Sybil Connolly's Irish Originals Have Gained World Renown

By AP Newsfeatures
 Sybil Connolly, Ireland's leading fashion designer, has gained world renown for her own talents and the skills of Irish weavers and craftsworkers.
 She was born near Dublin of Welsh and Irish parents, was educated at a convent school, and at age 17 went to London to study dress designing as an apprentice at Bradley's, a famous dressmaking establishment which then made clothes for many members of the royal family.

 In 1940 she returned to Dublin where she joined a local dressmaking firm and helped turn it into the first custom dressmaking house in Ireland. At the age of 22 she became a director of the firm. But 10 years went by before her name appeared on the fashions she designed.

 She presented her collections only to an Irish and English clientele, until the fall of 1952 when she was "discovered" and was invited to show her designs in America.

 Sybil Connolly does not sell her originals to be copied by American manufacturers. She produces both custom order and ready to wear costumes in her own Dublin workrooms, and distributes them to stores throughout America. By copying her own designs and making them by hand in Ireland she creates employment in Ireland for many tailors and seamstresses. A number of traditional Irish handicrafts have been revived as a result of America's great acceptance of Sybil Connolly fashions. In making hand crocheted Irish lace alone, she employs 54 people, all of whom work in their own cottages on lace patterns which have been handed down for generations and which now are being worn by Connolly clients throughout the world.

Bobbie Declares It's Her Last Hurrah

By CINDY ADAMS
 NEW YORK (WNS) — "I'll never get married again — ever," announced Bobbie Gentry as we shared an hour and a cup of tea together.

"Nostalgia is creeping into day's lyrics and someday, maybe, moon and spoon and June will again take over pop songs," she continued, "so, although I hope to keep up with the trends and hope to be around singing the songs I write just as long as I want to, I can't actually guarantee my professional future. But my personal future I CAN guarantee: No more marriage!"

The hotshot Country & Western singer spoke easily, lightly, of her recent Instant Marriage to Nevada millionaire Bill Harrah which it seems, lasted about 20 minutes. In fact, it was over before most friends knew it had begun.

"I don't usually like to talk about it," said brownhaired, brown-eyed Bobbie without bitterness or rancor; then, in her slight southern drawl, she added softly, "Although there's no reason not to. He is a very nice man and I'm working at his club in Reno later this year — for my regular salary, too — so there's no bad feelings.

Unnatural
 "It's just that marriage is not for me. For somebody else, raising babies and staying home is what life is all about. For me, marriage is an unnatural state. I've got to be loose. I've got to travel and be on the road and go and do and see and accomplish and write songs and revisit the South where I came from and conquer new fields. That's life as far as I'm concerned."

Even close up this Capitol recording star is a knockout. Her long fake eyelashes are out to here. Her long real hair is down to there. She's tall and curvy and if she weighs over 26 pounds it has to be either in her blouse or throat.

Bobbie designs her own clothes, coordinates and writes and hosts her own BBC-TV show, is as big in Tokyo and Germany as in Kentucky, has a radio program on the Armed Forces Radio Network and owns, among other little goodies, part of a basketball team. With her plaid pantsuit and matching hat, perfectly manicured nails plus ten-carat solitaire on the third finger right hand (she dumped the husband but kept the ring like a good girl) plus her furs and the rest of the trappings, Bobbie, who comes from Chickasaw County, Mississippi, is about as small towny 'n folksy 'n honey 'n backwoodsy 'n little red schoolhouse as a Bergdorf Goodman floor manager. As the commercial goes, "She's come a long way, baby."

Trade-Off
 "Yes, ah know," grinned Miss Gentry, who was in New York to star at the Empire Room of the Waldorf Astoria. "Ah originally learned mah music on a little piano which mah grandmother got when she sold her cow. We didn't have plumbing but we had an upright piano. And I learned my first Country & Western from hearing Nashville on the radio and I learned to sing in our church choir and all this was on my folk's farm in the Mississippi delta. But later on while I was growing up we moved to California where I was educated and have lived ever since."

I asked about her stage trademark — scruff, bikini jeans which just come up to the Mason-Dixon line, a ratty, tatty blouse with the tails knotted at the waist and always — but always — her navel hanging out.

The girl, whose first record, "Ode to Billie Joe," in 1967 sold over a million and established her in the bigtime, grinned and big-city, store-bought teeth gleamed at me. "The truth," she laughed, "is that worn-out levis and a torn shirt were what I lived in day in and day out during my days on the farm. So, since I write songs about that life and sing songs about that life, it seemed only natural to dress that way on stage, too. And anyhow, it sort of reminds me of my roots.

The next meeting of the group will be held in April, to coincide with the date and time of the district ministers' meeting.

way, cost only two bucks but I put another 80 into them for proper tailoring. And that blouse is deliberately torn in just the right places so whenever I have it cleaned I pin a note onto it telling them to please not sew up the rips and tears. I got so tired of cleaners always trying to repair it for me.

"I never want to forget my home and that's why I go back often to see my granny. Once the town had a big celebration in my honor. We have only one police are and we've only had that for three years and you'd better believe the policeman didn't turn that siren off from the minute he picked me up. As a lot of southern towns all the shops are built around the square and that day all the shop windows had my pictures in them. It was real nice.

"I hope never to give up performing. I love it. Of course, I may have to make some changes. I mean, sooner or later those low-cut levis will have to go but I sure do love just what I'm doin' and how I'm doin' it now."
 With that li'l ole Miss Gentry glanced at her 10-carat ring which glances back. Bobbie Gentry may know about country squares but she sure ain't one herself!

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. William Earl Stocks of Greenville announce the engagement of their daughter, Millie Elizabeth, to Lonnie Carson Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Louis Thomas of Rt. 1, Greenville. The wedding will take place Jan. 31.

Smelly Suits For Two Years

PARIS (WNS) — Renoma Freres, the male couture house, is now selling pre-perfumed suits for men that are guaranteed to keep their pleasant odors for two years. "The process is the result of four years of laboratory research," said one Renoma brother. Added the other, "Our two odors are leather and tobacco. Now a man can be a man without smoking or going near a horse."

Gourmet Corner: A Hot Item For Fondue Lovers

By TOM HOGE
 Associated Press Writer

If the Swiss are remembered for nothing else, they will go down in history as the creators of cheese fondue, a dish that has received worldwide acclaim.

The cuisine of Switzerland is really the cookery of three nations. Around Geneva and Lausanne it is French-style; in the Bern and Zurich regions the German influence is noticeable, and in the Savoy lake area, it is distinctly Italian.

In addition, Switzerland has taken on an identity of its own with the lavish cream, cheese and butter dishes that abound in this rich dairy land.

Since World War II, cheese lovers have been sounding the praises of Raclette, a dish of such humble origin and unpretentious appearance that for years it was unknown outside of country kitchens.

Over the past two decades, however, the vogue for Raclette has spread so that it is served in many of Switzerland's finest restaurants, but it is only in recent years that the mountain cheese from which it is made has become available in American specialty cheese and gourmet shops.

The word Raclette is the generic word for a number of creamy mountain cheeses from Switzerland usually made in wheels of up to 15 pounds in weight. It also stands for the name of the dish itself—cheese melted until bubbling hot and served with young potatoes, tiny pickled onions and cucumber pickles.

In older days, the Swiss farmers placed a half wheel of cheese in front of an open fire until the cut surface began to bubble and exude a pungent aroma. Then they scraped the melted surface and deposited it onto a hot plate.

Now they use special electric stoves which are bulky and quite expensive. But they make a lively conversation piece as the wheel of cheese is lodged in place and heated a slice at a time.

For those who have no fire-place and no Raclette stove there is a simple, inexpensive solution. Merely place a chunk of about four ounces of Raclette cheese in the oven or under a broiler until it is heated through and bubbling. This way, the hostess can serve several people at once and the flavor is just as good, even if the cooking method is not as colorful.

Raclette cheese is usually eaten with a fork or spoon along with the new potatoes, but it can be spread on hot French bread if you wish.

It is delicious served with a cold dry white wine.

Dior Make-Up Expert Tells Women Experiment With Your Face

By ALISON LERRICK PARIS (AP) — "You never stop thinking in life, so why stop changing your face?" asks Serge Lutens, whose daring make-up for Dior has stunned Paris for the past four seasons. "Most women wear make-up as a form of social courtesy, like brushing their teeth or saying good-morning," he continues on his pet grievance. "But the real make-up is an experience in self-confrontation"—in short, in looking yourself in the face. When Lutens, who wears mostly blue jeans and hair to his shoulders, tells the Dior mannequins how to put on their faces, he has to subject his "strong ideas" to "imperatives of clothes." "Alas," he says with resignation, "it would be much more amusing to think about the spirit of fashion, not about a few rags."

The face that goes with this winter's long '30s clothes is "like Chinese furniture, brilliant, satiny and lacquered," he describes lyrically. "The lips are like varnished wood, the eyes like crystal, the whole face transparent and sophisticated." This means applying pale pink foundation, almost white powder, geisha purple-pink liquid eyeshadow coating the entire eyesocket, lipstick to match and a Japanese rose-blue shadow under the chin "to detach the face from the neck, as if placed on a pedestal." The eyebrows should be almost non-existent, the hair a smooth tight cap.

An alternative is to sketch a pink crescent swooping from above the eyebrow down to the cheekbone, "to show the rapport between the eye and the cheek." If traced too timidly, Lutens cautions, this makes women look like rabbits.

"It's nice to be natural," he says, "but that's not the point of make-up. I hate everything that improves on nature, like false eyelashes. That's cheating."

However, a woman does have the right—up to a point—to some say when her face is in question. For example, "if a woman likes bushy eyebrows, she can keep them," Lutens says magnanimously. "It may show a lack of taste but they may also be copied. She will have done something herself. We mustn't always live in clichés," he adds strictly, "but unfortunately many people are sheep."

And, he predicts, in 10 years bushy eyebrows may well make a comeback. "I don't know how I'll force myself to show them," he laughs. "They're horrible."

For spring, he is plotting an even greater upheaval in tradition than his usual—a dead-white face with neither eyebrows nor lipstick. "If you are white in the summer, when everyone else is tan, people look at you," he says with rapture. "But this is not a sick or negligent white, but an intentional white. I'm sick of varnished lips," he adds, thumbing through some photographs of his current make-up.

The only color may be two tiny dots of sky-blue where the brows used to be, plus another dot on the chin and a sky-blue shadow under the neck, borrowed from "the 16th century Chinese."

Inspiration for this naked look is the guileless, childlike heads of the Middle Ages.

"The medieval head looks naive but is really sophisticated, almost religious. By taking away all extraneous elements you finish by finding the real face."

Anyone equipped with several hours and the courage to look herself in the face can perform all these feats herself at home. "People waste time doing lots of things, so why not waste time painting your face?" he says.

For the women who simply "want to be themselves," Lutens has a ready-made answer: "Who are you? What does 'personality' mean? It's as if you were dead and people are talking about you. Personality is doing what you want when you want."

A few lucky ladies, like Greta Garbo and Marlene Dietrich, "have extracted the essence of themselves and can't go farther because they have reached perfection." But for the majority of facepainters, he feels "it's good to experiment so as not to have any regrets."

This applies to any age group, "so long as a woman still wants to be beautiful. An old tree is beautiful," he says. "It has bark and character. An old cat is more beautiful than a kitten."

Women who are "just too ashamed" of the way they look can choose between two easy solutions: "to bead themselves all over or have a face lift."

And, according to this make-up artist who believes in character more than cosmetics, "a woman doesn't need any make-up at all. She makes her own face herself. It may be monstrous, but make-up can't disguise it."

WAY OUT MAKEUP—Serge Lutens, one of Paris' most fashionable make-up men, says that "real make-up is an experience in self-confrontation." The face for this winter's long '30s clothes, he says, is "like Chinese furniture—brilliant, satiny and lacquered."

College Students Consider Dating Old-Fashioned

By ROBERT STRAND BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—Susan Phillips, a lively and attractive, long-haired brunette, leaned forward in her chair and said: "I haven't been on a date for two years."

Not because she doesn't spend time with boys, but rather because Susan considers the dating her mother did "extremely artificial and garbage."

Susan's style is "a lot of people hanging around and agreeing to go someplace"—with maybe Susan and a nice guy hanging around after all the others have gone.

A growing number of California collegians consider formal dating—calling up a week in advance to win a promise to attend some specific event—old-fashioned.

"The traditional pattern of getting to know someone through dating is getting competition from a new pattern of behavior," says Mrs. Marjorie Lazoff, a Stanford University researcher. For many students, the rival pattern is the spontaneous, informal happening, often occurring in groups.

Daddy shopped around for dates on the phone, shined up the car, opened and closed doors, paid the bills and was on his best behavior. Having a date was anticipation, and not having one was embarrassment.

Now Sue Pescar, a longhaired senior sitting on the Sprout Plaza steps, says "A lot of people consider all that pretentious. We don't need all that structure." It is a mystery.

Why anybody would wait until Saturday to call Sue for a Saturday get-together should be a mystery, but that's the way it is. She says:

"Often they say, 'You want to do something?' You ask what, and they say, 'Well, I don't know.'"

Miss Pescar doesn't note this behavior to illustrate some confusion in young male minds, but rather the casualness, the let's-let-it-happen attitude.

