Higher Bd. Report Proposes One Year ECU Med School

By YVONNE BASKIN Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) - A report presented to the North Carolina Board of Higher Education today said "it is not educationally or economically desirable" for the state to begin a two-year medical school at East Carolina University.

The board was to act on the report at a meeting today. The educational programs committee recommended, instead, that a one-year medical training program be developed as part of the School of Allied Health Sciences. It recommended that an arrangement be worked out with the University of North Carolina Medical School for full acceptance of all students who satisfactorily complete the year of training at East Carolina.

The committee recommended that this General Assembly appropriate funds for both planning and initiating the one-year program in the 1971-73 biennium.

"The program proposed as an alternative should, according to the best estimates, represent considerable savings in tax dollars over the cost of establishing a two-year medical school and, at the same time, train more doctors than at present," the report said.

It declared its recommendation is "consonant with the judgement of medical educational authorities that new two-year medical schools are not desirable."

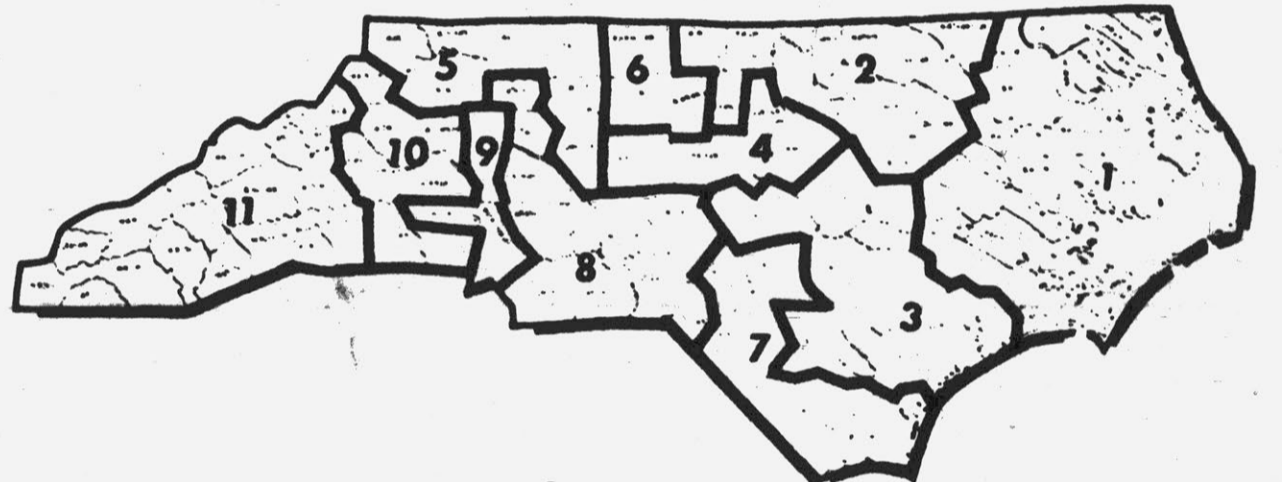

The report said the state's medical priorities must be to provide full funding for doubling the UNC Medical School first year enrollment from 100 to 200 by 1980 to develop the resources of Duke and Bowman Gray medical schools to train North Carolina students as doctors.

It said the plans of UNC Medical School "to expand clinical services to additional hospital centers in the state should be encouraged and supported, giving special consideration to the needs of the east and far west.

"We recommend appropriations to make possible the early initiation of clinical training for advanced medical students in such centers as Greenville, Wilson and Goldsboro," the report added.

Redistricting Plan Heads For Probable Senate's OK

FIRST MAP - This is the first redistricting plan to be approved by a North Carolina Senate committee

By REESE HART Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) - A congressional redistricting bill that would realign only 10 counties in North Carolina is headed for probable Senate approval.

"I think it has enough momentum to go through the Senate," said Sen. George Wood, D-Camden, chairman of the Senate Congressional Redistricting Committee.

The bill sailed out of the Senate committee Thursday on a 9-0 vote with two members absent and two Republicans - Sens. David Flaherty, R-Caldwell, and Hamilton Horton, R-Forsyth - not voting.

Under the measure, the average deviation in population would be only 1.01 per cent. The widest range would be 2.12 per cent in the 10th district and the smallest, minus 1.67, in the 8th. Both districts have Republican congressmen.

None of the 11 incumbent congressmen would be moved from their districts under the bill.

"The deviation is so small

this session. (AP Wirephoto Map)

that I don't believe it would be challenged in the federal courts," Wood said.

The 10 counties which would be shifted include: Carteret from the 3rd district to the 1st; Bladen from the 7th to 3rd; Greene from the 2nd to 1st; Caswell from the 6th to 2nd; Orange from the 4th to 2nd; Lee from the 5th to 3rd; Yadin and Davie from the 5th to 8th; Wilkes from the 9th to 5th, and Avery from the 10th to 11th.

One of the House leaders, Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, said the bill "sounds good to me. I'll do what I can to support it in the House." Quinn is chairman of the House Finance Committee.

The ease with which the bill cleared the Senate committee caught many legislators by surprise.

"I'm not surprised," said Wood. "I've been pushing" the committee. This was a committee effort in getting the bill out.

Wood said the average deviation under the bill is less than the redistricting proposal enacted in 1967 and approved by the courts.

The General Assembly is required to redistrict after every federal census to reflect changes in population.

Diplomat's Car Set Afire Today

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Soviet diplomat's car was set afire early today in suburban Silver Spring, Md., and an attempt was made to ignite two other autos bearing diplomatic tags in Hyattsville, Md., police said.

No one was reported injured. A short time later an anonymous male caller told the Associated Press:

"The car of a Russian diplomat on Ross Road in Silver Spring has just been fire-bombed. This is an act of retaliation in the war of liberation for Soviet Jewry. Let our people go. Never again."

The words "Never again" are the slogan of the militant Jewish Defense League.

The Montgomery County Police Department in Silver Spring

confirmed a Soviet diplomat's car had been set afire. The car's owner was not immediately identified.

"It was arson. We don't know if it was a firebomb or what," said a police dispatcher.

Police at Hyattsville were unable to determine immediately the owners of the two cars subjected to arson attempts.

Pvt. Louis Farnella said, "Pretty good sources here say they were diplomats from Russia. We had our fires at approximately the same time as the one in Montgomery County."

Rags were twisted into the gas tanks and set afire on both cars parked near each other, he said. Investigating officers found one rag snuffed out and the other still burning.

New Branch Of Secret Service

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new Secret Service unit was formed Thursday to protect visiting foreign dignitaries.

James J. Rowley, Secret Service director, said the Foreign Dignitary Protective Division was authorized by legislation signed by President Nixon on Jan. 5.

Secret Service protection of visitors previously was on a temporary basis.

A spokesman said the number of agents in the new unit is classified.

Green Mill Run Hearing Opinions Sharply Divided

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

The Green Mill Run project drew a contingent of defenders for maintaining the status quo of the small waterway, and several adherents for proposed changes at a public hearing conducted yesterday morning at City Hall. Some spectators termed themselves observers.

Army Colonel Paul S. Denison, District Engineer for the Wilmington District, Corps of Engineers, opened the hearing with a formal presentation of plans recommended from previous studies. He was assisted by Bernard Ingram, Chief of the Flood Plain Management Branch, and Charlie Blanton, as assistant.

"We are talking today of a concept from a previous study," Colonel Denison explained, saying an initial request made October 13, 1966 by the City of Greenville had resulted in the Corps of Engineer study for flood control of Green Mill Run. Not all of Green Mill Run and its basin is involved in the study and hearings. The project area affected begins at a point just west of Charles Street south of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad and follows the stream to a point in Green Springs Park south of East Fifth Street.

Most opponents of the proposed project had prepared statements from which they read, giving a copy to the engineer representatives to become a permanent part of the hearing.

Slides of the 1966 flood conditions in the Green Mill Run; a sketch of the proposed channel, and a diagram giving dimensions of typical channel sections for the proposed improvement were shown. Basically, the proposed channel would result in a much wider one than now exists. The extreme top width of a new channel would be 80 feet. The design also features sloped banks, which would be planted in an appropriate type of holding grass. The channel would be deepened from its present depth. Colonel Denison emphasized that the proposal being presented was designed to alleviate flooding under conditions of 25 year frequency type flooding - that it was not designed for the 100 year frequency exceptional heavy flood projection.

"The indications of frequency are subject to question," Denison explained, "It can occur any time. The 100 year evaluation period is based on many things, which throughout the U.S. have been found to be pretty accurate."

The V-shaped channel which has been recommended, Colonel Denison pointed out, has advantages over the trapezoidal type channel. "Slopes are vegetated, maintenance operations are easier, and it would be more esthetically pleasing. It would be an extension of the type improvements already made in the Green Mill area."

Possibilities he mentioned which could result from recommended improvements were: recreation paths, linking of recreation areas, and inter-community channels. "There is tremendous potential in forming a logical green belt plan for the city area," he said.

According to Colonel Denison, the project would require bridge replacements, modification or railroad trestles, and relocation of typical utilities.

Costs mentioned for the Green Mill project included an estimated federal contribution of about $213,000, and a cost to the city estimated at approximately $90,000, for a total of a little more than $300,000. Non-federal funds would be needed for railroad and bridge modifications and for relocation of utilities facilities associated with the project.

He estimated a minimum 50 year life for the project, which would mean the amortized cost would average out to about $16,900 per year. "We have estimated that for each dollar spent a return of $1.30 would be realized," the colonel said, adding that this return projection did not include enhanced land values and many other direct or indirect benefits.

On environmental effects, Colonel Denison said there would be "the loss of a relatively small number of gum and cypress trees, and gum and poplar trees all along the banks. Benefits enumerated were a reduction in flood and related pollution, mosquitoes, and an enlarged greenery belt.

Terming local contributions the "ABC of local cooperation," Colonel Denison stated, in event of the project's approval, local interests would have to "provide right of ways, utilities, bridge and railroad trestle relocations, and maintain the project without cost to the government."

One point Colonel Denison stressed on several occasions was the necessity for the city to the attendant regulation of land use.

Opposition Views

Dr. Stanley Riggs, a geologist, led the opponents. After outlining his recent geological researches in eastern North Carolina, Dr. Riggs said "I go on record opposed to the Green Mill Run project.

Dr. Riggs challenged citizens to develop the area as "an outdoor classroom for children, a laboratory for the children of Greenville as well as for ECU students and Greenville adults.

Flood plains were named by Dr. Riggs as "hazard zones," and said "anyone who goes into (Continued on page 8)

Nixon Says His Goal A Full Generation Of Peace

By BARRY SCHWEID Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon says he seeks to bring Americans their first full generation of peace in this century.

"I have set our sights on a span of time that men in positions of power today can cope with, just one generation, but one long step on the path away from perennial war," the President said Thursday.

His platform was a dedication ceremony at the Smithsonian Institution of an international center for scholars. It is named after Woodrow Wilson, who led Americans into World War I with the promise it would be "the war that will end war."

Since it did not, and since the United States refused to join the League of Nations, Nixon said, the 28th president "died a broken man."

"But now, with a half-century's perspective, we can see the success of Woodrow Wilson begin to emerge. He identified the United States of America with the principle of the self-determination of all nations, weak and strong. "He lit a spark that merged this nation with the cause of generosity and idealism."

A day earlier, Nixon had declared he would not hesitate to use all U.S. airpower short of nuclear weapons to defend American troops in Indochina. He also declined to rule out support for Saigon should South Vietnam decide to invade North Vietnam.

His news conference comments stirred Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., former Paris peace talks negotiator W. Averell Harriman and other critics of Nixon's war policies.

"President Nixon's statement that he would put no limit on the use of American airpower in Indochina is a major escalation of the war," McGovern said at a news conference.

Harriman said if the fighting spread into North Vietnam he was convinced China would intervene.

"We can expand it; yes, into Laos and we have done it into Cambodia and now it seems the President is considering going into North Vietnam," Harriman said in a talk to the Women's National Democratic Club.

"We are now encouraging Asians to fight Asians."

Nixon did not mention the Southeast Asian war in his Smithsonian speech, but the parallel to Wilson and to World War I gave his remarks special significance.

"We have taken the first steps toward walking in peace," Nixon said. "But we must first break the terrible world habit of war and only then can we learn the wondrous habit of peace."

"That is why today I do not speak of the war to end wars. Instead, I hope to focus on something that men alive today can achieve for themselves and their children, on a dream that we can realize here and now, a genuine beginning toward our ultimate goal."

His Date Right One For Occasion

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I called a girl for a date and she accepted. I made dinner reservations at a high-class club that features soft lights, music and dancing. I told this girl where we were going and I also told her I was wearing a black pin-stripe suit with light blue shirt and matching tie and handkerchief so she should dress accordingly.

She lives way out in the opposite direction from where we were going so I sent a taxi to her house to pick her up. When she showed up at my place she was wearing pants, sneakers and a hippie jacket with "peace and love" all over it. I know this girl can dress nicely because I've seen her in nice clothes.

I told her I was sorry but I couldn't take her to the place where I had reservations because they wouldn't let us in the place with her dressed like that. I paid her taxi fare home, and with the time flying I quickly asked a girl in my apartment if she wanted to go out for dinner. She jumped at the chance, dressed up like a lady, and we had a wonderful evening.

My question: Was I wrong to have sent the first girl home? I don't think so, but some other people think I was.

ME

DEAR ME: Since "WHERE" you went was obviously much more important to you than "WITH WHOM" you went, you weren't wrong.

DEAR ABBY: About 15 months ago my husband passed away and I sold one of his suits (almost new) to one of the neighbors for $10.

Just the other day, this neighbor called me and asked me to take the suit back and give her the $10 back. So I did. She is supposed to be one of my best friends. This upset my whole family. What is your opinion about this?

DISCOURAGED

DEAR DISCOURAGED: I think your friend must have been desperately in need of $10.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the Indiana Mother whose child had a speech defect and was teased by the other children. You recommended a speech therapist.

