he rolled up an astonishing 1.1 million votes in his own campaign for the Senate two years ago; and he now meets the voters with a Kennedy charisma that makes old ladies giggle and young ones roll their eyes.

Buckley has other political assets. He has the endorsement of both police and firemen in New York. Democrat Mario Proccacino and Republican John Marchi, their parties' candidates for Mayor last year, have plumped in his corner. He got a big boost ten days ago when

Other Editors Say Tell Whole Story!

(The Raleigh Times)

State Republican Chairman Jim Holshouser, busy campaigning yesterday in a flying trip from Murphy to Manteo, said that "right now it appears that most, if not all, the taxes enacted last year will be subject to attack.

This is a popular thing for Holshouser to do. Repealing taxes is always popular, and undoubtedly all Tar Heel voters will want to hope fervently that the North Carolina Republicans in the legislature could find a way to repeal the new taxes enacted by the 1969 legislature. After all. Tax repeal is like having Christmas every day.

But, at the same time that he was talking about repealing taxes, Holshouser didn't say anything about what state services he would favor eliminating to make up for the loss in tax revenue. At least, the news stories on his campaigning of yesterday didn't mention anything about cutting state services.

But, if taxes are cut and other taxes aren't passed, the services the state offers must be cut. It is that simple. North Carolina operates on a close general fund budget, and has always done so. North Carolina's taxes are tied closely to economic conditions, and under the present Republican administration in Washington, economic prospects aren't exactly rosy. And, unless they do become rosy quickly, North Carolina's revenue picture won't be rosy, either.

It is true that there will be a credit balance on hand at the end of the current biennium. But, Governor Scott has already warned that the balance may well be under $100,000,000, which would compare with the $153,000,000 the 1969 legislature had on hand to balance the budget.

The smaller the credit balance, the greater problem the 1971 legislature will have balancing the budget.

Holshouser is a veteran legislator. He knows the ins and the outs of legislative budget balancing as well as any member of the Assembly. He should explain the whole picture to North Carolinians, even when he is campaigning.

The other Republicans campaigning with him yesterday also are legislators. They, too, know the problems of state budgeting. In their campaigning, they should be willing to share all their budget knowledge with the voters.

Root Of Protectionism Surge

By ELMER ROESSNER

There's a bi-partisan move in Congress to change America's course away from free trade and toward protectionism. Bharat Ram, president of the International Chamber of Commerce and

ELMER ROESSNER

Indian businessman, has warned that it can lead to a disastrous trade war. Many Americans have warned that it can cut sales of U. S. farm products abroad and throw the import-export business generally into turmoil.

How did we get into this situation?

Inflation is the big cause.

As the buying power of the dollar has been eroded, labor has demanded constantly higher wages. This has increased production costs so that other nations, all with lower labor costs, can undersell us in world markets and here in the U.S.

Autos, for example. Foreign makers have grabbed off sales of about a million cars a year in the U.S. This year American auto makers have produced minicars to compete with foreign imports. But try as the U.S. automakers did to produce an inexpensive car, small foreign cars are still cheaper.

Exporting Jobs

Foreign labor has generally been cheaper than American, but inflation has increased the differential. And as it widens, Americans themselves have been making, or have used parts and products from aboad.

All kinds of apparel from shirts to suits, are being made in Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Thailand, Mexico and the Caribbean and sold at half the price American-made goods can be sold for.

Vast amounts of electronic components and completed products, including television sets, are being made in Japan, so much that U. S. makers are cutting back production of black and white TV tubes.

All this amounts to the export of American employment.

American travel abroad has set new records each year, partly because Americans are affluent but largely because it is cheaper, even after plane fares, to vacation in Europe.

The Two-Priced Dollar

A by product of inflation has been the two-priced dollar. The purchasing power of the dollar in America is only a fraction of what it used to be when it was freely exchangeable for gold. Now it's illegal for Americans to own gold, except in jewelry or coin collections. But foreign governments can still get gold at $35 an ounce.

The U.S. has maintained this rate of exchange to keep the dollar the world standard.

This has made foreign nations hungry for good-as-gold American dollars. They have subsidized exports by cutting taxes on them; they have sold goods on the American market at prices lower than in their own lands, sometimes below the cost of production, to gain dollar credit.

And all this is why American manufacturers, backed by organized labor, are clamoring for tough quotas and higher tariffs to protect their markets and their jobs.

Island Talent Hired For Roles In Hawaii Five-0

By BEVERLY PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — A state legislator flashes onto the screen as a shinto priest, a neighbor housewife suddenly appears as a Waikiki hooker and a local nightclub owner playing a crooked private eye is roughed up by gangsters.

Islanders are never sure who will turn up next on Hawaii Five-O, the locally cast and produced television series which has hit the top of the ratings.

"The freshness of the people is what makes the show work so well," said casting director Ted Thorpe, who has interviewed some 8,000 local people for the program. "This could never be done in Hollywood. One of the things that killed the Hawaiian Eye show was that they used all the old typical Hollywood actors."

The series starring Jack Lord began three years and 59 episodes ago. A CBS spokesman says $12 million has been spent on the show and 75 per cent has gone into the state economy.

But local people seem less concerned with the $120 a day union scale they're paid and more interested with the reaction from fans and friends.

"It's a status symbol if you're a local ham," noted Kimo McVay, owner of Duke Kahanamoku's nightclub in Waikiki where Don Ho rose to stardom.

"I finally made it after joking about it for three years," he added. "I even offered my two Rolls Royces and said I would play the chauffeur."

McVay was cast as an expensive private eye, just slightly outside the law. "I get shoved around and say four lines," he laughed, "but friends on the mainland will see me and say, 'Oh, my god, Kimo, you big ham'".

For others, parttime acting has caused problems.

"The schedule is so erratic, I couldn't do it again," said Howard Miyake, a lawyer and state representative. "Once I rearranged all my appointments for one day and then shooting was cancelled. We never got together again."

Miyake said his role as a shinto priest appeared so natural friends told him he looked as though he had been doing it all his life. "I even got letters from Montana, Colorado and Canada," he said.

Josie Over, 27, is a Honolulu housewife who recently has been cast in the 1,000th role of the show. "It's fun to get away from the normal grind," said the mother of three. "But I wouldn't want to do it constantly."

"This is my third role," she said cheerfully, "but the first time I got on I died—I was the girlfriend of the prisoner. Then I was a hooker in a bar and now I'm the girlfriend of a gangster. Friends call up and say, 'Oh—you're the gangster's girl, how neat!'"

Four of the regulars on the show are no strangers to Hawaii. Zulu, who plays detective Kono, is a beachboy-turned-entertainer and disc jockey. Kam Fong who plays another Five-O detective, Chinn Ho Kelly, still maintains his real estate agency. Richard Denning, a longtime actor who plays the governor, semi-retired to Hawaii several years ago. Peggy Ryan, remembered as Donald O'Connor's dancing partner, is secretary to the leading character, Steve McGarrett. In real life she is the wife of a local newspaper columnist, Eddie Sherman.

"We fill as many roles here as possible," said producer Robert Stambler. "It's less expensive and gives a documentary feel to use real places with real people." Stambler says key roles needing actors from the mainland are kept to a minimum, about four per show.

"But there are problems," he said. "Nervousness Manifests nervousness and creates great insecurities for our regular people."

Others agree that the large number of non-professional actors has drawbacks. "They freeze up and it's stark terror, you can see their pupils dilate," noted Jack Lord, who owns part interest in the series. "This is no amateur night in dixie—locals are okay in a master shot but as soon as they are in a single, they freeze.

"It costs $1,600 an hour to shoot the series and with amateurs there are always more takes," he added. "We still have to bring in the major roles from the mainland."

Casting director Thorpe views the situation a little differently. "It takes a whole day for a pretty local girl to stop looking at Jack and do what she's supposed to do. " he said.

the respected Rochester Democrat & Chronicle broke with years of Republican party tradition to recommend his election.

What Buckley has chiefly on his side, apart from his own incandescent personality, is the mess that New Yorkers see around them: crime, smog, pornography, a staggering welfare roll. To voters fed up with liberal permissiveness, Buckley comes on strong. He is a law and order man, but he has avoided shrillness on the issue. His own credentials in the field of conservation are impeccable; he is probably the only senatorial candidate in history who ranks as an authority on the musk ox. He parts company with the Nixon administration on its welfare bill. Buckley's idea is to cut the rolls down, not to increase them.

Unhappily, the professionalism of Buckley's headquarters is not evident on the campaign trail. The day that I spent with the candidate last week was strictly from sandlot ball. He spent seven hours on Long Island, doing the shopping center bit, and didn't earn the political profit he might have had from a 30-second spot on TV. But three weeks remain in the race, and he's gaining momentum. My guess is Buckley by the tip of his good Irish nose.

"Now we have 41 legislators," Holshouser says, "100 County Commissioners, four Congressmen and 28 Sheriffs. Democrats don't like to talk about it, but North Carolina is no longer a one-party State."

Holshouser was asked to comment on remarks Rocky Mount Republican Jim Gardner made to this reporter three weeks ago, when Gardner said he had a bitter taste in his mouth for the Republican Party. Holshouser dodged that question as if it were a fatal dart.

"I don't even want to talk about that," he said. "I saw the story, but I don't even want to comment by saying no comment."

Holshouser himself is mentioned as his party's candidate for Governor in 1972. He laughs about that, though he is obviously flattered by it.

"I never make predictions about my own future," he says.

Land Acquisition Given Approval

RALEIGH (AP)—The Council of State approved land acquisitions Wednesday for the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and Western Carolina University.

The council gave the UNC-Greensboro campus approval to acquire a lot next to the campus from Maude C. McCluen for $20,185 to provide access to garage and maintenance buildings.

UNC-Greensboro also got approval to acquire four parcels of land for a parking area for students at a total cost of $65,100.

Western Carolina was given permission to acquire 37.36 acres from W. B. Dillard for $267,300 for a campus expansion.

"GIVE THE UNITED WAY"

No Knee-Jerk Reaction When Trouble Brews In N.C.

AP News Special
By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — In a coastal North Carolina town, police received word that about 50 adults were blocking school buses at a local high school.

—In a little town further up the coast, police noted large crowds on a picket line at a local plant.

—In a large Piedmont city 125 black pupils walked out of their high school and headed toward the fairgrounds where white students had gathered.

Each of these situations came about within the past month, and each had the potential for triggering disorder. If they sound familiar, it's because similar circumstances in other North Carolina communities recently have set off headline-catching disruptions.

In this era of social change and tension, North Carolina authorities, like those across the rest of the nation, are having to devote an increasing amount of their time to civil and school disorders.

In 1969, North Carolina's Highway Patrol, which was created to police the roads, spent 31,460 manhours dealing with civil disturbances.

Maj. James Duykendall, the patrol's enforcement officer, said that although no comparative figures have been compiled, the 1969 total is undoubtedly a record.

From January to August this year, the patrol had already expended 5,310 manhours helping local authorities handle civil disorders.

But even these figures do not give the total picture of the time and effort spent on disturbances.

Through a sophisticated procedure formalized by the patrol in the past two years, patrolmen remain on the alert in any area where tension exists or a potentially troublesome situation is developing that could call for direct patrol action.

In recent months these alerts or stand-by situations have been occurring at the rate of one to three a week in North Carolina. And reports of tense situations like those listed above are now pouring into the patrol's Raleigh office at the rate of almost one a day.

During the past weekend alone, at the request of local officials and with the go-ahead from Gov. Bob Scott, patrolmen were put on the alert in five areas — for possible labor troubles in Washington, N.C., and for racial or school - related tensions in Statesville, Mooresville, Rocky Mount and Oxford.

The patrol is notified of these tension situations through a procedure formalized by Gov. Bob Scott more than a year ago.

In May of 1969 Scott sent out a letter to all mayors and local officials in North Carolina informing them how to request patrol or National Guard assistance.

The request must first go, by telephone and telegram, to the governor or one of his aides. Scott asked the local officials to alert him "immediately when a request for state assistance is under consideration."

At this point the governor's office notifies the patrol, and a commissioned or noncommissioned officer is sent in to assess the situation and form a liaison with local authorities.

Kuykendall said the officer determines what the problem is, gathers the intelligence reports and feedback from groups or persons involved and assesses potential manpower needs.

The information is collected as a "special incident report" and sent back through channels to Gov. Scott. It is the governor who must give the order to put patrolmen on "Signal 11" or stand-by.

Troopers on signal 11 "prepare to move, fully equipped to a designated area on a moment's notice and will be prepared for a prolonged stay." Extra equipment and riot gear are brought to the district patrol headquarters for quick movement into the area in case the patrol is called into action.

Kuykendall said under the present system, the patrol is seldom caught by surprise by a sudden outbreak of violence.

"You can usually see these things building up," he said. "Our people usually know when tensions are developing."

In a situation that builds or simmers over a period of time, the patrol's extensive and detailed files of special incident reports provide a history and background on which to base decisions.

