

Bill Would Legalize Budget Alterations

Legislative Help Is Offered 25 Counties

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina counties affected by a court ruling which knocked out a special one-cent sales tax have received another offer of legislative help—a bill that would allow them to legally alter their budgets to cut down spending.

Rep. Samuel H. Johnson, D-Wake, introduced a bill in the General Assembly Monday night that would authorize 25 counties to amend their budgets as needed to make up for the loss of revenue and to issue bonds or notes to cover any deficit spending.

Johnson's bill was intended as an emergency measure to help deaden the shock from the State Supreme Court's action last week in ruling the tax unconstitutional.

The measure would forgive red-ink spending as a "casual deficit," a term authorized by the state four decades ago to meet the fiscal emergency created by the 1929 stock market crash. Capitol sources said it has not been used at any level of North Carolina government since that time.

Other legislators introduced bills in both houses of the assembly late last week to increase the statewide sales tax from three to four per cent.

Gov. Bob Scott has rejected the statewide tax proposal, however, contending it would endanger the state's own source of future revenue. Instead, he has proposed legislation that would authorize counties to decide locally and individually whether they want the sales tax.

Scott said he believed voluntary voting at the county level, or a decision by county commissions, would stand the constitutional test. The tax invalidated by the Supreme Court was imposed after mandatory voting in all 100 counties.

The Senate Monday night passed and sent to the House a bill authorizing the governor and Council of State to designate individuals who legally could use unmarked state-owned cars. Existing law restricts the use of such vehicles to law enforcement officers.

Approval of an amendment by Sen. John J. Burney, D-New Hanover, preceded passage of the bill, which had been opposed by Forsyth Republican Hamilton C. Horton Jr.

Burney brushed aside Horton's contention the bill would grant "retroactive amnesty" by saying:

"It's mighty easy to go around throwing rocks, and looking for bugaboos and bugger men."

The New Hanover senator cautioned his colleagues to check their own conduct. "We live in a glass house," he said. "And anytime anybody invites us out for a free meal, we seem to be at the head of the line."

Horton had contended that members of the Council of State had violated the existing law by using unmarked cars and, as the agent for designating legal users, could grant themselves amnesty.

He said a survey of unmarked cars in the state motor pool in Raleigh last August showed vehicles assigned to a superintendent of public instruction, the commissioner of insurance and, among others, the commissioner of agriculture. All are members of the council.

Sen. Jyles J. Coggins, D-Wake, introduced a bill that would make it a misdemeanor for any person to wilfully expose himself, or herself, "in any public place and in the presence of any other person or persons." The measure also would make it a violation for a person to promote or direct such an act, or for a property owner or lessee to allow such an act performed on his land or premises.

Venus Data

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today that its Venus 7 spacecraft—which hurtled into Venus' hellish atmosphere Dec. 15—made a soft landing on the planet and transmitted data for 23 minutes.

"For the first time," the Soviet news agency Tass said, "scientific information was relayed from the surface of another planet of the solar system."

The atmospheric conditions on the surface of the planet at Venus 7's landing site, Tass said, were a temperature of 875 degrees Fahrenheit, plus or minus 68 degrees, and a pressure of about 90 times that on the surface of the earth, plus or minus 15 atmospheres.

Green Beret Team Serving Anson County People

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has sent 80 Green Berets to a rural North Carolina county to work with local doctors and police departments and even help with gym classes at a junior high school.

The experimental project began quietly some three weeks ago in Anson County about 85 miles from Ft. Bragg, N.C., home of the Green Berets.

With the Green Beret role coming to an end in Vietnam, their commander, Brig. Gen. Henry E. Emerson, says the project is an effort to make peacetime training interesting for his men and, at the same time, help the nation and the Army's image.

"Green Berets, everyone knows, can blow a bridge," Emerson says, "but they also know how to build schools and dispensaries."

"It's an experiment. We're feeling our way so we don't bruise anyone's feelings," the 45-year-old general said in a Pentagon interview.

"We're not going in and telling the people, 'this is what we're going to do.' We're asking them to tell us what their needs are and help them help themselves."

Emerson credits Lt. Gen. John J. Tolson, Ft. Bragg commander, with the idea that the Army can put its skills to work at home during peacetime.

"Naturally I've been a little apprehensive about the project," Emerson said "but so far all indications are that its going well. The people have really accepted us."

The Army has moved slowly with the project, taking time to lay the ground work and win the approval of local officials. If its successful, Emerson says it may be expanded to other areas of the country.

Green Berets medics, considered the Army's best, are assist the few local doctors in impoverished Anson County by giving physical examinations.

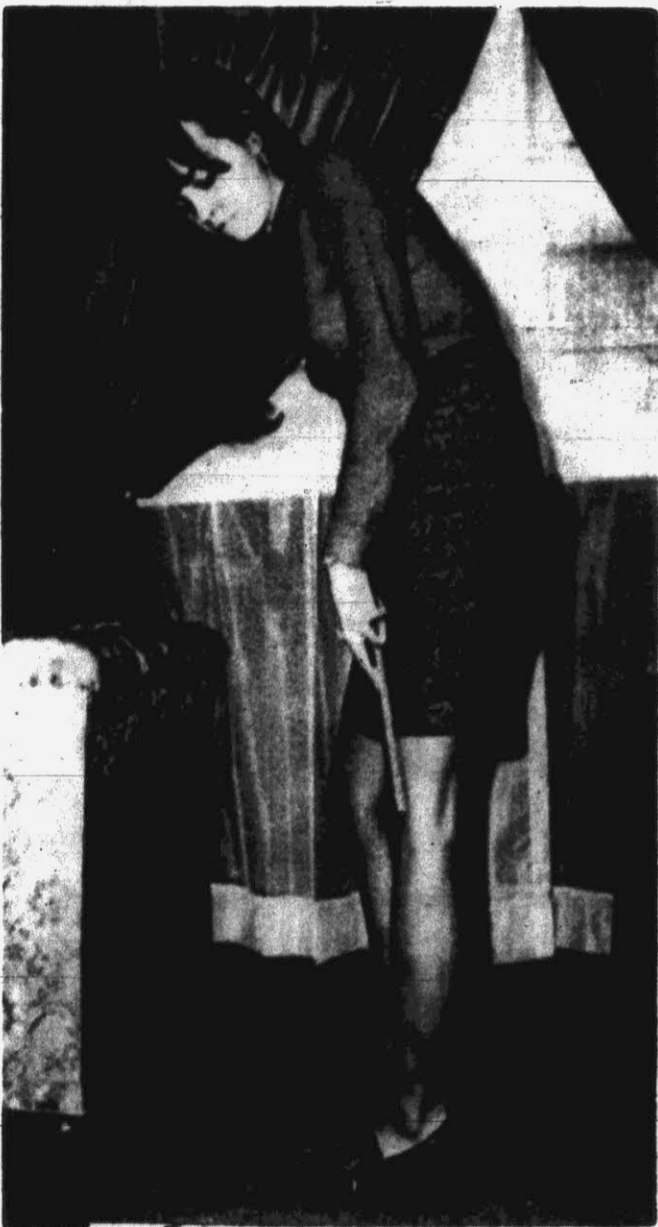

Police departments are advised on how to control drug abuse. Soldiers have built a dispensary, and youngsters at one junior high school are given their daily exercise by Green Berets.

Emerson's men are working in four communities—Lilesville, Morven, Ansonville and Wadesboro, the county seat.

This is not the first time the Army has aided a civilian community-engineers from Ft. Carson, Colo. recently built a hospital for the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico—but it is the first for the Green Berets who were specially trained in psychological warfare, guerilla warfare and counterinsurgency.

Lost Her Job Due Short Skirt

TOO SHORT — Mrs. Phillip Kehrer measures one of the skirts Sheriff Eads said was too short. (AP Wirephoto)

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "Sex crimes have increased since skirts were shortened," says Sheriff Lee R. Eads, explaining why he fired a 22-year-old clerk whose miniskirt was short of the sheriff's code on dress.

"I can't criticize the public if our own girls walk around exposed," Eads said Monday after the dismissal of Carol Kehrer, a $77-a-week clerk in the sheriff's department civil office.

Eads issued an order last month that the minimum length for a skirt be one inch above the center of the kneecap. Mrs. Kehrer's skirts are four inches higher than the minimum.

"I tried to lower my skirts after the order came out, but there just wasn't enough hem to let out," Mrs. Kehrer said. "And I didn't have enough money to buy new clothes."

She added she was helping with the family finances as her husband, Phillip, completes his education at Ball State University.

Mrs. Kehrer's immediate superior, Maj. James H. Hardin, said her work had been satisfactory.

Calling the new maxiskirt ugly, Hardin said, "We don't encourage it. I think girls should look like girls."

Hardin said women employees aren't permitted to wear pantsuits to work.

S. Vietnam Nixon Asks Action On 40 Bills Submitted Last Year

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese and American forces tonight joined the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese in a cease-fire in South Vietnam marking Tet, the festival of the lunar new year. The Saigon government began the Year of the Boar with a proposal that all sick and wounded prisoners of war be freed by both sides.

There was no cease-fire in Cambodia, and Cambodian troops fought off attacks on three positions 18 to 28 miles northwest, southeast and south of Phnom Penh. Phnom Penh itself, under all night curfew because of a wave of terrorist attacks, was free from attack after four days of fighting, and the airport was open to commercial traffic for the first time since it was attacked last Friday.

U.S. and South Vietnamese headquarters said their forces suspended combat operations at 6 p.m. Saigon time—5 a.m. EST—for 24 hours, although U.S. air strikes against North Vietnamese troops and supply routes

The Viet Cong had announced a four-day cease-fire beginning 17 hours ahead of the allied truce. But the Saigon government charged that the enemy had violated their own cease-fire at least four times in the first few hours.

The U.S. Command reported no attacks on American units during the same period.

Announcing Saigon's new proposal for the release of prisoners, Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam said his government "proposes to release all sick and wounded prisoners of war now being held in South Vietnam who express a desire to be released to the North. In this humane spirit, the government of the Republic of Vietnam proposes that the other side release immediately all sick and wounded Vietnamese and allied prisoners of war."

Lam said South Vietnam holds 2,080 sick and wounded POWs, including 1,267 Viet Cong.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his first special message of 1971, President Nixon today called for early enactment of 40 bills originally submitted last year. He noted some "have been modified to meet legitimate concerns expressed by members of the Congress."

The proposals cover a wide variety of problem areas, ranging from aid to school districts facing desegregation problems to recommended increases in airline fares to help finance anti-air hijacking programs.

Nixon said his initial request of the new year "is that the unfinished business of the 91st Congress be made the first business of the 92nd." He said:

"I believe that the items of unfinished business I propose to day merit the prompt and careful consideration of the Congress. I believe they are good measures, I believe they are wise proposals. I believe they are necessary legislation. I urge the Congress to act favorably upon them."

Under the desegregation aid program, first submitted last May 21, school districts would receive $1.5 billion by mid-1972 to help meet the costs of implementing desegregation plans or in eliminating or easing racial isolation in the classrooms.

The anti-hijacking revenue measure would add one-half of one per cent to the present 6 per cent federal tax on airline passenger tickets and would boost from $3 to $5 the departure tax on all international flights.

He also called anew for a substantial increase in annual use taxes paid by large trucks and would raise the federal tax on diesel fuel to 6 cents a gallon from 4 cents.

Most of the legislation will go to Congress promptly, Nixon said, but some will be delayed.

Among many other retreat recommendations, some would crack down on obscenity and pornography, create a new national institute of education and strengthen the hand of authorities who must deal with sit-ins or other demonstrations in government offices.

Growth Report By Bank Of Winterville

WINTERVILLE — The Bank of Winterville, at its 66th annual meeting Friday night, reported total resources of $5,002,616.32 as of Dec. 31, 1970, a gain of $1,480,542.30 over 1969. C. D. Langston, bank president, noted that "the bank experienced the greatest growth in the last year that we have had in any one year previously."

Langston added that the bank "is in a stronger financial position than ever before to serve its customers in Pitt County."

According to the president; earnings for The Bank of Winterville during 1970 amounted to $266,235.54 as compared to $185,257.20 in 1969.

He reported that the bank contributed $244,900.95 to the community in salaries, employee's benefits, interest paid on savings accounts, and other expenses.

Zippering Around Earth

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The world's largest communications satellite zipped around the earth on a great elliptical path today as a ground station prepared to send a signal to look it in stationary orbit high above the Atlantic Ocean.

The first in a series of Intelsat 4 satellites was launched from Cape Kennedy by an Atlas-Centaur rocket Monday night and achieved a preliminary orbit 165 to 22,700 miles high.

This is the first of eight such satellites planned by the 77-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium. Two other launches in 1971 are to position payloads over the Pacific and Indian oceans to form a global network.

Each satellite can handle 9,000 simultaneous phone calls or 12 color television transmissions. This compares with 1,200 phone calls and four TV transmissions with the present Intelsat 3 series, five of which are in operation.

