Report Considered 'Favorable'

Committee Cites Med School Progress

RALEIGH — Impressive progress has been made at East Carolina University in the last few years toward laying the groundwork for a School of Medicine, an accrediting committee report states.

The report, prepared by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education for the AMA and the Association of American Medical Colleges, was presented to Gov. Scott by university officials today.

Dr. Leo Jenkins expressed gratification at the favorable evaluation of ECU's accomplishments to date.

"The survey report of the liaison committee on Medical Education recognizes the need for increasing the physician manpower available to our people; it also recognizes the vital role that the medical school at East Carolina can play in meeting these needs," Dr. Jenkins said after presenting the report to the governor this morning.

"With the availability of an adequate operating budget to acquire the necessary additional faculty and teaching materials, East Carolina University will be ready to implement the School of Medicine authorized by the previous General Assemblies."

In his statement, Dr. Jenkins announced that enrolling students in September 1971 would not be possible now. "Assured funding will enable us to complete the few remaining arrangements necessary to begin an initial class no later than the fall of 1972."

Among the positive factors cited by the committee were: — With North Carolina standing 48th among the 50 states in the proportion of medical students to population, there is a clear need to increase substantially the number of North Carolina students studying medicine.

— The establishment of a two-year medical school at East Carolina University may be expected to increase interest of North Carolina students in the study of medicine and, by increasing opportunities for such study, contribute to this desired increase in interest.

— The shortage of physicians in eastern North Carolina is severe. The establishment of a medical school at East Carolina University may be expected to contribute in some degree to alleviating this shortage, mainly through increasing the number of eastern North Carolina students studying medicine.

— The progress that has been made in the last few years toward laying the groundwork for a School of Medicine, particularly by the North Carolina General Assembly and the administration of East Carolina University, has been impressive.

The committee also found the plans for interim facilities for the School of Medicine in the new Science building "thoroughly adequate for classes up to about 20." The proposed budget and medical library plans were termed reasonable and the proposed number of faculty members adequate. Qualifications of faculty members already at work were said to be adequate.

However, the committee report said much remains to be done in recruiting faculty members for the Biochemistry, Microbiology and Pathology Departments. Questions were raised about the provisions for instruction in Behavioral Sciences and Pathology. The report also said provision would be necessary for student counseling and financial aid. "It may be assumed that a medical school will be reluctant to accept a transfer student if the school must provide financial support."

The greatest problem raised in the report, however, was that of transfer. Here it said, "A matter of major concern to the survey team, and one which it is believed requires much more attention, is the provision of assurance that graduates of the program at East Carolina will be accepted in other schools to complete their training for the M. D. degree. Modern developments in the medical curriculum have greatly complicated the transfer of students between schools. It is urged that there be extended discussions with one or more other medical schools to assure that the curriculum at East Carolina can be meshed smoothly with the other school or schools and basic science graduates of East Carolina assured admission for their clinical training.

A statement issued by East Carolina officials this morning said that the curriculum as planned should "mesh smoothly with any of the four year schools in the state, and, indeed with any school in the country."

"The collective agreement reached between East Carolina University and the three medical schools in the state concerning transfer arrangements is a matter of public record," the statement continued. "To supplement this agreement schools in the southern region are being contacted and some have already expressed a willingness to consider our students for transfer."

Among other things the report revealed was a letter to the committee from Gov. Scott stating, "I wish to express to you my support for the medical program at East Carolina and my belief that the 1971 General Assembly will provide funds for operating costs and for new facilities."

The letter was said to have been dated June 24, 1970.

Apollo 14 Astronauts Swinging In Lunar Orbit; To Land Friday

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 14's astronauts fixed into a "roller coaster" orbit around the moon today, swooping to within 11 miles as they prepared to land Friday in the bleak and rocky lunar highlands.

"We're here!" shouted commander Alan B. Shepard Jr. as Apollo 14 skimmed over the craggy landscape at the low point of the orbit. "I think we can make it down from here tomorrow." As Shepard, Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa circled the lifeless moon, they were struck by its desolate beauty, describing it as "wild," "fantastic," "stark" and "incredible." Shepard and Mitchell could hardly wait to become the fifth and sixth humans to set foot on the surface to further explore this new but ancient world.

The stage was set for another great lunar adventure when the astronauts triggered the command ship Kitty Hawk's engine on the backside of the moon at 2 a.m. EST to zip into an initial orbit 67 to 195 miles high.

Four hours later, they again fired the engine to shift into a path 11 to 68 miles above the surface, the closest approach yet by an Apollo command ship. The lunar module Antares still was hooked to its nose.

On Apollos 11 and 12, the lunar ships were released at altitudes above 65 miles. Antares will be cast off late tonight at the 11-mile altitude in a maneuver intended to improve landing accuracy and to give the astronauts extra fuel to use in the search for a smooth touchdown site.

Shepard and Mitchell said before the flight they expected to experience the sensation of a roller coaster ride as they hurtled downward in the low orbit, with the rugged features of the moon seemingly rushing up to meet them.

The astronauts were exuberant after attaining the initial orbit.

As they passed over the Fra Mauro landing site, Mitchell said: "It sure looks rough down there. As interesting as this is from orbit, it just whets your appetite to get down there." "Fantastic! You're not going to believe this. It looks just like the map," said Roosa.

As Apollo 14 swooped to the 11-mile altitude on the front side of the moon, Mitchell reported the features were much sharper close up.

The rocket burst that shot them into the first orbit occurred behind the dark side of the moon, out of radio contact. It was not until 20 minutes later when Apollo 14 reappeared around the edge of the moon that orbit was confirmed.

Shepard's voice broke the silence with a subdued, "We had an extremely fine burn."

But then the commander, who has waited nearly 10 years for a crack at the moon since he became America's first space-map, could not contain himself, and burst out with, "This is really a wild place."

Ask $6.6 Million Extra To Hospitals, Students

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly's Joint Appropriations committee has been asked to provide $6.6 million in extra funds for hospital construction and loans to medical students in North Carolina during 1971-73.

The request was made Wednesday by William F. Henderson, executive secretary of the Medical Care Commission.

Henderson told the legislators the federal hospital construction program is being changed from direct federal grants to federal guaranteed or direct loans.

He said the commission wants $6 million more than is included in the budget proposed by Gov. Bob Scott and the Advisory Budget Commission to help finance hospital construction loans and help pay interest on the permanent loans.

Henderson also said his agency wants $560,000 for loans to students of medicine, dentistry, nursing, pharmacy and other health-related professions.

He said the commission had increased the number of loans to students during the present biennium and needs the additional funds to keep from having to reduce the scope of the program drastically.

The students' loans are forgiven if they practice for an agreed period of time in North Carolina after their graduation.

The request from the commission was one of six presentations heard by the appropriations committees in their second day of a month-long series of hearings on additional budget requests by state agencies.

Other requests included $3 million for state aid to public libraries, $137,538 for the state

'Portent' Of Power Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The acute shortage of electricity plaguing parts of the Northern United States could be but a bleak portent of things to come, a Federal Power Commission official says.

Since mid-January, 19 voltage cutbacks have been ordered in areas from Chicago to New England. "I've never seen cutbacks like we're seeing now," Commissioner John A. Carver Jr. said in an interview. "Whatever else it might mean at the present time, it means we're going to have to live with this for the foreseeable future unless the good Lord sees fit to change the weather, and I don't think that will happen."

In the last three weeks, according to FPC data, voltage cutbacks of up to 5 per cent have been necessary eight times in the power pool serving New England, seven times in the New York State power pool, three times in the PJM pool serving Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia and once in Chicago and other areas of northern Illinois served by the Commonwealth Edison Co.

The utility firms serve upwards of 50 million people, but few felt any pinch beyond the inconvenience of voluntary compliance with pleas to use as little power as possible. There is no readily noticeable effect until power cutbacks reach 8 per cent as they did during last summer's power crisis along the Eastern Seaboard.

But, according to Carver, the danger of more serious voltage reductions will continue throughout the rest

Greenville Extends Dollar Day Project

Dollar Day has been extended for two days and will be held through Saturday, it was announced today by Harold Creech, manager of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association.

"Due to the icy weather conditions, the chamber has voted to extend Dollar Day through Friday and Saturday citywide," Creech explained.

Creech stated that the semi-annual dollar days held in February and August are citywide trade events involving merchants throughout the city.

Free parking will be provided for shoppers during the sale.

The event had already been scheduled for three days at Pitt Plaza.

"We're hoping for a one hundred percent participation," Frank Steinbeck, Jr., chairman of Pitt Plaza Business Council observed. Steinbeck noted indications are that most merchants plan to join in the parade of bargains that will be available to shoppers in Greenville and the area for this winter occasion.

According to Steinbeck, regular hours are planned by the Pitt Plaza firms during the Dollar Day sales. He noted stores in the shopping center normally remained open til about 9:00 p.m., so that additional hours were not being planned.

"We have decided on the three day period to give people an opportunity to take full advantages of all the benefits," Steinbeck commented. "The values are here for shoppers."

He emphasized the Dollar Day specials are much more inclusive than some of their shorter special sales, such as the Moonlight Madness sales, which occasionally are held for one night only, on Friday nights.

"It is our hope that our participation in this traditional Greenville affair will be of benefit to the entire community," Steinbeck said. "It should help draw people to all of Greenville, not just to the shopping center here alone."

Mace Stolen

COLUMBIA (AP) — The Mace, symbol of authority in the South Carolina House of Representatives, was stolen sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning. House Clerk Inez Watson reported the 215-year-old solid silver, gold burnished Mace was removed from its locked display case.

Sixteen Sites Are Formally Proposed For New County Hospital

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Formal proposals for 16 sites have been made to members of a committee presently looking for a site on which to locate the proposed new Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Voters last November approved issuance of $9 million in bonds with which to construct a new hospital. Since that time a committee composed of representatives of the Board of County Commissioners and the Board of Trustees of Pitt Memorial have been viewing proposed sites.

The committee is scheduled to meet tonight and hopefully will eliminate those sites which, for obvious reasons, would not be suitable for a new hospital.

The committee has had formal proposals for 16 sites ranging in size from 56 to 210 acres and ranging in price up to $4,000 per acre.

Jack Richardson, assistant administrator of the hospital who has been charged with coordinating the building program, said committee members have viewed each of the proposed sites. The next step, he said, is for the committee to reduce the number of sites to "three or four," deleting those sites which for obvious reasons, such as size, location or other reasons would not be suitable.

When the list has been reduced to a workable number, Richardson explained, representatives from the North Carolina Medical Care Commission—which must approve any site selected—and the hospital architects will meet with the committee, view each site and help select the final location. A 100 acre site is thought to be a minimum for the new facility.

Sites presently under review by the committee include: a 100 acre site located on Evans Street extension adjacent to Pinewood Forrest and owned by W. G. Blount; a 100 to 400 acre site located south of Pitt Plaza (on the proposed N.C. 43 rerouting) held by B.B. Sugg, trust officer for North Carolina National Bank; a 150 acre site on a rural road running between the Stantonsburg Road and N.C. 43 about two miles West of the present hospital and owned by M. E. Porter; a 100 acre site across from the Greenville Nursing and Convalescent Center between N.C. 43 and the Stantonsburg Road owned by Joseph S. Moye, Norville Moye Williams, Jesse Roundtree Moye and Emily Moye Hadley; a 104 acre site on the east side of the Allen Road (running between U.S. 264 and the Stantonsburg Road) and owned by W. Arthur Tripp; and a 70 acre site on U.S. 264 southeast of the Hooker Road intersection and owned by D. T. McLawhorn heirs.

Other sites include: a 210 acre tract on the Farmville Highway about one-half miles from the city limits and owned by W. Z. Morton heirs, Wachovia Bank trustee; a 113 acre plot North and East on N.C. 43 just over a half-mile from the present hospital and owned by J. W. Tripp; an 82 acre site a half-mile West of Greenville on the Stantonsburg Road and owned by J. W. King heirs; a 132 acre site northwest of N.C. 43 and next to Moyewood at the city limits and owned by J. R. Moye and family; a 68 acre site adjacent to the 100 acre site opposite the Greenville Nursing facility and owned by J. R. Moye and family; a 56.3 acre site adjacent to the two other sites across from the nursing center and owned by J. M. Moye; and a 100 acre plot Northeast of the Greenville Industrial Park and owned by Greenville Industries.

Remaining sites include: a 100 acre site on Hooker Road owned by Hugh C. Winalow; a 100 acre site on N.C. 43 across from Carriage House Apartments and owned by Ralph C. Tucker; and a 100-plus acre site 1 1/2 miles West of U.S. 13 (Bethel Highway) between Gum Swamp Road and Staton House Road and owned by Lonnie Staton.

A 17th site, an 85 acre tract on N.C. 11-U.S. 13 near Burroughs Wellcome and Co. and owned by Mrs. E. E. Rawl has been mentioned, according to Richardson, but no formal proposal is on file.

Massed On Border

SAIGON (AP)—Twenty thousand South Vietnamese troops were massed in the northwest corner of South Vietnam today, possibly for a thrust into Laos, as 10,000 other Saigon troops pressed a new drive into Cambodia west and northwest of Saigon.

Despite reports circulating in Washington and other foreign capitals that South Vietnamese forces already had crossed into Laos, there was no confirmation of this from military spokesmen.

Backing up the South Vietnamese, some 9,000 U.S. ground troops were on the hunt for enemy supply buildups and infiltration routes in the northern quarter of South Vietnam. Only minor contacts were reported in the first days of the drive, with less than half a dozen North Vietnamese killed and three Americans wounded.

It all added up to one of the biggest campaigns of the Indochina war, with nearly 40,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese troops involved, plus the full weight of American air power in Southeast Asia. Details of the widespread offensive became clear as the U.S. Command today lifted a six-day news blackout on the operations in South Vietnam's northernmost provinces, including reopening of the abandoned U.S. Marine combat base at Khe Sanh.