Kuykendall said the patrol involvement in disorders began years ago with scattered labor disputes. It has burgeoned in the past decade with the advent of marches, sit-ins and civil disturbances.

In 1969, College disruptions took up most of the patrol's off-the-highway hours. In the past few months it has been trouble in the high schools.

According to Kuykendall, the assassination of Martin Luther King in 1968 and the rioting which followed "brought into focus" the need for reequipping and retraining the patrol to meet this special kind of situation.

All troopers have undergone civil disturbance training in the past few years and all new recruits go through it.

In 1969 General Assembly authorized the addition of 100 men to the patrol in the 1969-70 biennium, bringing patrol strength to 933.

"We've tried to make our people as well-trained as possible," Kuykendall said. "A well-trained man doesn't make mistakes."

"We definitely don't want to create the feeling you've got a police state here," he said. "It's not true and it's not what we want."

A new manual being prepared for highway patrolmen notes that law enforcement officers dealing with disturbances have been criticized not only for lack of planning and organization but lack of "impartiality and singleness of purpose."

This makes it necessary, it adds, for the patrol to establish formal policies "based upon legal and moral foundations."

"We're there for the protection of all people — strikers and marchers and all," Kuykendall said. "But if lawlessness occurs, we want to be in the position to deal with it lawfully."

Five Sentenced For Burglary Conspiracy

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Five Tennessee men who pleaded guilty to conspiring to burglarize financial institutions in 14 states have been sentenced to prison terms ranging from four to 13 years.

The conspiracy allegedly involved the burglary of five banks and 35 savings and loan associations in Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia, Texas, Florida, Virginia, Ohio, North Carolina, South Carolina, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Missouri.

U.S. District Court Judge Newell Edenfield meted out the sentence Wednesday to Alfred Junior Caldwell, 28, and James Glenn Collins, 30, both of Nashville; David O. Hill, 27, Eli William Caylor, 29, and Carl William Robinson, 28, all of Knoxville.

Caldwell and Collins each were sentenced to five years on a conspiracy charge along with eight years each on an overt burglary act.

The two sentences, a total of 13 years each, will be served consecutively.

Hill was sentenced to four years on the conspiracy charge and four years for an overt act of burglary. The sentences are to run concurrently.

Caylor, Hill's brother-in-law, received the same sentence as Hill. However, both men also were fined $2,002.97 each— the same amount officers said they found on them when they were arrested on a bank burglary charge in Jackson, Miss.

Hill and Caylor are to serve the federal sentences after finishing eight-year terms they now are serving in a Mississippi prison.

Robinson was sentenced to five years for conspiracy and five years for an overt burglary act with the two terms to run concurrently.

Plastic Mixed With Concrete

ELGIN, Ill. (AP) — Robert W. Layer Jr., an architect who is active in environmental activities in the Fox Valley area, is experimenting with ground plastic as an ingredient in concrete.

Involved in a research project sponsored by the Society of the Plastics Industry, Layer mixed 150 pounds of ground polyethylene scrap plastics as an experiment.

The scrap was used as partial replacement for sand.

Tests showed the plastic-concrete mix was 10 to 15 per cent lighter in weight. Although still when poured, the material was still workable with a trowel. And subject to vibrations from machinery and heavy equipment, it did not crack.

Layer said the mixture is known as "plascrete" and will remain in the public domain because he and his fellow scientists do not plan to seek a patent on the substance.

BREAK FOR LANDLORDS

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas legislature has given landlords a tool to cope with persons who skip out on their rent. Under recent legislation, the landlords can get a lien on all baggage and other property found within the dwelling.

Young Lawyers Display Growing Social Awareness

EDITOR'S NOTE—The big law firm of America offers its recruits a glowing future of power, prestige and money—starting at up to $18,000 a year. But that isn't enough for growing numbers of socially aware young lawyers. The poor need law, too, and they are leaving the legal lucre to see they get it, even if they become poor themselves in the process. A report from AP's Living Today Department.

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

When he graduated from Harvard Law School seven years ago, Tony Roisman looked like a good bet to become a wealthy tax lawyer. Last year he earned $800. But Tony Roisman considers himself a successful man—as well a happy one.

He and hundreds of other attorneys are part of the new breed of lawyers who want to apply their skills to what they feel are the sore spots of America, convinced the phrase "equal justice under law" is often less than that.

The new legal breed feels it's no longer relevant to find tax loopholes for large corporations, push rate increases for public utilities or help labor get bigger raises. Instead, the new lawyers want to see legal aid made available to the poor and middle-class citizens, as well as the rich.

Roisman, himself, gave up a lucrative job two years ago.

"I decided what I was doing wasn't important—fun, sure — but it didn't matter to me if such and such a company got a tax ruling. I was doing the work, but I wasn't committed to it," said Roisman whose Washington firm, Berlin, Roisman and Kessler, is one of the few self-supporting public interest firms in the country. Roisman's wife, also a lawyer, works in Washington. His decision to forego private practice cut their income in half.

The majority of lawyers, however, still sell their skills to private law firms, attracted by influence, profits and prestige.

Many feel there isn't the challenge or the diversity in public interest law.

"I'd rather use my skills and crafts in the wrong way but to the fullest extent rather than squander them away with Band-Aid lawyers," said Jack Weiss, an editor of the 1970 Harvard Law Review.

But neighborhood legal aid offices, first funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity—OEO—in 1965, have been sprouting up all over the country. By last June, 1,950 legal aid lawyers worked out of 850 neighborhood law offices in 265 communities.

"The appeal is idealism. They're not motivated by money," said John Adams, director of the OEO legal services program.

One OEO legal services lawyer is Daniel S. Press, 27, a 1968 Yale Law School graduate who works with the Navajo Indians in the red rock country of Window Rock, Ariz.

"It's exhausting work, but it's exhilarating when you know that if you don't do the work, no one else will either," said Press, who makes $9,000 a year.

Money is still the basic problem public interest lawyers face. Top law graduates, who can command $18,000 starting salary at leading Wall Street firms, make anywhere from $4,000 to $9,000 in legal services programs.

"This is the main reason for the big turnover in public interest firms," said Beverly Moore, 25, who this fall will join Ralph Nader's newly organized firm, Public Interest Research Group—PIRG.

Many lawyers concede they will eventually enter private firms. OEO reports most legal service lawyers leave after three or four years.

Private firms themselves are setting up their own legal services branches, allowing their associates to spend anywhere from 15 to 50 per cent of their time doing "pro bono" work— legal service work for no or little compensation.

The leading firms frankly admit the new student ferment and recruitment problems are "a factor" in the increased public interest work they offer their associates and partners.

"It's undeniable that this has had a fantastic effect on recruiting," said Peter Smith, the lawyer in charge of the legal services branch of Piper and Marbury, a large Baltimore firm.

Most private firms doing public interest work are confronted with conflict of interest problems. While one partner is defending a major power plant accused of polluting the waters, another finds himself trying to recover damages for a national wildlife foundation.

"One definite advantage of these pro bono departments in the big firms is that they can provide extremely high quality legal assistance to the poor," said John Ferren, 29, pro bono partner at Hogan and Hartson, a leading Washington, D.C. firm. "One of the problems is there's a cutthroat competition between the firms and legal services programs to handle the headline cases. No one can do it alone."

In plush offices across the country, many young lawyers are in the throes of decision-making about whether to give up the security of working for a private firm.

Not all lawyers who are struggling with this decision are young. Paul Kaufman, 50, of Charleston, W.Va., has been in a private firm for 22 years. Recently he told the three other partners in his firm he is divesting his interest in the firm to work full time for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund—Apple Red—a public interest program he started last January.

"I sent my wife back to work last month and all my kids are working this summer because my salary will be cut in a third of what I was making," Kaufman said.

In July, Apple Red's three full-time attorneys, who represent coal miners, blacks and clients interested in environment protection, received $300 each. It was the first time they had been paid since they started. One of the lawyers, a bachelor, sleeps on a mattress on the floor of his sparcely furnished office.

A lack of funds distresses most legal aid attorneys.

"The Nixon administration is cutting back in spirit and funding which may put a damper on the ardor of many students just getting out of law school," said Harold Rothwas, a long-time fighter for the poor who for five years directed the Mobilization for Youth legal services program in New York's lower East Side.

Many of these new attorneys insist that nothing short of a radical shakeup in the legal branches of government will deliver good legal aid to the poor.

Instead they pin their hopes on the law schools.

"There have been a lot of cosmetic changes in the law school curriculums, but most of the courses are still 60 per cent commercial ones," said Andrew S. Dolan, 24, an editor of the 1970 Columbia Law Review who will be teaching introductory law at Rutgers Law School in the fall.

Dolan is going into teaching because he hopes to convince students the career they choose should be a social decision, not just an economic one.

Some law schools are beginning to update their curriculum adding courses in pollution and environment control and poverty law.

The New York University Law School, a leader in the field of public interest law, has instituted five clinical courses in the areas of minority economic development, poverty law, juvenile deliquency, environment control and legal services.

Says the dean of the NYU Law School Robert McKay: "There's a real spirit of urgency to be a part of it all. There's a renewed sense of idealism. Most don't care anymore about the best paying jobs. They want significant ones and we have to prepare them."

Greene County Jail Inspected

SNOW HILL — Greene County Commissioners Monday heard recommendations from the North Carolina Jail Inspection Division on improvements needed to bring the county's jail up to state standards, and declared the county's old bookmobile surplus and authorized its sale.

Chief jail inspector Woodburn Williams, Charles Hall, technical assistant to the inspection group, and B.A. Fish, area inspector, told the board that major work needing to be done to bring the jail up to standard included construction of a fire escape, installation of new floors, work on windows and locks, and some painting.

No action was taken by commissioners pending receipt of an official letter from the inspection team.

Commissioners declared surplus an old bookmobile unit formerly used by the Greene County Library and offered the vehicle for sale.

The old unit was replaced recently by a new bookmobile acquired from the Neuse Regional Library.

Greene County Agricultural Extension chairman Walter Johnson reported that Joel Harrison, assistant county agricultural agent is resigning effective October 31. He also introduced Miss Marilyn White from New Bern, who was approved as an assistant home agent and scheduled to begin work October 12.