Another new feature of Intelsat 4 is a set of steerable antennas.

A service station operator was burned and heavy damage done to the wash and grease pit section of his station this morning when gas he was using to clean floors ignited.

Curt Smith, operator of Curt Smith Texaco station at 203 Evans St. was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of his injuries. He suffered burns to his legs, thighs, hands and forearms in the fire.

Smith said he had been using gasoline to clean the floors in the grease pit area of the station. Although, according to Smith, the heater in the building had been turned off, a spark from an electric motor or any electric appliance in the area could have ignited the gas fumes.

The fire was reported at 8:50 a.m. and fire officers said the blaze was quickly extinguished.

Commission Offers 'Nonpartisan Merit Plan' For Judgeships

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A new "nonpartisan merit plan" for selecting judges in North Carolina was recommended today by the N.C. Courts Commission.

The study group, in a report submitted to the General Assembly, also proposed the creation of machinery to discipline judges or to remove them from office for physical or mental disability or misconduct.

The commission also proposed that 72 be set as the mandatory retirement age for Supreme Court justices and judges of the Court of Appeals, and that Superior Court and District Court judges be required to retire at age 70.

All three proposals would require an amendment to the state constitution.

The first of the proposed amendments would provide for the creation of a judicial nominating commission, composed of lawyers and layment, which would recommend to the governor the names of persons to fill judicial vacancies.

The commission would recommend three names for each vacancy on the Supreme Court and Appeals Court and two or three names for each vacancy on the Superior Court or District Court. If the governor failed to make an appointment from these lists within the time allowed, the chief justice of the Supreme Court would fill the vacancy.

Those appointed to the bench in this way would have to stand for re-election on a nonpartisan "yes" or "no" ballot at the first general election occurring more than a year after his appointment. Judges approved in this way would serve a regular term until the electorate would pass on their names again.

Terms of judges would continue to be eight years for judges of the Supreme Court, Appeals Court and Superior Court, and not more than eight years for district judges.

In recommending the new plan for selecting judges, the study group noted that judges are supposed to be elected in North Carolina, but since the governor fills vacancies, most of them are appointed. It said that 19 states are now following the plan it recommended in whole or part.

It said the plan "guarantees qualified judges by screening out the obviously unfit and mediocre" and the plan "increases the available pool of qualified candidates."

One member of the courts commission, A. A. Zollicoffer Jr., of Henderson, disagreed with rest of the group and said the new plan for selecting judges is "Neither necessary nor in the best interest of the administration of justice in North Carolina."

The commission also proposed the creation of a judicial standards commission, to be composed of three judges; two attorneys and two public members who would investigate complaints against judges and if necessary recommend to the state Supreme Court they be censured or removed.

Grounds for removal would be wilful misconduct, habitual intemperance, conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude, or "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute."

"To most observers, the need for an efficient means of disciplining or removing judges who cannot measure up to the required moral, professional or physical standards is obvious," the commission stated.

California Jury To Consider Manson Case Penalty

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury that convicted Charles Manson and three devoted women followers in the bizarre Sharon Tate murders meets Thursday to consider the penalty: death or life imprisonment.

The state said it would demand death in the gas chamber. The penalty trial, required by California law, will bring new testimony and the chance to recall witnesses heard during the trial's seven months.

The prosecutor said he had 50 witnesses ready, but that the penalty trial could be short, indicating he would not call them all.

The defense, which called no witnesses during the trial said it would put on a case as long as or longer than the state's, seeking to persuade the jurors to decree life imprisonment. Expected witnesses include family and friends of the defendants who will testify to their character.

Chief defense attorney Paul Fitzgerald said he would try to show that there was still doubt as to the defendants' guilt despite Monday's verdicts.

"A verdict of first-degree murder means the jury has determined guilt beyond a reasonable doubt," said Fitzgerald, "but not beyond any doubt at all."

The verdicts, he said, were expected, and the defendants were somewhat resigned, which explained their decorous behavior Monday, contrasting sharply with emotional outbursts earlier in the trial.

Manson, 36, shaggy-haired chieftain of a wandering hippie-tribe, still managed to get in a punchline after all verdicts were read.

"I think they're all guilty," he said of the jurors, then shouted at Judge Charles H. Older, "We're still not allowed to put on a defense! You won't outlive that, old man!" Counsel for the accused declined to let the women take the stand for fear they would incriminate themselves trying to clear Manson.

As the jury prepared to deliver its verdict after 42 hours and 40 minutes of deliberation spread over more than eight days, the three women, Susan Atkins, 22, Leslie Van Houten, 21, and Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, shuffled into court smiling and chatting among themselves.

Pale and thin, they wore drab jail uniforms and ribbons in their long hair. They sat whispering through the reading of the verdicts, and, as the jury was led out, a prosecutor heard Miss Van Houten say, "Look how sad they all look."

The three women smiled at cameramen in the courthouse corridor after the verdict, but guards in the jail said they wept for more than an hour in their cells. Manson still appeared unruffled by the verdict after his return to jail.

The defendants were charged with 27 counts of murder-conspiracy in the August 1969 slaying of the blonde, pregnant actress and four visitors to her hilltop mansion, and in the killings a night later of a wealthy market owner and his wife.

The state said Manson ordered the killings in hopes of triggering a race war he felt was predicted in a Beatles song, and that after the war Manson expected to take control of the world.

The women obeyed Manson's every command in robot-like fashion, including his orders to kill, the state contended.

A parade of often colorful witnesses told of the women's part in the murder mission, how Miss Atkins stabbed Miss Tate, then tasted her blood; how Miss Krenwinkel stabbed through victims' bones and later declared that her hand hurt; how Miss van Houten told of stabbing a victim already dead and finding that it was "fun."

Miss Van Houten, a tall, pretty brunette, was charged with conspiracy in all the killings but with murdering only market owners Leno and Rosemary LaBianca. Her attorney, Maxwell Keith, argued that she didn't know of the murder plan, couldn't have premeditated the killings and should be acquitted.

"The defendants are all terribly disappointed about Leslie," said Fitzgerald. "They felt there was hope for her."

As Manson and the women were led quickly from the courtroom, Fitzgerald leaned over and kissed his client, Miss Kren-winkel, on the cheek. "We lost the case when we lost our change of venue," he later told newsmen.

Fitzgerald said he would argue at the penalty trial that pretrial publicity hurt the Tate defendants. Manson's attorney, Irving Kanarek, said sensational publicity was bred by the district attorney's office which sought to create prejudice against Manson's unconventional life style.

The seven-month trial was laced with lurid testimony about sex orgies and drug use at the Manson family's communal home, the Spahn movie ranch. The state's star witness was Linda Kasabian, petite, blonde,

21-year-old mother of two, who lived at the Manson family commune in the summer of 1969. Originally jailed with the others, Mrs. Kasabian was given immunity from prosecution for telling her story during 18 sometimes tearful days on the stand. She had described in her testimony how Manson, known to followers as "Jesus," "Satan" and "God," sent black-clad followers into the night on the two murder forays. She painted a nightmarish scene of slaughter at the Tate estate with dying victims pleading for their lives and screaming in the darkness.

Her version of the killings matched details that hit the headlines when the bloody scene of carnage was discovered. A maid's screams led police up the lush hills of Benedict Canyon to the tomato-red mansion rented by Miss Tate and her husband, film director Roman Polanski.

They found the actress, 26, curled on the living room floor, her nearly nude body torn by stab wounds and bathed in blood. Around her neck was looped a rope linked at the other end to the neck of hairdresser Jay Sebring, 26. He was fatally stabbed and shot and a bloody towel was draped around his head like a hood.

Sprawled in bloody pools on the lawn were the bodies of two guests, Polish playboy Wojciech Frykowski, 37, and his girl friend, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, 26. In the driveway, dead at the wheel of his car, was Stephen Parent, 19, shot through the head while apparently departing from a visit with a friend, the estate's caretaker.

The word "Pig" was scrawled in blood on the front door.

15% of your heating dollars may be going right out the window.

Glass allows heat to escape many times faster than walls do. So, whether you heat your house with flameless electricity or one of the older flame fuels, you can save as much as 15% of your heating dollars by installing storm windows, or by covering windows with sheets of clear plastic. And here are four other ways to save on your heating bill.

- 1 Don't spend your money keeping Mother Nature warm. First make sure your home is properly insulated. Then seal all cracks and crevices around windows and doors and close dampers or block flues in unused fireplaces. This way you'll keep out the cold air and seal in the heat.
- 2 Let the sun shine in—it's free; so use it whenever you can. Otherwise draw your window shades or draperies, especially at night, to insulate your windows, keep out the cold and reduce a sizeable heat loss.
- 3 Don't spend money heating unused space. Close the doors to attic, basement, garage and other unheated areas. If your home has electric heat with thermostats in every room, you can save even more by reducing the settings in unused rooms and closing them off.
- 4 Remember that repeatedly adjusting the thermostat can be a very costly habit. Contrary to popular opinion, turning it way up doesn't make the heat come any faster; it just keeps the unit operating longer and uses more fuel. So set your thermostat at the temperature you want and leave it there.

We know how unpleasant inflation is. Like you, Vepco is faced with higher costs: for fuel, labor, freight, interest, pollution control and construction, among other things. ## Two Boards Meet On Thursday Night

Both the Greenville Board of Adjustments and the City-County Board of Adjustments have meetings scheduled this week at 8 o'clock on Thursday night.

Three items will be considered by the city board. The first agenda item is a public hearing on a request for variance by the Etna Oil Company, which is seeking to make an addition (a canopy) to the service station at the intersection of Country Club Drive and South Memorial Drive.

The other two items, both public hearings, are requests for variances. One concerns setback requirements by John's Flowers, to make an addition to the front of the building located at 503 East Third St. The property is zoned R-6, or residential. The second item is a request by the Chapin Construction Company, which wants to make an addition to the Fieldcrest Mills, Inc., located at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road.

For the joint city-county

Board of Adjustments meeting, two items are scheduled for discussion. General Building and Masonry Contractors of Raleigh have requested a special use permit to construct multi-family dwellings on property located on East Tenth Street extended. The property is now outside the city limits and is zoned for RA-20 usage.

The second agenda item is a public hearing for a request for a temporary special use permit by Quick Fill, Inc. The corporation seeks to construct a service station on property on the north side of Washington Highway adjacent to Hardee Creek. The property is located outside the city in a RA-20 zone.

DEAR ABBY: I am a Stanford graduate. My wife graduated from the University of California at Berkeley. Life is beautiful until the football season, and then the fur flies. When "The Big Game" is played, my wife wants to sit on the Cal. side, and I want to sit on the Stanford side.

Last time I gave in and sat on the Cal. side and I nearly got killed. Every time Cal. scored I groaned. When Stanford scored, I cheered. This made me very unpopular with my neighbors in the Cal. section.

Don't suggest that I sit on the Stanford side and my wife sit on the Cal. side because we want to watch the game together. My wife insists that it's the husband's place to defer to his wife's wishes. I take the opposite point of view. What do you say?

DEAR STANFORD: Your wife should sit on the Stanford side. A lady is less apt to get stung in enemy territory rooting for the competition.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please do thousands of secretaries a favor and print this? Whenever my boss and his wife receive a personal gift, or have been entertained or if there is any other matter which requires a personal "thank-you" note, my boss asks me to write it. Of course, he signs it. I always thought the wife was supposed to write those notes.

I have a heavier workload than I can carry without all this extra stuff. I have been worked overtime, for which I am not paid, to get their Christmas cards out. I really wouldn't mind so much if either he or his wife ever thanked me for it, but it's never mentioned.

His wife has even called and asked ME to remind HIM to send So-and-So a thank you note. Who does she think does it? The good fairy? Tell him for me, will you? —NO GUTS

DEAR NO: After this hit print I may not have to.

DEAR ABBY: So you think it is "beautiful" if two married men phone each other three and four times a day, and run to meet for coffee or lunch daily?

If you were married to one of these men you wouldn't think it was so beautiful. I had that situation for six years, and refused to face it until I found out everybody in town knew about the "beautiful" relationship but me.

All the beauty faded when my husband lost his job because of all the talk. I am no longer puzzled. Sign me. . . —NAUSEATED IN HUNTSVILLE

DEAR ABBY: I can't tell you how happy I was to read your answer to "PUZZLED," the woman who couldn't get over the affection her husband had for his buddy.

People who suspect sex has to enter into everything are to be pitied. I have a buddy I would give my life for. And he would give his life for me. This isn't just talk, he proved it when we were in Viet Nam together. He is black, and I am white. (Maybe someone would like to make something of that, too!) Anyway, I want to assure PUZZLED that two men can really love each other without being lovers. —LARRY

Maxicoats Are The Rage In Pakistan

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN Associated Press Writer KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — No argument about maxicoats in Pakistan. They are the rage, from the tip of m'lady's nose to her ankles.

