

Hanoi Films Phony, Says Ex-Prisoner

NEW YORK (AP) — A former American prisoner of war in North Vietnam says Hanoi-released films depicting life in POW camps bear no relation to the torture treatment he had to undergo.

Maj. James Low, who was shot down over North Vietnam in December 1967 and released the following August, commented Tuesday in a television interview on the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite.

He described a torture in which his captors used a metal bar about 18 inches long and one inch in diameter.

"They put this in my mouth and a guy ... put his knee in my back and pulled this thing back against ... as far back as he could and the pain is excruciating. I never felt a pain worse than that," he said.

"They kept asking me questions and then all of a sudden they got up and pushed me down and took the bar out. They left for maybe another hour or so ... two hours. And then they came back again and the same treatment started again.

"Asking me what target, what target ... they had a big map out on the table and they went through the handcuff and twine routine and this time they really pulled this bar back inside. Blood gushed out from my ear ... ruptures something in there.

"This treatment went on and off for about well, six or seven days. Of course, whenever they were torturing me with this bar ... because it really was excruciating. It seemed like when they'd leave me they'd go somewhere else and I could hear a person next door screaming, too. The same treatment, I presume it was my partner but I don't know for sure," he said.

Low, now operations officer at McCoy Air Force Base, Fla., was asked if there was any similarity between his treatment at the hands of the North Vietnamese and that shown in Christmas films of American POWs released by Hanoi.

"None at all," he said. "We had no group activity whatsoever. It was a camp regulation that you would not communicate with anyone else and if you did you were punished. And their punishment is not like ours. It's closer to torture when they punish you."

Mansfield was interviewed for 45 minutes Tuesday by four broadcast journalists. Although he denied any intention of giving a Democratic response to Nixon's State of the Union address, he was questioned on major portions of the President's speech.

The format approximated one used by Nixon earlier this month when he was interviewed for an hour on television and radio.

Mansfield agreed it may be wise to consolidate some federal departments, as recommended by President Nixon.

"This is a step in the right direction," he said. "We are top-heavy in federal bureaus and agencies."

Mansfield noted strong opposition to Nixon's revenue-sharing proposal, under which states would get federal funds with no strings.

Asked about a move to junk the seniority system, under which congressional committee chairmen are elected on a basis of length of service, Mansfield said the system has worked remarkably well but he would support an age limit for senators.

Mansfield voiced doubt Congress will vote to cut off funds for use in Indochina in fear of U.S. troops there would be jeopardized.

But he declared Nixon should set a definite timetable for removal of all U.S. troops from Indochina and withdraw about half of the American troops in Europe.

Coping With The Cold

WARM ON ONE END — A miniskirted woman strides briskly along Randolph Street beside Chicago's Civic Center. Her legs carry minimum protection but above she has her head wrapped with a scarf. Winds, at times in excess of 50 miles an hour, drive the chill factor down to the equivalent of 20 degrees below zero Tuesday. (AP Wirephoto)

'Minor Damage' By High Winds

By BLANCHE HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer
High winds in the Greenville and Pitt County area yesterday and last night caused some power outages and telephone line damage but the problem was described as "minor" by both the utilities and telephone companies here.

Malcolm Greene of Greenville Utilities Commission, said a very few outages were reported for the high winds that were blowing yesterday.

"Only one feeder in the main system was damaged yesterday," Greene said. "Our largest problem in the Stokes and Pactivus areas was caused by broken tree limbs on the lines."

About 10 power poles were down in the rural areas but power was restored by 7 p.m. last night. Power failures were reported throughout the day.

"There was a problem with the underground power lines in the Eastwood section yesterday, but that had nothing to do with the high winds," Greene explained.

Don Collier, local manager of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., reported a toll cable between Greenville and Bethel was damaged by a fallen tree yesterday afternoon. No significant damage was reported, however.

"About 10 or 12 aerial resident lines were down, as a result of tree limbs," Collier noted. "This area came out well based on wind damage throughout the state. We were lucky."

Telephone service was restored immediately after the damage was reported.

According to the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station, winds were recorded as high as 54 miles per hour yesterday.

Winds this morning were between 20 and 30 miles per hour, the station reported.

Sentiment Growing For Annual Session

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Sentiment appears to be growing among North Carolina's legislators in support of annual sessions of the General Assembly to replace the present biennial sessions.

This is indicated by a survey just completed by the Associated Press.

But a goodly number of those inclined to support annual sessions reached that conclusion reluctantly. They see the possibility of professional full-time legislators replacing the present part-time citizen lawmakers.

Some of the opponents feel that annual sessions are inevitable some time in the future.

Crossing Guard Is Pressed By School Board

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
School board members were again unanimous in seeking to get city officials to consider a crossing guard to supplement the 14 now on duty in Greenville.

At the special meeting held last night, a motion was made by member Harding Sugg to "send another letter referring the matter back to the city, recommending another crossing guard for Sadie Sautler."

Sugg added, "This matter is the responsibility of the police department." Before his motion, several members had referred to the most recent letter from City Manager Harry Hagerty.

Mrs. Robert Kittrell expressed some confusion about the January 20 letter from Hagerty. "The letter says all the guards are needed, then later states that two of them are the least necessary. I find it hard to get a good understanding."

Mrs. Kittrell and Dr. Clet C. Cleetwood, superintendent of the City Schools, both agreed their impression is that funding of an additional crossing guard is not an obstacle, but that the city has been unable to recruit suitable persons to handle the work.

Their impression is born out in one part of Hagerty's January 20 letter: "I would like to reiterate at this time that this is not a matter of money but a matter of being able to recruit suitable individuals to perform the duties required of school crossing guards."

Dr. James Bearden offered a suggestion that "perhaps, if the problem is one of coming up with a suitable person, maybe we should advertise or should try to help in this situation."

A point of confusion as to whether 14 or 15 guards were now on duty was cleared up when Glenn Cox, associate superintendent of the City Schools, explained that one crossing guard serves two positions — first at Forest Hills Drive and 14th Street, then transferring for a second round of duty at Fairview and 14th Streets.

Mrs. Kittrell related she had sent a candidate for interview as a crossing guard to the city officials, but that at this time she had not heard of the results.

The letter recommending the additional guard at Pennsylvania and 14th Street for Sadie Sautler School which will be sent to the city is the third request for the city's consideration.

Dr. Cleetwood told the board that he had been informed of the death on Tuesday afternoon of Mrs. Kara Lynn Fennell, a long time teacher in the Greenville City Schools who has been critically ill for some time. He also brought to their attention the death about a week or ten days ago of Miss Christine Johnson, another long-time teacher who had been retired for some time.

Two other matters were briefly noted and no action taken due to changes in circumstances prompting their being placed on the agenda. Dr. Yoon Hough

"I'm leaning that way (toward annual sessions) more than I have in the past because of the need for continuity...but I'm not firmed up yet," said House Speaker Phil Godwin.

"I'm in favor of annual sessions," said Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison. "You can't properly look after the affairs of the state by meeting every two years."

"I'm not in favor of them," said Rep. William R. Roberson, D-Beaufort. "I think they will lead to full-time legislators. I'm a businessman, I can't leave my business to come up here every year. I feel we're getting good government from our present system."

Some of those favoring annual sessions indicated they would want to limit the length of sessions to about 90 days as provided in two measures now before the General Assembly.

Some also said they wanted the General Assembly to limit itself to budget matters at one session and to consider other matters at the following year's session. Others would take up the budget and other matters at every session.

"I still have mixed emotions," said Rep. Jim Holshouser, R-Watauga, the GOP joint caucus leader. "I think the need (for annual sessions) is there. At the same time, I think it is the first step toward leaving volunteer legislators and going toward professional legislators."

"We could perhaps forestall that by limiting the time of the sessions and also perhaps we could consider the budget every other session."

Holshouser said he had not decided how he would vote, but that he is inclined to vote for annual sessions.

The support for annual sessions must be almost overwhelming for them to be approved. Since the bills would amend the state constitution, they must receive a three-fifths favorable vote in each house to pass.

"I think it (annual sessions) has to come," said Rep. James C. Green (D-Bladen). He said he'd like to have every other session devoted to consideration of money matters.

"I don't think we need annual sessions at the present time," said Rep. Norwood Bryan, D-Cumberland. "The present set-up is working well. Why meddle?"

"I think it will eventually come to annual sessions, and I think it should be implemented as soon as possible," said Rep. Claude DeBruih, D-Buncombe.

DeBruih said he felt it is impossible to anticipate the needs of the state two years in advance.

"I would postpone them as long as we can," said Rep. Sam Johnson, D-Wake. "I think it is contrary to the citizen legislator approach. It means you would have to pay the legislators full time."

Mrs. John B. Chase said she had "mixed feelings, but I believe the business of the General Assembly has increased to the extent that it may be necessary to have annual sessions."

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who introduced the annual session bill in the Senate, said he feels the proposal has a "real good chance" of passage this session.

Rep. Horton Rountree of Pitt County has been appointed to head the North Carolina House of Representatives Committee on Congressional Redistricting. He will also serve on six other committees and Rep. Sam Bundy, also of Pitt, has been given membership on seven House committees, also.

Rep. Rountree will be vice chairman of both the Appropriations Subcommittee on Education and the Higher Education Committee. He has also been named by House Speaker Phil Godwin to Judiciary Committee No. 1, to the Courts and Judicial Districts Committee, to the Banks and Banking Committee, and to the new Manufacturers and Labor Committee.

"I am delighted to be in a leadership capacity on three committees this session," Rep. Rountree said. "All of my appointments were ones I requested and they are ones in which I feel I can best serve our area."

Rep. Bundy's appointments were to the Appropriations

Testing Reaction

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 14 astronauts climbed into spaceship trainers today for a stern test of how they would react to possible emergencies on the moon journey which starts Sunday.

Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Edgar D. Mitchell worked in the lunar module simulator and Stuart A. Roosa in the command ship trainer.

The plan for the lengthy exercise called for Mission Control center in Houston to advise them to run through a certain phase of the flight, such as lunar descent or liftoff. The controllers would then simulate a malfunction of a system aboard either or both craft and evaluate how well the astronauts take corrective action.

The controllers probably had trouble fooling Shepard, Mitchell and Roosa with emergency simulations.

Elderly Couple Robbed

WILSON, N. C. (AP) — An elderly Wilson County couple, owners of a rural store, were recovering in Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville today after being robbed Tuesday.

Wilson County Sheriff Bob Brunson said Jim McCoy received "glancing blow" in the side of the head from a shotgun blast and that Mrs. McCoy, 71 was struck at least once in the forehead with the butt of a shotgun.

Brunson said the couple told him that the robbers, both wearing ankle length overcoats, held them up about 3 p.m. Tuesday. One of the two carried a sawed off shotgun.

The robbers took money from the cash register and took McCoy's wallet. There was no estimate of the amount of money taken.