No therapist works "miracles" in a short time. We started taking our child to speech therapists when he was three years old. Seven years later he still needs coaching. Handicapped children suffer more from unkind treatment from their peers (and often from adults) than they do from a speech defect.

Despite therapy and daily coaching at home, our son is still taunted by children. And I've actually seen another mother laugh and encourage her own child to call my son names!

WISCONSIN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The mother you referred to in your letter needs more help than a handicapped child.

DEAR ABBY: If women's liberation achieves just one goal I shall forget all the others. And that is the relief from the stigma of the frequently awarded and phony label "ladies." Particularly when it adorns the cubicle next to the one marked "Men," and where "ladyship" has no standing.

R. L. GREENE

DEAR MR. GREENE: True, but while all ladies are women, not all women are "ladies," if you want to get technical. Now, how about those cubicles marked "Gentlemen," which are constantly used by men who don't qualify as "gentlemen?" Would you settle for "His and Hers?"

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Housewares Shop Owner Is Author

By JEANNE LESEM UPI Food Editor

LONDON (UPI)—A small housewares shop run by a David is coping nicely with the Goliath of mass-produced merchandise and heavy competition from other retailers.

In fact, Mrs. Elizabeth David's shop here does carry manufactured items, but some articles she stocks are museum pieces and others are likely to become so in the near future.

In an interview, Mrs. David said that certain old-fashioned meat-salting jars and triepies (narrow-mouthed casseroles for cooking tripe) no longer are made and production of some other items is erratic, because the skilled older potters are dying off.

The interview took place during a trip to London as a guest of the British Tourist Authority and the Egon Ronay Organization, a guidebook publisher.

Mrs. David, a tall, handsome, gray-haired woman who is one of Great Britain's most esteemed food experts, said she opened the shop in the section of Pimlico five years ago because she was unable to find some articles she wanted in England.

A Self-Taught Cook

She's mostly a self-taught cook. She said she became interested in French, Italian and Mediterranean cookery while living abroad with her husband, who was in the Indian army.

This led her to write several cookbooks, four of which have been published in the United States, and to write about food for London newspapers and

Homemakers Hear Mrs. Mills At Meeting

Mrs. Lyman Mills presented the program at the meeting of the Simpson Extension Homemakers held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. S. D. Tucker.

The program topic was "Creating Concern For Others By Understanding Ourselves." Mrs. Mills said, "To know thyself is the beginning of wisdom. We need to have concern and love for others always."

Mrs. Harold Mills, president, conducted the business session. Mrs. R. H. Heath gave the devotional on "A Picture of Christ in Our Homes."

Miss Lena Barrow, clothing leader gave a report on "Man-made Fibers and What They Are."

Mrs. Mills announced that the clothing clinic would be held next week. The hostesses for the year were named.

Mrs. Gentry Porter and Mrs. Mills assisted the hostess in serving refreshments.

Mrs. Claude Boyd was a guest for the meeting.

Competition apparently has done little to stem the flow of professional and amateur cooks, including celebrities, to her shop. Among these customers have been actors Danny Kaye and Alec Guinness, actresses Julie Christie and Susannah York.

Mrs. David's Stew

This recipe for Sussex stewed steak may also spur interest in home cooking. It's from Elizabeth David's cookbook.

Season a 2½ pound cut of chuck, top rump or thick flank steak with salt and pepper. Rub with a tablespoon or two of flour and place flat in a shallow, covered baking dish in which steak just fits.

Cover with 1 large onion, sliced, 5 tablespoons each of port and stout (or ale) and 2 tablespoons of mushroom ketchup or wine vinegar. Cover with a double sheet of waxed paper and the lid (or aluminum foil). Cook about 3 hours in preheated 300 degrees oven.

Serve with creamy mashed potatoes and fried or grilled mushrooms. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

Club Officers Are Named

New officers for the coming year were named at the luncheon meeting of the Carpe Diem Book Club held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. George Fuller.

Officers include Mrs. H. E. Lowry, president, Mrs. Bill Dansey, vice president, Mrs. Glen Cox, secretary, Mrs. Bill Pope, treasurer, Mrs. Thomas Harwell, historian, and Mrs. Cleet Cleetwood parliamentarian.

Mrs. Robert Dominick introduced Eric Slaughter as speaker for the meeting. A graduate student in the Biology Department at East Carolina University, he presented a program on air and water pollution. He showed slides on some of the major causes in eastern North Carolina.

A question and answer period was held after the program.

Mrs. Cleetwood, president, presided at the business session. Mrs. M. G. Creath was the guest for the meeting.

House Expected Act On Sales Tax Refund Today

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill calling for immediate distribution of $4.1 million in local sales tax collections to 25 counties whose budgets were upset by court action outlawing the tax was expected to receive House action today.

The bill was rushed to the House Thursday by special messenger after quickly passing the Senate.

"This bill doesn't have a fancy name like the Marshall Plan," Sen. John Burney told the Senate. "It's a blood plasma... for 25 counties suffering from shock."

The bill represents funds left with the State Department of Revenue after the State Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the 1 per cent local sales tax in effect in the 25 counties.

The department still will have on hand $2.6 million in January collections that will be available to pay refunds to exempt consumers and to individuals who seek return of their tax payments.

Rare Killer Disease Has Stalked Sons

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — The Leonard Coulter family has lost two sons to a rare, inherited blood disease which strikes down young males, and a third son, Scottie, 2, is very ill.

It wasn't until just before Keith Coulter, 10, died last month that doctors at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem diagnosed it as Aldrich's Syndrome. The disease strips defense against infection and breaks down blood platelets vital to clotting.

"If we'd only known in time what was wrong with Keith, we would never have had Scottie," says Mrs. Coulter.

Her husband is an $80 a week forklift operator at a textile mill, and makes a little more at odd jobs. A Coulter Fund has been established, and contributions are being made through the First National Bank in Newton and the Citizens Savings and Loan Association in Claremont.

The Coulter's first-born son, Ronald, died in 1957 before he was six.

The Coulters say that despite their wish over their lost children, they are grateful for the two unaffected ones, Leonard Jr., 17, and a daughter, Tony Marie, 16.

The killer disease stalks victims through female carriers, and shows up in the second generation.

Mrs. Coulter says she has been told that if Tony Marie has children, the malady won't show up in them, but it will in her grandchildren.

Coulter says his wife's oldest sisters had trouble with their children even before she was born, but they didn't know it was caused by Aldrich's syndrome. "and we didn't know what was going on when it first started among our children."

Mrs. Coulter says there are only two persons left in her family now. She was one of nine Thompson sisters and originally came from Blacksburg, S.C.

The Coulter children are among about 100 known cases of the syndrome. The longest a victim has ever lived was 20.

Dr. DeWitt Trivette of Hickory, who is treating Scottie Coulter, says there probably have been other unrecognized cases of Aldrich's Syndrome, although the victims seemed to die from pneumonia or some other ailment.

"This is a bill with a great need and a great demand," Burney told the Senate.

Earlier Thursday, the House debated and then enacted a bill to prohibit the Motor Vehicles Department from considering offenses more than 10 years old in suspending or revoking driver licenses.

New legislation included a bill in both Senate and House to permit a wife living with her husband to claim her mate's $2,000 exemption in paying their income taxes. The husband then would be able to claim only a $1,000 exemption.

Exiles Dunned For Tax Debts

NEW YORK (AP) — Stokely Carmichael and his wife, singer Miriam Makeba, are being dunned for $48,193 in income taxes for 1968 and 1969.

The Internal Revenue Service claim was disclosed at the Bronx registrar's office Thursday.

The couple now live in Conakry, Guinea.

Carmichael, a former head of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, is generally credited with coining the phrase "Black Power."

His wife is a recording and concert artist.

Tuesday Weld Is Given Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Tuesday Weld, 27, has been divorced from Claude Harz, 34, a writer who lives in London. The couple, married in 1965, separated two years ago.

Superior Court ordered Harz on Thursday to pay $100 monthly support for a daughter, Natasha, 4, whose custody was awarded to Miss Weld.

Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, and Rep. Marcus Short, D-Guilford, sponsored the measure.

A bill by Rep. Clarence Leatherman, D-Lincoln, would eliminate a 6 per cent ceiling on bonds issued by housing authorities and redevelopment commissioners. It also would validate agreements housing authorities made with the federal government in which it was required that loans or advances bear a higher rate of interest than 6 per cent.

Mamie Gives To Family Fund

SAIGON (AP) — President Dwight D. Eisenhower's widow, has donated $1,000 to a South Vietnamese welfare association that assists families of Vietnamese servicemen.

The chairman of the association, Mrs. Nguyen Van Vy, published a "thank you" notice today in the English-language newspaper Vietnam Guardian.

Mrs. Vy also expressed thanks to William E. Frey, president of Reclamation Associates International, for another $1,000.

Mrs. Vy is wife of South Vietnam's minister of defense.

RALEIGH (AP) — A freshman North Carolina legislator has been bicycling for ecology for 25 years.

Rep. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, began bicycling shortly after World War II when automobiles were scarce. He liked it so well he still pedals to and from work.

"I guess I've ridden a bike 30,000 miles in the last 25 years," said Smith, 52, a Greensboro attorney and former Navy veteran who owns one car driven mostly by his wife, son and three daughters.

"I do very little driving," said Smith, who feels automobiles "are constipating our towns and destroying community life by causing houses to be spread farther apart."

"Highways are lacerating our landscape... Automobiles are creating 65 per cent of all air pollution."

Smith feels North Carolina should join 14 other states, including Virginia, in a suit filed against all motor vehicle manufacturers and which would compel them to put pollution-free devices on all present cars as well as future vehicles.

Smith is interested in legislation that would improve environmental quality.

Smith brought his bicycle atop his car when he came to Raleigh for the beginning of the legislative session. He rides it daily to the legislative building. A metal sign behind the bike seat bears the words: "North Carolina House General Assembly."

He parks the bike weekends, and drives 77 miles to Greensboro.

"I can travel the two miles from my house to my office in Greensboro as fast on the bike as I can in a car, considering the time it takes to park the car," he explained.

Trudeau insisted he only moved his lips and hands "in a gesture of derision."

Conservative M. T. McCutcheon said the prime minister wanted to be "obscene but not heard."

Trudeau dismissed a similar accusation Tuesday as an "absolute distrust."

Said 'Obscene But Not Heard'

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has been accused by opposition legislators for the second time of mouthing obscenities which would have shocked lip readers.

The latest incident occurred Thursday during a House of Commons debate in which Trudeau was jeered by Conservative party members.

Trudeau insisted he only moved his lips and hands "in a gesture of derision."

Conservative M. T. McCutcheon said the prime minister wanted to be "obscene but not heard."

Trudeau dismissed a similar accusation Tuesday as an "absolute distrust."

"I am anxious to see what Gov. Bob Scott will propose to the General Assembly," he said in an interview.

Smith feels that a bike is the answer to the problem in crowded cities where parking is limited.

"More people would ride bikes," he said, "if they weren't afraid of being hit by a motorist."

Smith would like to see sidewalks in downtown areas made one-way so that bike riders could use one side of the street during certain hours and pedestrians could use the other.

The Bright Spot Is Under Attack

There have been two outside evaluations of the work done by the North Carolina General Assembly that have come to light since the Legislature convened this year.

One came from the Citizens Conference on State Legislatures which ranked North Carolina's General Assembly 47th in the nation, based on how the state governing bodies reflect "minimum standards of democracy and efficiency."

The other came from the Liaison Committee on Medical Education, which declared that the progress made by the General Assembly toward laying the groundwork for a School of Medicine at East Carolina University has been impressive.

Paradoxically, this bright spot in evaluation of the General Assembly's work is the one most under attack by certain forces in our own state.

We have never felt that our General Assembly deserved the 47th rating which the Citizens Conference on State Legislatures hung on it. However, the Legislature is in for a real test. If it can withstand the huge pressures being put upon it by special interest groups who want the Liaison Committee's recommendations ignored, then our lawmakers will indeed have been responsive to the needs of the people.

New Emergency Room Plan Worth Watching

A pilot project of having a physician outside the medical staff cover the Pitt Memorial Hospital emergency room on weekends could be very helpful in providing medical service.

Under the plan, the hospital would retain a physician for weekend service. He would handle routine cases and call in specialists where they are needed.

It will be interesting to see how the plan works. The physician on duty would be in a position to determine what specialist is needed for individual cases and this could mean more efficient use of the medical talent we have available.

This pilot project should prove productive in planning for future emergency room staffing.

Twelve With Big Influence

By JOHN KILGO
RALEIGH — Who are the 12 most powerful men in the North Carolina General Assembly?

We polled 30 members of the Tar Heel legislature to arrive at some kind of a decision, which will certainly be disagreed with by many people. By trying to select the 12 most powerful legislators, we were looking for the men who by word and deed influence other members of the General Assembly.

We excluded Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor and House Speaker Phil Godwin. They exert great influence over the legislature and in their positions of presiding over the two legislative chambers, they are without question the two most powerful figures in the General Assembly.

First, let's look at the State Senate. The legislators rated the most powerful Senators in order this way:

—John T. Henley: He's a 49-year-old Democrat from the 14th Senate District, representing Cumberland and Hoke counties. A distinguished figure in the Senate, Henley is chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee. He is low-key, a drug store owner, has few political enemies. He served four terms in the State House and this is his third term in the Senate. Newcomers to the legislature are impressed by Henley's "reasoned" approach to state government.

—John J. Burney Jr.: 46 years old, a Wilmington lawyer, represents the 10th Senate District. Burney chairs the Senate Finance Committee. Known in the Senate as Big John, Burney is a master at public speaking. He's a power in the East and potential gubernatorial candidates are busy courting him. Burney is in his third term in the Senate.

—Gordon P. Allen: Represents the 11th Senate District. He's in the insurance and realty business in his hometown of Roxboro.

