Forceful No By Vietnamese Reds To Peace Offer

PARIS, (AP) — The Vietnamese Communists forcefully restated today Hanoi's rejection of President Nixon's peace plan, but U.S. Ambassador David K.E. Bruce told them he was awaiting "a more considered and constructive response."

At the same time, South Vietnam offered what a member of the delegation described as new political proposals in an attempt to break the deadlock at the Paris peace talks. It carried a hint that Saigon might accept a formula other than elections to decide South Vietnam's political future.

Bruce called the Nixon plan a set of "specific and logical proposals that should become a basis for detailed negotiations."

He reminded his adversaries: "You indicated that you would be commenting on the President's proposals more definitively at this and subsequent sessions. Today we await a more considered and constructive response."

South Vietnamese Ambassador Pham Dang Lam told the weekly session of the Vietnam peace talks that his government "has the sincere conviction that free elections open to all political parties and groups in South Vietnam, including the National Liberation Front ... would constitute the best and ... most rational way for the South Vietnamese population to exercise genuinely its right of self-determination."

Lam did not say what arrangement other than elections Saigon might be willing to discuss. But when President Nguyen Van Thieu first proposed free elections on July 11, 1969, he said, "The only way for the people of South Vietnam to exercise their right of self-determination ... is through elections ..."

Lam's softening on this point was in line with one point in the five-point proposal Nixon made Oct. 7. Nixon skirted the question of elections and spoke of "the political process agreed upon."

Look Out, Justices!

MARTHA'S WARNING — Mrs. Martha Mitchell, the wife of Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, says "they're gonna hear from Martha", if the U.S. Supreme Court rules in favor of forced busing of school children. "Our great nation was built around neighborhoods", she said. "It's stupid to chase our children to the other side of town. Our administration is against any of this forced school busing." Mrs. Mitchell issued her warning to the highest court when questioned by newsmen at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Wednesday. (AP Wirephoto)

Much Left Undone By Lawmakers

By JOE HALL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With a last-minute flurry of activity, Congress has recessed for a month, leaving for a lame-duck session a big stack of bills including a major part of President Nixon's program.

The recess began Wednesday afternoon with Congress to reconvene Nov. 16 for the first post-election session since the Korean War.

Before quitting for the final weeks of campaigning, Congress sent to the White House a bill providing tougher penalties against traffickers in drugs but easing penalties against those using some narcotics.

Action also was completed on three health measures authorizing $2.5 billion for a variety of programs; legislation setting up a government-backed corporation designed to preserve some rail passenger service, and a $1.6 billion military construction authorization bill.

Among bills left over for the post-election session—which leaders hope to adjourn before Christmas—are eight money bills needed to run the government during the current fiscal year, and a three-year farm program which limits crop subsidies for the first time.

The sharpest fight in the lame-duck session may come in the Senate on the welfare reform proposal which the President has called his No. 1 domestic item in the 91st Congress.

The House passed the family assistance plan in April. But it long was stalled in the Senate Finance Committee before the panel voted to reject it.

Supporters of the plan say they still can win in the Senate by attaching it to a Social Security bill considered certain to pass.

However, the Social Security

bill has not yet been cleared by Finance. It is entangled in a fight over restrictionist trade legislation which the committee has added as a rider. A band of free-trade senators has announced it will do everything possible to block this rider.

Other Nixon proposals remaining to be considered are a job safety bill, a constitutional amendment on electoral reform, a manpower training measure and legislation to provide emergency aid to schools faced with desegregation problems.

The President has offered several other measures which are almost certain not to be considered by the 91st Congress.

In this category are revenue sharing with the states and cities, draft reform, higher education including a revision of student loan programs, and reform of the federal grant-in-aid system.

John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's consultant on domestic matters, charged Wednesday Congress had been bogged down in a lot of unproductive debate at the expense of Nixon legislation.

"There's been a lot of politics played by the Democratic leadership and a lot of things have been bottled up because they didn't want to go into this November election giving the Republicans a chance to show progress," Ehrlichman said in a Metromedia Radio News interview.

He predicted, as have congressional leaders, that little of consequence will come from the lame-duck session.

However, the pre-election session was not a complete wash-out for the White House.

Earlier this week Nixon was sent a tough anticrime bill aimed at organized crime and terrorist bombings.

Legislation was enacted to set up a separate corporation to run the postal service; provide $3.1 billion to bolster mass-transit lines; extend the voting rights act for five years; broaden unemployment compensation; increase taxes on airline flight to finance a $16 billion program of airport improvement, and provide $24.6 billion for an expanded elementary and secondary education program.

Kidnap Alert For Govm't Officials

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A kidnap alert has been ordered in the upper levels of government and Congress with the White House warning senators and representatives they may become targets for abduction by revolutionaries.

Sen. William B. Saxbe, R-Ohio, in telling of the warnings to members of Congress said he believes the only way to halt "political blackmail" before it starts is to make it a federal crime for officials to give in to it.

Saxbe commented in an interview with newsmen on the Metromedia Radio news program, "Profile."

His disclosures came shortly after a Justice Department's official told newsmen the FBI has received reports some U.S. terrorist groups may try to kidnap foreign diplomats or campaigning politicians in the style of recent political kidnappings in Canada and Latin America.

"For example," Saxbe said,

"If I am picked up—and I certainly haven't been threatened—and they write in and tell some government official, 'If you don't release so and so we're going to kill Saxbe,' I think if that official turns that criminal loose he ought to be prosecuted."

Last Thursday, tackling the problem from another direction, the Senate passed a bill making the assassination, kidnaping or assault of a member of Congress a federal offense punishable by life imprisonment and death.

"There has been some discussion and concern among my colleagues," Saxbe said. "It was brought up at a recent White House conference and there is an alert at present...The Justice Department has advised members of Congress they should be careful."

He said senators and House members have not been provided with guards but said he believed that at times of crisis, round-the-clock protection may be fully justified, "even if he insists he doesn't want it." In such a situation, he said, senators, House members and other officials become more important than their positions because of the possibility blackmail might be demanded from the government itself. Saxbe said such a crime might well place the federal government in the position of having to negotiate with revolutionaries demanding the release of so-called political prisoners.

No Bail Allowed Angela

NEW YORK (AP) — Angela Davis, the Marxist black militant, was held without bail today for a Nov. 9 hearing on extradition to California to face kidnaping and murder charges.

An attorney for Miss Davis, 26, who was arrested by the FBI at a Manhattan motel Tuesday evening, said his client would fight extradition on the charges stemming from a courthouse shootout that left four persons dead.

She was arraigned first Wednesday on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution and held in lieu of $250,000 bail. Later the federal charge was dropped and she was arrested by city police on the state charges.

Sources at the U.S. attorney's office said the first arraignment was to keep Miss Davis in custody until a courier arrived from California with warrants for murder and kidnaping.

Although she could be extradited under either federal or state laws, the sources said the conventional practice was for state warrants to take precedence in such a case.

Miss Davis, a brilliant Marxist scholar and former philosophy professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, had been sought for nearly two months and was on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list.

Arrested with her at the motel was David R. Poindexter Jr., 36. He was arraigned separately on charges of harboring a fugitive and held in lieu of $100,000 bail for an Oct. 20 hearing.

Provocateurs

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Kent State University President Robert I. White says that "a small group dedicated to the destruction of the university is at work" on the campus and "the next few days could be volatile."

White issued his statement Wednesday after a planned student demonstration was canceled by its sponsors. Those who showed up for the demonstration were told that "professional provocateurs" reportedly were on campus to create violence.

White called for the university community to go about its work and refuse to be dragged into violence. His remarks were transmitted over the university's new antirumor telephone system.

White said he had been advised during the summer that some persons were bent on the destruction of the university, adding: "We were told that these persons would surface after the year had started, probably using the assistance of outsiders or nonstudents." Demands to be presented to the school administration at the demonstration included abolition of ROTC on campus, an end to military research and opposition to any indictments which may come from a special state grand jury investigating four days of violence on the campus in May.

Bridge Collapse Kills 24 Workers

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Twenty-four workmen were killed and 19 injured today when a 2,000-ton section of a bridge under construction in Melbourne fell 134 feet to the ground. Twenty-five other workmen were missing, authorities said.

The collapse halted work on what is to be Australia's largest bridge, over a mile long spanning the Yarra River in the southern part of Melbourne. Known as the West Gate Bridge, its eight lanes are expected to carry 30,000 cars and trucks daily. Completion was scheduled for next year.

Within hours of the accident, unions withdrew their men from the $47 million project and Premier Sir Henry Bolte of Victoria State ordered an investigation into the disaster.

About 70 welders were on the prefabricated steel and concrete span when it gave way and thundered down on construction sheds along the riverbank where other workers were eating their lunches.

A fire broke out, and fire engines and every available ambulance were ordered to the scene. Three huge mobile cranes were moved in to lift debris.

"The bloody thing cracked in the middle," said one of the injured welders. "I was on top of it."

Work on the bridge was halted temporarily two months ago so that its steel framework could be strengthened. This followed the collapse of part of the similarly constructed Milford Haven Bridge in Wales on June 2 in which four men died. The consulting engineering firm of Freeman Fox and Partners was employed on both projects.

Unconfirmed press reports said a hostess was shot dead and two pilots wounded.

Crime Bill Is Signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today signed a sweeping anticrime bill, and said it would give federal authorities the tools for an all-out war on the Mafia. He pledged: "We will win."

Signing the measure into law at special ceremonies at the Justice Department, Nixon said the measure also provides the means to "see that those who engage in terrorist acts will be brought to justice."

The measure, passed last week by Congress after being deadlocked for 18 months, touches on two of the major issues in this fall's campaign: the growing strength of organized criminal activities and bombings by radical groups, which are becoming a frequent occurrence.

One provision of the bill, added just last month, provides the death penalty for those convicted of fatal bombings, gives the FBI immediate jurisdiction in campus bombing incidents and makes bombing an offense for which the government can use electronic surveillance.

"It seems that every day we pick up the papers and see some sporadic incident without reason, without cause, a terrorist act that we have not been able to cope with before," Nixon said.

Fr. Mullholland Named

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH N. C. (AP) — Roman Catholic priests of the Atlanta Province, composed of North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, have elected the Rev. Charles Mullholland of Greenville, N.C., as their representative on a national body.

They chose him Wednesday to serve on the executive board of the National Federation of Priests Councils. Father Mullholland is the past president of the North Carolina Priests Association.

He also was named Male Vocalist of the Year and won awards for his song, "Okie from Muskogee," in two categories, album and single.

The Song of the Year award went to "Sunday Morning Coming Down," by Kris Kristofferson.

Haggard defeated such contenders as Johnny Cash, Glen Campbell, Roy Clark and Charley Pride in winning the top entertainer award. Cash won the title last year and Campbell the year before.

The awards highlighted the 45th anniversary celebration of the Grand Ole Opry, which continues through Saturday night's performance of the Opry.

Blonde songstress Tammy Wynette captured her third straight award as Female Vocalist of the Year.

Haggard Honored

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Merle Haggard has won the most coveted award given by the Country Music Association — Entertainer of the Year.

"This concludes the most wonderful year of my life," Haggard said in accepting the award on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry House Wednesday night.

The California balladeer received three other awards during the hour-long ceremonies televised on NBC's Kraft Music Hall. He also was named Male Vocalist of the Year and won awards for his song, "Okie from Muskogee," in two categories, album and single.

The Proud Eagle Tribe, which claims to be a group of revolutionary women, said it was responsible for the blast which damaged the top floor of the center early Wednesday.

The group said the blast was dedicated to Angela Davis, who had been arrested several hours earlier in New York City in connection with a shootout in California in August.

No one was injured in the Harvard bombing.

Campus police said they were warned of the bomb by a telephone caller with a female voice.

Hunt 2 Bombers

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Police sought two women today as suspects in the bombing of Harvard University's Center for International Affairs.

"We are looking for two women among others," said Detective Lt. Lawrence Brutti. "It's not just restricted to them." He said "different groups" were sought in the bombing.

Larger Crowds Attending Fair

Attendance at the Pitt County Agricultural Fair last night was approximately 400 above the Wednesday night attendance a year ago as 2,755 paid admissions were recorded.

Pitt County school children were admitted free yesterday and will be admitted free again on Friday as the fair observes another Pitt County Schools Day.

Today, East Carolina University students and persons attending Pitt Technical Institute will be admitted for 50 cents upon presentation of their identification cards.

Winners in the livestock judging, which took place Tuesday, were announced late yesterday by Fair Manager San Winchester.

Entries by K. O. Radford in the Dairy division took $300 in premiums, including 16 blue ribbons, five red ribbons and two white awards, with his Holstein cows.

In the beef cattle judging, Tri-County took $140 in premiums by receiving eight blue ribbons and two red ones. Larry Bowling received two red ribbons for his entries for $20 in prize money.

Both Tri-County and Bowling entered Angus cattle.

No swine were entered in this year's livestock show due to a quarantine caused by an outbreak of cholera.

In addition to the livestock and educational exhibits at the fair, the Buck-Page Exposition shows, with 30 rides, 14 shows and about 80 concessions, are on the midway again this year.

The large number of rides, shows and concessions on hand for this year's fair combine to make the longest midway ever formed for the local fair, according to fair officials.

Two Youths Charged In Break-In And Auto Theft

Two young college students have been arrested on charges stemming from an early Wednesday morning break-in at the Gardner and Travis general store at Chicod and an auto larceny incident near there.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, deputies arrested Kenneth Charles Klein, 17, of Vienna, Va., a student at East Carolina University, and Jerry Thomas Palmer, 18, of Hampton, Va., an Atlantic Christian College student.

Sheriff Tyson said that he and several county deputies responded to a report of suspicious persons called in by a motorist in the Chicod area Tuesday night and found that the store had been entered.

Upon arriving at the store, deputies discovered the glass in the front door broken out and a car parked near the store bearing Virginia license plates, he said.

Deputies continued down the highway, he noted, and spotted a car leaving a driveway and upon questioning, learned that an automobile had been stolen from the residence minutes earlier, he said.

The sheriff said that deputies gave chase and caught up with the alleged stolen car just south of Chicod School and attempted to stop the car. The chase continued into Craven County and Vanceboro, he said, and officials of that county set up a roadblock.