The store is on N.C. 222, about 14 miles east of Wilson. The McCoy's were reported to be in fair condition.

ANOTHER EXECUTED
DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Guinea's official radio reported today the execution of another person convicted of involvement in the invasion of the West African country in November.

Pleased By Assignment

Rep. Horton Rountree of Pitt County has been appointed to head the North Carolina House of Representatives Committee on Congressional Redistricting.

He will also serve on six other committees and Rep. Sam Bundy, also of Pitt, has been given membership on seven House committees, also.

Rep. Rountree will be vice chairman of both the Appropriations Subcommittee on Education and the Higher Education Committee. He has also been named by House Speaker Phil Godwin to Judiciary Committee No. 1, to the Courts and Judicial Districts Committee, to the Banks and Banking Committee, and to the new Manufacturers and Labor Committee.

"I am delighted to be in a leadership capacity on three committees this session," Rep. Rountree said. "All of my appointments were ones I requested and they are ones in which I feel I can best serve our area."

Rep. Bundy's appointments were to the Appropriations

Subcommittee on General Government and Transportation, the Education Committee, the Conservation and Development Committee, the Constitutional Amendments Committee, the State Personnel Committee, the Federal and Interstate Cooperation Committee, and the State Legislation Redistricting Committee.

"Of course, I am particularly happy about being named to the Education Committee because this is an area of special concern for me and an area in which I should be able to best contribute ideas," the former public school principal said. "I requested this committee, as I did the Appropriations, the Conservation and Development, and the Legislative Redistricting committees. I also asked for an appointment to the Agriculture Committee, but did not receive it. All in all, I'm well pleased, though. Now we must get down to work."

"I think both Sam and I have received appointments that are geared to our constituents' needs," Rountree commented.

tempt of a court which I believe is higher than any court of the United States."

She had asserted earlier, first in a statement to newsmen, then repeatedly before the grand jury, that her appearance was prompted by illegal wiretapping evidence and that the government had bugged the telephone calls of the Roman Catholic Church in both this country and Rome.

Sister Jogues did not say how she knew a wiretap of Church telephones existed. However, Levine said the phone tap on Rome calls, if there was one, was a continuing one at the headquarters of the religious order to which the nun belonged. Levine said it was not a Vatican phone.

In Rome, a spokesman for the Vatican said, "We are unaware of such tapped phone calls." A spokesman for the headquarters of the Sacred Heart of Mary Order, to which Sister Jogues belongs, declined to comment in the absence of the mother superior, now on a six-month visit to Africa.

Scientists Spurred Into Hunting For Ships Of Solomon

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — Scientists spurred by an Old Testament story will use electronic devices to probe the silt beneath the Gulf of Aqaba for the ships of King Solomon, who ruled Israel a thousand years before Christ.

"The Book of Kings tells over and over again of a fabulous trading center called Ezion Geber. No one knows where it was exactly, but the Bible tells of a fleet of ships going down there in a great storm," says Robert Rines, one of the men making the expedition.

Rines, president of the American Academy of Applied Science, and scientists from Britain, the United States and Israel will explore an area in the gulf off Israel.

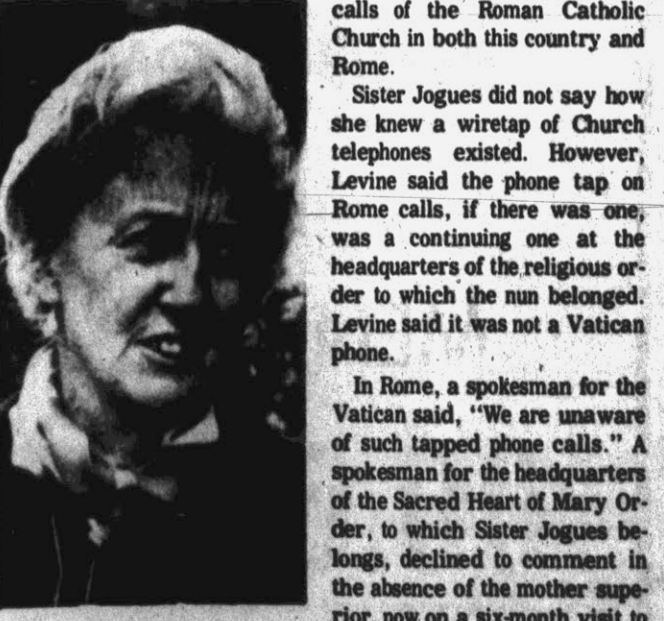

They will use mud-penetrating sonar devices and metal detecting gear to try to locate the remains of ships which once brought Solomon the profits and luxuries of commerce from India, southern Arabia and Ethiopia.

"If the fleet was covered quickly by silt, then we hope it should be pretty well preserved," Rines said. "If we find evidence of anything, then divers will go down."

"History shows the area also was used by the Crusaders, so even if we don't go as far back as Solomon we are hopeful of finding something," he said.

Rines declined to reveal the exact site of the probe because "we want to discourage publicity-sightseers who would clutter up our work."

If the electronic probe, expected to take three weeks, produces evidence of ruins, a team which does scuba diving for the Israeli navy will try to uncover the ships, Rines says.

Who Should Shape Up At Payment Time?

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I wanted an engagement ring very much last year and my boy friend wasn't able to get it for me. So I took out a loan for the down payment with the understanding that he would make the payments.

So far he has never been late with the payments, but my problem is that around the time the payment is due, if we have a quarrel, he reminds me that the payment is due so I had better shape up.

Is there some way I can let him know that I love my ring, but I would rather do without it than have him holding it over my head the way he does? Please don't tell me I shouldn't have taken the loan out in the first place. I already know that. NO MORE LOANS

DEAR NO MORE: Tell him in English, unless you can communicate better in another language.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are having a mild disagreement over a subject we have never seen discussed in your column. We agree to abide by your suggestions. [If you print this, please, no names.]

We have two children, an adopted daughter, 11, and a son of our own, 9. They have separate bedrooms but they frequently undress in front of each other, take baths together, etc. There is never anything that appears unhealthy; in other words from the standpoint of sex, they ignore it. I think this is perfectly all right. My wife takes the opposite point of view and says we should insist that they not see each other undressed.

What is your feeling? If you agree with my wife, would your answer be different if the daughter were not adopted? PRO AND CON

DEAR PRO: As long as children are not self-conscious about their bodies, don't make an issue of it; if you suggest that they "hide", they may become unduly curious, or get the idea that nudity is "wrong" or "dirty." As your daughter matures she will acquire modesty without being told. Whether they are "blood relatives" or not makes no difference.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the holiday season has come and gone I want to tell you about a barbaric custom which is considered very much "in" these days, and to which I am strongly opposed.

I am sick, sick, sick of the communal pot thrust upon holiday guests—both chip 'n' dip and fondue!

I have seen many otherwise well-mannered people dip into the tribal pot with a potato chip, bite off a portion, and redip into the pot again. Is it any wonder that flu and colds are rampant during holiday time? Also, I resent being handed a long fork and asked to cook my own meal at a

Blind Teenagers Help Nursing Home Elderly

By ELIZABETH SHAFER

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (WNS) — Eleven

teenage girls here are monitors in various nursing homes, serving in the Red Cross program. The difference is, these girls are all blind. They are students at the Colorado School for the Deaf and the Blind.

Each girl serves with a sighted monitor. Volunteers with normal sight require 18 hours of Red Cross training for the Monitor posts. Blind volunteers are in training for one hour each week for five months.

Mrs. Shirley Kowalski trained the eleven girls to act as monitors, to bring companionship to the nursing home residents, to be ready with conversation and a sympathetic ear.

There are 50 such monitors in Colorado Springs, according to Mrs. Leslie Cook, volunteer director of the local Red Cross chapter.

Mrs. Cecil Quinlan, in charge of training the blind girls, has added weekend discussion sessions to the basic program so that the girls can share experiences and help each other solve dilemmas.

Residents of the nursing homes are enthusiastic about the girls. They look forward to visits from the girls, not only for their help but because they want to help the girls in turn.

Some of the old people insist on reading to the monitors. Others guide them to chairs and along corridors. They enjoy the feeling that they, too, can be of help to someone.

The blind girls, too, are totally involved in their work and very much aware of the relationships they have forged with the senior citizens. They have been taught to be as sensitive as possible about certain situations, to maintain confidence, and to remember always that their most important asset is their ears. They have learned more than how to serve. One girl puts it this way: "This has helped me adjust to elderly people and to respect them. It has helped me understand the older generation."

"It takes the blues away from me to work with these people," another says.

"Just going and talking to them, you sometimes get very close," says one teenager.

"They feel like your family," adds another.

"It's a good feeling to know someone is waiting for you."

Smiling still another blind teenage monitor says, "It makes me feel pretty good when I can't come one week and they miss me. You know they thought of you."

Primaries Could Stir Interest

Well, why not a presidential primary in North Carolina?

There may be reasons, but it seems to us almost every argument against a presidential primary is more than offset by an argument in its favor.

Under provisions of a bill introduced in the House and Senate the presidential primary would be held in May every four years along with the regular state primary elections. Presidential candidates stumping the state at the same time gubernatorial and other candidates are doing their campaigning could detract somewhat from the state races. Even so, additional interest in the primary generated by presidential candidates probably would result in more voters participating in the naming of candidates for state office on that same primary election day.

There is always the possibility that presidential campaigns could become entwined in some of the state races. But there is greater reason to believe that a presidential primary would do more to keep the individual state races separate than to cause alliances between various candidates in various state races.

While the presidential primary would mean more political money spent in North Carolina every four years and more outside political pros being brought into the state, it could serve to put the emphasis more on issues rather than personalities even in the state races.

The measure now before the legislature appears to provide for adequate reflection of the opinion of state voters for presidential candidates by providing for national delegation votes to be prorated between the three top candidates in the presidential contests.

On balance, the proposal for presidential primaries in North Carolina has the weight of merit on its side. The legislation introduced is sound. The General Assembly should give its blessing to North Carolina joining the list of states which have presidential primaries.

Election Now Is Attainable

By BRYAN HAISLIP
RALEIGH — Black membership in the North Carolina General Assembly is doubled over last session. This time there are two.

Not much of a gain, numerically, in the 170-seat legislature; but it's a long way from zero, and significant as a trend.

"More blacks will be elected in time," predicted Henry E. Frye, the Guilford County Representative who became the first of his race they feel an obligation to the state's entire Negro population.

"I had calls, letters, and visits from all over the state last session," Frye said. "Many told me they looked to me as their Representative."

It will help to have Johnson available this session to share in extending courtesies to this wide quasi-constituency.

Bills Under Study

Both are reticent to discuss plans for legislation with specific impact in the realm of race.

Johnson said he has some "pet bills," but he's keeping them in the drawer right now. He is learning his way around, establishing rapport, and getting acquainted with the ground rules in the first weeks of the session.