In the Student Union, a pretty pig-tailed blonde says: "People are more frank and open about the fact they have to get together."

"I think of myself of just being with people rather than going on dates. There's less emphasis on couples and more on going in threes and fours."

But like Kelly Peck, a sophomore at the Delta Tau Delta house, many students do stick to the time-honored approach of formal dating. However, even the more traditional students report a gradual lessening of sole masculine responsibility for the planning and paying.

Girls Help Pay Sometimes the girl asks the boy, and sometimes a girl, recognizing that male students don't have much money, helps pay the bill.

Joe Pichirallo, a senior, says: "One of these days, when I pick up the check, some chick is going to say, 'What are you, some kind of a sexist?'"

Richard J. Ofshe, a University of California sociologist, observes that in boy-girl relations, much less attention is paid to the event and much more to getting to know each other.

"These undergraduates have a fairly sophisticated view of interpersonal relations," he says. "The implication is we will be producing more sophisticated young adults, people with a wider range of experience before they get married."

A skeptical note is struck by Dr. Harvey Powelson, head of psychiatric services on the Berkeley campus, who says loss of the traditional dating pattern may not be a blessing.

The formality, the manners, the rules, all provide protections for the young people, usually unsure of himself and not really prepared for the complications of sexual involvement.

"Freedom is a terrible burden," Powelson says. "Being a swinger—always free, spontaneous, open and warm—is a terrible burden."

Lady Passes Given In Berlin

BERLIN (WNS) — Lady tourists arriving here are now being given a Lady Pass that gives them tips and privileges at hairdressing salons, fashion boutiques, souvenir shops and art galleries. It invites the women to entertainments and dances and fashion shows. It also helps with the "lord service," which supplies male escorts for both Berlin universities for six marks an hour (about $1.50).

University Women's Club To Meet Tuesday

The East Carolina University Women's Club will meet Tuesday evening at the recital hall of the Music School on East Tenth Street.

The group will meet at 8 p.m. to view a rehearsal of the Music School's production of Johann Strass' opera "Die Fledermaus."

Dr. Clyde Hiss, director of the university's Opera Workshop, will direct the 60-member cast and crew in the final phases of the comic opera. Robert Hause will conduct the orchestra.

All members of the University Women's Club are urged to attend the meeting and the dress rehearsal. "Die Fledermaus" will be performed for the general public on Jan. 22 and 23 at the School of Music.

Refreshments will be served in the lobby of the Music Building after the rehearsal. A short business meeting will be held to elect a president-elect for the forthcoming year.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE AP Food Editor LUNCHBOX FARE Chicken Salad Sandwiches Walnut Bars Beverage WALNUT BARS A minimum of butter goes into these butterscotch-flavor cookies.

1½ cups unsifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 large eggs
2 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups coarsely chopped walnuts

Butter and flour a rectangular baking pan (about 13 by 9 by 2 inches). On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder and salt.

In the top of a double boiler beat eggs slightly; stir in sugar; add butter. Stir constantly over rapidly boiling water just until hot—about 5 minutes; remove from heat.

Add flour mixture; stir until blended; stir in vanilla and walnuts. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean—25 to 30 minutes.

Place on wire rack; before entirely cool, with a small metal spatula loosen edges; cut in bars and remove with spatula. Store in a tightly covered tin box.

Husband 'Married' To Sunday Football

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good man. He supports us, he loves us, and he's true blue. But I have a gigantic problem. I am so jealous of football I could scream!

I have heard and read all kinds of consoling pearls of wisdom, such as, "Just be glad he's home to watch those games," or, "Don't fight him, join him!"

Abby, weekend after weekend, he sits with his eyeballs glued to the television set, with a portable radio beside him listening to another game. All he ever says to me while the games are on, is "How about something to eat?" I really wish I could stir up an interest in a bunch of men falling on top of a ball just so I could share it with him, but I am sorry to say, it doesn't move me. This might sound humorous, but it's really a last desperate plea for some kind of fresh advice on how to change things. I have had it!

MARY

DEAR MARY: If you can't find something to do while your man is enjoying his favorite sport, you need more help than I can give you in a letter. Bake a cake, clean closets, cupboards, drawers. Catch up on your reading or letter writing. Do the ironing, or mending. Go visit your mother or a friend. Or would you rather sit around and look hurt and neglected? If so, be my guest. What needs changing at your house is not your hubby's hobby, it's your attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I am a merchant seaman and I sail on many different ships. In the process of changing ships, my mail is sent to my home address and then forwarded to me. My home address is the address of my parents.

My problem is my mother. She takes the liberty of opening all my mail before she sends it on to me. This annoys me but I don't want to offend her by making an issue of it. I am 23 and unmarried.

Respectfully awaiting your advice, I am, A SAILOR

DEAR SAILOR: You can respectfully tell your mother that you are a big boy now, and prefer that she not open your mail. In other words, you will have to make wares, Sailor, or put up with a one-woman censorship committee.

DEAR ABBY: Last week my boy friend and I were in my living room talking. My father was there, too, reading a magazine. All of a sudden, my father looked up and said, "Oh, isn't this an interesting article?" He then proceeded to read aloud what turned out to be a 2-page article. When my father was about half finished, my boy friend got up, went into another room and returned with a newspaper and started reading to himself. My father finally finished reading the magazine article aloud.

Two questions: Was it correct for my father to have read such a lengthy article aloud the way thru? Was it proper for my boy friend to have gotten his own reading material in the middle of my father's reading?

DEAR WONDERING: NO . . . on both counts.

DEAR ABBY: Re that bride who had as her attendant her pet Pomeranian: "Dear Hoosier who is horrified I, too, will gently chide the bride. To complement her vow to honor She should have had a Weimaraner."

JAYBITS: SAN DIEGO

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Scott Poses Interesting Ideas

Gov. Scott made some interesting proposals in his State of the State address to the Legislature last week.

He called on the General Assembly to allow voters to decide whether a North Carolina governor can succeed himself and whether 18 year olds should vote in the state.

Gov. Scott also called for an increase in the minimum wage for $1.25 to $1.60 per hour for workers covered under the state law.

He discussed plans for "the most comprehensive approach to environmental protection and management in the history of our state."

Also called for was an objective and fair approach to the reapportionment of the congressional and legislative districts, establishment of the N.C. Criminal Justice Academy, establishment of a policy to provide free transportation for urban students, establishment of a Governor's Advocacy Commission on Children and Youth among other matters.

Scott said he intends to present a special message later on major changes in the reorganization of state government.

We can find little to criticize in the program laid down by Gov. Scott, although we are assuming we will have more to say as the Legislature moves on concerning the critically needed funds for ECU's two year medical program.

Certainly we can agree with him on his call for an amendment to allow the governor to succeed himself.

He pointed out that "a governor's ability to lead is seriously diminished during the second half of his term."

"The question is not whether a governor should be allowed to succeed himself," Scott said. "The valid question is whether the people should have the right to decide for themselves if they wish to retain a governor for a second term. I believe the people should have that right."

We believe they should decide the matter in the form of an amendment, also. Not only would a governor be in a more powerful position during his first term, but he would also have to be more responsive to the people's desires since he would know that he had to face them again in a second election.

The governor expressed the hope that the 1970s will be a "new era of human harmony."

"Let us be done with destruction," he said. "Let us be done with violence and threats. Let us dedicate ourselves to improving the quality of life for all our people."

Certainly if Gov. Scott and the Legislature can achieve this hope then they will have left their state in far better shape than they found it. And yet there is more reason than ever to hope that this dream can be achieved in the years ahead.

The governor has laid out some major projects for the Legislature. Now the lawmakers must do their best with them.

Dent's Eyes Were Opened

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Behind the defeat of President Nixon's political aide Harry Dent in the vicious battle for the soul of the South Carolina Republican party lies a political calculation of utmost importance to the 1972 Presidential election.

Dent's calculation: President Nixon must radically revise his Southern strategy and make a serious bid for the growing black vote in South Carolina and other Deep South states to keep the party there from premature death.

It was precisely with this in mind that Dent, without directly consulting Mr. Nixon, intervened in the bitter succession fight for South Carolina party chairman (the post Dent himself held before signing on at the White House two years ago).

Dent journeyed to Columbia, S. C., last Saturday to make a hard-hitting pitch to replace outgoing right-wing party chairman Ray Harris with a successor who would build a moderate party "encompassing the needs and aspirations of all the people of our state." Translated from Southern political code language, that Dent appeal meant one thing: reshape the party so that blacks and other citizens can join, or perish.

Considering Dent's role since 1969 as Sen. Strom Thurmond's man in the White House fighting for conservative racial policies, his posture at the state committee meeting last weekend is a political shocker.

Dent lost at Columbia when the man he wanted, Cordes G. Seabrook, Jr., a will-heeled Anderson businessman, was beaten 2-to-1 by Richard County (Columbia) chairman Kenneth Powell. Seabrook's defeat, despite support from Mr. Nixon's top Southern aide and from chief South Carolina fund-raiser Hal Byrd (protege of Republican financier and textile magnate Roger Milliken) shows the new gap between Dent and the party Dent himself — as Thurmond's right-hand man — helped build in the mid 1960's.

In sum, two years in Washington have opened Dent's eyes to the calamity that confronts his own party back home if it fails to adjust to the political revolution of the last few years — huge black registration, massive school desegregation, the deflowering of racist politics.

With the silent approval but without the vital public support of Strom Thurmond, Dent pushed the 49-member state executive committee to install Seabrook as state chairman for one major reason: racial moderate Seabrook had been elected trustee of the public school board with both white and black votes. In contrast, Powell had led the anti-black "bloc vote" attack last November on two Negro candidates from Richland County for the state legislature. Both were elected.

More important, Powell was the choice of outgoing Chairman Harris, a key strategist in accenting the race issue in Rep. Albert Watson's losing 1970 campaign for Governor. A clear early favorite, Watson lost to colorless Democratic Lt. Gov. John West largely because of voter hostility to overuse of the race issue.

Dent and Thurmond can supply dozens of examples of South Carolina conservatives from the establishment world of business and the suburbs who were outraged by the pungently racist Republican campaigns last fall.

They believe the new balance of power in South Carolina politics is the conservative — but non-racist — suburban vote. Since Dent and his allies feel these voters regard Harris and Powell as the archvillains in the 1970 campaign, the selection of Powell as chairman might only perpetuate last year's problems.

Thus, Thurmond now fears that the party he built threatens to become an albatross around his own neck when he seeks reelection next year — probably against popular outgoing Democratic Gov. Robert McInair. The reason Thurmond stayed out of the party fight in Columbia was his fear that playing the part of Republican boss might damage him in the eyes of this key suburban vote.

This time, Dent failed to win over his state committee, packed with small businessmen and farmers picked by him and Thurmond years ago. But the wheels he set in motion won't stop turning. Dent's defeat may be pyrrhic, carrying the seed of change in the Republican party's Southern strategy.

ACTION IN A VERY SENSITIVE AREA!

By ART BUCHWALD

The Goodbye To Jones

WASHINGTON — The big question on everybody's mind in 1971 is "What happened to the economy and where did we go wrong?" It's easy to blame the Nixon Administration for the economic slowdown but, if the truth be known, Nixon had nothing to do with it.

The trouble started with a man named Harry Putnam, who lived on Maple Street next to a man named Robert Jones.

For years the Putnam family followed the Joneses in everything they did. If Jones bought a new car, Putnam felt obligated to buy a new car. If Mrs. Jones bought a new fur coat, Mrs. Putnam had to buy a new fur coat whether she could afford it or not. When Jones' kid started guitar lessons, Putnam had to give his kid guitar lessons.

It wasn't just Putnam. Everybody on Maple Street felt obliged to keep up with the Joneses.

About a year ago, Putnam came home from his office, tired and irritable, to find a brand-new station wagon in front of Jones' house.

Mrs. Putnam was nervously waiting for her husband. "I called the dealer and ordered a station wagon."

"Why do we have to have a new station wagon?" Putnam demanded.

"What a stupid question to ask," Mrs. Putnam said. "You saw the Jones' new station wagon outside of their house."

"So what?" said Harry. "Why do we have to do everything they do?"

"Because they are Joneses," his wife said. "You know in America we have to keep up with the Joneses."

"There's no law that says we do," Harry said angrily. "It's just some stupid tradition, and I say the hell with it."

Mrs. Putnam had never seen her husband in such a temper, so she decided to drop the matter.

A few days later Putnam was shoveling the snow off his sidewalk, and Jones, who was using an electric snow-spray machine on his driveway, came over to say hello.

"You ought to get one of these machines, Harry," Jones said. "They're the latest thing."

"I don't need a snow removal machine," Harry muttered.

Jones ignored Harry's mood and said, "When are you getting delivery on your new station wagon?"

"I'm not buying a new station wagon, Jones."

"But I bought one," Jones said.

"God for you," Harry said. "But we're sticking with last year's car."

"Look Harry, if it's a question of money," Jones said quietly, "I'll sign a note for you at the bank."

"I don't need you to sign a note for me, Jones," Harry said. "I'm up to here with you. You made me buy a color television set, a garbage crusher, an underwater sprinkling system, a mini-bike for my son, ballet lessons for my daughter, a trip to Hawaii for my wife, and I had to do over my whole recreation room because you

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Why are billionaires so rare? Well, for one reason, it takes time to become one. If you were paid $1,000 a week tax-free, it would take you more than 19,230 years to earn a billion dollars.