Sheriff Tyson said that the car turned off the road before getting to the roadblock and subsequently hit a tree after coming to the end of a dead-end road.

The Greene County Prison Unit was notified and bloodhounds were sent, Sheriff Tyson added. Palmer was apprehended at a phone booth in Vanceboro around 4 a.m. Wednesday and Klein was arrested later Wednesday morning by deputies and ECU

Police at Aycock Dorm on the ECU campus.

Sheriff Tyson said that approximately 20 cartons of cigarettes, were reported missing along with a quantity of knives, small change, cigarette lighters and several papers belonging to Alton Gardner.

Palmer has been charged with breaking-entering and larceny and auto larceny and is out on $2,500 bond. A hearing has been scheduled for Oct. 26 in District Court.

Klein is charged with breaking-entering and larceny and bond has been set at $500. A hearing on his case has also been set for Oct. 26, the sheriff said.

In addition to Pitt County Sheriff's Department officials, members of the Craven County Department, Vanceboro Police, ECU Police, and Greene County Prison Unit were involved in the apprehension.

She Is All Mother, All Woman And All Sophia

By REBECCA MOREHOUSE

NEW YORK (WNS) — Who does not respond to Sophia Loren? There may be women hidden away who are as much as she, but in looks and life style she is the most woman visible, the ultimate female female.

Husband, child, home — these are the center of her world.

"I don't enjoy so much to work anymore," she said here. "For about two and a half years I did not work, but I was creating something I enjoyed so much more, the baby, and I still do. A movie is just another movie; to be beside the baby is more important."

The tiger eyes burn brightest when she speaks of Carlo Ponti, Jr., now 21 months old and "very healthy." She calls him "C. P." and says he is the fulfillment of a long-held dream: "I was born to be a mother, it was an obsession with me."

Because she made no secret of her obsession, and had miscarried in the past, a palpable public rejoiced at the baby's birth in Switzerland, Dec. 29, 1968.

"Yes," she said, with that broad, encompassing smile, "everyone was happy. When we landed here at the airport the other day, a woman said to me, 'The baby's ours, too, you know.'"

'Sunflower'

She came to this country, for the first time in four years, to stir interest in "Sunflower," which stars her and Marcello Mastroianni. It was produced by her husband and filmed in Rome and Russia.

She spoke of the movie's reviews with a candor seldom encountered in starring players: "In New York, they were not very good." Still, "Sunflower" grossed $210,000 in the first week at Radio City Music Hall.

Her next big project: A television series of Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina," to be done in ten one-hour segments and released worldwide.

"We will begin in April to make it in Russia. I've always wanted to do 'Anna Karenina,' Tolstoy's book is so beautiful, but you can't express the book in two hours in a movie. We think we can tell the story in ten hours. Carlo will produce it and American television may be involved in it."

"We were in Russia three or four weeks with 'Sunflower.' I think the people are like Italians, very extroverted, very affectionate and emotional; it was a great experience. We didn't think it was going to be as easy as it turned out to be. In the Ukraine we were lost in fields of sunflowers — they are taller than I am." Which is slightly over 5-8.

Apartment

She sat, coiled like a cat, at the corner of a long, wide white couch in the two-bedroom hotel apartment that she and her husband own. The walls of the living room, which looks out on Central Park, are covered in a dark, velvety material, to show off Ponti's paintings. The furniture, most of it, is Italian antiques and outsized.

"Do you like it? I'm glad. The view is smashing. We sent over these things about a month ago and we didn't know how it would look. Four of the paintings represent the four seasons, they're from the 18th century by an unknown artist. Carlo collects paintings, and I like it, too."

Her New York visit produced two firsts: Her first long television interview (90 minutes on the David Frost show) and her first press conference before an audience of thousands (at Radio City Music Hall, with more than 100 journalists present).

"David Frost, he's a nice man, he's really relaxed and he makes you feel relaxed. He listens nicely. The 90 minutes were over and I hadn't realized it."

"There were 6,000 in the audience at Radio City. I felt I was in the front line. I'm always very frightened before I start something; I'm quite shy, I don't like to answer questions about my private life, but I like to be kind. It was not as bad as I thought, because I felt this wonderful warmth coming from the audience and it gave me confidence."

Nothing Phony

Sophia knows about warmth; she radiates it. Said a woman who spent a day with her here:

"She has to be the most beautiful woman in the world, not just in the way she looks but in the way she is. She's so warm and straight-forward; there's nothing phony about her."

She is lukewarm to icy on women's liberation.

"I'd like not to hear that phrase anymore. I think women should have the same rights as men in the working field, but in the family I don't want to be liberated. I like to feel different from a man, I like to feel protected by the man."

No "stupid" follower of fashion, she had on a form-revealing, brown, crocheted minidress: "I like to wear lovely clothes." She also wears Midis but doesn't like the maxi length.

"Weight is no problem for me because I don't like sweets," she said. "I like pasta. Pasta without the sauce is not fattening, but what is pasta without the sauce? I don't drink whiskey or anything strong. Sometimes I drink wine but I can do without it."

Smoking

"I used to smoke before I was waiting the baby. The doctor said I should stop and I stopped. After I had the baby I wanted to start again but I thought it was silly and I'm so glad I quit."

She waited for the baby six months in a Swiss hotel, attended by a famous obstetrician. She spent 20 hours of the day in bed.

"I wasn't bored, how could I be? I have a Swiss nurse for the baby who came with us here. She is the same we had at the beginning."

Doctor Sends Bill For His Social Calls

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: First I want to say that I know I did wrong and I am not looking for any excuses. I was not feeling well so I went to a doctor [internist], and after four visits he became quite amorous. Being lonely and depressed, I responded. He is in his fifties, short, stout and not at all physically attractive, but he has a warm and powerful personality. I am 35, blonde, thin and fairly attractive.

We arranged to meet at his office after hours. No wining or dining, everything took place right in his office. We became intimate.

Well, can you imagine how I felt when I received a bill from him for these social visits? Don't misunderstand, I expect to pay for his professional services, but he charged me for two office calls which were not professional.

Now I feel cheap and hurt. Should I pay the bill and say nothing? Or should I tell him how I feel? I certainly didn't expect to pay him for his lovemaking. Since he saw me after office hours, do you think he's entitled to a fee? HURT

DEAR HURT: A fee? He is entitled to be booted out of the medical profession for unethical practices. And if you really want to shake the old boy up, tell him you're a "professional," and send him a bill.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 18 years and my husband has always called my mother and father by their first names. (My parents are quite young, and they never indicated they didn't like it. In fact, I always thought they liked it.)

Recently, during a family argument, my father told my husband that from that time on he didn't wish to be addressed by his first name—that "Mister" would suit him fine. My husband was really hurt and shocked, and so was I. He had never used their first names to indicate any lack of respect.

Of course, he will not call my parents by their first names any more, but it won't be easy after 18 years.

Abby, do you think my husband was wrong for using their first names in the first place, or was my father wrong for not telling him he didn't like it until now? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: I think your father spoke in anger when he demanded that your husband address him as "Mister" instead of by his first name as he had done for the last 18 years. If your father had any objections, he should have mentioned them 18 years ago.

DEAR ABBY: Am I an unnatural grandmother? Believe me, I love my grandchildren, but I become so exasperated with one daughter who phones me, or when I phone her says, "Just a moment, Nancy [who is 22 months old] wants to say hi to you."

Sometimes I've said, "Please, Dear, some other time, I'm in a hurry," but she ignores me and goes to get the baby anyway. Then I can hear my daughter in the background saying, "Say hi to Grandma. Say hi to Grandma." Then there is either a dead silence, or more prodding from Mamma until the baby either whimpers, cries or screams, or says something that sounds like, "Ga ga goo ga ga."

I keep saying, "Hi, Nancy." Then the mother says, "Just a second, I'm trying to get the phone away from her." More screaming and commotion while I wait until Mamma either humors the child into silence or puts her somewhere.

I know there is nothing you can do about my problem, Abby, but gee, it sure felt good to get it off my chest.

GRANDMA

CONFIDENTIAL TO GAMBLER'S WIFE: From your letter I would say your husband is a compulsive gambler. He cannot walk away from a gambling event when he is ahead. Being compulsive, he goes on betting until he has lost all his winnings—and more. The ordinary gambler is genuinely happy when he wins, the compulsive gambler is not. He has to lose in order to gratify himself, and he'll keep gambling until he loses everything. If there is a Gamblers Anonymous in your town, your husband should drop in for a meeting. He has nothing to lose. He's lost everything.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Virginia Graham's New Home, She Says, Is Early Broadway

By DONALD MADDEN
LOS ANGELES (WNS) — Vibrant, vivacious Virginia Graham has a brand new nighttime television "talk" show, that has made her change her home base from New York to Los Angeles.

"I rented this apartment furnished, but my family and personal belongings are so important to me that I brought lots of my own things with me — including my husband.

"I own the apartment in New York, which we'll never give up. I go 'home' to New York every five weeks for ten days, to spend with my daughter and her babies. I'm very close to my whole family, including, if you will believe it, my husband's five sisters.

"I think that 'home' is wherever you happen to have to be at that time. Home is when you can have people in, and have a home-cooked meal, so it doesn't make any difference where you are at the moment.

"I happen to love food, but I'm a 'natural' cook. No added ersatz, like phony chemical bacon bits. But I don't know what's happened to people these days.

They've dieted themselves right out of hospitality.

Ample Time For Joint Action

Following the troubles at last week's Rose High football game it seems likely that something needed to be done before the next and final home game.

Nevertheless it appears that university authorities acted in announcing that playing of the game would be allowed only in the afternoon

Similar Theme At Reidsville

By BRYAN HANSLIP
REIDSVILLE, N.C. — Homage to past leaders and exhortation to elect present candidates set the tone for Rockingham County and Sixth Congressional District Democrats at the fifth annual Governors' Recognition dinner in Reidsville this week.

Congressman Richardson Preyer plugged for party nominees to the General Assembly and to local offices.

"Redistricting is coming up next session," he reminded. "I want Rockingham to stay in my district. The way to do that is for you to send Democrats to Raleigh."

Congressman William Jennings Bryan Dorn of South Carolina, the featured speaker, put in an endorsement for Preyer. "A man marked for good, for leadership in the Congress," Dorn said of the Sixth District representative.

Rockingham Democratic Chairman Allen H. Gwyn, Jr., presiding for the dinner, urged support for the entire ticket. The time is now for the party faithful to get out the vote for victory in the November 3 general election, he said.

In format and theme it was similar to political affairs now going on all over North Carolina as the off-year campaign heads into the home stretch. Designed to raise party spirits and enrich the treasury, the $10-a-plate dinner of turkey, yams and green beans was eaten by 500 or so local Democrats and a smattering of state officials from Raleigh.

Low-Key Campaigning
Missing from the menu was the partisan rousements typical of such rallies. The opposition hardly got a mention except as "the other party" and no one drew a bead on any specific Republican.

Preyer called it campaigning on a high level. "We don't have to call names or bring in personalities," he said, with the obvious inference that some one else did.

Such low-key tactics may be simply commendable strategy. It also may indicate an uncertainty as to the average voter's reaction to broadside attacks on President Nixon, Vice President Agnew, or the Republican party generally. Praise for recent Democratic national administrations was as scant as criticism for the present Republican one. Dorn harked back to Jefferson and Jackson as the founder of the Democratic Party—which he translated as "people power"—but he came no further into the 20th century than Franklin Roosevelt.

In Preyer's case, it is a campaign approach leading from strength. The consensus among Democrats gathered in Reidsville was that he rates high in the district and will be an asset to the whole ticket. "We helped you elect Preyer last time," an Alamance County party leader told a Guilford compatriot. "He's going to help us this time."

Local Ticket Confidence
Confidence was evident, too, for the local ticket with the exception of the race for state Senate. Rockingham and Caswell counties form the 16th Senate district. Under a party rotation agreement, it is little Caswell's time for the seat and W.C. Taylor of Yanceyville is the candidate.

His Republican opponent is William F. Simpson of Reidsville. The population edge in Rockingham gives the Democrats cause for concern. "I saw Simpson bumper stickers in the parking lot here tonight," a Reidsville man reported.

As far as campaign issues went, those touching the pocketbook got the most attention. Preyer said inflation and unemployment are rising at the same time under the present national administration.

"It proves that if you want to live like a Republican you've got to vote like a Democrat," he said.

Redistricting Worries
The imminence of redistricting based on the 1970 census gives a particular edge to Congressional races in North Carolina this year. Incumbent Congressmen who have made themselves comfortable in their present grouping of counties will have to run with a new combination in 1972.

Rockingham is one of the counties which has been shuffled about in the redistricting of the recent past. It is reluctant to look forward to another shift by the '71 General Assembly.

Gwyn echoed Preyer's sentiments for a Democratic state legislative delegation from Rockingham to work for keeping Rockingham with its present Congressman. "The four counties of the Sixth District have too many people to stay together. Somebody is going to have to go. Everybody in Rockingham wants to stay with Congressman Preyer," he said.

The Governors' Recognition dinner honors the six governors Rockingham has given the state—Alexander Martin, 1782-84, 1789-92; John Motley Morehead, 1841-45; David Settle Reid, 1851-54; Alfred M. Scales, 1885-89; Robert B. Glenn, 1905-09; and Luther H. Hodges, 1954-60.

Hodges was unable to be present. Kin or associates of the six governors were recognized among the dinner guests.

without coming to a clear agreement with school authorities.

Since the next home game was three weeks away university authorities had ample time to discuss the matter with school officials and to attempt to work out acceptable solutions to the problems. It may well be that the decision by all concerned might have been to play the game in the afternoon, but certainly the high school should have some say in it.

No one can deny that Ficklen stadium stands on state property and its use must be controlled by university authorities. Still, tens of thousands of dollars were raised among Greenville citizens and businesses to build the first section of the stadium at a time when there was no other place to turn to obtain these funds. If this had not been done there is a good chance that ECU's athletic program would not be nearly as advanced as it is today. The understanding at the time of the fund raising was that the stadium would be available for high school use.

No one can blame university authorities for being concerned about the problems which developed Friday night. Everyone in the city is concerned, too. Just as the university's problems are city problems, so too are city problems of concern to the university.