"Some legislation which is difficult to get through can serve a good purpose even if it fails," he commented.

Frye said he is still formulating legislative aims for the session with details unresolved.

What the state needs in the human and civil rights area "is positive leadership from the top," he said.

"I was disappointed that Governor Scott did not show special emphasis in this direction, with the hope that the attitude would carry over to the lower echelons of the executive branch and perhaps the legislature."

Challenge For Change

Despite progress, North Carolina still is a long way from the ideal society, Frye asserted. "I guess the real challenge to blacks and whites is to demonstrate that we can make the changes that need to be made through the political system," he added.

Changes in the structure of the Democratic Party, designed to open opportunity for black participation, were endorsed by Johnson and Frye. They agreed it could widen political options for all citizens, and give renewed vigor to the party.

Frye added a qualification: "The reorganization is fine—if there is follow-through; at the local level in election of party officials, and at the state level through appointments; possibly, two approaches to problems."

Frye is an attorney; Johnson is a minister. Frye represents an urban county whose racial mix is primarily white-black. Johnson comes from a rural area with a white-black-Indian population.

Background differences are secondary to goals and objectives they have in common. Beyond boundaries of their respective districts, since Reconstruction to win legislative office in North Carolina.

BRYAN HAISLIP

Now that the taboo is broken there, election of a Negro candidate to statewide office looms as an attainable goal. A black Governor may be a remote possibility, but what about Lieutenant-Governor, or one of the offices in the Council of State?

"That may be tested before long," said Frye.

Success would require finding the right candidate, getting support behind him, and raising money for a campaign, he added. "The first problem, really," he said, "is to convince people it's worth the effort."

He found his first term experience worthwhile enough to run again. In last fall's general election, he led the field for Guilford's six House seats.

Number Two Elected

Meanwhile, in the southeastern 24th district of Hoke, Scotland and Robeson counties, the four-member delegation elected included Jay Johnson of Fairmont. He came to Raleigh as the second Negro to serve in modern times.

Two Representatives should make the General Assembly twice as aware of problems affecting black citizens. "At least," said Frye, "it will give the viewpoint of two personalities; possibly, two approaches to problems."

Frye is an attorney; Johnson is a minister. Frye represents an urban county whose racial mix is primarily white-black. Johnson comes from a rural area with a white-black-Indian population.

Background differences are secondary to goals and objectives they have in common. Beyond boundaries of their respective districts, they feel an obligation to the state's entire Negro population.

"I had calls, letters, and visits from all over the state last session," Frye said. "Many told me they looked to me as their Representative."

It will help to have Johnson available this session to share in extending courtesies to this wide quasi-constituency.

Both are reticent to discuss plans for legislation with specific impact in the realm of race.

Johnson said he has some "pet bills," but he's keeping them in the drawer right now. He is learning his way around, establishing rapport, and getting acquainted with the ground rules in the first weeks of the session.

"Some legislation which is difficult to get through can serve a good purpose even if it fails," he commented.

Frye said he is still formulating legislative aims for the session with details unresolved.

What the state needs in the human and civil rights area "is positive leadership from the top," he said.

"I was disappointed that Governor Scott did not show special emphasis in this direction, with the hope that the attitude would carry over to the lower echelons of the executive branch and perhaps the legislature."

Challenge For Change

Despite progress, North Carolina still is a long way from the ideal society, Frye asserted. "I guess the real challenge to blacks and whites is to demonstrate that we can make the changes that need to be made through the political system," he added.

Changes in the structure of the Democratic Party, designed to open opportunity for black participation, were endorsed by Johnson and Frye. They agreed it could widen political options for all citizens, and give renewed vigor to the party.

Frye added a qualification: "The reorganization is fine—if there is follow-through; at the local level in election of party officials, and at the state level through appointments; possibly, two approaches to problems."

Cherry Point Facility In Defense Planning

It is gratifying that the Naval Air Rework Facility at Cherry Point has been included in the Department of Defense's budget for the coming year.

Rep. Walter B. Jones announced last week that the Defense Department had decided to continue the operation.

There had been a good chance that the facility which overhauls jet engines would be closed with a loss of 2,300 jobs.

We had wondered whether or not these jobs were not to be transferred to some other area of the nation to offset high unemployment. If so it would have made little sense to leave high unemployment at Cherry Point to bolster employment elsewhere.

At any rate it appears that the facility is safe for now and this will help the North Carolina economy.

Boggs Will Be No 'Yes Man'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — In the confused hours immediately following his hard-fought victory as House Majority Leader, Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana showed he is not about to play the customary second fiddle to first violinist Carl Albert of Oklahoma.

Speaker Albert was sympathetic to liberals' demands that the majority whip, No. 3 man in the Democratic party hierarchy, be selected by the full party caucus instead of the usual appointment by the leadership. Boggs disagreed vehemently, arguing the whip must be somebody he could work closely with. He also warned that an election by the caucus could give an all-South-Southwest cast to the party leadership. Albert finally agreed and joined Boggs in the caucus in voting down the election proposal.

Supporters of Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, the liberal runner-up to Boggs, next suggested that Udall be named whip as a conciliatory gesture. Albert seemed interested, but Boggs flatly disagreed. He had no intention of a hostile Mo Udall becoming his whip.

Added to this is a history of coolness between Albert and Boggs. Among close friends, Albert has held forth on Boggs' limitations as whip. For his part, Boggs owes Albert exactly nothing in his difficult campaign for Majority Leader.

The result is a widespread expectation among Democrats that Majority Leader Boggs will by no means be the subservient lieutenant to Speaker Albert that Majority Leader Albert was to Speaker John McCormack. Rather, many Congressmen expect the aggressive, expansive Boggs to try to eclipse the self-effacing new Speaker.

In the aftermath of Boggs' surprisingly easy victory, Udall intimates are disconsolate and bitter. Shortly after his defeat, Udall allies toted up their pledges again and came up with 131—enough to win and 43 more than he actually received. "In this honorable body," one Udall insider told us, "there are some not so honorable men."

Moreover, Udall's campaign managers, while withholding public statement, are angry with organized labor in general and AFL-CIO lobbyist Andrew Biemiller in particular. Biemiller backed his close associate, Rep. James O'Hara of Michigan, for Majority Leader, as expected. But after O'Hara ran fifth in a field of five on the first ballot, both Biemiller and O'Hara refused to endorse Udall. In fact, Biemiller told House Democrats that Udall was not his second choice but, rather, his fifth choice.

Biemiller's hostility stems from Udall's 1965 vote against repealing Section 14 (B) ("right-to-work") of the Taft-Hartley Act. More important, however, Boggs, though less liberal than Udall, has been labor's invaluable ally on the con-

Strength For Today

YES — A PILGRIMAGE

Develop power. Whatever you do in life, develop power. Power can be an evil thing, wiping out cities and civilizations with a bomb. The power of money can do good under certain circumstances and evil under other circumstances. Are we going to mope and mope until life becomes for us a ting of darkness and despair?

Not if we are resolute. Not if we try to make the best of every minute, every hour, every day. Within our natures there are undoubtedly powers that we have never used. Some of us have probably been going along on one cylinder for fifty or more years. Now we are ready for retirement — but what then? Are we going to stretch out our legs and lead back in a comfortable chair and let our thoughts go haywire? We can remember the grudges we had against certain people and turn them over in our minds until we are sick about them and hope that the time will come when we give these people what they appear to deserve.

But cut it out. That's no way to live. Life is a pilgrimage. We start from one point, and the Creator intends that we get to another point. Have we lived before? We are not sure, but many of us are sure that we will live again. Heaven is not just a dream. There are untold multitudes there and many among them are loved ones to whom we waved adieu some decades ago. Keep on developing power to the last day — the last breath.

The Gung Ho Fashion

WASHINGTON — It could be the war or all the talk about revolution, but the latest fashion craze in the country is a cartridge belt for women.

I discovered this the other day when I went into a store to buy a present for my wife. The salesgirl took me over to a rack where there were belts of bullets in all sizes. "This is the latest thing in accessories," the girl said. "Your wife would love one."

"I was hoping for something more in a hand grenade," I said. "Believe me," she said. "Women are just crazy about these bullets. They can wear them around their chests or around their hips or let them hang loose like this."

"You don't have anything in tear gas, do you?" I asked her. "Now, you're not being serious," she said. "I don't know how to tell you this," I said, "But my wife is a Dove."

"All the more reason for buying her a bullet belt," she replied. "It's better to wear bullets than to shoot them."

"But I was in the service, and I don't know anyone who wore a belt of cartridges who didn't eventually want to shoot them."

"These are dummy bullets," she said, "and all the powder's been taken out of the casings."

"But what's to prevent another store from selling powder to go with the belts?" "Nothing," she said, rather irritated. "But even if a store sold powder for the bullets, you would still need a machine - gun to fire them."

"What would prevent a handbag manufacturer from making a bag that could turn into a machine gun?"

"It's ridiculous," she replied. "If a handbag turned into a machine - gun, all the contents in the bag would fall out."

"I never thought of that. What are you featuring in flame throwers this year?"

She was determined to sell me a cartridge belt. "Why don't you try one on and see how nice it feels?"

She threw the cartridge belt over my shoulder. "There," she said. "If you were wearing black silk pajamas, you'd look beautiful."

"Let me ask you something," I said. "Why do you think women have gone ape over cartridge belts?"

"What do you know what it's like to be a woman?" she asked bitterly. (Continued on page 5)

No Magic Boon For Shoppers

By ELMER ROESSNER

The current consumer drive for full-disclosure labeling may not bring all the benefits that its campaigners hope for.

Full-disclosure labeling consists of labeling products with the percentage of nutritional ingredients and the number of calories. For example, a white bread might be labeled 30 per cent water, 9 per cent protein, 3 per cent fat, 50 per cent carbohydrates, .007 per cent calcium, .002 per cent iron, 1.991 per cent other nutrients and 80 calories per slice.

Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., conducted an elaborate test for Chain Store Age magazine. A simulated supermarket was set up. Eight products were tested: soft drinks, tomato soup, tuna fish, frankfurters, fruit drinks, dry cereal, spaghetti and meat balls and white bread.

Four hundred women in matched groups were sent shopping in the store. Half of them were exposed to one or more brands with full-disclosure labels; the other saw only regular labels.

Not Shrewd Buyers

Significantly, women did not seem to adjust their buying patterns to the concept of nutrition-per-dollar. Given two products with a price differential that paralleled their listed nutritional value, the women were inclined to purchase the lower-cost, lower-value brand.

Other conclusions were: While dominant brands held their share in the face of full-disclosure labeling, private labels did not. Stores' own brands always declined when in competition with a full-disclosure brand. But when a store's own brand carried such labeling, it did not share in increases that others did.

Full-disclosure labeling had its major effect on secondary brands. One reason might be that the labeling gave the customer a rationale for trying a different brand.