In Washington, spokesmen for the State Department and Defense Department declined immediate comment.

U.S. and South Vietnamese officials in Saigon said the aim is to insure the safety of American forces being withdrawn from Vietnam and to pave the way for President Nixon to announce in April that thousands more will be withdrawn.

But some observers saw the campaign as a go-for-broke operation encouraged by the South Vietnamese command to keep North Vietnam off balance, reduce the Communist command's capability to wage war in Cambodia and South Vietnam, and force Hanoi into making important concessions.

Washington has ruled out the use of American ground troops in Laos, but any cross-border push by the South Vietnamese troops poised along the Laotian border was certain to have U.S. air and logistic support.

Give Advice In Raisins Star In International Cuisine

By Abigail Van Buren

(c 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl with a very touchy problem. My best friend has a weak muscle in her eye which makes her cross-eyed. I hear that this can be corrected by an operation, but I just can't bring myself to mention it to her. Even tho I am her best friend I am afraid it would hurt her feelings.

When she is not with me, so many people ask me why she doesn't get her eye fixed for otherwise she would be so pretty. I usually say, "I don't know why," and walk away. What else can I do?

Guys notice it right away, and I am sure that's the reason she has very few dates. She is a lovely girl with a nice personality. Is there some way I can help her without hurting her feelings?

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Yes. Only a good friend would care enough to tell her that her eye can be corrected. Perhaps she doesn't know. Or perhaps she isn't aware of how disfiguring and conspicuous it is. If you tell her in the spirit of friendly loving kindness she should be grateful, not hurt.

DEAR ABBY: I need advice from anyone who can give it to me. My son is 17. When he was 16, a married woman with two children started chasing after him. She still does.

He was always home nights until that terrible woman came into the picture. Now he lies to us and says he is staying overnight with a buddy, but it turns out that he is with this woman.

She is over 21 and is on probation, so you know what kind of person she is. My son will listen to no one since he became so infatuated with this woman. The law protects her, believe it or not. The police and even a New York judge have told us there is nothing we can do about it. Does this make any sense to you?

If he were your son, what would you do?

HEARTSICK MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The police should know the law. And so should a judge, but since your son is a minor and this woman is on probation, it doesn't make sense to me that there isn't anything you can do. If he were my son, I would hire a good attorney and pay him for what he knows.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's brother and his wife just moved into their new home. It is a very beautiful home and they are very proud of it. The other night we called on them for the first time and brought along a housewarming gift. We sat down, had a drink and talked, but they never offered to show us thru their home. Neither did we ask them to show it to us.

The next day we heard that the wife was very upset because we didn't ask them to show us the house. Please settle this, Abby. Who is supposed to do what? Should we have asked them to show us their house? Or should they have offered to take us thru their new home? FLORIDANS

DEAR FLORIDANS: Since the purpose of your call was to "warm" their new home, it would seem only reasonable that they would offer to show you thru. But since they didn't, you would not have been out of order to have said, "—And now, will you give us a 50-cent tour?"

CONFIDENTIAL TO PROUD DAD: You have a right to be proud. True, you can't "force" a generous check on your daughter as a reward for having given up smoking, but you can send one to the American Cancer Society in your community.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

We've been struck by the unique ways various countries use raisins. Such interesting dishes!

In Latin America raisins go into a meat hash called picadillo. For this ground beef is cooked with onions, tomatoes and spices and raisins and pimiento-stuffed green olives are added. The hash is delicious served over rice.

In Mexico, picadillo is used as a stuffing for the pastry turnovers called empanadas and as a filling for tamales.

Italian cuisine has an inspired way of adding raisins and pine nuts to spinach. For this dish fresh spinach is cooked in a small amount of water and drained. Then olive oil, raisins and pine nuts go in.

A Rumanian compote uses

golden raisins. Nika Standen Hazelton, author of many outstanding cookbooks, first brought this recipe to the attention of American cooks. We tried it and have been serving it ever since. For the dessert you soak the raisins in water to cover and then drain them. Next you make a water-and-honey syrup and add the raisins and grated lemon rind and simmer for about 10 minutes. Finally pine nuts are added and the compote is chilled.

Scandinavian cooks, like those of many other countries, sometimes add raisins to their famous coffee breads. Here's just such a recipe. If you have a yeast to bake a yeast bread, but are wary of the kneading process, this rule may appeal to you. The dough is beaten with a wooden spoon; no kneading necessary. Try the recipe on a weekend morning—it needs only an hour rising—and serve it hot and fragrant for brunch.

EASY RAISIN COFFEE BREAD

1½ cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
1-3rd cup plus 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 package active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
¼ cup milk
1 egg
½ cup raisins
Grease an 8-inch round layer-cake pan.

Into a medium mixing bowl sift together the flour, salt and 2 tablespoons of the sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in the 1-3rd cup butter until particles are fine.

In a small mixing bowl dissolve the yeast in the warm water. In a small saucepan heat the milk until it is just lukewarm; add to yeast.

To the flour mixture add the yeast-milk mixture, egg and raisins. With a wooden spoon, beat thoroughly.

Turn into prepared pan; sprinkle with the remaining 1 tablespoon sugar; dot with the remaining 2 tablespoons butter.

Cover with a tea towel; let rise in a warm draft-free place until doubled in bulk—about 1 hour.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Turn out of pan; turn right side up onto serving plate; cut in wedges and serve at once with squares of butter.

Mrs. Holloman Is Club Hostess

The Carpe Diem Book Club met Tuesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club with Mrs. Wayne Holloman as hostess.

The speaker for the meeting was Thomas Harwell, a civil engineer with Rivers and Associates. Harwell spoke on "Pollution and What We Can Do About It."

He pointed out that everyone pollutes but that people generally don't recognize pollution unless it is forcibly brought before them. Harwell made several suggestions of things people can do to help cut down pollution.

A question and answer period followed Harwell's talk.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Cleet Cleetwood, president. The business meeting was held after which members were served a dessert course.

Widow's Plight Can't Pay Taxes

PARIS (WNS) — Mme. Antoine de St. Exupery, widow of the famous French aviator-author of "The Little Prince" and other noted books, is broke. "I cannot even pay the family taxes," she confessed. Two possible solutions: she can publish her late husband's letters to her, or she can sell the original manuscripts of his works. "But the letters are too intimate, full of sentiments that belong only to us," she said. "And I am willing to starve before I will relinquish his original manuscripts so dear to me."

Lesson For Mom, Receiving Fine

LONDON (WNS) — Traffic wardens could have towed away the car of a lady shopper who had overparked by two hours. Instead, they merely took the six-months-old baby in the back seat to the police station for a feeding. When the frantic mother arrived at the station after reading the note left on her windshield, she learned that the baby came under the "abandoned" classification. Police finally agreed to take no legal action, but gave her a parking fine.

Recognizing The Need Is Met

Earlier this week it was announced that the East Carolina University Center at Seymour Johnson AFB in Goldsboro was being closed because it was operating at a financial loss.

The two-year resident center had been in operation eight years and had been preceded by an extension division which began operation in 1958. Dr. David Middleton, dean of the School of Continuing Education at ECU, told the Goldsboro News-Argus the center was supposed to be self-supporting but had been operating at a loss. This was being made up by revenues provided through centers at Cherry Point and Camp Lejeune.

The center has been averaging around 150 students per quarter and operating with a full time director and six part time faculty members.

Middleton noted that the need for the center at Seymour Johnson had diminished since, when it was established, a great number of Air Force officers were not college graduates and an education program was being pushed throughout the Air Force. More recently most officers coming in the Air Force have been college graduates and many enlisted personnel have college backgrounds.

Wayne Community College is also in a position to take over the functions of the institute. There has been some discussion regarding the possibility of offering some upper level courses on the WCC campus with ECU personnel in the future.

Thus, after May 31, the ECU program at Seymour Johnson will come to an end, and this is a proper procedure for the university to follow. East Carolina provided an important service to Seymour Johnson and the Goldsboro area when it was badly needed. Now the need is met. It would be easy for ECU to approach the Legislature for supplemental funds to continue the center's operation, but the responsible thing to do is recognize that the need has been filled and offer to serve the Goldsboro area in any other way possible.

This is why North Carolina needs universities in all of its areas. They can meet needs as they arise and deeply involve themselves in the development of the communities of their areas.

East Carolina has provided an outstanding service to the Goldsboro area through the Seymour Johnson Center. Now that this particular need had been filled the work of the center can be concluded. The university can find many ways to be of assistance to Wayne County and all the other counties of the east.

Drum Of The Mainstream

By BRYAN HAISLIP

RALEIGH — The music's growing fainter for that impossible dream which once led Democrats of North Carolina down a quixotic trail as a Presidential year approached.

Then, the quest for a Southern candidate often sent the state's delegates to the National Convention with votes (or most of them) committed to a vain cause. Now the tendency more and more is to hearken to the drum of the political main-

Muskie through four years as Democratic National Committeeman during the term of former Governor Terry Sanford, described the Maine Senator as a strong and attractive personality, magnetic in public appearance and delightful in private company.

Untainted Ideology "Somehow he has not been 'tainted' with the ultra-liberal label which attaches to other of the figures in the national party who may be contenders," Stator said. "I suspect that may be the reason Muskie is far ahead at this point."

Dawning acceptance of political realities "is the most significant development on the political scene today affecting North Carolina and the South," Stator said. It looks towards the time when the South can exert positive influence, he suggested, not only on the choice of a Presidential candidate but also on the philosophical course of the party. "Maybe we can keep it from going too far left," he said.

Looking the facts of political life in the face leads to the admission that the '72 campaign will be uphill for the Democrats. "We'd have to say the chances are marginal," Stator assented. "Dislodging a President after his first term is just a very difficult thing to do."

Decisive factors will be the tone of conflict in southeast Asia and the state of the economy at home as the campaign unwinds, Stator surmised.

N. C. Veep Long Shot A political reality with a disappointing edge is geographic. Should Muskie be the Presidential nominee, in Stator's view, it would be unlikely that a Southerner would be his running mate. Maine and North Carolina, for example, hardly represents the best combination for nationwide voter appeal; both are on the East coast and neither has population concentration.

"I say it with reluctance, but I think Muskie probably would look to the far West or Southwest," Stator said. As a strong supporter for Sanford, now Duke University president, Stator would like to think the door open to a Vice Presidential nominee from this state. "Muskie and Terry are political friends," he noted. "If it were not a question of geography, Muskie might well consider North Carolina."

There have been reports that Muskie is thinking Dixie in regards to a running mate. Some Tar Heel Democrats nourish the hope that, in such an event, Governor Scott will be the man.

stream; to look beyond regional boundaries for a realistic appraisal of candidates.

An evidence of the trend is the favor Tar Heel Democratic leaders are expressing for Maine Senator Edmund Muskie as the '72 Presidential nominee. The months ahead could change things, but for the moment he clearly is the front-runner in North Carolina.

That he apparently also is ahead elsewhere in the nation is just the point. Sentiment in the '70s is likely to run towards the candidate who can win nationwide, not a sectional favorite without a chance.

Chairman Hears Muskie Muskie is the name most often heard, agreed State Democratic Chairman Eugene Simmons whose strategy has steered towards more congenial relations with the national party.

Southerners are finding that rocking on the front porch gets nowhere, said Simmons, and the new breed of party leaders in the region is willing to move where the action is. Governor Bob Scott is an example, and the inaugurals of Democratic governors in South Carolina and Georgia recently showed a refreshing air of realism, Simmons noted.

Those who know Muskie predict his personal charm will win a wider following when he comes to Wilson to address the installation banquet for state Young Democratic Club officers on February 13th.

"After that, you will find among our Democrats that Senator Muskie will be far and away the leading candidate for President on the Democratic ticket," Simmons said.

Soviet Power Tightens Vise

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The dangerous prospect that the Soviet Union may soon have a Soviet - controlled naval base on the Mediterranean coast of Egypt is now being taken here with utmost seriousness.

Equally foreboding, pro-Western Arab leaders themselves are now saying privately that if Israel does not soon agree to withdraw from the Egyptian Sinai Peninsula — a key objective of UN Ambassador Gunnar Jarring's Arab - Israeli peace mission — the Egyptian government may come under the eventual political control of Moscow as the price for continued Soviet aid.

Although the fears of pro-Western Egyptian politicians about growing Soviet political control inside Egypt are couched in carefully restrained language, the danger of such a calamitous political development cannot be overstated. It could mean, as a starter, a Soviet - flag naval base on the Mediterranean, a far cry from the present arrangement under which the Egyptians give the Russians supply and loading facilities at Egyptian ports.

Beyond that, it could mean gradual Soviet political control over the government of President Anwar Sadat — or a new, far more pro-Soviet government put in power by Soviet pressure.

This prospect may seem ridiculous to many American politicians who hold the mistaken view that the Soviet Union already wields something close to total control over Egypt.

In fact, however, the new government of President Sadat, who succeeded Gamal Abdel Nasser, was carefully structured to balance off pro-Soviet and pro - American politicians. For example, the new prime minister, Mohammed Fawzi, has long been regarded as Western - oriented. Aly Sabri, the leading radical politician with strong pro - Soviet sympathies, was made a deputy prime minister.

The failure of the United Nations' new peace effort to break any new ground — at least thus far — is tipping this internal political balance sharply in Moscow's direction every day the deadlock continues. With the U.S., as Israel's No. 1 ally, damned by the Egyptian intelligentsia, the army, and ruling politicians, Washington is held responsible for Israel's continued occupation of the Sinai. Accordingly, the built-in political dynamic in Egypt works progressively against the United States.