The important thing is that decisions which affect both the city and the university should be made after consultation with officials from both sides. In this way a spirit of cooperation can be maintained that will be beneficial to all.

Panmunjom 'Incidents' Can Only Be Dangerous

Incidents such as the one at Panmunjom, Korea recently cannot help the already difficult situation there.

Through a misunderstanding, a fracas developed which resulted in an American soldier's being beaten with shovels by North Korean workmen. He suffered severe head injuries but is expected to live.

Negotiations have been going on at Panmunjom for more than a decade-and-a-half and at times things have been quite unsettled in the divided nation.

An incident such as this could explode into something major and that would be a tragedy, indeed.

Mayor Thinks Some Swayed

By JOHN KILGO
CHAPEL HILL — Howard Lee, the Mayor of Chapel Hill and the only black mayor of a predominantly white city in the South, has learned that it's tough to work within the "system" and retain his credibility with all of the black community.

Don't misinterpret that statement. It's not a major gripe. As a matter of fact, the 36-year-old Chapel Hill Mayor says:

"I love this job so much that I really have to grope to find a major disappointment. But some distrustfulness has been directed at me from parts of the black community. Because I work within the system, some blacks think I've sold out or that I'm an Uncle Tom. That would be my major disappointment in this job."

On the brighter side, however, Mayor Lee says many blacks are beginning to believe that the system can work. There are flaws, he says, but they can be corrected and he adds:

"I believe that the gap between people must be closed in the political arena. The poor whites, the blacks, the young...New blood is coming into politics in North Carolina and particularly in Chapel Hill and it holds for us a bright future."

Lee came to North Carolina in 1964 to do graduate work at the University in the field of social work. He liked the State so well that he brought his family here from Georgia in 1965 and now he says with a smile: "I expect to live and die a Tar Heel."

He serves as the Assistant to the Director of Medical Education at Duke University.

While optimistic about the future—especially North Carolina's future—Mayor Lee is cautious not to paint an overly bright picture.

"From the outside," he says, "North Carolina has a reputation of being progressive and forward-thinking. It doesn't look quite so good from the inside. We will have more controversy in the future, more debates, more finger-pointing, but maybe now we can argue and debate as friends."

Being black and the mayor of a predominantly white Southern city, Howard Lee has emerged as a national celebrity. He has made talks in New York, San Francisco, Washington, Atlanta, New Orleans and the list goes on. Just last week, he turned down speaking engagements in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and New London, Conn.

"As nice as it's been to speak in other parts of the country," Lee says, "I must say sincerely that I received more pleasure speaking to the Kiwanis Club in Pem-

The Welfare Failures

It required no special skills of political meteorology to observe, six months ago, that raindrops were falling on the President's Family Assistance Program (FAP).

His radical concept of welfare reform was in trouble from the moment it reached the Senate Finance Committee. The question now is, Where do we go from here? For the welfare mess remains. Every criticism that Mr. Nixon leveled at the existing chaos of welfare programs is as valid today as it was when he addressed the Congress in August of 1969. Go back to that speech for a moment:

"Nowhere has the failure of government been more tragically apparent than in its efforts to help the poor, and especially in its system of public welfare... Whether measured by the anguish of the poor themselves or by the drastically mounting burden on the taxpayer, the present welfare system has to be judged a colossal failure. "Our States and cities find themselves sinking in a welfare quagmire as caseloads increase, as costs escalate and as the welfare system stagnates enterprise and perpetuates dependency. What began on a small scale in the depression '30s has become a monster in the prosperous '60s. The tragedy is not only that it is bringing States and cities to the brink of financial disaster, but also that it is failing to meet the elementary human, social and financial needs of the poor."

The President went on, in that speech last year, to propose that the bloated program of "Aid to Families with Dependent Children" be abandoned altogether, in place of a new family assistance system based upon "equality of treatment, a work requirement, and a work incentive." For the family of four now on welfare, with no outside income, he recommended a basic federal payment of $1,600 a year. The States would supplement that sum. Recipients would be encouraged to work. To the President, the plan seemed "very simple."

In retrospect, it is clear that Mr. Nixon was far better at diagnosis than he was at prescription. The ills of public welfare are just as he described them. It was his concept of therapy that failed.

For three reasons. First, the administration had not done its homework on FAP, and its opponents had. You will seldom see on the battlefields of Washington a more devastating barrage than the American Conservative Union laid down against the Nixon bill. # Other Editors Say Some Good Advice

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

For anyone to pretend the future of the Democratic Party in North Carolina is not at least, in question is to refuse to face the party's prospects squarely.

There can be no question but that the party has taken a swing to the left. While this might well be advantageous to the party in the populous and more liberal Piedmont, it certainly puts a bit of a strain on Democrats in the more conservative east.

The real salvation of the party, it seems to us, might well lie in an observation and a warning sounded by Senator Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles back in November of 1969.

The senator was speaking to the Democratic Study Commission at a meeting in Greenville.

Here is what he said in summing up his presentation: "I think we have to make every possible effort to retain our traditional Democratic base in Eastern North Carolina. The worst thing we can do—both from the standpoint of the party's survival and from the standpoint of the state's own best interests—is to give the cold shoulder to conservative Tar Heel Democrats who have stuck faithfully to the party through thick and thin.

"Our more conservative Democrats obviously don't agree 100 per cent with the political philosophy of some of our younger, reform-minded Democrats. But these same conservative Democrats just as obviously don't agree with and never have agreed with the basic principle of the Republican Party. Our conservative Democrats need the North Carolina Democratic Party and the party needs them. We have to have a party spread broad enough to shelter conservatives and liberals, young and old, black and white, workingmen and businessmen.

"What I do not want to see us do, under the pretext of broadening the party's base, is to narrow it down in fact to what could become essentially a liberal-labor-Negro-youth coalition, with everybody else left out. I do not think that is the formula for victory or progress in North Carolina today, nor any time soon."

The Democratic Party would do well to consider the logic and wisdom of the senator's plea.

A Man Might Decide

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comments of a Pavement Plato:

Some social scientists worry over whether man may destroy himself not by the hydrogen bomb but by too much leisure. They estimate that the productive needs of civilization may be met by the end of this century by a work week of 20 hours or less. What will man then do with more spare time on his hands than he has had in any previous period of his history?

For some reason many intellectuals believe that they alone know how to use leisure time wisely. They feel that the average man, if he is allowed to lift his nose from the grindstone ever so slightly, will spend that extra time debauching in a saloon, fighting his neighbor, or beating his wife.

This viewpoint, of course, reflects an arrant class snobbery a democracy should outgrow. Given more leisure, it is the intellectual, not the common man, who is more likely to use it to create chaos and stir revolutionary violence.

Your ordinary fellow is more likely to add to his education, moonlight on another job in order to buy a better house or a place in the country where he can grow a bigger tomato or a finer rose.

For example, now that financial credit for any purpose is so easily obtainable, if work weeks were made shorter or vacations longer, a man might decide to—
Raise penguins in his basement.

Invest a telephone system that works.

Sail on a raft to Tahiti.

Write more advisory letters to his congressman.

Travel more widely and build the largest collection of stolen hotel soap in his neighborhood.

Stagger Wall Street by becoming the first investor in modern times to corner the market in sarsaparilla.

Found an insurance company that will protect playboy husbands against exorbitant alimony awards.

Patent a machine that will shoot arrows into the tires of any car parked in the wrong parking place.

Come up with a beer can made of some kind of material which will evaporate when thrown on a public highway.

These are but a few of scores of ways in which a man might use more leisure profitably. It is only by having extra time to make a better world that mankind will ever get the job done.

NOT HARD TO PRONOUNCE

"Thanks."

This is not a long word hard to pronounce, but it is a word that some people find hard to say. Also it is an inspiring little word that can bring the sunshine out on a dark day if we are willing to have it so. Thanks before meals. Thanksgiving in our prayers. A real feeling of gratitude for those who have done so much for us.

Did you say something about the generation gap? It has always existed, and have you stopped to think how much we have to be thankful for? Millions of men have laid down their lives to release us from tyranny and establish freedom on the earth. Scientists in laboratories have discovered cures for some of the most deadly diseases. Wealthy benefactors have established foundations which do much good. The overwhelming majority of persons in public life are honest and doing the best they can to make the world a better place in which to live.

And now to the young folks. Do you have any idea how much it costs for parents to feed children from birth to maturity? If a college education is thrown in, the figures run up to quite a few thousand dollars. Clothes cost money. Taxes of all varieties come high, and we have to pay them if we are going to maintain the high standard of life to which we have become accustomed.

And parents—aren't you thankful for the kind of kids you have even though they make mistakes once in a while and on the whole think you and Mom are pretty stupid?

Say thanks. It will bring out sunshine on the dullest day.

By Earl L. Douglass

By ELMER ROESSNER
On Sept. 9, Congressman Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, wrote to David

ELMER ROESSNER

Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, stating banks went on "an unnecessary and highly unfortunate interest rate binge after the election of President Nixon in 1968," and calling for a rollback of the prime rate to 6 per cent.

On Sept. 18, David Rockefeller, in a page ad in the Wall Street Journal, headed "Bankers don't like high interest rates and tight money any more than you do!" addressed "Dear" Patman: "Like yourself I would permit the lower interest rates that you and I and the country as a whole earnestly wish for." Rockefeller said interest rates were fixed by supply and demand; that bankers do not like high interest rates and tight money; that Chase had lower earnings in 1969 than in the previous year and lower earnings in the first half of 1970.

Rockefeller denied that Chase had been a leader in raising rates or had met with other bankers on rates, or that election-year considerations had influenced banking decisions.

Rockefeller may be right. The prime rate was cut Sept. 22 from 8 per cent to 7 1/2 per cent, pretty late to have much influence in the third quarter.

And on Oct. 7, Chase Manhattan Corp., the holding company of Chase Manhattan, announced that its third-quarter operating income rose 37.1 per cent, to $37.9 million from $27.7 million, for the same quarter in 1969.

In addition, non-operating income, largely from profits on securities, brought total earnings to $41 million, compared with $26.2 million in the same quarter a year ago.

Chase also reported that for the first nine months of the year, its net income was $87 million, compared with $70.4 million in the first nine months of 1969.

Chase's total assets on Sept. 30 were $23.6 billion, compared with $20.6 billion a year ago.

Wright Patman ought to apologize. Or should he?

U.S. Spends $49,000 To Find Why Sourdough Is Sour
The Department of Agriculture is spending

$49,000 of your taxpayers' money to find San Francisco sourdough French bread is that way. It signed a contract with Oregon State University for a two-and-a-half year study of why the bacteria involved acts the way it does only in San Francisco.

If it can get the answer, then every city can have its own sourdough French bread. There could be Fort Wayne sourdough French bread, Chicago sourdough French bread, and in Alaska, sourdough bread, thus ruining the domestic export market for S. F. bakers.

As an old Californian, I will testify that present day S. F. French bread is not like the sourdough French bread when I was a boy. In those days, the bakers kneaded the dough down three mornings in a row, and the bread was really sour, nice and chewy, with air holes in it as big as marbles.

Orders Tuition Refund For Halting Of Classes

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has awarded the father of a New York University student a partial tuition refund of $277.40 because the school canceled classes for 19 days during campus unrest last May.

Judge Patrick J. Picariello, making the award Wednesday in Small Claims Court to Roger Paynter, a fireman from Queens, declared:

"College administrators have yielded too easily to the demands of campus dissidents and have thereby ushered in an era of physical and intellectual intimidation."

The university, a private institution, said it would appeal the ruling.

Paynter, 49, who said he had been refused a refund when he first approached the university, sued on behalf of his son Raymond, 19, now an art education sophomore. He brought the action on grounds that by failing to provide classes for his son the school violated its contractual obligations.

Paynter commented afterwards: "I'm not out to get NYU. I was only fighting for the principle." He said the decision "could represent a test case ... After all, thousands of students all over the country were denied classes last year. This could open the floodgates."

The student strike, which affected many campuses in the nation, followed the dispatch of U.S. troops into Cambodia and the shooting of four students during a confrontation with the National Guard at Kent State University.

"If some students want to stay out, that's their prerogative," Paynter said. "But let the other students go to school."

The judge, in a seven-page decision, strongly assailed the disturbances on campuses. He noted that "there was no testimony or other evidence that the plaintiff's son participated ... in any wise in such conduct."

"There can be no substitute for the acceptance of responsibility for order and discipline on campuses by college administrators and college faculties," Picariello asserted.

"This is not accomplished by canceling classes and closing down school facilities."

He termed NYU's defense—based on its giving to each student at the beginning of the school year a bulletin stating that academic programs were subject to change without notice—"too specious to merit any consideration."

Earlier this week in U.S. District Court in Milwaukee, Wis., Judge Myron Gordon dismissed a similar suit brought by nine students against the University of Wisconsin, which remained open during the May disorders.

The students sought tuition refunds and other compensation on grounds that grades had been affected by class interruptions. Gordon ruled that the suit did not sufficiently show that constitutional rights had been deprived.

MONTREAL (AP) — Ten leading citizens of Quebec Province appealed to the provincial government today to free 23 convicted or accused terrorists to secure the release of the British trade commissioner and the provincial labor commissioner kidnapped by Quebec terrorists last week.

Negotiations between the kidnapers and the provincial government remained suspended, but one Montreal newspaper indicated that the government was wavering in its refusal to free the 23 men demanded by the kidnapers.

The statement urging the government to bow to the kidnapers' demand was read at a news conference by Rene Levesque, leader of the Quebec Separatist party. Signers included Louis Laberge, president of the 250, 000-member Quebec Federation of Labor; Yves Charbonneau, president of the 65,000-member Quebec teachers' union, and Claude Ryan, publisher of the French-language newspaper Le Devoir.

The statement supported the government's appointments of a mediator to negotiate the release of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte and British diplomat James Richard Cross. But it said it was urgent that the government grant the kidnapers' main demand and send the 23 prisoners and their families to Algeria or Cuba.

The kidnapers are members of the terrorist Quebec Liberation Front, or FLQ, which wants the French-speaking province of Quebec made independent from the rest of Canada. Although the Quebec Separatist party has the same goal, it is a legal party which advocates peaceful, constitutional methods.