One Senator says of Allen: "He's an insurance man who talks with the acumen of a lawyer." Another Senator says: "Gordon Allen will be Governor of this state one day." Allen — in only his second term in the Senate — is chairman of the Conservation and Development Committee.

—J. Rufin Bailey: Senator from Wake County. Bailey is a 51-year-old lawyer, serving his fourth term in the Senate. He looks like a Senator — tall, silver hair, eloquent. He chairs the committee on Courts and Judicial Districts. One veteran Senator says of Bailey: "He doesn't say that much, but when he speaks people listen."

—Joseph J. Harrington: 52 years old, represents the 1st Senate District from the East. A Lewiston businessman, Harrington is in his fifth Senate term. One Senator said: "Monk Harrington wrote the book on the art of friendly persuasion." He's chairman of the Public Roads Committee.

—Hargrove (Skipper) Bowles: Handsome, glib, energetic, but not without political enemies, most of them picked up when Bowles helped Terry Sanford get elected Governor in 1960. Sen. Bowles, 51, is a Greensboro businessman and quite wealthy. Any man who runs for Governor — and Bowles will in '72 — has considerable influence. He's been a low-key Senator this time, that by design. Bowles served one term in the State House and is in his second term in the Senate. Headed the Department of Conservation and Development under Gov. Sanford.

And now, taking a look at the 120-member House, legislators I talked with rated the six most powerful this way, in order of importance:

—Kenneth C. Royall Jr.: Rep. Royall is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and in that capacity has much to say

Asks Laws On 'Fair Dealing'

By BRYAN HANSLIP
RALEIGH — "Let the buyer beware," said the ancient common law.

"Let the buyer be aware," said Representative Richard S. Clark of Union.

What is needed, he added, are laws on the books to require fair dealing in the marketplace and to protect the unwary.

Laws like House Bill 156; Clark and 17 co-introducers ("we could have gotten more if we'd tried") titled it the "Buyer Protection Bill." It would spell out buyers' rights in retail credit transactions, limit finance charges on such sales, and provide other consumer safeguards.

The House Committee on Banks and Banking began this week hearing an explanation of the bill. Some of the facts Clark presented:

Heads of household in 43 per cent of North Carolina families have less than an eight grade education, yet deal heavily in consumer credit under contracts difficult for a lawyer to understand.

Finance charges in such transactions are totally unregulated and often run to 30 or 40 per cent per year and higher.

Consumer credit in the U.S. has grown from one to 125 billion dollars annually over the past 42 years. In spite of such an economic impact, North Carolina remains one of six states without legislation affording buyer protection.

Third Time Around
Like Clark, the buyer protection bill is in its third legislative session.

"I introduced it in 1967 in combination with 'truth-in-lending' legislation," he recalled. "The committee reported it unfavorably. No, they were kinder than that. It was postponed indefinitely. Anyway, it was killed."

Last session, Clark devoted himself to the session-long debate on interest rates and revision of the usury law. The buyer protection bill was introduced by others. It came out of committee but so late in the session that sponsors acknowledged time was too short to get it through House and Senate.

Third time around should bring success, Clark said. He is confident of passage this session.

Brighter Consumer Climate
The climate for consumer protection has brightened over the past half-dozen years, he observed. The federal truth-in-lending law has been an awakening influence. Consumer resistance has resulted in the formation of groups to actively seek consumer protection goals.

Initially, reaction to the buyer protection proposal ranged from indifference to downright hostility, Clark remarked; now, it is greeted with friendliness and enthusiasm.

Clark, a 44-year-old Monroe attorney, has gained the reputation of the General Assembly's foremost consumer advocate. Not coincidentally, he is president of the North Carolina Consumers Council, organized a couple of years ago for purposes of education, information, and influencing legislation.

Concern for consumer protection grew out of his law practice, Clark said.

Easy Credit Breeds Trouble

"When you run a 'walk-in' law office, as I do, you discover that the over-extension of credit is a major cause of problems for ordinary people. It is at the root of marital discord and domestic troubles in literally hundreds of cases that come to me," Clark explained.

He can reach into his files and pull out examples.

A middle-aged widow bought a car. The dealer persuaded her to finance the purchase rather than pay cash. She signed papers committing her to pay twice as much, and removing warranty protection on the car.

A retired black school teacher signed a contract for home improvement work. The work was shoddy, but the paper had been sold to an out-of-state finance company, the contractor went broke, and there was no recourse.

The buyer protection bill is a comprehensive law to regulate retail credit sales to consumers, including farmers.

Among its provisions, it would:

—Limit the amount of finance charges merchants and salesmen could charge on credit sales.

—Give consumers a three-day "cooling-off" period in which to cancel credit contracts with door-to-door salesmen.

—Require a standard form to inform credit buyers of their rights and remove all fine print in retail credit sales contracts.

—Allow the courts to void any consumer credit sale which is found to be "unconscionable."

The aim, said Clark, is to make it difficult for the gypster and swindler to operate while allowing the legitimate merchant to sell responsibly.

"As a last resort (perish the thought!) I may have to grab the reins!"

Hanoi On The Ropes

WASHINGTON — Whenever something new happens in the war in Indochina, I always seek out my dear friend Joseph Wallstop, the dean of the Hawk columnists.

Late last fall as the war was winding down Joe had become more and more depressed, so I didn't know what mood I'd find him in. Happily, when I went down to his war room located in the basement of his house, I found him dancing a jig.

"Joe," I said, "you're your old self again."

"They've finally listened to me," Joe said gleefully. "I've wanted to invade Laos for four years."

"That's wonderful, Joe," I said. "It must be great to see a dream come true."

"I didn't think President Nixon had the guts," Joe said. "But, thank God, he has finally bought my plan. Hanoi will be on the ropes in a matter of weeks."

"I thought you told everyone Hanoi was on the ropes after the Tet offensive."

"They were on the ropes," Joe said. "But they didn't know it. I still maintain the Tet offensive was the biggest allied victory of the war."

ART BUCHWALD

"Bigger than the invasion of Cambodia?" I said.

"Cambodia was different. In Cambodia, I wiped out all the Communist sanctuaries that were supplying the Reds in South Vietnam."

"But if you wiped out all the Communist sanctuaries, why did you have to go into Laos?"

"Because, you idiot, Hanoi is hurting, so they're sending everything down the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Once I interdict the Ho Chi Minh Trail, I'll have the Commies on the ropes again."

"Unless they think of something else," I said.

"Come over here," Joe said. He took me over to a very large table which had a relief map of Southeast Asia on it. He had flags all over it: green for allied troops, red for Communist troops and blue for American aircraft.

He even had a miniature Sixth Fleet which he could push around the table.

He put on his campaign hat and said: "This is what I want to do: I want to bomb everything in Cambodia and Laos. That may force Hanoi to send their stuff through Thailand."

"Why, it's the old interdiction play," I said.

"Exactly. This will give me an excuse to invade Thailand. Once I'm in Thailand, I'll give Gen. Abrams time to shape up the South Vietnamese army so they can invade North Vietnam."

Other Editors Say Defeated Remain

(Wilson Times)
Defeat at the polls does not mean for the majority a return home. Many defeated members of Congress are still in Washington. Twelve Republicans have been chosen for high-paying jobs in the Nixon administration, while other former members practice law, work for trade associations or simply look for a job.

Of the 43 senators and representatives retired by the voters in 1970, 22 haven't left town. They've been hired by the government, or have found jobs with private firms, or are plain looking for a good job.

The Nixon administration has become the major employer for Republican members of the 91st Congress down on their luck of who lost out in the election. Twelve of the 23 defeated GOP members have been nominated for jobs with the administration. The jobs range from ambassador to the United Nations, to spiritual consultant to the President's Commission on Aging.

All of the men hired are former House members and all are well paid. But money isn't the only reason defeated members stay in Washington on their way back home. After years in Washington, you know the ins and outs better than you do back home. Then the full-time responsibilities of Congress have forced many to cut the ties that might have led to a productive life in their home area. So there is little to go back home to.

Defeated members who have returned home have found mixed results as they open new careers. A majority are Democrats, unable to use the federal government as an employment agency. Of those who have gone back home, seven are planning to practice law in their home districts or states. One is a mortgage banker, one a public relations man for a department store, one a geologist and one was appointed to the state senate.

Find New Grads A Good Breed

By ELMER ROESSNER
College grads, even masters and doctors of philosophy, are finding it more difficult to find the jobs they want this year. But it's purely for economic and economy reasons. The 25th annual Endicott survey shows that despite earlier turbulence on campuses, business finds the new grads a pretty good breed.

The Endicott survey has been conducted annually by Dr. Frank S. Endicott, director of placement at Northwestern University. This year, as for each of the last 18 years, his findings are published by the Conference Board. They appear in the board's monthly Record.

Of 110 responses: 32 said: "They are not really a new breed. We see very little difference."

30 said: "More concerned about the social goals of the company, more interested in community betterment."

28 said: "Overestimate potentials, impatient with progress, expect too much responsibility too soon."

Take-Charge Men
23 said: "Desire early responsibility, want to supervise immediately, want rapid advancement, more demanding and aggressive."

22 said: "Want more challenge, ask for meaningful assignments, want relevant work."

22 said: "More eager to criticize, often question operating policy. Unimpressed by protocol, less accepting of tradition."

21 said: "More restless, less patient."

16 said: "Better educated, better qualified, more able to take responsibility, more knowledge in special field."

8 said: "More interest in continued education."

5 said: "Less concerned about 'proper' dress and behavior."

They'll Do
While many surveyed acknowledged these differences in today's graduates sometimes led to friction with older supervisors and managers, none of them indicated that they found these differences so disruptive that they were unwilling to hire newly-minted graduates.

In other words, America's future is in good hands.

Dr. Endicott also found that, contrary to many reports, starting salaries offered this year, are higher than salaries paid last year. But in most cases the difference is very small, a token increase that will not cover the year's increase in the cost of living.

Dr. Endicott also gathered some interesting information

Pistol And A Bible

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HONOLULU (UPI)—Officer William Goodman wears a pistol on his hip and carries a tattered Bible in his pocket.

But the preacher-policeman, who figures he's doing double duty on the side of the right, finds "the Bible a lot heavier than the gun."

When Goodman, the pastor of the Ewa Beach Church of the Nazarene, is not administering to the needs of his congregation, he's chasing car thieves or burglars, investigating murders, aiding accident victims, mediating domestic spats or issuing traffic tickets.

"I believe a minister should be where the action is," Goodman said in an interview.

The 36-year-old Protestant minister, who donates his spare time to serving as a reserve policeman, finds no conflict in blending police work and preaching.

Gun is Innocent

"People ask me why a minister—a man of nonviolence—would carry a gun," Goodman said. "The gun itself is innocent and I dedicated to nonviolence. I always tell my three kids that my Bible is heavier than my gun."

The rugged-looking preacher who has never fired a shot in the line of duty in the four years he's been in the reserves, said "people everywhere are against the poor policeman. They come to the conclusion that policemen are men of violence. It's just not true."

"I've met some bad ministers," Goodman said, "but I haven't met a bad policeman. Someone has to do society's dirty work. In a situation when no one seems to have the answer, we call a policeman. A cat in a tree, a fight next door, or a UFO, call a policeman. The police just don't receive the credit they deserve."

Although he resists "the temptation to use police as in Sunday sermons," Goodman said his minister's training has come in handy in police duty, particularly in domestic squabbles.

"People are surprised to hear a policeman spout theology," he said.

That Goodman should end up as either a policeman or a minister is ironic, considering he admits that 10 years ago he was "about as low as you could go."

The son of a police sergeant in Johnstown, Pa., Goodman said he was "practically an alcoholic" by the time he graduated from high school. After serving in the Marine Corps, he continued drinking and was frequently involved in acts of crime.

Nothing Bothered Him
"A friend and I used to do all kinds of things—breaking and entering and stealing," he said.

"My conscience didn't bother me a bit."

"Then we tried to steal a body from a funeral home as a prank, and my father arrested me."

"He talked to me about how he wished I'd go to church. Well, I went to the school library, got out a Bible and started reading. I started going to church, and my life was changed after that."

Goodman's own experiences have made him particularly sensitive to the problems of youth today and he is writing a book about temptation.

Strength For Today

REAL ACHIEVEMENT
Transportation is becoming a real problem in modern life. Our first President, George Washington, threw himself with energy and purpose into the development of canals. The best time he ever made from Philadelphia to Mount Vernon was six days. Now we get to the moon. Some day we expect to make a landing on Mars. Thousands of men in both the British and American armies died in battle during what we call The War of 1812 because the peace treaty was delayed in getting to our shores.

Every change in national and international life involves the betterment of transportation. Here we can expect change to go on continuously, and it had better be change for the better if we expect to survive. Television tells us the same story over and over.

Our nation could really go to pieces over this complicated matter of transportation. Subsidies may help for a while but not as a permanent cure — and the word "cure" is used advisedly, for problems of transportation constitute a vast and decimating national disease.

Humanity seems to cherish the idea that some day as individuals and nations we will solve all our problems. Some of our problems may never be solved, but that's no reason why we should set up a hue and cry. If we solve the problems near at hand we may be amazed to find that other problems will solve themselves. It was proved that a heavier-than-air machine could not be made to fly — but the Wright Brothers did make it fly. Keep on trying, thinking, experimenting. Real achievement lies ahead.

Sen. Muskie Impressed Group With Power, Funds

By YVONNE BASKIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine is out front and running in North Carolina, but the men with the power and money he needs are not yet ready to commit to him.

Fourteen persons representing a cross-section of the power and money in the state party met with Muskie privately last Saturday night at the governor's mansion in Raleigh.

The meeting capped a day-long round of talks between Muskie and agricultural leaders, blacks, labor representa-tation to Muskie was "by and large favorable," but he said it was too early to take positions. "I have no commitment at this time," he said.

Leaders of the black and labor segments of the party and representatives from some of the state's leading financial institutions also said they were not ready to make any commitments to any possible candidate.