This, in turn, is reducing the influence of pro-Western members of Sadat's government and increasing the political power of the pro-Soviet clique now jockeying for supreme power inside the government.

The Russians are naturally taking full advantage of this political dynamic. In exchange for the vast military aid going to Egypt, they are demanding ever higher political rewards. Thus, consolidation of Soviet influence inside Cairo now grows at an alarming pace. Moreover, even the most staunch pro - Western Arab statesmen say flatly that if they are presented the choice of "surrender" to Israel on the Sinai question or "surrender" to Moscow by ceding more and more political power to the Russians, the white flag would go without question to the Russians.

This danger is far more apparent to top U.S. policy-makers today than a year ago, when Nasser himself privately began to warn the Nixon administration of his inability to withstand Soviet political pressures forever. At that time, the Pentagon was the main source of urgent advice to President Nixon to apply pressure on Israel to evacuate the Sinai.

Strength For Today

HARD TO ENDURE

A noted atheist was once heard to remark, "I have given up the idea of God, but I miss Him terrible."

Most people who have given up God or the idea of God miss Him terrible. There are some people who have never had Him, and therefore they do not miss Him. They may be the children of godly parents but they never had God in their hearts and so if they become avowed atheists, they are only making a public avowal of what they have always practiced. But the sincere believer in God who for any reason gives Him up misses Him terribly.

If he has given up God because he cannot reconcile the idea of God with the dictates of reason, then he lives a life of frustration and longing. If he has given up God because he wanted to practice some sin which is inconsistent with the law of God, then he is undoubtedly fearful because deep in his heart he realizes the inevitability of retribution. If he has given up God because little by little he has allowed the divine to leak out of his life and has allowed inconsequential to come in and take the place of true spiritual values, then he is like a child lost in a great building who goes through the corridors calling for his mother.

"Yes," said the atheist, "I have given up the idea of God, but I miss Him terribly." Everybody does, whether he has given Him up completely or only partially.

Soft-Pedal For Fanfare

A year has passed since the American Cancer Society called a press conference at the Waldorf-Astoria, turned on the floodlights, and trumpeted the long-awaited findings of Dr. Oscar Auerbach and Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond on the effects of cigarette smoking on dogs. It is an appropriate time to take an anniversary look.

In the field of lung cancer research, the Auerbach-Hammond paper probably ranked as the most important paper of the year. Surely it was the most publicized. The two investigators had devoted three years to their work; their study and cost some $750,000, half of it in Federal funds; this was understood to be the breakthrough moment the tobacco industry, the consuming public, and the medical profession had been waiting for.

In its press release of Feb. 5, 1970, the Cancer Society said: "For the first time, scientists have produced lung cancer in a significantly large experimental animal" — and note this next phrase carefully — "as a result of heavy cigarette smoking. The lung cancer was produced in a group of pure-bred beagle dogs by having them smoke non-filter cigarettes. . . . 'Invasive' tumors (cancer) were found in 12 of the heavy smoker-dogs. . . ."

This flat assertion of causality was front-page news around the world. The attendant publicity contributed to the action of Congress, in March, requiring a more stringent warning on cigarette packages and banning all cigarette advertising from TV and radio. Efforts of the tobacco industry to obtain an independent scientific review of the Auerbach-Hammond findings were rejected by the Cancer Society. After a while the story passed out of the news.

Some curious things have happened. This milestone paper first was offered to the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine, where it was rejected by reason of the Waldorf publicity. Then it was offered to the Journal of the American Medical Association, where it was again rejected, this time on the judgment of a reviewing panel that the paper did not meet the Journal's standards. On June 24, the authors read their papers before a session of the AMA in Chicago. Finally a much revised version of their report made it to publication in the December issue of "Archives of Environmental Medicine."

The circumstances of publication were in themselves curious. Dr. Auerbach is a member of the magazine's editorial board. The editor, Dr. Katharine Boucot, appended an eyebrow-raising note: "The following original articles . . . are based on well-designed studies, conscientiously executed. . . ." In the rarefied world of scientific publication, to put it mildly, such a note is exceedingly rare.

The final published version is most curious of all. The Waldorf causality has vanished. The two authors make no claim whatever that they "produced lung cancer as a result of heavy cigarette smoking." They no longer say — as they said in June — that such a purpose was even a goal of their research. The 12 "cancerous" dogs of the February press release have gone through a sea change. Early squamous cell bronchial carcinomas of microscopic size were detected in two dogs only.

In February, a group of eight non-smoking dogs had been described as "controls." By December, these had become

Public Forum

(Letters submitted for public forum must be limited to 300 words)

To The Editor:

Marilyn Steele (Letters, 1-28-71) substantiates my point. Nutritionists are confusing the issue and deluding themselves if they continue to insist that the so-called "vitamin D" is a vitamin. This chemical can be made in the human body if ultraviolet radiation is available, while vitamins can never be made in the body.

Rickets is primarily a disease of growing bones. If a person is so malnourished that his bones do not grow, he will not develop severe rickets.

Eskimos never suffered from rickets before the "white man" arrived, but put them on a white man's diet and take away their steady diet of fish and they develop rickets. Light-skinned people on the same diet do not suffer from rickets and do not consider themselves undernourished.

Eskimos are a dark-skinned people in a land of little ultraviolet radiation and need to supplement their poor ability to make calciferol. We all can do this by simply taking it in with our diet. Fish products are a good source of dietary calciferol. Milk is not a good source, but we add so-called "vitamin D-2" to it. This does not make dietary calciferol a vitamin, but a medicine.

If a person cannot make his own insulin, he likely suffers from diabetes. Injections of insulin will prevent this. I do not think that any nutritionist would consider calling insulin "vitamin 1", however.

If two children are exposed to equally "poor" diets, and one is allowed to play in the sun and the other is not, it is the one in the limited ultraviolet situation that might develop rickets. They both might die of something else, however, as is the probable fate of us all.

Sincerely,
James S. McDaniel

Year Of Strikes For The U.S.

By ELMER ROESSNER

It is beginning to look as if there will be much more labor trouble this year than earlier supposed. What was expected to be a normal troublesome year is threatening to become a turbulent year.

Concern over a strike by steelworkers in August and what it might do to the economy has overshadowed trouble and threats of trouble in other areas.

Unrest among city employees is spreading in various parts of the country, notably among policemen, firemen, teachers, and sanitation men. Where laws prohibit strikes of state and city employees, there has been an increase of job actions, which can be anything from refusal of police to give summons to massive sick calls. These sick calls are of course conspiracies to violate the law, but the voting strength of the conspirators usually prevents any criminal action. The Nixon administration's proposal to give more "no strings attached" billions to states and subdivisions is encouraging trouble. It counteracts officials' insistence that state and local governments are going broke and many employees take the position that if there are no strings attached, the money can be given to them.

Railroad Labor Trouble There are new threats of railroad labor trouble. Here again pleas that the roads are tottering on the edge of bankruptcy are not slowing down demands for higher wages. The government will ride to the rescue, workers expect, as it did with Penn Central.

At the moment, the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen is threatening to strike. The comment of Charles J. Chamberlain, its president, is interesting. He said the members had no pay raise since July, 1969.

That typifies thinking among unionists that there should be constantly escalating pay scales. This thinking arises from the fact that there are constantly escalating rises in the cost of living.

Other Trouble Spots Two other areas of potentially big trouble are in the construction and the coal industries. Rises in the construction industry wages have consistently outpaced rises in almost every other industry, and increases so far this year have averaged 25 per cent.

The construction workers tell their employers, in effect, "why should you care? Simply pass the increases along in your contracts," which they do.

Contracts of 80,000 bituminous coal workers run out Oct. 1. Prices of coal have been zooming and the workers want their share.

Weary Of The Words

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that a ladies' male hair-dresser gets tired of hearing: "I'll have to charge this one, Maurice, I've already run over my household budget for this month."

"How did you get into this business anyway? Just lucky?" "I'll bet you must get tired now and then of listening to women's eternal jabber, jabber, jabber—don't you?"

"Why don't you ever carry on a conversation with me in French, Maurice? I took two whole years of it in high school, and I can still parlez-vous my way around it pretty good, eh mon petit—whatever the word is for cauliflower?"

"Isn't that vexing? I left my purse at home again. If it isn't too much trouble, Maurice, would you mind—"

"My hair's a mess, my husband is a mess, my children are three messes, and my whole life is just one great big mess. But you don't think I'm a mess myself, do you, Maurice?"

"I'm so hung over this morning I don't think I can sit still while you do my hair unless you can pour me a little nip of get-well scotch. You don't, really? Well, let me read the label on that bottle of hair tonic, and see what's in it. Any port in a storm."

"I'll bet that your real name is Clyde, Maurice and that you were born in Peculiar, Mo., not Paris, France."

"Naturally I want to be liberated, Maurice, but not too liberated—just free to do anything I want when I want to. Is that asking too much, considering all the sacrifices women have to make?"

"What is your own wife like, Maurice? Is she short or tall."

Cupid is wasting some mighty good time these days, when the skies are clear and the temperatures are mild, according to members of the register of deeds office. The little wizard god has been strangely silent in Pitt County during the last three days and not a single license to marry has been issued by the register of deeds. This is an unprecedented situation for this season of the year and employees of the license department are at a loss for words.

Inhabitants Of Cannery Town Have 'Adapted'

By ROON LEWALD
Associated Press Writer
WALVIS BAY, South Africa (AP) — The stench of fish—the perfume of prosperity—hangs like a shroud over this remote little seaport.

Walvis Bay is distinguished as the smelliest, unloveliest, remotest town with one of the most trying climates in all Africa. Yet it is gaining new eminence as a diplomatic capital of sorts. Until now, its chief claim to fame was a pilchard fishing industry which earns $61.6 million a year. It ranks behind Peru's as the second largest in the world.

Eight dockside canneries annually process more than 700,000 tons of the sardine-like pilchards. When the wind blows, powdery fishmeal wafts through the port and settles in piles on the streets.

In summer, the ever-present smell mingles gloomily with the cold, salty fog which rolls in from the sea almost daily and screens off the sun until noon.

The town wages a constant battle against wandering sand dunes from the Namid desert which sweeps along South Africa's entire 900-mile coastline. When the searing desert wind blows in winter, inhabitants block windows and doors with damp rags and stay inside while sand piles axle-deep on roads and against houses.

Walvis Bay uses sand to beat sand, though, and encircles itself with a protective barrier of more or less static man-made dunes.

"That was one of the first ideas the Water Affairs people had," said Assistant Town Clerk Petros Greeff. "They planted rows of stakes to keep the sand in place.

"As the wind blows more sand against the stakes and dunes grow bigger and bigger and the stakes have to be removed and planted higher. By now the man-made dunes are as high as some of the natural ones and they're getting out of hand. We'll have to think of something new."

Walvis Bay never sees any rain. Yet it has more than enough natural water for itself and its South West African neighbor, Swakopmund, 21 miles northwards.

The town lies in the delta of the Kuisib, a river in name only for most of the time. Once every few years, torrential rains which alternate with long spells of drought in the interior bring a boiling torrent of water down the sandy Kuisib bed.

In a matter of days, the desert dunes are carpeted with green. The plants wither as soon as the floods subside, but the water goes under the sand into a natural reservoir holding hundreds of thousands of gallons, which merely have to be pumped to the surface.

Until 1948, Walvis Bay was a tiny settlement consisting mainly of wooden houses, but when South African fishing interests moved in to develop the money-spinning pilchard industry, the town mushroomed to 22,700 inhabitants.

Overfishing by Cape Town-based factory ships has thinned the pilchard shoals in the past few years and local factory bosses are worried about the industry's future. However, the town hopes to supplement its mainstay by developing deep-sea fishing. It plans to build a $5.6 million harbor basin for large trawlers.

Japanese, Formosan, Spanish, Korean and Russian boats harvest local waters outside the 12-mile limit. They increasingly call at Walvis Bay for stores and repairs, but the boats don't stay longer than necessary. Three all-male bars, two cafes, a cinema and the Flying Angel seamen's mission are the sum total of Walvis Bay's night life.

A few Cape Town prostitutes tried their luck once, but the cops were waiting for them at the station and bundled them home on the next train.

Visitors may not like Walvis Bay, but it seems to have a grip on its inhabitants, and there's a friendly spirit in the town. Locals accept the climate as a challenge. They say they even get used to the putrid odor of the canning factories, which they like to call the "smell of wealth."

"It's considered a hardship post but I'm quite happy here," said customs official Johannes Pretorius. His hobby is gardening though there's not a scrap of natural vegetation within miles of the town.

"You'd be surprised how fertile the desert sand is," he said. "I mix it with a bit of fertilizer, water it well, and it grows record carrots and potatoes, almost any vegetable you care to name."

Test Tube Baby Bill Written, Waiting

By MELVIN LANG
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill for babies born with the help of a test tube rests in a legislative cubbyhole in the General Assembly. Its sponsor says the measure will be pressed, but if it passes no one can say how many children will benefit.

Rep. Hunter Warlick, R-Catawba, introduced a bill that would make children conceived by artificial insemination "at law in all respects the same as naturally conceived legitimate children of the husband and wife so requesting and consenting to the use of such technique."

Warlick's bill, one of the briefest submitted in either house this session, would be the first direct reference to such children in North Carolina.

"Our law is silent on the subject," said Joan Holland of the Department of Social Services' adoption section.

Warlick, in an interview, said he had no idea how many children would be affected.

"I don't know that it's widespread at all. But it's my impression that it's more widely used than you might think, society being as mobile as it is," the legislator-attorney said.

"Some families with these children are living in North Carolina and others will be. What I'm trying to do, if there is a gap in the law, is to close it."

Warlick said problems associated with children conceived through artificial insemination usually arise in legal actions such as divorce, support or inheritance cases.