Of the 23 men whose freedom is demanded by the FLQ, three are serving life sentences for murder, 10 are serving prison terms of varying length for robbery, bombing or other terrorist acts, two are awaiting sentence and eight are awaiting trial.

Spokesmen for the provincial and federal governments have repeatedly rejected the demand, calling instead for guarantees for the safety of Cross and Laporte as a prelude to negotiation of ransom terms. But Le Devoir reported today that the Quebec government had offered to let 21 of the prisoners leave the country, with the other two to go after the kidnaped men were freed.

There was no confirmation of the report from the government.

Robert Lemieux, a Montreal lawyer for the FLQ, broke off talks Wednesday with the provincial government's representative, another Montreal lawyer, Robert Demers.

Lemieux refused to resume the discussions unless the government retreated from its refusal to free the 23 prisoners. Demers issued no statement and went with Provincial Premier Robert Bourassa to Quebec City for meetings with the provincial Cabinet.

Ten military signalmen moved into offices adjacent to Bourassa's office in the National Assembly building Wednesday, manning a communications system by which 6,000 men at a nearby base could be summoned. Police assigned an eight-man, round-the-clock guard to the premier's hotel in Quebec.

Telephone bomb threats forced evacuation Wednesday of the health services building and two television stations in Quebec. Police searched the buildings and found no bombs.

The Toronto Globe and Mail reported that the federal Cabinet may give urgent consideration today to a proposal to give police extraordinary powers under the War Measures Act to investigate the Cross and Laporte kidnappings. This would empower them to search premises without a warrant and to hold persons for questioning without filing charges.

One of the kidnapers' demands is that the police search for them be called off. The FLQ said Wednesday that the arrest of any of the kidnapers would result in "the immediate death" of the two hostages.

Army Answer To 'C Ration'

NATICK, Mass. (AP) The Army has come up with an answer to the C ration.

The latest culinary delight from Army laboratories is the freeze-dehydrated Long Range Patrol Ration, a dried-out concoction that turns into a full-course meal when water is added.

The Patrol Ration was served at the U.S. Army Natick Laboratories Tuesday at a luncheon meeting Tuesday of Research and Development Associates for Military Food Packing Systems, Inc.

Representatives of the food packaging industry and the military attending found their meals inside large brown foil packets.

The mixture inside didn't look like much, but a cup of hot water turned it into chicken stew, pork and scalloped potatoes, spaghetti in meat sauce, chili con carne and four other dishes.

The foods, developed for use on lengthy combat missions, are lighter than the traditional ration, and, the Army claims, tastier tool. A spokesman explained that the freeze-dehydration method eliminates the overcooking needed to sterilize canned foods.

The food substance, intended to be reconstituted with water, can also be eaten dry if necessary.

The dehydrated dishes are supplemented by conventionally prepared baked goods, candy bars and steamed fruit cake, all packed in vacuum-sealed oil and able to be stored indefinitely, spokesmen said.

The new Army diet has already replaced the C ration in combat areas, the spokesmen said.

The rations are packaged by Oregon Freeze Dry Foods, Inc., of Albany, Ore.

Two Contribute

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—The annual report of the University of Kentucky Research Foundation says that only two tobacco firms contributed to its tobacco research last year.

The report showed that $1,026,617 went into tobacco and cigarette research, including smoking's relation to health. The Agriculture Department gave $989,848 of that total.

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. provided $9,917, for studies on improving tobacco plants and controlling tobacco plant disease. The Brown and Williamson Tobacco Corp. gave $7,032 for support of tobacco research.

The foundation's overall income for the 1968-69 fiscal year was $12,540,548.

Rummage Sale Plans

Methodist ladies will work Saturday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church to present their second rummage sale of the fall season. The sale will begin at 9 a.m. on the church property located at Washington Street and Dickinson Avenue.

Proceeds from the sale, sponsored by the Women's Society of Christian Service, will be used to decorate the parsonage.

There is expected to be a wide selection of items ranging from women's hats, children's clothes, to men and women ensembles. There will also be novelty pieces — called a White Elephant sale — cookbooks, napkins, vanilla flavoring and other assorted items.

The sale will remain open until 4 p.m. Mrs. William H. Taft Sr., president of the Women's Society, has asked for clothes and other items to be brought to the church on Friday.

The Canadian Government designated Yellowknife as capital of the Northwest Territories in 1967.

Ayden Youth Nominated

AYDEN — Lloyd Eichorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Eichorn of Rt. 1, Ayden, has been nominated at Ayden High School for the Morehead Award for study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Eichorn has participated in baseball, basketball, the school paper, the school annual, and the Monogram Club at Ayden High. He has served as a class officer and also as chief marshal at last year's graduation.

The award is based on evidence of moral force of character and of capacities to lead and to take an interest in schoolmates, scholastic ability, extra-curricular attainments and physical vigor.

He is a member of the Ayden United Methodist Church.

Second, the Nixon plan could not escape a murderous crossfire. Conservatives saw the purported benefits as too much, liberals as too little. In the end, the administration could not command a single Republican vote in committee; its sole support, ironically, came from that well known radical lib from Oklahoma, Fred Harris, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Finally, the Family Assistance Program, once it was clearly seen, could not be defended on its merits. The numbers alone were a shock: Mr. Nixon was proposing to add an estimated 12 million persons to welfare rolls, at a minimum additional annual cost of five billion dollars. Under his approach, more than one-third of all families in Mississippi would have been eligible for FAP payments.

The appealing key to the Nixon plan was "work." In his vision, "everyone who accepts benefits must also accept work or training" — and here was the weakness — "provided suitable jobs are available." The proviso left an ocean of uncertainties. Here the plan drowned, and Mr. Nixon took a bath.

(Continued from page 4) broke. That was something that I didn't think would happen when I took office a year ago and it was a highlight of my life. I try to limit myself to two out-of-town speaking engagements a month, because in my order of priorities it's Chapel Hill, North Carolina and the South."

Lee was born in Georgia, the son of a sharecropper, in a family of seven children. He says he was beaten in the South and his father was harassed by the Klan.

"But this is a New South," the Chapel Hill mayor says. "The South will solve its social problems long before the North will and the South will solve its racial problems long before the North concedes it has any."

Mayor Lee will speak in Chicago on Nov. 3 and he says he'll likely open his speech this way: "The people up South bring greetings to the people down North."

Lee says he's pleased with his stint as mayor, although he says his program was very ambitious from the start.

"I would like to be able to move faster," he says, "but we're in the process of improving public housing here and I plan to have busses rolling in Chapel Hill by the first of the year. When I first came into this office, there was a great deal of fear and suspicions about me. But now things are beginning to take a more positive turn. I feel I have the support of at least 80 per cent of the community and I can now turn to people for help whom I couldn't turn to when I took office."

Lee, a winner by 450 votes in 1969, will seek reelection to the Mayor's job next year.

Family Staying With Injured Football Player

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The parents and grandmother of "Trey" Barrett, who was injured during the Rose High-New Hanover High football game here Friday night, plan to stay here as long as their son is a patient at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

"We have to be here," his grandmother, Mrs. Ed Barrett Sr. of Atlanta, Ga. said. "He asks to see first one, then another of us."

Trey, a 16-year-old New Hanover High School football player, received a neck injury which has left him paralyzed. Mrs. Barrett said, a local neurosurgeon, who is Trey's physician, plans to operate to determine whether the paralysis can be alleviated next Monday. She said he explained that he must wait at least this long to allow the boy's system to recover from the "shock" of the accident.

Trey's father, Ed Barrett of Wilmington, said they are happy that Trey continues to be fully conscious and alert. "He is quite determined to recover and, of course, this is very much in his favor," he said. The Barretts are staying at the Holiday Inn here. The parents of the boy would like another place to stay since their stay here could be quite extended, but Mrs. Barrett Jr. feels she has to be close to the hospital, so they can reach Trey's side at a moment's notice.

Mrs. Barrett Sr. especially needs a room here, since the Holiday Inn has advance reservations for the East Carolina homecoming this weekend and she must stay elsewhere during that time.

"We are grateful for all the love we have found in Greenville," Mrs. Barrett Sr. said. "We come from a small town in Georgia called Cedartown. We have received many expressions of concern from there, as we knew we would since everyone there is so close, but we never would have expected so much concern from a larger town than we had never even visited before."

Folger Buick Company has given Mrs. Barrett Sr. the use of a car the entire time she has to be here. She flew in from Atlanta as soon as she was informed of the accident. In Atlanta, Mrs. Barrett is house manager of Davison School.

Trey's family moved to Wilmington only a little over a year ago from Cedartown. Barrett is a sales representative for eastern North and South Carolina for an Atlanta company which makes gaskets and mechanical packings. Mrs. Barrett is employed by a Wilmington beauty salon. Their 12-year-old daughter, Diane, is the only member of the family who has remained in Wilmington. She is staying with friends of the family so she can continue in school. Mrs. Barrett Sr. is Episcopalian, and her son's family are Baptists.

Members of the New Hanover coaching staff visited Trey Tuesday night. They told the family that films of the game show exactly how the "freak" accident occurred. Trey was tackling a Greenville player and made contact with the back of his neck and head. His head never hit the ground and no part of the other boy's protective equipment even touched him, they said.

"We are anxious for the operation to take place to give us some indication of what to expect from then on," Mrs. Barrett Sr. said. "At least, after Monday he won't have to have his head in tongs, but can wear a neck brace."

Operation Santa Chairman Named

Mrs. John Condon Jr. of Grifton has been appointed county chairman for the 1970 Operation Santa Claus campaign.

The announcement of Mrs. Condon's appointment was made today by Dr. Malene Irons, president of the Pitt County Mental Health Association.

Mrs. Condon is currently serving as a member of the Board of Directors of the Association. She also serves on the Grifton Resource and Improvement Program board, as president of the Grifton Extension Homemakers Club, and as a member of the Church Board and as president of the Women of the Church of St. Jude Catholic Church. She is librarian for the Grifton Town Library. She and her husband have one child, John Condon II, who is a member of the Armed Forces stationed at Fort Hood, Tex.

In accepting the appointment, Mrs. Condon said, "I am happy to serve as a reminding force behind a project as significant and personal as Operation Santa Claus. I know the citizens of Pitt County are familiar with this project, but we all need a reminder during the busy season prior to Christmas." Operation Santa Claus is a project sponsored by the Mental Health Association each year to provide gifts for the clients of area institutions, Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro (for the emotionally ill) and Caswell Center in Kinston (for the retarded).

Area chairmen over the county, who will be announced later, will assist Mrs. Condon in promoting "a gift from the heart" for each person at Cherry and Caswell. Area collection points will be announced soon, Mrs. Condon said.

Good Lunch

RALEIGH (AP) — "Hi," said the kids to the bulky six-footer crouched at the tiny table in Sherwood Bates Elementary School's cafeteria.

"Howdy," replied the man as the kids filed by.

The spectacle Wednesday was enough to draw giggles under any circumstances, but it brought giggles, too, because the man was Gov. Bob Scott.

Scott made the visit to have lunch with his 7-year-old daughter, Jan, in observance of National School Lunch Week.

He ate chicken, peas, biscuits, vegetable salad, milk, fruit gelatin and cookies.

The governor's verdict: "Good."

Planning Attend Ariz. Workshop

Dr. William R. Hoots, Associate Professor in the Department of Industrial and Technical Education, East Carolina University, will attend an evaluation skills workshop in Tucson, Ariz., Oct. 18-23.

A major purpose of the workshop will be to develop techniques of establishing evaluation design and monitoring systems. Dr. Hoots is working on a project to develop instruments to measure achievement in industrial arts at the elementary school level.

The site of the New Orleans French Market was first used by Indians as a bartering place.

South took full advantage of an unaltered defense to salvage a four spade contract that was apparently destined to fail.

West opened the queen of diamonds and the ace was played from dummy. The ace of hearts was cashed, East following suit with the eight and West with the three. A heart was continued on which East played the nine. South discarded the ten of diamonds and West was in with the jack of hearts. He exited with the jack of diamonds and declarer ruffed with the deuce of spades. He played back the king of spades and West was in again with the ace. This time he had no safe return, inasmuch as he was out of diamonds.

If West returns a spade, he loses his second trump trick. If he plays the king of hearts, it establishes dummy's heart suit for the declarer. South ruffs in his hand, cashes the queen of spades and then crosses over to the ace of clubs to discard the queen of clubs on the ten of hearts.

West actually chose to return a club in the hope that East had the queen. When the declarer turned up with that card, the contest was over. South's losses consisted of two spade tricks and one heart.

Both defenders had an opportunity to foil the declarer's efforts. When the second heart is led from dummy, if East puts up the queen—instead of following with the nine—he can prevent South from ducking the trick into West's hand. Similarly, if West drops the jack of hearts under the ace—retaining the three—he will be in position to underplay on the next round.

Observe that if East obtains the lead, a club shift by him establishes the setting trick for the defenders before the declarer can get started.

Four Defend Their Long Hair Tastes

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Four boys suspended from school because of their long hair have told a court the length of their locks has nothing to do with their education.

The youths told U. S. Dist. Judge Woodrow W. Jones they wore their hair long because the tresses pleased them that way. They insisted their hair was not a device for flouting the authority of their school superiors or parents.

The four — Joseph Edward Massie Jr., Danny Edward Davis, James Franklin and Kevin Michael Ray — were suspended Oct. 5 for violating a Tuscola High School dress code which regulates, among other things, the length of boys' hair and girls' skirts.

They have filed suit charging their constitutional rights are being denied by Haywood County school officials who refuse to readmit them until they get a haircut.

The plaintiffs, represented an American Civil Liberties Union attorney, George S. Daly Jr. of Charlotte, completed their testimony Wednesday. The hearing is to continue Friday with more testimony from school board witnesses.

One board witness, Tuscola Vice Principal Charles Milner, testified Wednesday he disliked long hair on men because his service in the Marine Corps had left him with the feeling men should have short hair.

Milner said the dress code at Tuscola was adopted after a fight in a school hallway. He said he had refused to give copies of the code to the school paper or other pupils.

The vice principal, said, however, that the code had been read twice over the school's public address system.

Judge Jones refused to grant a temporary order that the boys be readmitted pending the outcome of the court case.