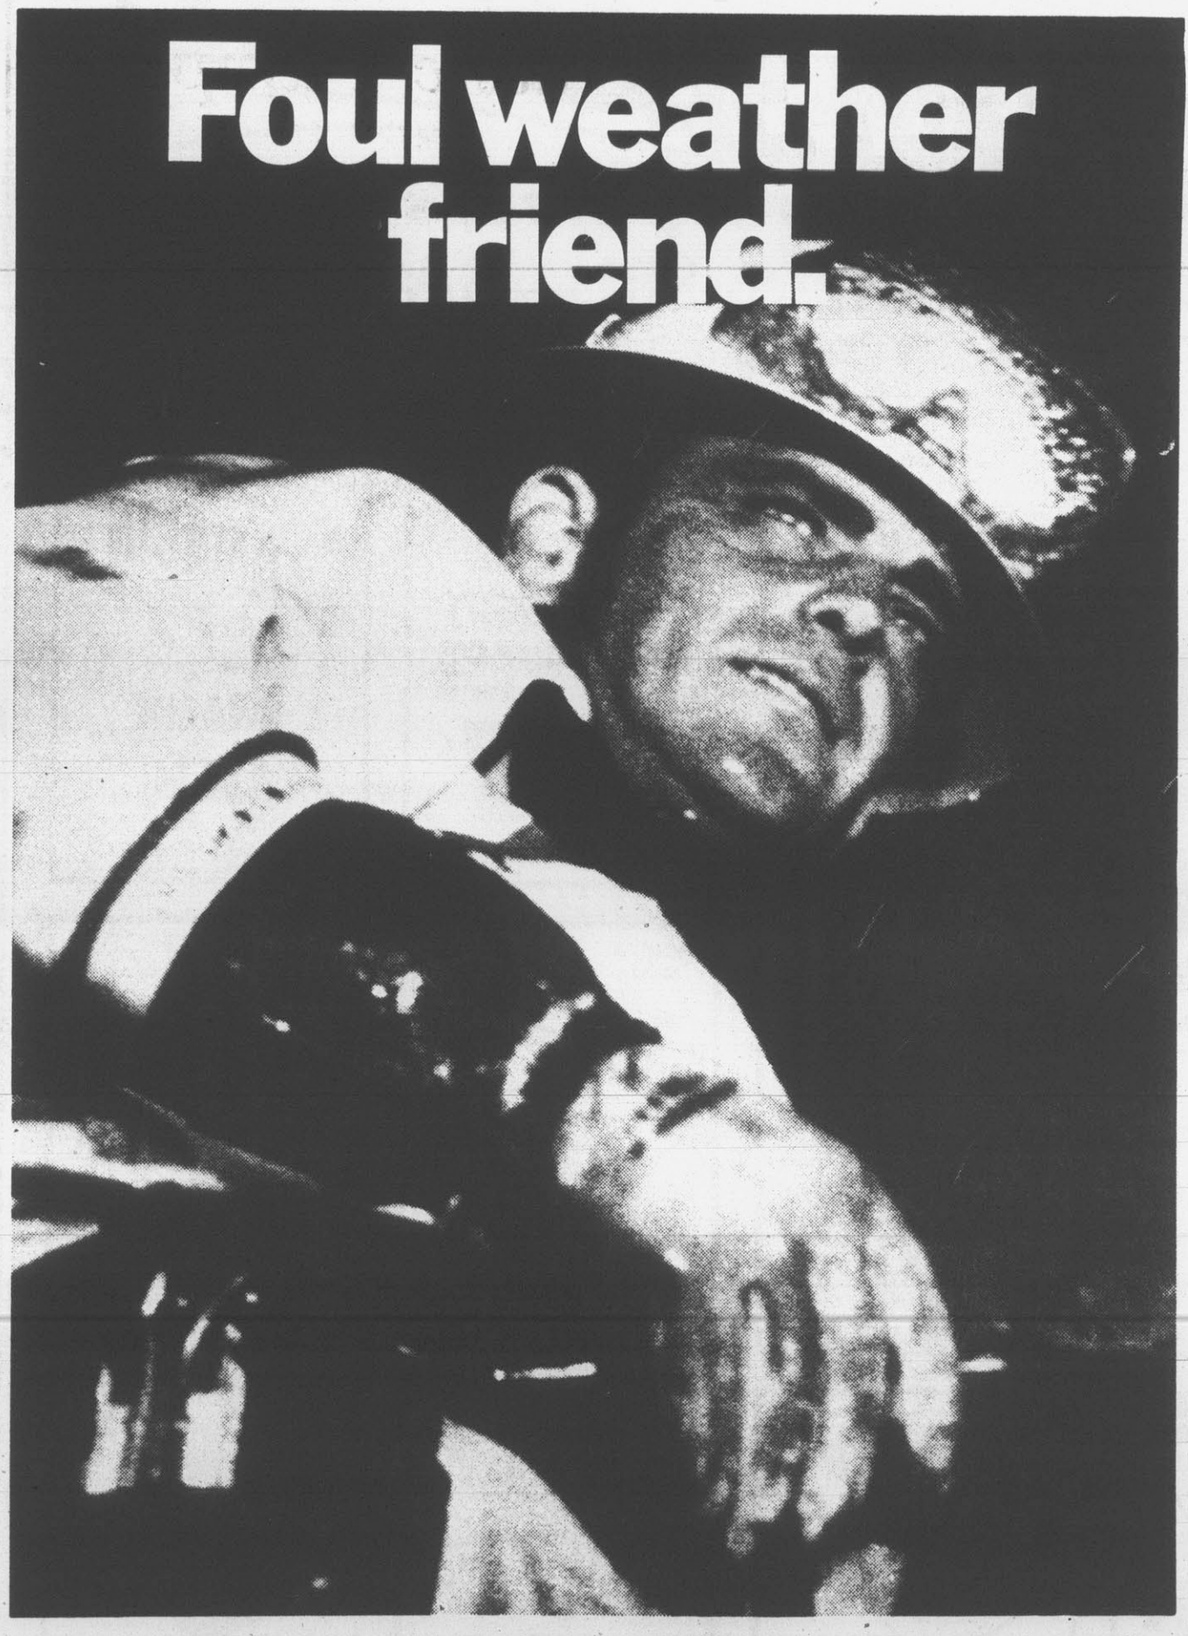

Social Services Director Rachel Payne Sugg told commissioners that Scott Luce has been employed as a social worker and began her duties the first of October to fill a vacancy recently created in that department's staff.

NEW DODGE LINE — A new addition to the Dodge compact line for 1971 is the 108-inch-wheelbase Demon, which combines economy and sporty look. Engines range from the 198-cubic-inch Slant Six to the 340-V-8. Overall length is 192.5 inches with a width of 71.6 inches and a height of 52.6 inches.

Foul weather friend.

Building, inspecting and maintaining power lines is a man-sized task even on the fairest day.

But when the weather gets rough, the Vepco lineman's task gets rougher. And we've had some pretty weird weather lately: violent storms, devastating floods, blustering winds, lightning-struck trees that downed lines and disrupted service.

And when the weather goes on the rampage, the lineman goes on the job. Anytime. Day or night. He climbs poles, repairs torn lines, works out in the elements until the lights go on again.

It's exhausting work. Hard. Hazardous. But it's vital work and the lineman does it with pride and satisfaction. That's his job: helping Vepco help people.

Neglect Of Rural America Is Said Causing Moves To City

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Country folks don't move to the big cities anymore to find bright lights and indoor plumbing, but because of the government's deliberate neglect of rural America, the Senate has been told.

Clay Cochran, chairman of the year-old National Rural Housing Coalition, said Wednesday the government still treats small towns and rural areas—home for 65 million Americans—as orphans in its aid program.

The extent of the neglect and the damage already done is rarely recognized, he said.

Testifying before the Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, Cochran said the neglect of rural America stems from the myth that the height of civilization will be reached when 90 per cent of the population lives on one per cent of the land.

Recent publicity given pollution and the accompanying problems is helping puncture this myth, he said, but still little notice is taken of rural America's needs.

"The American people, including the Congress, must be made aware of the widespread need: that two-thirds of the bad housing is there (in rural America) and that bad water and lack of sanitation destroy the health and lives of people," he said.

Cochran proposed establishment of an emergency Rural Home Development Administration to help families or individuals otherwise ineligible for housing from Farmers Home Administration or public housing programs.

The proposed agency would provide minimum housing, sanitation and clean water, plus other community facilities such as day care centers, in any town of 25,000 population or smaller, he said.

"Let the existing institutions take stock and struggle to maintain their domain by doing more of the job they should long since have completed," he said.

The Nixon administration has yet to make concrete proposals for upgrading rural America although there have been signs in recent months that such proposals are under study.

Congress also has begun to move toward solving the problems of rural America. A part of the omnibus farm bill drafted by the Senate Agriculture Committee defines the problem and calls for progress reports by agencies starting Dec. 1.

President Nixon's Task Force on Rural Development warned earlier that "our growing industry and our increasing population must spread out instead of continuing to pile people and industrial plants into compacted urban areas" if the United States is to be a healthy and happy nation.

Try Raising River Level

RALEIGH (AP) — For the second time in a month, the city of Raleigh has begun purchasing water from Butner to raise the level of the Neuse River.

The city will purchase 2½ million gallons a day at a cost of $100 a day from the North Carolina Mental Health Department's Lake Butner storage facility.

The city utilities director, Pat Goodman, said the city purchased 45 million gallons in September at a rate of five million gallons a day. That water cost $1,800.

Goodman said the city is trying to maintain the Neuse River at a level above a 1.70 on the stream gauge scale. He said it is anticipated that if the level drops below that, the state Department of Water and Air Resources will follow its previous actions and limit the city's withdrawal to six million gallons per day.

The city used 22 million gallongs of water Tuesday. Raleigh's southside plant, which treats water from the city's four reservoir lakes, can treat only 14 million gallons a day. The rest comes from the Neuse through the city's northside plant.

Her elder sister, Romina, 19, made her movie debut in 1965 but married Italian pop singer Al Bano July 26 and announced she was quitting her career.

Military Leftists Seen In Control Of Bolivia

By HAROLD OLMOS
Associated Press Writer

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Military leftists appear to be in control of Bolivia again after squelching a conservative attempt to take power.

Gen. Juan Jose Torres declared himself president Wednesday after routing Gen. Rogelio Miranda and indicated his government would move farther to the left. Miranda, the conservative army chief of staff, a day earlier had forced the resignation of President Alfredo Ovando Candia, who had headed a leftist military regime since a coup a year ago.

Torres, relieved of his position as commander in chief of the armed forces several months ago because of pressure from Miranda, declared his was "the revolution of the people, who manifest their unwavering will to take the route of national liberation."

Only one report indicated his control of the country might not be complete. A radio report from the mining town of Oruro, 120 miles southeast of La Paz, said officers loyal to Miranda had killed 10 leftist demonstrators who appeared about to assault a divisional headquarters. It was the only bloodshed reported in the four-day power struggle within the military clique that has ruled Bolivia for the past six years.

Torres appeared to have strong support from students, farmers, workers and powerful segments of the armed forces. After Miranda capitulated, he rode from his headquarters outside La Paz to the presidential palace through cheering crowds massed along the streets.

There he took the oath of office and then told a cheering crowd in a speech from the palace balcony:

"So that the people never again will be betrayed in their hopes, we have sponsored an unbreakable alliance of the workers and the armed forces. They will be, together with the people, the force of this revolution."

He said the government would create new jobs with "fair salaries for workers" and would defend Bolivia's natural resources. This indicated there would be no retreat from the nationalization of the U.S. Gulf Oil Co.'s local holdings, an action by the Ovando regime which apparently helped to trigger the attempted conservative coup.

"When this president, who comes from a humble origin, fails, ask for his resignation," Torres said.

Students and workers ran through the city, sacking homes of military men and civilians suspected of being rightist and occupying the offices of three leading newspapers, including the conservative El Diario.

Armed civilians freed several leftist prisoners from jail.

In Cochabamba, Bolivia's second largest city 55 miles southeast of La Paz, Torres supporters attacked the U.S. Information Center, destroying or carting away most of its contents.

Ovando was reported to have left the Argentine Embassy, where he had taken refuge after his resignation. He is expected to retire into private life.

Miranda took refuge in another foreign embassy along with the army and navy commanders he had named to his three-man junta. The third member, Gen. Fernando Sattori, the air force commander, went over to Torres early Wednesday.

Camping Grows In Popularity

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The number of campers and hikers in this country has more than tripled in the past five years, according to a local backpack firm.

"In 1965, approximately 10 per cent of the population had tried camping. By 1969, one-third had done so," reports Bruce R. Hoegh, product manager for Himalayan backpacks.

He cites growing interest by women and families as a primary cause. Other reasons for camping's growing popularity are: increased leisure time and affluence; greater availability of camping equipment designed for novices; improved state and federal forest facilities; and the growing need for pople "to get away from it all."

Sunglasses

Sunglasses are important in the care of your eyes whether or not you wear corrective lenses.

Your eyes should be protected from the harmful rays of the sun. Over-exposure to the sun can cause eye damage, strain and fatigue. If your eyes don't require corrective glasses, you should wear "plano" sunglasses, or sunglasses that contain only an absorptive lens. Vision authorities recommend that "plano" sunglasses be optically-ground.

If you wear glasses, your sunglasses should be ground to that prescription. The sunglasses will contain an absorptive factor plus a corrective power.

Optically-ground sunglasses screen out ultra-violet and infa-red rays which can damage the eyes. Sunglasses really should be safety treated for added protection.

No Mechanical Failure Found In Wreckage

By JAMES R. POLK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government experts say the aging Wichita State football plane that crashed killing 30 persons lacked a valid safety certificate, but a probe has uncovered no evidence of mechanical failure so far.

A safety official said the rented plane may have flown into a dead-end canyon on a sightseeing route through the Rock Mountains and smashed into the foot of the Continental Divide Friday while trying to turn around.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the old airliner did not obtain its airworthiness certificate when taken out of mothballs last month at Las Vegas, Nev., where it had been left idle for three years.

FAA officials said the plane was issued only a 10-day ferry permit that expired Sept. 21. This permit allowed a crew to fly the plane eastward, but did not authorize any passenger operations.

In Oklahoma City, the aircraft owner, Jack Richards Aircraft Co. Inc., insisted anew the plane had passed a safety check and received its airworthiness license at Las Vegas Sept. 8. The FAA denied this.

The FAA also said investigators found a second rented plane that carried the rest of the football team to Utah State had only an outdated air certificate issued before it was mothballed in 1967. That plane was grounded this week for 16 safety defects.

A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board said today it has found nothing so far to indicate any mechanical problem figured in the disaster.

The spokesman, Brad Dunbar, said the twin-engine propeller plane was flying a scenic route west of Denver when it was suddenly confronted with a wall of mountains soaring up nearly a half-mile where Loveland Pass crosses the Continental Divide.

Dunbar said the plane may have been trying to turn in the narrow canyon when it hit a ridge, crashed and burned. The pilot was among the dead.

The safety board is scheduled to open public hearings in Wichita in about two weeks.

The doomed plane, which figured in a runway accident in Oklahoma City one week earlier, was making its first passenger flight after coming out of storage. The FAA said preliminary figures show it may have been 4,000 pounds overweight upon takeoff from Denver to begin the climb over the Rockies.

The second plane detoured north to Wyoming to avoid the most rugged part of the Rockies.

'Disenchanted' See Attitudes Changed By River Raft Ride

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — After drifting 300 miles down the Ohio River on a handmade raft, a once disenchanted young couple from Cambridge, Mass., say maybe this is a pretty good country after all.

Sitting under a poncho stretched over a wooden frame to make a tent, Jim Chapman said, "This trip has really changed my ideas about what's happening in this country. It looks like there's hope."