Oklahoma, Arkansas and Georgia now have laws clarifying the legal status of the so-called test tube babies," he said.

Dr. Theodore Scurletis, director of personal health for the State Department of Health, said North Carolina applies common law principles to designate such children as being legitimate if they are born to married couples.

But state authorities make no distinction between babies conceived naturally or through artificial insemination. In most cases they don't know. "It's something no one keeps records on except private physicians," Mrs. Holland said.

Dr. Joseph May of Winston-Salem, chairman of the state medical society's maternal health committee, said artificial insemination "is not a widely used technique."

"To my knowledge, I doubt if there's a half dozen cases in Forsyth County during a year," he said. May said donors were "frequently medical students, or any healthy male."

Warlick's bill has been referred to the House Judiciary I Committee, but no action has been taken. "I have asked them to hold off until I can put some information in the hands of members," he said.

Corn Seed Supply Report Due Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department plans to issue Friday a special report on the amount of corn seed available for 1971 planting. It is expected to show a tighter supply than previously indicated.

Agency sources said Wednesday that reports of "lower than usual" germination breeds—fertility—of regular type seed have caused serious concern over whether farmers will have enough to go around this year.

Officials have said for months that there will not be enough of the blight-resistant seed for 1971, but they had indicated there would be ample supplies of nonresistant or regular seed.

Now, according to government sources, the reports of low germination for the nonresistant seed are cause for concern.

Last November, based on seed company reports, the department said about one billion pounds of all seed types would be available for 1971. Only about 22 per cent was said to be blight-resistant.

An estimated 850 million pounds were used to plant last year's crop and the requirements could be larger for 1971.

Blight is of serious concern for corn this year. The fungus disease helped reduce the 1970 crop by 15 per cent from early indications. Department officials want more acreage this year to help build up feed reserves and to serve as a buffer against further large blight damage this year.

Farmers indicated in a recent special survey that they intend to plant about 70.1 million acres of corn this year, up 6 per cent from 1970. But the availability of seed will be the major determining factor. Another planting survey will be announced in mid-March.

Commissioner Lanier Hit By Auto Ins. Trend, Too

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner Edwin S. Lanier returned from work one day recently to find his automobile insurance bill and the price had gone up.

Like that of millions of Tar Heel drivers, Lanier's bill reflected the latest rate increase granted to companies doing business in the state. The commissioner knew it was coming, but he couldn't resist grousing out loud.

"What are you complaining about?" asked his wife. "You're the one who raised the rates."

The incident illustrates several crosswinds in the growing and poorly understood storm over automobile liability insurance in North Carolina. Virtually no one is satisfied, from industry to officialdom to motoring public. Perhaps least satisfied is Lanier, the man in the middle. "In North Carolina," he said, "and throughout this country, the providing of and the use of automobile insurance coverages have become so seriously polluted that drastic measures have become imperative."

Lanier began a painstaking investigation several weeks ago into the operating conditions of the some 250 insurance companies licensed to write automobile insurance in the state.

"What I'm finding," he said in an interview, "is that there are some arbitrary doings and goings on in cancellations and renewals."

Lanier reported to a legislative commission studying reform of the industry that his department had received more than 3,600 complaints from North Carolina drivers during 1970.

Industry spokesmen contend the number is small when it is considered that more than 3 million vehicles are licensed to operate in the state. Moreover, evidence in Lanier's office and insurance company files shows many complaints are based on misunderstandings.

"Yessir," countered Lanier, "but remember this — if that's all the complaints you had, isn't that just a little tiny speck of the thing. — Others would have (registered a complaint) but they didn't know how to make it."

The insurance industry as long contended most of the ills troubling companies and motorists stem from inadequate rates that squeeze out profits.

Company spokesmen say, since they are losing money on automobile insurance sold in North Carolina, they take on new business only under rosy conditions. Doubtful cases are steered straight for the assigned risk pool.

"There's virtually no margin for error," said the state manager of the Aetna Insurance Co., Thomas S. Carpenter, "because there's already no profit in it. The explanation is a severe rate inadequacy which leads inevitably to a diminishing market as insurers try to sell less and less of a product on which they're guaranteed of losing money."

North Carolina automobile liability rates, set by Lanier, rank 24th among the 25 Eastern states and the District of Columbia. They were set in 1968, based on hospital and repair costs measured in 1965 and 1966.

Since then, according to figures supplied by the North Carolina Automobile Rate Administrative Office, the number of accidents has jumped 23.8 per cent. During the same period, hospital rates have risen 52.4 per cent. Repair costs also have increased sharply.

"The North Carolina automobile liability insurance rate level has not kept pace with the rising claim costs and accident frequency," the rate office concluded in a brief.

The brief was submitted to Lanier last July in a request for a 14 per cent rate hike. A 1969 request, partially approved by Lanier only after the industry took his initial refusal to court, has been delayed pending the outcome of an appeal to the state Supreme Court.

The legal dispute pits, on one side, the industry's contention that Lanier's grudging 2.8 per cent increase was inadequate against, on the other side, Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan's contention even that hike was unjustified because Lanier used insufficient, industry-supplied evidence to reach his decision.

Whatever the merits of the complicated case, insurance people say, rates have remained at the levels set in 1968 and companies thus are losing more money than ever on auto policies.

But Lanier regards protecting the motorist as his first responsibility. He counters that insurance companies have been complaining of losses during all eight years he has headed the Insurance Department.

He also hastens to point out that companies use investment income and profits from other business — such as life insurance — to help offset any automobile underwriting loss.

Lanier said that for the first time he used income on unearned premiums in calculating the disputed 2.8 per cent rate raise. This, he explained, was revenue from investments made with money paid in advance for annual policies.

If a driver pays his yearly bill in July, for example, he pays in advance for 12 months of protection which he uses only a month at a time. Insurance companies earn interest on the full annual sum from the moment the driver pays his bill.

"They don't just put it in a fruit jar and hide it under the bed," Lanier said of the money.

Insurance companies, however, contend they shouldn't be forced to convert the profits from one of their departments to prevent another from going broke.

"By gosh," Lanier shouts in his Carolina twang, "they're sure enjoying going broke. I've heard that tune for eight years and they haven't gone broke yet."

"You've got to remember this — we've got a lot of poor people in North Carolina. And another $5 increase is another $5 out of the little they have. And it means something to them."

"They don't want to feel like they're being gouged," he continues, rising from his desk and gesturing like a stumping candidate. "Whether they could lay down the facts to prove it or not, they feel like it."

Strangely, Lanier's feisty struggles against rate increases have generated little apparent bitterness among representatives of the insurance industry, at least none an outsider can detect.

Carpenter, echoing comments from members of the legislative study commission, described the commissioner as an "honest, fine gentleman."

"I think in doing this he thinks he is serving the general interest of the public," he said.

But Lanier harbors no illusions that his exercise of power has enshrined him in underwriters' hearts. He knows bills to trip his department of its chief functions have been pre-ented to the General Assembly, and that the governor's study commission has weighed the idea of a three-man-appointed board to set rates in his place.

"I won't be out of the job 90 days before I get that notice," he said.

whether he's joking — that he expects his own automobile policy to be cancelled as soon as he loses his sway over the insurance companies.

"I won't be out of the job 90 days before I get that notice," he said.

Confrontation Over Fire Ant Program

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Conservationists and farmers were headed on a collision course today with the outcome certain to affect a $200 million U. S. Agriculture Department program in nine Southern states.

The head-on confrontation comes at a 1 p. m. public hearing over the costly and controversial fire ant eradication program.

At immediate stake, according to some Georgia legislators, is an annual state appropriation of $1.5 million which in past years has been the basis for an equal amount in matching federal funds.

They say the ultimate result, however, could be the abandonment of thousands of farmland acres in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, North and South Carolina, Mississippi and Texas—all of which are infested by the tiny pests.

"There's no question that this is a showdown," said Rep. Dorsey Matthews of Moultrie, chairman of Georgia's House Agriculture Committee. "Either we continue the program, or we lose it forever and we'll be eaten alive by these things."

"And it's not just the country boy that will suffer," Matthews said. "They'll be in the cities, too."

Matthews, among the leading Georgia proponents of the eradication program, said he is "going to flood that meeting (the public hearing) with farmers."

"We're going after it with every gut we've got," he declared.

Conservationists have made their position equally clear. Three agencies—the Georgia Coastal Audubon Society, Save America's Vital Environment and the Georgia Sportsmen Federation—filed a federal court suit Wednesday seeking an injunction to prevent the state from continuing in the program.

A similar suit was filed by conservation groups last August against the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Secretary Clifford M. Hardin in Washington.

The conservation groups had indicated they will have a "representative delegation" headed by Dr. Eugene Odum of the University of Georgia at the public hearing ordered by the General Assembly's joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee.

The public hearing is scheduled to last four hours.

Gov. Wallace Says No Liquor In His Mansion

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Officially, there are 37 "dry" counties in Alabama and there is at least one "dry" mansion in the state.

Gov. George C. Wallace says there will be no serving of alcoholic beverages in the governor's mansion during his term.

"The people of this state may rest assured that there will not be a drop of alcoholic beverages served or consumed in the mansion by me, by my wife or anyone else while I am governor," Wallace, a teetotaler, commended Wednesday. The same rule applied during Wallace's first term of office.

He spoke out on the subject following inquiries regarding an article written for a large Alabama newspaper. Wallace said the article was entirely speculation.

"You've got to remember this — we've got a lot of poor people in North Carolina. And another $5 increase is another $5 out of the little they have. And it means something to them."

"They don't want to feel like they're being gouged," he continues, rising from his desk and gesturing like a stumping candidate. "Whether they could lay down the facts to prove it or not, they feel like it."

Weather Slows Aerial Search

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Bad weather hampered search operations Wednesday in Tennessee and north Georgia for a missing light plane with possibly two men aboard, the Georgia wing of the Civil Air Patrol reported.

The search was to continue today in Tennessee, Georgia and Florida.

CAP officials said several flights were made in south Georgia but there was no sight of the aircraft.

The plane was last seen when it took off from Nashville, Tenn., the night of Jan. 30. The Eastern Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Center identified the pilot as Raymond Schneider of Hoffman Estates, Ill.

The center said there possibly was another man aboard. No flight plan was filed, a spokesman added.

Chemical Plant Blast 'Pure Hell', Avers Survivor

By WILLIAM L. CHAZE
Associated Press Writer
WOODBINE, Ga. (AP) — "I saw a lot of hell in Vietnam," Marion Lambert said numbly. "There's nothing to beat this hell. This is pure hell..."

Lambert, his narrow face pale beneath smudges of dirt, was standing on the edge of the rubble that shortly before noon Wednesday was a flare production unit of the Thiokol Chemical Corp.'s Georgia division.

About 11 a.m. a shattering explosion and a flash fire reduced the building to charred rubble and extensively damaged two others. Twenty-four persons were known dead and 33 were admitted to hospitals.

SCUBA Course Begins Feb. 18

A self-contained underwater breathing apparatus (SCUBA) diving course is scheduled to begin at East Carolina University February 18.

The 27-hour non-credit course, sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education, is designed to train the swimmer in the sport of skin and SCUBA diving and to react favorably under both normal and adverse conditions on the surface and underwater.

William Dial, an instructor certified by the National Association of Underwater Instructors will conduct the course.

The SCUBA classes will be held on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 o'clock until 10 in Room 144 of Mingos Coliseum.

Tuition for the nine-class session is $30. Students must supply their own flippers, mask and snorkel. The remainder of the equipment, including air, may be rented from the instructor for $25 for the duration of the course. The last class session is scheduled for April 8. Enrollment is limited to persons 16 years of age or older, and the class size is limited to 20 students. Students should be available for all classes.

Topics covered during the course include SCUBA equipment, diving physics, diving medicine, oceanography, marine biology, repetitive dive tables and other subjects relevant to diving.

The final class session will consist of a deep dive test to be arranged by the student and the instructor. Most deep dives will take place in the Morehead City area.

Persons wishing to enroll in the course or desiring additional information may contact the Division of Continuing Education in Erwin Hall on the ECU campus or call 758-6321.

"And then right on top of that came the explosion. God, it wounded like an enormous mortar shell exploding. I was sitting on this stool and it knocked me off."

"Almost in the same motion I was out the door running like hell. Every kind of damn thing in the world was flying through the air. People, several of them my buddies, were on the ground. They were burned—it looked pretty bad. Pretty damn bad. Some folks were running down this road and the building was smoking, burning."

Lambert, who served in Vietnam with an Air Force combat support group, tried to light a cigarette but his hands were shaking too badly.

It had been four hours since the explosion and a misting rain fell on the 150 square yards of devastation.

Two metal and concrete buildings stood with sides buckled, a bloody pool of water in one of them.

The building in which the magnesium flares were being made for the Army was reduced to a blackened, cracked concrete wall and piles of debris.

An acrid chemical stench—nauseating to smell—hung over the rubble as workers in grimy plastic bags and bright plastic helmets searched for the bodies.

Lambert stood shaking his head and rubbing his hands together.

A security policeman walked up and patted his shoulder and then lit a cigarette and gave it to Lambert.

"I could have been in there," said Lambert.

"But last week I asked for a transfer out of there I can't say why. I just did it. It may be a couple of months before I can come back here."

A worker shoveling through a layer of broken concrete shouted that he had found something. He reached tentatively into a hole and pulled out a pair of scorched and ripped blue overalls. A pair of work shoes was found nearby.

"Christ," he said, almost in a whisper, "that's all there is."

The bodies, meanwhile, were being taken to a building about three miles away—a green, cinderblock building where female employees changed into work clothes and bought snacks from vending machines.

The bodies, wrapped in white sheets and zipped into green plastic bags, were placed shoulder to shoulder on the dirty tile floor.