The Pakistani version is centuries old and is called the burqa. It started as a shroud but has acquired sufficient style for such variations as the Shuttelcock, the Teddy and, even, the miniburqa.

Millions of women in this sober, predominantly Moslem society of nearly 130 million persons wear them as part of the tradition of purdah, which requires females in public to veil themselves from the male gaze.

The burqa has a measurable effect on girl watching. However, a determined male still can draw inspiration from the flash of a well-turned instep, usually the only expanse of flesh exposed when a burqa glides by.

Despite the inroads of modern life, most Pakistani women wear this traditional covering usually over bloomer-like white trousers called shalwar. Some university girls wear them to school, doff them for the classes they share with male students, don them for the return home. They usually wear burqas in deference to conservative parents.

Girls who won't wear a burqa in one place will wear one in another. Modern girls in gaily patterned trouser suits arriving at the airport in Peshawar, capital of the Northwest Frontier, often pause to cover themselves in black burqas before venturing into a town where women are among the most cloistered in the country.

Few foreign women wear burqas but many buy them as souvenirs, said G.M. Khan who sells them at a busy Bunder Road emporium in Karachi. New York writer Margaret Marcus, who has converted to Islam in Lahore under the name Maryam Jameelah, is pictured in a new book under the caption "The Author" draped completely in a black burqa, with only her hands visible.

The oldest style is the Shuttelcock, so called because its square cap and generous gown reminded people of the badminton bird. The cap covers the face, the wearer peering out through a grill cut in it.

The Teddy has become the most common style. It is a long black coat that is almost form fitting. The wearer throws a gauzy black cloth over her head, hiding her face while still able to see a somewhat dim world. Many women wear the cloth over the tip of their nose or as a headkerchief, with or without dark glasses, depending on the depth of one's modesty.

The Teddy comes from the Teddy-Boy style popular about the time this version of the burqa appeared.

The miniburqa doesn't quite get down to the knee which is always well covered by the shalwar, in any case. Some minis have a fru-fru flounce, like a ballerina skirt.

Khan believes business will be good for 50 years despite some young women renouncing burqas. Where once the coats were available only in white cotton or in black crepe, they now come in peach, ivory, sea blue or canary yellow and decorated with embroidery that raises their price from the usual $5 rupees —$7 to 100 rupees—$20. Most women have at least two.

Despite the young urban woman's usual distaste for the burqa, some have found them useful. Examiners must watch that burqaed students are not smuggling test answers under their garments. The burqa allows some young ladies to find welcome obscurity, such as when slipping from a dormitory to meet a boy friend.

"You would be surprised at what you can get away with in a burqa," said a pretty student at Lahore's Fatima Jinnah Medical College, a school for girls.

Coordinate Windows With The Wallpaper

Here's a wonderful, do-it-yourself way of coordinating your shaded window treatment with your wallcovering, say both the Wallcovering Industry Bureau and the Window Shade Manufacturers Association.

Patterns cut out of the wall-covering and pasted on the shade will give a custom look—especially if the shade was chosen in one of the colors of the paper.

Use a small, sharp scissors; cut the motifs out carefully, and arrange the pieces as a complete design on the lower section of the shade. Then apply glue to the reverse side, one cut out at a time, making sure that the entire surface is covered before pressing it onto the shade.

Smooth out each applique carefully, checking that all the edges are attached carefully and that no air bubbles remain. That is all there is to it.

If the wallcovering is a solid color and there is no particular pattern to cut out, a slim border pasted just above the slat of the shade will look handsome. To cover any rough edges, the strip can be finished top and bottom with a trimming of narrow gimp in the color of the border.

Did you know that the translucent cloth window shades that provide glare-free light, also prevent "sunburn" to home furnishings, lend privacy, and cut down appreciably on outside noises and on heat or cold "bounce" from out-of-doors? They are washable, too.

SOUTHEND, England (WNS) — Mayoress Beryl Schofield, 49, decided that crime had gone far enough in Southend when her own home was broken into. So she turned detective herself and trapped two teen girls who admitted to breaking into 17 houses. "A wonderful example," wrote the Chief Constable to the lady mayor, who admitted that she read one detective story every night.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor An Italian company supper, with Lasagne as the main dish, is worth preparing. Most of your effort can go into making the Lasagne if you follow these suggestions for the rest of the menu.

Start off with antipasto: thinly sliced Genoa salami, an Italian-type cheese such as fontina, celery, radishes, green olives, sardines and white beans vinaigrette.

You can prepare the beans vinaigrette easily by using canned white beans, drained, and mixing them with olive oil, wine vinegar, salt, pepper, dry mustard and minced fresh parsley. Serve the Lasagne with steamed broccoli dressed with melted butter and lemon juice. For dessert you might like to offer an Italian-style cake. For this sprinkle two layers of bought sponge cake with rum and sandwich together with a filling made from packaged vanilla-flavor pudding-and-pie filling mix. Top the cake with rum-flavor sweetened whipped cream and curls of semi-sweet chocolate.

Here's the recipe for the Lasagne; it's so good it might just become your favorite version of this dish. Its tomato meat sauce includes a couple of envelopes of spaghetti sauce mix and is quick to prepare—only 10 minutes needed for simmering it. The Lasagne is chockful of ricotta and mozzarella cheese and that's all to the good.

LASAGNE
1 1/2 pounds ground chuck beef
2 envelopes spaghetti sauce mix, each 1 1/2 ounces
1 can, 6 ounces, tomato paste
1 can, 1 pound and 13 ounces, tomato puree
4 quarts water
1 tablespoon salt
12 curly-edge lasagne noodles, about 1/2 pound
1 container, 15 or 16 ounces, ricotta cheese
1 egg
1 pound whole-milk mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced crosswise
1-3rd cup grated Parmesan cheese

Place beef in a large saucepot and cook over medium heat until redness disappears, breaking up meat into small pieces with a spoon and stirring to prevent sticking. Sprinkle with spaghetti sauce mix and stir well. Add tomato paste and tomato puree. Heat to boiling, stirring often. Simmer for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Into another large saucepot pour the water; bring to a rapid boil; add salt. Add lasagne noodles (2 pieces at a time) to boiling water. When all pieces have been added, boil until tender—10 to 12 minutes or longer. Drain and rinse with cold water. Return lasagne to pot. Add 1 cup warm water to keep lasagne from sticking together.

Beat ricotta with a spoon; add egg and beat until well mixed and smooth.

In the bottom of a 3-quart oblong glass baking dish—13 1/2 by 8 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches—or 3-quart porcelainized iron lasagne dish—about 14 by 8 by 2 inches—or similar baking pan, spread 1 cup of the meat sauce.

Place 3 lasagne noodles side by side lengthwise in dish; place a fourth noodle crosswise at end, folding back if necessary. Add 2 cups meat sauce and spread evenly over noodles. Add a layer of mozzarella, about 14 slices, placing pieces about 1/4-inch apart. Spoon 1/2 of ricotta over mozzarella, spreading ricotta with a spoon. Sprinkle with 1/2 of Parmesan.

TRESS-CO
WIGS-WIGLETS-FALLS
WHOLESALE

Add a second layer of lasagne noodles arranging them the same as first layer. Add about 2 cups meat sauce—saving some for third layer, a layer of mozzarella—saving 6 slices for third layer, remaining ricotta and remaining Parmesan. Add a third layer of lasagne noodles. Spread top with remaining meat sauce and dot with remaining mozzarella. Tightly cover dish with foil but try not to have foil touch cheese. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until hot through—about 30 minutes. Remove foil and bake another 5 minutes or so. Remove from oven and let stand about 10 minutes to set before serving. Makes 12 servings—enough for 6 to 8 eaters. TO PREPARE AHEAD: Prepare complete dish without baking; chill as long as 2 days and 2 nights. Let stand at room temperature about 2 hours before baking. Place dish in cold oven; set oven at 350 degrees. Bake until very hot through—about 1 hour. Remove foil; continue to bake about 5 minutes. Remove from oven and let stand about 10 minutes to set before serving.

You may be a thief and not know it! Correct . . . your tensions, anxieties, and nervousness may be robbing your hair of its natural flair.

What can you do? Simple relaxation and a slower, more deliberate pace will help. However, since this is not always practical, special remedies for "robbed" hair exist, consisting of brushing, massaging, and lots of sleep.

Remember, when you become over-anxious and tense, your nerves stimulate a contraction of the muscles surrounding the hair roots, cutting off the hair's supply of nourishing blood, thus robbing it of its life-sustaining formula. So, relax and if you wish to give your hair the special attention it deserves, see our staff professionals.

Back In Legislature's Hands

Last week's Supreme Court ruling that the one percent local sales tax is unconstitutional is a blow to those cities and counties which have already approved it.

Twenty-five counties have been receiving the one percent tax benefits after their voters expressed their approval in local elections.

The tax was defeated in Pitt County last year, although not by a large majority and the county was soon to have a second election to determine if the citizens wanted the tax collected here.

It is fortunate that Pitt County never began receiving the local option tax in light of the State Supreme Court ruling. Those counties and municipalities which now have it have already geared their budgets to spend this increased revenue. Suddenly they will find themselves without it.

The question also comes up that if the tax was unconstitutional can those who paid it apply for and get refunds? This could cause some murky problems.

We do not intend to second guess the Supreme Court on this matter. That it was a controversial decision is obvious, since only four of the justices voted in favor of declaring the law unconstitutional. Three voted against the ruling.

However, the court's action puts the matter of the extra one percent sales tax squarely back in the hands of the State Legislature. No doubt efforts will be made to pass legislation which will apply the tax to all 100 counties. Since the precedent for a local sales tax has already been set in the state, certainly a uniform law would have a better than average chance of passing.

It may be fortunate that the Legislature is meeting at this time because action on this matter during the present session could solve some major financial problems for the 25 counties which are already depending on the local sales tax.

It Is Possible Many Remembered Incident

Backers of Senator Ted Kennedy continue to profess a sort of bewildered amazement over failure of the Democrats to retain the New Englander as party whip. A news dispatch quoted, without identification, one of the Senator's staff members as saying "I just don't know" what happened.

Well, we don't know just what happened, either. Many things are taken into consideration when it comes time to pick a leader. But Kennedy partisans might do well to ponder the obvious.

It is entirely possible that among those who voted for a new Democratic whip there are Senators who believe Kennedy's story that the irresponsible actions which followed the accidental drowning of a young woman companion resulted from a "state of shock." And, it is just as possible that some others don't believe this story at all.

Either way, Kennedy simply failed to demonstrate qualities associated with leadership.

A Tactic For The Invaders

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Behind President Nixon's decision to increase the use of U. S. helicopters and gunships in the intensifying Cambodian war lies a critical Presidential formula to keep the Communist invaders off balance until the spring of 1973.

Mr. Nixon's advisers are gambling on a timetable to slow down North Vietnamese regulars, now infiltrating down the Ho Chi Minh Trail at precisely double the rate of one year ago. The hope is to keep them from consolidating a new grip on Cambodian sanctuaries along the South Vietnam border until the end of the 1972 dry season.

The Nixon formula also counts on denying the Communists control of deep-water ports in southern Cambodia and supply lines from the sea to the South Vietnamese border — essential for any major enemy attack against the vital delta region in southern South Vietnam. Again, by delaying Communist control of ports and supply routes until the dry season ends in late spring, 1973, Mr. Nixon would postpone the expected assault against South Vietnam until the 1973 dry season starts two years from now.

By then, the million-man South Vietnamese army, with its own rapidly growing air support, should be in better shape to handle the predictable Communist invasion across the Cambodian border. And by then, with rapid U. S. troop withdrawals in the intervening two years, virtually the entire defense of South Vietnam will be in Saigon's hands — to "sink or swim," as one top official told us, with minimal U. S. logistics support.

That explains Mr. Nixon's willingness to risk political screams at home from Senate doves claiming he is violating the spirit of the Cooper-Church amendment, which bans U. S. ground troops in Cambodia. Mr. Nixon knows full well that the use of close-support gunships and troop-supply helicopters (for South-Vietnamese troops) invites just such a political cry of "foul."

But the hopeful prospect of buying two more years of experience for President Nguyen Van Thieu's army is seen as fully worth the political outcry. More important, those two years are absolutely essential to permit U. S. troop withdrawals without new major assaults, from enemy bases in Cambodia, against the largely-pacified delta region.

The purpose, then, is a miniature of last May, when Mr. Nixon risked political chaos at home with his decision to use U. S. troops to destroy the Cambodian sanctuaries. That effort gained one year and made possible the further gain of two more years.

But Hanoi's invading forces are pressing hard. Besides having doubled over last year, the rate of infiltration is now higher than just before the 1968 Tet offensive — Hanoi's high-water mark.

Several factors, however, are obviously more favorable today than in that bleak period. So far, only a few more than 1,000 Communist troops have infiltrated as far south as Route 4, the lifeline connecting Cambodia's capital at Phnom-Penh with the major seaport of Kompong Som (formerly Sihanoukville). Furthermore, with scarcely any indigenous guerrilla movement inside Cambodia, the Communists are deprived of the support they had in South Vietnam during the infamous Tet offensive.