On the other hand, no one can spend money like governments do. It took the U.S. government 166 years—from George Washington's inauguration in 1789 to 1955—to spend one trillion dollars. But at the rate of present expenditures, about $70 billion annually, it will have spent its second trillion dollars in just 12 more years!

Most military officers today frown on the wearing of wigs by soldiers. But Julius Caesar, one of the most successful warriors of all time, wore both a wig and a laurel wreath to hide his baldness. In Chile, it is forbidden to sell wigs to convicted pickpockets, whose heads are shaven to make them more easily recognizable.

What are America's three greatest medical problems? They are heart disease, cancer and strokes. Together they are involved in 70 per cent of deaths each year.

Quotable notables: "We can find beauty in sunsets and flowers and faces. But we can know what love and unselfish goodness are only through persons." —Rufus M. Jones.

Household hint: A dash of salt in coffee cooked too long or reheated will freshen its taste.

Underwater love songs: The humpback whale has been called "the mockingbird of the deep." It has been known to make as many as 15 distinct sounds, some of which are arranged in a kind of song that can last up to nine minutes—full of screeches and cowlike moos.

Scientists feel it is a mating song, probably on the theory that no song can last nine minutes without bringing in love.

Worth remembering: "Some young men who married to escape the fighting are now getting divorced for the same reason."

Hampered: Despite all the money spent on education in the United States, 18.5 million Americans 16 or over can't read well enough to get along readily. One out of every eight read so poorly they don't know how to apply for a Social Security number or fill out a government form.

It was Robert Louis Stevenson who observed, "the man who forgets to be thankful has fallen asleep in life."

'Leaning' To Pat Taylor

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Evidence accumulates that support is building in Governor Bob Scott's administration for Lieutenant-Governor Pat Taylor as North Carolina's next governor.

Or, put it another way: recent developments fit a pattern enhancing the Lieutenant-Governor's chances as the Democratic candidate next year.

Coincidence or design? Increasingly, political observers in Raleigh lead to the latter view.

Some of the two-plus-two added to four by the knowledgeable:

1. Governor Scott has made a point of drawing Taylor into the spotlight over the past few months, delegating duties and otherwise giving the public a chance to see Taylor in the executive role.

2. Chuck Barbour moved from state Democratic executive director to head the travel and promotion division of the state Conservation and Development department. Remarks interpreted as partisan to Taylor got Barbour into controversy just before the shift. The new assignment isn't likely to lessen his interest or involvement in politics.

3. As Senate reading clerk, State Democratic Chairman Eugene Simmons serves at the Lieutenant Governor's elbow in the current General Assembly session. Simmons, appointed to the party post by Scott, holds the view he can remain neutral despite the close working association with Taylor. Even so, it's obviously an advantage to a prospective candidate to have so intimate a relationship with the party's chief official.

4. Fred M. Mills, Jr., a hometown (Wadesboro) friend of the Lieutenant-Governor, was Scott's choice for legislative liaison in the current session. There's the possibility Mills could turn some quiet spade work for Taylor in the course of his daily contacts with the 170 legislators.

A Significant Appointment A development of significance to the 1972 gubernatorial campaign was Taylor's choice of Senator John J. Burney of New Hanover to head the powerful Senate Finance Committee. The post was filled by the Governor's uncle, Senator Ralph Scott of Alamance, last session.

Burney has close ties with Attorney General Robert Morgan, discussed as a '72 candidate either for Governor or U.S. Senate. Some insiders reasoned Taylor would be unlikely to give the Finance plum (which carries membership on the prestigious Advisory Budget Commission) to one allied with a potential opponent, and took it as the tip-off that Morgan has decided against the gubernatorial bid.

Scott and Taylor have harmonized lately on the theme of full-time duties for the office of Lieutenant-governor. Their reasoning is that the No. 2 man could take some of the burden of formal duties off the chief executive, leaving his time for policy-making and administrative matters.

The new Constitution adopted by voters last fall and effective next July 1 opened the way for assignment to the Lieutenant-governor of duties other than presiding over the Senate. (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

THAT GUIDING HAND
Frank C. Laubach died recently and the account of his death contained the statement that "he was one of the truly great men of our time." Laubach realized that it would never be possible to stabilize world affairs and to spread the Christian gospel when an overwhelming majority of the world's population was not able to read or write. Laubach worked out a system of phonetics for more than three hundred languages. This does not mean that he himself could speak over three hundred languages. Many of the languages which he taught had never been written in any form until the Laubach team arrived in the country, region, town or village where it was spoken. In other words, one man, a Christian missionary, made it possible for millions of illiterate people to read. This seems to be an era when matters of supreme consequence are occurring. The recent death and burial of the famous Charles de Gaulle kept the eyes of most of the world's population glued to their television sets. One of the most convincing evidences of the continuing power of God in the world is the fact that when leaders are needed they emerge and take situations in hand. The great Charles, greater in world history than the famous Charlemagne, turned up the year and they day when his country and the world needed him. There are youngsters lying in their cribs today who will be leading the world (for better or worse) fifty years from now. God's hand is still guiding world affairs. By Earl L. Douglass

Inflation Game Plan 'Called'

By ELMER ROESSNER

The war against inflation will be called off on account of darkness. The withdrawal of efforts to defend the dollar will be faster than the withdrawal of troops in Vietnam. The darkness is the gloom of rising unemployment and the sinking of Republican chances in 1972.

The series of actions the Nixon administration has taken and will take to suspend the campaign against inflation is not entirely selfish, it is not venal. It is political only in the broadest sense of the word: the people want it. No date is in prospect for a new war.

Not all people. Those with large savings, large amounts of insurance, pensions and other forms of fixed incomes don't want more inflation. It is a tax that has taken away two-thirds of their substance since 1959.

Who Wants It But the 6 per cent unemployed workers want it because they believe it will bring back the good old days, the good old days of, say, 1968. Their wives and children want it. The workers who fear they may be the next out and their families want it. The people with solid jobs who want to see their salaries inflated to equal the inflated prices of goods want it. The businesses that have been selling luxuries to the people want it. So do the other businesses that have been losing sales as unemployment rose. So to the speculators who want more action in Wall Street. So do the owners of real estate want it.

All those and many others want more inflation despite the fact that they know, or have been told, that inflation is losing our foreign markets, that it is eroding the value of the dollar, and that it is making the United States a second-class economic power in the world.

But you can't blame a man who is out of work and whose unemployment insurance is running out for wanting an end of the war.

Contradictory Signals Some deflation of prices is evident. Copper, zinc and some other nonferrous metals have declined in price. Beef and pork is currently a bit cheaper at retail, although it may go up later in the year. There are many under-the-counter cuts in auto, liquor, large appliances and other prices. There are advertised cuts in apparel and many other kinds of slow-moving and distress merchandise.

But those are largely adjustments to weaker demand. The constant rise in wages and salaries will require eventually higher prices for almost everything.

In addition to the ominous demands of the steelworkers, some railroad unions, men's clothing workers, telephone employees, can makers and half a dozen others are about to demand more pay, not the old 3 1/2 per-cent jawboned standards of President Johnson's day, but 6 per cent and more — lots more. Chrysler and Ford are under the gun.

President Nixon has signed legislation granting pay rises of 5.96 per cent to government employees and 7.9 per cent to military personnel. The administration is about to ask Congress to increase Social Security payments, and congressional support is gathering for the AFL-CIO demand to increase the minimum wage to $2 an hour.

Soviet Pledges Make Up Future Egyptian Losses

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny has pledged that the Soviet Union will replace Egypt's "material losses" in another war with Israel and also will improve living conditions in the Arab nation.

Podgorny told a cheering crowd of 5,000 shipyard workers in Alexandria Sunday that his country would "bear any material losses to help Egypt repulse Israel."

"We will furnish you with experts and money to enable you to achieve your aims in all fields," he said.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat replied that Egypt "will be a faithful friend because we can never forget your help in times of difficulty and darkness."

The two leaders took a special train from Cairo to the Mediterranean port. Along the way, enthusiastic crowds welcomed Podgorny who came to Egypt for the dedication of the Aswan High dam last week.

Podgorny and Sadat, making his first visit to Egypt's second largest city since he became president, spoke near what appeared to be two huge oil tankers. Soviet engineers are helping the Egyptians to build. Speeches of both men were interrupted by the crowd chanting: "Long live Soviet-Egyptian friendship! We will fight! We will fight!"

Sadat again expressed gratitude for the Soviet decision announced during Podgorny's visit to assist in village electrification. The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said Sunday the project will cost more than $270 million. It said the Soviet Union will provide all the equipment and technical know-how and will also help in reclaiming 300,000 acres of land.

Meanwhile new wrangling was heard among the Palestinian guerrillas, with Yasir Arafat's Al Fatah, the biggest guerrilla group, threatening to use armed force against leftist rivals calling for the overthrow of Jordan's King Hussein.

Kamal Adwan, Al Fatah's chief spokesman, denounced Dr. George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, as an adventurer who had doublecrossed the resistance movement.

Habash said Saturday his guerrillas had no alternative but to topple Hussein and replace him with a leftist regime.

"We shall prevent any attempt to divert the Palestinian revolution from its essential goal of fighting Israel, even if we have to use armed force," said Adwan.

He claimed Habash approved and signed a peace and cooperation agreement with the Jordanian government Jan. 13, then secretly sent word to his guerrillas to ignore it.

The Jordanian government said it was "determined to respect the letter and spirit" of the Jan. 13 agreement. But in answer to Habash, Information Minister Adnan Abu Odeh said the government reserved the right to react as it saw fit to any attack designed to sabotage the peace pact.

The Popular Front announced today it will not disarm its militia forces according to the peace agreement, but a statement said the leftist guerrillas would not go to war against Al Fatah "under any circumstances."

Reports from Amman said Al

Fatah and the Popular Front have begun secret talks to patch up their differences.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli spokesman denied reports that Israeli boats fired Sunday on Lebanese territory. He also denied reports that Israeli planes had flown over the guerrilla base at Sarafand, Lebanon, which Israeli commandos attacked last week.

Military sources in Israel warned, however, that retaliatory raids into Lebanon would continue as long as guerrillas continued to attack Israeli border settlements from bases in Lebanon.

High Court Taking Up School Board Problem

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today took up the problem of school boards unable to raise money for new schools even though they have the support of a majority of the voters.

As highlighted in a test case from West Virginia, the problem is a state provision that new school taxes and bonds must be approved by a "super-majority"—by more than half the people voting on them.

Taxes and bonds worth many millions of dollars hang in the balance in West Virginia and in other states. The court is delaying a judgment on similar requirements in California, Idaho, and Missouri until it decides the case from Roane County, W.Va.

Six times over the last few years propositions to issue bonds and raise taxes for schools in the county were put to the voters and approved by at least 50 per cent. All the propositions failed, however, because West Virginia's Constitution requires a 60 per cent majority.

Relying on a string of "one-man, one-vote" Supreme Court decisions, a group of Roane County voters claimed the provision was unconstitutional, saying it gives more weight to the vote of opponents than it does to the vote of people favoring the new bonds and taxes.

In July 1969, the West Virginia supreme court of appeals agreed. This evidently was the first decision anywhere extending the one-man, one-vote principle to require simple majority approval of bond and tax issues.

Another group of voters appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court and the case was granted review last April. A decision is expected by June.

In an advance brief, Charles C. Wise and J. Henry Francis Jr., both Charleston lawyers, attacked the provision, stressing the frustrations of a majority of Roane County voters in efforts to improve their schools.

Over the last 20 years, they said, the county educational system has deteriorated until it ranks among the lowest in the state.

The direct reason, the lawyers said, is a lack of revenue—money a majority of the voters are willing to raise.

On the other side, attorney George M. Scott of Spencer, W.Va., emphasized that no one is unconstitutionally barred from voting. As long as everyone can vote, he said in his brief, the "one-man, one-vote" rule is being observed.

The court itself has been closely divided over "one-man, one-vote" and its application. In recent years, Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr., Byron R. White and Thurgood Marshall have supported a broad interpretation while Justices Hugo L. Black, John M. Harlan and Potter Stewart have dissented.

The West Virginia case could depend on the views of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Harry A. Blackmun, the two men appointed by President Nixon. Burger dissented in his one vote on the issue. Blackmun has not had an occasion to vote.

bought a new pool table. I don't care what you do any more, I'm not going to try and keep up with you."

"Don't yell," pleaded Jones. "The neighbors will hear you."

"I want them to hear me," yelled Harry. "LISTEN, NEIGHBORS, I'M NOT KEEPING UP WITH JONES ANY MORE. HE'S A 14-CARAT PHONY, AND HE'S DRIVING US ALL INTO BANKRUPTCY."

The neighbors dashed out on the street. They couldn't believe their ears; no one had ever questioned Jones' status before.

"But if we don't keep up with the Joneses, who are we going to keep up with?" a neighbor asked.

"Me," said Harry. "And for starters, I'm not buying a new station wagon. So I've saved everybody on this block $5,000."

It made sense to the people on Maple Street, and they all voted to keep up with the Putnams instead.

And at that moment the recession in the United States really got under way.

Sky Giant Can Tote 3 'Copters

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A joint Army-Air Force test team from North Carolina says three of the Army's largest helicopters can be carried aboard the C5 Galaxy jet transport — with room to spare.