Piano Recital Scheduled For Tonight

Selections she will play are: "Impromptu, Opus 142, Numbers 3 and 4," by Schubert; "Berceuse, Opus 57," and "Trois Nouvelles Etudes," both Chopin compositions; the Beethoven "Sonata, Opus 7"; and a Robert Palmer work, "Toccata — Ostinato".

The public is invited to attend the recital on a first come, first served basis. No admission is charged.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell's wife says members of the Supreme Court are "gonna hear from Martha" if they rule in favor of forced busing of children to achieve racial balance in schools.

"Our great nation was built around neighborhoods," Martha Mitchell told newsmen Wednesday. "It's stupid to chase our children to the other side of town."

Mrs. Mitchell, who sometimes telephones the news media to make pungent comment on current events, said she had "several phone calls to make when the time is right."

Warned Against Changing Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — An assistant North Carolina attorney general has warned the Supreme Court that changing the state's capital punishment laws would bring "frightful and devastating" results.

The spokesman, Jacob L. Safron, told the high court that "the prison gates would be opened wide to all capital felons" if the North Carolina death penalty laws are declared unconstitutional.

Safron argued Wednesday in the case of Henry C. Alford, who entered a plea of guilty to second-degree murder in North Carolina courts six years ago and was sentenced to 30 years in prison.

Alford's sentence was declared invalid by the U. S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. The appellate judges said "a person in North Carolina is faced with the awesome dilemma of risking the death penalty in order to assert his rights to a jury trial."

North Carolina law guarantees a life sentence for those who plead guilty to first-degree murder. But if convicted by a jury after pleading innocent, a defendant can face either the life sentence or death.

Alford's appeal claims the result is that accused persons are influenced to plead guilty.

Mrs. Doris R. Bray of Greensboro, representing Alford, said her client had never stopped claiming he was innocent even though he entered the guilty plea. Mrs. Bray said he entered the plea on the advice of his trial lawyer as insurance against the death penalty.

Safron said about 448 persons now are serving life sentences in North Carolina prisons. He said 68 per cent of them had pleaded guilty.

If the sentences of those who pleaded guilty are declared invalid, he said, the state would be unable to re-try all the convicts concerned because the evidence would no longer be available to convict them.

Foreign-Born Will Be Dinner Guests

Plans to have students and faculty members of various nationalities as guests of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) dinner next Monday night are beginning to shape up, although rather slowly at the time.

Mrs. Charles Woodall, publicity chairman for the dinner which is part of the Greenville observance of United Nations week, notes that three persons to date have been invited as guests — Dr. Maria Malby, by birth a Yugoslavian, now an American citizen; Ester Rabano, a student born in the Philippines, also now an American citizen; and Allen

Chan, a student whose home is Hong Kong.

Mrs. Woodall has a list of names of 30 other students from Iran, Korea, Canada, the Philippines, Japan, Indian and other countries who could be invited as guests by AAUW members or by any member of the public who might wish to attend the United Nations observance dinner at the Woman's Club. The dinner, with Dr. Robert Lee Humber as guest speaker, is open to any interested person.

Conviction Is Upheld

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has upheld the conviction of Jimmy Lee, a convict sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in the slaying of Robeson County prison guard during an escape.

Lee and another convict, Ricardo Zimmerle Resendez, escaped from the Robeson Prison Unit June 2, 1969. During a scuffle, guard Earl Strickland was shot to death by Resendez. Lee was inside the prison dormitory at the time, holding a knife to the throat of another guard, Boyd Strickland. Resendez and Lee commanded a car from the prison parking lot and forced Sgt. Elbert Locklear to drive them to a wooded area, where they left Locklear tied up in the car. Then they went to the home of Isley Wilcox and held the family hostage for nearly 24 hours before surrendering.

Both prisoners were convicted of murder and sentenced to life. They were acquitted of kidnaping.

Profs Organize Campus Chapter

A chapter of a new professors' organization, University Professors for Academic Order, has been formed on the East Carolina University campus.

Dr. R. C. Lamb, chairman of the ECU Chemistry Department, who has been appointed campus representative by the national U.P.A.O. office in Washington, is the unofficial spokesman for the group of 12 staff members who have joined the local chapter to date.

Dr. Lamb said, "The still embryonic U.P.A.O. is to be a professional organization similar to the American Association of University Professors in organizational form. There are several reasons why a new organization is felt to be desirable by many professors, especially those of a middle-of-the-road or conservative opinion."

"One is that, while the academic profession owes a great deal to the A.A.U.P. because of its efforts for professors' rights and for reasonable pay scales, the A.A.U.P. has done little to halt the rapid politicization of American campuses in the 1950's and '60's. There is also some firm evidence that, in some departments in certain universities, a moderate or conservative political stance can be detrimental to the applicant who seeks a professorship or to a professor who seeks tenure or advancement. The A.A.U.P.

does not have an impressive record of defending professors of a conservative political opinion.

"A more subtle problem which has resulted in the gradual erosion of the prerogatives of professors of all political persuasions is the problem of student demands for a voice in college and university policies and practices with respect to the content of courses and curricula. Many college administrations have recently surrendered many of their prerogatives and those of professors. In some cases, the prerogatives surrendered are, in our opinion, important ones and their loss constitutes a disenfranchisement of the professor."

"While the complaints I'm discussing have not become serious at ECU, part of the reason for the formation of a chapter of the U.P.A.O. here is to help form a national organization which can endeavor to protect professors throughout the academic profession in the United States."

The local U.P.A.O. chapter was formed at a meeting on the ECU campus September 16. A meeting will be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the new Social Sciences building, Room D-109. All interested ECU professors are invited to attend the meeting.

'New Isolationism' Growth Spurs Nixon Effort

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite talk of an intensified cold war, President Nixon fears a "new isolationism" at home and plans an effort to reach a live-and-let-live agreement with the Soviet Union.

His idea, while acknowledging his actions in public life have stamped him a strong anti-Communist, is to seek a coexistence working to the mutual benefit of the United States and Russia.

At the same time, Nixon believes weariness after 25 years of shouldering global burdens may be turning the American people toward isolation, which he feels would be a mistake. Otherwise, according to his thinking—and he has an inkling Moscow might agree—a U.S. retreat to homebase would leave the world by 1995 with only two superpowers—The Soviet Union and Red China because no non-Communist nation could fill the void.

Nixon is of the view the Soviets would prefer quite a different world in 1995, a world in which the United States would continue its global role but one in which Moscow and Washington would avoid direct confrontation.

Still, the chief executive feels competition will continue between the two nations and differences now are so deep and profound they cannot be bridged by their leaders smiling, shaking hands or coming to know each other better at a summit conference.

With these thoughts in mind, Nixon is preparing a major address on Oct. 23 before the U.N. General Assembly.

It could well be he will make a direct appeal to the Soviets to coexist in peace—a move that in a sense would bypass the machinery of the international organization.

While he believes the U.N. can be a useful vehicle for settling difficulties between some of the smaller nations, it cannot be used to head off disputes between the superpowers.

The United States and the Soviet Union, he is convinced, would never submit their fates to the vote of more than 100 countries.

Instead, what is needed, he feels, is a resolve on each side to find areas of common agreement while avoiding a potential nuclear apocalypse.

In the President's view, three major factors work against any confrontation:

—Neither country likely would unleash nuclear weapons that would claim 40 million to 70 million lives on the other side, knowing that retaliation in kind and similar casualties at home would result.

—Each nation has a motive for scaling down the arms race, or at least preserving the status quo, because of pressures on national budgets. He sees the Soviet arms burden as two to three times greater than the United States' because of the Russians' smaller Gross National Product.

—The two countries can profit through increased contacts and, most particularly, trade which offers great promise for joint benefits.

Further, Nixon believes the Soviets have foreign problems as aggravating as those here, and has domestic difficulties of a similar magnitude.

Scott Joining In Dedication

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott took part today in dedication ceremonies for the $1.3 million David S. Weaver laboratories at North Carolina State University.

The laboratories were named for the late director of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service. Weaver founded the university's department of biological and agricultural engineering in 1940.

The road, which runs between the US 264 Bypass and US 264 Business will be closed on October 19, Snell said. Traffic will be detoured over US 264 and NC 11, for a distance of two and one-half miles, with a traffic delay of 10 minutes, the engineer said.

The road will remain open from US 264 Business and US 264 Bypass to Green Mill Run for local traffic.

Sato Will Seek His 4th Term

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato has announced that he will seek a fourth two-year term as president of the ruling Liberal Democratic party, which also would carry automatically another term as head of the government.

No one has run for a fourth term as party president before.

In the party election Oct. 29, Sato will be opposed by former Foreign Minister Takeo Miki, who has the backing of a small minority of members.

Sato, 69, also announced Wednesday that he would leave for New York Sunday to attend the 25th anniversary session of the U.N. General Assembly.

Teenagers Helped Preschoolers

By CAROLYN A. BOWERS
NEW YORK (UPI)—An experiment in the early education of preschool children by teenagers took the form of Sesame Street Day Camps in New York City.

The experiment set out to prepare youngsters for public schools and to improve attitudes and academic skills of teachers.

Some 1,500 pre-schoolers of all races and 240 teenage instructors participated. The teachers, all members of the Neighborhood Youth Corps, were trained by the Children's Television Workshop, producer of "Sesame Street."

The day camp curriculum consisted of daily viewing of Sesame Street, follow-up lessons to reinforce the material learned from the show, field trips and food periods. The classes met five days a week from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., with recesses.

The project was funded by New York City's Youth Services Agency through a $68,000 federal grant.

Both the city agency and the Workshop now are studying the results of the day camp experiment. And reported that it appears to have been beneficial and rewarding for the young children and others involved.

Although about 17 public school buildings and makeshift sites were used for the camps, the largest, with an enrollment of 150, was at Andrew Jackson High School in Queens.

Paula Rooks, the 19-year-old director of the camp there, felt the experiment was successful. "This was what we needed for our young children, especially in the black community," he said. Andrew Jackson High School is located in a predominantly black and Puerto Rican neighborhood.

Miss Rooks, a sophomore at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., admitted that in the beginning she really didn't think she would be able to work with such small children. "But I found out I could, and I loved it," she said. "I really learned a lot from the kids."

She said the major problem was a lack of proper facilities. "We really needed more room and equipment," she said. "We had the children and the teachers."

One of the teenage teachers, Mireille Christophe, 16, agreed on the success of the camp. "Some of the kids really didn't know anything," she said, "not even their names. But when camp was over they knew that and a lot more.

"I had one little boy about six years old who took almost a week to learn to recognize the letter 'A'. But by the time camp ended, he knew that and over half the alphabet."

Miss Christophe said she enjoyed working with the children. "I wanted them to think of me as a friend as well as a teacher," she said.

The teen-age instructors were paid $40 a week.

Alam Dummett, 15 and a student at the New York high School of Art and Design, worked as a special tutor, giving individual help to those who needed it. "I really think the camp helped the kids," he said. "It will be easier for them when they enter regular school because of the summer classroom experience. Everything won't be totally new."

Dummett said the program even helped him. "I'm starting to understand little kids better," he said. "Before I didn't have any patience, but now I'm much better."

Those who sponsored and participated in the day camp program said they hoped to see it continued year-round in New York and even extended on a national basis.

John Nolan, who directed the program for the Youth Services Agency, said he was optimistic that some of the campus would be extended throughout the year.

Two New Weapons Join War On Lake-Pollution

By ROBERT BERG
LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—The front line forces in the struggle to protect the environment against the ravages of pollution have been given two powerful new weapons with which to press the fight in Michigan.

One recently-enacted law allows any private citizen to sue any polluter to stop polluting. The second requires industries to report any pollutants they dump into the state's waters.

Both measures are the first of their kind in the nation. They give Michigan what is believed to be the most comprehensive environmental protection program in the country.

Both were formed in the offices of Gov. William G. Milliken and were passed in part because of heavy lobbying from the executive office.

Cities To Blame?
Milliken, a native of northern Michigan, which prides itself on clean lakes, rivers, forests and air, has made pollution control one of his priority items.

Until now, only governmental units could go to court in Michigan to stop pollution. Backers of the new law predict these same governmental units may be among the first taken to court by ecologists.

"Municipalities dump tons of phosphates into the water," State Sen. Basil Brown said. "They burn tons of rubbish, garbage and old tires, letting the black smoke pollute the air. Municipalities are the prime violators."

The second bill, known as the "Truth in Pollution Act," goes into effect next March and will provide ecologists with much of the information they might need to press suits.

No License To Pollute
It will require all industries and commercial enterprises which discharge wastes into waters in the state to report any pollutants in those discharges to the state Water Resources Commission. The commission is drawing up a specific list of such materials.

"We are narrowing the list down to elements where there is at least some doubt about their effect or where we know they are harmful," William Marks, who is overseeing establishment of the program, said. "For instance, if they are discharging sand, we wouldn't require them to report that."

The law also will require each of the 7,000 plants discharging materials into Michigan waters to pay a fee ranging from $50 to $9,000 to finance the cost of maintaining surveillance of the plants by the state.

"This is not in any way to be interpreted as a license to pollute and we were careful to write the bill that way," James Kellogg, the governor's main adviser in the field of pollution, said. "The charge is based on what it costs to monitor the plant, not on what the plant is discharging."

Coordinating The States
"We needed this bill because we need to find out exactly what is going on in the state. We were caught by surprise by the mercury situation last spring and we want to prevent any similar occurrence in the future if we can."

The measures have prompted so many inquiries from outside Michigan that the governor's office is setting up a national workshop on them in Lansing Oct. 19.

Milliken, a Republican, also has taken the issue to the regional and national level.

Both the midwestern and national governors conferences passed resolutions sponsored by Milliken this year urging establishment of a national clearing house to test all chemicals for their effects on the environment.

Under his proposal, the clearing house would also test all new chemicals for their effect on the environment and would have to give them its stamp of approval before they could be used for sale.

ECU Homecoming Activities Scheduled

AT OPENING CEREMONIES . . . of the new Maxwell Brothers Furniture store on Greenville Boulevard are Grover C. Maxwell, Jr., president of the furniture chain, and Mayor Percy Cox.