It All Depends On Personnel

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — However fine the machinery, the quality of its operation depends upon the qualifications of the men who operate it.

With that in mind, the North Carolina Courts Commission has followed up its design for a unified, statewide system of justice with a far-reaching revision of the present method for judicial selection.

Its major features would be the elimination of direct election of judges, strict limitations upon the governor's power to appoint, and nomination of prospective judges by a panel of lawyers and laymen. Judges would be retained in office, or ejected, on a nonpartisan, yes-or-no vote by citizens.

The proposal is the principal one of three in the Courts Commission's report, just placed in the hands of 1971 General Assembly members.

A second recommendation would create a Judicial Standards Commission with power to censure or remove from office judges it found incapable or unfit. A third would set mandatory retirement at 72 for appellate justices and judges, and at 70 for trial judges.

Constitution Changes Involved

Each of the three would require an amendment to the State Constitution. If approved by the legislature, these would be submitted at the 1972 general election and, upon a favorable vote, become effective January 1, 1973.

Bills to carry out the Courts Commission's recommendations will be coming along shortly, said Senator J. Ruffin Bailey of Wake. As Chairman both of the commission and the Senate Courts and Judicial Districts Committee, he will be a key figure in promoting legislative support for the changes.

Bailey noted that the 1969 legislature instructed the commission to look at all phases of judicial selection, discipline and removal compensation and retirement.

"We've given these matters a lot of serious study. I'm sure the General Assembly will want to consider them very carefully," Bailey said.

That the commission was moving towards some kind of merit selection basis, patterned after the so-called "Missouri Plan," has been known for some time. Reaction thus far, Bailey commented, has been generally good.

Plenty Debate Likely

There's a potential storm of controversy in any effort to change the present system of election of judges, as has been demonstrated in the past.

The commission's report carried the footnote dissent of one member, A. A. Zollicoffer, Jr., of Henderson, to the recommendation on selection of judges. Zollicoffer, an attorney and former legislator, took the position that the recommended change is "neither necessary nor in the best interest of the administration of justice in North Carolina," the footnote said.

Since Missouri pioneered the nonpartisan merit approach for selection of judges, some 20 other states have adopted some version of the plan for their courts. Experience has been highly favorable, the North Carolina study group found.

It cited two principal reasons: "The plan guarantees qualified judges by screening out the obviously unfit and mediocre.

"The plan increases the available pool of qualified candidates from which nominees can be selected."

Removing Political Aspects

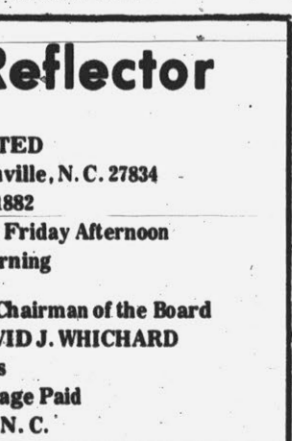

It achieves the first by placing responsibility for nomination in the hands of a commission, composed of lawyers and laymen, whose sole concern is qualifications.

The second follows when elimination of political considerations makes more capable persons willing to serve.

Anticipating resistance to removal of judges from direct election, the report took pains to point out the great majority of North Carolina judges now come to the bench through appointment.

"The point is that the label of a democratically chosen judiciary serves to

A 20th Century Court

The U.S. Supreme Court on January 14 handed down another of its Draconian opinions, with a blithe and reckless disregard to consequences. The Court's abuse of its power should not be lost in the flood of news.

This was a case involving the city of Canton, Miss., a little town of 10,000 persons that sleeps off Interstate-95 some 40 miles north of Jackson. The question was whether Canton, in its aldermanic election of 1969 had violated the Voting Rights Act of 1965. A majority of the Court found the city guilty as charged.

The 1965 act was passed to prevent discrimination against Southern Negroes in their exercise of the right to register and to vote. Few persons will quarrel with that purpose. I am a Southerner myself, and know well the shenanigans, stratagems, and contemptible devices that once were widely employed in the South to keep the black man from the polls. These tricks and snares were brazenly unconstitutional, and they were unworthy of a great region that prides itself on fealty to the Constitution.

Yet we have not, supposedly, reached the point at which good ends may be reached by unconstitutional means. But that was what Congress attempted in Section 5 of the act. This contains the humiliating provision that the affected Southern localities must obtain Federal approval before they can seek "to administer any voting qualification or prerequisite to voting, or standard, practice or procedure with respect to voting different from that in force or effect on Nov. 1, 1964."

This was the situation in Canton: In 1962, well before the Voting Rights Act of 1965, Mississippi passed a law requiring "at large" elections in all municipalities. Ironically, this was then thought to be progress; it reflected the very best advice of the very best political scientists, all of whom abjure ward politics. In November of 1964, this was the standard legally "in force and effect" in Canton; but apparently by sheer inadvertence, the town mistakenly elected its aldermen in 1965 by the old ward system. In 1969, Canton sought to do things properly, by elections at large. And by failing to ask John Mitchell's permission, Canton fell into sin.

The town has but four polling places. At the time of the 1965 election, two of these were on private property; the

Public Forum

(Letters submitted for public forum must be limited to 300 words)

To The Editor

I think you owe your readers a clarification in the matter of some grossly inaccurate statements in your lead article of January 20, 1971, by Paul Corcoran concerning malnutrition and the disease of rickets. I must wonder if the other three articles of the series are as inaccurate. While there may be many children in this country suffering from malnutrition, not a one of them developed rickets because of it. I can refer you to a popular article as recent as the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN magazine for December 1970. Rickets, in fact, results from a lack of solar ultraviolet radiation (sunlight) which is necessary for the production of a hormone in the body; this hormone directs calcium salts to be laid down in growing bones. Without enough mineral salts in growing bones, the crippling deformities of rickets are the consequence. In smoky industrial cities of the last century, rickets was the first air-pollution disease.

The social problems of this country are great enough. If we are going to find answers to these problems, we must direct the correct questions as to their cause.

Sincerely yours,

To The Editor:

Pitt County now can thank the voters who something over a year ago rejected the proposed general sales tax increase. Our present difficulties are far less than they would have been had the proposal been adopted.

Our representatives in government should trust the people and should remember that they are public servants — not masters.

On the question of a 33 1-3 percent increase in the general sales tax, not only has the North Carolina Supreme Court spoken, but the people have spoken as well and earlier than the court. Messrs. Horton Rountree, Sam Bundy, Vernon White, and Julian Allbrook should take note of the fact that they have a mandate from the voters in three-fourths of the counties of North Carolina NOT to support an effort in the legislature to impose statewide a 33 1-3 percent increase in the general sales tax.

These gentlemen do not represent merely property owners but all the people, including both property owners and non-property owners.

Surely public office holding is not easy, and I consider it most worthy. But in this instance it should be both easy and a pleasure for these legislators and their colleagues to carry out the expressed will of the people by voting against any attempt in the legislature to impose a statewide 33 1-3 percent increase in the general sales tax.

Dynamatic Executives Wanted

By ELMER ROESSNER

While the iron ball has swung in the executive suite as well as in the secretarial pool and the plant, there is still a shortage of effective executives. In fact, the demand for men who can really perform is probably greater than it was in the lush days of 1968.

Tomorrow's Wall Street Journal, judging by recent performances, will carry four pages of display, not want ads, for executives: controllers, vice presidents for finance, real estate, security analysis; general managers; directors of industrial engineering, systems analysts. A recent advertiser was the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, with a 5-by-8-inch display, seeking financial analysis in the power and water field.

Two major reasons for the urgent demand for top executives are the desire to replace men who have either fumbled their jobs or are being made the goats for declines in company business, and the desire to find men who can change a slumping company into a profitable entity. There are, you know, some corporations that despite the recession, are making millions.

Lures For The Giants

One difficulty in acquiring such men is the problem of payment. A $100,000-a-year raise may not interest a man in changing corporations since the government will take most of it in taxes. And stock options have lost some of their attractiveness because stocks are no longer generally rising and because the tax changes of 1964 have taken some of the gravy out of stock option deals.

Nevertheless, stock options are being used to attract top executives. A survey by the Conference Board indicates that 75 per cent of the companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange offer stock options to executives.

However, a tendency to limit the options to only the men at the very top and who materially affect company profits was noted.

It was also noted that even though profits on such options have been restricted, they bestow a feeling of prestige. Phantom Stock Dun's Magazine recently reported a rise in "phantom stock options" as a means of attracting business geniuses. The phantom option plan consists of awarding imaginary shares of stock to top men and paying them bonuses equal to what those shares would earn. Some plans increase the amount of imaginary stock each year.

The magazine reported that in 1969 alone chairman Edmund F. Martin of Bethlehem Steel drew $95,573 in phantom dividends; chairman Lamont duPont Copeland of duPont received $80,761; and chairman Birny Mason, Jr. of Union Carbide got $66,000.

Phantom dividends have two advantages: the executive does not have to risk any of his own money, as he would in exercising an option; and stock holders can complain that their equities are being diluted.

Blight Eyed, Farmers Plan Big Crop Of Feed Corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers say they intend to plant enough corn this spring to insure plentiful livestock feed supplies next winter if they have a normal growing season.

The question is to what extent southern leaf blight will affect this year's corn crop.

But if damage is held to a minimum, farmers say they will plant enough acres to grow a bumper crop of the important feed grain, a key factor in the nation's food production.

A special spring planting report, issued Monday by the Agriculture Department, shows that 70.1 million acres of corn will be planted, about 5 million more than in 1970. Allowing for up to 10 million acres for forage and other non-grain uses, this could mean 60 million acres of corn for harvest next fall. Last year 57.4 million were harvested for grain.

If yields are normal around 80 bushels per acre the acreage could mean a crop of 4.8 billion bushels this year, about what the government experts would like to rebuild stockpiles and provide ample supplies for procamouflage a predominantly appointive system — in which the appointive official's personal judgment is legally uncontrolled and absolute," it said.

"The Governor of North Carolina has more power to appoint judges than the President of the United States, although, constitutionally, the federal system is appointive and the North Carolina system is elective."

All judges, from district courts to Supreme Court, would be covered by the new selection procedure. It would extend to the special Superior Court judges, named to fixed terms by the Governor and traditionally a significant part of his patronage.

The 1971 planting estimate was a special report taken to help growers determine their 1971 operations and to assist USDA officials in setting final formulas for this year's government crop programs.

But corn blight — a fungus disease — is a clear threat. Last year it helped trim corn output nearly 15 per cent, and authorities say if weather conditions are right, it could devastate the 1971 crop.

The corn planting estimate was a little short of what USDA spokesmen had hoped for, a six per cent gain from 1970 instead of the desired 7.6 per cent acreage increase.

"In areas hard hit by southern corn leaf blight last year," the Crop Reporting Board said,

"there was some uncertainty among growers because of the availability of blight-tolerant resistant seed corn. Some growers stated their intentions were based on the availability of blight-tolerant seed."

Therefore, if blight-resistant seed is not as plentiful as farmers think, some will have to revise their planting intentions.

Planting intentions for other crops — most of them related to the feed supply — include: Soybeans 45.9 million acres in the states surveyed, up 7 per cent from 1970; barley 10.6 million, up 5 per cent; and sorghum grain 20.2 million, up 17 per cent.

Planting intentions for oats, however totaled 23.3 million acres, down 3 per cent from 1970.

Spring wheat producers expect to plant 2.5 million acres of durum, up 20 per cent from last year; and 10.5 million acres of other spring types, 16 per cent more than last year.

Upland cotton plantings this year were estimated at 11.8 million acres, about the same as in 1970 and 1969.

Change Signals At Intersection

The North Carolina State Highway Commission is currently changing the traffic signals at the intersection of First and Greene Streets.

According to Phil Dickerson, division traffic engineer with the commission, cars now traveling south on Greene Street have a protective left turn signal on First Street which is indicated by a green arrow.

"When changed, the vehicles traveling south on Greene Street will still have a green arrow but when the green arrow goes off a green ball (the regular light) will come on," Dickerson explained. "When the green ball is on, the traffic moving north on Greene Street will begin to move."

He explained that vehicles still remaining in the left turn lane may then turn left when north-bound traffic has cleared.

"In effect," Dickerson said, "this will allow more time for vehicles turning left on First Street."

The new signal will be turned on Thursday morning, Dickerson noted.

Finally, their supply lines to eastern Cambodia are infinitely more hazardous than they were in South Vietnam. Communist troops must reconstruct from scratch an entire logistics system, with base camps, hospitals, and ammunition dumps, before they can risk an across-the-border campaign.

That's why Presidential advisers count on the enemy's need of a full dry season before the assault can begin.