The team from Pope Air Force Base and Ft. Bragg, loaded a C5 at Harrisburg recently. The plane is 51 feet long and almost 12 wide. But the CH47 Chinook helicopters fit inside.

Only one other Air Force plane can carry Chinooks — the much slower C133 — and it can only hold one.

speculation on the possibility of a Taylor-Sowers ticket for the Scott organization to unite behind.

It would not necessarily ever reach the point of a spoken endorsement by the incumbent Governor for his successor. In any event, such a decision is far down the road.

Strategy in '72 among Democratic candidates may well be to avoid a knock-down primary battle. Party insiders feel such a fight only would aid the Republicans in the general election. That means the tactic must be to build a show of strength to discourage other contenders.

In that light, quiet support for Taylor from the seat of power may prove tremendously important.

Over-All War Pace Turns Down

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The over-all pace of the Vietnam war appears to have turned downward during President Nixon's two years in office, although the combat burden on South Vietnam continues to be severe. Enemy terrorism remains high. But security in the countryside is reported steadily improving and some economic indicators are pointing toward better times. This picture emerges from U.S. and South Vietnamese statistics which are less than comprehensive and sometimes disputed, but which can be used as rough gauges on how the war is going.

Under what he terms a Vietnamization program, Nixon has aimed at turning the combat burden over to Saigon. He announced the first U.S. troop withdrawals in June 1969. By mid-1971, the administration says, the U.S. ground combat role will be virtually over.

Such critics of the Nixon program as W. Averell Harriman, former chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks and currently a Democratic foreign policy adviser, contend Vietnamization is prolonging the conflict, with the Saigon regime fighting on while Americans pull out.

With the Paris talks still showing no progress, Secretary of State William P. Rogers was asked Friday: "Where is the evidence that the war is beginning to end... for us or end for South Vietnam as well?"

Rogers said Nixon's "major emphasis was on the war ending for us." He noted U.S. withdrawals and lower casualties, but added that over-all combat activity is down and said the war is ending too "as far as the South Vietnamese are concerned."

troop strength in Vietnam at 335,000 at the end of last month, down from 539,000 in June 1969, and U.S. combat deaths at 4,221 in 1970, a drop from 9,414 the previous year.

While U.S. combat deaths dropped last year to below half the 1969 total, South Vietnamese deaths in action stayed almost as high: 20,138 in 1970 compared with 21,833.

An over-all decrease in battle tempo can be shown by the drop in combined allied casualties. Also enemy deaths fell sharply, by allied count to 103,638 in 1970 from 156,954 in 1969.

But with the enemy shifting from large-scale actions back to guerrilla tactics, the terror count has run high. Enemy-initiated terror incidents were reported at 1,732 through the first 11 months of 1970, up from 1,375 the year before. The number of civilians assassinated or kidnaped was averaging 1,000 a month both years.

One of the plus signs, according to allied calculations, is the hamlet security index. From a 79.2 per cent figure for the percentage of relatively secure hamlets through the country in January 1969, the index had risen to 95 per cent by the end of 1970.

On the economic side the rate of inflation was reported down slightly, from 32.1 per cent in 1969 to 29.8 per cent in 1970. South Vietnam's rice production was listed up from 5.1 million metric tons in 1969 to 5.6 million tons last year.

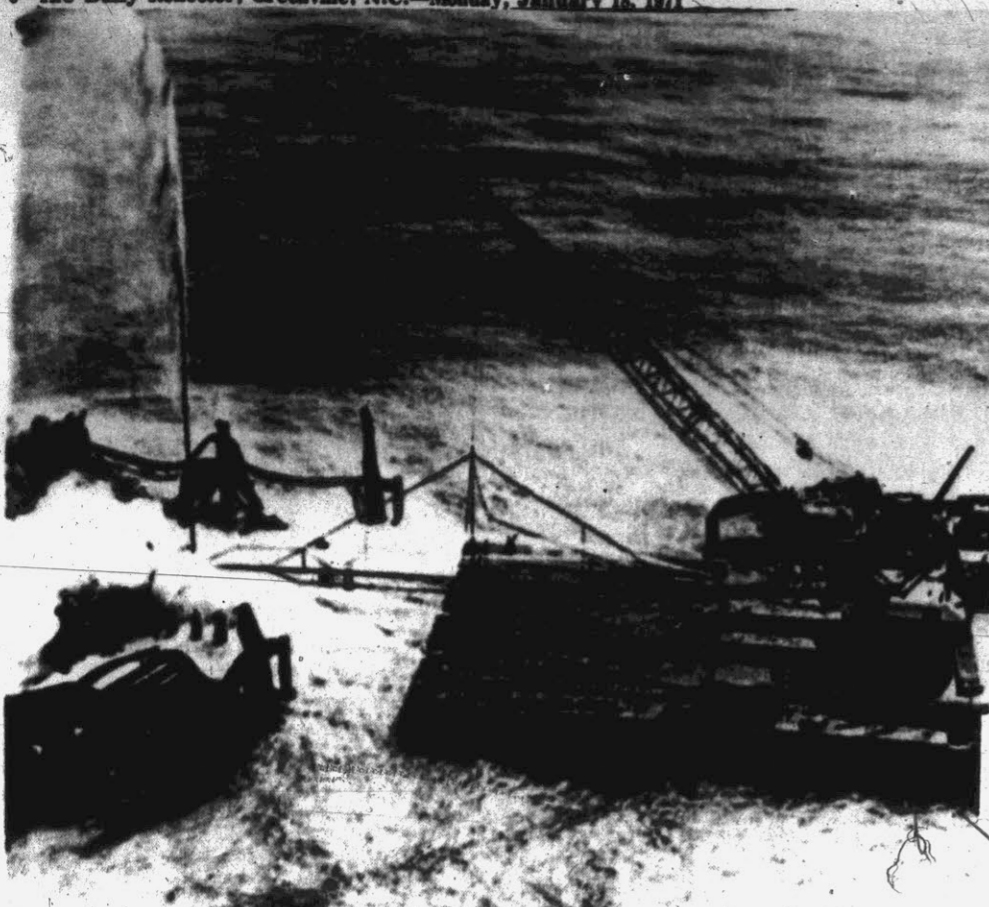

In transportation, 2,596 kilometers of South Vietnam's highways were officially pronounced secure in 1969 and 4,400 by mid-1970. Secure waterways were listed as up from 1,171 kilometers to 1,423.

CASING SLICED — Shell Oil Co. was successful Sunday in stopping oil leakage into the Gulf of Mexico from a bent well casing on its blazing offshore oil platform off the Louisiana coast. A special cutting device suspended from a boom on a fireboat cut the casing which had been partly submerged and leaking oil. When the bend was cut the oil shot skyward and was ignited by other burning wells. The casing is adjacent to the only unignited well on the platform. That well is gushing sand and water into the air. Student Paper Tapped For FJA Membership

THE RAMPART LINES, student newspaper at J.H. Rose High School, has been nominated for membership in the Future Journalists of America, it was announced today by the national headquarters at the School of Journalism, The University of Oklahoma.

Founded in 1958 with funds provided by The Wall Street Journal, the F.J.A. is one of two national organizations providing individual membership for school journalists. F.J.A. has no scholastic grade average requirements — only an interest in journalism and mass communications. High school students working on newspapers, yearbooks, magazines, radio programs, and in school print shops all across the U.S. hold membership in the organization.

Developing an interest in guiding young people into journalistic careers is one of the chief aims of F.J.A. Other goals include an exchange of ideas among student editors through the "Editor's Forum," a library loan service of top-ranked school publications, and special chapter awards to proficient student journalists and working professionals.

Local chapters are required by the F.J.A. national constitution to name a professional journalist as a co-sponsor of the organization. Many schools select newsmen, editors, publishers, radio and television personnel, and free-lance writers.

An annual presentation of the F.J.A. Hallmark Citation is given to the best chapter.

Commission For Greenville Man

NORMAN, Okla., — A total of 28 midshipmen first class in the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps (NROTC) at the University of Oklahoma received their battalion commissions on Dec. 1, 1970.

The midshipmen's first assignments will last about four months. Their responsibilities involve all areas of command and organization.

John Marshall Colcord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joashley M. Colcord, 1909 E. 5th St., Greenville, received his commission with the rank of midshipman lieutenant.

Colcord is a senior majoring in finance in the College of Business Administration.

Two Injured As Car Hits Signs

A car, being pursued by Greenville police along Memorial Drive early Sunday, went out of control and struck two signs and injuring two persons in the vehicle, investigators reported.

Officers said Amos Johnson Chestnut Jr., 21, of Route 1, Greenville, was charged with speeding, driving under the influence, and failing to stop for a blue light and siren following investigation of the mishap. Police said Chestnut and a passenger in the car were injured when the vehicle, allegedly traveling at a high rate of speed, struck the curbing, spun out of control, and struck two signs.

Damage to the car was set at $150 while damage to the signs was set at $25.

Two Proposals Labeled 'Stupid'

ST. CATHARINES, Canada (AP) — Two of the recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women were labeled respectively "stupid" and "crazy" recently by the woman chiefly responsible for the establishment of the commission.

Laura Sabia of St. Catharines called "stupid" the recommendation that mothers be paid $500 a year for each of their children under 16. And she described as "crazy" the suggestion that a married man's tax deduction for his dependent wife be reduced from the present $1,000 to $600.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
(c 1971: By The Chicago Tribune)

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQ ♣Q43 ♦K95 ♣7432

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♦ 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT

Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. The meaning of North's cue bid is not clear at this point, but it is our duty to return to two spades. Since we did not offer an immediate raise, partner should not expect better trump support than this.

Q. 2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J86 ♣Q3 ♦K8543 ♣A96

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass

3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—While normally it is our practice to redouble with 10 points, it is our view that in this instance a better result can be obtained by an immediate bid of one no trump. A redouble might render it more difficult to bid on the next round.

Q. 3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K864 ♣K64 ♦AKQ8 ♣104

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass

1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass

3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades. You have a maximum two spade raise (16 points), and no further pressure should be placed on partner. No thought should be given to no trump when you have four-card trump support plus a doubleton.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠2 ♣AQJ63 ♦1083 ♣K542

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 NT Pass 3 ♥ Pass

3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. North's rebid has reassured us about our weak spot and since he was unable to raise hearts we should now be willing to try for nine tricks.

Q. 5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A1063 ♣AQ43 ♦8 ♣KQ76

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

Pass 1 ♣ Pass Pass

Dble. Pass 2 ♣ Pass

3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass

Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. While your holding indicates that the opponents are unlikely to fulfill their contract, it would be imprudent to double. You cannot reasonably expect to defeat them more than one trick, and any attempt as to the bad trump split might facilitate declarer's play of the hand.

Q. 6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q108 ♣J10765 ♦109 ♣KJ3

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♣ Dble. Pass 1 ♥

Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Your hand contains seven points in high cards and rates as a fairly good holding opposite a double. Further action is, therefore, indicated, particularly since partner acted freely after doubling. The rebid of hearts might be another choice, but with lack of controls and a wealth of intermediates our preference is for the shorter road to game.

Q. 7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠4 ♣96 ♦AJ1093 ♣KQ886

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

Pass Pass Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—While we do not object to opening somewhat light in fourth position, we prefer to pass in this case. With such outstanding weakness in the major suits there is too great a chance that opponents may be able to outbid us.

Q. 8—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠76 ♣AJ3 ♦A882 ♣KQ65

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

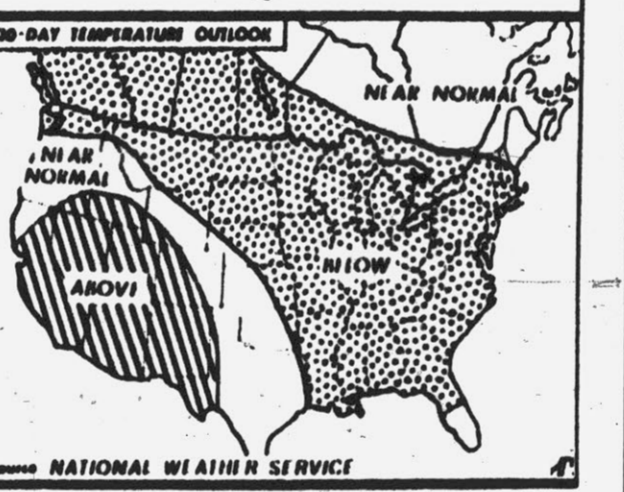

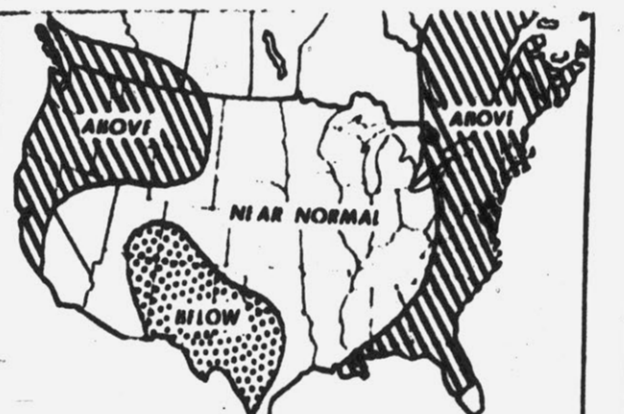

Pass Pass 2 ♣ Pass

2 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass

4 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Double, and lead a trump. Either East has some new ideas about an opening demand bid or else the distribution around the table is freakish, in which case your partner's hand must contain the elements of a good save in one of the red suits. In any case, a passive policy is not recommended.