His wife, Annie, smiled agreement and their year-old, suntanned daughter, Sarah, continued eating dry cereal on the floor of the raft. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are both 26.

"The pleasure boaters we see, the middle-age people, raise two fingers as they pass and give you the peace sign," Chapman said. "We've taken it to mean they oppose the war and these are older people with money."

Chapman, a former reporter for the Boston Traveler, said that in a New York-to-California automobile trip with his wife "we've been hassled by police, had trouble in bars—the whole stretch of land cross the country is hostile. The political situation is bad and the mood of the people is negative.

"But this trip has changed our ideas," Chapman said. "The people on the river have really opened up and are straightforward and generous—people have given us about $20 and one guy gave us a 2½-horsepower motor the second day out. We haven't been hassled at all."

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman thought of the river trip while visiting her brother on a farm near Huntington, W.Va., where he is a volunteer worker.

They made the raft out of timber, scrap wood and oil barrels and set off from Huntington with the baby Sept. 12, drifting downriver at two or three miles an hour during daylight hours.

If they make it to the Mississippi, 360 miles from here, and the raft holds out, they may head for New Orleans.

The raft, 25 feet long and 11 feet wide, is equipped with life belts and ringed with chicken wire to keep Sarah from falling off.

Dedicating New Research Center

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — President Nixon visits the Georgia coast today for a dedication ceremony at an ocean research center, one day after saying he will ask the next Congress for legislation to control waste dumping in the seas.

The President and Mrs. Nixon are dedicating the Marine Extension Resources Building—a part of the Skidaway Institute of Oceanography on Skidaway Island, about eight miles from Savannah.

The institute is a research arm of Georgia's planned $15 million Ocean Science Center of the Atlantic.

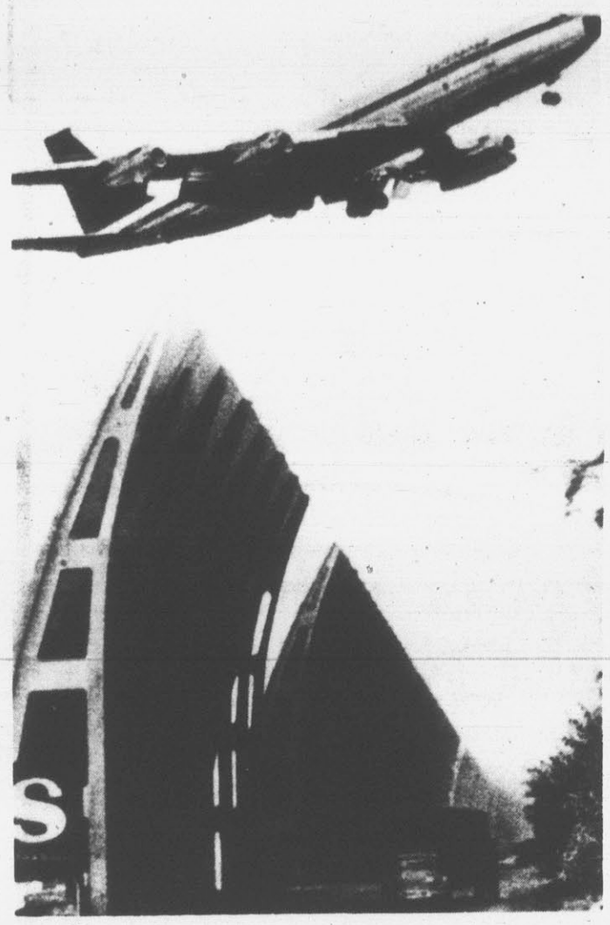

The center, which is to be a vast research complex, will provide graduate training in applied research for oceanography students in the university system of Georgia.

The fledgling institute has had one building in operation for a year, with research on pollution and on the propagation of catfish and shrimp under way.

On Wednesday, the President said he would ask Congress for legislation to control waste dumping in the oceans "before it begins to destroy the waters that are so critical to all living things."

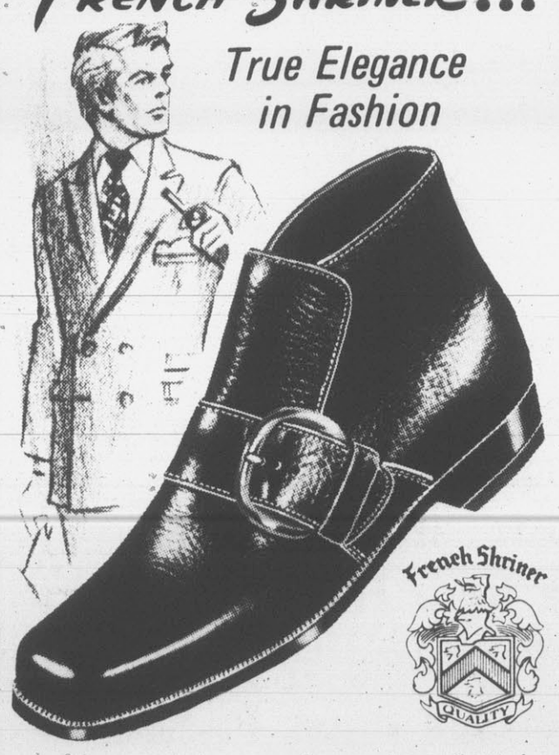

The President seeks legislation authorizing the new Environmental Protection Agency, an antipollution enforcement body scheduled for birth next December, to permit or ban ocean dumping, and would assign the Coast Guard to enforce its regulations.

Georgia Republican leaders planning Nixon's visit set aside an hour for his motorcade through Savannah, from Hunter Army Air Field to a yacht to take him to the island.

Peace Corps Goes 'Family Style'

By PATRICK J. KILLEN

ILOILO, Philippines (UPI) — That's not a "hippie commune" on the banks of the Iloilo River —it's a U.S. Peace Corps training center, part of the corps' "New Directions" program under which entire families are accepted as volunteers.

The program seems to be working here and the families are enthusiastic.

Until this June, Gerald E. McAdams, 38, was principal of the Apollo elementary school in Highland, Mich. Rodney J. Lopez, 26, was teaching biology at Meeker High School in western Colorado.

Stephen C. Rye, 32, was teaching English at Lindsay High School, Lindsay, Calif. Michael S. Gerber, 30, was with the department of education at Brooklyn College in New York.

Thomas J. Foran, 32, was teaching English at the Barnard-Brown school in Hartford, Conn., and working with Puerto Rican children. Robert J. Schneider, 39, was a science instructor at Byrd Junior High School, Sun Valley, Calif.

Wanted Maturity

All were married, with children. All came to the Philippines with their wives and children —16 children in all. They comprise the first large group of American families to be sent overseas by the Peace Corps, originally set up nine years ago for single people.

The family approach was adopted by the Peace Corps in hopes it would provide better and more expert assistance to developing countries, besides adding an element of maturity and stability.

Born in the high idealism of the first Kennedy years, the Peace Corps has prospered in some countries, been thrown out of others. Those close to the Peace Corps generally concede the morale of volunteers had sagged in recent years.

According to Mel Beetle, 30, of Mt. Ephraim, N.J., a Peace Corps training officer in the Philippines, "The basic motivation of the family concept was to get people with the background and qualifications who could meet the requests of a developing country."

15 Weeks Training

The group at Iloilo, he said, will be filling a need for experts in higher education since all but one of the volunteers —McAdams —were "teaching teachers" in high schools and colleges.

The six families, along with five other married couples, nine bachelors and six single girls, are undergoing 15 weeks training at the St. Clements Retreat House in Iloilo, a pleasant provincial capital and education center 300 miles south of Manila.

The group is the first in the education field to receive its training in the Philippines rather than in the United States. As such, officials expect better success than was had with a group of families trained for Bolivia in the United States. Because of health and other problems, only one family made it to Bolivia and they packed up after two weeks.

The combination of married couples, some without children, the single persons and the 16 children prompted Debbie Waddington, wife of Philippine Peace Corps Director Philip Waddington, to remark, "It's like a hippie commune with all the single people and the other couples and all the parents taking care of the children."

Learn Local Language

She gestured toward the open airy common room where Adam Gerber, 3, was being attended by Don McAdams, 16. The mix of children and adults made it impossible to identify parents and offsrping. They all help each other.

The families occupy nearby houses while the single volunteers stay in modest quarters at the retreat house. During the 15 weeks, all the volunteers and the wives receive intensive language training in such dialects at the lower and higher levels at nearby Philippine schools and hear lectures on Philippine history, customs, Philippine-American relations and problems.

The problem is under the direction of veteran Peace Corps trainer Norwood Teague, of Portuguese Bend, Calif., who is professor of industrial studies at California State at Los Angeles and curator of technology at the Los Angeles County Museum.

Most of the husbands had been interested in the peace corps for years but were unable to join because of their parental status. "We gave birth about the same time as the Peace Corps," Jean Foran said.

Credit Idealism, Curiosity

Bob Schneider said he joined the Peace Corps because "I decided after a number of years of teaching I was in kind of a rut. It is sort of exciting. "His wife Helen added, "It was a chance for us to do some service."

McAdams said, "Nancy and I were always disappointed that the Peace Corps wasn't open for married people. We wrote to the Peace Corps about the same time it became open. It is almost too good."

Rye's reasons included going abroad and "Seeing a foreign culture." Lopez, the only one with previous Peace Corps experience, saw it as a chance to get back into the Corps, which he left after his marriage. "We enjoy it," he said.

Gerber said he joined because "I'm part idealist. I hope the Peace Corps lives up to my ideals."

Children Adjust Quickly

Foran said he felt "it was time for a change" and he believed his family would be closer as a result of the Peace Corps experience. Gerber thought the family concept was a "great idea." He said, "a family with children has a natural link with the community."

All the wives feel their children will benefit from the experience.

Speaking of her three daughters, aged 11, 9 and 7, Nancy Rye said, "We think they are just the right age to learn to adjust. They had too much middle-class America."

Helen Schneider's four children, two boys and two girls ranging from 3 to 8 years, have grown up in the San Fernando Valley. "We wanted the children to have the opportunity to be in another culture," she said.

"I think it is the best possible education for them as far as being international citizens," said Nancy McAdams, three of whose four children are here. An 18-year-old son is attending the university of Michigan.

Salary: 'Decent'

In keeping with Peace Corps tradition, the families will do without cars, fancy homes, air conditioners, telephones and television.

Training officer Mel Beetle told the families they would be given a monthly subsistance "to allow you to lead a decent life in the Philippines, not an elaborate life and not equivalent to an upper middle class Filipino."

Each adult family member will be paid the same as a single volunteer in the Philippines, $75 to $83 per month, plus about $21 per month per child.

Out of the allowance, volunteers have to pay for their rent, food and other expenses. The Peace Corps provides a furniture allowance and pays school fees and medical expenses. In addition, each volunteer earns $75 per month which is kept in the United States as a readjustment allowance when the assignment is over or terminated.

Brazil Stages Massive Campaign On Illiteracy

By MARCELO LINS

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—A huge billboard poster showing a giant thumb print says: "This is the signature of millions of Brazilians. Teach reading and writing, you also are responsible."

The poster is one part of a massive government literacy campaign to eradicate what President Emilio Garrastazu Medici calls a "national shame"—the fact that 30 per cent of Brazil's 90 million inhabitants cannot read or write.

The campaign, Brazilian Movement of Alphabetization (Movimento Brasileiro de Alfabetizacao, or MOBRAL), was launched on the International Day of Alphabetization, Sept. 8, an event described by President Medici as "the happiest moment of my government."

About $70,250 has been allloted to MOBRAL for 1971-73. Funds are provided from government financing, and private contributions Businesses may deduct contributions from income taxes.

Teaching Money

"With this money we'll teach 237,161 illierates," MOBRAL's executive secretary, the Rev. Felipe Spotorno, told United Press International.

MOBRAL will function largely through voluntary participation of the people. To win support the government is utilizing radio, television, newspapers and streets posters to get the message across, and appeals are being made to all who know their "three R's" to teach.

Spotorno, 42, said that MOBRAL in the first month signed agreements with 218 municipalities. Every municipality chooses a literacy "commission" formed by a president, secretary, coordinator, inspectors, and teachers.

The commissions carry on their own fund raising campaigns to pay teachers and buy school material. Churches, clubs, residences, and public buildings are being requested to function as posts to teach illiterates. MOBRAL's funds only partly pay teachers, finance publicity, and help initial steps in each community.

Community Role

"For the first time the communities have their own role in the solution of the national problems, and they have autonomy in their actions," Spotorno said.

The first effort of MOBRAL is being directed at urban centers, with expansion to the rural areas planned after three years.

Mario Henrique Simonsen, a 39-year old economist, author and banker, who heads MOBRAL is president, said, "there are more material and human resources in the cities, where social pressures force the man to attend school, than in the rural areas."

The rural areas, where about 68 per cent of Brazil's illiterates are concentrated, "where left for the second phase of the movement, when its initial failures will be overcome," Simonsen said.