Holderness of Jefferson-Standard said, "I think he's favorably impressed by Muskie. But most also say it's too early to make commitments since other possible candidates haven't been heard from and Muskie hasn't outlined a definite platform."

Participants included C. C. Hope of First Union National Bank in Charlotte, who was state campaign manager for the Humphrey-Muskie ticket in 1968; Howard Holderness of Jefferson-Standard in Greensboro; John Watlington of Wachovia Bank and Trust in Winston-Salem; Charles Made of R. J. Reynolds Industries in Winston-Salem; Cliff Benson, a Raleigh businessman and state highway commissioner; Howard Lee, black mayor of Chapel Hill and a vice-chairman of the state party; Fred Alexander, black city councilman in Charlotte; and Wilbur Hobby, president of the state AFL-CIO; Supreme Court Justice and former Gov. Dan Moore; Margaret Harper of Southport, a vice chairman of the state party; Betty McCain of Wilson, active in women's affairs in the party; Alex Brock, executive secretary of the state Board of Elections; state party chairman Gene Simmons of Tarboro; and Jim Hunt of Wilson, who helped direct a recent party reorganization.

"This was a very quiet meeting," said Mrs. Harper. "We merely wanted to know where he stood. We asked very serious questions and he answered them. He came off quite well."

"There were no commitments and no money asked for, and none were given," she added. "I was tremendously impressed with him," Mrs. Harper continued. "But, I can't do like Gov. Scott because of my position in the party. I've got to support whoever is the nominee."

Brock said there was a "definite congeniality" at the meeting, but that as a state official he didn't "think it proper to comment on any candidate as opposed to another."

Justice Moore said the reaction to Muskie was "by and large favorable," but he said it was too early to take positions. "I have no commitment at this time," he said.

"This was a very quiet meeting," said Mrs. Harper. "We merely wanted to know where he stood. We asked very serious questions and he answered them. He came off quite well."

"There were no commitments and no money asked for, and none were given," she added. "I was tremendously impressed with him," Mrs. Harper continued. "But, I can't do like Gov. Scott because of my position in the party. I've got to support whoever is the nominee."

Brock said there was a "definite congeniality" at the meeting, but that as a state official he didn't "think it proper to comment on any candidate as opposed to another."

Holderness of Jefferson-Standard said, "I think he's favorably impressed by Muskie. But most also say it's too early to make commitments since other possible candidates haven't been heard from and Muskie hasn't outlined a definite platform."

about how North Carolina's tax dollar is spent. He's 52, a Durham furniture store owner, was a major in the U.S. Marines during World War II. Is in his third term in the House from Durham County. Says one Representative: "No one in this General Assembly is as well prepared as Ken Royall. He's earned respect."

Dwight W. Quinn: From Cabarrus County, works for Cannon Mills, is locked in a battle with James Ramsey of Roxboro for the House Speakership for 1973. Quinn chairs the Finance Committee. The 53-year-old Quinn is in his 11th term in the House, second in longevity only to Jim Vogler of Mecklenburg. Is a very close friend of House Speaker Phil Godwin.

Samuel H. Johnson: 43-year-old Raleigh lawyer, chairman of Judiciary Committee Number 1. Serving his fourth term in the House. Has been prominent in the affairs of the Democratic Party in North Carolina for years. Well-liked, articulate, introduced legislation this year to save the local option sales tax for 25 counties after the State Supreme court ruled the tax unconstitutional.

Ike Andrews: He's a 45-year-old Siler City lawyer who served one term in the State Senate and is in his fourth term in the House. He chairs the House Rules Committee. Says one representative: "Ike has worked at being a good politician and it's paid off." Andrews might run for lieutenant governor in 1972.

James B. Vogler: 75-year-old from Charlotte. Has served in 14 House sessions and six special sessions. He's the dean of the House. In days past when the Mecklenburg delegation was locked upon with a suspicious eye by some legislators, Vogler had their respect. Says one legislator: "Jim Vogler's the closest thing to Henry Clay that we have in the House. He can listen to both sides of a controversial matter and then propose a compromise that both sides can accept."

James E. Holshouser Jr.: Representative from the 44th House District. He's a 36-year-old Boone attorney who is chairman of the North Carolina Republican Party. Most of the Republicans in the legislature follow Holshouser's lead. He is thinking seriously of running for Governor in 1972. Is in his fourth term in the House.

While this list slights 138 members of the Tar Heel General Assembly, those are the 12 men most mentioned and there can be no doubt that they have considerable influence on North Carolina's State Government.

Joe moved the green flags across the DMZ.

"You mean you're going to invade North Vietnam?"

"What choice do I have?"

Joe replied, "Once I clean out the sanctuaries in North Vietnam, Hanoi will be on the ropes."

"So they'll sue for peace?"

I said excitedly:

"No, they won't," he said disgustedly. "They'll ask the Chinese to intervene."

"Joe," I said nervously, "You're moving the green flags up to the Chinese border. You're not thinking of sending the South Vietnamese into China?"

"Why not?" said Joe.

"That's where all the supplies are coming from."

A red phone in the corner rang urgently and Joe picked it up. "Yes, Mr. President. You're doing fine. Just fine. Once you secure the Ho Chi Minh Trail, call me back and I'll tell you what to do next."

Abortion Bill OK'd

RALEIGH (AP) — A divided House Health Committee gave its approval today to a bill to liberalize North Carolina's abortion law.

The committee voted 10 to 6 first to a motion to kill the bill and then voted by the same margin to give the bill a favorable report.

The bill makes it legal for any doctor to perform an abortion upon a woman upon her written request. The woman would have to have been a resident of North Carolina for 30 days and the operation would have to be performed in a hospital or in a medical facility connected with a hospital.

"This is a medical matter between a patient and her doctor," said Rep. John Ingram (D-Randolph), as he moved to give the measure a favorable report.

Davis Imparted 'A Freshness'

Ivan Davis makes you feel the emotions the composer must have experienced when he finished a work and said "this is it." Few indeed are the musicians who can impart this delightful freshness to music, as if the pianist was himself surprised and awed by the wonder and beauty of what he was playing.

At Wright Auditorium last night, in the first of two concerts in which Davis will appear in Greenville, the pianist more than confirmed all the superlatives which audiences and critics have been using to acclaim his marvelous artistry.

David involves his listeners so much with the music, makes it so personal, it is only later the realization comes that he also possesses a dazzling technique. While Davis played, this listener had no conscious awareness of technical perfection, style, or any other consideration — his playing was instead the instrument of bringing the music, the player and the listener into that total rapport of all being momentarily one. Such occasions are rare, and live on in one's memory.

In retrospect, several things stand out about Davis' brilliant playing. He is equally master of brio passages; those calling for poetic interpretation; and ones brimming with lightness. Davis' touch on the keyboard can be that of a giant, a woman's tenderness, or a child's playfulness, with never a suggestion of faltering in shading or transitions between moods. His phrasing too is remarkable, something uniquely his own.

In last night's program, Davis leaned heavily on Liszt and Mendelssohn, performing two compositions from each of these two composers, and including the beloved Mendelssohn-Liszt "On Wings of Song" as one of his three encores. Davis' playing of Liszt's "Funeralles", with its echoes of Chopin's "Polanaise in A" in the beautifully textured triumphant passage, was perhaps the highlight of a memorable

Strays Beware

WINTERVILLE — Stray dogs will be picked up in the Winterville area beginning Monday by the local dog catcher.

According to Winterville Chief of Police Charles Blankenship, the number of stray dogs in the area is getting to be a "big problem."

"As many as seven to ten dogs are in some of the packs and the problem has to be corrected," Blankenship said.

May Charter Cargo Craft For Air Mail

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent cutbacks in scheduled airline flights have hit the U.S. Postal Service so hard officials say they plan to consider buying or leasing cargo planes to carry long-distance mail.

Asst. Postmaster General William Hargrove said such a move has been suggested as a possible solution to problems caused by the wave of flight cancellations.

In the past year, economically troubled airlines have eliminated about 700 flights, many of them the late-night take-offs which postal officials say carry large amounts of priority mail.

In some instances, Hargrove said in an interview, bags of mail have had to wait overnight at an airport before being loaded on a flight. This causes delays of up to a day in delivery, he added.

Hargrove said the Postal Service has tried to encourage airlines to keep their late-night flights by promising them a large haul of mail, but he indicated there has been little success in this effort.

As for buying or leasing planes to haul the mail, he said "This is something ... we'll have to take a look at." He said last year's Postal Reform Act gave the Postal Service authority to operate its own planes, then added: "The economics of it are not very good."

A spokesman for the Air Transport Association, asked about Hargrove's comments, said the flight cutbacks have had "some effects on the mail, but we are unaware of any but small, isolated problems which this has caused."

He said the Postal Service had not been in contact with the association or the airlines, adding that the association was sending a telegram asking to meet with postal officials "as soon as possible to review the matter and seek any necessary solutions."

Last year, the Postal Service paid airlines $154 million for hauling mail. For air mail shipments, airlines receive 24 cents per ton mile. For lower priority mail, the payment is 11.33 cents per ton mile. In addition, airlines receive handling charges ranging from 2.3 cents to 9.3 cents per pound of mail.

Fight Not Given Up By Filibuster Foes

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators fighting to make it easier to choke off filibusters fared even worse on their first test vote than they had predicted.

Even taking absentees into account, they expected to get more than 50 votes for halting a filibuster against the proposed rules change.

But when the roll was called Thursday, it showed 48 for closing out the 3½-week debate and 37 against, nine short of the required two-thirds majority.

Another petition to cut off debate will come to a vote Tuesday.

"Next week I hope we will have an improved vote," said Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a chief sponsor of a proposal modifying the present two-thirds rule to shut off filibusters by a three-fifths majority.

Even if a three-fifths rule had been in effect when Thursday's vote was taken, the move to cut off debate would have fallen three votes short.

Democrats divided 27 for and 19 against bringing to a halt the Southern-led filibuster against the rule change. The Republican lineup was 21 for and 18 against.

A majority of 51 senators, including leaders of both parties, is sponsoring the three-fifths proposal supported by the White House. But to get it to a vote they have to overcome the opposition filibuster.

In a similar session-opening rules fight two years ago when Hubert H. Humphrey was vice president, he held in a precedent-shattering ruling that a simple majority had a constitutional right to end the debate. The gist of that ruling was that a new Congress is not bound by rules made by its predecessors.

But an appeal was taken and, by a 53-45 vote, the Senate overturned Humphrey's ruling. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, the Senate's presiding officer, said at the outset of this year's rules battle he would refer any such constitutional issue to the Senate, rather than ruling himself.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said unless the vice president makes a ruling on which the Senate can vote there is no way for a majority to work its will short of obtaining a two-thirds vote to cut off debate.

Defenders of the present rule say extended debate makes the Senate unique among legislative bodies, enabling it to serve as a check on executive powers, a protector of minority rights, and a forum to thresh out divisive issues.

Gift For White House Butler

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Nixon gave head butler John Ficklin a silver letter opener with a presidential seal as he launched his 26th year on the White House staff Thursday.

Ficklin didn't get time off to celebrate the occasion.

Ending his 25th year, he was on duty late Wednesday night supervising the buffet table at a big military reception. He had his hands full again Thursday with a state dinner for Italian Premier Emilio Colombo.

Ficklin went to work at the White House in 1946 as an underbutler for his brother, Charles, who was chief butler at the White House before him.

Sen. Jordan Not Inconvenienced

DURHAM (AP) — Sen. B. Everett Jordan will not require any adjustment in normal bodily functions as the result of surgery, according to a Duke Hospital spokesman.

Joseph Sigler, information officer for the hospital, said Thursday that the North Carolina Democrat should not be inconvenienced by the surgery.

Dr. David Sabison, chief surgeon for the operation, told one of Jordan's aides that he was "very much impressed with the senator's vigor and speed of recovery." Sabison removed a malignant tumor last Monday from the colon of the 74-year-old senator.

Girls' Organization Entering 2nd Year

Strong's Jewels Youth Branch No. 5 of the Order of Eastern Star is entering its second year of fellowship, and service, according to its organizer, Monty G. Frizzell.

The organization of some 30 girls representing Eastern Star chapters from throughout the county is named in honor of Mrs. Maggie L. Strong of Ayden, Grand Worthy Matron of O. E. S. in North Carolina. Advisors of the group are Sister Willa G. Williams, past district deputy; Sister M. Jones, past worthy matron; Sister J. W. Reeves, district advisor; Sister Strong; Sister J. Norfleet; Sister Pearl Frizzell; and Brother Frizzell. The fundamental purpose of this organization, Frizzell said, is achievement in the field of religion, education, leadership, and social relations. "We hope to provide the girls with a sense of responsibility and a sense of belonging," he said.

The only requirement to become a member is that a girl be the child of a Master Mason, living or dead. They meet once a month.

Several activities they have had so far include contributing to the Oxford Orphanage, giving baskets to needy persons at Thanksgiving and Christmas, giving a valentine program for some 85 community children at the Mount Herman Lodge here last week, and sponsoring a food drive for windows of Master Masons and other needy persons.

Several articles about the group or certain members of it have been published in the Master Masonic Journal, the quarterly publication of the Prince Hall Grand Lodge of North Carolina.

Court Hearing Beatles' Case

LONDON (AP) — The High Court began hearing evidence today in Paul McCartney's suit to break up the Beatles, and McCartney and his American wife were on hand for the hearing.

McCartney's counsel, David Hirst, asked the court to appoint a receiver to control the group's business until the court decides whether the partnership, Beatles and Company, should be dissolved.

The hearing is expected to last six days.

The defendants are the other Beatles—John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr—and their management company, Apple Corps Ltd. Each of the Beatles has a 5 per cent interest in the partnership; Apple Corps has the remaining 80 per cent.

McCartney's suit came before the court briefly a month ago and was adjourned to enable the defendants to provide evidence.