Younger Women Alert

Younger women and those in low-income groups tended to respond more to high nutritional appeal than older, more affluent women.

Many women do not feel qualified to judge nutritional labels and many didn't have time to read all labels of all brands. The conclusions appear to have some bearing on Commander J. S. Elliott of the Pitt County Post No. 39 of the American Legion, announced today that the greatest feature of "Pioneer Week" will be reached Thursday night when a mass meeting of all former service men of this county will be held at the court house.

The purpose of such a meeting is for the Legion in North Carolina to better determine just what former service men want done with reference to Adjusted Service Certificates.

Speaking on the subject "Criminology and Its Effect On Social Life," Dr. H. M. Bonner delivered the principal address at the regular weekly meeting of the Rotary Club last night.

It was announced today, as a reminder to Greenville citizens, that it is against the law to let dogs run at large in this city. The law prohibits dogs appearing on the streets without being in leash. Dog owners should consider this fact and abide by the ruling.

Call Army Experts To Dismantle Bomb

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Classes were to be held as planned today at East Arcadia School, where a crude, homemade bomb was dismantled Tuesday by three Army demolition experts after it was found under some steps.

Two sergeants and a captain, flown to the school by helicopter from Ft. Bragg, worked for about 45 minutes to dismantle the explosive. It consisted of two sticks of dynamite, blasting caps and detonator wire attached to some flashlight batteries.

The school, 23 miles southeast of Elizabethtown, has been the target of protests by pupils. FBI agents in Wilmington said they had been called by an anonymous tipster who informed them of the bomb. Officers found it in a shoebox under some steps leading to a temporary classroom.

servative Ways and Means Committee.

Red-Ink Republicans

Although a deep, dark secret within Republican ranks, members of the Republican National Finance Committee were angry and slightly incredulous at the highly un-Republican debt of just under one million dollars they learned about at last week's party meeting here.

That debt, down from a post-Presidential election debt of $1.6 million two years ago, will be paid off by ruthless pruning of the National Committee's operating budget.

Thus, the committee is being forced to reduce spending for the current year by $900,000 just when it should be primping for the 1972 campaign.

Finance Committee members, some of them unhappy at President Nixon's and Vice President Spiro Agnew's farflung 1970 campaigning, were told that the Nixon-Agnew tours cost the National Committee $700,000. With some conservative fat-cats restive at Mr. Nixon's new shift toward the center, oil men dismayed over Mr. Nixon's attempt to roll back crude oil prices, and the flabby economy closing other velvet-lined pocket-books, National Committee operatives now worry about 1972 campaign funds.

A footnote: The President wants the White House totally "de-politicized," a partial response to complaints that he has been wearing his political hat too much lately. Harry Dent, chief White House political aide, will get a new assignment, either in the White House, a department, or possibly the National Committee. Also slated for a National Committee post: conservative hard-liner Lyn Nofziger (ex-aide to Gov. Ronald Reagan), now in the White House under communications director Herb Klein.

"Please, lady," I begged. "We've had it up to here living in a masculine society with a masculine power structure grinding us into robots. And even when we want to wear something as simple as a belt of bullets, men laugh and make fun of us."

"OK, I'll buy it. I'll buy it," I cried. "Please give me one in size 22."

After the sale was made, I happened to say to the floor manager, "Boy, that's a pretty uptight salesgirl you have over there."

He just smiled and said, "That's possible, but she sells more cartridge belts than anyone else in the store."

Bethel Masonic Lodge Holds Public Installation Ceremony

BETHEL — The Bethel Masonic Lodge No. 589 held its first public ceremony of installation of officers at the Masonic Temple here on Thursday night.

A dinner was served by the Masons to their guests, officers and members. Following the dinner, the retiring Master, John L. Watson called the lodge to order and welcomed visitors. Most Worshipful James W. Brewer, Past Grand Master of Masons in North Carolina, was invited to the East to conduct the ceremony of installation.

Cleve M. Burton Jr. was installed as the new Master. He received the charter of the lodge from the hands of his father, C. M. Burton Sr., Past Master, who was in that office when the present building was purchased and occupied.

Brother Leslie L. Turner, District Deputy Grand Lecturer of the Fifth Masonic District, was marshal for the ceremony and presented the following officers to be installed in their respective stations and places: Carey E. Hammond, Senior Warden; Esper A. Futrell, Junior Warden; Robert L. Martin, Treasurer; Herbert R. Brown, Secretary; Louis F. Currin, Senior Deacon; J. R. Bunting, Junior Deacon; S. Clayton Whitehurst Jr., Senior Steward; James A. Manning, Junior Steward; John L. Watson, Chaplain; and John W. Rook, Tiler.

Break-Ins, Thefts, Charged Local Man

A Greenville man has been arrested by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department following investigation of two break-ins that occurred in November of 1970.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, deputies yesterday arrested Christopher Bland, 17, of 411 Latham Street, and charged him in connection with two incidents on Nov. 12.

The Sheriff said that Raymond Clark's grocery on the Pactolus Highway was broken into on Nov. 12 and a radio and several other items, valued at $35, were reported stolen.

Also, Glisson Rebuilders on the Pactolus Highway was entered on the same date, the Sheriff said, and some $25 worth of tools were reported missing at that time.

Sheriff Tyson reported that the radio and tools were recovered and Bland is currently in jail under $1,000 bond on each of the two counts of breaking-entering and larceny.

A hearing has been set for Feb. 10 in District Court here, he said. Sheriff Tyson noted that charges would also be preferred against a juvenile in connection with the two incidents.

Deputies have also arrested Melvin Lynn Mix, 17, of Smith Street in Fountain on charges of unlawful taking of a school buss following a report of such an incident on Jan. 23.

Sheriff Tyson noted that the bus was allegedly taken from the North Fountain School grounds on Jan. 23. A mail box was also damaged during the incident when the driver backed the bus over the structure, it was reported.

Mix is in jail under $150 bond and a hearing has been set for Feb. 4 in District Court here.

Worsley To 'Presidential Classroom'

A CHAMPION—Chocolate Bete of the Kamer Thai Cattery in Greenville received four winners' ribbons, qualifying him for championship status at the Old Dominion Cat Club's fourth annual show in Richmond over the past weekend. This was the first time the young male had been shown as an adult. He is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Tola Lewis Jr. of 301-A Maple Street.

Stephen Worsley, senior at Rose High School, has been selected as one of the 350 seniors from across the United States, U. S. territories and the Department of Defense and Department of State dependent high schools who will be attending the Presidential Classroom for Young Americans.

Chairman Charles G. Allison this week announced the names of winners who will spend a week in Washington from February 27 through March 6 in the 1971 Secondary High School Program of the Presidential Classroom for Young Americans.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Worsley of Greenville, young Worsley will be attending as a congressional allotment of Congressman Walter B. Jones.

In addition to students from each of the 50 states, students will also be coming from the four U.S. territories, from American Samoa, and from U.S. overseas schools in Argentina, Nicaragua, Mexico, Italy, Germany, Belgium, Labrador, Okinawa and the Philippines. Students will participate in 24 seminars involving leading administration, congressional, agency and military officials. City mayors and members of Washington's diplomatic and press corps are also included on the staff of participating personnel. Many of the seminars are planned for on-site locations including the Department of State; Commerce; Health, Education and Welfare; and Capitol Hill.

Costs of the trip and other expenses involved have been

Seeking Cut In Medicaid

RALEIGH (AP)—A proposal for an across-the-board reduction in fees paid for medical services in the Medicaid program was expected to be presented today to the North Carolina Board of Social Services.

Department sources said one proposal would reduce to $12 of $15 the daily payment to nursing homes. Medicaid reimburses nursing homes for "allowable costs," which generally average more than $15 per day.

Other proposals include:—A 10 to 20 per cent reduction in fees paid to doctors, dentists, optometrists and other providers of medical services.

Fees are based on "customary and reasonable" charges by the provider, although the social services department has set an upper limit.

—Limiting to 90 days the number of nursing home days and limiting to 30, 60 or 90 the number of in-hospital days covered by Medicaid. At present there are no limitations.

NEW YEAR'S HABIT
LONDON (AP)—Giving birth is getting to be a New Year's Day habit for Mrs. Roy Jones, 22. On Jan. 1, 1970, Stuart arrived. Paul was born 48 minutes after 1971 began. Both boys weighed the same—8 pounds, 4 ounces.

Rubber is the gummy part of a thick juice called latex.

$12 Million In Highway Project Bids Are Received

RALEIGH (AP) — The Highway Commission has received bids totaling $12.4 million on 118 miles of road construction.

Apparent low bids will be reviewed Feb. 4. One bid, for $1.1 million, was to prepare the site for a welcome center on I-85 between Kings Mountain and the South Carolina line. It involves grading, paving and construction of a sewage treatment and disposal plant. A later contract will be let to erect the welcome center and rest area buildings. Ledbetter Bros. of Rome, Ga., was the apparent low bidder. The projects and apparent low bidders include:

Buncombe County—2.885 miles of coarse aggregate base course, bituminous concrete base, binder, surface, concrete paving and signing for paving on U. S. 19 and 23 from about 0.7 mile north of the East-West Expressway in Asheville, north-erly to a point west of the Old Asheville-Weaverville Highway at New Bridge. $1,899,279.89, Asheville Contracting Co., Asheville. Final completion date: July 1, 1972.

Beaufort-Pitt Counties—7.99 miles of sand, asphalt surface for surfacing 7 sections of secondary roads. $90,696.20, Barrus Construction Co., Kinston. Final completion date: Aug. 1, 1971.

Craven-Jones Counties—20.16 miles of bituminous concrete binder and surface for resurfacing 5 sections of U. S. 17 from U. S. 70 in New Bern to the Onslow County line. $397,451.50, Barrus Construction Co., Kinston. Final completion date: Aug. 1, 1971.

Franklin-Person-Granville-Wake Counties—Upgrading electric traffic signals at 31 intersections within the corporate limits of the cities of Roxboro, Louisburg, Oxford, Zebulon, Wake Forest and Wendell. $55,892.65, Watson Electrical Construction Co., Wilson. Final completion date: Sept. 1, 1971. Wake County—2.638 miles of grading, coarse aggregate base course, bituminous concrete binder, surface and culverts at the Cary connector from about 3047 feet southwest of I-40, southwesterly to about 170 feet south of old N. C. 54 in Cary. $706,450.35, C. C. Mangum, Raleigh. Final completion date: Aug. 1, 1972.

Wake County—1.048 miles of grading, coarse aggregate base course, bituminous concrete base, binder, surface and culverts for improvements on U. S. 70 in and near Raleigh from about 792 feet west of Morehead Drive to the Crabtree Creek Bridge. $1,168,607.40, C. C. Mangum, Raleigh. Final completion date: July 1, 1972.