President Medici said, "MOBRAL will last while there are illiterates and lack of professionalization in the country."

Brazil's illiteracy had decreased proportionate to population since 1940, although statistically more people are illiterate today than 30 years ago.

In 1940 about 24 million of Brazil's 41 million inhabitants were illiterates, which represented 58 per cent of the population. In 1970, Brazil had approximately 90 million inhabitants and 30 per cent, or 27 million persons, were illiterate, according to national statistics.

New Translation Of Bible Sought

LONDON (AP) — The Welsh Council of Churches is sponsoring a new translation of the Bible into Welsh to replace the standard edition published 400 years ago.

The work will be done by a team of 20 under the Rev. Bledwyn Roberts, professor of Hebrew and Biblical Studies at the University College, Bangor. It is hoped the new testament revision can be completed in four to six years, but the old testament will take about 15 years.

Solo Flights For 10 Cadets

Ten cadets in the East Carolina University Air Force ROTC Detachment 600 are making their first solo flights this week.

The first of the flights was made by Cadet Robert Benzon of Maitland, Florida.

The cadets have undergone ground training with AFROTC instuctors and have taken flying lessons preparatory to the solo flight with pilot James Darden of the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

The AFROTC flight program, consisting of 36.5 hours of flying time as well as extensive classroom instruction, is intended to orient potential pilots before they enroll in the Air Force pilot training schools.

Upon graduation from ECU and completion of the AFROTC cadet program, the students will be commissioned into the Air Force.

Those who become pilots will be trained to fly transport, fighter or bomber aircraft.

Names of the cadets enrolled in the air training program, with their parents' names and hometown addresses, include:

Ayden — Jeffrey Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Butler, 210 South Juanita Ave.

Greenville — Marvin Harper, son of Mary R. Harper, Route 3, and Ollie Harrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie A. Harrington, 1603 Brownlea Drive.

Moving Delayed By A Calendar

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Indian flower sellers were blocking the pavement in suburban Rosebank, so the city father ordered them to move into newly built wood and brick stalls.

The Hindu vendors consulted their religious calendar and decided the hour was not auspicious for a move. So officials sighed and let them stay another week until the time of the full moon at the end of the month of Sraven and the beginning of the month of Bhadrapad.

Will Assist Ex-Inmates

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott hopes to cut down on the "excessively high rate" of criminals returning to their lives of crime in North Carolina by helping ex-inmates find jobs.

Scott announced Wednesday the formation of a 25-member committee of state officials, businessmen and inmates of the state's prisons to help in the task. The group will be known as the Governor's Advisory Committee for jobs for ex-offenders.

Scott noted in announcing the committee that about 70 per cent of the inmates freed from North Carolina prisons return within three years.

"At present," Scott said, "many of our ex-offenders, upon completion of their sentences, are given nothing but a suit of clothes and $15 or $25, depending upon their sentence length, and are turned out into the streets without a job plan or prospect.

"Many have nowhere to go, no family or friends, and when they find doors closed to them during the day, this too often leads to their illegally opening them at night.

"They return to a life of crime because too often no other alternative is available," Scott said.

Quarantine Is Extended

Ed Yancey, Pitt County agricultural extension chairman, said this morning that the hog cholera quarantine had been extended slightly to include the river road area of the county.

Yancey noted that the extension takes over where county road 1415 runs into the Belvoir Highway, on up to the Belvoir intersection with CR-1400 down to the river and then following the river to U.S 13 - N.C. 11 and back up to N.C 30.

The chairman said that extension was "fairly small" and would basically take in the area commonly identified as the river road area.

Officials identified one more case of cholera in the river road area late last week, Yancey said, making three cases all together. Considering the number of hogs, he added, the cholera incidence has been small.

It was pointed out that vocational agriculture teachers were conducting inspections on hogs owners planned to move for market but Yancey said that regulations stipulate that inspectors must have 10 days notice prior to the date of the expected movement of hogs.

The Vulgate was the greatest Latin translation of the Bible.

Not Permitted To Argue Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has told North Carolina's Sen. Sam J. Ervin he will not be allowed to argue in the Charlotte Mecklenburg County school desegregation case.

Ervin and several other figures, including Rep. William C. Cramer, R-Fla., and Florida's Gov. Claude Kirk, had requested permission to address the court as it considers the complex desegregation dispute.

The high court rejected all the requests Tuesday, including those from the National Education Association and the state of Virginia.

But Virginia's Gov. Linwood Holton said Wednesday he is confident the Supreme Court justices will consider the written Virginia brief even if state lawyers aren't permitted to present oral arguments.

In a last ditch attempt for oral arguments, however, Virginia Atty. Gen. Andrew P. Miller left for Washington Wednesday to ask the high court to reconsider its refusal to admit Virginia state lawyers.

Miller said he would try to see an associate justice and, if unsuccessful, to plan to present a written petition for reconsideration to the clerk of court.

Virginia contends it has a right to argue in the North Carolina case because Norfolk and Richmond, the two largest Virginia school systems, are facing desegregation problems that closely parallel the Charlotte case.

Especially important, Miller said, is the issue whether busing children to overcome the effects of segregated neighborhoods is part of the constitutional duty to desegregate schools.

Rose Hosting New Hanover Eleven

Rampants Challenge New Hanover

Bill Whiteford, left, and Al Hunter will be two members of the Rampant football squad to see a lot of action Friday night when Rose High School entertains Wilmington's New Hanover High School in Ficklen Stadium. Whiteford, a 155-pound senior guard, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Whiteford. Hunter, a 176-pound sophomore, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Hunter. He is a staring offensive halfback and defensive safety. (Reflector Photos)

Rose High School's Rampants are hoping that the number 13 will prove unlucky..for Wilmington's New Hanover, that is.

The Rampants go into Friday night's 8 p.m. game in Ficklen Stadium still looking for their first victory of the season. And they have not won now in the past 12 games. This is unlucky 13, and hopefully it will turn the fortunes of the Rampants around.

Rose Coach Bud Phillips was not unhappy with the play of the Rampants last week in their 14-6 loss to powerful Rocky Mount. "I thought we played the best we have all season," he said. "The defense did a right good job. If we could have gotten our passing game going, we might have pulled it out."

Phillips changed some things around for the game, using junior quarterback Bob Barrett for the first time. He played most of the game, with John Conway, who started in the first four games, switching over to defensive end. Conway did get into the action late in the game at quarterback, scoring the lone Rose touchdown.

"If we can ever get the passing game going," Phillips said, "I think we'll be all right. Our passers are having trouble spotting the open receivers, however, and we have to overcome this. We've got to throw the ball to give our running game a chance to open up. Rocky Mount made it real tough on our ball carriers."

Two and possibly three Rampants are expected to be out of action for the game. Mike Harris and Charlie Speight, both backs, will miss the action due to old injuries. End Bob Forbes, who also handles the punting, is questionable.

"Al Hunter is in the best condition he's been in all year," the coach said. "So this gives up another threat of opening the running game up."

New Hanover comes into the game with a 2-3 record. They have beaten winless Kinston, 14-0, and divisional cross-town rival Hoggard 28-7. They lost to Jacksonville in a hard-fought 8-6 battle, and fell to Goldsboro, 12-0. Rocky Mount beat them by the same 14-6 score the Gryphons won over Rose.

Wilmington used the triple option offense, and Phillips feels that Quarterback Gary Lancaster does a good job of running it. "He'll pitch off to the option man a lot, or send the fullback up the middle on the dive. He does a good job of reading the tackles, which is the key to the triple option."

New Hanover can throw the ball, but uses it merely as a key to open up the defense. "They throw only about 14 or 15 times a game," the coach said.

"The key receiver and the leading ground gainer is halfback Ronnie Dove. Fullback Tim Nifong also gains a lot of yeards rushing through the middle."

Phillips feels that New Hanover is a team that is coming on strong. "They try to overpower you. They are big, but lack the speed of Rocky Mount. Their defense is strong too, probably stronger than their offense. Nobody has run up much of a score on them."

Phillips added that they get real tough near the goal line. "They are pretty much on a par with Jacksonville and Rocky Mount."

The probable offensive starting line for the Rampants will have Donald and Ronald Taylor at ends, Tim Leith and Jay Hagans at tackles, George Harris and Carl Lupton at guards, Tommy Diggs at center, Al Hunter and Johnny Smith at halfbacks, Bubba Rawl at fullback, and either Conway, Barrett or Robbie Cox at quarterback.

The defense will have Todd Pair and Conway at ends, Harris and Willie Barnhill at tackles, Hagans and Leith at guards, David Bullock and Gary Woods at linebackers, Calvin Moore and Kim Harbin at halfbacks and Hunter at safety.

In the other two divisional clashes last weekend, Wilson rolled over Kinston, 32-0, while Goldsboro downed New Bern, 42-12. Kinston, without a win, has yet to score this season.

Friday night games include Hillside at Rocky Mount, Kinston at Hoggard, Wilson at Broughton, and Jacksonville at New Bern. Goldsboro has an open date.

The current Division II standings:

Peeler Taking Conference Honor All In Stride: Not Best Game

East Carolina University tackle Richard Peeler takes things like being named "Southern Conference Defensive Player of the Week" in stride. A big stride, that is, because the Shelby giant is 6-3 and weighs 240 pounds.

"There's a lot more to defense than making tackles," said the junior industrial arts major before practice one afternoon this week. "I made a lot of tackles against West Texas State, but I really didn't think it was my best game by a long shot."

Peeler, the biggest portion of the Pirates' forward wall, was credited with eight primary tackles and 10 assists in the 42-30 loss to the potent Buffaloes. This gives him 30 tackles and 25 assists for the season — the best totals on the team. But tackles don't really tell the story insists Peeler.

"Most of the time my job is to make two men block me," said Peeler, who transferred to ECU in 1969 after two great years at Gardner-Webb Junior College. "This should free one of our linebackers to make the tackle since they usually don't run the ball right at me anyway. My job is to absorb the blocks, then pursue the ball."

Peeler feels his best game actually was the opener against Toledo.

"I played the man over me better and worked down the line much better than I did against West Texas," said the California native.

Still, his performance against the Texans was good enough to earn Peeler the honor as the best defensive player of the week in the conference. So maybe Rich is his own sharpest critic.

"Rich has given us four straight outstanding games," said Head Coach Mike McGee. "I don't see how there could be a better defensive tackle in our conference."

Peeler has improved tremendously on his pursuit and tackling since last fall when he was red-shirted, giving him two more years of eligibility. An example of this came in the West Texas game when he caught 9.2 sprinter Rocky Thompson from behind and make the un-assisted tackle.

This week Rich Peeler's mind has turned to North Carolina State, the Pirates' Saturday night opponent in Raleigh's Carter Stadium.

"I try to get up for each game the same," said Peeler. "I learn the height and weight of the man who will be playing opposite me. I know his name, his number, what year in school he is, what he's majoring in...everything about him.

"Of course, this game against State...it's one I want as much or more than any game I've ever played in."

Rich Peeler wants to beat North Carolina State. So bad, in fact, that he was in the infirmary Monday night with the flu, yet bounced right out Tuesday afternoon so he could practice for the big date Saturday night.

The selection of Peeler as SC "Defensive Player of the Week" is the second such honor for an East Carolina player this fall. Two weeks ago cornerback George Whitley was singled out for his defensive performance against East Tennessee State.

Pirate Runners Slip By State

East Carolina University's Pirates pulled out a slim one - point victory over N. C. State yesterday in a cross - country match, 28-29. (Low score wins in cross-country.) The Bucs also rolled to a 15-50 victory over Old Dominion.

N. C. State's Gareth Hayes picked up the individual victory in the meet, running the 5.3 mile Pirate course in 27:03, setting a new course record. The old mark, set earlier this year, was 28:13.

Ed Hereford of the Pirates, who held the old mark, finished in 27:37, followed by teammate Lannie Davis in 27:46.

Fourth place went to Jim Wilkins of N. C. State in 27:50, followed by Neil Ackley, also of State, in 27:55. ECU's Joe Day was next in 28:47.

State's Sid Allen was seventh in 29:00, followed by Mark Cudek of ECU, 29:17, and Jim Kidd (EC), 29:17. Rounding out the top 13 finishers were Rusty Carraway (EC), 29:29; Gary Allen (EC), 29:39; Neil Ross (EC), 29:42; and Toby Lee (NCS) 30.03.

The Bucs, now 6-1 overall, travel to Appalachian on the 17th.

Edwards Runs By Aycock Team

Rocky Mount's Edwards Junior High School rolled to a 42-13 victory over Aycock Junior High School yesterday. Rocky Mount piled up a 30-0 lead in the first half, then coasted through the final period to take the win.

Edwards pushed ahead in the first period as Carlton Alston took the ball over from 26 yards out. He then ran over the extra points for an 8-0 lead.

In the second period, Edwards added three more touchdowns. Ron David scored the first on a 36 yards out. Phil Ford capped the period with a 16 yard run, and with two runs good for PAT's, Edwards led, 30-0 at the half.