The tables and chairs which normally fill the room during working hours were placed outside the door and a few deputies sat in the chairs watching a crowd of people milling about the plant's front gate.

By midafternoon, the first relatives to arrive at the small building had identified their kid and claimed the bodies.

Relatives—wives, husbands and children—walked solemnly down the line of bodies as a deputy or company official, their eyes on the floor, flipped back the sheet or unzipped a muddy sack.

The room, except for an occasional soft moan from a person who had found a husband or wife, was eerily silent.

The law enforcement officers and company officials stood uneasily against a row of vending machines, looking out the opened door of the building into the dull grayness of late-afternoon.

One plainly dressed woman timidly asked at the door if her son were inside. She had tears in her eyes and her lips were trembling as she forced the words out.

"You mean...." asked a deputy.

"Yes," said the woman as she entered the room.

Moments later, after looking beneath a bloodied sheet, she gasped and almost fell before two men caught her by the arms and held her sagging body upright.

"My God," she shrieked. "Oh my Jesus—it's him. God bless me it's him. Please Jesus—make it not so."

Tears streamed down her cheeks as she walked outside to a mud-splattered car where a white-haired man in khakis waited.

A chill dusk was falling as the last body was placed in an ambulance for a short trip to a funeral home.

The ambulance, its wipers working furiously in the rain, moved swiftly through the front gate and down the blacktop road to one of the small sleepy towns nearby.

People stared down the road for a long time after the ambulance's red blinking light disappeared into the cold, wet night.

In other legislative action, two Republican senators introduced bills that would forbid public employees from striking and provide for nonpartisan election of district court judges.

Sen. Norman Joyner, R-Iredell, introduced the bill to make it unlawful for a person who participates in a strike against a state or local government to be employed by any state or local government.

Present state law forbids these governments from bargaining with unions, but the law is silent on the subject of strikes by public employees.

Sen. Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth, sponsored the bill to provide for nonpartisan election of district court judges. Under present law, the judges run in party primaries and must take stands on political issues.

"We have had some fine judges swept out of office because the voters did not like the policies of their national part," Horton said.

Two identical bills introduced by Sen. Charles B. Dean Jr., D-Richmond, and Sen. Jyles Coggins, D-Wake, would forbid the Department of Motor Vehicles from releasing any auto registration records for commercial purposes.

The department now makes these lists of auto owners available to various agencies, including bulk mailing firms. The department charges only a small fee for compiling the lists.

In the House, Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, sponsored a bill to fix the state's congressional districts as they are now. He said the only purpose of the bill was to get something before his House Congressional Districts committee so that the work of redistricting can begin.

Nat'l Debt Has Costly Interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee says interest on the national debt will be slightly more than $39,000 per minute for the fiscal year ending June 30.

Rep. George W. Andrews, D-Ala., a member of the committee, said the interest figure was based on a $20.8 billion national debt this year and on a 365-day year and 24-hour day.

Portent . . .

(Continued from page 1) of the winter, in the hot months next summer and could even become a traditional, semi-annual crisis over the next several years.

"Frankly," he said, "I don't see any respite in our near future." The problem is that demand for electric power doubles every 10 years with per capita demand growing five times faster than the population—much faster than the utilities' capacity to produce it.

Until electric utilities turn the technological corner, Carver said, power shortages are nearly inevitable.

"Electricity, unlike coal or oil, can't be stored," Carver said.

"When we need electricity we don't draw on a battery, we draw on a moving machine which can only move so fast. The problem is that we have more people turning on lights than we have machinery to cope with those lights. And the public just hasn't been able to see the problem, the limit. They don't understand the way the system works."

Heavy demand due to unusually cold weather is one factor blamed for current power shortages. The other is chronic equipment failures which have plagued electric utility companies for the past five years.

If additional problems do arise during the summer, they may hit the same areas suffering through this winter. The New York State Power Pool, the PJM Interconnection and the Chicago area historically have their peak periods of demand during the summer. Carver said he would be surprised if these and other areas got through the year unscathed.

This morning's freezing rain fooled many weather forecasters who had predicted yesterday that temperatures today would reach the 50 degree level.

According to the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station .2 inches of rain had fallen by eight o'clock this morning and temperatures at that time stood at 32 degrees—just cold enough to cause ice to form on trees, windshields and other areas.

Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, reported the ice had caused no damage to the power lines this morning.

"The ice has not built up and the temperature is high enough so that the ice is melting," Horne explained.

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. reported some trouble with their lines and said the ice and rain probably contributed to the trouble.

C. K. Beatty, director of the Greenville Public Works Department, said the streets were in good condition this morning but the sidewalks were "a little icy."

The North Carolina Highway Commission said the county roads were in good shape. No ice was reported on any of the roads.

The high temperature for the 24-hour period ending this morning at eight o'clock was 36 degrees while the low for that period was 24 degrees.

The Tar River level stood at 3.3 feet.

$1,000 Given For Program In Martin

WILLIAMSTON — Work being accomplished by the five year old Martin County Community Action (MCCA) program received its biggest individual private boost recently.

A check for $1,000, a volunteer contribution from the Department of Church in Society, United Christian Missionary Society, Disciples of Christ, was presented Elder William J. Barber, of MCCA Board Chairman Joe Johnson, Jr.

The contribution follows a visit to the Williamston area last autumn by Dr. Barton Hunter, Executive Secretary of the Department of Church in Society of the Disciples of Christ.

It is reported that Dr. Hunter was impressed with a self-help project being initiated in "Rodgerstown", a predominantly black area of Martin County. Citizens of the community will use the contribution to help defray expenses of a community deep well. Initially, this well will be used to provide a water supply for a laundry. Later, it is expected to be incorporated into a community-wide water system.

The Rodgers Community already has made great strides in self-improvement projects including a community supported crossroads light, a community building, and a petition to have roads in the area paved.

Some residents of Rodgerstown, now an unincorporated village, have put forth the idea of incorporation.

Ian McGrae, a pastor and Director of the Office of Human Rights of the Department of Church in Society of the Disciples of Christ, noted in a letter to Barber: "We are impressed by the work being done in Martin County and are glad to have this share in moving it forward." The letter also noted that "an additional grant for the Rodgers project is being considered."

MCCA has several other projects in the county underway. Elder Barber, Economic Developer for MCCA, said that initial contact has been made with certain foundations and philanthropic groups on seeking funds to help in projects designed to lift the economy of persons on the lower socio-economic scale in Martin County.

The five year old organization now includes an Economic Development Advisory Board of 10 members, with a General Board of 29 members.

Papers Idled In Red China

HONG KONG (AP) — Communist China's official news agency has told all newspapers in China to suspend publication temporarily, a most unusual order that could portend a major development.

The New China News Agency issued the order in the form of a message in its Chinese-language domestic service monitored in Hong Kong.

There was no explanation and no other reference to the message.

Western analysts in Hong Kong generally agreed that the message meant something was brewing on the mainland but varied greatly in their speculation of what it might be.

Among the possibilities mentioned were the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, a new Chinese move in the Indochina war and the start of the long-awaited 4th National People's Congress.

But it was all speculation, and several Western analysts said none of these possibilities would seem to warrant such a newspaper closedown.

Will Discuss Library Career

Says Affray Among Fans 'Broken Up'

AYDEN — An affray that erupted among fans following the Ayden High School-H.B. Sugg High School basketball game Tuesday night was quickly broken up by police officers, according to the Ayden Chief of Police.

Chief James Ross said this morning that the incident apparently resulted from arguments over time-keeping at the end of the game, won by Ayden on a field goal in the last two seconds.

The chief noted that the fights "could have materialized into something" but tempers cooled down quickly soon after officers helped clear the gym floor.

Chief Ross said that approximately 100 fans made their way to the floor just after the game ended. Officers reported that several students were hit with sticks but no arrests or injuries resulted.

Oddly enough, a fan is credited with helping to break up the affray when he apparently brandished a toy pistol, Chief Ross added.

A few minor incidents were reported to have occurred outside of the gym after the crowd vacated the building but all apparently were broken up soon after.

The farmville team, undefeated going into the game, had scored a field goal late in the contest and was leading by a point when the Ayden squad came up with their late score to win.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that his deputies escorted the H. B. Sugg bus back to Farmville following the game. He reported no incidents along the way.

Buc Swimmers Entertain Pair

East Carolina University's five-time Southern Conference swimming champions will be out to push their record in dual meet competition above the .500 mark starting tonight at Minges Natatorium.

The Pirates, now 4-5, will get strong tests in the next three days from Old Dominion University, called by ECU coach Ray Scharf "one of the most improved teams in the South" and Catholic University, last year's Mason-Dixon Conference champions.

Old Dominion comes to the Minges Natatorium Thursday at 8 p.m. and Saturday's meet with Catholic is slated for 2 p.m. The Pirates will have one more meet before they go after their sixth straight conference title in Williamsburg, Va., March 4-5. That will come against strong North Carolina February 19 at Chapel Hill.

Scharf has been extremely pleased with the performance of some of his younger swimmers this season. Sophomores Wayne Norris and Mark Wilson and freshmen Tom Rehm, Greg Hinchman, John Manning, Henry Morrow and Jack Morrow were the subjects of his praise.

Norris has been coming along strong as of late in the butterfly and the individual medley. At South Florida, he beat the college division national champion in the 200-yard butterfly. Wilson set a pool record at VMI in the 50-yard freestyle.

Four of the freshmen—Rehm, Hinchman, Manning and Henry Morrow—teamed up to set a new frosh freestyle relay record with a 3:24.11 clocking. That record had stood for three seasons.

Jack Morrow, a diver, now holds both the 1-meter and 3-meter frosh diving records.

Another outstanding diver, senior Doug Emerson was lauded by Scharf as was junior freestyler Jim Griffin and junior distance man Gary Frederick.

In addition to the two outstanding meets in Greenville this week, the junior varsity hosts Staunton Military Academy Friday at 3:30 p.m.

Pair Holds To City Loop Lead

The Book Exchange and Coca-Cola remained tied for the City Basketball League lead last night after both chalked up wins. In the action, Hallow's Distributing beat College View, 66-53, Coke downed Big Value Discount of Farmville, 76-62, and Book Exchange beat Coffman's, 71-59.

The Exchange and Coke now post 8-2 records, while Coffman's is third at 6-4. Farmville is 5-5, followed by Hallow's, 3-7, and College View, 0-10.

College View slipped out into the lead at the close of the first half of play, 30-28, but couldn't hold out. Hallow's came back in the second half with a 38-23 advantage that left College View standing.

David Hahn led Hallow's with 17, while Charles Vincent had 15, Ted Whitley had 14 and Charles Rogers had 11. For College View, Roger Moore had 18 and Leonard Earp had 14, and John Children had 12.

Coke eased out into the lead in the first half of its game, 39-30. They pulled away in the second half, outscoring Big Value, 37-32, to win.

John Turner led Coke with 24, while Jim Modlin had 23, Doyle Daughtry had 14 and John Lynn had 11. Charles Leaman and Everett Camench each had 16 and Charles Purvis had 13 for Farmville.

Winding up the night's play, the Exchange and Coffman's battled through the first half to a 31-31 tie. But the Exchange pulled away in the second half, outscoring Coffman's, 40-28, to win going away.

John Hardison and Greg Holmes each had 20 points to pace the Exchange, while Larry Graham had 15 and Bruce Tucker had 10 for Coffman's.

Fieldcrest Is Still In Lead

All three of the leading teams in the Industrial Basketball League picked up victories last night. Fieldcrest bombed Vermont American, 93-28, National Cash Register slipped by WNCT, 49-41, and State Highway nipped Wachovia, 46-45.

Fieldcrest holds to the lead with a 9-1 record, while the Highwaymen and NCR are both 7-3.

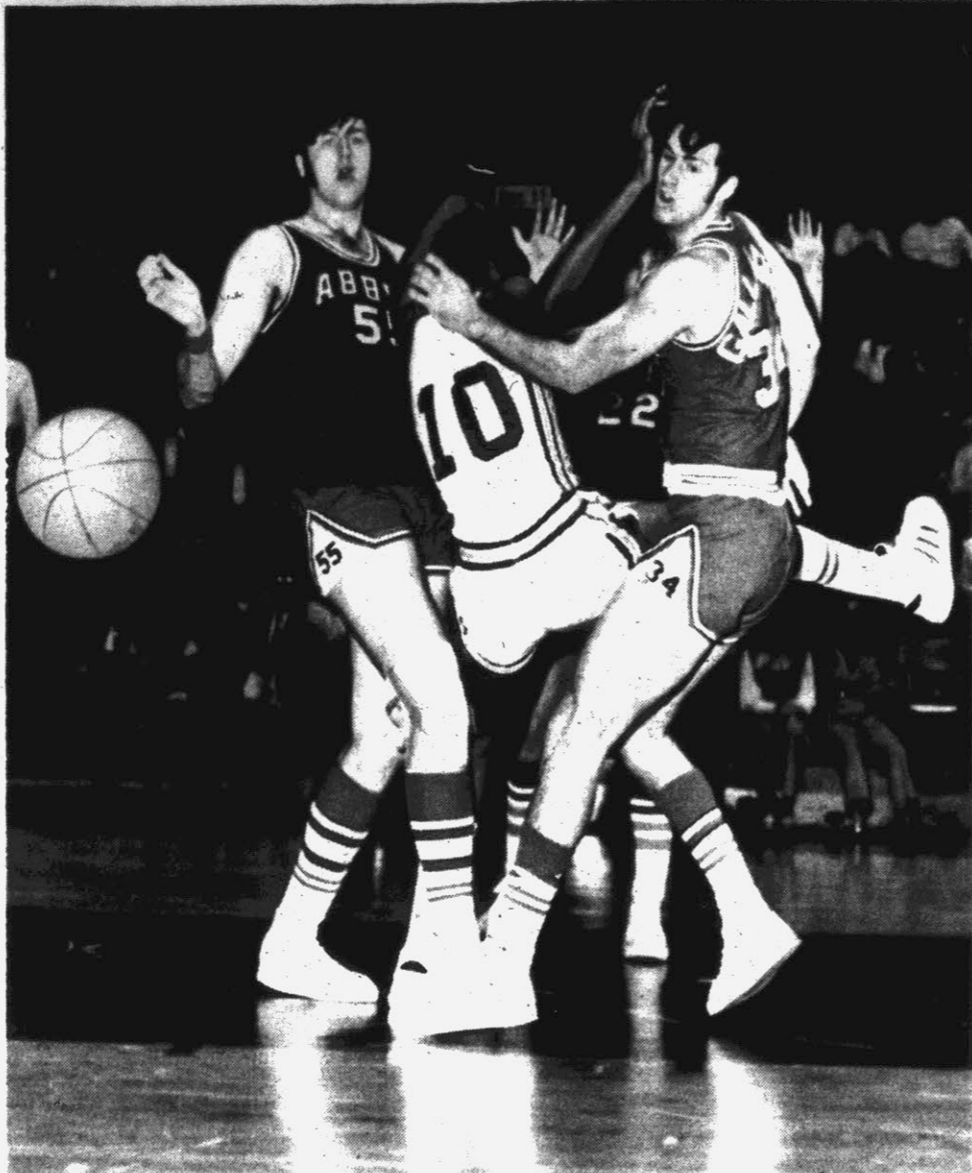

Wachovia is 5-5, while WNCT, 2-8, and Vermont American, 0-10, have both been eliminated from the championship.