Furniture Store Overruled Formally Opened By Justices

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court says charges should not have been dropped against a Raleigh Negro militant accused of illegal possession of firearms. The court overruled two lower courts and held Wednesday that James Lee must stand trial. He was arrested last year during racial disorders in Sanford and charged with illegal possession of an automatic weapon. Lee was convicted in state District Court and appealed to Superior Court, where the charges were dropped. Judge Henry McKinnon ruled that the weapon found in Lee's possession did not come under the state law on which the charge was based. McKinnon's was upheld by the state Court of Appeals. The state then appealed to the Supreme Court. The law under which Lee was charged prohibits possession of automatic weapons which fire more than 30 bullets. 70 million people live within a 500-mile radius of St. Louis, Mo.

Maxwell Brothers Furniture's new Greenville Boulevard store formally opened this morning at 10:00 a.m. with Mayor pro-tem Percy Cox cutting a big red ribbon. Grover C. Maxwell, Jr., president of the 69 chain store which covers North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, was here for the formal opening. Cox congratulated Maxwell Brothers, saying their fine new facility was a mark of faith the firm showed in Greenville. He also noted that Greenville is a progressive city, as evidenced by the fact the furniture store, which has been located here for a number of years, was able to relocate into their new, modern store. Maxwell said "We are delighted to be in this new store. It represents our concept of what is best in stores today." He referred to several features which mark the planning of the store—a low ceiling, built in incandescent lights which give the furniture the appearance it will have in a home, and the natural room arrangements used for grouping furniture. Maxwell also noted that over 75 percent of the furniture stocked by the firm is North Carolina made. The arrangement and decoration of the new store, which occupies 25,000 feet of floor space, is the work of Manager Jim Leslie, Assistant Manager George (Pete) Small, and several other employees. Now living in Augusta, Georgia, Maxwell is married to a Greenville native, the former Ione Hooker Bradsher, daughter of Mrs. O. M. Marshburn and the late Colonel Marshburn.

UN Day Will Be Observed Here Oct. 24

The 25th anniversary of the founding of the United Nations is being observed next week throughout the world. In Greenville, Mayor Frank M. Wooten, Jr., has proclaimed Saturday, October 24, as United Nations Day in Greenville. Mayor Wooten noted, "The ultimate success of the United Nations depends to a great extent on the goodwill and support of an informed public which recognizes the practical achievements and benefits derived from our national participation in the United Nations." He noted that President Nixon has called this 25th Anniversary Year "an excellent opportunity to rededicate American support for the United Nations and to attempt to make it more effective." The basic spirit of the United Nations is to bring about peace and good will between all peoples of the world. Mayor Wooten also noted that the world government organization and its family of agencies has limitations, but he urged "all citizens of Greenville to use that day for community programs which will serve to stimulate a realistic understanding of the purposes, and achievements of the UN."

Mayor Wooten asked the people of Greenville, not only on UN Day, but throughout the year, for "dedication to the human values which we in this country hold to be self-evident, and to give our best efforts to the development of a United Nations capable of fulfilling its high purpose for all mankind."

Stocks' Defense Concludes Case

Attorneys for the defense in the Thomas Earl Stocks rape-burglary trial in Superior Court concluded their arguments before the jury this morning around 11:30.

The 12-member jury panel was expected to retire from the courtroom to begin deliberation after Judge Joshua James' charge to the jury.

Yesterday, before the state rested its case at 12:08 p.m., three officers, including deputies D.D. Respass and Brooks Oakley and SBI agent Daniel Gilbert testified that Stocks admitted his implication in the April 27 Brook Valley case during an interview on May 3. Gilbert, the last witness to testify before the presentation of evidence was concluded shortly after noon yesterday, told the court, "Stocks stated that he was guilty of the crime at Brook Valley. He stated he would prefer to talk to his lawyer before giving any details." Gilbert said the 26-year old defendant then said, "Anything you can say to help me, I will appreciate it. I just got on the wrong road. "He further stated," Gilbert testified, "the reason for this mess was because of liquor and drugs." Earlier deputy Respass had quoted Stocks as saying he was using marijuana the night of April 26 (the night before the early morning April 27 attack). Gilbert continued by saying Stocks told officers he was driving Phillip Ray Mills car on the night of the incident. "Mills had nothing to do with this. Mills was passed out during all the time," Gilbert quoted Stocks as saying. The state attorneys concluded their arguments yesterday afternoon and defense attorney Milton Williamson began his argument before the jury shortly before 10 this morning. Stocks is charged in connection with an April 27 incident in which a Brook Valley residence was assaulted by two men. Elmo Barber, was convicted on rape and burglary charges during the August term of Pitt County Superior Court and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Returning From Labors In Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — A group of 405 young people from the United States working on agricultural production on Cuba's Isle of Pines left Havana Wednesday night for Canada in their return trip to the United States, Radio Havana reported. The broadcast monitored here said the "Venceremos Brigade" — venceremos is Spanish for "we shall conquer"—had surpassed its goal of its six-week work schedule. The contingent, third such group to work in support of the Fidel Castro regime in recent months, arrived in Havana Aug. 31 aboard a Cuban ship sailing from Canada.

Magnesium Truck Burns

A truck loaded with scraps of magnesium caught fire at Union Carbide plant in Greenville at about 11 o'clock this morning. The material, loaded in barrels to be taken to Goldsboro for conversion to reusable form, was noted on fire by the two men working with the truck, James Lewis and I. D. Williams, both of Goldsboro. They managed to pull the truck away from the building onto the lawn. Damage was confined to the truck and the scrap materials. The blaze was controlled by employees of the firm and city fire fighters who reported to the scene.

Rose Seeks 2nd Win Against Kinston

Rampants Seek Second Win

Rose High School's Rampants, after snapping a 12-game losing streak last week, seek their second straight win against Kinston Friday night on the road. Two starters for the Rampants will be Jay Hagans, left, and Bubba Rawl, Hagans, a 220-pound senior, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hagans. He is a starting tackle on offense and defense. Rawl, a 168-pound senior, is the starting fullback for Rose. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Rawl Jr. (Reflector Photo)

Rose High School's Rampants, their long loss string ended last Friday night, try to stay in the victory column this week, as they travel to meet Kinston's Vikings.

Kinston comes into the game without a victory for the year, and with only one touchdown to their credit. The lone score came in a loss to Goldsboro earlier in the year.

They have lost to Tarboro, Washington, New Hanover, Wilson and Wilmington Hoggard. Kinston and Rose are currently tied for the bottom slot in the Division II standings, and the outcome of the game will probably do a lot to decide the final position.

The Rampants, however, will probably get a boost from their victory over New Hanover last week, 14-7, and it could serve to make the Rose team jell and finish the season strong.

"I thought we did a right good job" Rose Coach Bud Phillips said. "The running of Johnny Smith was real outstanding," he added.

Smith was the key man in the Rampant attack that ground out two second half touchdowns in the victory. Smith scored the winning tally after Al Hunter had picked up the other.

The hard-running halfback picked up 97 yards in 18 carries in the game, and caught three passes for 25 yards. Phillips later named Smith as the outstanding player in the game.

"Our offensive line moved out a little better in this game, too," the coach said. "I think the defense has done two good jobs in a row. They looked good against Rocky Mount, and except for one drive, stopped New Hanover."

The Wildcats came up with 219 yards in total offense and 98 of that came in their only touchdown drive, leaving just 121 for the entire rest of the game.

The Rampants came through the game without injury, but three members of the team, Bubba Rawl, Jay Hagans and Kim Harbin have all missed a good deal of practice due to colds this week. Rawl is a questionable starter for this week's game.

Phillips feels that desire will have a lot to do with this Friday's outcome. Rose cannot suffer a letdown after their victory since Kinston probably feels this is their best chance for a win.

"They are a lot like us," Phillips said. "They appear to be a better team that their record indicates."

Phillips said that the Kinston defense is outstanding. Only one team, Wilson Fike, has scored more than two touchdowns against them. Last week, Hoggard, in getting a 9-0 victory, took advantage of offensive mistakes to gain the win. They recovered a fumble on a high pass from center on a punt attempt. Then, after scoring, they recovered a fumble on the kickoff.

"They've had trouble with their punt snaps, and with other mistakes, fumbles and interceptions," Phillips said.

"They have good size, and Reggie Bryant, a halfback, is an excellent runner. They also like to pass quite a bit and they have a good thrower at quarterback. His favorite target is John Gresham, a wingback."

Kinston runs its offensive pattern out of the I, and likes to go with dives and power plays. "They like to split their ends, and slot Gresham when they get ready to pass," Phillips said.

"They probably figure this is their best chance, and our defense will have to be awake for both the run and the pass. It could turn into a defensive struggle, and mistakes could be very important."

The probably offensive starting lineup for the Rampants lists Ronald and Donald Taylor at ends, Tim Leith and Jay Hagans at tackles, George Harris and Carl Lupton at guards, Tommy Diggs at center, Bob Barrett at quarterback, Al Hunter and Johnny Smith at halfbacks, and Bubba Rawl at fullback.

The defensive lineup will have John Conway and Todd Pair at ends, Willie Barnhill and George Harris at tackles, Hagans and Leith at guards, David Bullock and Gary Woods at linebackers, Kim Harbin and Calvin Moore at halfbacks, and Hunter at safety.

Aycock Falls To Nash Eleven

Nash County Junior High School rolled to a 48-0 victory over Aycock Junior High School's Green team yesterday.

The Greenies were unable to even get started in the game ending up with minus 47 yards in total offense. They picked up only two first downs, but both came when penalties advanced the ball.

Nash put the game on ice in the first period with three touchdowns. Tommy Eiley picked up two of them, going in on runs of 66 and 40 yards. Robert Pridger scored the third on a one-yard plunge, then he added the two-point conversion for a 20-0 lead.

In the second frame, Nash added two more scores. Andy Booth went in from 51 yards out, and Marvin Howell went in from the 30, making it 32-0 at the half. Eiley scored on a four-yard run in the third period, and Lee Darkin went over from the six in the final period to end the scoring.

Baby Bucs Close Out Home Slate Against Staunton Friday At 3

East Carolina University's freshmen football team, which has completed 39 passes for 504 yards in two games, will make its final home appearance of the season here Friday night against Staunton Military Academy.

Kickoff time is 3:00 p.m. for the Ficklen Stadium battle.

The Baby Pirates have lost both of their first two games, 64-26 to N. C. State and 30-14 to William & Mary. However, Coach Henry Trevathan's young men have shown great striking ability through the air. Quarterback Carl Summerell of Virginia Beach, Va., has hit on 38 of 71 passes for 491 yards and four touchdowns. On the negative side, he has been intercepted eight times.

Summerell's chief targets so far have been tight end Clark Davis (10 catches for 134 yards and 2 TDs), split ends Mike Myrick (9 for 195 and one TD) and Stan Eure (7 for 107 and one TD), and tailback Ron Hunt (6 for 14 yards).

Hunt, a product of Jacksonville via Carolina Military Academy, also leads the Baby Pirates in rushing with 30 carries for 130 yards.

Bugaboos for the young Pirates so far have been interceptions (8), defense against the rush (opponents gained 435 yards on ground), fumbles (fumbled 11 times, lost 7 of them) and the overall kicking game.

"We have a lot of talent at some positions, but we also have a lot of non-scholarship men playing for us," said Trevathan. "We only gave 18 full grants this year — and obviously it takes more than that to build a sound football team."

"However, we are definitely pleased with the development of some of our players," continued Trevathan. "Freshman football is a hard thing to evaluate. You like to win, sure, but you must remember the important thing is the future. I do know that some of our players will help the varsity a lot next year."

Trevathan will start a backfield consisting of Summerell at quarterback, Mike Richardson at fullback and Hunt at tailback against Staunton Friday night. The wide receivers will be Myrick and Eure and the tight end will be Davis.

"One of these games I feel we'll put it all together and show people a little better picture of the talent we have on this team," said Trevathan. "But it takes a lot of practice together as a team and so far we haven't had enough of that."

Gates will open at 6 p.m. Friday night for the ECU Frosh-Staunton contest which is the kickoff of a big weekend of Homecoming activities at East Carolina. Saturday afternoon the Pirate varsity meets unbeaten Southern Illinois at 2 o'clock.

Reds Win To Stave Off Oriole Sweep

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Has Sparky Anderson discovered Gil Hodges' magic elixir in time to make a miracle for the Cincinnati Reds?

The desperate Reds, one step from oblivion in the 1970 World Series, startled Baltimore 6-5 Wednesday on a three-run, eighth-inning homer by strong-man Lee May—after a pre-game chat between their manager and New York Mets skipper Hodges.

"I told him, 'I don't know what your magic was last year, but I sure can't seem to find it,'" Anderson recalled.

If Hodges, whose club lost the series opener to Baltimore last year and then won four in a row, passed on the Met formula, Anderson wasn't about to reveal it after May's wallop and the airtight relief pitching of Clay

Carroll saved the Big Red Machine from the scrap heap.

Nor would the Reds' manager, now trailing 3-1 in the best-of-7 set for baseball's top prize, name a starting pitcher to oppose Baltimore southpaw Mike Cuellar today in game No. 5, jeopardized by a forecast of rain.

"It'll be Milt Wilcox, Wayne Granger or Jim Merritt," he said. "I honestly don't know which one."

"I could go for a little rain." The Reds' predicament—no team ever has come on to win a series after losing the first three games—was worsened when Jim McGlothlin, losing pitcher in game No. 2 last Sunday, came up with arm trouble.

Merritt, a 20-game winner, also has had arm problems while relief specialist Granger never has started a major league game and Wilcox, a rookie with only five regular season appearances under his belt, was raked by the Orioles in relief of McGlothlin.

But the Reds' spirits definitely were on the upswing as they prepared to face 24-game winner Cuellar, a knockout victim in his two post-season starts.

They had overcome a four-hit spree by series standout Brooks Robinson Wednesday and had come up with their own clutch performer—first baseman May.

"We've got more momentum now, and we're started swinging better and we're more relaxed," said the 205-pound slugger, who drilled the first pitch from reliever Eddie Watt into the left field bleachers at jam-packed Memorial Stadium to erase a 5-3 Baltimore lead. The homer was his second of the series and gave him eight RBI high for either club.

"I think we're going to win it," he said.