Edwards picked up two more scores in the third period.

Aycock managed two scores in the third period. Thomas Dupree scored on a 64-yard pass from Dickie Johnson for one, and Jay Jester plunged over from the three for the other.

N. Pitt To Meet Cubs

Rose High School's junior varsity football team will entertain North Pitt High School Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Guy Smith Stadium.

It will be the second game for the Panthers, who opened their first football season ever last Friday night in a losing effort against another newcomer, Conley.

Wallace Finds Glory Long Way From Home

Billy Wallace came to East Carolina University because he wanted to play offense. Last Saturday night in Canyon, Texas, he found out he made the right decision.

All Wallace did that night against West Texas State was carry the ball 23 times for 137 yards, not to mention scoring three touchdowns. Through the Pirates' first three games, the Edenton junior had carried the ball only 27 times for 87 yards.

His freshman year Wallace played fullback in the Pirates' single wing offense. His sophomore season, he played behind Butch Colson at fullback and also played some tailback.

Later in the season he was shifted to linebacker. He did his job on defense though deep inside he wasn't happy.

Then, last spring, he was moved to No. 1 fullback when Mike McGee succeeded Clarence Stasavich as head coach and installed the pro-set offense, the same one Wallace had run in high school.

Wallace knew he could do the job and he proved it last Saturday night 1500 miles from home.

"I didn't run the ball as much as I had hoped to in our first three games, said Wallace, "but I knew I would get chance sometime to prove to myself that I could do the job. Against West Texas I got the chance and I just took advantage of it."

He had worked hard all season readying himself for the chance when it came. He had worked especially hard on getting to the hole quicker and reading his blocks.

"In the single wing, you didn't get a chance to read blocks," said Wallace. "You went directly to the hole and then tried to find some daylight. I learned to read blocks in high school, but it took time for me to get used to doing it again."

Perhaps Wallace's best attribute as an offensive back is his blocking ability.

"The fullback always has to block a little more than the rest of the backs in any offense," Wallace said. "I don't mind blocking because I know if I do the job it gives the other back a chance to score."

When the other back in the Pirates' offense has the football Wallace has the job of knocking the defensive tackle or end out of the play. Sometimes it takes a lot of determination when you are outweighed 50 or 60 pounds. And as Wallace puts it—"sometimes it even hurts."

He bruised a shoulder blocking out those big men against West Texas in the first half, but came back to play the whole second half and is expected to play against N.C. State this Saturday night in Raleigh.

The 200-pound physical education major believes the West Texas game proved the ECU offense can move the ball.

"Saturday night I found that when we get our attack going like our game plan calls for, no one can stop us," Wallace said. "I kept their defense honest with the inside run, George (Whitley at tailback) kept them honest with the outside run and John (Casazza at quarterback) kept them honest with the pass."

"Our offense jelled against West Texas and we put 30 points on the scoreboard. Everything went right. But I think the best thing that game did for us was to give us more confidence and make us hungry."

On the Sidelines with Mike McGee

Head Football Coach - East Carolina University

This Saturday night East Carolina University plays a football game that is much more than just another football game. We go over to Raleigh to play Coach Earle Edwards' fine North Carolina State team. It is a privilege to compete against NCSU, who we consider to have one of the nation's leading football programs. Obviously, victory in any game means a lot to a team. But, regardless of who wins Saturday night, both schools—and, more important, the people of Eastern North Carolina — stand to benefit.

ECU vs. NC State. It's instant rivalry. The first meeting in what we hope will turn out to be a long series of football contests between these two institutions. There are two million people in Eastern North Carolina—from Raleigh to the coast—who have much to gain from great rivalries such as this. To explain this, let me fill in some background.

In the past, Eastern North Carolina has lagged behind the rest of the state in economic development and prosperity. However, in the last 10 years, Eastern North Carolina has enjoyed an economomic reawakening. And East Carolina University, under the guidance of its outstanding president, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, has played an important role in this. ECU has mobilized the economic and social forces in this part of the state. It has focused attention and pride on the regional university and the leadership it can offer.

Every community, every region needs a rallying force—something it can look up to with pride, something that's No. 1. In our country today, there is no question that a growing, active, progressive college football program can be a great rallying force in any region. For one thing, football reaches a greater number of alumni and friends than any other facet of university life. But football doesn't stop there. It also touches the man-in-the-street and gives him a chance to identify with and support the university although he may never have had the opportunity for a college education himself. This support often begins with athletics and expands into many other phases of the university.

If you don't believe me, ask somebody from Arkansas what Frank Broyles' great Rozorback football teams have meant to that state. They'll tell you that the University of Arkansas football has meant as much to that state's picking itself up and getting on the go as anything. The same is true for West Virginia, Louisiana, and Tennessee.

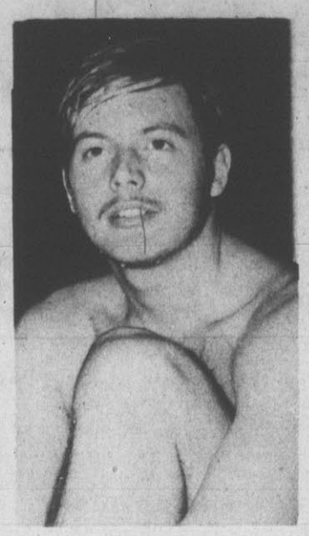

I strongly believe that East Carolina can mean the same thing to Eastern North Carolina. The old power clique in football is disintegrating. Teams like Florida State, San Diego State, West Texas State, Memphis State, and Houston are elbowing their way into the upper echelon. It wasn't long ago, for example, that Vanderbilt and Tennessee would look the other way whenever Memphis State was mentioned. Today, Memphis State is playing Vandy and Tennessee regularly—before capacity crowds.

Another example of new football prosperity is Richmond of our own Southern Conference. The Spiders are now playing teams like North Carolina State, North Carolina, Florida, and Mississippi State. Coach Frank Jones has a well-funded program with something like 100 scholarships a year. Not only will Richmond be playing the big teams, it will be beating many of them.

What I'm driving at should be obvious. The days of the Big Four are over in this state. East Carolina has made it the Big Five and the Pirates are ready to compete with any major university in the Carolinas. Right now we have a two-year pact with NC State with an unsigned agreement to schedule each other every year from now through 1980—with the exception of 1975, a year in which there is no mutual open date.

Our goal at East Carolina University is to make Pirate football something our entire region can point to with pride, just as the people of Arkansas associate with the Razorbacks. When this happens the people of the East will fill our football stadium. College football has to sell tickets to pay its costs. And the tickets people in the East want to buy will be to games matching ECU against other Big Five teams. The large attendance at these games will benefit all Big 5 teams.

We believe the growth of ECU football will be accompanied by the growth of Eastern North Carolina. We are dedicating ourselves to this goal and will take a big step toward it this Saturday night in Carter Stadium. See you there.

Frederick To Lead

Gary Frederick, a junior from Fort Washington, Pa., has been named captain of the 1970-71 East Carolina University swimming team.

An outstanding distance freestyler, Frederick is the Southern Conference 1969 and 1970 champion and record holder in the 1650-yard freestyle. He also holds the ECU varsity record for the event, clocking at 18:02 in the Eastern Collegiate Championships at Hanover, N. H., last March.

Frederick, a business major, was the Pirates' fourth highest overall scorer last winter with 130 points.

Pappas, Who Hurled For Both, Picks Baltimore To Take Series

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Milt Pappas, who has pitched for both teams, picks the Baltimore Orioles over the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series opening Saturday in Cincinnati.

"I pick the Orioles in five games," was the surprising prediction today from Pappas, the only National League pitcher to hurl a shutout over the powerful Reds this season.

"The Orioles and Reds have the same kind of teams—good power, great defense and speed," Pappas said. "If the Orioles have an edge going into the Series, it's with their starting pitchers.

"It's true what everybody says about Cincinnati's hitting, but I think the Baltimore pitchers have a better shot against the Reds than Cincinnati pitchers do against the Orioles."

Right-handed Jim Palmer, a 20-game winner during the regular season, will start for Baltimore in the first game, followed by left-handers Mike Cuellar and Dave McNally, both 24-game winners.

"After the Reds use Gary Noland," said Pappas, who started the season with Atlanta and finished with the Chicago Cubs, "I think they'll have to start going to their bullpen.

"If you get good pitching against Cincinnati, you can win your share, and I believe the Orioles can get it."

Pappas, who pitched just 11 innings in the minors before joining Baltimore as an 18-year-old in 1957, won 110 games with the Orioles before being traded to the Reds after the 1965 season in the deal which sent outfielder Frank Robinson to Baltimore.

When he visited the Orioles at practice Wednesday, Pappas was asked if he were looking for a World Series salary share. "Make it retroactive," he cracked, "and I'll take it."

He referred to the three World Series the Orioles have made since he left Baltimore.

Palmer, who pitched the final game of Baltimore's three-game American League playoff sweep over Minnesota Monday, got the starting job from Manager Earl Weaver in game No. 1 because of Cincinnati's prodominantly right-handed hitting power.

That means Cuellar will have seven days rest by the time he starts Sunday and McNally eight by next Tuesday. To get some needed work, they'll be used in an intrasquad no-run, no-slide game today which resembles a football dummy scrimmage.

A judge will decide whether each ball hit by a batter is either an out or a safety. If ruled a hit, the batter will walk to base—avoiding nearly all chance of injury.

The four-day layoff after winning the pennant by scoring 27 runs on 36 hits comes at an inopportune time for the Orioles.

"It may not hurt us," Robinson said, "but it can't help us. The practice game might help a little, but it's just not like game conditions."

The Orioles, who leave for Cincinnati Friday morning, have not lost since Sept. 19. They won their final 11 games of the regular season and then added three more in the playoffs.

The Reds are favored by 11-10 odds to win the Series, however.

'Must' Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Coach Frank Jones of Richmond's Spiders, preseason favorites to win the Southern Conference football championship says of Saturday night's league scrap at Furman that "if we lose this week, we're in trouble, I can tell you that. We have to do anything we can to win."

The "anything" could mean a return to some two-way performers for the Spiders, whose 1-3 record so far includes a 14-5 conference defeat by Davidson's Wildcats.

"I'm seriously considering playing some people both ways," Jones says of the upcoming game. "It's gotten down to this."

"I told you before the season we weren't that good," says Jones in referring to the Spiders' role as favorites in the league.

Ayden Jrs. Claim Win

AYDEN — Ayden Junior High School rolled to a 22-6 victory over Woodington Junior High yesterday.

Milton Brown scored the first Ayden touchdown on a 66-yard pass from Melvin Stewart. The second Ayden score came when Donnie Moore ran the ball over from the three.

Wrapping up the scoring was a 45-yard run by Bobby Delong. Moore and Delong each contributed two extra point runs in the game.

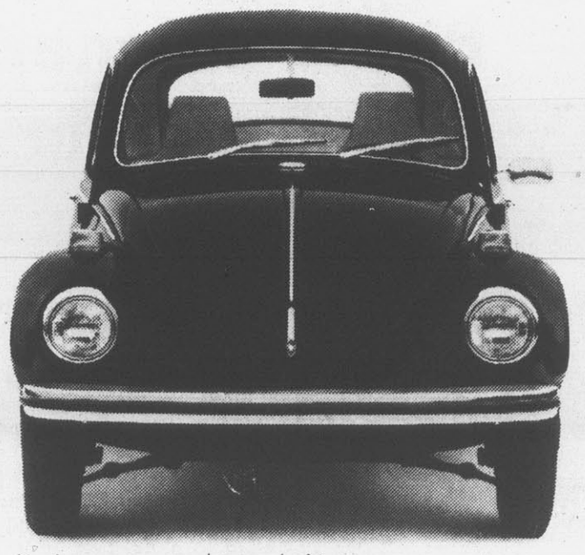

The lone Woodington touchdown was scored by Taylor.

Introducing a revolutionary new small car.

The Super Beetle.

You've never seen this car before.
It's 3 inches longer than a Volkswagen Beetle.
Yet it has nearly twice the luggage space.
It has a more powerful engine than the Beetle of old.
It has a shorter turning radius for easier parking.
It has a new suspension system for a more comfortable ride.
It has a larger fuel tank.
The brakes have been improved for quicker stops.
The front track has been widened for better handling.
The inside of the car, quite frankly, has more class.
It's fully carpeted.
The dashboard is more dashing.
The fresh-air heating system has a grand total of 7 different outlets.
It also has a new flow-through ventilation system with a 2-speed blower.
All in all, it's 89 ways different from a Volkswagen Beetle. Which in our opinion makes it a completely different automobile.
But in one very important way it remains the same:
For in 1971, the year everyone is feverishly building their revolutionary new small cars, the name on the rear deck of this revolutionary new small car reads "VOLKSWAGEN."

SPACE ART

North American Rockwell's proposed space shuttle craft.

Artist's concept of shuttle operations at Kennedy Space Center shows service on orbital section.