In the opener, Fieldcrest shot out to a 37-8 lead in the first half. They continued to pull away, outscoring Vermont American, 56-20 in the second half.

In the second contest, WNCT edged out into a 23-21 lead at the end of the first half. NCR came back in the second half, however, and outthrew WNCT 28-18, to charge ahead and take the win.

Wachovia pushed into the lead in the first half of the final game, working up a 26-15 lead. But State Highway came back with a 31-19 edge in scoring in the second half to take the win.

What's Going On Here?

Fast Cars Go Sloooow Around Daytona Track

By BLOYS BRITT
AP Auto Racing Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Glen Wood is a quiet, smiling Virginian so well versed in the art of building fast race cars that he seldom lets anything ruffle his feathers.

But the former driver was shaking his head woefully Wednesday as his latest creation, a 1971 Mercury, circled the Daytona International Speedway with the great A. J. Foyt at the wheel.

"In a way it seems a shame to put shackles on a good race car and a good driver like that," he said. "But in the long run, I think it will help the sport."

Wood, who maintains his garage in the quiet little mountain town of Stuart, Va., was commenting about National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing's new rule that requires all stock car racers to carry restrictor plates on carburetors this year, in effect knocking 10 to 15 miles per hour off their speeds.

Last year, Wood's Mercury, with Cale Yarborough driving, set the all-time qualifying record for the 2.5 mile Daytona tri-oval, a blistering 194.014 m.p.h. His 1971 car will be lucky if it gets past 180 m.p.h.

Foyt, who has replaced Yarborough for the Feb. 14 Daytona 500 and for a second big event at Ontario, Calif., Feb. 28, was among NASCAR drivers who opened practice at the speedway and will run in qualifying trials Saturday.

His top lap speed was 174.383 m.p.h., and Foyt, too, was shaking his head.

"That's the same size Ford engine I ran in a stock car last year," the 35-year-old Texan said. "I think it is a shame to put blinders on it like you would a horse."

Wood commented, "Oh, I think we'll get faster, maybe up to 180. And I think we'll have a better race at that speed because more cars will be able to run together."

Foyt will be in the car when 35 or more drivers take a shot at winning one of the two front row positions in qualifying runs. Most experts believe the pole winner will come in at about 180 or 181 m.p.h.

Meantime, the fastest lap was posted by 55-year-old Iggy Katona of Willis, Mich., who is a top driver for the Auto Racing Club of America. The ARCA drivers are prepping for a 300-mile race at the speedway Sunday.

Katona's unofficial speed was 179.215 m.p.h. in a Dodge, on which no carburetor restrictor plates are required. Andy Hampton, a 44-year-old ARCA driver from Louisville, Ky., was clocked at 177.486 and Ramo Stott of Keokuk, Iowa, 176.647.

NASCAR defending champion Bobby Isaac was the fastest among NASCAR pilots, clocking 176.612.

The ARCA drivers will begin qualifying Thursday for spots in the race's starting order.

Four-year-old Krissie Schuler might come up with the solution to her father's plight as coach of VMI's basketball Keydets, the biggest losers in major college basketball this season. Coach Mike Schuler is in the midst of an 18-game regular season losing skein and 23 straight losses over the past two seasons.

"Are we going to win tonight, Daddy?" Krissie Schuler asked before a recent game.

"I think we can," said Mike. "I certainly hope so."

"Well, why don't you get the Globetrotters to play for you, they never lose," came the 4-year-old's reply.

The defeat-honed Keydets will try again tonight when they take on The Citadel at Charleston, S.C.

In other conference activity, Joe Williams and his Furman Paladins play at South Carolina.

In Wednesday night's action, East Carolina dumped Belmont Abbey 84-58 behind Al Faber's 23 points and 21 by Jim Gregory.

William & Mary fell behind early and never could mount a comeback in a 74-62 defeat at the hands of Virginia Tech.

Allen Bristow was everywhere for the Gobblers, scoring 20 points and picking off 23 rebounds.

Tom Jasper led the losers with 25 points and 14 rebounds.

East Carolina's Pirates broke open a slow, close game at the start of the second half last night and marched to an 84-56 victory over the Belmont Abbey Crusaders.

The two teams were in a close battle until the late stages of the first half, when East Carolina moved out by as much as 12 points. But in the second half, the Pirates put the Crusaders to the sword, and sailed to an easy victory.

The win was the third straight for the Bucs, who have now evened their record at 9-9 overall. They will be seeking to climb above the .500 mark Saturday night, and move up in the Southern Conference standings at the same time when they entertain the Richmond Spiders in Minges Coliseum.

Al Faber and Jim Gregory led the way to the Pirate victory by overwhelming Belmont Abbey on the boards. When the dust had settled, East Carolina has pulled down 69 rebounds in the contest, while Belmont Abbey had only 37, an almost 2-1 ratio.

Faber had another fine night on the boards, gathering in 22, while Gregory was just one back with 21, a total of 43 between them.

Faber also led in the scoring, hitting 23, his varsity high and the first time he's had over 18. Gregory was just a step back with 21, while Dave Franklin contributed 14.

The Bucs also seemed to regain their shooting touch in the second half. After hitting only 36.7 per cent of their shots in the first half, they came back with a 51.2 mark in the second frame. They also improved their free throw shooting, hitting 75 per cent of their second half attempts.

In the first half, however, it looked like both teams were playing uninspired ball. Mike Henrich pushed in a shot from outside for the first Pirate goal, but a shot from the corner by Roddey McCarson tied it for Belmont Abbey.

Faber then hit on a rebound to put the Bucs back out, and Belmont Abbey never caught up again.

In the next four minutes, the Bucs tossed in 10 points, while the Abbey could get only two. Julius Prince and Gregory both made free throws and Franklin hit from underneath. Phil Robinson made a free throw for the Crusaders, but after another Robinson free throw, Gregory hit on a jumper and Faber tapped in a pair of shots to run the Buc lead to 10, 14-4 with 13:11 to play.

East Carolina eventually extended this to 12, at 18-6 with 12 minutes to go, when Franklin hit on a jumper.

Belmont Abbey came to life for the only time in the game then, and cut the lead back to three points. With Robinson leading the way, the Crusaders came streaking back. Robinson hit two baskets and a free throw, and then after McCarson got a bucket, Robinson added another to cut the margin to 18-15 with

But that was as close as they came. East Carolina began to pull away again. Franklin hit the first Buc points in almost six minutes to up the lead to five again. It fell to three one more time, then to four, at 23-19, with 4:09 left. But in the remaining time, the Pirates tossed in eight points, and held the Abbey to just two.

Faber hit four straight free throws, and then Gregory scored on a fast break. Faber then hit again for another 12-point lead, but an Abbey basket with 15 seconds left by Robinson cut it to 31-21 at the half.

If the Crusaders thought they had a chance left, the Pirates soon dispelled those hopes in the opening minutes of the second half. Both teams came out shooting and matched points for the first three minutes. Then East Carolina hit two—extra baskets by Faber and Franklin to run the lead out to 17. The Abbey got a free throw to cut it to 16, but Faber hit a three-point play to run it to 19, 50-31 with 15:05 to go and that about did it.

From there on out, the Bucs slowly pulled away, moving out by as much as 34 points in the closing minutes, when they held a 78-44 lead at 3:37.

Robinson finished the game with 19 points for the Crusaders, while Jim McDede had 16 points.

Following the Pirates' home contest against Richmond on Saturday, there are three more home dates left.

Randle Adds To Growing List

Since being named head football coach at East Carolina University in mid-December, Sonny Randle has been hard at work. That work is beginning to pay off now.

Wednesday night in Virginia Beach, Virginia, the ECU head coach awarded full four year football grants-in-aid to two outstanding athletes.

The two—Mike Jones and Joe Pulley—are both from Princess Anne High School. Their decision brings to five the number of athletes from the Tidewater area who have received Pirate football grants.

Jones, a 6-4, 200 pound defensive back, was one of the most sought-after athletes in Virginia. He turned down bids from Duke, Virginia, UNC and Maryland. His teammate Joe Pulley, a runningback-defensive back, was equally outstanding for Princess Anne this past season. He is 6-1 and weighs 185.

"Mike Jones is a super prospect," said Randle. "He is the most highly developed defensive back I've ever seen coming out of high school. His combination of size and speed is sure to open a lot of people's eyes."

Randle now has upped the number of athletes awarded ECU grants to 11. In addition to Jones and Pulley they are:

Buddy Thompson, a 5-11, 198-pound runningback from Indian River High School in Chesapeake, Va.

Vic Wilford, a 6-3, 195-pound wide receiver-defensive back from Indian River High School in Chesapeake, Va.

Danny Kepley, a 6-2, 185-pound runningback-defensive back from Goldsboro High School in Goldsboro.

Terry Stoughton, a 5-11, 175-pound defensive back from Fort Scott Junior College in Fort Scott, Kansas.

Addison Bass, a 6-0, 200-pound offensive guard from Washington High School in Washington.

Terry Cumberworth, a 6-0, 215-pound offensive guard from Centerville (Iowa) Junior College.

Kirk Doll, a 6-2, 215-pound defensive end-tackle from Hutchinson (Kansas) Junior College.

Laurie Prichett, a 6-2, 205-pound offensive tackle from High Point Central High School in High Point.

Wilburn Williamson, a 6-3, 185-pound wide receiver from Staunton Military Academy in Staunton, Va.

Eight of these young men will play for the Baby Pirates freshman team this fall, while junior college transfers Stoughton, Doll, and Cumberworth will be immediately eligible for varsity competition.

Randle has 30 full grants to offer this year and says that recruiting is progressing so well that the "talent hunting season" at East Carolina may be the best ever—and that the recruiting should be completed by March 1.

Rose Surprises New Bern With Win

Coming Through There

Seven Named To Pro Football's Fame Hall

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Coach Vince Lombardi and six players — Jim Brown, Y.A. Tittle, Norm Van Brocklin, Andy Robustelli, Frank "Bruiser" Kinard and Bill Hewitt — were named today to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The seven inductees, whose selection swells the Hall of Fame ranks to 70, will be honored at enshrinement ceremonies in Canton on July 31.

Lombardi, who died of cancer last Sept. 3, gained lasting acclaim for leading the Green Bay Packers out of the National Football League depths and into a dominance during the last decade. His Green Bay clubs won five NFL titles and the first two Super Bowl games.

The onetime member of Fordham's Seven Blocks of Granite moved on to Washington as coach, general manager and part owner in 1969. He guided the Redskins to their first winning season in 14 years before he was stricken with cancer.

Brown, elected to the Hall in his first year of eligibility, led NFL ball-carriers in eight of his nine seasons with the Cleveland Browns, establishing an all-time career record of 12,312 rushing yards. He was named all-league fullback seven times.

Tittle, who played 17 pro seasons and ranks second only to Johnny Unitas on the all-time passing list, was the NFL's most valuable player in 1961 and tied for the honor in 1963 while quarterbacking the New York Giants.

Van Brocklin, masterful quarterback for Los Angeles and Philadelphia during his 12-year NFL career, paced the Eagles to the 1958 championship. He coached the Minnesota Vikings for six years and has been the Atlanta Falcons' skipper since 1968.

Robustelli, from little Arnold College, was a hard-rock defensive end for 14 NFL seasons with the Rams and Giants. The seven-time all-league selection shares the all-time career mark of 22 opponents' fumble recoveries.

Kinard earned all-NFL honors in his 1938 rookie year with the old Brooklyn Dodgers and, in six subsequent NFL seasons and two more in the All-America Conference, established himself as one of the most durable and talented of all pro tacklers.

Hewitt joined the Chicago Bears in 1932, and was a stand-out all-around end for the next decade. He played without a helmet until 1939, when the league ordered him to don one. He died in 1947 from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

The new Hall of Fame members, largest group named in three years, were picked by the shrine's Board of Selectors—one representative from each pro football city plus the president of the Pro Football Writers Association.

The selections were announced by Hall of Fame director Dick Gallagher.

There was one game Wednesday night. North Carolina State defeating Maryland 71-61 when the Terrapins went cold late in the game at State.

The State Wolfpack, trailing 50-49 with nine minutes left, then outscored the Terrapins 19-2.