In this reckoning, President Nixon is betting on the capability of Cambodian and South Vietnamese forces, with all-out U. S. help in the air, to keep the enemy off balance at last through the present dry season. If he's wrong, he confronts political danger — consolidation of enemy bases this spring and the attack against South Vietnam in the spring of 1972, in the midst of the Presidential campaign and the last spasm of U. S. troop withdrawals.

owners declined permission for use of their premises in 1969, so new places were selected. A third polling place was too small for voting machines, so it too was abandoned. The fourth was shifted from the court house to a nearby public school to accommodate the voters. Canton did not take up these piddling changes with the Attorney General, and here again the town invited calamity.

Canton's third transgression has the gravest ramifications. Between 1965 and 1969, the town annexed three small areas. Nothing in the record suggests that these annexations were motivated in any degree by a design to discriminate against blacks. Their incidental effect, however, was to add 92 black voters and 331 white voters, which still left Canton with 2,794 black voters and 2,052 whites.

In its opinion of January 14, a majority of the Court ruled that such routine and innocuous annexation proceedings, consummated with no "respect to voting" whatever, nevertheless demanded prior Federal sanction. It is doubtful that Congress ever intended such an interpretation; it is certain that such interference with wholly local government, absent a motive to discriminate, is beyond the congressional reach.

The case now has been sent back to a lower Federal court to determine if Canton will have to undertake the expense of new municipal elections. Other consequences bulk much larger. Over the past five years, hundreds of Southern towns and cities have routinely annexed territory; South Carolina alone has recorded more than 40 annexations in a single year. And in virtually none of these cases has prior Federal approval been asked. Are such town and city councils legally in office? Are their bond issues valid? These are questions of immense importance to the communities caught in the high court's dragnet; but the high court couldn't care less.

Godwin Unfamiliar With ECU Progress

By REP. H. HORTON ROUNTREE

An event of far-reaching impact occurred last week when the North Carolina Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the one-cent sales tax, which was authorized by the 1969 General Assembly as a local option. Twenty-six of the State's one hundred counties voted in the tax. The problem, on its face, does not seem to be too serious. However, most of the counties that had voted for the tax either had reduced ad valorem tax rates or had let contracts for public buildings (schools, hospitals, courthouse expansions, etc.) relying on this additional revenue. Pitt County commissioners had made arrangements for the voters of this county to express their opinions on this tax in February. The referendum has been called off. However, other means of paying for necessary services will have to be found. Chances are good that legislation will be introduced in the General Assembly for the state to come to the aid of the counties to alleviate their desperate plight.

Of special interest to Pitt County Citizens were the remarks of Speaker of the House

Phil Godwin regarding the proposed medical school at East Carolina University. The Speaker was not familiar with the steps that had been taken to implement the establishment of the medical school. Also, he did not know that a report on accreditation of the medical school by the Council on Medical Education of the American Medical Association will be made later this week.

The opponents have sounded off on the medical school, while the proponents have awaited this report to see if the school qualifies. It is my personal belief that this school is needed to alleviate some of the areas' to lose them? The need is here and get priorities for the tax dollar. Eastern North Carolina would receive more services from a medical school than from some other programs already financed by the state.

The N. C. Senate is organized and is now waiting for the House committees to be appointed in order to begin deliberations on the more than 50 bills that have already been introduced. Speaker Phil Godwin will complete his appointments on Monday or Tuesday and work will begin immediately. The all-important joint appropriations committee has met several times.

Some people say we can't afford another medical school. What do those same people say about supporting the School for the Arts in Winston-Salem, where 65 percent of the students are from outside North Carolina? A zoo? A six million dollar art museum? A symphony orchestra? I am not saying that these things are not desirable. But...first things first. When a limited amount of money is available, I will support the needs of the people.

One of the main functions of government is to render services

Announce Rules For Hogs In Area Of Quarantine

Special rules concerning the inspection and marketing of hogs in the hog cholera quarantine area of Pitt County have been announced by federal veterinarians working locally.

According to county extension chairman Edwin L. Yancey, the Simpson-Black Jack-Grimesland area is affected. Under the quarantine restrictions, Yancey said, only market hogs may be moved. They must be inspected and marked on the farm and moved directly to slaughter, he added. Federal veterinarians will inspect all herds which have been placed under individual quarantine (all herds within approximately two miles of the confirmed cholera outbreak).

Yancey said that vocational agricultural teachers may be called upon for inspections outside this area but advanced notice of expected movement of hogs is necessary to allow inspectors to arrange their schedules for getting to a farm. It was announced that market hogs from the quarantine area may be sold at most markets in the area and at local auction markets on designated "slaughter days."

The extension chairman pointed out that animals being sold to out-of-state markets must be inspected by a veterinarian. Local or federal veterinarians may be called for these inspections, Yancey said.

He urged all persons desiring additional information about the hog cholera quarantine or inspection procedures to contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

Pitt Office Advised To Return Items

RALEIGH (AP) - A Senate Judiciary committee was told today that North Carolina now has no law under which to prosecute peddlers of allegedly obscene material.

Burley Mitchell, a member of the state attorney general's staff, said rulings by three judge federal panels in November and again last week had struck down the state's obscenity laws.

Mitchell said that earlier in the week he had reluctantly advised the Pitt County's sheriff's office to return some material it had seized as obscene because the state had no grounds on which to prosecute.

The committee is considering a bill introduced by Sen. Jyles T. Coggins, DWake, which would make it illegal "to intentionally disseminate obscenity in any public place."

Mitchell, who reviewed the bill for the committee, said it was drafted "with an eye to all federal court decisions" and includes all tests of obscenity handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court so far.

The committee agreed to hear comments on the bill next week from an attorney for a movie theater company.

New Signal At Plant Entrance

A two-phase traffic light has been temporarily installed at the Burroughs-Wellcome plant entrance on the Bethel Highway.

According to George Eason, assistant area traffic engineer with the North Carolina Highway Commission, the light stays green on N.C. 11 unless someone is leaving Burroughs-Wellcome. As long as there is traffic leaving the facility the light will turn green at 50-second intervals. Eason said the light is considered temporary until the Eastern Bypass is completed in that area.

"It was taking employees so long to get on N.C. 11 that a traffic signal had to be installed," Eason explained.

Tough St. Francis To Invade Minges

Pitt Tech Nips King's, 85-83

BELVOIR — Pitt Technical Institute failed to crack the 100-point barrier for the first time in six games last night, and had to battle to pull out an 85-83 victory over King's Business College.

The contest was tight during the first 10 minutes of play, but King's finally broke away from a 23-23 tie with Pitt. From there, King's pulled away and built up a 15-point lead, 50-35, but in the closing minutes of the half, Pitt cut it back to 52-41 at intermission.

In the second half, Pitt Tech continued to battle back and finally pushed out into the lead during the final half of the last period. They built up a seven point lead but King's fought back and regained the lead with three minutes left.

Pitt recaptured it, and from there til the end, froze the ball and used the foul line to inch away again and hold on for the win.

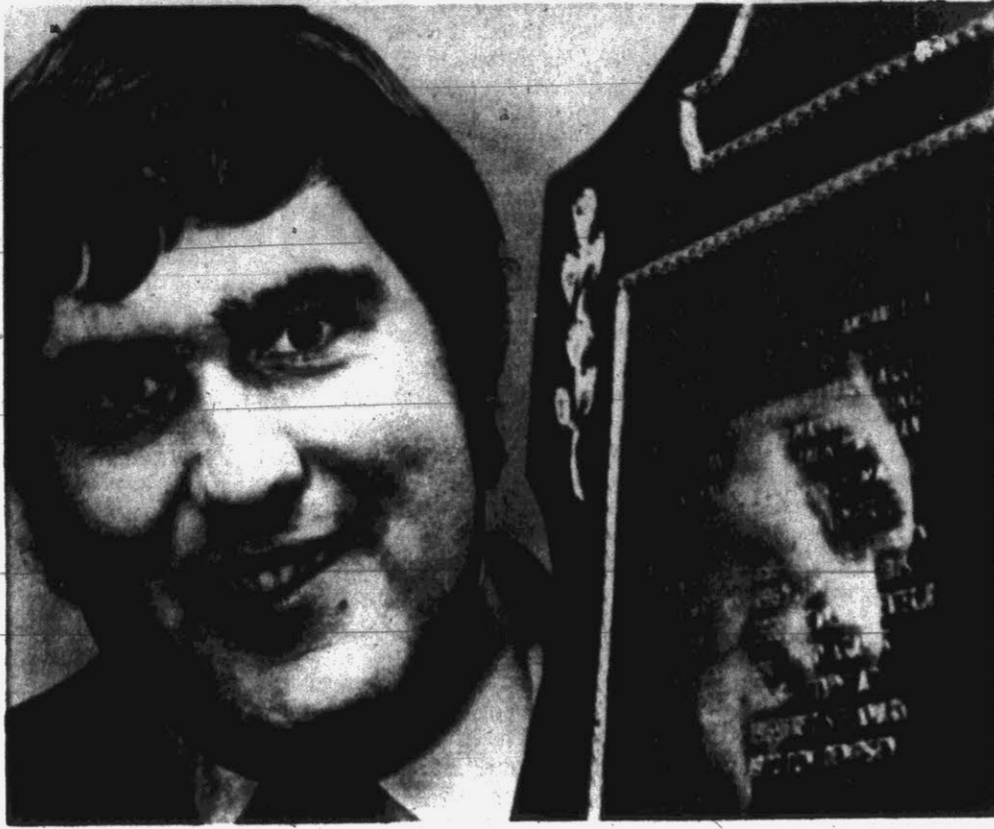

The victory leaves Pitt with a 9-3 overall mark.

Eddie Stokes led Pitt with 27 points, while Angelo Hooker added 21 and Leslie Saunders had 17.

King's was paced by F. Morris with 32, while James Spricas had 18, Brook Ellis had 11 and Ray Pittman had 10.

Pitt plays host to Fayetteville on Thursday.

Rose High School captured its ninth wrestling victory of the season last night, pinning Rocky Mount, 33-15. The meet did not count in the conference standings.

Rose thus far holds a 9-1 record.

The Rampants captured every match but three, and actually lost only once. Two of the three Gryphon wins came by forfeits when Rose wrestlers did not meet the weight.

A scheduled match with New Bern on Thursday night has been postponed. The next scheduled match for the Rampants is Thursday, February 4, when Rose entertains Goldsboro.

VMI Drops 15th Game In A Row

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Virginia Military Institute basketball Coach Mike Schuler has to be well up in the running as the optimist of the year.

"The players are snakebit," said Schuler after the winless Keydets dropped a school-record 15th consecutive game Monday night 59-45 to Eastern Illinois.

"We just can't seem to get the good break."

But Schuler, whose team seems destined to finish in the Southern Conference basement, said, "The opportunity will come. We just haven't gotten there yet."

In an effort to keep the Keydets out of the record book, Schuler had his team play a controlled offense the first half, going only for layups, and VMI shot 63 per cent from the floor but trailed by 20-16.

With 13 minutes left, Schuler opened up the offense and the Keydets finished the game with a season-high 55 per cent accuracy but they also turned the ball over 22 times to just nine for Eastern Illinois. Thirteen of the lost possessions came after intermission.

"If I had it to do over again," said Schuler, "I'd probably play the game the same way. Eastern Illinois has a good team, but we can't expect to beat anybody with the number of turnovers we had."

Schuler said, "Our main problem is that we don't have a good ball handler to get the ball to the open man and that hurt us."

VMI's Jan Essenberg led all scorers with 15 points, but Eastern Illinois—which shot 44 per cent from the floor—put three players in double figures, Scott Keeve getting 14, Dave Sitton 11 and Bill Thommen 10.

The game was the only one Monday night for conference teams. In tonight's only action, league-leading Davidson will put its 8-6 record on the line against St. John's at the Charlotte Coliseum. The Wildcats have lost five of their last nine starts.

Don Schollander, winner of four gold medals in the 1964 Olympics, coaches the swimming and water polo teams at Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Ore.

Dempsey Named Most Courageous Athlete

By Ralph Bernstein
Associated Press Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "My parents knocked the word can't out of my life. They taught me to compete."

So said 250-pound Tom Dempsey, who refused to let half a kicking foot and a stub for a right hand keep him from becoming a place kicking star in the National Football League.

Dempsey was honored Monday night with the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association's unique award of Most Courageous Athlete of the year (1970).

Dempsey, who kicks for the New Orleans Saints, was joined on the dias by Bobby Orr of the National Hockey League's Boston Bruins, feted as Professional Athlete of 1970, and Notre Dame's Joe Theismann, saluted as the association's outstanding Amateur Athlete of last year.

It was the hulking Dempsey, however, who stole the show. He recalled his first field goal try as a high school kid.

"I just walked up and kicked it. It shocked me the way it took off. I thought, maybe I've got something here."

He sure did. His determination to overcome the foot and hand birth defects was climaxed last season when in the final two seconds of the game against the Detroit Lions he booted a record 63-yard field goal. It gave the Saints a 19-17 miracle victory over the Lions.