No, the answer is that they are "artists' concepts" showing designs and studies being worked out for NASA by North American Rockwell's Space Division (except top right, NASA's own). There's little or no fantasy here. The designs haven't been photographed, of course, because they haven't yet been built. But they could be. Each one has been worked out down to the smallest nut and bolt. There are specifications, blueprints—and the artist's concept, which is considered an important part of the preliminary development of a project.

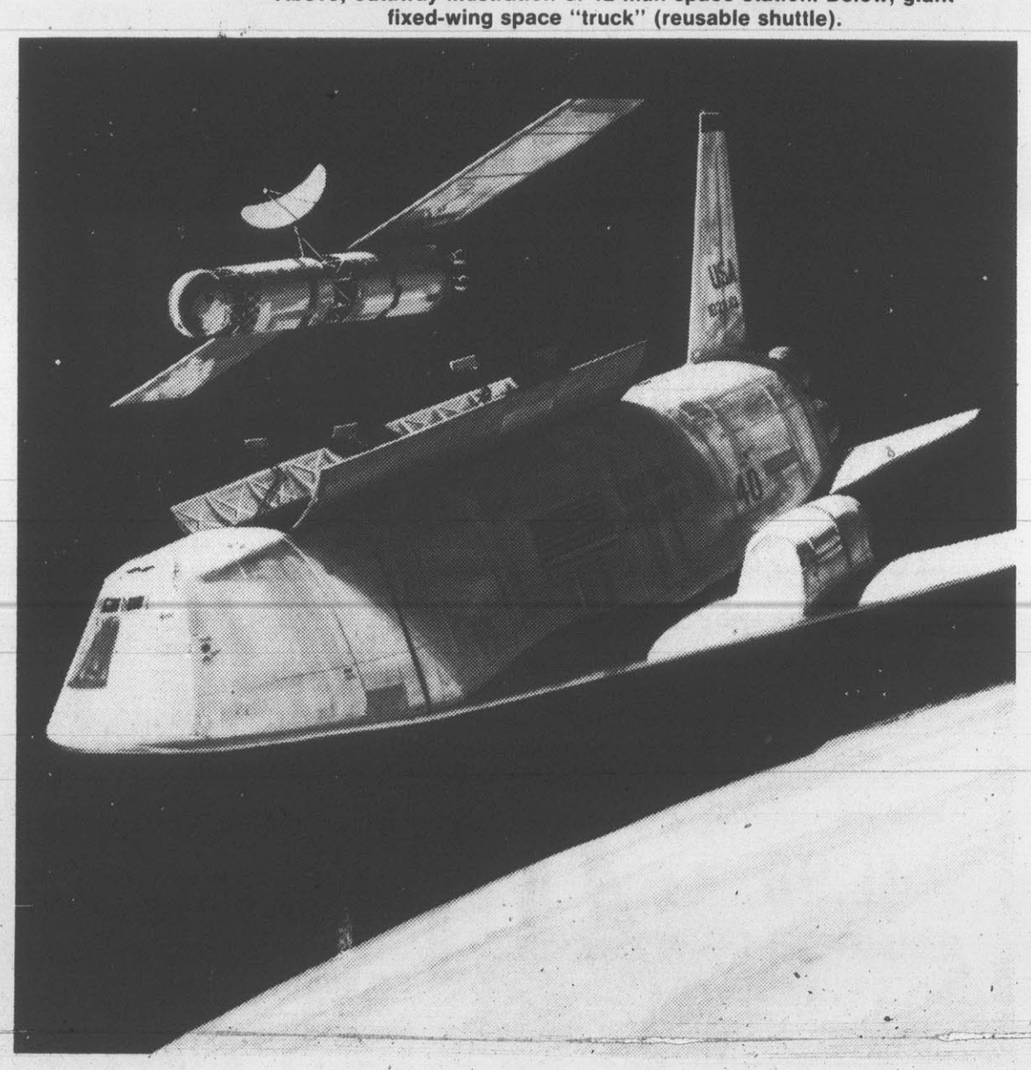

It helps scientists to know just what the finished design will look like as well as what it will do. So the artist's concept is carried out with great care, by first rate artists, often in full color. It follows a tradition which goes back with distinction to at least the time of the greatest scientific illustrator of all, Leonardo da Vinci. And it can give the general public exciting glimpses of what's in the air (or likely to be).

NORAD Can Detect, Can't Deter Incoming IBMs

By FRED PARKER

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI)—"All we can do is detect them. We cannot destroy them."

The scene: The war room of the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD). The speaker: Lt. Gen. Thomas K. McGehee, commander of the U.S. Air Force Aerospace Defense Command.

"We have 250 interceptor aircraft (on active duty) which are 10 years old," McGehee said. "The Russians have 3,000. We are now aware of new Soviet bombers which may frustrate the capabilities of our existing interceptors.

"At the present time, we do not have a system which will destroy ballistic missiles."

A Mighty Fortress

Deep inside nearby Cheyenne Mountain, workmen prepare one of three unused chambers of this continent's air defense system control center for the antiballistic missile system under discussion in Congress. But even the Cheyenne Mountain complex, possibly the world's most solid fortress, is not invulnerable.

"Man is capable of destroying anything man constructs," McGehee said. "A direct nuclear hit with enough megatonnage would knock us out of business."

For the layman first visiting NORAD, it is inconceivable. Solid granite 2,500 feet thick shelters the three-story steel capsules resting on huge coil springs. Double steel doors two feet thick and as big as a house seal the tunnel system off from the outside world.

"We have supplies here for total self-subsistence for 30 days," a briefing officer said. "There is enough air inside the mountain to last six days, and after that we can readmit outside air and filter out any radioactivity."

Canadian-U.S. Effort

Code names on various display boards in the center enunciate the grim nature of the work. It was "condition 5" or "fadeout" the day we were there. The numbers decrease to "1" which is called "cocked pistol" when the exercise is a drill. Under actual conditions, it's called "condition one." That's what it reached in the Cuban missile crisis. The next step is war.

A mile or so away the 10-story memorial to peace-loving Will Rogers juts into the sky from the side of Cheyenne Mountain. Only a hut and a sentry booth mark the yawning entrance to the NORAD complex.

Nobody enters except under the tightest security conditions. Troops from two nations, Canada and the United States man the complex. U.S. Air Force General Seth J. McKee serves as commander in chief of NORAD. Canadian Forces Lt. Gen. Edwin M. Reyno is the deputy commander.

Layers Of Protection

NORAD's mission embraces three basic functions: detect, identify and — if necessary— destroy.

Three surveillance systems feed information into the combat operations center. These are manned bomber reports and Distant Early Warning (DEW) line radar reports; Ballistic Missile Warnings (BMEWS) and satellite detection.

Identification is maintained through use of Air Defense Identification Zone (ADIZ) and interceptors when necessary.

NORAD hopes for destruction of an enemy attack through a defense in depth. Enemy bombers first would be attacked by long-range piloted interceptor aircraft. Guided Bomarc interceptors then would be used, followed by Nike Hercules and Hawk missiles. Most of these can carry nuclear weapons.

But all are useless against a missile attack, the military men say.

"All of the weapons under NORAD operational control are designed for interception and destruction of enemy manned bombers," an official handout reads. "Although the command can detect and provide warning of an intercontinental ballistic missile attack, it does not have a weapon that can shoot down ballistic missiles."

Interpol's Job Is Simply A Task Of Coordination

Temples Cover The Landscape

By DAVID STUART-FOX

PAGAN, Burma (UPI) — Pagan impresses by the sheer numbers of its temples. Where there is one temple there are 50 others nearby. The remains of some 5,000 temples and monasteries —some of them nine centuries old, or more —clutter 16 square miles of dry flat land along the east bank of the Irrawaddy river, 300 miles north of Rangoon.

The temples, virtually all Buddhist, are in all stages of repair, from the great gold spires of the well-kept Ananda and Shwezigon temples to the crumbling piles of bricks of hundreds of minor monuments that are too small to be named.

It is easy to picture the grandeur of Pagan in the days of its greatest kings, Anawrahta (or Aniruddha, 1044-1077) and Kyanzittha (1084-1112).

Burmewe chronicles trace the history of Pagan back to 108 a.d. But its real history, supported by inscriptions, begins with the rule of Anawrahta, a great warrior who introduced the use of massed elephants. He was a staunch supporter of Buddhism.

He conquered Thaton in Lower Burma and carried off a revered copy of the Buddhist scriptures together with King Manuha. Later he controlled much of present day Thailand and defeated an incursion by the Khmers of Angkor (now Cambodia). Following Kyanzittha's reign the kingdom gradually declined in power until it was finally sacked by the Mongols of Kublai Khan at the end of the 13th century.

There are perhaps 100 temples at Pagan in fair repair. The most famous is the Shwezigon, begun by Anawrahta, completed by Kyanzittha. In shape it consists of a stupa, a solid bell-shaped sturcture, resting on three square terraces. All is gold, from the four lions at the corners of the base up to the finial's finial. Little bells tinkle in the wind. Around the terrace base are small wooden temples with the many receding roofs typical of modern Burmese architecture. Some are decorated with excellent woodcarvings.

The Shwezigon and Ananda temples are both in everyday use. In the long covered approach-ways, women sell beautiful Pagan lacquer ware decorated with traditional Buddhist designs. Old men sit there hoping for a little money and they strike the gong if you donate for the upkeep of the temple. And there is always someone making his devotions to a statue of the Buddha or to the temple itself.

The Ananda temple built by Kyanzittha in 1091 is famous throughout Burma. It represents another style of architecture from the Shwezigon. Interior passageways surround a solid central block in which are cut niches for immense Buddhas. From richly golden feet they loom upwards 30 feet.

The Nagayon temple is beautifully proportioned and in an excellent state of repair. Its gilded finial rises above enclosing walls cut by entrance gates on each side. There is a striking contrast between the red bricks, the darkness of weathered plaster, peeling whitewash, the glinting gold of its spire, the trees and the blue sky.

India Sees Employment Needs Soar

By M. G. SRINATH

NEW DELHI (UPI)—If the 1960s was India's decade for combatting food shortages, the 1970s may be the decade for fighting unemployment.

Unemployment has reached staggering proportions with a population now well past the 530 million mark, estimates place the number of unemployed at at least 15 million. If the vast number of underemployed and casual laborers are included, the figure pushes 100 million.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has appointed a special cabinet subcommittee to go into all aspects of the problem, both urban and rural.

President V. V. Giri, who started his public life as a trade union leader, told the prime minister that the government is morally bound to give employment to all citizens, or sanction doles to the unemployed. Doles, however, would cost the national Exchequer nearly $1 billion annually compared to the nation's annual budget of $4 billion, and Labor Minister Damodaran Sanjivayya told Parliament that government cannot afford to bear such a cost.

The Hindu Jana Sangh leader, Kanwar Lal Gupta, has said that even if there was not another birth in India it would take 30 years to solve unemployment.

The Institute of Applied Manpower Research estimates that India will have about 100,000 jobless engineers by the end of the current five-year plan in 1974.

The scene for general employment is even bleaker. Nearly 35 million people will be entering the labor force in the next five years, but projections allow for only 14 million new jobs.

Government restrictions on private industry and trade over the past several years have slowed down the rate of economic growth and, according to the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry, the resulting lack of good investment climate has worsened the already grave unemployment problem.

The government recognizes that a solution must somehow be found. One area where experts believe much might be done to ease unemployment is the stepping up of labor projects in rural areas. Among recommendations have been proposals for major road construction, soil conservation and expansion of irrigation facilities to help currently jobless and impoverished farmers.

EDUCATION GROWTH

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Growth in Kentucky's public colleges and universities the past decade has exceeded the national average considerably, the state Council on Public Higher Education reports.

By PETER A. GASKELL

PARIS (UPI) —The forged Turkish banknote was grotesque. It looked more like an example of child art painted with diluted mud. But the 100-franc French banknote looked real enough.

A U.S. $100 bill in the collection seemed genuine until given a close look. The name under the picture was Franklin, but the reproduction was of Jefferson.

"This one was found in Sweden," the Interpol counterfeit specialist said, fingering the American bill. "The forger changed the designation $2 to $100, scratched out the name Jefferson and put in Franklin. It would probably not fool many Americans, but in Europe such a forgery can have a long life before being discovered, especially since it was once a genuine banknote."

Gallery Of Fakes

We were in the counterfeit note section of the headquarters of the International Criminal Police Organization at Suburban Saint Cloud, overlooking the Bois de Boulogne and with a distant view of the Eiffel Tower.

"We have a collection of genuine and forged notes from 180 countries," the counterfeit specialist said. "Some of them are really primitive —like the Turkish note —but others would fool everyone but the experts. There are also some unintentional forgeries —like these 2,000-florin Dutch notes. A firm had them printed as a publicity gimmick, with the design just like the one on the 1,000-florin notes. Now, there's no such thing as a Dutch 2,000 florin note, but a number of them found their way into circulation."