Offer Class In Insurance

An insurance class, Adjuster 23, will begin at Pitt Technical Institute Thursday at 7 p.m. in the conference room.

The course will be a 30-hour course meeting each Thursday night for two hours from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. for 15 weeks.

This is one of a series of six courses offered in the Insurance Adjusting Certificate Program. Two courses are available each year, one in August and another in January.

Insurance 23 stresses the how of contract analysis and goes into major liability contracts such as Standard and Special Automobile policies, Employer's Liability and Workmen's Compensation, Business and Personal Liability and Workmen's Compensation, Business and Personal Liability, and numerous others including health and multiple-peril contracts.

The first meeting will be for organizational purposes. One may register, pay tuition, purchase books, get assignments for first class meeting at Thursday's meeting. Tuition is $3 and the cost of the book is approximately $12.

Interested persons should attend the first meeting.

S.Sgt. Freddie L. Brock (above), son of Mrs. Letha Brock of Winterville, was recently awarded the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious achievement while serving with the 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam. Now on his third tour of duty in Vietnam, Brock received the medal for service during the period from Oct. 15 to Oct. 19, 1970. Maj. Gen. Edward Bautz Jr., commander of the 25th Infantry Division, made the presentation. The sergeant is married to the former Carol Harper of Kinston.

LONDON (AP) — Lord George-Brown, Britain's rough-hewn former foreign secretary, has been more or less drummed out of the exclusive Savile club without even being properly drummed in.

David Hardman, a former Laborite member of Parliament who had proposed his party colleague for club membership, told newsmen he struck George-Brown's name from the list after an incident last week.

He said the peer, who was his dinner guest, had risen and made a speech in a breach of club regulations.

"A certain amount of jollity took place and it is all very unfortunate," commented club chairman Rupert Withers. George-Brown had no comment.

T.Sgt. James D. Everett, son of Mrs. Jack Everett of Robersonville, has arrived for duty at Taegu AB, Republic of Korea. Everett, a dental technician, is assigned to a unit of the Pacific Air Forces. He previously served at Eglin AFB, Fla. The sergeant, a 1948 graduate of Robersonville High School, attended the University of Maryland Far East Division in Japan. He has also studied at Florida State University and Okaloosa Walton Junior College, Niceville, Fla. Everett is married to the former Nana Ingram of De Funiak Springs, Fla.

The price of food today is going up, and up and up.

Which means, if you're smart, you'll spend your food dollars on things that give your family the most nutrition for your money.

And number one on that list is milk. Penny for penny, milk gives your family more vitamins, minerals and protein—more toward good health—than any other food you can buy.

So if you're cutting down, cut out sweets and crepes suzettes.

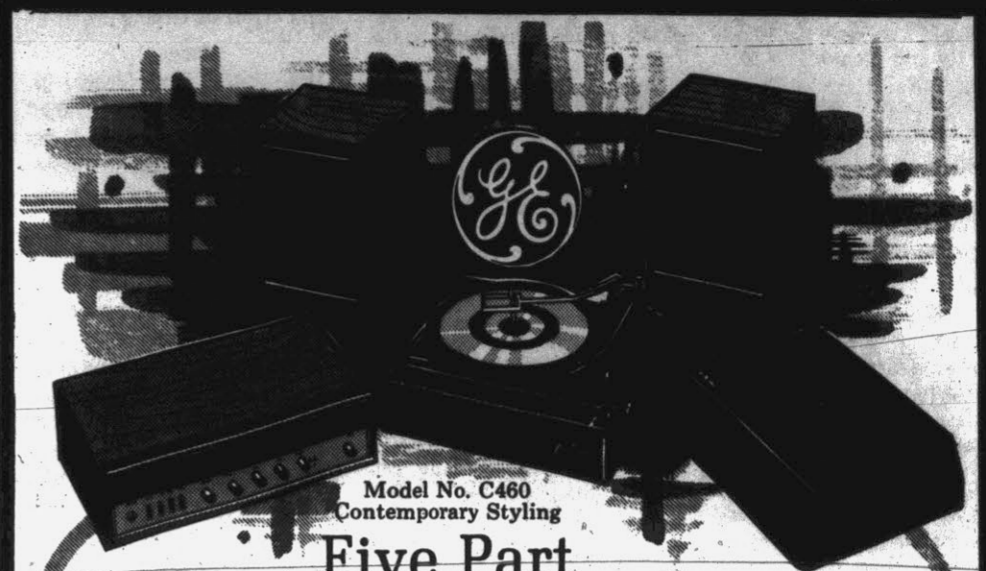

But don't skimp on milk. It gives you more health for your money.

Quiz Boy In Girl's Death

STOVALL, N. C. (AP) — A 15-year-old youth was being held for questioning today in the death of his nine-year-old sister whose body was found in a shallow spring Saturday afternoon.

Sheriff J. C. Cash said Steve Allen Rutledge was arrested around 10:30 a.m. Sunday in the basement of the Stovall School. He told officers he had spent the night in the woods while he was the object of an intense search.

The sheriff said he planned to question the youth in the death of Maralyn Sue Rutledge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos B. Rutledge.

The little girl went to the home of her grandfather, across the road from her parents' house, to hand out his laundry. A search was begun when her sister found the clothes only partly hung and the little girl missing.

Dewey Satterwhite, great uncle of the children, found her body in the shallow spring which was encased in terra cotta pipe in which the water was about 18 inches deep. The spring was about 100 yards down an embankment from the grandfather's house.

Sheriff Cash said there was an abrasion on the little girl's head and a shirt had been bound around her face. He said the Granville County medical examiner, Dr. Richard Taylor, reported an autopsy performed at Chapel Hill showed the girl had died of drowning.

The United Nations moved to its present headquarters along New York's East River in 1951.

ESA Programs Reviewed Here

Reports concerning financing of assistance to local schools through Emergency School Assistance (ESA) and Elementary-Secondary Education Act, Title I (ESEA) programs were the focus of attention at a recent meeting of school officials and members of the Citizens Advisory Committee.

Charles Dickens, director of ESEA Title I for Greenville City Schools, reported that for the fiscal year 1970-71, a total of $265,796.00 had been allocated to Greenville Schools through ESEA.

The greater portion, or $163,319 of this amount is earmarked for instruction program. Other projects for which this money provides assistance are: Administration, $22,456; attendance services, $30,183; fixed charges $25,881; health services, $5,218; operation of plant, $4,170; food services, $5,200; community services $600; maintenance of plant, $1,500; and pupil transportation services, $200. Altogether, Dickens pointed out, the federal funds provide for a total of 41 school personnel — 27 professionals and 14 other personnel.

There is also a contingency funds established in the amount of $7,069; and carry-over project money at $23,500. The total of combined projects, less the contingency fund, means $282,227 in monetary assistance to the Greenville School system for the 1970-71 school year.

Dickens noted that with the elimination of the dual school system, the Greenville schools became eligible for full participation in this program. At the present time, kindergarten instruction is being given priority over the customary summer school. This is in keeping with the trend to focus attention on kindergarten and early childhood education in grades one through three.

Church Council Raps Arms Sales

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — The Central Committee of the World Council of Churches appealed to the British government today not to resume the sale of arms to South Africa.

The council's governing body, which is meeting in Addis Ababa, voted unanimously to cable the appeal to Prime Minister Edward Heath at the Commonwealth conference in Singapore. The committee also commended the efforts of British churches to persuade their government against the arms sales.

The British Commonwealth conference of heads of state meeting in Singapore is to debate the issue of arms for South Africa Tuesday.

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Strategists in the attack on the congressional seniority system put a new tactic into effect today with the opening of a bipartisan, unofficial hearing on Senate reform.

Under the auspices of Republican Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland and Oklahoma Democratic Sen. Fred R. Harris, the two days of hearings started with a plea that committee chairmen be selected democratically, not on the basis of length of service.

"The time has come to modify a long-established custom of this great body—the so-called seniority system," said John Gardner, chairman of the citizens' lobby Common Cause, in prepared testimony.

Gardner, repeating views he has publicized in past weeks, said "dictatorial power" of committee chairmen was symptomatic of the failure in accountability and responsiveness of many contemporary American institutions.

"If some committee chairmen conduct themselves with unexampled arrogance it is because there is no mechanism by which their fellow party members can call them to account," he said.

Gardner urged the Senate to reorganize during the opening days of the 92nd Congress so committee members nominate their own chairmen.

But before a chairman could be installed under Gardner's plan, the majority party conference would have to approve the committee members' nomination in a recorded vote every two years.

Gardner said the chances were good committee members with the greatest length of congressional service would still get the chairmanships.

"But occasionally good reasons such as the infirmities of age or misconduct in office, will lead the majority party caucus to reject the senior member," Gardner said.

Mathias and Fred R. Harris acted independently in calling the hearings to rouse support for reform. Their panel has no official sanction or legislative authority.

Bucs And Davidson Will Clash For Conf. Pedestal

Tomorrow night at 8 p.m. the game that was boosted at the start of the season as the top attraction at Minges Coliseum goes on the boards.

But for a while, it looked like the luster of the contest never would quite come about.

At the start of the season, basketball prophets were saying that if this was the year the Wildcats of Davidson College were to be knocked off their pedestal atop the Southern Conference standings, it would be the Pirates of East Carolina who would do it.

But as the season got underway, it began to look more and more like the Bucs were not as strong as they seemed. Their home opener resulted in a one-point loss to former conference foe George Washington. That was followed by a big win over Baptist College, but then came the first meeting with the Wildcats, in Charlotte Coliseum.

Davidson was hampered by the loss of two of its top players, Brian Adrian and Eric Minkin, both out with injuries. But it didn't seem to affect the 'Cats as they ripped the Pirates, 77-61.

After that, the Bucs fortunes slipped even further as they wound up the pre-holiday schedule with a 3-4 mark. After the break, they came back with another loss to Marshall, then beat VMI and Richmond in two conference contests before dropping their last home game to Old Dominion, 90-82.

Then, Saturday night, they knocked Furman's Paladins out of a chance at sole possession of first place with a 68-58 victory over the only team that has beaten Davidson in the conference in three years.

So that leaves things right up in the air again. The Wildcats will certainly come into the game as the favorites. They have a winning record, but, like the Bucs are 3-1 against Southern Conference competition.

And another feature for the Wildcats is that they have both Adrian and Minkin back in the lineup and are solid now.

The job for the Bucs will be to stop the defensive attack of the Wildcats, who were leading the conference in defense at the start of the past week. They were allowing only 63.4 points per game as compared to 75.5 for the Bucs.

Davidson's offense, however, wasn't as strong as that of the Pirates. The Wildcats were scoring 70.2 points per game as compared to 79.6 points per contest for the Bucs.

Davidson's field goal shooting was only slightly better than that of the Bucs, 47.7 per cent to 46.3 per cent. But their free throws were several percentage points better, 71.7 per cent as compared to 65.5 per cent.

In rebounding the two teams were almost equal, 52.1 per cent for the Bucs as compared to 52.0 per cent for Davidson.

So it shapes up as a real tough contest, and the winner will certainly move into the driver's seat in the Southern.

Davidson's attack will be led by sophomore Joe Sutter, who has a 16.2 average, although Adrian is expected to be the leader now that he is back on the court. He scored 19 points in his first appearance of the year last week.

The contest will be preceded by a second meeting between the freshman teams of the two schools. In the first contest, East Carolina came away with a victory, and is currently riding a four-game winning streak. But the Baby Bucs haven't played since January 5, when they defeated the Richmond Baby Spiders. That contest is scheduled to get underway at 5:45 p.m. The varsity game will be at 8 p.m.

Interception And Kick Earn Colts Super Crown

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer MIAMI (AP) — For almost 59 minutes, the most elusive of Super Bowl titles ticked off anxious fingertips and slipped through desperate hands—before finally settling in the vise-like embrace of Mean Mike Curtis and the relentless Baltimore Colts.

Curtis' interception, fifth of six pass thefts in a gut-grabbing struggle replete with errors, set up a 32-yard field goal by rookie Jim O'Brien with five seconds to play Sunday that gave the Colts instant absolution in the form of a 16-13 comeback victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

"I grabbed that ball so hard I almost squeezed the air out of it," said the hard-rock middle linebacker, who picked off a deflected pass with 69 seconds remaining and a record viewing audience anticipating a sudden death windup to Super Bowl V.

"I didn't even think about running with it right away," Curtis said. "I felt maybe I should just fall on the ground so I wouldn't fumble it away."

He had just cause for concern. Fumbles had given Dallas 10 points and cost the Colts seven more.

Despite his inclination, Curtis rambled 13 yards to the Dallas 28. After two running plays gained three yards, positioned the ball squarely in front of the goal posts and consumed 60 of the remaining seconds. Earl Morrall, the Colts' 36-year-old backup quarterback, called a time out.

Morrall, scapegoat of Baltimore's humiliating 16-7 Super Bowl loss to the New York Jets two years ago but a hero Sunday in relief of battered Johnny Unitas, then spotted the ball for O'Brien. The mop-haired, 22-year-old kicker split the uprights for the winning three points before an Orange Bowl crowd of 80,055 and some 64 million television fans.