Guilford County—0.491 mile of grading, coarse aggregate base course, bituminous concrete binder and surface for English Road-Broad avenue connector in High Point. $14,337.45, Thompson-Arthur Paving Co., Greensboro. Final completion date: Dec. 1, 1971.

Guilford County—1.176 miles of grading, coarse aggregate base course, bituminous concrete binder, surface and structures for Marshall Street in Winston-Salem from Macon Drive, northerly to about 259 feet north of the city limits. $1,473,182.06, Sherman-Simpson, Inc., Mount Airy. Final completion date: Oct. 1, 1972.

Mecklenburg County—1.168 miles of grading, bituminous concrete base, binder and surface for improvements on Sugar Creek Road in Charlotte of I-85. $889,403.75, Blythe from just north of North Tryon Street, northerly to just south completion date: Sept. 1, 1972.

Scalded As Punishment

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — She was placed in scalding water as punishment for drinking grape juice.

That's what Victoria Myers, 9, told authorities. She is in University Hospital here in poor condition suffering burns from the waist down. Drinking grape juice is against her family's religion, she said. Her father is a Seventh Day Adventist minister.

Victoria's mother, Mrs. C. A. Myers of Huntsville, has been released from jail on $500 bond. She is charged with intent to murder.

The court stipulated that Mrs. Myers could not visit her daughter without the consent of the attending physician. Other children of the couple are in the custody of juvenile authorities.

The child was switched from Children's Hospital to University Hospital because the latter has whirlpool tanks to treat her.

And you get six more recipes free with specially marked Red Band Flour sacks. Hot Ideas with Biscuits. All sure-fire good because you make them with Armour Star Treet and Red Band Flour. The flour so good it's become a Southern Tradition.

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| 1 can (4 ounces) mushroom stems and pieces, drained  | 1/2 cup milk                               |
| 1/2 cup chopped onion                                | 1 can (12 ounces) ARMOUR Star Treet, cubed |
| 2 tablespoons butter or margarine                    | 1 cup RED BAND Self-Rising Flour*          |
| 1 tablespoon flour                                   | 3 tablespoons shortening                   |
| 1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed cream of celery soup | 1/2 cup milk                               |

Heat oven to 450°. In saucepan, cook and stir mushrooms and onion in butter until onion is tender. Stir in 1 tablespoon flour. Cook over low heat, stirring until mixture is bubbly. Remove from heat. Stir in soup and 1/2 cup milk. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Fold in meat; heat through. Pour into ungreased 1 1/2-quart casserole.

Measure 1 cup flour into bowl. Cut in shortening thoroughly. Stir in 1/2 cup milk until mixture cleans side of bowl. Round up on lightly floured cloth-covered board; knead 25 to 30 times. Roll dough to fit top of casserole. Bake about 20 minutes or until golden brown. 4 to 6 servings.

*If using RED BAND Plain Flour, add 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Lots Of Talk, Action Dubious On Revenue Sharing

(Editor's note: Few pieces of legislation are likely to generate more debate in the new Congress than "revenue sharing." Here is a report on the program; what it is and how it would work.

By BROOKS JACKSON

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Pressure is growing inside and outside Congress for revenue sharing, an idea that looks simple but isn't.

Under revenue sharing the federal government, blessed with income-tax revenue that automatically goes up faster than the over-all economy, would turn over some of the money to hard-pressed state and local governments, with no strings attached.

President Nixon, committed to his "new federalism" policy of strengthening state governments, will press harder than ever for revenue sharing this year. Governors and mayors are clamoring for it, a recent poll shows 71 per cent of Americans like the idea, and a growing number of congressmen and senators appear to be lining up behind it.

Opponents of revenue sharing include fiscal conservatives who see it as another spending plan, organized labor and the National Education Association which say it has hidden pitfalls, and many members of Congress simply reluctant to let power pass out of their hands or to raise taxes for the benefit of another level of government.

The arguments criss-cross party lines and ideological boundaries. Republicans, Democrats, liberals, moderates and conservatives can be found on both sides of the issue.

THE DEBATE

FOR—Pinched by rising costs and lagging tax takes, many states and cities predict cut-backs in basic services or increases in taxes without increased federal aid, an Associated Press survey showed last month. Federal aid, in the form of no-strings federal revenue sharing, is the answer.

AGAINST—States and cities have only themselves to blame, since they can always raise their own taxes. Anyway, the federal government already gives them about $25 billion yearly in direct, conditional grants-in-aid and about another $7 billion in indirect loans and subsidies.

FOR—The grants only underline the basic point that the federal government has gotten too much power, since 20 years ago those grants totalled only $2 billion. Furthermore the imbalance promises to get worse because the federal government has an easier time raising money than local governments. The graduated federal income tax goes up 1.5 per cent for every 1 per cent growth in the economy. State and local taxes have less of an automatic increase and frequently have to be raised by law, sometimes getting the men who raised them turned out of office.

Besides, most grant-in-aid programs require recipients to share costs. On top of that, control remains in Washington where miles of red tape keep a lot of aid from reaching those it is supposed to help. And finally, states and localities can't tell from one year to the next how much Congress will decide to put into its own programs.

AGAINST—Desirable national standards in such areas as civil rights, welfare and labor practices can be enforced only if Washington keeps strings on the money it hands to states and localities.

FOR—The problems of the '70s are primarily local—police protection, education, health, sanitation. Cities and states that raise taxes to meet these problems drive out taxpaying citizens and businesses. Federal revenue sharing would spread the tax burden equitably and allow problems to be met where they occur.

AGAINST—The same thing could be accomplished by streamlining grant-in-aid programs. Besides, revenue sharing would make state and local governments more dependent than ever on federal handouts and reduce incentive for low-tax areas to bring their levies in line with high-tax neighbors who suffer from the difference.

OUTLOOK

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills of the House Ways and Means Committee, says he is more opposed than ever because of growing federal deficits. He says he may hold hearings, but they will be late in the year at best. Meanwhile, pressure is mounting. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and other big-state governors are calling for it louder than ever.

In an unusual maneuver that could bring considerable heat to bear, the National Legislative Conference and allied organizations are pressing a call for a constitutional convention to write a revenue-sharing amendment. If 34 state legislatures pass resolutions calling for such a convention Congress is obliged under the Constitution to convene one.

However, if revenue sharing should clear committee of the rank-and-file support for it could evaporate in wrangling over details.

In short, the outlook is for much discussion. Action is another matter.

No Smoking For Cowboys

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Cigarette smoking was banned among cowboys working on cattle drives for Col. C. C. Slaughter in West Texas during the early part of the 20th century.

The no-smoking rule, for the cowboys of the onetime biggest taxpayer in Texas, was strictly economic. The time a poke spent away from his post—borrowing paper, tobacco or a match from a companion—often allowed cattle to drift. Running the cattle back into line caused the loss of a few precious ounces of weight.

There was also the possibility of one spark starting a prairie fire on the Texas High Plains. Records of the old Slaughter cattle drives in the early 1900s were kept in diaries of foreman Hiley T. Boyd. Boyd often mentioned the "no smoking" in his diaries, now on display in the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

"I was a deadly sin to run the cows and I wanted to fatten them every step of the way on a drive," Boyd recorded. "If any smoking was done it was kept a secret."

In 1947, 35 per cent of women 18 to 64 years old were either working or seeking work. By 1968 this proportion had risen to 48 per cent.

Mao, Mao And More Mao On Red China's TV

By CHARLES R. SMITH
HONG KONG (UPI)—Television programming in Communist China is one big commercial for one big product.

No broadcast day begins on any of China's few dozen TV stations without a glowing tribute to the 77-year-old chairman of the Chinese Communist party, Mao Tse-tung. The programs that follow hammer home with single-minded simplicity one central theme—Mao is great and his thought alone points the correct way for the advancement of Communism, China and three-quarters of a billion Chinese people.

Unofficial Anthem
"East is Red," is a revolutionary song that seems to have become the unofficial national anthem.

Mao's head then flashes on the screen, and seems to rush at the viewer with zoom-lens effect. His head has a luminescent glow and is bathed in an aura of light radiating from behind, giving Mao a saintly appearance.

Among the first programs of any day is a session devoted to the study of Mao's thought.

A typical program day also may include a "revolutionary" Chinese opera, ballet or play using a contemporary theme, an anti-Japanese war film or a documentary showing students sent from the cities to the countryside happily engaged in farm work or in Mao thought study sessions with peasants.

Other program material may include a film of some new industrial plant or new technique developed by workers, a children's program, a talk or film on health and hygiene, a news broadcast, and perhaps an Albanian film showing hulking Albanian entertainers bounding across the stage and speaking dubbed-in Mandarin Chinese. All are keyed to love and loyalty for Chairman Mao and his thought.

State News
The "news" material that appears on China's TV stations is as stale as last night's beer.

No film is put on TV until it has been carefully edited and checked thoroughly for proper ideological content and to make certain that everything and everyone, particularly Mao and other top leaders, are shown in the proper perspective.

This means that some major domestic news events do not appear on television for days or weeks after they have occurred. Some never do.

It is an extremely rare occasion that film of foreign news events is shown on China's TV. When it is, it usually shows some Chinese delegation visiting Albania or Africa or some Viet Cong troops in a victorious pose.

China's first television station was inaugurated in Peking in 1958. Since then stations have been opened in 40 to 50 other cities. The latest was an experimental station opened in Urumchi, capital of remote Sinkiang Province, in connection with the 21st national day celebrations last October.

Most of the stations operate only a few hours a day. Many do not operate every day.

In addition to the regular channel, Peking also has a second channel for teaching college courses to cadres and workers in hundreds of organizations. This television college was opened in March, 1960.

The number of television sets in China is estimated at somewhere between 100,000 and 200,000. Few are individually owned. Most are located in recreation rooms of factories, schools, people's communes or other public places.

Few Exports
China has at least a dozen factories turning out TV sets.

Most are for domestic use but a few are exported. Prices range from about 200 yan (about $84) for an eight-inch set to more than 500 yan (about $210) for a 17-inch set. This is from three to seven times the average monthly wage of an urban factory worker.

China's television stations all are state-operated and have never carried commercials—except for the state and its leaders.

An editorial in a Communist party paper last year made it clear that the sole purpose of China's radio and television broadcasting is to serve as "a tool of class struggle."

"It occupies an important position in the ideological and public opinion field. The most sacred responsibility of the proletarian broadcasting and television network is to be a loyal messenger to convey Chairman Mao's great voice and the fighting calls issued by the party Central Committee with Chairman Mao as its leader and Vice Chairman Lin (PIAO) as its deputy leader."

A Wheelchair Sound Guides

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Lester Lempert, a dentist in suburban Brighton, has built an electronic wheelchair that can be operated up to 4 miles an hour simply by blowing into a microphone.

Lempert said he and four engineers spent six months and more than $2,000 to develop the chair, which can operate at four speeds.