Interpol officials are concerned at a recent rise in forged travelers' checks. "There is also a steady increase in counterfeit dollar bills, because of the international role of U.S. currency," one official said.

Coordinating Agency

"It's interesting to note that several east European Communist countries —which are not among our 105 members — cooperate with us in the fight against forged currency by supplying us with specimens of genuine notes."

In his wood-panelled office, Interpol Secretary-General Jean Nepote told UPI: "A lot of people have the wrong idea about us. We are not super James Bonds. Our work is simply a task of coordination. We cannot arrest anybody. That has to be done by national police forces.

"Without Interpol, however, the world would be a jungle. Interpol is indispensable to any national police force which considers itself organized. For instance, in 1968 a total of 934 criminals wanted by 28 countries were arrested and brought to justice through Interpol. Our organization gives a truly international service, despite its modest budget of about $800,000."

Trains Members' Police

Interpol has 100 headquarters employes, many of them former French police officers. Hundreds of men in member police forces are permanently assigned to liaison duties with the organization, however.

After a false start in 1914 — interrupted by World War I — Interpol was founded in Vienna in 1923, with a membership of 23 countries, as an essentially European organization. In 1956, again in Vienna, 55 member-nations approved the by then worldwide body's international charter. U.S. membership was authorized by Congress in 1958. The organization has been in Paris since 1955.

Member-countries, including developing nations, regularly send men for specialist courses at Saint-Cloud, particularly in the forgery and narcotics sections, or in the archives department, which has comprehensive files on some 400,000 international criminals — including drug traffickers —and on 200,000 recorded thefts, narcotics seizures and other offenses.

A radio-station atop the building uses Morse code to transmit and receive information. Set up in 1923 with radio stations only in Paris and Zurich, the radio network has grown to 35 regional stations.

The Saint Cloud headquarters handles about 150,000 messages annually, including the transmission of international arrest warrants, graded "red" for wanted murder suspects and "green" for other criminals.

Homecoming At Church Sunday

Homecoming will be observed at Salem United Methodist Church Sunday.

According to the pastor, the Rev. Harley M. Owens, four events will be observed during the day: Laymen's Day service harvest offering, homecoming fellowship and an afternoon program.

Sunday School will begin at 10 a.m. and Laymen's service will be held at 11 a.m. with the harvest offering at the close of the service; homecoming will begin at noon on the church yard. An afternoon program of music will begin at 1: 30 p.m. Various musical groups will participate.

The public is invited to attend.

Tea Invitation Came Too Late

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico Gov. and Mrs. David F. Cargo recently received an invitation to a tea.

The invitation was addressed to the Cargos at their former Albuquerque address, which they left nearly four years ago at the time of his election as the state's chief executive.

The governor said the Albuquerque postman was alert when the letter couldn't be delivered at the Albuquerque address.

The postman wrote on the envelope, "Try Santa Fe."

The tea was over by the time the governor received the invitation.

New PTI Class Will Organize

Pitt Technical Institute will have an organizational meeting for crewel embroidery classes Oct. 14 at 10 a.m.

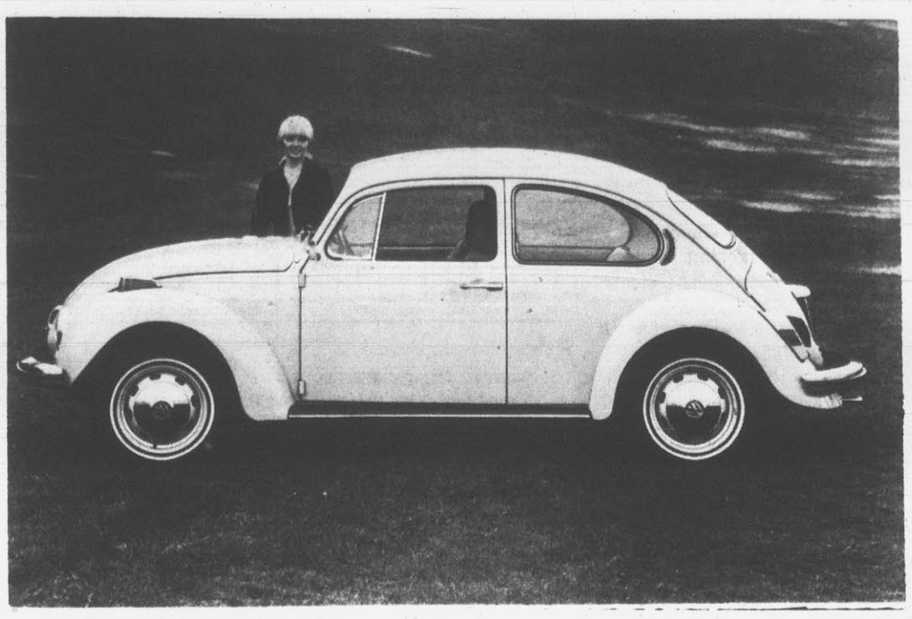

The meeting will be conducted in room 111 and will last approximately 30-45 minutes. During this time a definite class schedule will be established depending upon interests of adults attending. Classes may be conducted from two to three hours in either morning, afternoon or night sessions.

Tuition will be 10 cents per instructional hour. Each person will furnish his own materials.

Interested persons are urged to attend this meeting.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	2 ♣	2 ◇	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ◇

A shrewd shift by West in defending against South's four heart contract, put the latter to an immediate guess. When the declarer misread the situation, the defense cashed out before he could get his campaign off the ground.

West opened the ace of diamonds which held the first trick. With the appearance of a singleton diamond in dummy, there was little to be gained by continuing the attack in that suit, and West decided to look elsewhere for tricks.

He could expect to take book in his own hand by cashing out the two black aces. It appeared that unless East held a sure trick in hearts, however, the defense might just as well fold its tents—for once the ace of clubs was dislodged—North's long suit would provide enough discards to take care of any losers held by the declarer.

West observed that there was one other prospect available to him which involved finding his partner with the queen of spades and declarer with the jack. By putting South to an immediate guess in spades before the ace of clubs is driven out, West might uncover an extra trick.

At trick two, West shifted to the three of spades. South was now saddled with the burden of finding the winning play. If West has underled the ace, then declarer must play the king from dummy. If, however, West had made the more orthodox lead away from the queen, then a low card is the proper play in order to force out the ace from East. There was no clear-cut clew available from the bidding because there were too many high cards outstanding, so South was left with a guess.

Declarer chose to play the four of spades from dummy—and East put up the queen which held the trick. A spade return went to West's ace and the latter hastened to cash the ace of clubs for the setting trick.

Producer Likes Movie Problem

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The ago-old problem for those scoring a big hit in show business is: "What can you do for an encore?" Robert Altman finds that an enjoyable problem to have.

Altman directed "M A S H" which scored the same immense success this year that "Easy Rider" did in 1969. "M A S H" had an antic irreverance toward God, country and the time-worn cliches of war movies, causing it to be embraced by the young movie-going crowd. Yet it is irresistibly funny.

The hip generation might be astonished to learn that Robert Altman is not one of them. He is a fortyish native of Kansas City, Mo., a former B24 pilot who moved from magazine writing to film directing, mostly of television series. Married and the father of five, his sole resemblance to the "now" crowd is in his stylish beard, salt and peppered though it is.

Altman was in town briefly to deliver his new film, "Brewster McCloud," which he made in Houston for MGM. He was leaving for Vancouver, where he will be shooting his next one, "The Presbyterian Church Wager." He talked about "M-A-S-H" and other matters in his Westwood office.

"Sure, it was a problem figuring out how to follow a huge success like 'M-A-S-H' " he remarked. "But I would rather have that problem than have no hit to follow.

"After the picture came out, I had so many offers it was almost embarrassing. People in the picture business are kind about success. They forget that they didn't like you before."

Before "M-A-S-H" Altman had directed a couple of films that failed to light up the skies: "Countdown" and "That Cold Day in August." Neither was a comedy. He was realistic when Producer Igo Preminger considered him for "M-A-S-H."

"I've heard I was 135th, 14th or 15th on the list of directors they were considering," Altman said. "I read the script, and I didn't like it. But I had been working on my own project, a World War I story that I couldn't get off the ground. I thought I could incorporate some of the material into 'M-A-S-H'."

Preminger agreed to his plan, and the deal was made with 20th Century-Fox. Altman tried to hold out for 5 per cent of the profits, but the studio refused. He gave in, thus losing a small fortune.

The latest projection for the film's gross: $40 million. That would make it one of the dozen biggest moneymakers of all time.

"No regrets," said the philosophical Altman.

"I'm more concerned with the power that the picture's success has given me.

Donated Sum To Monkey House

LONDON (AP) — An anonymous British industrialist has donated 250,000 pounds—$600,000—for a new monkey house at the London Zoo. More than 3 million pounds—$7,200,000— have been sunk into the zoo's general rebuilding program in the last 15 years and the government has promised a further 700,000 pounds—$1,680,000.

You CAN Cut Living Costs

George Hall urges housewives to use "horse sense!" So don't blame high grocery prices on farmers, for they get but 3 cents for the wheat in a 30-cent loaf of bread! Wives, the price of a single bottle of diet cola beverage or a package of cigarettes, will feed a family of 5 for a full day, right here in America!

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph. D., M. D.

CASE 0-551: George Hall is an officer of the Livestock Feeders Association and also a successful farmer.

"Dr. Crane," Jim Gerard asked, "we'd like to have you and George participate on my noon TV show at Indianapolis.

"You can give the women advice on love while George can coach them on more economical grocery buying."

George Hall then defended the farmers against the thoughtless charges that they are the chief cause of our high food prices.

"Actually," said George, "the farmer gets only 3c for the wheat that goes into a loaf of bread.

"Yet that bread may sell at 27c to 33c per pound!

"So the bakers and truckers and wholesalers and retail grocers add almost 10 times the farmer's charges to that loaf.

"Even the machinery for wrapping the loaves, plus the paper, etc., also contribute to the high prices made to you housewives."

Then George urged people on low budgets to use more "horse sense" and thus buy unsliced cold meats, for the price of sliced food thus is greater.

But I added a bit of medical advice, moreover, to show that our hermetically sealed and packaged foods help prevent infection.

So the modern bread wrappers, plus cartons and airtight packages, are an indirect form of insurance for better health.

However, if you employ shrewd bargaining tactics, you can cut down food costs surprisingly.

For example, a pound of wheat costs but 3c, yet the same pound of wheat cereal in the fancy modern breakfast food cartons, runs from 64c to $1.02.

Mrs. Crane tried cooking the raw wheat which we bought from the local granary and it made ideal breakfast cereal - yet at only 3c per pound.

Rember, welfare folks and those on low budgets could thus live on wheat alone, and its cost is only 3c for over 2,000 calories per pound.

Now I don't mean you should compel your family to do so, if you have adequate funds for modern American luxurious menu standards.

But when you are forced to pinch pennies, or are starving (like the Biafrans last year), you can actually live for 3c per day on wheat alone at present retail prices in America

Cottage cheese also gives you the same protein value as the most expensive T-bone or sirloin steaks.

And dry navy beans, as well as sugar and potatoes, retail at about 10c per pound, yet they are high in calories.

Hamburger, too, is boneless and offers you even more calories per pound than choice beefsteak, for it contains more suet.

Yet the price of hamburger is about half that of T-bone or sirloin.

Suet is as nourishing as butter, yet costs about 10c per pound.

Smart wives can also get "day - old" bread at about half price, is they watch carefully.

And bananas, as well as lettuce, etc., can often be purchased at much lower prices on Saturday p.m., for the spoilage threat by Monday makes the grocer cut prices at that time.

Rember, the average cigarette smoker can thus actually feed his family of 5 every day on wheat at what he burns up via his tobacco that same day!

The menu might become monotonous but when you are starving, you don't quibble much about monotony!

"He who grumbles has too much," is an axiom that fits most of us well - fed Americans.

So send for my booklet "How to Operate Your Home on a Budget," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20c.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20c to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Condemnation Of Land Tract Slated

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina will begin condemnation proceedings to acquire the largest remaining parcel the state needs to purchase for the Cape Lookout National Seashore.

The council acted under a law passed by the 1969 General Assembly aimed at overcoming a gun club's refusal to sell.

The state attempted condemnation of the land, but the state Supreme Court blocked the move, ruling that no statutory authority existed for the state to condemn land for transferral to the federal government.

An agreement with federal officials calls for the state to acquire 17,500 acres and the federal government the remainder to create the 25,000-acre park. The state already has more than 90 per cent of the needed property.

The seashore would stretch for 58 miles along the Outer Banks and would include Portsmouth Island, Core Banks and Shackleford Banks, running from Ocracoke inlet to Beaufort inlet.

The council also voted Wednesday to acquire another parcel, consisting of 112 acres, through purchase from J. Morton Davis for $40,000.

The council did not specify how much it expects to pay for the gun club's land. The state posted $64,360 in Wake Superior Court in its 1969 effort to acquire the land.