THE SHINING GOAL

It's a long hike! Traveling to our goal can take a lifetime, but it's worth it. Every morning we start out on another stage of the journey, and it's up to us how much we accomplish before nightfall.

What is the goal? What is our highest peak of spiritual development? What are the rewards? All the things we long for — peace of mind . . . perfect freedom . . . contentment . . . happiness.

Many are still struggling through the forests of unbelief and despair. Some are lost and confused in the mists of doubt. Others are already climbing the foothills of hope. Many of us will reach the summit if we pray constantly for help and strength.

The Christian scriptures are your infallible guidebook, and the Christian Church offers you a place of spiritual refreshment along life's road. Attend church this Sunday, and continue your journey with a lighter burden . . . and a lighter heart.

Dancer's Act Challenges Authority Of ABC Board

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Drinkers at stage-side tables leaned forward as the night club stripper laughed into her microphone.

"Do you want me to get nasty?"

"Yes!" shouted the $5.50-a-head customers, mostly young men.

"Really nasty?"

"Yes!" they chorused.

Morganna, billed at 47½-20-39, picked up the cue. She climbed atop a spotlighted platform and launched her drumthumping performance.

It included peeling to the nude, simulating various kinds of sex acts with a puppet and pushing her bare breasts into a customer's face.

Her act at a popular Charlotte night club, contravened point by point an Alcohol Beverage Control Board directive prohibiting nudity, simulated sex and physical contact between nightclub performers and customers.

The night spot, C'est Bon, is mounting a direct challenge to the ABC board's authority to Donald Stahl to clamp limits on pornographic films and magazines also have stalled in the courts.

The result — a swift rise in sex-oriented entertainment — prompted the Rev. L. K. Stevens, to decry what he said was sagging public morality at a recent City Council meeting.

"The thing that has me burdened is that it's becoming acceptable" the Baptist minister said in a subsequent interview.

"We're going down without a fight."

The Rev. Mr. Stevens said sexy entertainment in Charlotte lounges has increased steadily since police lost in their attempt to bar topless dancing when it was introduced — at the C'est Bon — in 1968.

"They finally got some sort of approval and then it snowballed," he said. "One on every corner."

Mecklenburg County ABC officials estimate between 45 and 50 licensed lounges offer some entertainment. The figure includes folk singing and piano bars as well as bare-breasted spots.

There is evidence that the Rev. Mr. Stevens' concern is shared by many Charlotte families. Their concern is heightened by fear that nothing can be done without censorship, a solution few appear willing to embrace.

"My children only go to the movies once or twice a year because Walt Disney only comes out that often," said Mrs. George F. Dunn, a housewife and mother of three. "But there's nothing I can do."

Zeke Johnson, a 37-year-old Charlotte stockbroker, said he thought most of his friends and business associates would prefer to close clubs like the C'est Bon. But he cautioned "any major city" had to put up with a "rawer element."

"I don't think you're ever going to be able to do anything about it," he said.

Plumides agrees and says he will argue before the courts that his nude stripping acts are constitutionally protected just as films and books.

"Love that word," he said.

"To me, the nude body had been ruled constitutional according to the latest Supreme Court decisions."

Morganna, the big-breasted stripper who Plumides says puts on the "best sex act in the business," recalls she had been stripping since she was 13. It has been 10 years of liberalization, she adds. And the constitutional march toward permissiveness should continue.

"I don't think there ought to be any limits. Men would rather see girls naked. So I always try to do what they want since I figure they're paying my salary. Obviously, when people are coming in, they're coming in to see your body, right?"

But doesn't she fear her simulated sex acts are vulgar?

"What's vulgarity?" she shot back—and if men want to see vulgar acts shouldn't they be allowed to?

Authorities often don't think so. The black-haired, firm-bodied stripper says she has been arrested for her act 18 times, including several times in supposedly free-wheeling California cities.

"This is the only place I've never been arrested," she added.

"The South has often led the way," Plumides beamed.

Indications are Morganna turns the arrests to her profit even if they annoy her. She remembers reporters who covered the arrests and also has sought publicity several times by vaulting onto the playing areas of professional baseball, basketball and football teams to prance scantily clad into the arms of players.

Her reputation and her act, she claims, earn her $2,500 a week at night clubs across the country. The act varies with local laws, she adds, with only Charlotte so far getting the full show.

Plumides offered no precise figure on what the C'est Bon paid for Morganna's current eight-week stand. But he said she was the highest-prices of all acts the club has hosted.

As Morganna spoke, groups of customers approached. Would she dance? A police no. Would she autograph the program? Glad to.

"Just put, To Rufus, r-u-f-u-s," asked one young admirer.

Plumides points at Morganna's popularity as proof that the C'est Bon's acts have made it a "people's club." He said she drew 150 customers on a poor night and several hundred on a weekend, when the cover charge jumps to $6.50.

"Here is where the people are," he said. "What do the people want?"

He contends ABC agents are attempting a crackdown on sex-oriented live entertainment through liquor law citations because the regular statutes on indecent exposure or obscenity have failed court tests.

"The ABC board is attempting to close the C'est Bon club," he said. "They figure maybe they can get us in a devious way."

Plumides has asked a federal judge to prohibit ABC authorities from enforcing their regulation barring "immoral, lewd or improper" entertainment pending the outcome of his suit challenging its constitutionality. Hearings before U.S. District Judge James B. McMillan are expected soon.

Plumides also is contesting a string of recent ABC citations now before the state board, including one decision to suspend the club's permit.

The board also has received a recommendation from a hearing officer that it revoke the permit altogether. It is expected to consider the recommendation—which Plumides intends to fight—at a meeting scheduled for Monday.

monitor entertainment in lounges with permits to sell alcoholic beverages and allow brown-bagging.

Its legal fight is expected to produce a precedent-setting standard for live entertainment in cities across the state. The question is waiting for an answer: How far can you go in North Carolina now that obscenity laws often run into trouble in the courts?

Michael G. Plumides, a 43-year-old Charlotte attorney who gives orders at the C'est Bon, believes the answer ought to be: As far as you want.

"This is all first amendment stuff as far as I'm concerned," he said in the club office. "Whatever you can see in the movies, we feel you can see it in a night club."

Plumides contends ABC rules on entertainment are an unconstitutional attempt take up the slack left by hard-to-enforce general obscenity laws.

His position, soon to be tested in U.S. District Court, reflects the dilemma confronting Charlotte's civic and law enforcement leaders. If the contention is upheld in federal court, it may also confront other Tar Heel cities.

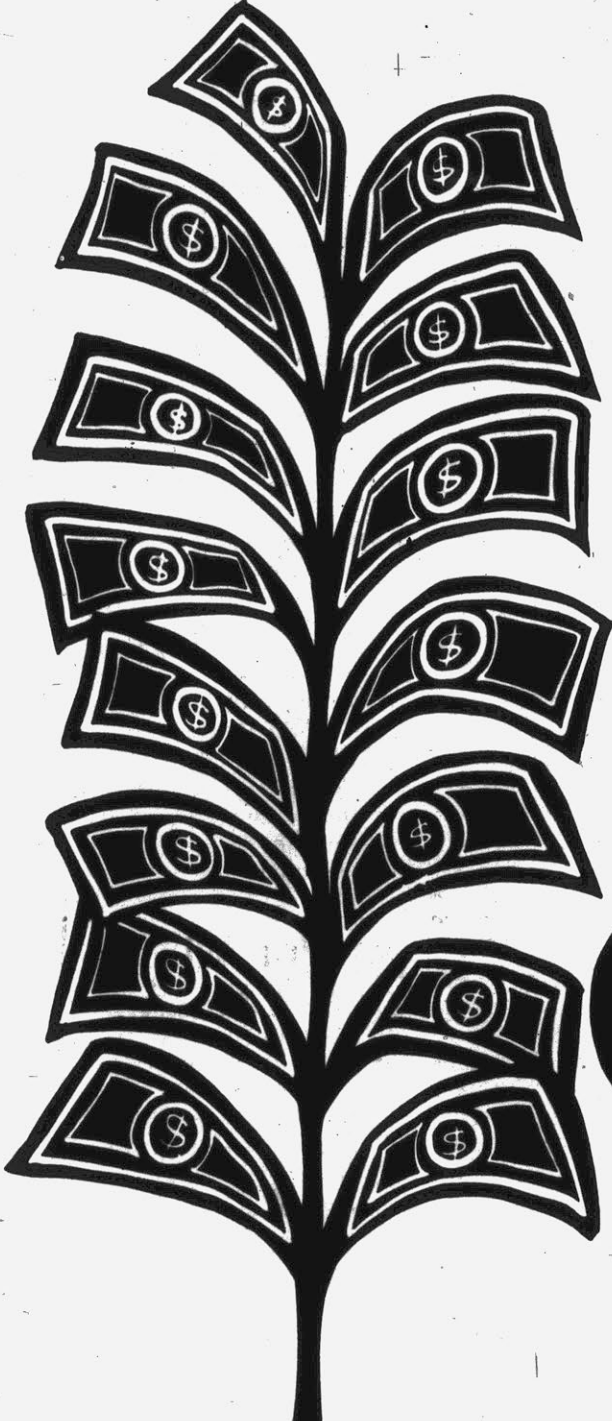

U.S. District judge James B. McMillan has set a hearing for next Tuesday on the C'est Bon's motion for a temporary restraining order preventing ABC agents from enforcing the anti-obscenity law at the club.

Charlotte is searching for ways to impose some limit on night club entertainment which many find offensive. But at the same time authorities are reluctant to grapple with the fluid legal situation governing sexual mortality and the right to virtually boundless expression guaranteed by the first amendment and protected by the Supreme Court.

Stung by local court rulings against them, vice squad officers in the Charlotte and Mecklenburg County police departments have not interfered with a year of bottomless dancing at the C'est Bon.

flood plains to build" should recognize this.

"I'm not opposed to progress," he concluded, "but I am opposed to blind progress."

Dr. Prem Sehgal asked about guarantees of the projected cost of $90,000 for the city. "Experience shows prices double where Corps of Engineers is involved," he commented.

"The law says our costs must be based on today's cost," Colonel Denison told Dr. Sehgal.

An ECU botanist, Dr. Vincent J. Bellis, expressed concern that the proposed project did not continue on to the Tar River. "The use of tax money for this project is unwarranted," he said. "It benefits a few land holders, with tax payers financing continued maintenance. Noting it is his hope to prevent once and for all expansion into Greenville's 'only green spot.' Dr. Bellis added "the real purpose seems to be preparing marginally suitable land for developmental purposes. He also stressed nature's role in swamps and hardwood forests, saying few were left, and making reference to a report which states "by the year 2020 Tar River will be experiencing water defects."

In Defense

Marvin Blount, Sr., was the first to voice approval of the project. Stating he knew "the stream from one end to the other," Blount gave a brief history of its development over the years, including rechanneling some years ago to divert Green Mill Run from university property.

Recalling years ago he "recommended giving the whole stream to the city for a park," Blount said "there is no stream there now, it's a disgrace. Let's do something about it."

Other Opposition

Dr. Michael O'Connor voiced the next opposition. Dr. O'Connor claimed details were not available showing the short and long range results the project would have on ecological, biological and geological aspects of the area; and that notification in detail to the public of the project was inadequate. "The luxury of ignorance is no longer possible," he stated. "I contend that the city of Greenville has failed miserably in meeting its obligation," he commented.

Colonel Denison told Dr. O'Connor various state agencies had been preparing studies. Their "concurrence is a matter of record," he pointed out.

Dr. Ralph Steele, an ECU faculty member and one of Greenville's Recreation Commissioners, declared himself "an observer." "I'm concerned with the sociological phenomena," he remarked, "and it may or may not have anything to do with the green dollar."

"All people in Greenville should have access to use and enjoy a place of beauty and rest... we must think in terms of human resources of our community."

Official Stand

City Manager Harry Hagerty remarked: "I started this project. Every time we have flood water I receive 900 calls saying this necessary project must be undertaken. We have examined all possibilities, and have come up with a workable and feasible plan. Our plan is to improve Green Mill Run and to reconstruct a green strip as a Recreation area. We will not cut down trees unnecessarily," Hagerty stated.

He said the project is "necessary to control flooding, to provide access to the stream to keep it clean, to provide a park area with trails and shrubs. I trust we can see this thing through. The modifications mentioned are largely the responsibility of the State Highway Commission. It will be far less expensive to maintain the stream if we have access and can get in."

Outside Opinion

Bob Simpson, who identified himself as a free-lance writer, and not a resident of Greenville commented: "I read this project as an indictment of the City of Greenville in its failure to control the flood plain," Simpson said. "You are asking taxpayers to bail you out."

Simpson said he believes the City of Greenville can accomplish the job, at the same time saving taxpayers money "without asking the rest of the country to throw in $260,000."

Blount responded to Simpson's remarks: "You can't get property owners to raise the money, it's already been tried, we couldn't get to first base."

R. J. B. Page, a representative of the State Water and Air Resources Department, said that in four similar cases to Greenville projects were successful, with rebates made. Page also mentioned "There is no significant pollution in Green Mill Run," and said precautions would be taken not to dredge during the spawning season in Tar River.

Page called on those at yesterday's meeting to press for legislation to protect swamplands and wetlands in North Carolina. He noted legislation was passed in 1969 preserving marshland, but nothing exists to control and preserve swamps and wetlands. He cited deforestation now taking place in Pamlico and Washington Counties as programs without any control.

Other Greenville residents taking the stand in the public hearing were J. H. Moye, who approved the project, calling it "practical and realistic," and Franc White, who opposes the plan. After referring to reduction to wildlife which follows such projects, White added "there is no esthetic value to cleared areas, it's artificial."

The final Green Mill Run Basin project opponent was Mrs. Ann Riggs, who stated she was opposed for personal and non-technical reasons. "As a property owner along the stream, I object to any action to destroy any of its beauty. It is a natural retreat, where children enjoy playing."

Following the testimony of interested persons, Colonel Denison commented: "We have here almost irreconcilable opinions. We can see that the facts of life are indeed bothersome today."