"What happened today brought the whole team back," said Carroll, who blanked the Orioles on one hit for a three-game relief string of 81-3 scoreless innings in the series. "We were a little bit down, but we're going to be way up tomorrow."

"I'll be ready. If I pitch again I might hurt my arm. But we're trying to win this thing. So I'll be out there."

"We'll use all 10 pitchers if we have to," added center fielder Bob Tolan. "It's going to be tough, but we'll take our chances and let it all hang out."

Until the eighth inning Wednesday, the Reds were hanging by their thumbs. Brooks Robinson's second series homer and a three-run burst in the third inning sent the Orioles on top and they added an unearned run in the sixth.

Dave Concepcion's triple delivered a second inning run for the Reds, May singled home another in the second and Pete Rose homered in the fifth. But Orioles' starter Jim Palmer appeared to be in command, despite control difficulties, going into the eighth.

Then Tony Perez, who has stroked just one hit in 14 series at bats, walked on a 3-2 pitch and Johnny Bench, 2-for-14 as he came to the plate, lined a long single to left.

Manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles lifted Palmer at that point and Watt, a stocky late-inning stopper, got the call for the first time in the series. His first pitch was a belt-high fastball—which May deposited in the seats.

"Watt has done the job for me all year in short relief," Weaver said. "May just went up there and ripped the ball. You've got to give him the credit. It might have been a good pitch and it might have been a bad pitch. Sometimes a bad pitch goes for a pop-up."

The dramatic homer thwarted Baltimore's bid for a second series sweep in five years and snapped a winning string that began during the end of the season and carried through a three-game kayo of Minnesota in the American League pennant playoffs.

"All they did today was stay alive," Weaver said. "We're looking for a winning streak of one game now. I'd prefer to get it tomorrow."

Rule Doesn't Want To Play, But Shows Why He Should; Knicks Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Rule said he didn't want to play for Seattle. Then he took the court and showed the rest of the league why they should try to get him—and showed the Sonics why they'd better keep him.

The 6-foot-9 center for the SuperSonics, unable to accept the National Basketball Association team's contract offer, said Wednesday he wanted to be traded.

Several hours later he faced the Detroit Pistons and, despite sitting out a large chunk of the game with foul trouble, still managed to pour in 37 points, 21 of them in the first half.

But with all this the Sonics still lost their opener as Detroit, with a balanced attack led by Dave Bing's 25 points and 22 apiece by Jimmy Walker and rookie Bob Lanier, withstood a fourth-quarter surge and beat Seattle 123-117.

In other NBA action the defending champion New York Knicks crushed Cincinnati 128-104. Buffalo bombed Cleveland 107-92, Baltimore blitzed San Diego 123-105 and Philadelphia edged Chicago 110-107.

In the only American Basketball Association game the Utah Stars opened league play by walloping Denver 134-99.

Cazzie Russell led the New York attack with 29 points and Willis Reed worked both ends of the court brilliantly with 23 points and 16 rebounds to wreck the Royals' debut.

Cincinnati opened a 12-6 lead but the Knicks retaliated with 12 successive points and the Royals never caught up. Tom Van Arsdale had 22 for the losers.

Buffalo, one of the NBA's new entries, had no trouble handling another expansion baby as the Braves outscored the Cavaliers in each of the first three periods before clearing their bench in the final quarter.

Don May's 24 points led the Braves while Cleveland's Bobby Smith scored 21.

The Bullets held San Diego's high-powered Elvin Hayes to just 12 points as Baltimore, led by Jack Marin's 28, shot down the Rockets for the 19th time in 20 meetings over four years.

Philadelphia held a 19-point advantage over the Bulls midway in the final period but the 76ers had to turn back a furious Chicago charge to win their NBA opener. Billy Cunningham led the balanced Philly attack with 24 points but scoring honors went to Chet Walker of the Bulls with 30.

Utah, which won the Western Division ABA crown last year as the Los Angeles Stars, gave 9,185 fans—the largest home crowd in their history—plenty to cheer about as a pair of newcomers, Donnie Freeman and Zelmo Beaty, led the romp.

Freeman, acquired in an off-season trade with Miami, poured in 27 points and Beaty, who sat out a year after jumping to the ABA from Atlanta of the NBA, hit 23. But the Rockets, playing without injured superstar Spencer Haywood, got game-high scoring from rookie Ralph Simpson with 28.

S. Illinois Is Ranked Ninth

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arkansas State continues to show the way among the small college football powers in the weekly Associated Press poll but the Indians' domination is threatened by Montana.

For the fourth straight week Arkansas State held the top spot. Montana, however, managed to draw more first-place votes in balloting.

Arkansas State, now 4-0 after its 21-14 victory over Trinity, Tex., last weekend, collected only five first-place votes along with six for runnerup for 269 points.

Montana, with 242 points, received six first-place votes to remain second after whipping Idaho 44-26 last weekend.

North Dakota State advanced from fourth to third. Texas A&I, fifth a week ago, and Tampa, No. 8 last week, were tied for fourth this week.

Tennessee maintained its sixth ranking with Delaware moving to seventh and Western Kentucky advancing to eighth.

Southern Illinois remained ninth.

Akron, third a week ago, completed the Top 10. Eastern Michigan, seventh last week, dropped out of the top 10.

Buc Kickers Nip Methodist

FAYETTEVILLE — East Carolina University's soccer team picked up its first victory Tuesday, a 2-1 win over Methodist College.

The Bucs dominated the game, despite the closeness of the score.

Both Pirate goals came by Steve Luquire. He scored the first after 30 seconds of the second period had elapsed. The other game with 12:30 remaining in the third period.

The lone Methodist goal came in the third period when Jay Cholibus scored on a penalty kick with 7:15 left.

East Carolina had 12 shots at the goal, while Methodist had eight. The Buc goalie was credited with six saves, while Methodist had four.

Coach John Lovsted said the game was the best shut for the Bucs, who kept the ball in the Methodist side of the midfield stripe most of the game. He noted that the return of Mike McFadden, who has been out with an injury, helped the team effort. He also singled out Eric Schandelmeier, Craig Murphy and goalie Rick Lindsay for their play.

On the Sidelines
with Mike McGee
Head Football Coach—East Carolina University

Coaching in the College All-Star Game in Chicago this past summer was one of the most rewarding experiences I've had since my playing days ended and my coaching career began in 1963.

First of all there was the working association with such fine football men as Otto Graham, Willie Davis, Bobby Joe Conrad, Prentice Gautt and Walt Cory. No matter how long you've been in this business, you are always learning. The opportunity to exchange ideas with coaches like these men I've just mentioned was one of the big factors in my accepting Coach Graham's offer to be an assistant on his All-Star staff.

Also, there is the satisfaction of being part of a game that has meant so much to so many people through the years. A lot of people, especially the pro football owners, are saying the game has outgrown its usefulness. But, I consider the fact that the Chicago Tribune Charities has turned over $10 million to underprivileged children from the game's gate receipts. That in itself is enough to make the game worthwhile.

Thirdly, I knew that being a member of the All-Star coaching staff would be good exposure for East Carolina University and its football program. During my three weeks in Chicago I saw ECU receive a lot of attention in Midwest papers. I would be interviewed and our program here would be brought out in the story. Also, I got reacquainted with the people in pro football—something that will help in the future as we have players here at East Carolina who deserve a shot at a pro contract.

Finally, and perhaps most satisfying, was the association with the fine young men who were the best college football players in the country last year. Working with them every day for three weeks you come to understand better what an All-Star really is. Nearly all of the players I worked with were first class men as well as first class football players.

Some of those who impressed me the most as future pro greats were:

Quarterback Terry Bradshaw — Although he was with us only a week, I saw enough of this young man to predict he'll be one of the greats in a few years. In size and strength he's similar to Roman Gabriel. Bradshaw is 6-3, 215 and Gabe is 6-4, 220. But he's quicker on his feet than Gabriel. He has an excellent overhand delivery and shows signs of being a natural leader. He should help build the Steelers into a contender in a few years.

Running back Art Malone — This young man is probably the quickest big back I've ever seen. He's 5-11, 200 pounds and really moves. It's easy to see why the Falcons drafted him so high although he didn't get much publicity at Arizona State. Malone is very tough, a real hard-nosed competitor.

Defensive back Bruce Taylor — Far and away the best man we had in the secondary, Bruce won the award as the outstanding All-Star player in the game because of his punt and kick returns. He can really fly and should improve the San Francisco 49'ers defense quite a bit.

Offensive guard Doug Wilkerson — This fine young man played his college ball at North Carolina Central in Durham and Coach George Quiet deserves a lot of credit because Doug was already a well-trained offensive lineman when he reported to us in Chicago. He has the size (6-2, 245), the strength (he's an excellent straight-ahead blocker) and the keen football sense to make a fine pro. He's starting right now for the Houston Oilers.

Offensive tackle Sid Smith — In the pros today you've got to have height plus weight and this man has both. He's 6-4, 255 and should become a real good pro lineman although he's not starting right now for the Kansas City Chiefs. He played at Southern Cal.

Defensive end Al Cowlings — A teammate of Smith at USC, Al has great speed to go with his great size (6-5, 250). He already is starting at defensive end for the Buffalo Bills and should be there for a long time to come.

Defensive end Ron Carpenter — Although Ron didn't start for the All-Stars he is starting now for the Cincinnati Bengals. A very smart, well-trained, well-disciplined football player, this former N. C. State star should have many fine years as a pro. He is big and strong (6-4, 260) and particularly good against the rush.

Defensive tackle Mike McCoy — Unbelievable strength. That's what Mike McCoy has. At 6-5, 284, he should become a super pro lineman, in a class with Alex Karras, Merlin Olsen and Bib Lilly — although McCoy is bigger than any of these three. This Notre Dame star is now starting for the Packers.

Defensive tackle Mike Reid — One of the finest young men I've ever met. He's dedicated to perfection, both as a football player and as a concert pianist. He'll play with the Cleveland Symphony this spring, but right now he's starting for the Bengals — along side Ron Carpenter. At 6-2, 245, he'll actually be one of the smaller pro tackles. But this Penn State grad will find a way to do the job.

Wide receiver Rich Caster — He played his college ball at Jackson State, so you didn't hear much about him last year. But he's making a name for himself as a pro, starting for the New York Jets. He has strength and size (6-5, 222) to play tight end — which he did for us in Chicago — but he also has the speed to play wide — which is where the Jets are using him.

There they are — ten players I worked with in Chicago who I consider will make the finest pro players. And I've skipped over some real good ones, too. People like Dennis Shaw (Bills quarterback), Steve Tannen (Jets defensive back) and Ken Burroughs (New Orleans receiver), and John Isenbarger (San Francisco offensive back) also have promising pro careers ahead of them.

Petty Chases Top Race Money

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP)—Although sidelined for a month by injuries at midseason, Richard Petty can become the top money winner for 1970 in Sunday's Old Dominion 500 stock car race at Martinsville Speedway.

Petty, 33-year-old winner of more Grand National races than any other driver in history, was injured in a violent crash at Darlington, S. C., in May. He missed several races, including the $195,000 World 600 at Charlotte.

Yet he goes into Sunday's 500-lap race with winnings of $125,099, based on 17 victories in 37 starts. His teammate, young Pete Hamilton, has won $129,661 but isn't entered in the Old Dominion.

Petty starts fourth in Sunday's order — worth $1,500 in qualifying money. The race winner will be paid $7,175, with better than $4,000 going for second place. Either finish would put Petty on top.

And he's the pre-race favorite, based on five victories in his last seven starts at the almost flat, half-mile track.

Farmers, Consumers Will Feel Corn Blight Loss

BLACK FUNGUS—The Southern Corn Leaf Blight, a black fungus that no one knows how to stop, hit corn fields from the deep South to the Great Lakes region this summer. (AP Wirephoto)

EDITOR'S NOTE — A good part of the American corn crop this year has been ruined by a spreading corn blight. The following is a personalized view of the effects of the disease on an individual Indiana farmer.

By JOE MCGOWAN JR.
Associated Press Writer

CLINTON COUNTY, Ind. (AP) — Martin Silverthorn pulled an ear of corn from the stalk, peeled back a husk covered with a grey, moldy powder, and then crushed the kernels and corncob in his hand without effort.

"That is what the blight has done to us," the Hoosier farmer said.

He was showing the harm done this year to corn fields from the Gulf of Mexico to the northern Great Lakes by a black fungus known as the Southern Corn Leaf blight.

The U.S. Agriculture Department announced Monday that the nation's blight-damaged crop improved slightly during the final week of September and now is estimated at 4,188,281,000 bushels.

But the new estimate, as of field conditions on Oct. 1, represented a 13 per cent decline from the record crop of more than 4.8 billion bushels expected in July.

Martin Silverthorn—he prefers to be called Martin—showed how the fungus, whose spores are carried by the wind, first attacks the lower leaves of a corn stalk, producing egg-shaped lesions. Later, the fungus moves up the plant and penetrates through the husks into the corn kernels.

"As soon as it hits the leaves, the plant slows down its growth. The ears of corn won't go ahead and fill out," Martin said. This accounts for drops in production of as much as 50 per cent reported by many farmers.

"One reason you have to harvest as quickly as possible," Martin explained, "is that the blight weakens the stalk. If the plant falls over, then the shelling machine won't pick it up."

Another reason is to harvest before more damage is done, he said.

Martin and his wife, Alice, farm 500 acres—mostly in corn—in this rich farming area about 50 miles northwest of Indianapolis.

This spring the crops were just getting a good start when a hailstorm ripped across the area, devastating a number of acres of corn and some 10 acres of cucumbers.

Then Martin nursed the corn crop through a two-month drought, only to see his ears of corn turn black with the silent, powdery invader.

Agriculture experts are uncertain whether the blight will survive the winter and make more devastating attacks next spring, nor do they know whether the black fungus "dust" is dangerous to farmers working on the harvest. Purdue University's agricultural extension service warned farmers in Indiana that while the fungus is not known to be infectious to man, it could produce allergic reaction and result in chronic respiratory condition after repeated exposure.

An agricultural bulletin has advised all farmers working in the blighted fields to purchase breathing masks.

Meanwhile, Martin and his neighbors are waiting for completion of tests at Purdue attempting to determine whether blighted corn can safely be fed to hogs and beef cattle.