Song Of The Heroes Stirs Controversy

By WELDON GRIMSLEY
The Nashville Banner
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "I wish I knew more men that I'd be proud for my son to look up to and say, 'Daddy, when I grow up, I want to be just like him.'"

With that sentence, singer Bill Anderson and Detroit newsman Bob Talbert conclude the lyrics to Anderson's hit single and title song from his new Decca album just released, "Where Have All Our Heroes Gone?"

The song, a glowing tribute to heroes throughout the history of America, has been a huge success for the entertainer, bringing him both wide praise and isolated abuse.

Soldiers in Vietnam write Anderson to tell him the real heroes of today are fighting for freedom in South Vietnam.

A well-known female folk singer, noted for the antiwar, antiestablishment causes she supports, ridicules the song during stage performances.

About 90 per cent of the radio stations which have played the record have boosted it to the top spot on their local charts. At least one "underground" station plays the Anderson hit along with the Star Spangled Banner, putting them both down.

The song, co-written by Talbert, points to heroes such as Gen Douglas MacArthur, "who returned, like he said he would," Gene Autry and Roy Rogers, "who chased the bad guys right off the screen," and Charles Lindbergh, "who flew the ocean."

Though the song speaks of antiheroes, it calls none by name.

The song concludes that: "This country needs a lot of things today, friends. But it doesn't need any one thing any more than it needs some real heroes ... men who know what it means to be looked up to by a grimy-faced kid ... men who want to sign autograph books, and not deals under the table ... men who are willing to play the game with the people who made them heroes ... men who don't mind putting on a white hat and saying 'thank you' and 'please.'"

Though some attack the pro-American son, by-and-large the opposite has been the case, such as the Optimist Club plaque presented Anderson in "honor and recognition of his unselfish contribution in promotion of patriotism," and a similar award from the VFW and others.

Anderson is proud of the song, but he doesn't plan to rush out another release of the same nature just for the sake of producing a follow-up.

"Chances are," he said, "that should I do that people would say it's good, but not as good as 'Heroes.' However, I would be very happy to record another patriotic song if one of the stature of this one comes along."

Talbert expressed the feeling behind the hit when he said it is "not a political song" but "a gut reaction of a 34-year-old middle-class, middle-of-the-road, middle American parent who worries about the type of heroes his kids will have to look up to one day. That's all there is to it."

Crusader Nader Says He Isn't Much Of A Consumer

By WILLIAM B. MEAD
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Six years after coming to Washington, Ralph Nader is switching the focus of his consumer crusade to the grass roots. His goal is to enlist an army of students, housewives and particularly young lawyers to do at home what Nader has done from his Washington base. Nader says nearly all the best lawyers work for the highest bidder, usually big business. He feels this results in an almost unbroken string of decisions which shortchange the public. Nader believes the solution is to give the public equal representation in the legal arena—the same caliber of lawyers, accountants and scientists hired by business. For instance, Nader says it is often hopeless for a homeowner to protest his property tax. The answer, he says, is for all local homeowners to chip in, hire a lawyer and perhaps an accountant, survey all the tax assessments and argue for lower rates on homes and higher rates on business. He says this is precisely what industry does with the result that many localities grant tax favors to local business and make up the difference by taxing homeowners more. Nader Works Hard. Now 36, Nader still works 16 to 20 hours a day. He foregoes vacations and social life, works closely with consumer-minded congressmen, needles federal agencies and petitions for tougher action against deceptive advertising, hazardous cars and contaminated foods. But he is spending more and more time on the road, not just giving speeches—which for years have helped finance his office—but trying to spark creation of local and state public service enterprises. "We've got to get more people into this kind of work," Nader told UPI in an interview. "There will be 1,000 public service lawyers by 1975, compared with perhaps 50 now. But that's too slow." Nader said his primary recruiting targets are college students and young lawyers. His approach to students runs like this: You say you want to fight racism, pollution, consumer abuses. Well, put your money where your mouth is. Chip in $3 a year each for a statewide public service fund, elect your own board of directors, pick your targets, hire lawyers and other skilled help and go to work. In one long day late last year, Nader delivered that message to students at nine campuses in Oregon. Within a few weeks, he said, 50 per cent of the entire enrollment of nine colleges and universities signed up to participate. OSPiRG is Result. The result was OSPiRG, the Oregon Students Public Interest Research Group. Nader says similar groups are being organized by college students in Illinois, Minnesota and Georgia. "If you could get just one of these in every state it would make a tremendous difference," Nader said. To young Wall Street lawyers, Nader makes this pitch: Right out of law school you make $16,000 to $18,000 a year from business. You owe something to the other side of issues.

Chip in $500 a year each and set up an independent law firm to do public service work. "I call it a 'breeder law firm' because it would prompt similar lawyers' efforts elsewhere," Nader said. "They can dig up or borrow $500 to improve the system which is paying them so well." With skilled grass roots representation, Nader said, the consumer movement can be "action oriented." So far, he said, it has been largely "informational and educational." Nader's Washington goals this year are the same broad consumer protection laws that narrowly failed to win approval by Congress in 1970. One would establish an independent federal agency to represent the consumer. In effect, the taxpayers would finance on a large national scale the kind of public service firm Nader is trying to create privately elsewhere on a small local scale. Another, also linked to Nader's idea that consumers must band together, would let one aggrieved customer sue a firm on behalf of everyone victimized by the same shoddy product or phony sales pitch. Washington Office. Nader's Washington office is frequently pictured as a small, threadbare operation populated chiefly by a few idealistic students. Nader actually runs two Washington offices. The main one, the Center for the Study of Responsive Law, is the home of the widely publicized "Nader's Raiders," student groups whose investigative reports have scorched federal bureaucrats.

The center is tax exempt, sticks to investigations and public disclosure of alleged scandals and shortcomings in government and business, and has an annual budget of $285,000. Its half dozen lawyers make up to $15,000 a year, but the full-time staff totals fewer than 15. The second office, with a $170,000 budget, is called the Public Interest Research Group. This is a nonprofit firm of 14 young lawyers who receive $5,000 their first year out of law school. Nader signs them up in the expectation they will move on to more lucrative jobs. A few stay two years or more, however. It was one of Nader's young lawyers who sued the Food and Drug Administration seeking stiffer warning labels on birth control pills. Another is looking into environmental hazards of nuclear power plants. A third is exploring ways to force more public disclosure of government activities. Nader's Financing. Where does Nader get his money? Small foundations finance most of the center's activities, Nader said, with a substantial but lesser amount coming in small contributions from individuals. He said the fund raising gets harder with fame, not easier. "You get less money the more effective you get," Nader said. "Some foundations have cut us off because we're too controversial for them." The law firm is not tax exempt and hence not eligible for charitable donations. Its money comes mainly from two sources. One is the more than $400,000 Nader got in his suit against General Motors Corp., which had hired private detectives to trail the author of "Unsafe At Any Speed." The second source is Nader's own fund raising, mostly lecturing and writing. Nader estimated he spends 20 per cent of his time raising money to pay office bills. "Almost everything I earn is turned back," he said. "I don't need much to live on. I'm not much of a consumer."

"SOMETHING for EVERYONE...SAVINGS for ALL!"

They Catch The Obscene Phone Caller

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — The woman, who had complained of a persistent obscene phone caller, was asked whether she could keep him on the line long enough to make a trace possible.

"Sure," she replied. "I talked to him for 45 minutes the other night."

That's the story told by Norman Bach, director of Bell Telephone Co.'s anonymous call bureau in Western Pennsylvania, to illustrate what he considers a major factor in the obscene call problem: The willingness of some people to lend an ear.

Bach's first rule of phone use is simple: "If the caller won't identify himself, hang up."

"In the majority of cases we've had, the person who is making the call is an exhibitionist," Bach explained. "He has to have an audience or his effort is wasted. There is no doubt in my mind that if everyone would hang up it would really cut this thing down."

Thus far, Bach says, the bureau has identified some 5,700 persons responsible for such calls. "But by doing so we believe we have disposed of about 50,000 cases," he said. "In some instances one man or woman is responsible for calls to scores of victims."

An anonymous call conviction in Pennsylvania carries penalties from $500 and one year in jail to $5,000 and five years. Investigations by Bach's bureau have led to 700 convictions.

"Our experience has been, however, that most people don't want to prosecute," he said.

"Very often the caller is a neighbor, a relative or someone with whom they may have had an argument or an unsatisfactory business dealing. Quite often the callers are mentally ill or just working off a childish peeve."

Sometimes Bell investigators break a case with one phone call. Other times the investigations drag on.

Instances of harassing calls include the woman who phoned her landlord and blew a whistle in his ear, the caller who falsely told a woman her husband had been killed in a car crash and the untrue report to a GI's parents that he had been wounded in Vietnam.

Bach's bureau is one of three in Pennsylvania and one of many throughout the nationwide Bell System. Hundreds of thousands of complaints are made each year, but Bach says the battle is being won.

The savvy of the Bell investigators and the latest electronic tracing equipment are part of the answer, Bach says, but public education is an important factor.

HORSE-FUNDED RESEARCH
FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The two-year-old thoroughbred which Kentucky horsemen gave to visiting Republican governors at their conference two years ago has won $5,000 in races. A check for that amount was donated to a non-profit horse research foundation.

NEW YORK (AP) — After nine straight sessions of advance, the stock market suffered a moderate setback early today. Trading was heavy.
By 11 a.m. the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had slipped 4.11 points to 862.68. Declines on the New York Stock Exchange led advances by more than 2 to 1. Price changes in individual issues were generally small.
Analysts said the profit-taking pressure of the past several sessions had become dominant but that it was being contained by reinvestment in the market.

A mild downward adjustment in prices had been anticipated by many analysts in view of the prolonged rally the market had been experiencing.
The market's upward momentum appeared to be flagging even in Tuesday's session, when the Dow industrial average inches ahead on a 1.17 points.

recent survey conducted provides Greenville with the required three percent quota. He pointed out, however, that eligibility for funds was confined to children whose parents were in some way connected with federal positions — such as Voice of America personnel, recruiting personnel and similar employees.
Board members approved a motion offered by Harding Sugg that the school officials proceed with efforts to secure such funds.
At the conclusion of the special meeting, school board members met in a workshop session to research ideas on formulating plans to present later as a basis for long range future needs for additional school facilities.
When details are assembled, these will be presented at a regular meeting of the board.