SAIGON (AP) — A strong North Vietnamese force kept a South Vietnamese artillery base six miles inside Laos under heavy attack, inflicting severe casualties in the first major battle reported along the Ho Chi Minh trail, informed U.S. sources said today.

Mortars, rockets, artillery and small arms fire slammed into the base Thursday and today. The attack was so heavy that American helicopters were unable to get into the base to lift out 80 wounded South Vietnamese and to look for a U.S. crewman missing during a previous mission.

There was no count of the dead yet.

Pilots who tried to land told Associated Press Correspondent Michael Putzel at Khe Sanh, "It's just too hot."

U.S. helicopter gunships flew around the base repeatedly, firing rockets at suspected North Vietnamese positions, but one pilot told Putzel: "They are really well hidden. We can't find them. We've fired up all the places we think they might be, but it hasn't slowed them down."

Manned by South Vietnamese rangers, the base is one of three that form a triangle on hills overlooking a section of the North Vietnamese jungle trail network. It is 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam and nine miles north of Highway 9, the main route of the South Vietnamese advance into southern Laos.

Despite the heavy attack, official South Vietnamese spokesmen continued to report only light resistance in Laos, and the Vietnamese commander of the Laotian operation said his 16,000 troops have occupied 25 miles of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam said in an interview that the incursion into Laos has been satisfactory. And Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, said the South Vietnamese "are doing very well."

Other sources reported that North Vietnamese forces were putting heavy pressure on a South Vietnamese column advancing slowly along Highway 9 to the trans-shipment point of Sepone.

Other South Vietnamese troops were reported fanning out from Route 9 in half a dozen different directions 15 to 18 miles to the north and south of Route 9. The forwardmost South Vietnamese elements were last reported 17½ miles from the border and 7½ miles away from Sepone.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported that some of its paratroopers clashed Thursday with North Vietnamese troops just north of Route 9 about six miles northwest of Lao Bao. A communique said the Saigon troops killed 38 North Vietnamese while their own casualties were one killed and four wounded.

Lam said his forces had killed more than 700 North Vietnamese since the drive into Laos began 11 days ago and had captured over 600 North Vietnamese weapons, many of them anti-aircraft machine guns. But the enemy anti-aircraft fire continued to take a heavy toll of American helicopters.

City Police Report 5 Traffic Mishaps

One person was reported injured and an estimated $1,620 property damage caused in a series of five collisions investigated by local police yesterday.

Officers reported a pedestrian, nine-year-old Wallace Brown of 1103 Broad St. was injured when he allegedly crossed in front of a stopped truck and collided with a car driven by Mrs. Carol Clark Walston, 27, of Route 1, Fountain about 3:45 p.m. on Tenth Street, 30 feet west of the Grande Avenue intersection.

Officers reported no damage resulted to the car and no charges were placed.

Lindsay Graham Butts, 21, of 224 Dickinson Ave. was charged with passing at an intersection following investigation of a 5 p.m. mishap at the intersection of U.S. 264 and Golden Road.

The Butts car, officers said, collided with a vehicle driven by Charles William Barlow, 50, of 2607 Tryon Dr. causing an estimated $300 damage to the Butts car and $250 to the Barlow auto.

Marvin Earl Davis, 20, of 1517B Fleming St. was charged with having improper brakes following investigation of a 7:10 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Evans and 14th Streets.

Police reported the Davis car collided with a car driven by Mrs. Margaret Windham Hardee, 210 Pineview Dr., and caused an estimated $250 damage to the Hardee car. Damage to the Davis auto was placed at $200.

Cars driven by William Marshall Reading, 23, of 203 Pineview Dr. and Johnny Odell Simmons, 21, of Hickory collided about 7:50 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Oak Streets, causing an estimated $215 damage to the Reading car and about $185 damage to the Simmons auto.

Simmons was charged with failing to yield the right of way. Charles Hall Strong III, 22, of 102 South Harding St. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fourth and Harding Streets.

Investigators reported the Strong auto collided with a car operated by Mary Elizabeth Mullis, 23, of 502 East Fourth St. causing an estimated $120 damage to the Mullis car and about $100 damage to the Strong vehicle.

Revocation Was Not Suggested

Judge Charles H. Whedbee in District Court here last week ordered Jasper Lee Sumerlin, charged with an ABC law violation, to pay court costs and recommended the defendants beer license not be revoked.

An earlier report of the disposition of the case, published in the Daily Reflector Wednesday in a list of cases disposed of during the February 8-11 term of court incorrectly reported that the court had recommended Sumerlin's beer license be revoked.

Bucs Host William & Mary Saturday

North Pitt Girls, Ayden Boys Advance

Face Dolphins Monday Night

Finals Tonight

East Carolina University's Pirates, their backs against the wall as far as the Southern Conference standings are concerned, return to the relatively safe confines of Minges Coliseum Saturday night. They'll be playing host to William & Mary in a very important conference game.

The Indians come into Minges with a 6-2 Southern Conference mark, and a victory would just about insure them of second place in the standings. A loss, however, would still leave the Pirates with an outside chance at claiming second. It would take another ECU win over The Citadel next Saturday, plus a loss by William & Mary to Richmond on the Indian home court to do it, however.

Most likely, the best the Bucs can hope for is third place, and that would still take a pair of victories for the Pirates.

It was, ironically, the Indians who started the Pirates on their downward spin in the conference. They beat the Pirates, 74-65, in Williamsburg, erasing a 10-point deficit midway through the second half.

"We had too many turnovers up there," Coach Tom Quinn said. "We had 22, and that is far too many. We must cut down on these. I think we'll do better on the boards, too, and this will help a lot."

The Bucs outthrew William & Mary in the first game on the boards, but only by four, and this was a key factor. The Indians got far more rebounds than they usually average, and Quinn feels that this may have been the cause of the Buc downfall.

"We have to contain Steve Dodge better," Quinn said. "He got 21 points against us, way above his average." Dodge has since improved his average, however, and is hitting 15.9 per game.

Tom Jasper, with a 19.1 average, is leading the conference, but is just a step ahead of East Carolina's Jim Gregory, 19.0. "Jasper is still the man they go to, and we have to hold them down," Quinn said.

Quinn noted that Jasper and Dodge each had their season highs in rebounding, and that the Bucs must keep them off the boards this time. Jasper has only an 8.7 rebound average, while Dodge is getting less than seven per game. The Bucs lead the conference in rebounding, with Al Faber (12.5) and Jim Gregory (12.4) standing one-two in the league.

"We won't be lulled into a false sense of security if we get a good lead," Quinn said. "We know we can't afford it."

Quinn expects the Bucs to be at full strength for the game, although Dave McNeill has been missing from practice because of a virus.

"We had Jim Fairley when we played them the first time," Quinn pointed out, "so I don't know how much of a factor this will be. Dave Franklin (who has replaced Fairley in the lineup since his injury) didn't play much against them."

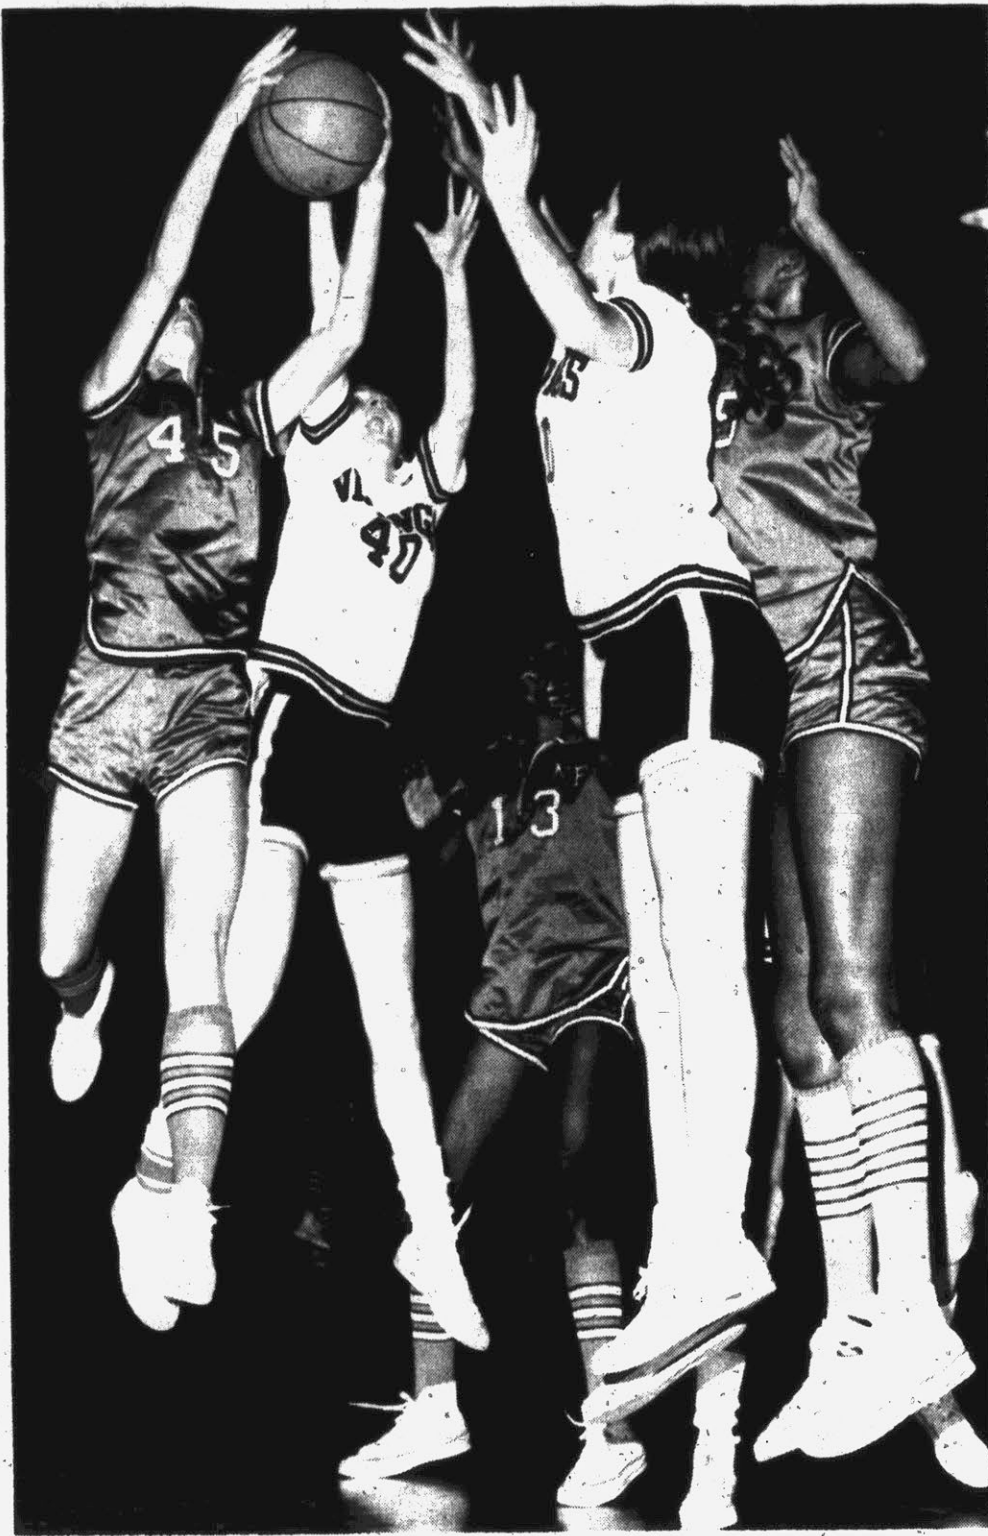

Following the Saturday game, the Bucs will depart for Jacksonville, Fla., to meet the University of Jacksonville Dolphins, the sixth ranked team in the nation.

"They are the best team we play this year," Quinn said. "Artis Gilmore and Pembroke Burroughs make an impressive front line. Both are better than last year." He pointed out that they have lost only twice this season.

"We're not as tall as we were last year against them, and this can only hurt us," Quinn said. Jim Fairley had an outstanding game against the Dolphins in Minges Coliseum last year, despite going against the 7-2 Gilmore.

"We have to try and keep them from going into their big men, and from running up a quick, big lead like they did last year," Quinn said.

Following the Jacksonville game, the Bucs will close out the regular season against The Citadel here next Saturday.

Robersonville, Oak City Girls Advance

ROBERSONVILLE — The finals of the Martin County Tournament will belong to Robersonville and Oak City. The boys and girls teams from the two schools will battle it out for the title.

In last night's games, the Oak City girls made it to the finals by downing Jamesville, 25-19. The Robersonville boys joined them with a 78-49 romp over Jamesville's boys.

The finals, between the Oak

City and Robersonville girls will be at 7 p.m. tonight, followed by the boys of the two schools at 8:30.

In the girls game, Jamesville inched out into a 5-4 lead in the first period, but failed to find the mark at all in the second. Oak City meanwhile, pushed through seven points and gained an 11-5 lead at halftime.

Oak City built onto the lead in the third period, outscoring Jamesville, 7-6, to hold an 18-11 lead. Jamesville managed to outpoint the Trojanettes, 8-7, in the final period, but it wasn't enough.

Helen Copeland led Oak City with 10 points, while Myra Modlin had nine for Jamesville.

In the boys contest, Robersonville shot away to a 14-5 lead in the first period, and had little trouble from the Red Devils after that. The Golden Eagles outthrew Jamesville, 16-15, in the second period, and held a 30-20 lead at halftime.

In the third period, the Eagles continued to pull away, dumping in 22 points, while Jamesville got 14. That made it 52-34, as the last quarter got underway. Robersonville again outthrew Jamesville, 26-15, to wrap up the win.

Jimmy Daniels led Robersonville with 14, while James Crandall and Larry Wiggins each had 12 and Waverly Purvis had 10.