"It was so sweet," Morrall said. "I started jumping up and down and yelling, just like the kid. I'll never forget '68 and the Jets, but I'll remember this one the most."

Super Bowl III had become a recurring nightmare for Morrall, the starter in that game after capturing NFL Player of the Year honors.

The Jets blanked him for three quarters before Unitas, who had been plagued with arm trouble all season, came off the bench to direct a touchdown drive—too late to rescue the heavily-favored Colts.

This time, Dallas was the favorite after reeling off seven consecutive victories to win the NFC title in the first year of merger and realignment. And, as the Cowboys cashed in on turnovers for a 13-6 halftime lead, the Baltimore quarterbacks found their Super Bowl III roles reversed.

Unitas, flattened by George Andrie as he threw his second interception of the game, went to the sideline in the second quarter with cracked ribs.

Morrall drove the Colts to a first down at the Dallas 2, but failed to get a touchdown across just before intermission.

In the second half, Chuck Howley's interception in the end zone and Eddie Hinton's fumble through the end zone blunted two more Baltimore scoring bids—and started Morrall thinking about the tribulations of his first Super Bowl.

As it turned out, it was the tenacious Baltimore defense, given little pre-game publicity compared to Dallas' Doomsday crew, which gave Morrall his reprieve.

After Cornell Green stripped the ball from Hinton, who had caught a desperation pass from halfback Sam Havrilak on a broken flea-flicker play, Dallas quarterback Craig Morton tried to hit fullback Walt Garrison with a third-down pass.

But Baltimore's Jim Duncan tipped the ball to safety Rick

Volk, who sprinted 30 yards to the Cowboys' 3. Two plays later, Tom Nowatzke, the Colts' prize free agent pickup, bulled into the end zone.

O'Brien, whose earlier extra point kick had been blocked after a deflected Unitas pass wound up in John Mackey's arms for a 75-yard touchdown play, then booted the tying conversion.

There were 7½ minutes to play. But the $15,000 per-man winners' shares appeared certain to go up for grabs in sudden death overtime when neither team could move the ball on its next series.

The Colts had beaten the New York Giants 12 years earlier in the NFL's only other sudden death championship game. And Unitas, architect of that victory, was warming up on the sidelines after having his ribs x-rayed, as the minutes ticked away.

Dallas' Dan Reeves was doing just that at the 13:51 mark when Morton's pass caromed off his outstretched hands and Curtis made the biggest interception of his life.

Curtis had come up with an earlier saver after Duncan fumbled away the second half kickoff to the Cowboys deep in Baltimore territory. With a first-and-goal from the 2, Curtis jarred the ball away from rookie Duane Thomas, who was held to 37 rushing yards, and Duncan recovered the fumble.

"That undoubtedly was the big play of the game," said deeply dejected Tom Landry, the Cowboys' coach. "If he scores, they have a lot of catching up to do."

"We did everything we could to give it to them, but we hung in when the going was tough, and in the end result that's what counts," defensive tackle Billy Ray Smith said.

Then Smith spotted O'Brien, the day's super hero, in the midst of a swarm of newsmen.

"What are you doing over there with all those guys?" he roared. "You only worked five seconds today—and you missed an extra point."

Husky, Happy Hero Of Colts Is A Longhair

Associated Press Sports Writer MIAMI (AP) — Long hair was always Samson's salvation and the Baltimore Colts' rookie hero wasn't about to let balding, old Billy Ray Smith become his Super Bowl Delilah.

"Keep those clippers away, Billy Ray," shouted Jim O'Brien. "I may never cut this mop again."

The 22-year-old Cincinnati Kid pumped a pressurized field goal through the Orange Bowl goalposts with five seconds left Sunday to crush the hopes of the Dallas Cowboys 16-13 in Super Bowl V.

"Coach Johnny Sandusky calls me Lassie because of my hair," admitted O'Brien. "And Billy Ray, that tough old pro, said he'd cut it if we won."

Since it was the third-round draftee from the University of Cincinnati who won the game, he hoped to "ask for amnesty" from retiring defensive tackle Smith.

"They call me a lot of things — rookie, flaky, et cetera," said O'Brien, clutching the game ball in the Colts' happy dressing quarters.

Late Sunday, all the things they called O'Brien were nice things.

O'Brien was drafted No. 3 by Baltimore as a wide receiver after averaging 22 yards-a-catch in college. He soon became somewhat of a specialist for the Colts, beating out veteran Lou Michaels for the placekicking job.

Cavaliers Rest After A Torrid 8 Days

Top Matmen Meet Tonight

The two best collegiate wrestling teams in the state will go against each other in Minges Coliseum tonight when East Carolina University entertains Appalachian State University.

Starting time for the match, which is open free to the public, is 8 p.m.

Coach John Welborn's Pirate matmen outpointed Appalachian in the N.C. Collegiate Championship Meet in Chapel Hill back in early December. Both teams finished far ahead of the rest of the field which also included North Carolina, N.C. State, Duke and Wake Forest.

ECU, led by Mike Spohn (150) and Steve Morgan (142), has posted a 3-1 record in dual meet competition including lopsided 42-0 victories over both UNC and Elizabeth City State. The grapplers' only loss was to nationally ranked Oswego (N.Y.) State.

In the state championship meet, five Buc wrestlers took first-place honors — Ronnie Williams 126, Morgan (142), Spohn (150), Bill Hill (167) and Tim Gay (190).

Other standout performers have been Robert Vroom (118), Glenn Baker (134), Robert Vosburg (150), Bruce Hall (158), Joe Daversa (177) and Mark Pohlen (heavyweight).

Tonight's big battle with Appalachian is the first home match of the season for Welborn's men, who are given a good shot at toppling William & Mary for the Southern Conference title this year.

The Pirates will be at home again this Friday night against UNC-Wilmington.

The Duke-Clemson game was practically no contest as the Tigers continued to be the only league team with an overall losing record. Duke built a 36-22 edge by halftime and steadily pulled further away.

The Tigers almost fell behind before the opening whistle. Dave Angel, a 6-foot-11 sophomore, dunked the ball in a pregame drill and had an automatic technical called on him. Tossed Helmet In Desperation

By DENNE FREEMAN

Associated Press Sports Writer MIAMI (AP) — "Frustration. I did it out of frustration."

Bob Lilly, Dallas' fine defensive tackle, summed it up with those words; today in explaining why he tossed his helmet 25 yards through the air shortly after the Cowboys were blasted again, this time 16-13 by the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl Sunday.

The Cowboys had blown another big game, one they seemed to have in their grasp several times. So instead of winning the biggest game of them all in pro football, the Cowboys had to live with their fifth defeat in a climactic contest since 1966.

They had the losers' share again—this time a not too insignificant $7,500 apiece but just half of what the Baltimore Colts collected for their sweet victory with five seconds to go on rookie

Bulldogs Rolled Without Star

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ben Ledbetter was Southern Conference basketball player of the week for his exploits right after Christmas in propelling the Citadel's Bulldogs into the thick of the league race.

But Ledbetter was in the infirmary with the flu when the Bulldogs invaded Virginia Military Institute to battle the winless Keydets in a regionally televised game Saturday afternoon.

Ledbetter undoubtedly was missed, but Tommy Russell proved more than adequate as a substitute when he scored his team's four points in the extra period for a 66-64 victory for the Bulldogs after they'd blown a 10-point halftime lead and had been forced into overtime.

The victory by The Citadel created quite a scramble in the standings with East Carolina's Pirates knocking off Furman's Paladins 68-58 in a Saturday night encounter.

East Carolina pulled into a tie with Davidson's Wildcats for the top spot at 3-1, followed by The Citadel, Furman and William and Mary at 2-2.

All conference teams are idle tonight, but the league lead will be at stake Tuesday night when Davidson invades East Carolina.

The Wildcats dropped an 85-84 decision Saturday night to St. Joseph's, but Richmond's Spiders came from 13 points behind early in the second half and eventually whipped Virginia Tech's Gobblers 74-73 on sophomore Ray Amann's free throw with four seconds left in a second overtime.

VMI trailed The Citadel by just two points when the Bulldogs scored the last eight points of the first half for a 38-28 advantage. But the Keydets' Jerry Renfro, who had 27 points, led a Keydet rally and sent the game into overtime with two free throws with 15 seconds remaining.

Renfro scored for VMI, but Russell came back with a field goal with 2:58 left that tied it and then hit two free throws with 2:40 remaining that proved decisive. John Sutor had 13 points and 16 rebounds for The Citadel, and Cal Hayslip and Steve Fishel added 12 points each.

All five starters scored in double figures as East Carolina shot 48 per cent to just 39.9 for Furman. Al Faber had 18 points and Jim Gregory 15 and Faber and Jim Fairley had 15 rebounds each as ECU never let Furman get closer than four points after intermission.

Davidson trailed St. Joseph's by 19 points with six minutes left, but the Hawks' Mike Bantom blocked two Davidson shots in the last 17 seconds to preserve the victory. Joe Sutter had 20 points and Bryan Adrian 16 for the Wildcats, Pat McFarland 22 and Bantom 20 for St. Joseph's.

Stan Ryfinsky had 30 points and Mike Anastasio 21 for Richmond, but Amann's only point of the night was decisive after Roger Hatcher's long jump shot had tied it for the Spiders in the first overtime. Loyd King had 27 points for Tech, but the timekeeper ruled his basket that followed Amann's free throw was released after the final buzzer.

Cougars Had Brief Glory

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Carolina Cougars' stay in third place in the American Basketball Association Eastern Division was brief.

They fell to New York, 120-112, Sunday night and the Nets took over the third spot again, half a game ahead of Carolina.

The Cougars had gone to the lofty niche only last week in a streak in which they won nine of 13 games.

But it was a familiar story of not enough power in the stretch Sunday. Carolina trailed by six to eight points for most of the game, then rammed in seven straight late in the fourth period to tie things at 112 all.

But New York scored the next eight points and went home the winner.

Manny Leaks was the game's high scorer with 29 points. The Cougars' high man was Joe Caldwell with 28.

Carolina's next game is at Pittsburgh Tuesday.

Mike de la Hoz, former major league infielder, is the new Detroit Tiger scout in Latin American countries. He resides in Miami, Fla.

BIRDIES TO VICTORY — Tom Shaw watches a long putt for an eagle pull up short on the second green at Pebble Beach during the final round of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Sunday. Shaw tapped it in for a birdie and went on to win the event by two strokes over Arnold Palmer. (AP Wirephoto)

Shaw Won As Arnie's Army Whooped It Up

By ERIC PREWITT

Associated Press Sports Writer PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "You can hear those Arnold Palmer yells all over the course," said Tom Shaw, who overcame the din of Arnie's Army and won the $135,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

Shaw's victory Sunday ended a year-long slump and left Palmer, the game's biggest name, still looking for his first tournament victory since 1969.

The 28-year-old blond from Oregon finished with a two-under-par 70 on the 6,777-yard, par-72 Pebble Beach course, and a 72-hole total of 278. Palmer shot a 71 for 280.

Shaw began the final round with a one-stroke edge on Palmer, and as he stood on the second fairway he heard that he was one stroke behind. Palmer holed a chip shot from 40 feet for an eagle three at the second green and momentarily took the lead.

"You can't help but know what Arnie's doing. You can hear those Arnold Palmer yells all over the course," Shaw said later. "I knew he had an eagle. I just tried to blank it out of my mind."

"I almost got an eagle there, too. But I got three straight birdies. I'll take three birdies for one eagle any day."

Shaw reached the No. 2 green with his second shot and left his 20-foot putt for an eagle about five inches short.

He had birds at the third and fourth holes, also, and took the lead for keeps when Palmer three-putted for a bogey four at No. 5.

"I felt like things were going pretty much my way until then," Palmer said later, and added, "Second — it seems to be the story of my life in recent years."

Third place Sunday went to Bob Murphy, who closed with a 69 for a 282 total. Jerry Heard with a 67, Tom Weiskopf, with a 72, and Howie Johnson, who shot 74, tied for third at 284.

Shaw won $27,000 for his victory and added $1,250 for a fifth place finish, with partner Edward Crowley of Los Angeles, in the pro-am competition won by Lou Graham and the Rev. John Durkin of Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

Last year, Shaw totaled only $34,004 in winnings, after a $83,000 bonanza in 1969. Because he failed to make the top 60 in the money-winning list and didn't win a tournament, he lost his non-exempt player status.

"I was a rabbit for two weeks," he laughed Sunday after the title that automatically qualifies him for all other 1971 tournaments.

The 30th Crosby was blessed with its best weather ever, including a record high temperature of 78 Sunday. And, with just a light breeze blowing on the oceanside course, golfers had nothing but themselves to blame for stray shots.

be something to crack McGuire's lineup.

"I'm just learning how to play the big man," says McGuire, whose previous teams featured gummy defense and precision ball-handling without a hovering giant. "I said I wouldn't change my style until Chones showed me. Well, he showed me."

Marquette was one of the lucky ones among Top Twenty teams Saturday, as a basketful of theirs hit the check.