Dempsey quoted the Lions' great tackle, Alex Karras, as saying, "When you kick from your 37-yard line you're supposed to kick it to the nearest goal not the furthest."

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — An official United States team will meet a team from Africa in track and field games next July 16-17 at Duke University's Wade Stadium.

Dempsey started kicking field goal with only a sock covered by tape. Later, he graduated to a shoe. Now he wears a specially made $200 shoe he helped design. The shoe was approved by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle and survived a protest by the Dallas Cowboys' Tex Schramm last season.

The 6-foot-1 Dempsey remembered that his Little League baseball coach used to make a place on the team for the handicapped kid. "Let him play, he tries hard, they said. Then my high school coach forced me to be a better athlete. You feel sorry for yourself, don't you, he goaded me." He challenged me to make a place for myself on the team." Dempsey responded by making the all-conference high school team as a defensive tackle. Later, he tossed the shot 50 feet.

Dempsey has become an image to handicapped youngsters around the world. He's received 4,500 letters since that fabulous kick against Detroit. He answers them all, including a picture. He's chairman of the Louisiana State Easter Seal program.

"I don't know if I have any more courage than the next guy," he said of the award. "I just set my mind to do something and went out and did it. I don't know if that's more courage than anyone else."

White Oak Nips Panther Matmen

BETHEL — White Oak High School captured its second straight two-point victory over North Pitt High School last night in a wrestling match, 30-28.

The two teams split the matches, 6-6, but White Oak got pins in each of its wins, while the Panthers managed but five, and that was the difference.

North Pitt hosts Southern Wayne on Thursday.

A humbled, but hopefully stronger East Carolina University basketball team returns to the hardwood Wednesday night in Minges Coliseum against one of the tougher teams on its schedule, the Frankies of St. Francis.

The Pirates, who were entrenched atop the Southern Conference standings this time last week, now find themselves in fifth place after dropping two conference games last week, the last a 74-65 humiliation at the hands of William & Mary when they blew a 10-point lead in the final 10 minutes of play.

Following the game, Coach Tom Quinn unburdened himself to the locked-in Pirates in the dressing room. And now he hopes that the Bucs will be ready to play.

They had a tough opponent in the Frankies, despite their 10-7 record. "They have to be one of the two best teams we've played this year," Quinn said.

"They have excellent inside size with Mike Copeland (7-0) and Gary Copeland (6-8). Then they can play any one of three in the corner, 6-5 John Mills, 6-4 Allen Spencer or Sam Sloan. This gives them tremendous depth," he added.

Rounding out the team are two guards that Quinn feels may be the best pair of guards the Bucs have faced. They include 6-3 Joe Hazinsky, and Kevin Porter, the nation's 24th leading scorer.

"Porter is probably the best all-around guard in this part of the country," the coach said.

"They are extremely tough on the boards, but we managed to beat them in our first meeting," Quinn noted. The Bucs however, didn't win on the scoreboard, although they put on a great rally before bowing, 71-67. They trailed by nine at the half, and fell behind by as much as 13 before eventually coming back to within one point.

"Their fast break and their penetration by Porter hurt us," Quinn said, "as well as their good zone defense that cut us off inside."

Quinn added that he thought the Frankies would be the most exciting team that has come to Greenville so far this year.

But regarding his own team, the coach also had some thoughts. "We expect Dave Franklin, Terry Davis and Dave McNeill to play more, a lot more."

"We are at the midpoint of the season, and we still have some problems to take care of. We have to decide on the tempo of play and go with it. We are having to look to our young players to carry us, and there should be no pressure on them," he said. These include Al Faber, Franklin and McNeill. "They are loose, and should gain quite a bit of experience."

Quinn said the Pirates have looked good at times, but that they haven't been consistent. "From here out, when players don't perform, we will go with others," the coach added.

The surprising thing to Quinn is that the Bucs are doing some things well that he expected to be problem areas. "But we are also having problems where we didn't expect to have them. We have to go back and get in some basic fundamentals. Our floor leadership has been lacking, and our one-on-one defense has not been up to expectations. We have to put successful emphasis on team play both offensively and defensively as we have during the past two years."

"The team has to realize that whatever is to be done, they have to do," Quinn said.

And what that is, Quinn hopes to start learning Wednesday night.

"I still believe that we have the players who can win the conference championship," the coach said. "We may not have a chance at first place during the regular season, but we can win the tournament. It's just a question of desire and team play."

Preceding the Pirate-Frankie game, the East Carolina freshmen, 5-2 on the year, will play host to Wayne Community College, starting at 5:45 p.m.

Fieldcrest In Industrial Lead

A 77-24 victory by Fieldcrest Mills over WNCT, coupled with National Cash Register's 58-49 win over State Highway, propelled Fieldcrest into sole possession of first place in the Industrial Basketball League last night. In the other game, Wachovia Bank trimmed Vermont American, 67-30.

Fieldcrest now posts a 6-1 record, while State Highway and NCR are both 5-2. Wachovia is 4-3, followed by WNCT, 1-6, and Vermont America, 0-7.

In the opening game, Fieldcrest jumped out into a big lead in the first half, and was never in any trouble. After taking a 34-14 halftime lead, Fieldcrest outthrew WNCT, 43-10 in the second half.

Wachovia also jumped off to a big lead in its game and never had any difficulty in posting its win. The held a halftime lead of 32-9, and then rolled to a 35-21 edge in the second half of the game.

Myron Staton led Wachovia with 25, while Jerry Smith had 21 and Walter Jones had 10. McGowan and Fostue each had 10 for Vermont American.

In the final game, State Highway inched out into a 29-26 lead in the first half. NCR came back strong in the second half, however, and outscored the Highwaymen, 32-20, and that was enough for the win.

Kelly Witherington led NCR with 18 points, while Bill Hall had 15 and Frank Corbett had 14. State Highway was led by Phil Page with 17, while Preston Mills and Clyde Elks each had 10.

Marquette Takes Over First In AP Cage Poll

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
Marquette, Number One.
You expected somebody else at the top of the college basketball rankings?
The mercurial Midwesterners whistled by UCLA's fallen angels on the power of 22 first-place votes and a commanding block of 638 points to land the coveted role of No. 1 today.
Making it an easy slide for the Warriors was UCLA's first loss in 20 games, and only fifth in five seasons—an 89-82 blockbuster to sky-high Notre Dame Saturday.

The Warriors, meanwhile, struck down DePaul 73-51 with muscle and finesse for their 26th straight victory, and 52nd in a row at home.
A nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters handed the Bruins only six first-place ballots, and a total of 594 points, actually more than their nation-topping total of 552 last week.
It was the first time out of the driver's seat for UCLA since winning the 1969-70 national championship and the voting almost sent the benumbed Bruins skittering to third as one ballot named them as No. 8.
Southern California, the "other" school in Los Angeles, reclaimed the No. 3 position with six first place ballots and 588 points after an idle week.
Notre Dame, despite its shenanigans Saturday and exhortations by Coach Johnny Dee that "we are No. 1," took two short hops from No. 9 to No. 7 to replace Western Kentucky, banking no first place tallies and 296 points.
Penn held onto fourth with 458 points after bombing Temple and Villanova for the Quakers' 15th straight victory this year.
Kansas knocked off Iowa State and Oklahoma State to keep the No. 5 position with 377 points and Jacksonville remained No. 6, flicking away Furman and Mercer to rope 309 points.
Tennessee remained No. 8 after beating Alabama, Utah state, which had the only other first-place vote, moved up from a 12th-place tie to No. 9 after beating Utah and Brigham Young, and South Carolina completed the Top Ten picture moving up from No. 11 despite a week's layoff.

Western Kentucky, victimized by Murray State, tumbled five places to No. 12.
The Second Ten also included, No. 11 Kentucky; No. 13 Oregon; No. 14 LaSalle; 15th-rated Virginia; 16th-ranked Villanova; No. 17 Duquesne; No. 18 Illinois; No. 19 Murray State and 20th-ranked North Carolina.
Duquesne, Illinois and Murray State were the week's new additions to the Top Twenty, replacing dropouts St. Bonaventure, No. 10 last week; Fordham, No. 17, and Indiana, No. 18.
Here are the Top Twenty college basketball teams with first-place votes in parentheses and total points on a 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8 etc.

Pressure On Haywood

SEATTLE (AP) — Spencer Haywood says his controversial move from the Denver Rockets to the Seattle SuperSonics has put him under intense pressure.
"I haven't adjusted to the pressure yet," the 6-foot-9 maverick said Monday. "I have this feeling that somebody might come up to me and say 'That's it — that's the end of the game.'"
Haywood said the impending federal court decision on his future with the National Basketball Association looms over him.
"Also, I had to get back into shape quickly," the former American Basketball Association star said. "People were waiting to see me do bad, so I had to push myself no matter how bad I felt."
Haywood said he wants to find his niche on the Seattle team and settle into it. He said he wants to fit into the offense rather than take it over.
Haywood said he believes he disrupted the team unity — "being together," he calls it — when he signed the highly disputed contract with the Sonics.
"I think in another week or so we'll have things really together," he said. "We're practicing more because of my situation."
Haywood said he thinks his performance as a Sonic has been "lousy." He has scored 30 points in each of the last two Sonics games, but that doesn't satisfy him.
"I didn't play winning basketball," he said Monday after the Philadelphia 76ers had swamped Seattle 145-119. "I didn't do the things that help my team."
That game, like all the others since his acquisition, was protested, but Haywood said he sees the challenges as legalities and not as expressions of the opposing players.

LSU Surprises Tennessee Vols

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
Pistol Pete Maravich is long gone but Louisiana State isn't exactly in mourning.
Maravich, college basketball's alltime scoring king and the leading point man in the nation for three straight seasons, has graduated to the pros and you'd think the loss of so potent a shooter would leave LSU crippled.
But the Bayou Tigers are holding up quite nicely under the strain, thank you. In fact, they whipped eighth-ranked Tennessee 80-70 in a Southeastern Conference upset Monday night that knocked the Vols out of first place in the SEC.
Bill Newton led LSU with 27 points and Nelson Isley added 23 for the Tigers, who shot 60 per cent from the field and ran their season's record to 8-5 and 4-2 in the conference. Tennessee is 12-3 and 5-2 in SEC play.
Kentucky, No. 11 in the nation, moved into first place in the SEC with an 86-73 victory over Alabama. The Wildcats, 12-3 for the season and 6-1 in conference play, shot 56 per cent from the field and were led by Mike Casey and Tom Parker, who had 17 points apiece.
Casey sat out the final seven minutes with a badly sprained ankle.
Elsewhere in the SEC Monday night, Johnny Neumann, who succeeded Maravich as the nation's top scorer, fired 35 points for Mississippi but the Rebs bowed to Florida's balanced attack, 106-86.
Tony Miller led Florida with 28 points as all five Gator starters hit double figures. Neumann's output was seven points below his average of 42.
Jacksonville used towering Artis Gilmore and Pembroke Burrows to control the backboards and the sixth-ranked Dolphins wore down scrappy Southern Alabama 91-76.
Gilmore, who is 7-foot-2, grabbed 19 rebounds and scored 15 points, one more point than Vaughn Wedeking, Ernie Fleming and Burrows had for Jacksonville. Andy Denny led the losers with 22 points.
Jim McDaniels, 7-0, poured in 31 points and Western Kentucky, No. 12, walloped Austin Peay 117-72. The Hilltoppers shot 55 per cent from the field compared to Austin Peay's 28 per cent, and led 61-33 at half-

Unknown Amazes Track World

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Less than a year ago, Dr. Delano Meriwether read a book on track and after watching meets on television decided "I can beat those guys."
What the good doctor was implying was that he, a 27-year-old hematologist, without any training or background in track, could go out and beat such Olympic standouts as Mel Pender and Charlie Greene and other world-calibre sprinters.
And the amazing Dr. Meriwether did just that.
After a few outdoor races he re-read the book titled Sports Illustrated Book of Track and Field: Running Events, written by Jim Dunaway, and with his wife, drove the 20 miles from his Baltimore home to the Washington CYO meet at the Cole Field House in Maryland for his indoor debut.
A stranger to the indoor track scene he admitted, "I was worried and felt sort of out of place but the carnival scene relaxed me and the crowd was warm."
Outdoors he had run a best run of 9.4 seconds the 100 yards and 21.1 for 220 yards.
He reported for the CYO 60-yard dash heat and came in second but still none of the other runners knew who he was except some noticed his odd attire which included yellow swim trunks, a white hospital shirt and matching yellow and white striped suspenders.
One of the competitors figured he was a freshman from a local school with his outfit. Meriwether says he wears the getup "purely for gimmickry. I figure I'm out there to entertain people and I decided this would be my official outfit and I won't change it."
In the final, Meriwether, an admitted poor starter, was left at the blocks and already two steps behind in the 60-yard dash. But once he started he went like a jet and wound up winning by a photo over Pender. "I was gone," Pender recalled. "But midway in the race he caught me and believe me he was flying. His start is awful but with a little coaching he could be outstanding."
Two weeks ago Meriwether went to the Sunbelt Games in Los Angeles and again, despite his poor start, finished a flying second to Madagascar's Jean-Louis Ravelomananeso, each caught in 6.1 for the 60.
In his last race, a 50-yard sprint Saturday in Philadelphia, Meriwether finished fifth in a six-man field. The race was won by Pender in 5.3.
Still it is amazing that Meriwether, without a coach, has done this well.
"The indoor meets are really a bit short for me because of my starting problems but I need all the experience I can get," said Meriwether a graduate of Michigan State and the first Negro ever admitted to the Duke Medical School.
"I think the 100 or 220-yard dash would be my best events," he added.
"He'll be rougher in the longer races," Pender agreed. "If he can get some proper coaching I'd say he could be one of our best sprinters. Right now he's a good runner and a fine gentleman. He's an asset to the sport."
The only running the personable doctor had done previously, "was just sort of racing kids down the block when I was a kid in Charleston," he said. "My high school didn't have a team

Coke Regains City Loop Lead

Coca-Cola slipped back into first place in the City Basketball League last night with a 90-36 victory over College View. At the same time, Big Value Discount of Farmville was upsetting Book Exchange, 81-69, and Coffman's was ripping Hallow's Distributing, 113-42.
Coke now has a 6-1 record, a game ahead of Coffman's and Book Exchange, both 5-2. Farmville has taken over fourth with a 3-4 mark, followed by Hallow's, 2-5, and College View, 0-7.
In the opener, Coffman's rolled away to a 45-15 lead in the first half of play. Then, in the second half, they poured in 68 points, while Hallow's could get only 27.
Bruce Tucker led Coffman's with 28, while Charles Swanner had 25, Gene Rackley had 22, Joe Gaddis had 12 and Larry Graham had 10. No one hit double figures for Hallow's.