Larry Modlin led Jamesville with 22, while Phil Blount had 14.

Pirate Runners In Big 7 Meet

Coach Bill Carson has centered his hopes on five events when the East Carolina University track team participates in the Big Seven Indoor Meet today and tomorrow in Chapel Hill.

"We think we have a good chance to score in the 60-yard dash, 1,000-yard run, mile relay, the long jump and triple jump," said Carson, who will use the meet as something of a tune-up for the more important Southern Conference Championships March 6.

Phil Phillips, Les Strayhorn and Ron Hunt will carry the Pirate colors in the 60.

In the 1,000, Carson plans to enter Jim Kidd and Lanny Davis.

The ECU mile relay, probably the Pirates' best entry, will include Charlie Lovelace, Barry Johnson, Larry Nuckols and Hunt.

And in the jumps, East Carolina will be represented by Larry Malone, Lawrence Wilkerson and Hunt.

"We'd be outstanding in the jumps if we had Walter Davenport," said Carson. "But Walter is out with a pulled tendon in his ankle. We just want to get him healthy for the conference meet."

The Chapel Hill field will include East Carolina, North Carolina, Duke, N. C. State, Wake Forest, N. C. Central and Davidson. It begins Friday night with the long jump and shot put and continues Saturday with all the running events, plus the triple jump and high jump.

"We have never scored more than about 13 points in this meet," said Carson, "mainly because we don't put much emphasis on it — it comes so close to our championship meet and the outdoor season. However, we think we have a chance to score about 25 points this year."

ECU has one more meet before the SC Championships at Lexington, Va. Carson will take some of his Pirates to Newark, Del., next Saturday for the Delaware Invitational.

Farmville Is Loser To Nash

SNOW HILL — Northern Nash High School edged past Farmville, 54-51, last night in the semifinals of the Eastern Plains Conference Basketball Tournament.

The victory sends Northern Nash into the finals tonight against North Lenoir. Farmville, out of the tournament, rests until next Wednesday night when it plays Cape Fear in the first round of the District II tournament at North Lenoir.

Northern Nash pushed out into a 19-13 lead in the first period of play, but Farmville refused to let them break it open. The Red Devils came back to outthrust them, 17-15, in the second half, cutting the lead to 34-30 at intermission.

In the third period, Farmville kept it up, and outscored the Knights, 14-11. That cut the Northern Nash lead to 45-44 as the final quarter opened.

Farmville finally tied it at 51-

51 with two minutes left in the game, but couldn't score again. Dan Ennis broke the tie with 40 seconds left with a field goal, for a 53-51 lead. The Knights added a free throw in the remaining time to sew it up.

Ennis led the Knights with 24 points, while Don Carter had 10. McCoy Williams had 17, Robert Tripp had 16 and Connie Tripp had 12 to pace Farmville.

DANCE
EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT
WHICHARD'S BEACH PAVILION
WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA
Eastern Carolina's Largest Saturday Night Round-Up!

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
BETHEL — It all went according to schedule last night in the Pitt County Tournament at North Pitt High School. Both of the favorites won handily.

North Pitt's Big Orange Machine gobbled up another victory, the 22nd straight, with a 50-30 romp over D. H. Conley's Valkuries. And the second seeded Ayden Tornadoes whirled to a 52-37 win over Grifton's Bulldogs.

Neither game was close after the half, and the North Pitt girls had opened a wide lead early in the second quarter. The two winners now advance into tonight's finals.

In the girls' contest at 7 p. m., North Pitt will face Grifton, with the winner getting the district tournament berth. A district berth will also be at stake in the 8:30 boys' game, which sends H. B. Sugg against Ayden.

North Pitt grabbed the opening lead in its game and never trailed as they rolled to an easy victory. Susan James put in a hook shot after 30 seconds to put the Pant-HERS into the lead. Minnie Hollis added a bucket and Miss James hit at the free throw line for a 5-0 lead before Pat Hamilton got a pair of free throws for Conley to cut it back to three.

After swapping a bucket with the Valkuries, however, North Pitt moved away again. Miss James returned the lead to five, and then Debbie Purvis hit a pair of free throws for a seven-point edge. Conley cut that back by one with a charity shot, but trailed 11-5 at the end of the quarter.

The action slowed somewhat at the start of the second quarter, but a three-point play by Miss James ran the lead out to nine after two minutes of play. Miss Hollis added two buckets and the lead climbed to 13 at 18-5 with 3:52 to go, and the Panthers were running again.

Conley couldn't get going in the period, due mainly to the zone press of North Pitt, and trailed, 25-11 after Miss James hit with six seconds left in the half.

The Valkuries managed to solve some of their problems in the early minutes of the third period, and put on a rally that cut the lead back to eight. A basket by Jane Hall cut it to 11, and a free throw by Jane Hall trimmed it one more. Marge Dewes began to crank up again after that, and pulled back out into a 13-point lead, and held a 37-25 lead as the period ended.

In the final period, North Pitt proved too much to handle. They slowly pulled away for the rest of the period, getting the final margin on a free throw by Bernadine Jordan with 12 seconds left.

Miss James led North Pitt with 19 points, while Miss Hollis had 18. For Conley, Miss Dewes and Jane Hall each had 10.

The boys' game was a picture of frustration for both players, coaches and fans alike as neither team put up much of an offensive show. The second quarter of the game almost lulled everyone to sleep by its inaction as far as scoring was concerned.

Ayden led the entire way. They moved into the lead on Willie Stuart's shot, and increased it to 6-0 as Melvin Stuart and Willie hit again.

Grifton finally got on the boards with a shot by Mike Tyndall. But Ayden was in control and more or less matched Grifton the rest of the period, holding a 12-7 lead at the end of the period.

In the second quarter, the most prominent factor in the game was the lack of ability to hit the basket. Ayden made only five points, while Grifton made six, and four of those came from the line.

Ayden made both of its field goals before Grifton could hit at all. Danny Garris hit with 5:21 to go, and Melvin Stuart hit with 3:16 left. All Ayden could manage after that was a free throw by Pat Finnigan with 1:53 showing.

Grifton didn't scratch until 3:04 when Gary Kelly made two free throws, cutting Ayden's nine-point lead by two. Then, with 36 seconds left, Grifton got two more free throws, by Mike Foss. The lone bucket came on a rebound by Mike Jackson, as the horn went off. That left Ayden ahead, 17-13 at the half.

Foss cut the lead to two with a bucket early in the third period, but Ayden pushed back out by four on a shot by Willie Stuart, and a free throw by Finnigan made it five. After the Bulldogs got a charity shot, Garris hit to raise the lead to six, 22-16. Then, minutes later, Willie Stuart hit again, running the lead to eight, and a bucket by Melvin Stuart upped it to 10, 30-20, at the end of the period.

In the last period, Ayden mopped up, as Grifton continued to have trouble hitting the bucket, but the Tornadoes found the range. They ran the lead out to 21 points, 41-20, before Grifton could score again, and the reserves came in after that.

Willie Stuart led Ayden with 16 points, while Melvin Stuart had 14. Grifton was led by Foss, who hit nine points.

Pirate Matmen Face Indians

It's the biggest match of the biggest wrestling season East Carolina University has ever had.

That's the confrontation in Williamsburg, Va., Saturday afternoon when Coach John Welborn's sends his red-hot Pirate matmen against defending Southern Conference champion William & Mary.

"Ever since I've been at East Carolina (four years), William & Mary has won the Southern Conference title," said Welborn. "However, we beat them in a dual match a year ago before finishing second to them in the conference meet."

"This year," continued Welborn, "we'd like to beat them in both the dual match and conference championships. And we know we can accomplish this if we wrestle our best."

The Pirates are currently one of the winningest wrestling teams in the South. The ECU matmen have compiled a 9-1 dual match record to date and carry a winning streak of eight going into the showdown at Williamsburg.

This will be East Carolina's dual match of the season. The SC Championship Meet is only six days off — coming up Feb. 26-27.

Leading the Pirate cause will be five undefeated men — Robert Vrooman (118, 6-0), Steve Morgan (134, 7-0), Roger Lundy (142, 3-0), Robert Corbo (150, 3-0) and Bruce Hall (158, 5-0).

However, it's possible some of them may not get to wrestle against the Indians as Welborn has other strong men in Ronnie Williams (126, 5-1-1), Dan Monroe (126, 4-1), Glen Baker (134, 3-1), John Carroll (142, 2-2), Mike Spohn (150, 7-1), Roger Ingalls (158, 4-1), Joe Daversa (167, 5-2), Bill Hill (177, 6-2-1), Tim Gay (190, 8-1-1) and Mark Pohnre theavryweight, 6-1).

The Pirates won their first match of the season against North Carolina (42-0), lost to Eastern power Oswego State (11-22) and then reeled off eight straight triumphs. Victims in this streak have been Potsdam State (30-5), Elizabeth City State (42-0), Appalachian (22-11), UNC-Wilmington (33-5), N. C. State (25-11), Old Dominion (36-8), The Citadel (36-0) and VMI (36-8).

Ali (I Am The Champ) Tells His Fight Plans

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Muhammad Ali tells his plans for fighting Joe Frazier on March 8. With the help of Associated Press sports writer Hubert Mitchell he lets the world know his strategy.)

By MUHAMMAD ALI
"I'm the Real Champ"
MIAMI BEACH (AP)—People will see the traditional Muhammad Ali style March 8 when I whup Joe Frazier. I'll hit and not be hit. It'll be jab, jab, in and out. If Frazier gets too close, I'll tie him up. All the time, I'll be piling up points. Pretty soon he'll know his only salvation would be to knock me out. And, we all know the odds against that. Some people might be puzzled see here and what is seen March 8 are different things. I don't try to beat up my sparring partners. I don't want them to quit and go home. I just spend my ring time getting ready, working on defense most times. When I see an opening, I flick a punch and get out. If Frazier thinks my sparring partners are easy, I'm happy to trade. We'll have the air fare and swap sparring mates. His guys will never lay a glove on me.

I use Stanford Harris a lot. He's 5-foot-10 and 235, built stocky and low like Frazier. If I'm fightin' a certain type, I try to spar against the same kind. If I ever fight Wilt Chamberlain, we'll go to Africa and find some eight-foot Watutsi to spar against. Some people wonder why I don't go up on the hills like a hermit to train for a fight. That just ain't my way. I would be bored out of my mind watching TV most of the day, walkin' the same hotel lobby all day. I like to get away from it and that's possible here in Miami Beach. I just went for a helicopter ride and it was a great view of Miami. A few days ago, I bought a 1901 Oldsmobile and I'm havin' fun driving around in that thing. Some times I just go down from my apartment and watch the traffic go by. I like people and don't enjoy being alone while I'm training. Havin' your mind ready is just as important as havin' your body ready. Both will be ready when I fight Joe Frazier.

Eddie Stokes

Stokes Honored

Eddie Stokes, a 6-3, 170-pound forward for Pitt Technical Institute was one of three unanimous choices for All-Conference honors, it was announced today.

Stokes led the Pitt team to a tie for first place in the Eastern Carolina Community College Conference this year, with a 27-0 point per game average.

A graduate of Bethel High School, where he was an All-East selection, Stokes is enrolled in the machinist program at Pitt Tech.

Angelo Hooker, another Technician, was given honorable mention to the All-Conference team. The 5-11 guard has an 18.6 point average for the year.

Pitt finished with a 9-1 conference record, tying Beaufort. Pitt lost out in a playoff with Beaufort and was 11-5 overall. Beaufort went on to defeat Cape Fear, champion of the Southern Division of the conference, 64-63, to become overall champion. The champs lost only one game all year, and that was to Pitt Tech.

and win our next five games," said Carr, his eyes watching the floor.

The Garden clash was the second game of a doubleheader. Temple starved Manhattan with a tough zone in the opener, allowing the Jaspers just one field goal in the first 12 minutes, for a 64-47 victory.

In a relatively light schedule around the nation, Memphis State whipped Bradley 74-70, St. Louis downed North Texas 65-61, and Denver tripped Oklahoma City 64-63.

Memphis State made 15 free throws in the last 11 minutes and Jim Douglass provided the clincher with a 10-foot corner shot with 3:20 left that gave the Tigers a never-topped 68-66 lead over Bradley.

St. Louis kept within hailing distance of Missouri Valley—leading Louisville with the victory over North Texas. The Billikens are within a half-game of the MVC pacers.

Denver's Dave Bustion scored 24 points to lead the Pioneers to their 12th straight victory.

Gregory Inches Back Into Lead Immanuel Grabs Church Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The battle for the Southern Conference basketball scoring championship between East Carolina's Jim Gregory and William and Mary's Tom Jasper is even hotter than the scrap for seeded positions in the league's championship tournament next month.

With the season rapidly approaching a conclusion, Gregory is slightly ahead with 377 points in 20 games for a 18.85-point average to 432 points in 23 games and a 18.78-point average for Jasper.

At the moment it would appear the scoring title will go to one of the two, although Furman's Russ Hunt and Lisco Thomas are within striking distance. Hunt has 360 points in 21 games for a 17.1 average, Thomas as 237 points in 14 games for a 16.9 mark.

Steve Dodge of William and Mary is fifth with 373 points in 23 games for a 16.2 average, and just two other players are at 15 points or better — Jan Esenberg of Virginia Military, 360 points in 23 games for 15.7, and Joe Sutter of Davidson, 316 points in 21 games for 15 even.

Others in the top 10 are Mike Anastasio of Richmond at 14.5, Ben Ledbetter of The Citadel at 13.9 and Al Faber of East Carolina at 13.6. Just three other players are over 12 points per game — Jim Hewitt of Richmond, 12.8; Bernard Collier, Furman, 12.5, and Steve Kirley, Davidson, 12.1.

Four of the ten pointmakers in the conference are sophomores — Hunt, Sutter, Anastasio and Sutter. Last year's winner was a sophomore, Bryan Adrain of Davidson, but he has played little this season because of pre-season knee surgery.