'Exit The King' To Open On Wednesday

Ionesco's "Exit The King" is the next production scheduled for McGinnis Auditorium on campus at East Carolina University. A four night run begins Wednesday, February 3, and continues through Saturday night, February 6.
"Exit The King" was called "Ionesco's finest play" by New York Times drama critic Clive Barnes. This modern play revolves around the death of a mythical monarch, King Berenger the First.
In the opening of the play, an image of decay is projected. King Berenger's domain has been reduced to a few miles. The inhabitants have all fled the kingdom, palace walls are cracking. The king is attended by a nurse, a member of his bodyguard, a doctor and two queens. The first queen is a hard, uncompromising person; the second a soft and loving person.
In exactly one hour and a half the king will be dead, and the kingdom ended. "In meditating on death," Barnes wrote in his review of the New York production in 1968, "somehow Ionesco confirms the joy of life."
In the East Carolina Playhouse production, the role of King Berenger will be played by Mark Ramsey, who has appeared on the McGinnis stage in several productions over the past few years. Donna Goodnight and Vickie Batchelor are his queens; Chris Jones is the doctor; Danny Irvine the bodyguard; and Linda Taylor the nurse.
Tickets for the Playhouse production are now available at the McGinnis Auditorium box office. Tickets are $2.00 each for the general public and $1.00 for faculty and staff at the university.

New York Retains Superiority Over Milwaukee In 107-98 Win

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks had the misfortune Tuesday night of entering Madison Square Garden when New York fans were asking "will the real New York Knicks stand up, please."

The real Knicks responded by not only standing, but also by running, shooting and rebounding, and retained their superiority over the Bucks with a 107-98 victory in a game matching the National Basketball Association's two powerhouses.

In other games, the Baltimore Bullets edged past the San Francisco Warriors 103-98, Philadelphia beat the Atlanta Hawks 129-122, Phoenix clobbered Buffalo 114-82 and Los Angeles whipped Chicago 136-111.

In the American Basketball

Association, the Floridians crushed the New York Nets 121-97, Utah outscored Pittsburgh 145-127, Memphis upended Indiana 108-102 and Kentucky nipped Texas 125-122.

"We know we can beat Milwaukee if we play our game," said Walt Frazier, recalling how the Bucks had defeated the Knicks recently in Milwaukee when Willis Reed still was not up to par after a bout with the flu.

"The fans are the ones who keep shouting for us to beat Milwaukee. We kept reading it in the press when we were going bad how Milwaukee is going to win the title this year."

The Knicks now have three straight victories, including this third triumph, in four games against the Bucks this season. Reed was ready for this one, scoring 35 points and grabbing 15 rebounds in 47 minutes of play to win his personal duel with Milwaukee's Lew Alcindor. Alcindor, who leads the league in scoring and field goal percentage, hit only 11 of 32 field shots for 29 points, while hauling in 25 rebounds.

Dave DeBusschere, with 18 points and 14 rebounds, and Frazier, with 22 points, teamed to put the Knicks ahead 77-70 after three quarters.

The lead reached 93-80 before the Bucks made a final surge to within one point. But Dick Barnett started a decisive run of seven consecutive New York points with two jump shots in the final two minutes.

Kevin Loughery of Baltimore hit two baskets in the final 1½ minutes to boost a one-point lead to five. Earl Monroe led the Bullets with 26 points.

Hal Greer broke loose for 36 points for Philadelphia and closed within 18 points of the magic 20,000 career point mark. Greer's three baskets down the stretch kept the 76ers out of danger. Pete Maravich had 34 points and Lou Hudson 31 for Atlanta.

Phoenix bolted to a 65-34 halftime bulge and coasted the rest of the way against cold-shooting Buffalo. Dick Van Arsdale paced the Suns with 23 points while Paul Long led the Braves with 19 points, 14 in the last period.

Los Angeles chalked up its fourth straight victory at the expense of Chicago and boosted its Pacific Division lead to four games.

BETHEL — The North Pitt Panthers roller past the Conley Vikings last night, 82-68. The North Pitt ladies also came out on top by defeating Conley, 49-28.

The North Pitt girls built a seven point lead in the first quarter by outscoring Conley 14-7. In the second quarter North Pitt added one point to its lead by scoring eight points while Conley again hit for seven points. The North Pitt team went into the dressing rooms at halftime leading 22-14.

North Pitt opened the third quarter by hitting seven points before Conley could break the ice. Worthington stopped Conley's drought by scoring on a field goal and then hitting two free throws. The score now stood at 31-19. North Pitt then came alive and scored eight points while holding Conley to only one field goal for the rest of the quarter. The score at the end of the third quarter stood at 37-21.

In the fourth period the Panthers increased their lead by outscoring Conley 12-7. The two teams played evenly until there was only about three minutes remaining in the game and then North Pitt hit six consecutive points while holding Conley to only one free throw for the remainder of the game. North Pitt won the game with the final score of 49-28. The leading scorers for North Pitt were Susan James with 15 and Minnie Hollis with 14. Marge Dewes led Conley with 14.

In the boys contest North Pitt built a commanding lead in the first period by outscoring Conley 27-10. Conley scored the first point of the ball game on a free throw by Hawkins and then the North Pitt Panthers took over and scored 10 points before Conley could add to their score. The Vikings scored five points while North Pitt hit only one field goal to cut the Panthers' lead down to six at 12-6. North Pitt then preceded to score 15 points while they held the Vikings to only two field goals. The score at the end of the first period was 27-10, North Pitt's favor.

Conley found the range in the second quarter but was able to cut only two points off the North Pitt lead. The score at the end of the first half stood at 45-30.

Both of the teams scored 17 in the third period allowing North Pitt to hold on to a 15 point lead. The Panthers were leading at the end of the third period 62-47.

North Pitt built up a 23 point lead in the opening minutes of the first period by outscoring the Vikings 11-6. The Vikings came back to score 10 points while holding North Pitt to only two points to cut the lead down to 15 at 77-62, but the Vikings started their surge too late and the North Pitt Panthers emerged victorious 82-68.

The leading scorers for North Pitt were Wayne Brown with 22, while William Shivar scored 22 and Frank Brown finished with 13. The high scorers for Conley were Bobby Cox with 18, David Pugh with 15, Tony Tyson hitting for 11 and Dwight Hawkins with 10.

Oak City Wins Two At Jasper

JASPER — Oak City High School captured a pair of victories from Jasper High School last night. The boys won their game, 53-46, while the girls took a 38-10 victory.

Oak City inched out into an 11-8 lead in the boys contest during the first period, then added to the lead in the second frame. In that period, the Trojans dumped in 15 points while limiting Jasper to eight. That ran the Oak City lead out to 26-16.

In the third period, Oak City was content to play close to Jasper and just maintain the lead. Jasper managed to outthrust Oak City, 11-10, but the Trojans still held a 36-27 lead as the final period got underway. In the final period, Jasper outscored Oak City again, 19-17, but it wasn't enough.

William Raynor, Donnie Duggins and Whit Whitfield each scored 12 points in leading Oak City to the win.

Tom Bryant led Jasper with 13 points, while Calvin Koonce had 11 and Don Webb had 10.

In the girls contest, Oak City got all the points it needed in the first period, as it shut out Jasper, 11-0. In the second frame, the Trojanettes again outthrust Jasper, 8-5, and built the lead to 19-5 at halftime.

Oak City continued to move away in the third period, outscoring Jasper 13-3. That made the score 32-8 as the final period got underway. Oak City again outthrust its host, 6-2, to wind up the victory.

Kathryn Edmundson led Oak City with 10 points.

Oak City travels to Bear Grass on Friday.

Vanceboro Rolls Past Bulldogs

VANCEBORO — Vanceboro and Grifton High School split a pair of basketball games last night. Vanceboro captured the boys event, 89-49, while the Grifton girls gained a 39-19 victory.

In the girls game, the Lady Bulldogs pushed out to a 7-2 lead in the first period. Vanceboro tried to rally in the second frame, outthrusting Grifton, 9-7, but they still trailed at the half, 14-11.

Grifton put the game on ice in the third period, outthrusting Vanceboro, 13-3. That ran the Bulldog margin out to 27-14 as the final period got underway. In that, Grifton again outthrust the Raiders, 12-5.

Hazel Coles led Grifton with 22, while Laura Kilpatrick had 11 points. Katherine Norfleet had 11 for Vanceboro.

In the boys contest, Vanceboro streaked a way to build up a 26-10 lead in the first period. They were never in trouble after that. Grifton matched the Red Raiders production in the second period, as both clubs threw in 18 points, running the score up to 44-28 at the half.

In the third period, Vanceboro increased its lead with a 21-12 advantage in the quarter. That made it 65-40 as the final period got underway. Vanceboro again outthrust the Bulldogs, 24-9, in the final frame to insure the victory.

Roland Hooks paced Vanceboro with 32 points, while Cornelius Dawson had 25, and Ritchie Lilly had 19. For Grifton, Mike Jackson had 15.

Grifton hosts Ayden on Friday, while Vanceboro entertains Jamesville on Tuesday.

Sugg Survives Scare At Hands Of Bears

BEAR GRASS — The Bear Grass Bears came close to pulling off the upset of the year last night, but the H. S. Sugg Eagles managed to escape with ruffled feathers, 67-61. It was the 14th straight win for the Eagles this season.

Sugg slipped away to an 18-12 lead in the first period of play, but hadn't gambled on the spunk of the Bears, who came pounding back in the second frame. The Bears refused to let Sugg break it open, and outthit them, 18-13, during the period. That cut the Lion lead to just one at the half, 31-30.

In the third period, however,

Sugg began to ease away. They poured in 23 points while holding Bear Grass to just 15. The eight-point margin helped push the Lions into a 54-45 lead. But it wasn't over as the Bears fought back again. They outthit Sugg during the period, 16-13, but it wasn't enough to pull back into the game.

Earl Moore led Sugg with 19 points, while Steve Joyner had 18, and Rodrick Forbes had 16.

For the Bears, Vann Rogerson poured in 20 points, while Charles Mobley, Billy Mizelle and Edward Cratt each scored 11.

Sugg also took the junior varsity game, 49-23. Sugg travels to Conetoe on Friday, while Bear Grass entertains Oak City in a Martin County Conference contest.

Established Player Admits He Had Agent While In College

DALLAS (AP) — An established professional basketball player, who asked that his name not be used, has told The Dallas Times Herald he drew $150 a month his senior year in college from an outside "agent" who was speculating on the player's professional career.

The player told Blackie Sherrod, executive sports editor of the Times Herald, "I was drawing $150 a month all during my senior year from an agent. I signed a contract with him, all legal-like."

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has ruled that signing with an "agent" is the same as signing with a professional team before college eligibility expires.

The player told this story of how agents frequented the athletic dorm of his college:

"They usually call the athletic department and try to get the telephone number in the dorm or the house where you're staying. The first contact is by phone.

"Then the agent will come to see you. They usually have scrapbooks with stories about how they got a $100,000 bonus for this player and how they negotiated for a five-year contract for that player. "Then they'll make you a proposition. They'll pay you $100 or $150 a month, or whatever, while you are playing in college and then they'll handle your contract when you are drafted by the pros.

"When you get your bonus money, you pay back all the money they have advanced you — they don't charge any interest—and then they take 10 percent of your contract from then on."