Paul Coder, who is from Rockville, Md., led N.C. State with 17 points. He also blocked four shots and got 12 rebounds, 10 in the second half. Jim O'Brien and Barry Yates had 13 points apiece for Maryland, and O'Brien had 11 rebounds.

State is 3-2 and 10-5, and Maryland 3-4 and 11-5.

State Wins On Late Surge

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The only loss in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season for the North Carolina basketball team has been to the Wake Forest Deacons — whom the Tar Heels meet again tonight.

That loss, 96-84 on Jan. 16, was at Wake Forest, but this time they play at North Carolina.

Charlie Davis scored 35 points for the Deacons in the January meeting, the third straight time Wake Forest had beaten the Tar Heels after dropping 11 consecutive games to them.

North Carolina leads the ACC on a 5-1 mark, all the victories at home, and is 12-3 in all games.

Wake Forest is sixth at 2-3 and is 10-5 over-all.

Davis is scoring at a 26.7 and center Gil McGregor, who played well for Wake Forest in the earlier meeting this season, is averaging 13.8.

North Carolina has five players in double figures, topped by Dennis Wuycik's 19.7.

Reflector Sports Writer The Rose High Rampants swept past the New Bern Bears last night 73-64. The Rose High J. V. also won its contest by downing the New Bern junior varsity, 74-53.

In the first quarter of the junior varsity game Rose jumped off to an early lead by outscoring the New Bern 21-11. The Rose team added to their ten point lead by out scoring the New Bern team 18-14 in the second period. Rose led New Bern at the end of the first half by the score of 39-25.

The two teams played evenly in the third quarter. New Bern opened the period by scoring the first basket. Rose came back to hit two consecutive fields goals and lengthen the lead to 45-27. Rose and New Bern matched goals for the remainder of the quarter with Rose leading by fifteen at the end of the third period. The third period ended with the score, 55-40.

Rose did not let up in the final period and added six points to its already commanding lead. The teams scored two field goals each in the opening of the last period. Rose hit eight points while New Bern could manage only three points. Rose was now ahead by 20 points and New Bern could not cut down the Rose lead. When the game ended Rose won with the final score, 74-53.

The high scorers for Rose were James Wooten with 21, Mike Harris with 14, J.C. Daniels and Danny Carr both scored 13. Gray led New Bern with 12.

In the first quarter of the varsity game Rose outscored the Bears 17-15. Rose opened the second period by scoring five points while New Bern hit only two free throws. New Bern came back and scored four consecutive points and came within one of the Rampants at 22-21.

Rose really poured it on in the last half of the second period by scoring 16 points while they allowed the Bears only four points for the remainder of the quarter. Rose was never threatened after this and held a comfortable lead over the Bears for the rest of the game. The first half ended with Rose leading 38-25.

Rose kept the 13 point lead for part of the third period but New Bern gradually began to cut the Rose lead down. With about four minutes left in the third quarter New Bern found the range and scored 13 points while Rose scored only one field goal for the remainder of the quarter. ## LaSalle Cools Off, Still Rolls Easily

By MIKE RECHT

Associated Press Sports Writer If there is any criticism of the LaSalle Explorers and Ken Durrett, it would have to be their erratic play. With any consistency, the Explorers would have shut out Loyola of New Orleans and Durrett would have scored 500 points.

After all, the Explorers ran up an 18-0 lead Wednesday night and Durrett scored 10 of those points in 48 seconds, but they couldn't keep up the pace.

Still, no one was complaining as the Explorers settled for a 74-53 victory and Durrett finished with 29 points in an impressive performance for the 10th-ranked Explorers, the only team in the Associated Press Top Ten to see action.

Duquesne No. 14 was the only team in the Second Ten to play and the Dukers beat San Francisco 90-77 for their 10th in a row.

After LaSalle's victory, St. Joseph's trounced Bowling Green 86-71 in the second game of the doubleheader at Philadelphia.

In other top games, Louisville, St. Bonaventure and Fordham continued their campaigns to regain the Top Twenty. Louisville ran past Tulsa 98-85, the Bonnies routed Xavier, Ohio, 104-77 and Fordham overcame Army 65-60.

Elsewhere, Rich Yunkus scored 37 points as Georgia Tech beat Georgia 90-77, Syracuse nipped Penn State 68-64, Boston College trimmed Rhode Island 86-80, Florida State bombed Wisconsin 98-61, Tulane downed Louisiana State 93-86, North Carolina State tripped Maryland 71-61, Canisius slipped by Detroit 65-64 and Creighton overcame Southern Illinois 90-71.

West Virginia beat Pitt, its arch rival, 95-91 with the game being cinched by a head of lettuce.

Pitt was ahead 92-91 with 14 seconds left when a foul was called against the Panthers because an overzealous Pitt fan threw a head of lettuce on the court. Wil Robinson converted on a one-and-one situation to put the Mountaineers ahead.

Using a man-to-man defense, LaSalle held Loyola scoreless for the first eight minutes of the game while the 6-foot-6 Durrett, the fourth leading scorer in the country with a 30.2 average, notched two three-point plays, a field goal and two free throws in a 48 second span.

The combination was more than enough to give the Explorers a good start to their 15th victory in 16 games.

A 25-foot jumper by Ronnie Nunn with just one second left gave George Washington an 86-85 overtime triumph over Navy. Louisville ran its record to 15-4 as guards Larry Carter and Jim Price scored 30 and 20 points, respectively. Dana Lewis had 37 for Tulsa.

St. Bonaventure shot a torrid 60 per cent from the field with Greg Gary hitting 28 points and Paul Hoffman 25 as the Bonnies outclassed the host Musketeers.

Fordham, however, had its troubles until Bill Mainor hit 17 of his 20 points in the final 12 minutes to lead the Rams to their 14th triumph in 15 games. Army led 36-23 at one time but the Rams caught up at 58.

Cougars Fall To Memphis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Stars fell on Indiana, in the third quarter, and took over sole possession of first place in the American Basketball Association's Western Division.

Leading only 52-47 at halftime Wednesday night, the Utah Stars outscored the Pacers 41-21 in the third quarter to put the game out of reach and break the tie for the top spot in the West.

Merv Jackson led Utah with 26 points. Roger Brown paced the Pacers with 20.

In other ABA games, Memphis downed Carolina 118-109, the New York Nets edged the Floridians 104-100 and Texas thumped Denver 127-119.

In the National Basketball Association, Seattle nipped Cleveland 98-95, Cincinnati clubbed Boston 134-115, Chicago drubbed Baltimore 124-102 and Milwaukee beat San Diego 108-101.

Carolina simply couldn't keep up with the Memphis Joneses. Wilbert scored 27 points, Steve 21 and Jimmy 20 for the Pros.

George Lehmann paced Carolina with 28 and Joe Caldwell added 26.

The Nets got past the Floridians as Rick Barry scored 11 points in the fourth quarter including the Nets' last six. Barry finished with 30 points. Larry Jones led the Floridians with 24.

Anatomy Course For Dentists And Physicians Said 'Success'

The Head and Neck Anatomy Conference sponsored by the ECU Division of Medical Sciences for physicians and dentists ended last week. Eight practitioners from three states participated in a series of lectures and laboratory and clinical sessions.

The director of the conference, Dr. Michael R. Schweisthal of the ECU Division of Medical Sciences, termed the event "most successful and informative", and praised the quality of participation of both staff and participants.

Dr. Gerald Edwin Nieuwsma of the U.S. Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune, N.C., who was enrolled in the conference, commented: "The amount of knowledge we have gained here is immeasurable at present. The benefits of such an intense, concentrated study will be evident over a period of time."

Censor Says Sex Killing Movies

LONDON (AP) — Britain's chief film censor, John Trevelyan, 67, has quit because he's had enough of sex films. He feels the emphasis on sex is killing the film industry.

Lectures and laboratory sessions were held in the anatomy laboratories, located in the medical wing of the new science complex on the ECU campus.

The staff consisted of Dr. Schweisthal, Dr. Wallace R. Wooles and Dr. Irvin Lawrence of the ECU Division of Medical Sciences; Dr. W. S. Bost and Dr. S. M. White of Pitt Memorial Hospital; Dr. G. E. Hair of Fayetteville, N.C.; and Dr. R. K.

Raps Prediction Of La. Scandal

MONROE, La. (AP) — Gov. John McKeithen has criticized U.S. Atty Gerald Gallinghouse of New Orleans for having predicted that startling evidence would be uncovered of wrongdoing in the state government.

The governor told newsmen Wednesday that Gallinghouse had exaggerated his information and was looking into a few areas over which the McKeithen administration has no control.

McKeithen also said that when his term ends he will run for the U.S. Senate or return to his hometown of Columbia and private law practice to recuperate financially from eight years in the governor's office.

The well-spring of that advice was the Navy, where the mere possibility of a Soviet-flag base on the Mediterranean is convulsive.

Since then, however, other prime Presidential advisers are coming to see the political-military equation in the same light: that until Israel withdraws from the Sinai, an area equal to about one-tenth of Egypt, Soviet influence over Egypt's internal politics can only go higher, with an outright takeover as the ultimate reward.

"Let me ask you a theoretical question, Maurice. Do you think any husband, no matter how good he's been, has the right after 30 years of marriage to address his wife as a fat, big-mouthed old biddy with her nose in everybody else's business?"

"You know a lot about women, Maurice. What do you really think of them? Are we as bad as most men seem to think?"

"I don't know why I go to all this bother just to please my husband. What has he ever done to deserve a beautiful wife?"

"No, Maurice, I don't want my hair fixed. I'm going to play bridge with some friends, and dropped in to see if you could lend me $20. If I win, I'll pay you back later this afternoon. If I lose, well—just add it to my bill."

A close comparison of the Waldorf version, the Chicago version and the final version discloses dozens of textual changes. The net effect is that of a soft pedal descending on a muffled cadenza. Competent medical critics say that the published paper, while persuasive, simply is not of landmark dimensions. It offers no basis for the extravagant claims of a year ago.

If Mr. Nixon has his way, Congress will earmark $100 million in the next few years for cancer research. A substantial sum doubtless would be invested in efforts by other investigators to replicate the Auerbach-Hammond study with adequate controls and meticulous animal profiles. In a nation of 45 million smokers, proof of causality is the indispensable first step toward finding the specific carcinogen, if it exists, in the cigarette. Forget the fanfare. We are not at that point yet.

Carelessness Is Death In Desert

By JOHN BONAR
TRIPOLITY, Libya (UPI)—Not long ago four men got lost in the Libyan desert. They set out to drive from one oil camp to another only nine-miles away. It took five aircraft two and a half days to find them 80 miles from their planned destination.

"They were careless in the extreme," says Dr. K. E. Melville. "They set off in a sandstorm, in a two-wheel drive family car, without water, or food and with a faulty compass. They broke lots of rules for desert travel and then, even when they realized they were lost, broke another one by not stopping at once. Otherwise they would never have managed to get so far away from their destination as eighty miles". The men were lucky. In an incident which is still remembered unhappily by Department of Information and Culture officials, five employees of the department died when they strayed from a regular track between desert settlements. Their Landrover overturned as they hit a sand dune and they abandoned the vehicle already injured, without food or water the men dropped one by one and died. Three days later the bodies of four of them were found by search planes from a nearby U.S. base while the fifth, the professional guide and tribal leader of the area was not found for another two days and then he was 50 miles from the scene of the accident.

Melville, a Briton, is trying to prevent accidents like this in the future. He has just written a book on survival in the desert. As chief medical officer of the Arabian Bechtel Corporation and with years of work in desert camps, he is well qualified to lecture others on the subject.

Practical Ways

In his day the doctor has rolled over sand dunes in his Landrover and stranded miles from anywhere, used the tube from his blood transfusion kit to repair the fuel line.

He is full of practical ways of getting desert travelers out of nasty situations. His very explicit instructions for getting out of soft sand sound simple: "STOP AT ONCE. Don't under any circumstances race the engine to try to force the vehicle out; you will only dig yourself in deeply very rapidly. Engage your lowest gear in 4-wheel drive and without excessive engine speed, try to drive out gently. Don't forget reverse gear might be lower than first."

One point the doctor says is worth remembering: "Decide which way you are going to move—it is no use getting out of one lot of soft sand and driving straight into another."

Melville also settles a few myths in his handy-sized book. Such as the hero of novels and films adrift in an open boat, or lost in a desert, carefully rationing his water to small, infrequent sips. "This method has been proved to be the completely wrong. Personally I can think of few things that would drive me crazy more rapidly than to have a raging thirst and yet have to go from hour to hour, obsessed with the single thought of the next sip." According to the experts, the correct thing to do is to abstain from drinking as long as possible; when your raging thirst can no longer be ignored, then drink as much as you want (or as much as you have....)

Forget About Water

"That way you will be able to forget about water for a while and concentrate on trying to escape from your predicament."

Another myth the doctor lays into in the extensive medical section of his book is the tarantular. Popular dread of are not to be undertaken lightly. A trip in modern vehicles is becoming progressively more simple, even relatively safe. But the traveler who gets careless and relaxes his care and vigilance for an instant can find himself in grave trouble.

"One of the less happy experiences of desert travel arises when you are merrily driving along on a smooth, hard piece of sand, miles from anywhere, and suddenly your engine chokes, splutters and dies.

"All of a sudden, you become extremely small, ignorant and insignificant, and the desert becomes correspondingly large wise and powerful!"

Minority Pupils Now Majority

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For the first time, minority-group pupils are a majority in the nation's second largest school system.