In the second game, Big Value slipped out into a 33-30 lead in the first period. But in the second frame, they began to pull away, and outhit Book Exchange, 48-39, to take the upset victory.
Everett Cameron led Farmville with 28 points, while Ronald Parker had 19, Charles Purvis had 12 and Charles Leaman had 11. Dickie Allen and Greg Cross each had 19, while Greg Holmes had 16 for Farmville.
Winding up the evening, Coke rushed out to a 42-16 lead in the first half. They then outhit College View, 48-20 in the final half to win going away.
Jim Modlin led Coke with 28 points, while Wayne Hardee had 19, John Lynn and Lynn Green each had 12 and Doyle Daughtry had 10. John Childers had 19 to lead College View.

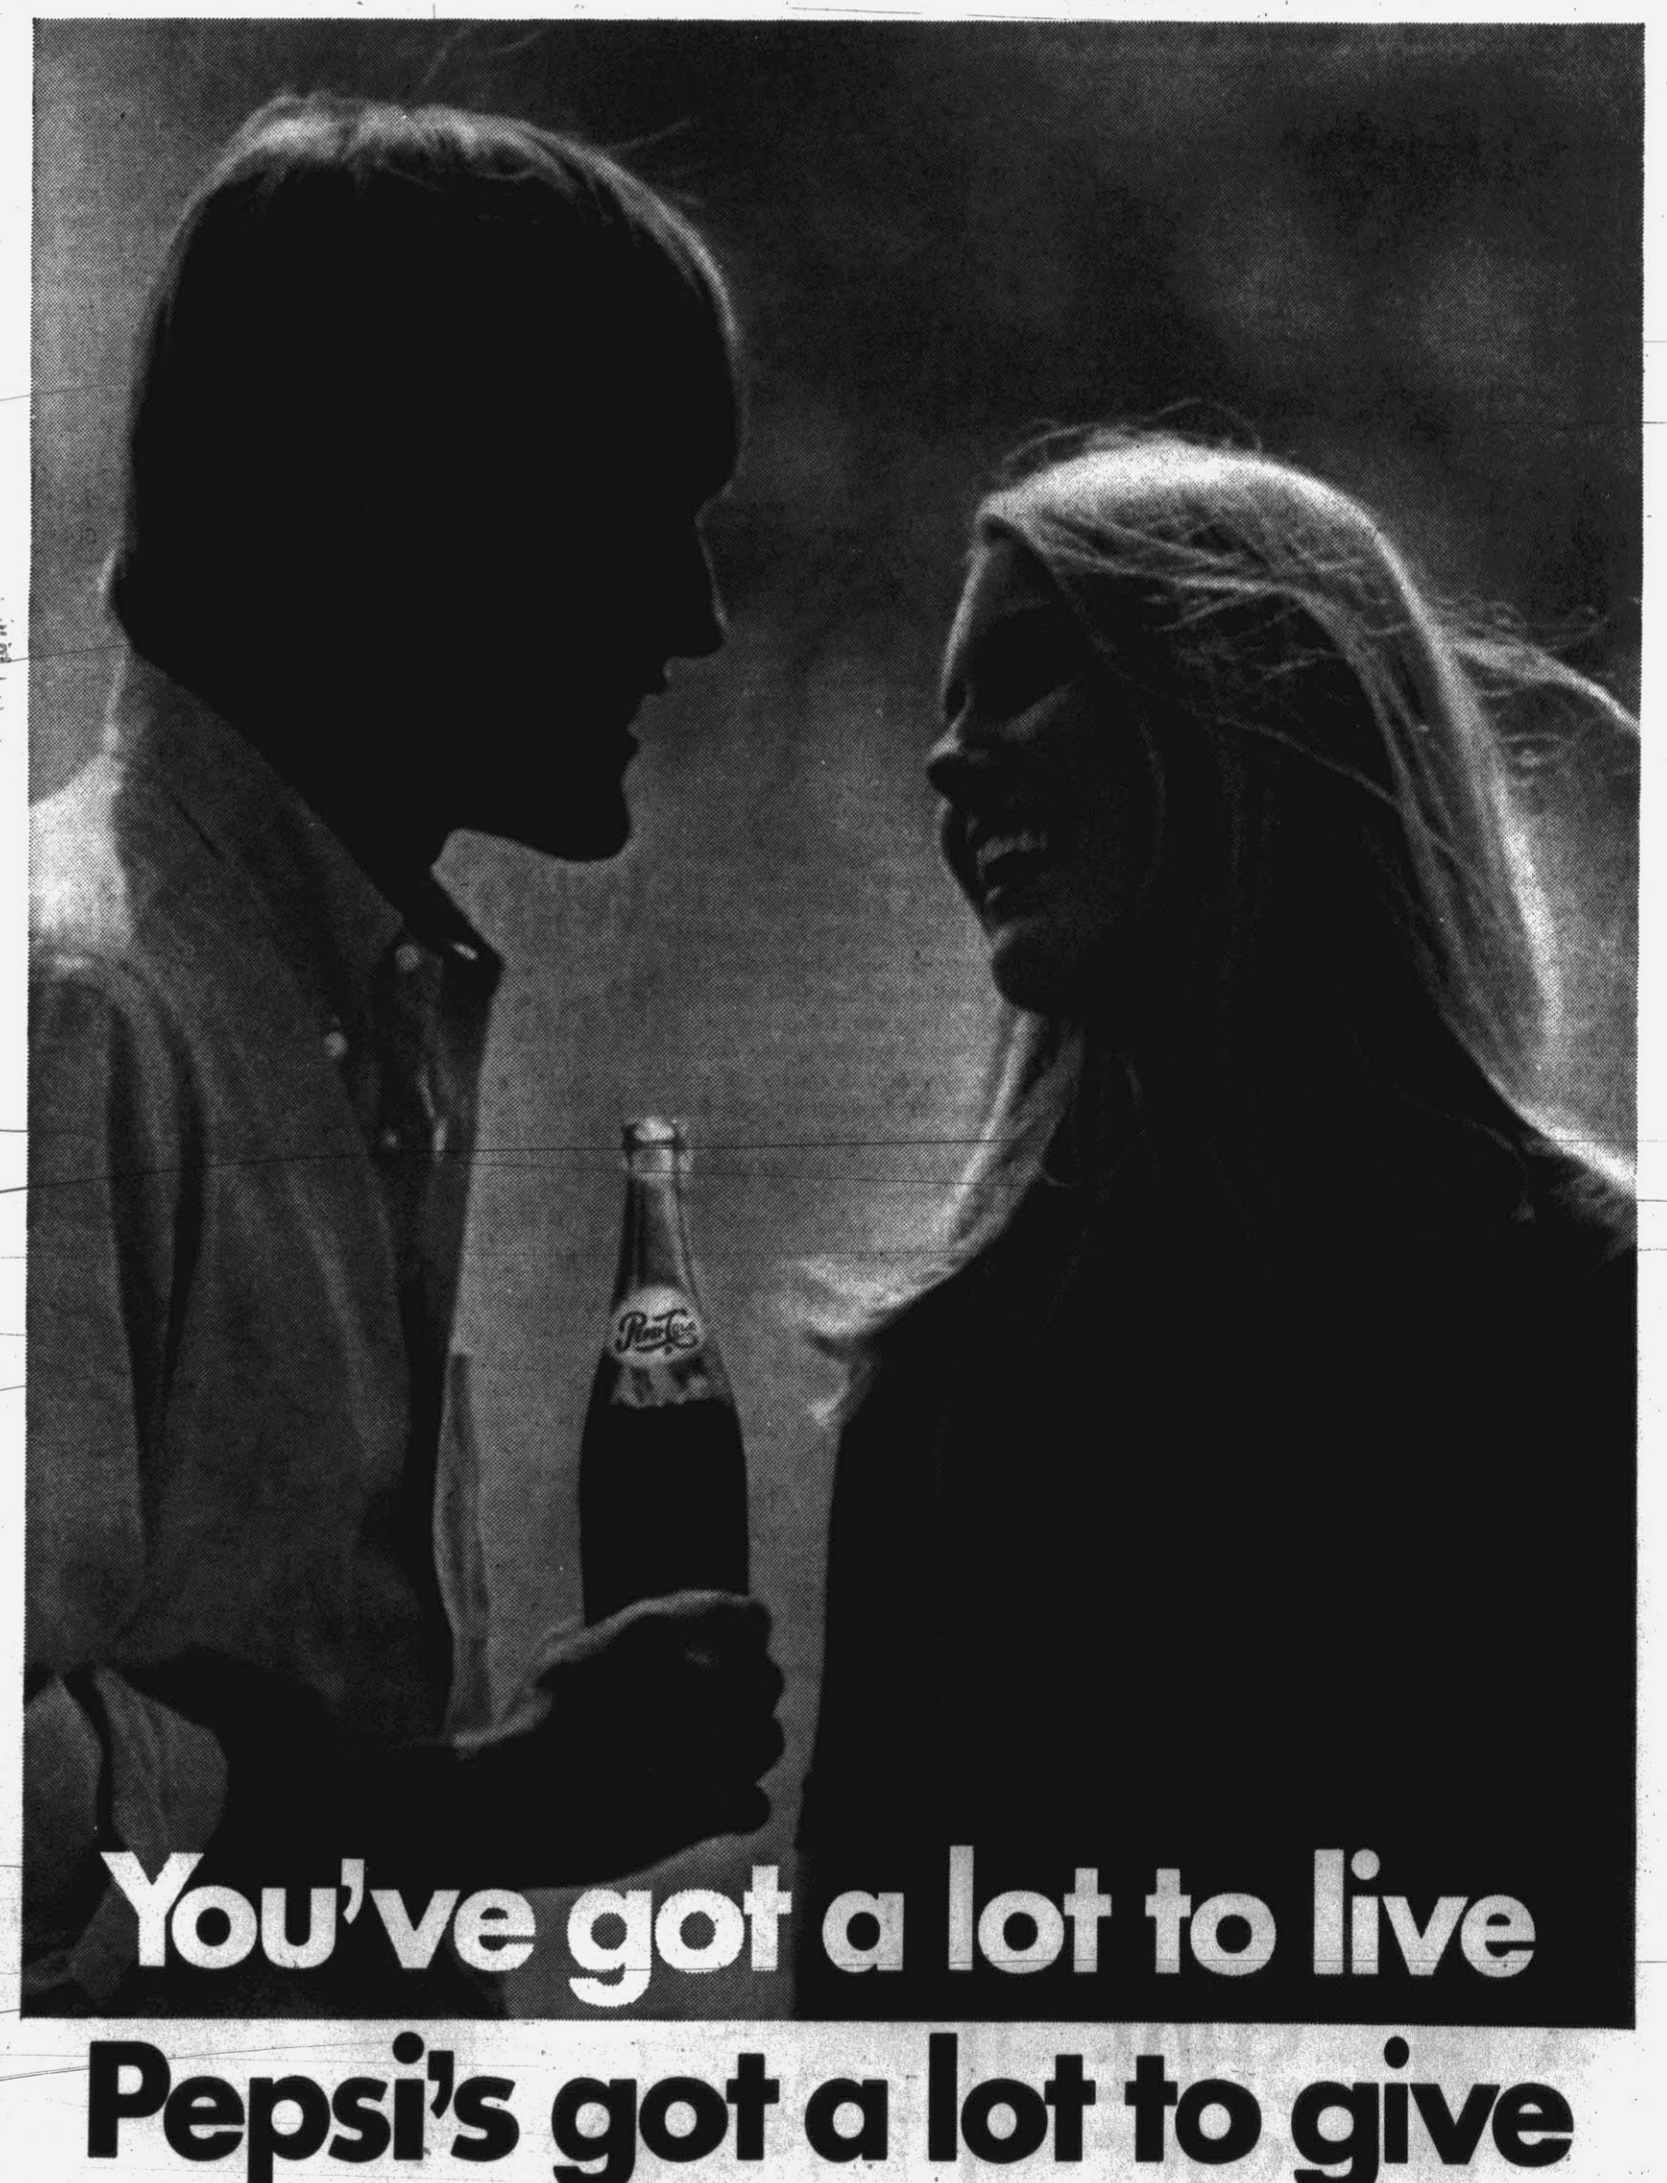

and at Michigan State (where he graduated pre-med school in three years) there just wasn't any time."
Meriwether's schedule at the Baltimore Cancer Research Center, where he works at a leukemia cure, has not interfered with his running.