The player told the Times Herald, "I signed a contract and he (the agent) gave me a copy and told me to keep it confidential. You know, if the NCAA ever found it out, the agent would get in trouble and the school would get on probation and all."

The player said, "Lots of big-shot players already have their lawyer when they get to college.

"But some of us average players, when a guy comes along and gives you $150 a month and is gonna help you with your contract and get maybe $20,000 more than you'd be thinking about, well, you say wow, where do I sign."

Manson's Women Followers Will Get To Speak

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — With their lives hanging in the balance, Charles Manson and three women followers may testify in the penalty phase of the Sharon Tate murder trial without opposition from their lawyers, the defense legal team says.

The jury that convicted the four begins hearing testimony Thursday on the penalty. Jurors must decide between life imprisonment and death in the gas chamber.

Chief defense attorney Paul Fitzgerald, who opposed efforts by the women defendants to take the stand during the seven-month trial, says he and other lawyers won't block them any longer.

"The defendants can take the stand if they want to," he said. "It's their lives, and if they want to testify, how can we in good conscience stop them?"

The prosecution seeks the death penalty for Manson, 36, leader of a roving hippie-style tribe, and the three women, who lived in his commune. They were convicted Monday of murder-conspiracy in the bloody slayings of Miss Tate and six others.

Coprossecutor Stephen Kay told a newsman the state would seek to show at the penalty trial that Manson and defendant Susan Atkins committed other crimes.

"The jury is entitled to know the background of the defendants to help them make the very hard decision on whether to send them to the gas chamber," he said.

No new evidence is expected against Leslie Van Houten, 21, and Patricia Krenwinkel, 23.

Kay said the state would offer evidence that Miss Atkins, 22, helped Manson kill Gary Hinman, a musician, a few weeks before the August 1969 Tate slayings. The two have been charged with Hinman's murder.

The prosecutor said he also would introduce testimony that Manson shot and wounded another musician early that month with a gun later used in the Tate killings.

Kay said the state probably would call about 10 witnesses and estimated the penalty phase could last "from two weeks to two months."

The defense, which called no witnesses and presented no evidence at the trial, plans to put on a full defense case with about 20 witnesses, Fitzgerald said. In the trial, the defense rested abruptly when the women insisted they wanted to testify. Defense attorneys refused to question them, saying the women intended to incriminate themselves in an attempt to clear Manson.

Fitzgerald said the defense would call members of Manson's clan as well as relatives and friends of the defendants who would testify to their character. Further, the defense will seek to introduce confessions to the Tate killings by unspecified other persons and to show that the state induced perjury by prosecution witnesses.

Fitzgerald said the odds against getting a life sentence for the defendants were "about 50 to 1."

"I don't think they've got much of a chance," he said, "but we'll try our best."

Fitzgerald said he felt jurors might fear that if the defendants get life, they'll be released eventually. "As a result of novels and television, everyone thinks that defendants who get life get out in seven years," he said. "A lot of jurors think the death penalty is dead anyway. If it was really a viable penalty, they might feel differently."

A person under life sentence in California is eligible for parole after seven years, but the average imprisonment is 12 years.

Fitzgerald said he would normally expect the Tate jury to sentence the women to life because women don't usually get the death penalty.

"But this is not an ordinary case," he said. "Jurors are under pressure to act as representatives of a pretty large community, like the whole world. I think they did what was expected of them when they convicted right down the line, and they'll continue to do what's expected."

MEDAL COLLECTING
CHICAGO (AP) — Commemorative-medal collecting has grown rapidly as a hobby in recent years.

So a Chicago department store appropriately is offering a collector-quality medal commemorating its own store front entrance designed by famed architect Louis Sullivan.

First Lady Barber On Tulsa's Campus

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—Get too close to pert little Mary Phelan "doing her thing" at the University of Tulsa and she may use scissors on you. Or the razor. Miss Phelan, who says "I'm under 30," is the first lady barber on the TU campus, though she is not the only woman who has invaded the sanctuary of the once all-male barber shops in Tulsa.

She looks as if she belonged with the university's coeds rather than prompting quips from customers who find the men in the school's barber shop busy, only to be motioned to have a seat by the bright-eyed brunette.

"You're a barber, too?" an enthusiastic young man asked. "Hey, how about that!"

Career Amuses Many
 Miss Phelan admits her chosen career amuses many, but says she seldom has problems with a customer who doesn't want to put his locks at her mercy.

But she hasn't always been so candid about her job. "I began attending barber school while I was in high school," she said, "and all he wanted was a trim."

school," she said. "Only my closest friends knew what I was doing. My mother did not want me to become a barber, but she is resigned to it now. My brother is even talking about becoming a barber."

Miss Phelan operated her own barber shop in a small town near Tulsa after graduating from barber college. She gave it up after 18 months "because of the sameness" of a small community.

While looking for a shop in Tulsa, she became acquainted with Fred Speer, owner of the university's hair cutting salon.

Caters—Mostly to Men
 She has been in demand by women, too, but says now she doesn't cater to female customers unless their hair is short. During the days of her own business, she had so many women customers she had to send some away.

"They were driving away the men customers," she explained. She's had her share of the long-haired youths, too. "I had one boy who hadn't had a haircut in two years," she said, "and all he wanted was a trim."

Supported Right To Speak Views More Synthetic Proteins In Diet

A spokesman for the East Carolina University chapter of Phi Sigma Pi National Honor fraternity said today that the chapter told Dean James Bearden of the ECU School of Business that they support his "right to express his views" on the economy of North Carolina, rather than his particular stand.

Edward J. Harper, corresponding secretary of the fraternity, made the clarification concerning an article about a letter from the fraternity to Dean Bearden following his recent dialogue with Burlington Industries on the effect of quota restrictions on textile imports.

CHICAGO (AP) — Synthetic proteins may become more and more common on your family table.

Columns, a quarterly publication of Continental Bank, Chicago, says science already knows how to produce chicken that never saw a farm, scallops that were never near the ocean or hamburgers that never knew a steer. Even ice cream that never was near milk is on the market.

It's all done with soybeans. Meat-like products are being spun from soybeans. Grain-base flour can be enriched with fermented molasses.

Worry Clinic Add Drama To Get Attention

Patricia's vehement "Amen" in the middle of Clifton Hirschman's political speech, brought down the house! And may have been the essential incident that led to his nomination and election. For dramatic incidents are essential in advertising as well as all public speaking. Note Cleopatra's use thereof!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
 Ph. D., M. D.
 Case P-555: Patricia, aged 11, is the daughter of Hoosier State Supreme Court Justice Richard Givan.

She attended a political rally with her father to hear the various candidates for county assessor at Indianapolis. One of the latter was Clifton Hirschman, mattress manufacturer.

"Patricia," he had told her prior to the speech making, "I'll give you $5 if you'll jump up in the middle of my talk and shout 'Amen.'"

"Do you want to do it?" Well, $5 looked big to an 11-year-old girl, so she eagerly agreed.

But later she began to suffer from indecision and stage fright. "Daddy," she nudged her distinguished father, "how will I know when to get up and say 'Amen,' for Mr. Hirschman didn't tell me."

Mr. Hirschman was in the middle of his brief talk about the need for more business efficiency in government. Judge Givan nudged his daughter at an appropriate moment.

Bravely she jumped to her feet and called out "Amen."

Well, she stole the show! Her vocal approval brought down the house!

"Honey," Mr. Hirschman exclaimed, "that's worth $5," and he paid her in front of the crowd.

The crowd didn't remember the speeches of the other prospective candidates, so Clifton Hirschman won the nomination and later the official election.

Possibly this little bit of psychological strategy could be proved the decisive factor in his entire campaign.

For people relish dramatics, as editors and advertising experts know very well. Cleopatra also realized this truth, so she resorted to similar dramatics to gain the eye and ear of Julius Caesar.

For Caesar was conquering everything before him as he invaded the eastern Mediterranean area. And he was too busy to see Cleopatra.

So she concocted an ingenious advertising "gimmick." She had herself rolled inside a gorgeous oriental rug.

Then her servants carried this present to Caesar, with a note saying it was a gift from the admiring Queen of Egypt.

When the rug was unrolled in front of Caesar, there lay the voluptuous queen in the most abbreviated of miniskirts!

So Cleopatra saved her country and became the mistress of Caesar, even traveling to Rome to be near him.

In my college textbook, "Psychology Applied," I have listed the 5 essential parts in the definition of the proper sales formula.

"Attract attention" is the first element, followed by "Maintain

Opening lead: King of ♥ Declarer's abundance of natural resources blinded him to the necessity for taking out insurance against the adversities of unfavorable distribution in his four spade contract, and the result was an unnecessary loss.

North did not possess sufficient high card strength to bid three diamonds over South's demand opening bid but, after making the negative response of two no trump, North showed his suit on the next round.

Against the four spade contract West opened the king of hearts which was taken in the closed hand by the lone ace.

Hospital Dash Wasn't Needed

ILFORD, England (AP) — David Foy, 30, thought the sting a pet scorpion fish inflicted on his thumb was fatal, so he jumped into his car for a 10-mile dash to a hospital.

He ran out of gas, luckily near a service station. Then police stopped him for speeding. Finally hospital doctors told him the sting wasn't dangerous, merely painful. "I feel a bit of a chump," Foy said.

AVERAGE SPENDING

LONDON (AP) — British housewives spent an average 2 pounds—$4.80 dollars—a week during 1969 on food for each person in their households, the National Food Survey Committee reported. It said the outlay was 25 cents a week more than in 1968, with 22 cents of the increase caused by inflation.

Acne patients should wash their faces often

Frequent shampoos also are indicated. It also is generally helpful to choose an off-the-face hair style.

Doves Bid For 2 Seats On Armed Services Body

By CARL C. CRAFT
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — A flamboyant new congresswoman and three other doves are gathering strength for a battle over two Democratic vacancies on the hawk-heavy House Armed Services Committee.

Supporters of the drive to cut hawkish strength on the committee—dealing with Pentagon brass are having to battle old political math and geographic balance.

Still, argues New York's colorful Rep. Bella S. Abzug, a woman should be on the powerful panel. "What's more, she says, 'The time is overdue to call into question the symbiotic relationship between the committee and the Department of Defense.'"

The openings developed with loss of the top two Democrats—Chairman L. Mendel Rivers of South Carolina by death, and his next-in-seniority colleague Philip J. Philbin of Massachusetts by election defeat.

While Philbin was losing at the polls, Mrs. Abzug was winning—and she capped her Armed Services bid Tuesday with an announcement she has the backing of fellow New York Democrats including House a major problem for Mrs. Abzug—since New York already has two Democrats and two Republicans on Armed Services.

An escape hatch that could be used by House leaders seeking to avoid the doves would involve a decision to shrink the committee size. But such a move would bring protests from the minority side of the aisle, since it would cut Republican membership, too.