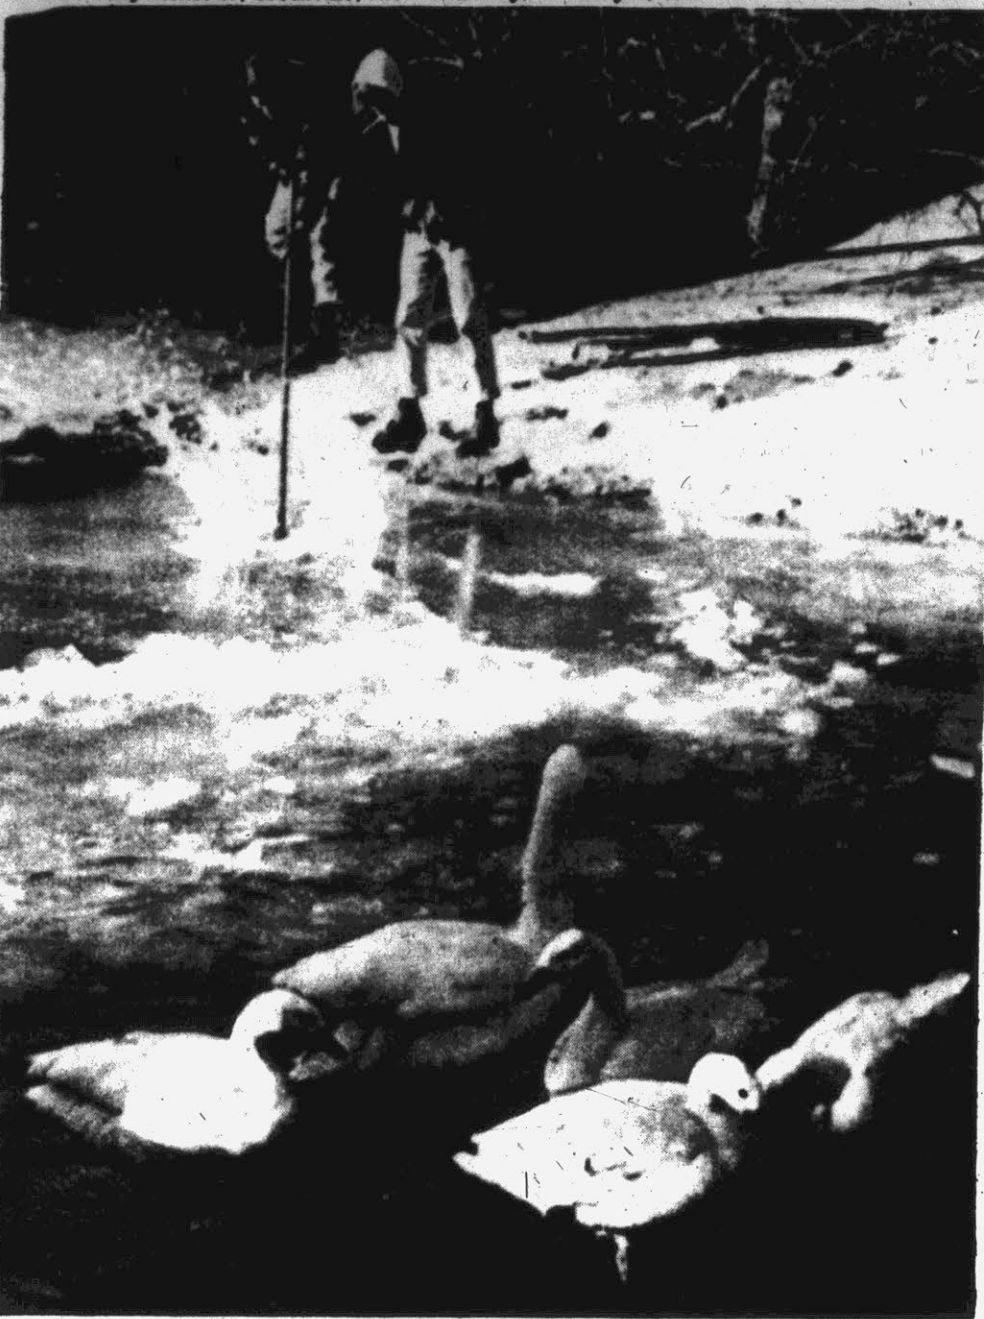

City school officials said Monday that its annual racial and ethnic survey showed a minority-group enrollment of 50.2 per cent of the 642,900 students. The minority groups include Negroes, Orientals, American Indians, Filipinos, Polynesians, Melanesians and those with Spanish surnames.

The previous year's minority group enrollment was 48.4 per cent.

Machines Can't Replace Manager

NEW YORK (UPI)—Although the computer age has resulted in an avalanche of facts and figures that "threatens to bury the decision maker," neither machines nor systems will replace the manager, according to a management expert.

"One needs only to point out that people are slow, sloppy and intelligent, while computers are fast, accurate but stupid," John H. Norton, an executive of Wofac Company, international management consulting firm, of Seattle, Wash., told a group of data processing management executives here.

Self-Supporting Postal Service Tried In 1860's

By WILLIAM O. BRYANT
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A self-supporting Post Office Department as now planned by the federal government isn't new, at least in the South.

The Confederates tried it — and made it work — more than 100 years ago, according to a Southern historian.

And, said Richard Harwell, director of libraries at Georgia Southern College in Statesboro, many of the same tactics being tried now were employed then.

Litigation Cuts Actress' Estate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The lawyer for actress Jayne Mansfield's $600,000 estate says that partly because of expensive litigation creditors are likely to receive only a portion of what they claim.

Irwin Boscoe, the estate attorney, said Monday creditors would be lucky to get 30 per cent.

Miss Mansfield and her then lawyer, Samuel S. Brody, were killed in a 1967 traffic accident in New Orleans.

such as limiting free mailing privileges, closing small post offices and raising rates.

"Using the same methods, maybe they'll show a profit," Harwell, who has written more than a score of books on the Civil War, said in a telephone interview.

A self-sustaining post office was required by the Confederate Constitution, Harwell said. And Confederate Postmaster General John H. Reagan strived mightily to realize the goal.

"He enticed a basic staff of experienced Union postal officials from Washington to help organize his department in 1861," Harwell said. "He eliminated very small post offices, stringently reduced free mailing privileges and negotiated new contracts for carrying the mail. Postal rates were increased from the old United States rate of three cents to five cents for the first 500 miles or 10 cents for any distance."

The results were impressive. The year before the war, the postal service in the 11 states which were to form the Confederacy had a $2 million deficit. By late in 1863, Reagan enjoyed a surplus of $675,000.

However, it was not to last. "Organizational efficiency and hardheaded management," Harwell said, "could not beat the larger problems which beset the Confederacy. With transportation facilities wearing out and breaking down, general manpower shortages, military action interrupting the mails, the Confederate postal service steadily deteriorated."

One of Reagan's other problems confronts the nation today. "Rapid inflation caused the hiking of postal rates," Harwell said. "But they could not be raised enough to keep up with increased costs and a deficit soon replaced the surplus of 1863."

In the end, Harwell said, Reagan failed only because the Confederacy failed. Now comes the United States to try Reagan's methods more than 100 years later.

Perhaps that is what is meant by "Southern strategy."

By GEORGE W. CRANE Ph. D., M.D.

"Sweetheart Tests!" Case P-563: Donna B., aged 16, has just started dating. "Dr. Crane," she timidly inquired, "I want to be popular with the boys as well as girls. "But I haven't had much experience at parties. "And my parents have only now let me start having dates. "So what do boys like most in their sweethearts?"

SWEETHEART TESTS Well, I conducted an interview of 1,144 unmarried men while I was teaching my large classes in psychology at Northwestern University.

These men ranged from 17 to 46 years of age. Privately, I asked them to name the things they admired most in their special girl friends, and they talked frankly.

Then I reversed my question and inquired about the flaws or faults they objected to in those same girls.

We called these traits "Merits" versus "Demerits."

North and South were lulled into a false sense of confidence today by an overabundance of protection in the opponent's bid suit, they failed to recognize that this might be too much of a good thing, and the result on the deal was a loss that easily could have been averted.

After two passes, West chose to open the bidding in third position with one diamond. This proved to be a fortunate decision for him, for if he had selected the more substantial heart suit for his initial call, the opposition would have been alerted at once to their weak spot.

North overcalled with two clubs in preference to making a takeout double, due to his lack of preparedness for a heart response. When the bid-

Joe Higgins Is Best Recognized

By MARTIN KRUMING Associated Press Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Higgins doesn't ride a horse, has never arrested anyone and doesn't foresee shooting any chicken thieves.

But as the burly character actor who plays the role of a Southern-talking sheriff in a television commercial, Higgins is one of the most recognized law enforcement officers in the country. More than 50 police and sheriffs organizations have made him a member.

Two years ago a car manufacturer—(Dodge)—was looking for a "Rod Steiger 'Heat of the Night'-type" for a commercial and had run through 26 applicants before Higgins appeared for an audition.

"Most Southerners are sensitive to a fake Southern accent," says Bill Brinkley, 32, creator and writer of the commercial.

Wearing a 10-gallon hat, a badge and a pair of 25-year-old yellow-tinted skeet glasses, Higgins arrived at the set.

"Y'all looking for a sheriff?" "That's him," one man shouted. Brinkley calls Higgins "a fantastic dialectician."

The commercials are still being made. Higgins has done seven for network use and several regional ones, earning around $50,000 a year.

Higgins is cast as a folksy, hard-nosed sheriff named J.W. Standing 5 feet 10 and weighing 238 pounds, he talks with a drawl saying "Boy, y'all in a heap o' trouble, Y'all drive careful now heah" and "How in the blue Susie are you?" The setting is Bristol, a bustling Tennessee-Virginia border town in the foothills of the Smokey Mountains, where Brinkley grew up.

Most law enforcement agencies enjoy Higgins' humor. As one Alabama official said "In today's uptight world, if we don't have the ability to laugh at ourselves, our future is bleak."

But two departments—the Wisconsin Sheriff's Association and the Ohio Highway Patrol—threatened to stop buying the sponsor's cars if Higgins wasn't taken off the air.

They felt he was "demeaning law enforcement at a time when law enforcement has enough problems."

Ducklings Enjoy Fastest Growth

NEW YORK (UPI)—Commercially fed ducklings gain a pound of weight per week and are ready for dinner tables just seven weeks after hatching.

Ducklings have the fastest growth rate of any poultry, about twice that of broiler chickens, according to poultry nutritionists for Hales and Hunter Feed Co., Elk River, Minn.

Police List 2 Accidents

An estimated $2,880 property damage resulted from two traffic accidents investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 9:35 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive 80 feet North of the Millbrook Road intersection and involved cars driven by George Orbert Harrington, 23, of Ayden, Howard Malleory Jr., 22, of 1902A Myrtle Ave., and Wesley Stuart Stocks, 27, of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage to the Harrington car was estimated at $1,000 while damage to the Malleory auto was set at $800. Damage to the Stocks vehicle was placed at $500. Malleory was charged with failing to yield the right of way.

Barbara Doris Talley, 17, of 400 Arbor St. was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of the other mishap, which occurred about 3:35 p.m. at the intersection of Tenth Street and College Hill Drive.

Investigators reported the Talley car collided with a vehicle driven by Mary Marcia Winslow, 17, of 901 Hooker Rd. and resulted in an estimated $180 damage to the Winslow auto and about $400 damage to the Talley car.

No injuries were reported.

IT'S A LONG WAY DOWN — Ground crew watches as three members of a reported U.S.-South Vietnamese seven-man long distance reconnaissance team dangle from a ladder beneath an HU-1 helicopter over a Khe Sanh chopper pad. cently for state officials and members of the press, scraps the traditional pencil and paper test in favor of an automated approach more suited to the space age. It is the first of its kind in the nation.

Development of the project by the Iowa Department of Public Safety was funded by the U.S. Department of Transportation, which rates improvement in driver licensing as one of the nation's top traffic safety needs. The exam was devised by Aetna Life & Casualty, and Visual Ed-ucum, Inc., built the equipment.

An Aetna spokesman explained the system, called DrivoTEST (Traffic Experience Safety Test), works like this: An applicant enters one of the 20 separate booths and presses a button that starts a color movie on a personal TV set. The film dramatizes a series of traffic situations that call for knowledge of legal and safe-driving requirements.

It stops at a planned moment in each situation and presents a multiple-choice question which the applicant answers with a push button responder. His choices are transmitted electronically to a central console where they are instantly scored.

An advantage of the DrivoTEST is that, unlike present methods, it teaches as well as tests. After each question, the film will tell which answer was right—and why.

In addition, the test can be expanded to accommodate virtually any number of applicants merely by adding individual units. By subtracting units, it can be compressed to fit in mobile stations.

The system will print out test information on data processing tape. Iowa officials plan to use this data to provide lawmakers with an objective basis for new safety legislation.

The DrivoTEST is not, however, designed to replace the entire licensing procedure. Iowa will continue to administer individual vision and on-the-road examinations.

After a year, the project's participants will meet with research specialists from the University of Iowa to evaluate results, the system then may be phased into operation across the state.

Man Sought For Murder

Greenville police today are hunting for a man identified as Monroe Bullock, 23, of 1610 Henry St.

A warrant has been issued for Bullock, charging him with murder in the death of Ernest Lee Kornegay, 25, of 1309B South Greene St., here early this morning.

According to investigators, Kornegay, and Bullock allegedly were arguing and began scuffling before Kornegay was shot. Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey reported that Kornegay was shot several times in the chest with a small caliber weapon—possibly a .22 or .25 caliber. He walked to a door, staggered and fell, the coroner reported.

The shooting occurred at a grill on Deck Street about 12:05 a.m.

Barbecue dinners will be on sale from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. on the sale site.

Machine May Give Future Driver Test

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Cross a computer, a TV set, some pushbuttons and 23 questions. What have you got?

Possibly the driver's license test of the future. And surely the driver's license test many residents of Des Moines will be taking during the next 12 months.