All conference teams have been idle the past two nights and have the night off again tonight before returning to action Saturday.

Presbyterian was handed its second straight loss last night in the Church Basketball League, as Oakmont took a 52-51 victory. The loss, coupled with Immanuel's 56-51 win over Piney Grove, lifted Immanuel into the league's lead. In the other game, Black Jack ripped St. James, 80-36.

Immanuel is now on top with a 10-3 record, while Presbyterian is now 9-4. Black Jack is third with an 8-5 record, followed by Oakmont, 7-6, and Piney Grove, 5-8. St. James is last with an 0-13 record. Two games remain to be played in the season.

In the opener, Black Jack moved out into a 31-21 lead in the first half of play. Then, in the second half, they outshot St. James, 49-15 to win it going away.

Ephraim Smith led Black Jack with 22, while Tal Adams had 21, and Steve Peele had 12. Charles Vincent led St. James with 11 points. Piney Grove threatened an upset in the first half of its game with Immanuel, taking a 26-25 lead at the half. But in the second half, Immanuel came back to outscore Piney Grove, 31-25, and take the victory.

Dick Evans led Immanuel with 20, while Mack Roebuck had 12. Jimmy Mills led Piney Grove with 15, while Wayne Avery had 12 and Buddy Allan had 10.

In the final game of the evening, Oakmont slipped out into a 28-24 lead in the first half of play and successfully held off Presbyterian in the second half. Presbyterian outthit Oakmont, 27-24, in the half, but it wasn't quite enough.

Archie Moseley led Oakmont with 20, while Don Parrot had 13 and Tom Reese had 11. Frank Freular had 20, Brazel Moore had 10 and Bill Glidewell had 12 for Presbyterian.

Tucson Golf To Try Start Again

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Officials tried again today to get in the first round of the rain-plagued $110,000 Tucson Golf Tournament while Lee Trevino got a reprieve from five three-putt greens.

Trevino, who has won the last two Tucson titles, slogged in with a 72 Thursday, just moments before a steady drizzle turned into a heavy shower and forced cancellation of the round.

His score, along with all the rest of the early finishers, was washed out. The round was to be replayed completely today.

Another 18-hole round is scheduled Saturday with a 36-hole windup set for Sunday.

"My putting has gone a little sour," commented Trevino, the 1970 leading money winner and Vardon Trophy champion.

"A lot of it was the water. You'd think the water was going to hold up the ball, and, zoom, you're four feet past. So, next time, you play it fast and the water holds you up and you're four feet short."

"But I just wasn't putting very well."

"And, I'm not thinking well. I've got a lot of things on my mind and I'm in a fog out there. I get over a 20-footer and I'm thinking about three-putting instead of thinking about knocking it in the hole."

The Tucson National Golf Club course, a par 72 layout, played even longer than its listed 7,305 yards.

"You just can't believe how long it played," Trevino said. "It was three or four clubs longer than last year."

"That 72 ain't no shabby score. I didn't want to have it rained out."

Longshot Cesar Samido, a Mexican native who has yet to win in two years on the pro tour, had the best score among the early finishers, 70, two-under-par.

Jim Colbert, Larry Ziegler and Jack Harden had 71s in the generally high scoring. Bob Murphy, who lost to Trevino in the playoff here last year, shot 75. Homero Blancas had a 76 and National Seniors champ Julius Boros had an 81 washed out.

Fordham Wins Without Star

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Fordham's Charlie Yelverton had just fouled out after a super performance, the applause of 19,500 rocking rafter-jammed Madison Square Garden.

So what do you do when you lose your wonder player with everything riding on the last seven minutes?

"Charlie had been coming through for us for 19 games, so it was our turn to win one for him," said little Bill Mainor.

And the Rams did—stunning Notre Dame 94-88 Thursday night in an emotion-charged college basketball game.

"We said we'd bring it back for Charlie," Mainor piped over ear-splitting huzzahs of the Fordham dressing room. "It seems like a smaller team does better under pressure than a large team."

"And everybody did the job for us, although giving away four, five inches in height. We played more with our hearts than with our ability."

More than a few in the animated audience would dispute that last statement, for it was Yelverton's ability that kept the Rams in the game and Mainor's that won it for them.

King Charles scored 28 points, had 11 rebounds, blocked several shots and made many key steals that fired the 18th-ranked Rams to a 75-73 lead over the 14th ranked Irish with seven minutes left.

Then Yelverton committed "a stupid, reach-in foul" under the basket and had to make that agonizing stroll to the bench, bringing the thunderous crowd to its feet. The applause lasted more than a minute.

Mainor, charged with guarding Notre Dame's high-scoring Austin Carr, scored only four points in the first half. Then, when Yelverton sat down near the end, Mainor punched through 13 of the Rams' last 19 points and wound up with 27.

Mainor, at one point, scored 10 straight, mostly on soft outside jumpers, to power the Rams to a 94-86 lead with 18 seconds remaining.

And although Carr scored a game-high 29 points, Mainor didn't allow the Irish great guard a point in the last, critical seven minutes.

Carr was inconsolable in the loser's low-key dressing room. "Too many turnovers lost it for us," said the nation's second leading scorer with a 37-point average. "It was just a bad floor game."

Why wasn't he getting the ball at the end?

"Fordham was pressing and it just seemed the flow of the game was being funneled away from me," said Carr, who indicted the loss might cost the Irish, now 14-7, an at-large berth in the NCAA post-season tournament.

"We'll just have to get out

Tremors Hit New Hanover

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A series of short earth tremors described as dish and door rattlers hit the beaches and extended a mile inland in southeastern North Carolina's New Hanover County Thursday morning.

They were felt from Kury and Carolina beaches to Wrightsville Beach almost 20 miles northward. One woman from Carolina Beach said she counted at least a dozen.

Al Thomas of the National Weather Service at Wilmington called them dish and door rat-

East's double closed the auction.

West opened the king of diamonds and, in an effort to avoid making a play for the declarer, he continued with the ace. South being out of diamonds, was in position to trump the second lead and he was about to detach a spade from his hand, when he paused to reflect. West's failure to lead a heart at either his first or second opportunity was most unusual. The only logical conclusion which declarer could reach was that his opponent held no hearts.

If this were indeed the case, then South could induce West to come forth with a more favorable return on the next round by merely permitting his opponent to remain on lead. Accordingly, declarer discarded his small heart on the ace of diamonds, and West was neatly stymied. If he shifted to either black suit, it would expose one of his partner's high honors to a fatal finesse. He actually chose to play a third round of diamonds placing the declarer in dummy.

The jack of spades was put thru and it held the trick. The jack of clubs was led next and covered by the king and ace. The queen was cashed, a small club was ruffed with the ten of spades and overruffed by East's king. This was the last defensive trick. In all, declarer lost two diamonds and one spade.

Remarried His Ex-Wife To See Her More Often

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — William Samuel Knight, 28, serving life in the Oregon penitentiary for murder of a tavern owner, has remarried his ex-wife so he can see her twice as often.

Wives are allowed to visit their husbands in the Oregon prison four times a month. Visits from other persons are allowed only twice a month.

Knight pleaded guilty in Bend, Ore., a month ago, was remarried immediately to his ex-wife, Ronda, 25, then was brought to the penitentiary.

Warden Hoyt Cupp said that each visit can last three hours. Couples are allowed to kiss and embrace, with a guard looking on.

An Associated Press story Jan. 14 erroneously stated the Knights would be allowed conjugal visits.

Such visits are not allowed in Oregon.

Lawmakers Had Heart Seizures

RALEIGH (AP) — State Reps. C. Kitchin Josey, D-Halifax, and Edward M. McKnight, R-Forsyth, suffered heart seizures Thursday and are in the cardiac unit at Rex Hospital.

Josey, 47, who was playing tennis with three other legislators when he was stricken, was reported in "guarded" condition.

McKnight, 62, was reported in fair condition.

Joseph, a freshman from Scotland Neck, is a lawyer and has been active in Democratic politics for some time.

McKnight, a resident of Winston-Salem, is in his fourth term in the House. He is vice chairman of the Corporations Committee.

Quest For Learning Had School For Hospitalized Kids Beginnings In Log Cabin

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT WASHINGTON (UPI)—When former Congressman Ben Reifel debated on the floor of the House of Representatives in support of federal funds for the humanities, one of his props was a worn red book which he gestured with as he spoke.

As a child, Reifel told his colleagues, he often borrowed the book from a neighbor and pored over its pages. It was a collection of biographies entitled "Noble Living and Grand Achievement: Giants of the Republic."

The book was a symbol of Reifel's own quest for learning—an education that began in a South Dakota log cabin at the knee of an Indian mother and was crowned by a Harvard doctorate.

Now 64, he has retired from public life after the 91st Congress and a career that took him from the Rosebud Sioux Reservation to a high position in the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs and finally the halls of the U.S. Capitol.

A half century after leaving the reservation, though, his memories are undimmed. It's impossible to talk to him very long without his referring to his boyhood.

Indian Grandmother

He remembers his Indian grandmother, who never became accustomed to the ways of the white man. She ate her meals sitting on the floor. Sometimes the Reifel children made her a bed, but always by morning she had slipped out and was sleeping on the floor on her bedroll.

He remembers the barren schools in the Dakota prairie, and at age 16, having to leave the reservation so he could go to high school 250 miles away.

Through those early years he recalls no special consciousness of being an Indian. He did not feel stunted in any way.

"The underlying thing," he said in a reminiscent interview, "is that I suppose that through my Indian mother and a German father, I got a combination of things that urged me to go on."

His mother, who spoke little English, became a Christian at the age of 9, and was baptized into the Episcopal Church. She imbued him with a deep sense of faith. For part of his 10 years in Congress he was president of the House Prayer Breakfast Group.

Even now, he speaks of his constant awareness of Wa-Kun, the Indians' great spirit.

"I still have the feeling that the Wa-Kun is still here and ever present," he said. "I find myself turning to this feeling of power and strength about me at any time."

Dream Comes True

For Reifel, the American dream has come true, and no matter how poignant his memories are he feels American Indians, one of the United States' smaller minority groups, must adapt themselves as tribes of old did—even if it means turning their backs on the past.

What this means Reifel believes, is that the Indian must adopt what he calls the white American's "time-work-savings syndrome and future orientation."

None of these things was of importance to Indians of the past. The modern Indian who has adopted this new way of life has succeeded, Reifel believes, but the one who hasn't is often the one who gets into trouble with the law or stays back on the reservation as a welfare recipient.

"That's the problem," he said. "How do you get children growing up to know how to save, and work, and talk about time and the future?"

"I've got three granddaughters. I want them to fit into our society. I want them to be concerned with time-work-savings and the future. If they don't do this, what are they going to be and who will look after them except welfare workers."

Views in Conflict

These views have brought Reifel into conflict with such militant "red power" advocates as Vine Deloria Jr., author of "Custer Died for Your Sins," and singer Floyd Westerman, who has cut a record of the same title.

In his book, Deloria calls for preservation of the Indian tradition and says bitterly of whites, "What we need is a cultural leave-us-alone agreement in spirit and in fact."

Deloria, whose father was Episcopal archdeacon for South Dakota, says he would like to see Indians return to their old religions wherever possible.

Reifel said he does not get their message, for when Deloria and Westerman—both of whom he knew as youngsters in South Dakota—make sales they do so through a system the establishment has provided.

What would get at the problem, Reifel said, is a massive program of education for the Indians to match the success of the health program that has saved the lives of uncounted Indian children.

School For Hospitalized Kids

By FRED BERNS

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—Ronnie Elkins, 11, born with a crippling spinal cord deformity, cannot go to school with most other kids—so he goes to school with kids like himself.

Ronnie, who has spent most of his life in a hospital, is going at reading, writing and arithmetic like other kids his age thanks to a hospital-school program at the Children's Hospital at the University of Wisconsin Medical Center.

Ronnie is one of 350 children who participate in the program each year. The program, one of only a few of its kind in the nation, is designed to keep physically disabled youngsters from falling behind in school.

"The school program is the one normalizing feature of a child's stay at the hospital," Mrs. Patricia Blessing, one of the four teachers in the hospital school, said.

"It provides them with a rationale that, since they still can do school work, they're not all that sick."

Continuous Operation Hospitalized children from kindergarten through grade 12 are taught in the program, which has operated continuously since 1931 except for two years.

Directed by the Madison Public School System, the school is financed by the Division of Handicapped Children of the state Department of Public Instruction.

Classes usually are conducted in any one of the three classrooms available and are open to all children patients, no matter how long they stay in the hospital.

Patients in Madison's 81-bed children's hospital come from Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan and Iowa, as well as Wisconsin. They are treated for disabilities ranging from bone deformities to leukemia and cystic fibrosis.

"Our main objective is to keep the kids working while they're here," said Mrs. Marion Chatman, the secondary grades teacher in the program.

Three instructors at the hospital teach four grades, mostly on a one-to-one tutorial basis. The fourth teaches at the university's neurological and rehabilitation hospital.

Several subjects, such as primary school social studies and high school English, may be taught in groups.

The teachers try to keep in close contact with the child's regular school. Children are urged to bring school books and assignments from home when they are admitted, and these are used with the hospital's regular school texts and materials.

Teachers Plan Studies In addition, the hospital teachers confer by telephone or letter with faculty, guidance counselors and administrators throughout the state to plan each patient's studies.

Class time must be scheduled so it will not interfere with medical treatment and therapy. Some children are hospitalized for too short a time to receive school instruction. Others, such as leukemia victims, may be too seriously ill to participate.

But proof of the hospital school's value lies in the fact that most of the patients who participate keep up with their classmates when they return home.

A good example is the case of a second grade girl from a Northwestern Wisconsin town who was in the hospital 66 days because of a congenital hip abnormality.

After she returned home, she was able to advance with her classmates to third grade the following fall.

"It's kind of fun," a third grade orthopedic patient said. "I mean, it sure beats sitting in a hot classroom all day."