Will Talk To School 'Rebels'

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the Louisburg school planned to talk today to about 100 black pupils who refused to go to class Monday.

T. E. Conway, assistant principal, said pupils at the school were sent home early after the black students refused to attend class. The refusal, he added, resulted from a misunderstanding over the handling of a disciplinary matter.

He said Louisburg police were called to the school "just to be on the safe side" but that they were not needed.

Phillips Taking School Needs To The People

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's top school official says he is taking his plea to the people and the legislature for more money to meet vital school needs during the next biennium.

State School Superintendent Craig Phillips said Monday night the Advisory Budget Commission did not recommend "many vital improvements" requested by the state Board of Education.

"I am convinced," he said, "that when the decision makers—the members of the legislature—have the best available information upon which to act, the proper priorities and choices will be made."

Phillips spoke at a meeting of the Cleveland Association of Governmental Officials. Representatives from Lincoln, Gaston and Rutherford counties also attended.

"Parents tell us," Phillips said, "they want improvements such as the addition of kindergartens as fast as possible; additional occupational education in every school; school transportation for all those eligible; a matching fund program for adequate school lunches; and feasible compensation and satisfactory working conditions for our teachers, administrators, and all other school personnel."

"The Advisory Budget Commission," he added, "has not recommended these urgent needs... We need your help. If you want these things for your school, then help us properly inform those who have the awesome task of making these crucial decisions."

Phillips told the group that if the legislature "adopts the extended pay schedule and the cost of living salary increase as requested by the state Board of Education, each teacher will be making 18 per cent more in salary in the 1972-73 school year than they are now."

Under the proposal he explained, all teachers will be paid 10 checks for 10 months' work, in addition to receiving seven legal holidays and 12 days' vacation with pay.

"For the first time," Phillips said, "our teachers will be treated just like anyone else on a career basis—working on a monthly-salary basis rather than the present 'work by the day basis.'"

Inmates Can Be Barbers

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina prison inmates will have an opportunity soon to learn how to clip other prisoners — at a barber school.

Robert Hyde, education director of the state Correction Department, announced plans Monday for a prison barber course that will last about eight months.

Two instructors have been employed and the first class will have 10 students, Hyde said. He added it will be a joint project of the department with the State Board of Barber Examiners.

"This is being patterned so the graduates can pass the state barber exams," Hyde said. "A graduate will be an apprentice barber and he can work his way up to a full barber."

Graduates could go into the prison work release program, Hyde said, or help themselves get paroled by having jobs ready when they get out.

The barber board has the authority to refuse to license persons convicted of felonies, but Hyde said he felt the board would license inmates who pass its tests.

$2 Million In VA Money To Pitt County

The Veterans Administration announced that estimated expenditures for North Carolina for the fiscal year 1970 totaled some $211,021,783 of which $2,031,009 was for Pitt County.

W. R. Phillips, director of the North Carolina VA regional office, said that the bulk of the money was $131,721,221 in disability compensation and pension payments for North Carolina veterans.

Of the total figure for the state, Pitt County's veterans received some $1,592,510 in compensation and pension payments, he added.

Other expenditures for Pitt County during the fiscal year, Phillips said, were for GI Bill and other VA education programs which totaled $244,654, and insurance and indemnities, where $193,845 was spent.

Body Of Missing Girl Found In Shallow Ditch

GREENSBORO (AP) — The body of a 17-year-old girl has been found in a shallow ditch in a wooded area two days after she was reported missing.

Authorities said there was no indication of foul play or that anyone else was involved in the death of Elizabeth Ann Simpson. She attended Grimsley High School in Greensboro.

Her body was found Monday 2½ miles from her home.

The Guilford County medical examiner, Dr. Allan B. Coggeshall, said there were no wounds or injuries. He withheld a ruling on the cause of death pending a report from the state toxicology laboratory in Chapel Hill.

Friday is named for the Saxon goddess Freya.

A defensive lapse induced by West's failure to fully appraise the prospects for his side, led to declarer's success in a game contract.

Against the routine bid of four hearts, West led the jack of clubs and North's ace won the trick. The ace and king of trumps were cashed, and when East discarded a club on the second round, the queen of hearts was left outstanding. Declarer played the king of clubs on which he threw one of the dummy's small diamonds. Now he exited with a heart, present-

Taj Mahal By Moonlight Draws A Crowd

By LISA WOHL
 AGRA, India (AP) — Each month the city of Agra in northern India has a sellout crowd for a show that has been running more than 300 years.

Agra's attraction is the Taj Mahal by moonlight. In recent months the spectacle has drawn up to 60,000 visitors in one night.

Admission is only one rupee—13 cents—except on Fridays, the Moslem sabbath, when there is no charge.

The fairytale edifice is really a tomb—completed in 1653 by Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan for his beloved queen, Mumtaz Mahal.

Although the Taj lures thousands of tourists daily, the night crowds wax and wane with the moon, whose rays are said to best illuminate the beauty of the 17th century white marble monument.

The full moonlight, wrote India's Nobel prize-winning poet, the late Rabindranath Tagore, places the Taj "beyond the realm of language where the hungry eyes come back again and again."

Since avid sightseers in the past have threatened to riot when turned away, Agra officials occasionally extend visiting hours past the midnight deadline on busy nights. Huge crowds in October kept the monument open until dawn.

Extra squads of police working overtime route tourists past barricades in one-way traffic through the gleaming architectural masterpiece.

But law and order haven't destroyed the romance of the Taj, which now is a favorite with Indian honeymooners and college couples.

The lovers keep their communion strictly spiritual, however, for Indian custom frowns on public displays of affection.

A few foreign tourists who can make the 124-mile trip from Delhi by train, bus or plane manage to arrange their itineraries to arrive on full moon nights. Dashing from Agra's deluxe tourist buses, they collect enough impressions of airy minarets and arches to fill a postcard destined for home. But the real Taj-buffs are Indian.

"An Indian may not know who the president of India is, but he knows the Taj Mahal," said R. N. Lahiry, manager of the Government of India tourist office at Agra.

Families from across the nation bring their children, who soon grow cranky at being kept up too late. Schoolboys shout inside the Taj to test the famous echo in the main dome.

Indians of a more placid nature recline in the dimly lit gardens to watch the moon rise, and solitary musicians play accordions or flutes before the glistening tomb.

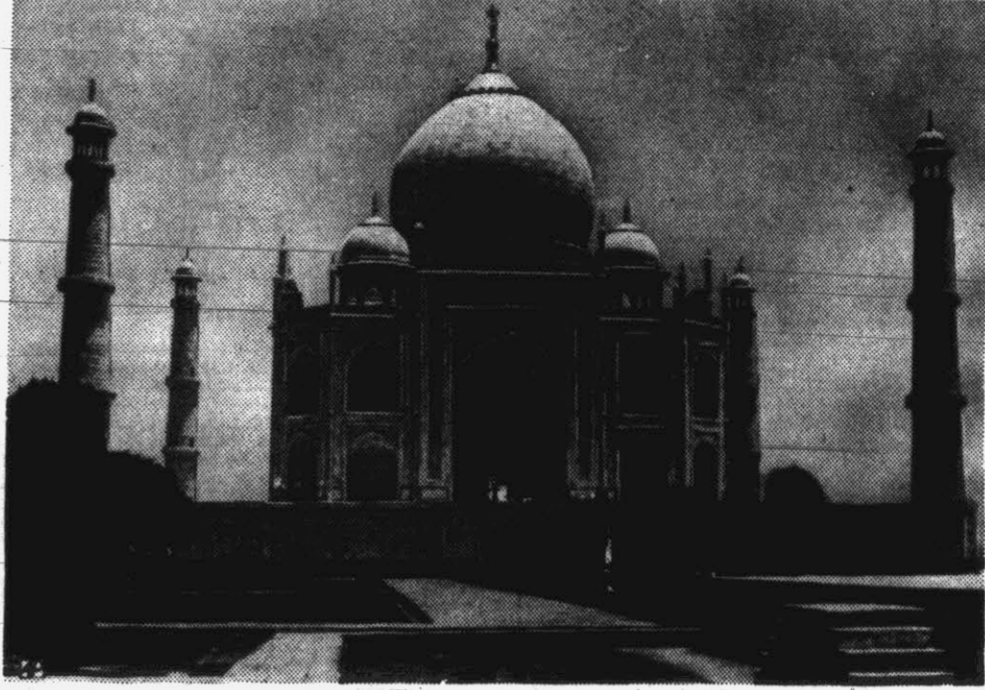

Attendance at the Taj is an informal index of India's economic progress.

"In British times, very few could afford to make the trip to Agra," Lahiry said. "Now the clerks and skilled workers are coming. Someday the farmers will be here too."

Realizing the Taj's great appeal, Agra officials have resisted all attempts to change the monument.

Curio stands and foodstalls are forbidden on the grounds, and numerous proposals to floodlight the Taj after dark have been overruled.

"You can put a man on the moon but you can't make moonlight," Lahiry explained.

POPULAR TANGERINE
 SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The San Diego County Farm Bureau says tangerines, sometimes called the "zippered" fruit because of a peeling that almost unzips itself, are more plentiful than ever. Believed to be a native of China, the tangerine first reached this country in the 19th century when the Italian consul at New Orleans planted tangerine trees on the consulate grounds.

Branch Library. —Thursday, February 4 and 18, 3:45 p.m., East Branch Library.

Mrs. Margaret Reid, Children's Librarian, says all children are welcome to attend these special programs. Boys and girls in grades one to four are especially urged to attend.

In noting that this is the first joint venture between the city libraries and the university, Mrs. Reid said the library staff hopes it will receive their enthusiastic support.

PLANTERS INTRODUCES THE "ANYTHING-AT-ALL" LOAN. FOR GUESS WHAT.

Why do people borrow money?

They want to buy things. Or pay for things (which isn't necessarily the same thing). Like automobiles, boats, appliances, furniture, vacations, educational expenses or whatever.

Of course, some people have reasons for needing money which aren't quite so commonplace. Like the man who wanted to finance an expedition trip to Nairobi in search of an elephant burial place. Or the mother who lucked up on a genuine 1919 Victrola and gave it to her daughter to play records on. What a steal! (Except in those days records weren't flat.) Or the outdoorsman who wanted to convert a used fire truck into a camper. Or who knows what.

So Planters National Bank introduces an "anything-at-all" loan for just about anything at all. Planters will lend you money for any worthwhile reason. Just come by any convenient office and tell a Planters man about the money you need. Tell him how you want your loan arranged and select a due date for repayment that's convenient for you.

If you prefer, PNB can even automatically deduct the payments from your PNB checking account. (Which can come in handy if you're out of the country.) At no charge.

If your reasons for borrowing money are a little more average, but still important, your Planters man will be happy to talk with you about any of the following PNB loan plans:

Business Loans

PNB offers competitive rates. And loan officers with imagination and creativity to help shape your investment.

Home Loans

Planters can finance your new home quickly and conveniently with an FHA, VA or conventional loan.

Agricultural Loans

A long time specialty at Planters. Loans to finance land, equipment, livestock, crop production and a score of other agricultural needs. See us for the money and agricultural know-how to improve your operation.

Cash Guarantee and Master Charge

In addition, PNB offers the special services of Cash Guarantee Account... a private line of revolving credit you use by simply writing a check, and Master Charge... your personal charge account all over the world.

Of course, Planters also offers personal home improvement and auto loans. So whatever you need money for, come in and talk to a Planters man. He'll tailor a loan plan to fit your individual budget and needs. And, if your reason for borrowing doesn't fit any of our conventional loan plans, we'll come up with an unconventional "anything-at-all" loan plan that can't miss.

After all, what's an "anything-at-all" loan for, anyway?