LaSalle beat fifth-ranked Western Kentucky 91-76; No. 18 Tennessee topped 10th-ranked Kentucky 75-71; Michigan whipped No. 11 Indiana 92-81; Temple handed unbeaten, 14th-ranked Fordham its first loss in 13 games, 67-66; No. 15 North Carolina fell to Wake Forest 96-84; Bradley stunned No. 16 Louisville 78-74 and Tulsa upended No. 19 Memphis State 90-85.

Marquette Has Begun To Jell?

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Associated Press Sports Writer Shed no tears for Al McGuire. Things are looking better at Marquette.

"Fortunately, we're starting to jell," says the Warriors' bashing basketball coach.

Oh, yeah? What do you do for an encore after 25 straight victories?

"As if Marquette's opponents don't have enough trouble now, the Warriors' modest miracle-man claims they're finally looking like a good team should.

You'd get no argument from New Mexico State, which lost 65-53 Saturday to the second-ranked Warriors.

"I never dreamed we'd be ranked as high as we are this year," said McGuire, pointing out that he lost four of his top six men from last year's NIT champions.

"But the ranking has given my team a feeling of pride. I keep on top of my boys and we make other teams believe we're tough. We just do our thing."

By LEROY JAMES

Annual Meeting of the N. C. Soybean Producers Association — has been scheduled for January 22, at the Hilton Inn, Raleigh. The program will begin at 1 p.m. followed by a banquet in the evening. Soybean producers are encouraged to attend. Outlook for Soybeans in 1971: Nationally — soybean production is estimated at 1,135 million bushels compared with 1,117 million in 1969. Carry-over stocks on September 1 were down sharply — 229 million bushels compared with 324 million a year ago. North Carolina is expected to produce 20.5 million bushels, which is down 15 percent below the 1969 crop of 24.2 million bushels.

Utilization of soybeans will expand only slightly during 1971, reaching about 1.25 billion bushels compared with 1.2 billion last season. The increase will be small when compared with last year's record gain of nearly 30 percent. Reduced supplies, higher prices, and more competition from other oil and protein sources will limit this year's gain in usage.

Soybean crushings during 1970-71 are expected to rise about 2-3 percent from the record crush last year. Exports could be down from the record 429 million bushels in 1969. World shortages are not expected to be as acute this year and higher prices of U.S. products will stimulate importing nations to increase purchases from nations other than the United States.

Total utilization will exceed the 1970 crop production resulting in further reduction in carry-over, possibly to around 100 million bushels.

Reduced supplies and continued strong demand will hold prices substantially above last year's level. North Carolina prices in the October-December period averaged 20-28 percent above last year. While prices remained strong throughout the harvest season, this is a risky year to hold beans. Highest prices may occur during the winter. Because of southern corn leaf blight, there will be some shift of corn acreage to soybeans. If this is significant, prices in the spring and summer could be lower in anticipation of the large crop.

Tobacco TIPS

By SAM J. WEEKS

One of the greatest hazards facing flue-cured tobacco growers is caused by nematodes. There are very few fields where tobacco is grown that parasitic nematodes are not a problem.

Nematodes generally damage tobacco in two ways. They either enter the roots and feed internally, or puncture the roots and feed from the outside. They rob a portion of the food supply from the tobacco plant when attacking either of these ways

During the feeding process, nematodes inject a substance into the plants that may kill part of the root tissue, cause swelling, or stunt growth. A "sick" plant root system results, and eventually the entire plant may be stunted and the leaves begin to "fire" around the margin and tip. The wound made by the nematode also makes it easy for disease producing organisms to enter the plant. Tests have shown that the presence of certain nematodes will make black shank or Granville wilt worse even when using resistant varieties.

There are three different types of nematodes that attack the tobacco plant. There are two or more species within these three groups, which make nematodes more difficult to control. The crop preference of the different nematode species is such that each may attack a wide variety of crops. Any given crop may be resistant to one kind of nematode and susceptible to another. It is believed that root knot and meadow nematodes cause more damage to tobacco than stunt nematodes.

Nematodes do most damage when high numbers are present in the field at transplanting. Therefore, it is important for farmers to do everything possible to prevent a big carry-over of nematodes from the previous season. High infestations at transplanting time may stunt the tobacco plants so severely that they may not recover.

You should fumigate your soil with one of the recommended fumigants if the nematode population is high enough to cause injury to your tobacco plants. Do not overlook the importance of transplanting a nematode-free plant in the field. Be sure your plant bed is fumigated for nematode control.

Crop rotations, which include crops that are not susceptible to nematodes, will help to lower the nematode population. For example, in an area crop rotation test conducted in 1968,

Ruling Might Hit Procedure

RALEIGH (AP) — Executive secretary Alex Brock of the State Board of Elections says a new U. S. Supreme Court ruling "could considerably impair and slow down" annexation procedures of municipalities in 39 North Carolina counties.

But Brock said the ruling probably will have "little net effect" on the location of polling places.

Brock was commenting on a court ruling Thursday that hundreds of southern town must get federal approval for annexations that bring in more white voters, and for changes in the location of polling places.

Brock said he had received no detailed information from Washington on the ruling.

"All I can say is this could really slow down the normal processes in making annexation plans," Brock said.

The 39 North Carolina counties affected by the ruling are: Anson, Beaufort, Bertie, Bladen, Caswell, Camden, Chowan, Cleveland, Craven, Cumberland, Edgecombe, Franklin, Gaston, Gates, Granville, Greene, Guilford, Halifax, Hertford, Harnett and Hoke.

Indian Tribe Goes Into Big Business For Self-Help

DULCE, N.M. (UPI)—A corporation whose stockholders are restricted to members of the Jicarilla Indian Tribe has obtained a computer to determine, among other things, if a person is an Apache.

Jicarilla Apache Tribe (JAT) Industries was formed on Dec. 29, 1969, to help channel the Indians' efforts toward economic self-sufficiency.

Jose Gabriel Abeyta, longtime tribal financial advisor and Bureau of Indian Affairs official here, said, "As late as the early 1950s, this tribe existed only with the aid of government subsidies. Tribal business consisted then of one small livestock operation that was not self-sufficient."

JAT, conceived and operated by tribal members, began with 20 trainees. It now has about 120 employees, a seven-man board of directors, a manufacturing and assembly plant and a retail supermarket, according to Abeyta.

Abeyta said the organization will use the new computer, leased from IBM, to prepare income tax returns, pay dividend checks to stockholders and coordinate a growing complex of JAT interests.

The computer will also "account for the individual Apache blood percentages of tribal people," Abeyta said. "To be a member of this corporation, a tribesman must have at least three-eighths Jicarilla Apache blood, according to the newly revised tribal constitution."

JAT received its first large contract this summer—an order for 5,000 leather gunbelts for the Los Angeles Police Department. Abeyta said 500 belts have already been shipped to Los Angeles and the rest are in production.

JAT has also joined the growing New Mexico movie industry. It invested $2 million in "A Gunfight," a Hollywood production shot in Northern New Mexico this summer. The movie is scheduled for release early next year.

Abeyta said the tribe has received "quite a few" offers to invest in other movies. However, he said the corporation is going to wait to see how their first venture into film making turns out before investing further.

It has not all been painless for Hassan's army. One officer was shot by a sniper and crippled for life. Another was shot and killed. The army's headquarters was set afire, but damage was minor. The lives of Hassan and his immediate staff have been threatened many times. High-ranking officers are often accompanied by bodyguards.

Principal Importers Hassan believes "the Mafia and the Cosa Nostra" are the principal importers of drugs into Washington.

He said, "There are no real black importers of heroin into the United States... except for individuals coming from Asia, from the war in Vietnam."

He also sees the drug problem as one aspect of racism because big suppliers are usually white and black people are "a living black gold mine" for such profiteers.

The BDC does not practice separatism. It treats a large number of white addicts (20 per cent), some of whom live in fashionable Georgetown and the nearby Maryland suburbs. Many of the white addicts are also members of the army corps.

Hassan lists trust as the basic reason for the success of the BDC.

"When they come in the door we tell every person... 'We don't care what your name is, use any one you want, just use one we can put on the record.'"

Many addicts also fear governmentally run programs because they are associated at least indirectly with the police. Hassan says, however, "If they do not go to a governmentally run organization or one like ours, they're going to die, because heroin, cocaine and other addictive narcotics kill people."

Hassan also is a political activist. Frustrated by a felony conviction in an attempt to run as non-voting delegate to Congress in Washington, he organized a voter registration drive. He attracted 1,000 volunteers who registered more than 3,360 new voters for the primary. Hassan also petitioned Congress and the courts to let "many people like myself, who made mistakes," vote and participate in the political process.

Balance Wheel Affected Cheese

EDMONTON, Canada (AP)—The Alberta cheese industry has never developed as it might have because it has been used as a sort of "balance wheel" for the seasonal fluctuations of the fluid milk industry, says D. J. Prince, dairy specialist with the Alberta agriculture department.

Prince said this situation has prevented establishment of consistent cheese supplies for existing markets.

JICARILLA APACHE TRIBE INDUSTRIES manufactures electrical equipment in one of their own buildings. Formed in Dec., 1969, JAT conceived and operated by tribal members, began with 20 trainees. It now has about 120 employees, a seven-man board of directors, a plant and a retail supermarket. (UPI Telephoto)

Honor Indian Chief For His Movie Acting Role

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The unlikely winner of the movie awards season is a 71-year-old ex-stevedore who happens to be an honest-to-goodness Indian chief.

He is Chief Dan George, who has served as head of the Telal-watt section of the Coastish tribe of British Columbia. He also is honorary chief of the large Squamish and Sushwap tribes.

Last month Chief George was named the best supporting actor of the year by the New York Film Critics because of his role as Old Lodge Skins in "Little Big Man." He stopped here en route to the awards ceremonies in New York Monday, Jan. 18.

"I never dreamt that I would receive such an award," said the soft-voiced chief in his suite at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Chief George has a handsome, weathered face like the one on the old buffalo nickle. A beaded neckband proclaims his name and rank, and his silver hair cascades to his shoulders.

"My youngest boy, who is 24, wears his hair long, too," said the Chief. "I've had it this way since I played in 'Smith' with Glenn Ford. The other actors asked me to leave it long. My Indian friends like it because it is in keeping with our traditions."

"My first break as an actor came in 1961. My son was acting in a television series for CBC called 'Caribou Country.' They had a white man playing a chief and one day he became sick.

"The director said he'd have to stop production, and my son said, 'Why don't you get an old Indian for the role?' The director asked, 'Where can I find one?' and my boy said, 'I'll bring you one tomorrow.'"

Chief George came to Hollywood for Disney's "Smith," and that led to his award-winning role. An aide of director Arthur

Penn saw the chief's picture on a theater poster, saw the film and recommended him for Old Lodge Skins, who adopts Dustin Hoffman in "Little Big Man."

Chief George was pleased that the film showed the Indian's side of western history.

"So many pictures over the years have shown the Indians as savages who slaughtered and beat the settlers. That has an effect on children, I think; it gives them hate for the Indians, especially when they attack the helpless wagon trains.

Negro Legislator's Bill To Honor Martin Luther King

By NOEL YANCEY

RALEIGH (AP)—Rep. Joy L. Johnson, D-Robeson, had planned to observe the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Friday by introducing one of his "pet bills."

However, the bill was not ready in time and Johnson plans to introduce it later.

Johnson is only the second Negro to serve in the North Carolina General Assembly since reconstruction days, and his bill would require the state to provide equality of opportunity in filling state jobs "regardless of race, creed, color or sex."

The Negro lawmaker says he does not expect "any great opposition" to his bill because North Carolina is a fairly "liberal" state.

"I'm very much concerned with education," Johnson said in describing his interests as a legislator. "I'm concerned with teachers getting better pay. I'm also concerned with the non-professional school workers—the janitors, maids and food service workers. They don't have any lobbyists up here."

Johnson, a 48-year-old minister who has served for 19 years as pastor of the First Baptist Church at Fairmont, said he had been received cordially in Raleigh and that fellow legislators had been "very helpful" in assisting him to get his feet on the ground.

"I think I'm going to enjoy the sessions," he said. "I think it's going to be congenial in spite of many disagreements."

Asked about his interests, Johnson said:

"I'm concerned with good legislation for the entire state."

"But I do have some pet bills," he added. He said his "equal opportunities" bill was one of these. Johnson's first legislation effort came on the first day of the current session when he introduced a bill to amend the state constitution to lower the voting age to 18. It was one of five bills on the same subject that came in on opening day.

Johnson was impressed with Gov. Bob Scott's biennial message which was delivered to a joint session Thursday, but "I was a little disappointed in his recommendations on teacher salaries."

He was also impressed by Scott's statement that it was time to end every vestige of discrimination in North Carolina.

"I think this was very pleasing to the minorities in the state of North Carolina," he said.

Although he is a freshman legislator, Johnson is not a newcomer to politics. He has served two terms on the Fairmont City Council.

What's Wrong With Glossary?

Editor McGovern criticizes the attempts of modern scholars to rewrite the Bible. Contrast the parallel passages below. The first is from the King James version while the second is from The Children's New Testament. Some words have changed "personalities" in the last 300 years but why not list those terms in a glossary!

not, for of such is the Kingdom of God." (King James version)

Now note the comparable translation in the Children's New Testament:

"Let the little children come to me. Do not stop them. The Holy Nation of God is made up of ones like these."