Asked what he will plant next year, Martin shrugged his shoulders and said, "There aren't going to be enough supplies of resistant varieties of seed. One outfit flew its equipment to Hawaii to start producing seed corn there for the coming season."

Growing of blight-resistant seed corn has also been stepped up in Mexico and South America this winter. Nonetheless, a Purdue bulletin said those varieties will draw "premium prices" next season.

Reluctant to speculate on blight damage to farmers like himself, Silverthorn did say that at the least "it means you don't buy that new car or replace any equipment this year."

Martin and other Hoosier farmers aren't sure what the blight will mean in the long run.

"People are gonna sell off their hogs," Martin said. "Corn will be too expensive to use for feed."

This may mean, for this fall at least, that the consumer may benefit in lower pork prices as farmers sell their hogs earlier than usual, thus creating a market glut.

Next year, however, according to some leading New York brokerage house specialists in farm commodities, the consumer will be paying higher prices for both pork and beef products, because the corn blight will mean high prices for feed grains used to fatten cattle and hogs.

Offsetting some of the gloomy aspect for the farmer is the likelihood that what corn is saved from the blight this year will draw better-than-average prices.

Martin was graduated from Purdue University in 1933 "when things was tough." He's been farming ever since, and is used to accepting bad years along with the good.

"When something like this comes along, it proves how valuable farm research really is," Martin said. "You can always hear people-hollering, 'what can you learn from farm science?' This country already produces more than it can eat." But when one fungus can threaten to wipe out half the country's corn crop, you know how important it is to have agricultural scientists."

Count 90 Cases Of Serum Hepatitis

RALEIGH (AP) — In the first nine months of this year 90 cases of serum hepatitis associated with drug abuse have been reported to the Board of Health. There were only six cases of the liver infection in all of last year.

The disease is usually transmitted through the blood. The virus can be spread when drug users share the same contaminated needle.

Dr. John MacCormack, chief of the communicable disease control section of the board's epidemiology division, said the majority of the cases involved youths between the ages of 17 and 25.

He added that the actual number of drug-related serum hepatitis cases in North Carolina may be larger than the statistics indicate because of a reluctance of many doctors to report drug abuse problems.

"It's a bad situation," MacCormack said. "The drug problem may not have increased 15 times, but it hasn't gotten any better and has surely gotten worse."

However, MacCormack said that the increase could also be attributed in part to an improved disease reporting system and an increase recently in all cases of hepatitis.

A similar increase in drug hepatitis cases has been noticed by Dr. James Bryan, chief of the medical clinic of North Carolina Memorial Hospital at Chapel Hill. He said most of the persons treated were between the ages of 17 and 25 and the illnesses ranged in severity from "not serious to debilitating."

Dr. Bryan cautioned that the health board statistics "should not be taken too lightly. We are just beginning to feel the first impact of the drug culture, and I suspect there is an equal number of unreported cases," he said.

Twice Helped War On Crime

DENVER (AP) — George Downer and his wife, Evelyn, twice did their part in fighting crime in a six-month period.

In their automobile they chased and caught a 17-year-old suspect soon after a service station was held up.

Earlier Mrs. Downer, awakened by a noise, saw two men on the roof of a pool hall near her home. She telephoned police while Downer went to investigate. Officers arrived in time to arrest two men.

The U.S. census in 1910 showed population of 7,239,881.

Talks Bonds To Ruritans

WINTERVILLE — Jack Richardson, assistant administrator of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was the principal speaker and moderator at the Winterville Ruritan Club meeting Tuesday night.

A discussion on "Bonds For Your Life" was held.

Richardson outlined the various studies made since 1967 of Pitt Memorial which led first to a proposal to remodel the present building and finally to a decision by the hospital board and the Pitt County Commissioners to recommend a completely new 330-bed facility.

The discussion centered around the overcrowded situation at the hospital and the need for improved ancillary services.

The administrator noted that several of the newer hospitals in nearby counties are being built around the private room concept. Richardson also stated that there are far more Pitt County patients in nearby hospitals than are received by Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Richardson praised the hospital staff of 50 doctors, a good percentage of whom are specialists.

Members of the Ruritan Club participated in the discussion. Vice President Tom Mann presided at the meeting.

Two Tots In Death Car

DURHAM (AP) — A motorist peered into a car parked beside a busy road near Durham and saw 3-year-old boy, smeared with blood, sitting in the lap of his dead mother.

The motorist, who had stopped to see why the car was parked, also saw the boy's brother and their dead father. Authorities believe the two tots stayed in the car for nine hours after their father shot their mother and then turned his .22-caliber pistol on himself.

The bodies, discovered about 9 a.m. Wednesday, were identified as those of Louis Hayes, 23, a Durham city fireman, and his wife, 23-year-old Hedgepeth Hayes.

The Durham County medical examiner, Dr. Robert E. Zipf Jr., ruled that Hayes had killed his wife and then committed suicide. Zipf said both died about midnight.

M. L. Davis, chief of criminal investigation for the county sheriff's department, said Mrs. Hayes had been hit twice in the back and once in the chest. Hayes, who was found with a .22 caliber pistol lying on the seat beside him, had been shot once in the head above the right ear, Davis said.

The boys, 3-year-old Michael Jr. and 2-year-old Rodney, were taken to the Duke University Medical Center for examination. They were later turned over to welfare workers for release to their grandparents.

Davis said Hayes left no suicide note. The officer was unable to offer a motive, but he said he believed the family had suffered financial difficulties.

Faircloth Will Attend Opening

RALEIGH (AP) — Highway Chairman Lauch Faircloth will speak at dedication ceremonies next Wednesday of North Carolina's newest welcome center, on Interstate 40 near the Tennessee line.

The center, which cost $142,000, will provide travel information and assistance to visitors. Two other welcome centers are operated by the State Travel and Promotion Division. They are on Interstate Highways 85 and 95 at the Virginia line.

Crocodile Farm In The Backyard

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Daniel Chee, his wife and four children have a crocodile "farm" in their backyard. For two decades, the Chee family has been in the business of raising baby crocodiles into adulthood and then converting them into shoes, handbags, wallets, belts and other items. They keep about 500 live crocodiles in fenced-in shallow wells in the backyard of their one-acre estate on the outskirts of Singapore City. A cage houses a 15-foot python and a jungle lizard, but crocodiles are the main business for the Chinese family.

worth $70 each when full grown at two years of age. The Chees feed their wards daily with raw fish and meat scraps. When the crocodiles are about five feet long, they are ready to be slaughtered.

Skinner throw a rope loop around a crocodile's neck and haul it from the well. Its deadly jaws are locked with hopes. A knife then is plunged into a soft spot in the crocodile's forehead which renders the reptile unconscious. The crocodile is turned over on its back and killed with a knife stab into the belly.

After skinning, the hides are soaked in special solutions for one week to remove scales. The skins then are tanned, ironed smooth and polished. Chee employs 30 persons who cut and shape the leather into articles which are sold from a shop on the grounds and in other shops in Singapore.

Chee also exports crocodile skins to France, Italy, Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Britain and Japan.

The Panama Canal opened Aug. 15, 1914.

Ft. Knox Played A Varying Role

FT. KNOX, Ky. (AP) — Ft. Knox, operated as an artillery training center from 1918 to 1922, was designated a national forest from 1926 to 1932 and turned over to civilian caretakers.

Col. Daniel Van Voorhis selected the site in 1932 for mechanized cavalry training and the post became a mechanized training base for the army until 1940 when it was changed to an armored training center.

Researchers Turn To Food Poisoning

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — The bacteria that cause the three most common types of food poisoning — plus one rare one which is fatal to half the people who contract it — are being studied by researchers at the University of California.

The scientists in the School of Veterinary Medicine are seeking results that may improve food handling standards and cultural practices among those who raise the animals and fowl.

Hans P. Riemann, who was formerly with the Danish Meat Research Institute, is studying the rarest of these food-borne illnesses — botulism — which kills half of those who get it. Botulism most often is traced to home preserved products packed in canning jars or similar containers. Extremely little is known about how the botulism organism stays alive. The most common food poisoning bacteria, salmonella, is the research target of Walter W. Sadler. This bacteria has historically been termed "banquet food poisoning" because it can crop up when large quantities of food are held at serving temperatures.

Salmonella is sometimes fatal to infants or to elderly or sick people, but most victims recover in from one to eight days. Symptoms are fever, headache, diarrhea and vomiting.

A third researcher, Constantin Genigeorgis, is studying staph bacteria, another common cause of food poisoning. People get sick in about one to six hours after eating the toxic food and show symptoms of nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and diarrhea. The duration of the disease is brief, usually only a day or two, and recovery ordinarily is complete.

Man Just Cannot Replace His Worn-Out Streams

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — If an old elevator fell and many people were injured, would any right-thinking person press charges against the fattest passenger?

The question was asked by a Winston-Salem official who contended his city should not be "embarrassed" for being the major polluter of the Yadkin River, since many minor polluters also had a part in it.

"Winston-Salem is the fat man in the Yadkin elevator," the official told the North Carolina Pollution Control Committee.

But conservationists and others concerned about the environment contend there is a fallacy in the analogy which points up a basic idea they have been trying to tell us for decades:

Old elevators can be replaced. Worn out streams cannot.

Our sluggish and polluted creeks and streams, our foul air and our scarred land don't work as well for us now as when they were "new." We have used them hard. But since we cannot replace them, or live without them, we must live within the limits they impose.

In the view of conservationists, this means the "fat man" must increasingly be held accountable for his weight. Against all our traditions, the exploitation and over-indulgence of industries, governments and individuals in the use of our shared natural resources must be curbed, they say.

One of North Carolina's most noted conservationists, Dr. James C. Wallace of Chapel Hill, said, "The crux of the problem is that we live in a finite world and yet we behave as if it were infinite."

Wallace and other environmentalists have found it hard to impress this finiteness in a state that still has mountain and coastal wilderness and where there is still room for people to get away from one another.

"Most people right now are wholly unaware that we're on the eve of enforced brotherhood," Wallace said. "We're going to have to live within limitations. But our tradition is opposed to this. We have never accepted limitation."

The limitations will mean a change in our attitude toward industry, technology and property rights, and eventually a change in our way of life.

"And changing a way of life is much more painful than spending money on a problem," Wallace added.

The basic problem is that industry and technology, no matter how rigidly controlled, produce wastes. These wastes are what have become popularly known as pollution.

A certain amount of this technological waste can be cleaned up by Boy Scout antilitter campaigns, lawsuits by the government against major polluters and sophisticated antipollution equipment.

But in the long run, as the country's leading ecologists tell us, there is no technological answer to pollution.

The only answer, they say, is to curb technology, to limit the amount and type of industry we will allow. This means the public must change its lifestyle enough to cease demanding every time-saving gadget technology is capable of producing.

It also means population planning and limitation. No studies have yet been made to determine the optimum level of population for North Carolina and where it should be concentrated.

But, Wallace said, such studies will and must be made, along with land use policies that specify how much and what parts of North Carolina must be preserved as mountains, parks, protected estuaries and farmlands and what areas are needed for residential and industrial use.

Time is a critical factor in wise planning. In 50 years the population of North Carolina, like that of the rest of the nation, is expected to double. That means 10 million people within our 52,712 square miles of land and water by 2020.

Since changes in our basic way of life and way of thinking are generally considered only reluctantly by politicians, state officials have tended to steer away from attacks on the root causes of pollution.

The efforts of North Carolina's boards, departments and agencies are concentrated on cleaning up after industry and requiring industry to keep its future fouling of the state to a minimum.

"You could almost predict we're going to fail in the attempt to save the environment in North Carolina because we're not willing to attack the basic causes," said Wallace Kaufman, head of the Conservation Council of North Carolina.

But there are a few moves by state officials in recent months that conservationists consider encouraging:

—The state did put the major blame on "the fat man" for causing several fish kills in the Yadkin River this summer. The Board of Water and Air Resources told the city of Winston-Salem to curb its dumping of untreated wastes into the Yadkin and to take other interim measures to protect the quality of the river water until the city's new sewage treatment plant is complete.

—The administration of Gov. Bob Scott has publicly opposed for more than a year the plans of developers to turn Bald Head Island off North Carolina's coast into a lush resort. Ecologists say the uninhabited, semitropical island is the last unspoiled island of its kind on the eastern coast.

—The chairman of the Board of Water and Air Resources, S. Verion Stevens Jr. of Broadway, severely criticized in August the irresponsible and unselective recruitment of industry by some municipalities in the state. He said municipalities have welcomed new and expanded industries without considering the capability of the city to treat the wastes the plants will discharge.

Another board member singled out the city of Winston-Salem as an example. The welcoming of the Schlitz Brewing Co. a year ago helped overload an already taxed sewage system and led to the overflow of untreated wastes which killed thousands of fish in the Yadkin River this summer.

"In following such a course, these municipalities have failed in their responsibilities both to their citizens and to all citizens of the state... the problems created by these irresponsible actions have produced an intolerable situation that, if continued, may constitute an insoluble crisis," Stevens said.

He recommended that the board adopt a policy of requiring municipalities to notify the board in advance before any new or expanded industry is welcomed. This way the board could require preventive rather than corrective action.

The board adopted Stevens' report "in principle" and will consider it in detail Oct. 15 and 16.

Marijuana Affects Offspring Of Rats

NEW YORK (AP) — Pregnant rats that breathed marijuana smoke in amounts equal to one cigarette a day for 10 days produced offspring with serious genetic defects, a scientist says.

Dr. Vincent DePaul Lynch said his laboratory studies on the rats indicated that the use of marijuana could have "very serious consequences" for human reproduction.

Lynch, testifying Tuesday before a New York State Senate subcommittee hearing on the state's marijuana laws, said his tests tended to corroborate earlier experiments where serious malformations of the fetus occurred after laboratory animals were injected with highly concentrated doses of pure marijuana resin.

Lynch's rats were placed in a glass-enclosed cage for three minutes and breathed marijuana smoke channeled from another container in which marijuana leaves were burning.

"We calculated every aspect of the experiments," Lynch testified. The rats received, he said, "the equivalent amount of marijuana that a human being would normally consume."

Twenty per cent of the offspring were born with serious defects.