"When I was a kid," writes McGovern, "the 'Kingdom of God' was a lot more glamorous and royal than 'Holy Nation of God.'"

"We're destroying the distinctiveness of the Scriptures for our children by bringing them down to the kindergarten talk of television cartoons."

"I don't see the point of converting the Scriptures to sandbox conversation and thereby putting them on a level with everything humdrum in the life of a child."

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Case P-548: Francis McGovern is publisher of a livewire tabloid daily.

In a recent editorial about the Children's New Testament, McGovern contrasted the King James version with the newer rendition:

"Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them speak!

Alas, most people want to add their own contributions to the famous products of pioneer prophets and composers, so they even emasculate former good music with their "variations."

These new translations of the Bible show similar attempts to bolster the modern scholar's ego hunger by injecting his own personality into Scripture by similar verbal "variations."

A glossary of a few hundred words (to show that "Suffer" means "let," etc.) would have been much simpler!

And it would not have reduced the poetical phraseology of Scripture to what McGovern calls baby talk of the "da da" sort!

Air Force Plans
A New System

Ga. (AP) — By 1973 all Air Force aircraft will be equipped with a new altitude reporting system providing accurate, automatic altitude information to ground controllers, the Warner Robins Air Material Area says.

An WRAMA announcement said the Air Force will spend some $150 million on the 8,000 units of the system.

Under the present system, a spokesman said, controllers know only what their radar displays and pilot reports tell them. However, he said, "the pilot and aircrew are weighed down with operating the aircraft at the same time they are having to file verbal reports; and the altimeters used on many aircraft have a wide range of error."

"The new system does all the reporting automatically, and the radar altimeter is quite accurate."

It takes half a million gallons of water to produce one ton of raw sugar on the island of Maui, says the National Geographic.

"Children eventually must grow beyond baby talk of the 'da da' sort!"

RAISE READING STANDARDS
"Let us raise a standard," said George Washington, "to which the wise and just may aspire."

That means the Father of our Country didn't approve of lowering moral ideals to compromise with the crowd.

"But, Dr. Crane," some devout folks may exclaim, "what do kiddies think when Jesus says, 'Suffer little children... for suffer connotes pain.'"

True enough, but why not let the parents or teacher explain that Christ's use of "Suffer" means "Let" or "Permit."

Do we try to reduce the poetry and distinctive format of Shakespeare by rewriting his plays in modern hippie style?

No, indeed! For in our high school and college English literature courses we employ a glossary that lists the new meanings of the few dozen words in the original edition which have altered their verbal "personalities."

For words change from one generation to another, since language is a fluid expression of our ideas.

The King James version of the Bible has stood the test of time and its poetical rhythm is not matched by mundane later translations.

Obviously, a number of words in the King James version need to be explained, either in a glossary or by parents, preachers and Sunday School teachers.

But that is a simple task. People who wish to change the Bible should also demand a modern translation of Shake-

Unemployment Up In N.C. Industry

RALEIGH (AP) — Unemployment in every one of North Carolina's major industries rose during 1970, in some cases as much as 248 per cent over the year before.

Commission spokesman Ted Davis said some of the leading industries with the highest unemployment in December were: the hosiery industry—joblessness up 187 per cent over December, 1969, with 6,200 persons out of work; furniture—unemployment up 248 per cent, with 4,430 persons out of work; metals and machinery—up 174 per cent, with 2,335 persons off the job.

Overall, Davis said, unemployment insurance payments during 1970 "exceeded $46.4 million, nearly double the amount paid in the prior year."

The figures reported by the commission covered only those workers eligible for unemployment insurance, but the total payments under this program serve as a barometer for the total working force.

Davis said the total unemployment figure for December for North Carolina's 2.2 million workers was not available.

"It was 4.1 per cent in November and, if the trend continues, it would go up to 4.5 in December," he said.

"Every month in 1970 has had a higher corresponding unemployment rate than the same month the previous year," he added. "The trend was set in late 1969 and it's kept going."

"All the statisticians and economists say it's just a slow-down, a sluggish economy," he said.

"The high interest rates at the beginning of the year, for example, had a lot to do with construction. The textile people say imports are hurting them."

During December, the commission reported, the only category of workers showing an improved employment rate was the food products industry.

want ads

Want Ads bring people together... finder and loser, employer and employee, landlord and tenant, buyer and seller. Want Ads do more things — for more people — at a lower cost — than any other kind of advertising. That's what we call "people power!"

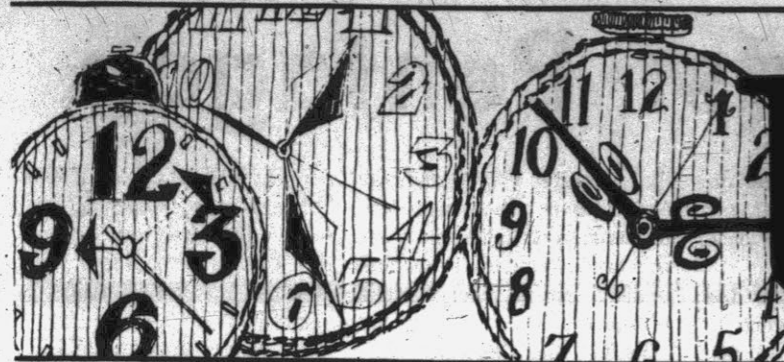

Put the power of Reflector Want Ads to work bringing you the extra money that makes life a lot more fun. Just go through your home and make a list of every worthwhile thing you find which you no longer use or need... things like furniture, appliances, musical instruments, record players, drapes, sports equipment and much more. Then dial 752-6166 for a friendly Ad Writer between 8:30 a.m. & 5 p.m. A three line ad is only 68c per day on the special 7 day rate.

Reflector Want Ads are truly "people power"; and it's no wonder, for they accomplish so much for so little. Hop on the bandwagon now! You'll be so glad you did.

GI Gets Fair Deal In Foreign Courts: Pentagon

By JOHN LENGEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Death sentences imposed recently on two GIs in Korea have focused new attention on the quality of justice for U.S. troops accused of crimes against civilians in foreign countries.

The official Pentagon view: Overwhelmingly, the trooper gets a square deal. Further, the impression of some senior Pentagon lawyers is that the American soldier is likely to get more lenient treatment in a foreign courtroom than he would in a U.S. court martial.

The Korean death sentences—set Dec. 4 for two men found guilty of robbing and killing a couple who refused to sell drugs on credit—are only the fourth and fifth given to U.S. military men abroad, the Pentagon says. No one has been executed.

The three other men beat their sentences on appeal as Sgt. John Blount and Spec. 4 James Walters are trying to do in Korea.

Japanese appellate judges commuted a seaman's sentence to life and he is now free on good behavior. A Thailand appeals court commuted an airman's death sentence to a short prison term. And the case against an airman in England shortly after World War II was dismissed when fresh evidence showed the victim died of improper medical care, not stab wounds.

All told, U.S. airmen, sailors, soldiers, Marines have been charged with 312,000 offenses overseas—a third of them traffic violations—since 1954, the time the Pentagon began compiling statistics.

About two-thirds could have been tried by foreign courts, according to agreements with nations where most of the million American troops are stationed overseas.

However, about half were waived to U.S. military forces for action.

In the past 16 years American military men were charged in an average of two dozen murder cases a year—38 in the last reporting period, which ended Nov. 30, 1969.

At the moment there are 114 military men in foreign prisons.

Most charges and trials result, says Lt. Col. Wade Williamson, a lawyer in the Army's international relations section, from attacks against the average foreign man or woman on the street. Alcohol figures in much of the time, too.

There is a very low acquittal rate once the GI does go into a foreign court, running around 1 per cent. Williamson says this is largely because the foreign prosecutor picks only the most solid cases to try, sending the marginal ones back to the U.S. military.

Where an American serviceman is to be tried is spelled out under Status of Forces or jurisdictional agreements, which have been negotiated with the NATO countries, Japan, Korea and several others.

There is no agreement for the big air bases in Thailand, leaving the offenses to their courts.

In Vietnam the Pentagon has exclusive criminal jurisdiction over its men.

These agreements apply both ways, but they only practically affect the United States since so few foreign troops are assigned in this country.

Basically, the agreements amount to the United States having the right to try its men for offenses that happen on duty. Off-duty crime is in the domain of the host country.

Military assistance groups, varying from 50 to hundreds of men in scores of countries, operate under separate agreements, the Pentagon says, which gives these men status equal or close to diplomatic immunity.

Where agreements are in force the American government pays a lawyer of that country for the man's defense. Some $140,000 was spent for this in the last year reported. The man does not have to reimburse the government.

If he is accused of a crime while on leave in a country where there is no agreement, say Switzerland, he is in the same boat as an American tourist, though the military will send a trial observer.

During arraignment and trial the agreements allow the man to be confined at his own base.

Sent to prison, the man's pay stops, but he is visited once a month by American military representatives to see to his health, whether he is getting his mail. Sometimes the military pays for a few extra books for him to read.

Several inspectors have visited foreign prisons and remarked on Americans being treated especially well. Korea and Japan have had separate facilities for Americans said to be better than for their own countrymen. In Korea one American worked himself up to a sort of trustee status as leader of a work gang.

Do American soldiers face prejudice in a foreign court?

"I'm not aware of it," says Brig. Gen. Harold E. Parker, assistant judge advocate general for military law in the Army. And, "over-all, sentences are more lenient than what they would get from a court martial."

Williamson agrees, adding that in several German courtrooms he is familiar with the judges frequently note the American is away from his family, unfamiliar with the language and customs. They emphasize the seriousness of the crime, but do a judicial kindness by sending a man to a reformatory instead of a prison.

Parker and Benjamin Forman, assistant Pentagon general counsel, have told Congress on several occasions that on the whole the agreements are operating satisfactorily.

Here's a breakdown for 29,488 offenses charged against U.S. military men in the last reporting period: 11,794 trials with 172 acquittals. Fines and reprimands were handed down in 96 per cent of these cases. Another 143 were given suspended sentences. The remaining 158 went to jail, 82 for less than a year. One man got life for murder in Germany.

The crimes in this total were reported as 38 murder, 272 rape, 173 manslaughter, 11 arson, 1,755 robbery and larceny, 96 burglary, 61 forgery, 488 aggravated assault, 1,999 simple assault, 304 economic violations such as black marketing, 20,607 traffic violations, 4,110 disorderly conduct. The remaining 1,653 were in the miscellaneous category.

AccuColor is unsurpassed for value. AccuColor gives you the performance, the convenience features and the built-in dependability that you want. Now, during AccuColor Action Days, the values are greater than ever!

BRIGHTER

AccuColor is the most accurate color TV in RCA's history. More vivid. More lifelike. Every picture tube is computer-designed and has more radiant phosphors that deliver richer color. And RCA's Perma-Chrome shadow mask prevents color distortion as the picture tube warms up. You get precise color that won't fade, shift or blur even after hours of continuous viewing.

SHARPER

The AccuColor tuning system is built for pinpoint accuracy. All critical color controls are automatic. The system locks in the correct signal and stabilizes color intensity. And AccuTint—RCA's one-button automatic—gives you more natural flesh tones and consistent color on all channels. It's fiddle-free tuning!

TOUGHER TV

RCA has built reliable solid state devices into every AccuColor chassis. They replace many tubes and are the most reliable, most stable, most long-lived components in television today. AccuColor's built right. And backed in writing by RCA's "Purchaser Satisfaction" warranties—"PS" for short—covering both parts and labor (see below).

Poster Girl To See Nixon

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—Roberta Scott, the 14-year-old Wichita girl who as the 1970 poster child for the National Association of Retarded Children, is finally going to see the President.

Roberta's mother, Mrs. Huey Scott, said Sunday she had received a letter from Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., new Republican national chairman, requesting Roberta's attendance at White House worship services with President Nixon next Sunday. The letter said she and her mother would leave for Washington Saturday and return by private jet.

Roberta was scheduled to have her picture taken with President Nixon late last year, but White House officials said a crowded schedule would not permit the President to pose with her.

Because Roberta was the first black child to be chosen as the NARC poster girl, the situation touched off complaints of a racial slight.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen, however, that Nixon did not know whether the girl was "white, black, or brown"—he simply had been busy.

No Injuries In Sunday Accident

Arthur Landerville Ledoux III, 22, of Washington, D. C. was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 12:45 p.m. mishap here yesterday at the intersection of Fifth Street and Forrest Hill Circle.

Police reported the Ledoux car collided with a vehicle driven by Rickey Marshall Chambers, 21, of Route 1, Timberlake, causing an estimated $190 damage to the Chambers vehicle and about $90 damage to the Ledoux car. No injuries were reported.

PS Parts and Labor Warranty—Basic Provisions. For 90 days from the date of purchase, RCA Corporation warrants to the first retail purchaser that it will pay all labor charges for repair of defects in these RCA New Vista models (and Models EP-402 and EP-404) and will make available replacements for any defective parts. (If the picture tube becomes defective within two years, it will be exchanged for a rebuilt picture tube.) On portable models, RCA will make available replacements for defective parts and pay labor charges only on a "carry-in" basis; transportation to and from the service agency is the purchaser's responsibility. Installation and set-up, foreign use, antenna systems, and adjustment of customer controls are not included. To obtain warranty benefits, contact your RCA dealer or the service agency of your choice with your Warranty Registration Card.
